> NAS Revelation 21:23 And the city has no need of the sun or of the moon to shine upon it, for the glory of God has illumined it, and its lamp is the Lamb.

> NAS 2 Corinthians 4:6–7 For God, who said, "Light shall shine out of darkness," is the One who has shone in our hearts to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Christ. But we have this treasure in earthen vessels, that the surpassing greatness of the power may be of God and not from ourselves;

> NAS Hebrews 1:3 And He is the radiance of His glory and the exact representation of His nature, and upholds all things by the word of His power. When He had made purification of sins, He sat down at the right hand of the Majesty on high;

We Inherit the Lifeblood from Christ and Grow into His Likeness

In Israel, humanity was often spoken of as "flesh and blood" (Ephesians 6:12). When Paul came to the Lord, the scripture says that he did not first consult with "flesh and blood" (Galatians 1:16) because Paul knew his calling was from God. Of course this did not refer to some bread as literal human flesh and some natural wine in a cup with which he consulted, but rather of humanity. Thus Paul did not feel led to consult with the other disciples right after his conversion, and yet the Lord showed him what the Last Supper meant (1 Corinthians 11:23).

The children of Israel were said to share or partake in the "flesh and blood" of their parents, whose life flow and DNA passed down to them (Hebrews 2:14). This flesh and blood referred to the parents from whom the child was born.

> NAS Hebrews 2:13 And again, "I will put My trust in Him." And again, "Behold, I and the children whom God has given Me."

> NAS Hebrews 2:14 Since then the children share in flesh and blood, He Himself likewise also partook of the same, that through death He might render powerless him who had the power of death, that is, the devil;

> KJV Hebrews 2:14 Forasmuch then as the children are partakers of flesh and blood, he also himself likewise took part of the same; that through death he might destroy him that had the power of death, that is, the devil;

Of course, this Jewish manner of speaking means that children partake in the flesh and blood of their parents by being born of them. As God's children, we inherit the same spiritual DNA that Christ had, such that we'll grow into the same image and likeness if we partake of God's spiritual food and spiritual drink, fulfilling His plan:

> NIV Genesis 1:26 Then God said, "Let us make man in our image, in our likeness ..."

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

> NAS Ephesians 4:13 until we all attain to the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, to a mature man, to the measure of the stature which belongs to the fulness of Christ.
>
> NAS Ephesians 4:16 from whom the whole body, being fitted and held together by that which every joint supplies, according to the proper working of each individual part,causes the growth of the body for the building up of itself in love.

Even in our modern idiom, we often speak of those in our own family as our "own flesh and blood."

❦

John P. Lange, in his Commentary on the Holy Scriptures, uses a phrase in reference to John 6 that I think is perfect here. He says, "But flesh and blood elsewhere denotes inherited nature"[8](boldface mine). So with "Christ our Passover," we partake spiritually of Christ's humanity, "the man, Christ Jesus," as he is called in the scripture. When we read about him and receive his word, we partake of who he was (and is), what he did, and the things that he said. We partake of his life and love that he showed forth. This is the spiritual DNA that we inherit. We grow into that same likeness by the spirit:

> NAS 1 Corinthians 15:49 And just as we have borne the image of the earthy, we shall also bear the image of the heavenly.
>
> NAS 1 Corinthians 15:47 The first man is from the earth, earthy; the second man is from heaven.
>
> NAS 1 Corinthians 15:48 As is the earthy, so also are those who are earthy; and as is the heavenly, so also are those who are heavenly.

Just as Eve came out of Adam's side, so did the spiritual bride emerge from Christ's side when his blood was shed (Christ is pictured as the second Adam in 1 Corinthians 15:45–49). Thus we have within us his spiritual DNA that is programmed to grow us into his likeness, as long as we receive the nourishment from above.

> God's spirit and His word affect our hearts and transform us into His likeness, as we yield:
> YLT 2 Corinthians 3:18 and we all, with unvailed face, the glory of the Lord beholding in a mirror, to the same image are being transformed, from glory to glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord.
>
> NAS Romans 8:29 For whom He foreknew, He also predestined to become conformed to the image of His Son, that He might be the first-born among many brethren;

Why is it that so many Jewish believers are coming to know the Messiah in our day? The scripture above says, "whom he did foreknow he predestined to be conformed to the image of his Son." Israel has also been brought back to become a nation, and these things happening at the same time are not by accident. God is doing special work to form all the believers—those who will enter in—into the image and likeness of His son.

Jesus was the first man born who yielded perfectly to God, and who grew into the exact image and likeness of God. He is the firstborn in the Jewish sense; he has the pre-eminent position before God, and in a certain sense he is our elder brother. This scripture says he is the firstborn among many brethren whom God will bring into His image and likeness by His spirit, fulfilling Genesis 1:26.

> Genesis 1:26 Then God said, "Let us make man in our image, in our likeness ...."

[Source: The Messianic Feast, "Course 11"]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Eucharist as it Developed from Rome:
http://www.crossroadsinitiative.com/library_article/532/Sunday_Eucharist_in_the_Early_Church_st._Justin_Martyr.html

Justin's writings:
http://www.earlychristianwritings.com/justin.html

Justin Martyr Bio:
http://earlychurch.org.uk/justin.php

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Leavened bread at the Last Supper?

Course 1 in the book (The Messianic Feast) proves that Jesus ate regular leavened bread at the Last Supper, it being the evening before the Passover sacrifice.

> A reader wrote in asking: "Having Jewish friends, they go to great lengths to get anything with leaven out of their houses many days before Passover. Would this make sense for Jesus to eat leavened bread on the evening before Passover?"

First of all, thank you for this excellent question. Although it is true that many orthodox Jews today work to clean out leaven many days before the Passover, when interpreting these scriptures we have to ascertain what the customs and idioms at the time of Jesus were. In most aspects the first-century Jews were much more stringent to keep God's laws than Jewish people today. Peter would refuse to associate with those of another nation, and the Jews were going to kill Paul when they thought he had brought an uncircumcised Gentile into the Temple precincts.

However, it is very clear from the history in the Jewish Talmud (written a few hundred years after Jesus) that eating regular leavened bread, even on the morning of the day of the sacrifice (the 14th day) was perfectly legal. According to God's law through the scriptures, all leaven in the land had to be destroyed before noon. The Talmud states:

> GEMARA: We see thus, that at the commencement of the sixth hour, all agree, Chometz* must be burned.
>
> [*that which is leavened]

They then go on to say that this is understood from the fact that leaven was not to be present in Israel when the blood of the Passover was shed (Exodus 34:25). And since the legal allowable time for the Passover sacrifice was between noon and sunset on the 14th day, then the leaven had to be destroyed before noon (noon was called the sixth hour, and the "commencement of the sixth hour" was 11:00 AM).

So the Messiah and the disciples eating regular leavened bread at the Last Supper (the evening before the Passover lamb sacrifice) would have been perfectly appropriate, for as the Talmud states concerning the 14th day "so that in the morning leavened bread may be eaten while in the afternoon it must not."

(See p. 455 in the book for these Talmud quotes.)

[Source: http://themessianicfeast.com/2014/03/19/leavened-bread-at-the-last-supper/]

The One Leavened Bread and the True Communion

So what did the Lord mean in the Last Supper parable with the one leavened bread? In Course 1 of my book The Messianic Feast: Moving Beyond the Ritual, it was thoroughly proven that the Lord held, and then broke into pieces, one leavened bread at this meal. Since the Passover lamb would be sacrificed the following day, then leavened bread was perfectly legal as per God's law this previous night. In fact, all of the scriptures use the Greek word for daily leavened bread to refer to what was shared at this supper. But what does this mean?

First and foremost, it means that the unleavened bread ritual passed down since Roman times was not what the Lord wanted or what the Jewish disciples taught. Instead, they knew the Messiah was teaching spiritual truth in parables as he so often did. To ascertain what the pieces of the one leavened bread that Jesus broke represent, one only needs to see what the original followers all taught—that WE are the members of the body of Christ (1 Cor. 12:27, etc.). The bread and its pieces did not represent Christ's human body as the Romans believed, but us, the members of his spiritual body.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

This is what Paul understood and what he received from the Lord concerning what the Last Supper parables really meant:

> NAS 1 Corinthians 11:23 For I received from the Lord that which I also delivered to you, that the Lord Jesus in the night in which He was betrayed took bread…

The Greek word for bread that Paul uses above (arton) is the one for daily leavened bread. It is also singular and therefore should read "a bread." Below, Paul also refers to this one bread Jesus broke (and gave to the disciples at the Last Supper and told them to partake, and that it was his body). Now, we know that Roman theologians mistakenly believed this was the Passover (where unleavened bread was required by God) and that they also took the words of Jesus literally (and not as a parable), thus creating their unleavened bread Communion ritual. But this is not what the Jewish Paul understood concerning what he said he received from the Lord:

> NAS 1 Corinthians 10:17 Since there is one bread, we who are many are one body; for we all partake of the one bread.

This is the understanding of what Jesus really meant. This is the true spiritual communion that we are to share—partaking and sharing God's love (and His word) with His spirit in the midst of the members of the spiritual body. This will be part of how Christ is formed in us according to the scriptures. This will fulfill the new commandment for the new covenant as given by Jesus at this Last Supper:

> NAS John 13:34 A new commandment I give to you, that you love one another, even as I have loved you, that you also love one another.

This is a spiritual communion, not a ritual. The ritual was simply a man-made tradition that has voided the word of God by missing what Jesus meant, something Jesus actually warned against:

> NAS Mark 7:9 He was also saying to them, "You nicely set aside the commandment of God in order to keep your tradition.

> NAS Mark 7:13 thus invalidating the word of God by your tradition which you have handed down; and you do many things such as that."

The unleavened bread ritual as kept by almost all churches has confused what Jesus really meant in his parable, turning his spiritual teaching on sharing God's word (the bread of life) and His love (the new wine of the spirit) into a ritualistic man-made tradition with unleavened bread (called "the bread of affliction," Deuteronomy 16:3). These are a few of the many truths that are made clear in this book and that shed light on what the fulfillment will be of the long-time Jewish history of a coming Messianic banquet or feast.

[Source: http://themessianicfeast.com/2014/09/12/one-leavened-bread-true-communion/]

* End: The Eucharist (Lord's Supper) **********

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Hypostatic Union

Two natures of Jesus

http://www.theopedia.com/hypostatic-union

Excerpt:

The two natures of Jesus refers to the doctrine that the one person Jesus Christ had/has two natures, divine and human. In theology this is called the doctrine of the hypostatic union, from the Greek word hypostasis (which came to mean substantive reality). Early church figures such as Athanasius used the term "hypostatic union" to describe the teaching that these two distinct natures (divine and human) co-existed substantively and in reality in the single person of Jesus Christ. The aim was to defend the doctrine that Jesus was simultaneously truly God and truly man.

Historical development

The doctrine of the hypostatic union (the two natures of Jesus) was adopted as orthodox doctrine at the Council of Chalcedon in 451. Three major schools of theology were involved at the council: Alexandria, Antioch, and the West. The consensus of these three schools in the Chalcedonian Creed illustrates the catholicity (i.e. universality) of the ancient church. The creed asserted two distinct natures, human and divine, and affirmed the one person of Jesus Christ.

Biblical basis

One of the clearest passages in Scripture concerning the two natures of Jesus comes from John 1. The Word (i.e. Jesus) "was with God, and the Word was God." Moreover, the Word took on human flesh (John 1:14). Luke's gospel also says that Jesus "increased in wisdom and in stature and in favor with God and man" (Luke 2:52).

What is the Hypostatic Union?

https://www.desiringgod.org/articles/what-is-the-hypostatic-union

Excerpt:

The meaning of hypostatic union is much easier than the term sounds, but the concept is as profound as anything in theology.

Our English adjective hypostatic comes from the Greek word hupostasis. The word only appears four times in the New Testament — maybe most memorably in Hebrews 1:3, where Jesus is said to be “the radiance of the glory of God and the exact imprint of his nature.” Here the author of Hebrews uses the word in reference to the oneness of God. Both the Father and the Son are of the same “nature.” Jesus is “the exact imprint of his nature.”

However, in early church discussions, as Greek thinkers tried to find agreeable terms with those who spoke in Latin, the word hupostasis came to denote not the sameness in the Godhead (God’s one essence) but the distinctness (the three persons). So, it began to be used to refer to something like the English word person.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

CARM: Hypostatic Union

https://carm.org/dictionary-hypostatic-union

Excerpt:

Hypostatic Union is the union of the two natures (Divine and human) in the person of Jesus. Jesus is God in flesh (John 1:1, 14, 10:30-33, 20:28, Phil. 2:5-8, Heb. 1:8). He is fully God and fully man (Col. 2:9), thus, He has two natures: God and man. He is not half God and half man. He is 100% God and 100% man. He never lost His divinity. He continued to exist as God when He became a man and added human nature to Himself (Phil. 2:5-11). Therefore, there is a "union in one person of a full human nature and a full divine nature." Right now in Heaven there is a man, Jesus, who is our Mediator between us and God the Father (1 Tim. 2:5). (For related information on Jesus and His two natures, see Incarnation and the errors concerning His natures known as Eutychianism, Monophycitism, and Nestorianism).

CARM: Jesus' Two Natures: God and Man

https://carm.org/jesus-two-natures

The following chart should help you see the two natures of Jesus "in action":

GOD	MAN
He is worshiped (Matt. 2:2, 11; 14:33)	He worshiped the Father (John 17)
He was called God (John 20:28; Heb. 1:8)	He was called man (Mark 15:39; John 19:5)
He was called Son of God (Mark 1:1)	He was called Son of Man (John 9:35-37)
He is prayed to (Acts 7:59)	He prayed to the Father (John 17)
He is sinless (1 Pet. 2:22; Heb. 4:15)	He was tempted (Matt. 4:1)
He knows all things (John 21:17)	He grew in wisdom (Luke 2:52)
He gives eternal life (John 10:28)	He died (Rom. 5:8)
All the fullness of deity dwells in Him (Col. 2:9)	He has a body of flesh and bones (Luke 24:39)

The Hypostatic Union of Jesus Christ

http://www.wenstrom.org/downloads/written/doctrines/christology/hypostatic_union.pdf [PDF]

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Kerygma

https://www.catholic.com/magazine/online-edition/the-kerygma-enigma (Catholic Perspective)

Kerygma is a term that is largely unfamiliar to most Catholics. Kerygma (from the Greek keryssein, to proclaim, and keryx, herald) refers to the initial and essential proclamation of the gospel message. The word appears nine times in the New Testament: once in Matthew (12:41), once in Mark (16:20), once in Luke (11:32), and six times in the letters of St. Paul (Rom. 16:25; 1 Cor. 1:21, 2:4, 15:14; 2 Tim. 4:17; and Titus 1:3). To put it simply, the kerygma is the very heart of the gospel, the core message of the Christian faith that all believers are call to proclaim.

Kerygma is distinct from didache, another Greek term that refers to teaching, instruction, or doctrine. While kerygma means the initial gospel proclamation designed to introduce a person to Christ and to appeal for conversion, didache (what we commonly refer to today as catechesis) concerns the fuller and more extensive doctrinal and moral teaching and instruction in the Faith that a person receives once he has accepted the kerygma and has been baptized.

https://www.biblestudytools.com/dictionaries/bakers-evangelical-dictionary/kerygma.html

Transliteration of the Greek word that means proclamation or preaching. Depending on thecontext, it may refer to either the content proclaimed or the act of proclaiming. The wordis used once in Matthew (12:41), once inLuke (11:32),and six times in Paul's letters (Rom 16:25 ; 1 Col 1:21 ; 2:4 ; 15:14 ; 2 Tim 4:17 ; Titus 1:3). All ofthese New Testament occurrences appear to refer to what is being proclaimed.

Both Matthew and Luke apparently refer to Jonah's message as the content proclaimed. The parallel statement in Matthew 12:42 speaking of the wisdom of Solomon also points toward content as the intended meaning of kerygma. Thus, the statement in both Matthew andLuke would mean that the men of Nineveh repented at the message of Jonah.

https://www.gotquestions.org/kerygma.html

The Greek word kerygma means “proclamation.” In the New Testament, the term is often associated with preaching the Christian message, especially the fundamentals of the gospel. In the New Testament, John the Baptist was the one who prepared the way for Jesus the Messiah, “preaching in the wilderness of Judea” (Matthew 3:1).

The word kerygma is also used by some theologians to refer to the entire teaching and ministry of Jesus. The use of this term was popularized by British scholar C. H. Dodd, who includes the following main aspects of the kerygma of Jesus:

1. The Age of Fulfillment has dawned, the “latter days” foretold by the prophets.

2. This has taken place through the birth, life, ministry, death and resurrection of Jesus Christ.

3. By virtue of the resurrection, Jesus has been exalted at the right hand of God as Messianic head of the new Israel.

4. The Holy Spirit in the church is the sign of Christ’s present power and glory.

5. The Messianic Age will reach its consummation in the return of Christ.

6. An appeal is made for repentance with the offer of forgiveness, the Holy Spirit, and salvation.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Kerygma

Basic evangelistic message proclaimed by the earliest Christians. More fully, it is the proclamation of the death, resurrection, and exaltation of Jesus that leads to an evaluation of his person as both Lord and Christ, confronts one with the necessity of repentance, and promises the forgiveness of sins. The kerygma is drawn from two sources: (1) the fragments of pre-Pauline tradition that lie embedded in the writings of the apostle, and (2) the early evangelistic speeches of Peter in the book of Acts. When these two sources are compared, a single basic message emerges.

The kerygma is essentially the same as the gospel, although the term itself emphasizes the manner of delivery somewhat more than the message that is being proclaimed. In the ancient world the king made known his decrees by means of a kerux (a town crier or herald). This person, who often served as a close confidant of the king, would travel throughout the realm announcing to the people whatever the king wished to make known. It is this note of authoritative declaration that is so appropriately transferred to the evangelizing activities of the primitive church.

The simplest outline of the kerygma is made up of (1) a proclamation of the death, resurrection, and exaltation of Jesus, seen as the fulfillment of prophecy and involving human responsibility; (2) the resultant evaluation of Jesus as both Lord and Christ; and (3) a summons to repent and receive forgiveness of sins. However, on the basis of a careful study of the actual texts themselves, the kerygma did not contain (1) a declaration of the dawn of the messianic age; (2) any reference to the life and ministry of Jesus (in contrast to his death and resurrection); or (3) a major emphasis on the Second Coming as part of the evangelistic proclamation. While all of these issues are part of the larger theological presentation of the NT, they do not appear to have been included in the essential apostolic gospel. In any case, they are missing from the various texts that provide the source for the kerygma.

It is evident that the resurrection plays the central role in the drama of redemption. The kerygma always focuses on the resurrection. This supernatural act of God in history authenticates the words and works of Jesus and constitutes the basis for the Christian hope of immortality. Without the resurrection, the church would be no more than a group of well-intentioned religious people who had placed their faith in the superior philosophical and ethical teachings of an unusually fine man. The resurrection is proof positive that Jesus is who he said he was. Only if he is the Son of God can his death provide an appropriate and sufficient sacrifice for human sin. Essentially, the kerygma is a declaration that Christ is risen from the dead and that by that great act God has brought salvation.

The kerygma is not a dull recital of historical facts but a dynamic confrontation between the Holy Spirit and the sinful heart of man at the point of its basic need. Who can deny that the reality of the resurrection validates the claims of Christ? Who can resist the compelling logic of the resurrection as it leads irresistibly to the conclusion that Jesus of Nazareth is the living Lord? To repent and believe is to enter the kingdom of God. The kerygma has as its ultimate goal not a sophisticated theology but a transformed life. It is the declaration that in Christ the new order of eternal life has already entered into time and history.

Source: Tyndale Bible Dictionary

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Peter's Speech (Acts 2:14–36) – The Kerygma for Jews

Now filled with the Spirit, Peter could begin to 'proclaim as a herald' the great fact of redemption, lifting up his voice, as he stood with the eleven, to give solemn utterance to the inspired message (2:14). Before Jews, the 'herald's message' (Gk. kerygma) generally includes the following features:

(a) the guilt of the people who crucified their Messiah;

(b) God's reversal of their verdict in the resurrection and exaltation of Jesus;

(c) the evidence of Christ's well-known ministry of grace and power;

(d) appeals to OT texts;

(e) the continuing possibility of blessing for Israelites who would repent and believe.

GOING DEEPER…

The Kerygma

The kerygma is the essential message of the gospel. It is expressed, for example, in 1 Corinthians 15:3 ff., and includes the fact of the death of Jesus the messiah in accordance with OT prophecies, his burial and resurrection, and the fact that his death was an offering given for our sins in voluntary obedience to God. It also included a brief summary of the earthly ministry of the Lord Jesus, and an explanation, based on OT texts, of the reason why the Messiah had to suffer, his vindication by the resurrection, and his future glory.

This message is found in the early chapters of Acts, in Peter's message to Cornelius in Ac. 10:34–43 and in Paul's preaching to the Thessalonians in Ac. 17:1–3.

See*: Gospel of Paul vs Peter (includes Charts)

Walter L. Liefeld, "The Development of Doctrine in the New Testament," in New International Bible Commentary, ed. F. F. Bruce (Grand Rapids: Zondervan, 1979), 1061.

Source: Zondervan Bible Commentary

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Doxology in the New Testament

Doxology

https://www.studylight.org/dictionaries/hbd/d/doxology.html

Excerpt:

A brief formula for expressing praise or glory to God. Doxologies generally contain two elements, an ascription of praise to God (usually referred to in third person) and an expression of His infinite nature. The term “doxology” (“word of glory”) itself is not found in the Bible, but both the Old and New Testaments contain many doxological passages using this formula.

Biblical doxologies are found in many contexts, but one of their chief functions seems to have been as a conclusion to songs (Exodus 15:18), psalms (Psalm 146:10), and prayers (Matthew 6:13), where they possibly served as group responses to solo singing or recitation. Doxologies conclude four of the five divisions of the Psalter (Psalm 41:13 ; Psalm 72:19 ; Psalm 89:52 ; Psalm 106:48), with Psalm 150:1 serving as a sort of doxology to the entire collection. Doxologies also occur at or near the end of several New Testament books (Romans 16:27 ; Philippians 4:20 ; 1 Timothy 6:16 ; 2 Timothy 4:18 ; Hebrews 13:21 ; 1 Peter 5:11 ; 2 Peter 3:18 ; Jude 1:25) and figure prominently in the Revelation (Revelation 1:6 ; Revelation 4:8 ; Revelation 5:13 ; Revelation 7:12).

Doxologies continued to be written and sung in the Christian church after the close of the New Testament period. Post-biblical doxologies, in reaction against the Arians and other heretical groups, tended to emphasize the doctrine of the Trinity. The doxologies which have been and still are used most commonly in the Christian church are the Gloria in excelsis Deo (“Glory to God in the highest,” an expansion of Luke 2:14 which is often called the “Greater Doxology”), the Gloria Patri (“Glory be to the Father,” the “Lesser Doxology”), and Thomas Ken's “Praise God from Whom All Blessings Flow” (familiarly known simply as “The Doxology”).

ISBE: Doxology

DOXOLOGY - dok-sol'-o-ji (doxologia, "a praising," "giving glory"): A hymn or liturgical formula expressive of praise to God, as the Gloria in Excelsis (an expansion of Lk 2:14), sometimes called the Greater Doxology, and the Gloria Patri ("Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost, world without end, Amen") also known as the Lesser Doxology.

The clause, "as it was in the beginning, is now, and ever shall be," was probably added to the original simple formula to emphasize the church's dissent from the Arian conception of Christ.

The term is applied in particular to the concluding paragraph of the Lord's Prayer (Mt 6:13 margin, "For thine is the kingdom," etc.; compare 1 Ch 29:11, and see LORD'S PRAYER).

To the same general class belong Ps 41:13; 72:18 f; 89:52; Rom 16:27; Eph 2:20; 1 Tim 1:17; Jude 1:25; Rev 5:13 f; 19:1-3, and the modern stanza beginning "Praise God, from whom all blessings flow."

Wikipedia: Doxology

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

What is a doxology, and is it found in the Bible?

https://www.compellingtruth.org/doxology.html

The word "doxology" literally means a study of praise. However, dictionaries usually define the term as expressions of praise to God, often associated with a hymn sung during Christian worship.

Believer's Magazine

http://www.believersmagazine.com

The Doxologies of the New Testament Epistles (1) - June 2008
"... and are usually called doxologies, there being about an equal number of prayers and doxologies. The word doxology comes from a combination of the two Greek words, doxa meaning glory, honour or praise, and logos meaning word, hence a..."

Excerpt:

The "Amens" of the New Testament epistles are usually preceded by desires for grace for the readers or declarations of the glory of God. The former are prayers, and the latter are praise and are usually called doxologies, there being about an equal number of prayers and doxologies. The word doxology comes from a combination of the two Greek words, doxa meaning glory, honour or praise, and logos meaning word, hence a literal rendering of doxology is a "word of glory". Glory is the visible display of true greatness; sometimes we read it was "like devouring fire" (Ex 24.17; 2 Chr 7.3), and also "gloryshone" (Lk 2.9), but often it comes in other forms of demonstration. Thus, for instance, it was the desire of the Psalmist that "Thy saintsshall speak of the glory of thy kingdom, and talk of thy power" (Ps 145.10-11); and "The heavens declare the glory of God" (Ps 19.1). The doxologies certainly do that!

In the New Testament a doxology is a short, unique, and spontaneous ascription of praise to God. They never follow a set pattern, but usually come after the mention of a divine name and they usually end with the phrase "for ever (and ever). Amen". Doxologies appear unexpectedly within, or more expectedly at the end, of the epistles. Their final "Amen" gives the readers an opportunity to show their agreement through their responding "Amens".

The Doxologies of the New Testament Epistles (2) - July 2008
"... In this, the shortest of his doxologies, Paul spontaneously seeks to right the wrong done to God the Creator, who had not been glorified by the post-deluvians (Rom 1.21) who had "changed the glory of the uncorruptible God into an image"..."

The Doxologies of the New Testament Epistles (3) - August 2008
"... H A Barnes, Bromborough HEBREWS "Jesus Christ; to whom be glory for ever and ever. Amen" (Heb 13.20-21) This doxology arises from a prayer addressed to the God of peace, that the readers would be made perfect, i.e. fit,..."

The Doxologies of the New Testament Epistles (4): Revelation - September 2008
"... most of the references show, doxologies occupy a prominent place in heaven, where they seem to be the equivalent of prayers on earth. The form of the doxologies is similar, e.g. the mention of "glory" and "for ever and ever"..."

Doxologies in the New Testament

http://www.christiandiscipleschurch.org/content/7-doxologies-new-testament

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

A List of NT Doxologies and Benedictions (28 Ways to Conclude Your Sermon)

https://www.christianity.com/blogs/eric-mckiddie-pastoralized/28-ways-to-conclude-your-sermon-a-list-of-nt-doxologies-and-benedictions.html

"What is the Doxology?" (This is focusing on Doxologies spoken/sung in church services)

https://www.gotquestions.org/doxology.html

Excerpt:

Answer: The dictionary defines doxology as "an expression of praise to God, especially a short hymn sung as part of a Christian worship service." The word doxology comes from the Greek doxa, ("glory, splendor, grandeur") and logos, ("word" or "speaking"). Most doxologies are short hymns of praise to God in various Christian worship services, often added to the end of canticles, psalms, and hymns.

The Gloria Patri, so named for its first two words in Latin, is commonly used as a doxology by Roman Catholics, Old Catholics, Independent Catholics, Orthodox and many Protestants including Anglicans, Presbyterians, Lutherans, Methodists, and Reformed Baptists. It is called the "Lesser Doxology," thus distinguished from the "Great Doxology," Gloria in Excelsis Deo, and is often called simply "the Doxology." The Latin text of the Lesser Doxology is "Gloria Patri, et Filio, et Spiritui Sancto. Sicut erat in principio, et nunc, et semper, et in sæcula sæculorum. Amen." Literally translated, it means "Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost. As it was in the beginning, is now and ever shall be, world without end. Amen." As well as praising God, this doxology is also a short declaration of faith in the co-equality of the three Persons of the Holy Trinity.

Another commonly heard doxology is "Praise God from Whom All Blessings Flow," which was written in 1674 by Thomas Ken, a priest in the Church of England. The familiar words are "Praise God, from Whom all blessings flow; Praise Him, all creatures here below; Praise Him above, ye Heavenly Host; Praise Father, Son, and Holy Ghost. Amen."

Although the word doxology is not found in the Bible, the themes expressed in doxologies are certainly scriptural. Praising God for His blessings (Ephesians 1:3), ascribing to Him all glory (Romans 11:36; Ephesians 3:21), and affirming the Trinity (Matthew 28:19) have always been integral parts of true Christian worship.

Ephesians 1:3-14 – Spiritual Blessings from Eternity to Eternity

http://www.pericope.org/buls-notes/ephesians/ephesians_1_3_14.htm

Excerpt:

The Epistle text for Christmas II in all three series, A, B, C, is Ephesians 1:3-6,15-18. What is written there about verse 3-6 will not be repeated here except by way of summary. Ephesians 1:3-14 is the "classical location"on the doctrine of election. Other New Testament passage on this subject are found in Romans 8, 2 Thessalonians 2 and 1 Peter 1.

Ephesians 1:3-14 is really a doxology. This passage begins with the word "Praise be" which means "blessed be." "Praise God for the fact that ..." etc. "To the praise" occurs three times in this text, in verse 6 and 12 and 14. Furthermore, this doxology is Trinitarian. In verse 3 Paul mentions the Father. In verses 3-14 Jesus Christ is mentioned or referred to 14 times! The person ad work of Christ is central to election. The Holy Spirit is plainly refereed to in verse 13.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

There is nothing about God's judgment, justice or wrath in this text. It is purest Gospel. Note the following nouns in this text: blessing, 1; love, 1; adoption, 5; good pleasure, 5 and 9; God's will, 5 and 11; God's glory, 6 ,12, 14; grace, 6; redemption, 7 and 14; blood, 7; forgiveness, 7; riches of grace, 7; mystery of His will, 9; purpose, 11; counsel of His will, 11; the Word of truth, 13; the Gospel of our salvation, 13; the promised Holy Spirit, 13; advance payment, 14; inheritance, 14; permanently His, 14; praise, 6, 12, 14. We are overwhelmed.

> Ephesians 1:3 Praise be to the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who has blessed us in the heavenly realms with every spiritual blessing in Christ.
>
> Ephesians 1:4 For he chose us in him before the creation of the world to be holy and blameless in his sight. In love
>
> Ephesians 1:5 he predestined us to be adopted as his sons through Jesus Christ, in accordance with his pleasure and will --
>
> Ephesians 1:6 to the praise of his glorious grace, which he has freely given us in the One he loves.

Paul praises the Father for what He has done for us in Christ: He has blessed us with every spiritual, heavenly blessing. This happened because the Father chose us in Christ before creation. This resulted in our being holy and blameless before God in time. Through Christ, the Father foreordained us to become His children. What prompted the Father to do this? The good pleasure of His saving will. His glorious grace which He showered on us in His beloved Son is to be praised.

The first doxology is found in verse 6. Have you become a Christian? Then rest assured that you are one of God's elect children. Everything depends on your attitude toward Christ Jesus. You did not choose Him. He chose you and ordained you to eternal life. Election is nothing but the true understanding of the grace of God in Christ.

> Ephesians 1:7 In him we have redemption through his blood, the forgiveness of sins, in accordance with the riches of God's grace

Verses 7 to 10 form a unit.

What do we have in Christ? The redemption through His blood, the forgiveness of sins. Here "redemption" refers to the atonement which Christ wrought for all men. It has a different meaning in verse 14.

Note that "redemption" and "forgiveness" stand in apposition to each other. One explains the other. It is the same as objective justification in Romans 5 or objective reconciliation in 2 Corinthians 5.

What prompted the forgiveness of sins? The wealth of God's grace. However, note that the punctuation is interesting here. The Greek Nestle text is followed by NIV: ". . . in accordance with the riches of God's grace (and the thought continues in the next verse) that he lavished . . ." TEV disposes of the difficulty by making this an exclamation: "How great is the grace of God!"

> Ephesians 1:8 that he lavished on us with all wisdom and understanding.

"Which He caused to abound toward us." The richest attribute of God is His unmerited kindness, His "grace." No wonder that many combine verses 7 and 8. The goal of God's kindness is us.

"With all wisdom and prudence." Does this speak of how God caused grace to abound toward us? Thus TEV, JB, NASB. Or does it mean something which God gave to us along with His grace? Thus AAT: "He poured out the riches of His grace on us, giving us every kind of wisdom and understanding." If the phrase modifies the verb then it shows how God begifted us. If it means "along with" it shows what God gave us. Along with AAT, Stoeckhardt, Kretzmann and Lenski, we prefer the "along with" idea.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Kretzmann: And the wisdom and discernment given to us by God make us ready and perfect for a holy blameless conduct in love.

Lenski: That Paul refers to 'wisdom' and 'intelligence' bestowed on us need not be questioned, especially in view of the parallel 'in all wisdom and spiritual understanding' in Colossians 1:9.

Stoeckhardt: The second blessing is that which is called 'in all wisdom and prudence' . . . . The Christians are to think upon and to seek to understand the Lord's exact will and not to be foolish and irrational. Colossians 1:9ff; Philippians 1:9ff; Luke 1:17. The words describe the mind of the righteous in contrast to the disobedience of the ungodly.

We can see this wisdom and prudence, more or less, in the life of God's children.

> Ephesians 1:9 And he made known to us the mystery of his will according to his good pleasure, which he purposed in Christ,

"By making known" denotes manner. "The mystery of His will" is the Gospel. It is called a mystery because it has come only by revelation. The unbeliever in no way understand the Gospel. It is foolishness to him, 1 Corinthians 1:18. But to the believer it is the power of God.

In verses 5, 9 and 11 we have "His will." In all cases this is God's saving will, the Gospel. Paul calls it "God's will" because it proceeds only from Him. No synergism here.

AAT: "It was His kindly purpose in Christ to manage everything" etc. His good pleasure which He purposed in Christ Jesus caused Him to do what follows in verse 10.

The point is that God was moved by no outside influence to do what He did. Our salvation from eternity to eternity is safe in Christ Jesus. No one can disturb it. No one can take it from us. John 10:28.

> Ephesians 1:10 to be put into effect when the times will have reached their fulfillment -- to bring all things in heaven and on earth together under one head, even Christ.

This verse begins with a purpose clause: "For the purpose of administering the fullness of the ages." We read: "In keeping with His good pleasure which He purposed in Christ for the purpose of administering the fullness of the ages." The phrase "the fullness of the ages" means the same as "the fullness of time" in Galatians 4:4. That is the New Testament era.

In His good pleasure the Father has given the administration of the New Testament era to His Son. Christ governs the entire New Testament era. Why? To bring all things to a unity in Christ.

"All things" are qualified by two phrases: "the things in the heavens and the things on the earth." We agree with Bengel, Stoeckhardt and Kretzmann that this means the Una Sancta, the Holy Christian Church, made up of those who are still living and those who have passed on to their eternal reward. Lenski and others object to this. They say that this passage speaks of Christ in the Kingdom of power, the same as is indicated in Matthew 28:18, Philippians 2:1-10, and Ephesians 1:22.

But Stoeckhardt says that here Paul is introducing the great Una Sancta doctrine, made so clear in chapters 2 and 3, the one Christian Church, made up of Christian Jews and Gentiles. Stoeckhardt objects to Lenski's explanation saying that not all creation will be united in Christ.

> Ephesians 1:11 In him we were also chosen, having been predestined according to the plan of him who works out everything in conformity with the purpose of his will,

The RSV, TEV, NIV and AAT follow the Greek Nestle text and make a subparagraph here. Note the similarity between verses 4-6 and 11-12.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

But there are two differences: in verse 11 we are told that we were elected "in keeping with the purpose of the one who is active in all things in keeping with the plan of His saving will." Secondly, here Paul introduces the Jews in verse 12 which goes with verse 11. What is Paul saying here? The history of the Christian Church from Pentecost to the very end is planned down to the very individual who was chosen already in eternity.

> Ephesians 1:12 in order that we, who were the first to hope in Christ, might be for the praise of his glory.

Another purpose clause. "So that we should be to the praise of his glory." That means "so that we should praise His glory."

Here specifically Paul is talking about "grace," the attribute in God which moved Him to send His Son to redeem all men, and the grace which also chose to everlasting life those whom He caused to come to faith in time.

Paul speaks of those Jews who were saved by the promises before Christ came.

> Ephesians 1:13 And you also were included in Christ when you heard the word of truth, the gospel of your salvation. Having believed, you were marked in him with a seal, the promised Holy Spirit,

In verse 12 Paul spoke of "we," the Jews. In this verse he speaks of "you," the Gentiles.

When they heard the Gospel they were sealed in Christ by means of the promised Holy Spirit. All that goes before, the election by grace from eternity, is brought to a focus here. Sealing means that God claimed them permanently as His very own. They are eternally secure.

> Ephesians 1:14 who is a deposit guaranteeing our inheritance until the redemption of those who are God's possession -- to the praise of his glory.

In verse 12 it was "we." The in 13 we had "you." Now it is "us," both Jews and Gentiles.

The first part of the verse modifies "the Holy Spirit." "Deposit" means a payment in advance. In Romans 8:23 He is called "the first fruit of the Spirit."

Our inheritance is, of course, everlasting life. In verse 5 we were made aware of our election to adoption of sons, becoming His children. Now we have the inheritance in verse 14.

In verse 7, "redemption" denotes the atonement of Jesus. Here it denotes the deliverance from all evil at the time of death.

God sealed us in Christ by the promised Holy Spirit for the purpose of delivering that which God possesses, His child.

God sealed us to the praise of His glory. His glory very likely includes all the attributes and nouns mentioned throughout this text and summarized at the beginning of these Notes.

The Formula of Concord, S.D., Art. XI, Election, quotes our text twice:

It is beyond all doubt that the true understanding or the right use of the teaching of God's eternal foreknowledge will in no way cause or support either impenitence or despair. So, too, Scripture present this doctrine in no other way than to direct us thereby to the Word, Ephesians 1:13-14, to admonish us to repent, to urge us to godliness, Ephesians 1:15ff, to strengthen our faith and to assure us of our salvation, Ephesians 1:9,13,14. (Tappert 618.12)

Neither should we permit ourselves to try to explore the secret and hidden abyss of divine foreknowledge. Instead we must heed the revealed will of God. For he has revealed and 'made known to us the mystery of his will' and has brought it forth through Christ as that it should be preached, Ephesians 1:9-10. (Tappert 620.26)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

In this lengthy passage about what my Father has done for me from eternity to eternity, the idea of faith does not appear until the second last verse. And here is clearly means "by believing" not "because of believing." The doctrine of a person's election totally eliminates any and all synergism, also that of the pseudo-Lutherans who claim that election is "in view of a future faith."

Not until we experience everlasting life will we fully realize the wonders of this passage. No wonder that we frequently find all saints, angels, archangels, Apostles and Prophets falling on their knees in the Book of Revelation singing eternal praises and "Hallelujahs" to the Lamb for sinners slain!

Jude's concluding doxology, which is probably the most well-known part of the book, is perfect in its praise of God's eternal nature and qualities:

To him who is able to keep you from stumbling and to present you before his glorious presence without fault and with great joy—to the only God our Savior be glory, majesty, power and authority, through Jesus Christ our Lord, before all ages, now and forevermore! Amen. (Jude 24-25)

Source: https://ericcostanzo.me/2013/04/09/is-jude-the-weirdest-book-in-the-new-testament/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

They Mystery of Doxology (Concordia Theological Seminary Press) (2000)

http://newbigindotnet.wpengine.com/wp-content/uploads/2016/12/76bsr8.pdf [PDF]

Excerpt:

One of the most puzzling features of early Christian worship is the sudden appearance of doxologies in the liturgy of the church. Hymns of praise were sung daily by the Levitical choir in the daily service at the temple (Kleinig 1993, 100-31). In the temple and the synagogue the people acclaimed God with eulogies which acknowledged the Lord as the giver of blessing. In fact, eulogies were such an important part of Jewish prayer that the first tractate of the Mishnah was devoted to them. But at no time did the Israelites perform doxologies to the Lord in their worship. Yet, as far as we can gather from the New Testament and the apostolic fathers, the early church performed doxologies to God the Father from the very beginning of its existence. Indeed, the performance of doxology seems to be one of the unique ritual acts which distinguished Christian worship from its Jewish antecedents.

…

3. Conclusion

The performance of the doxology is a unique feature of Christian worship. In the early church it served to distinguish Christians from Jews as well as the orthodox from the heterodox. It was therefore rightly regarded as the epitome of orthodoxy, for orthodoxy is right praise, the correct performance of doxology to the Triune God. The glory of God was therefore never understood in the early church as an abstract principle for the motivation of a right attitude to life and for submission to the sovereignty of God, as it has become in many western churches under the influence of Calvin, but was acknowledged and celebrated ritually in the eucharistic liturgy.

The performance of the doxology in the liturgy involves us in the central mystery of the divine service which, as Paul reminds us in 1 Tim 3:16, revolves around the physical assumption of Jesus into glory. He is now both seen by angels and is preached among the nations. In the divine service where 'the gospel of the glory of Christ (2 Cor 4:4) is proclaimed and enacted, we who see 'the glory of God in the face of Christ' (2 Cor 4:6), we who are being 'transformed into his likeness from one degree of glory to another' (2 Cor 3:18), perform the doxology together with the angels. Even more wonderfully, we join with the risen Lord Jesus as he gives glory to his heavenly Father.

By performing that doxology, we tell the world that in and through the risen Lord Jesus we have access to heaven here on earth; we acknowledge, laud and proclaim the gracious presence of the Triune God with us. And as we perform that doxology in the very presence of the living God, we who have been called by the gospel to 'share in the glory of our Lord Jesus Christ' (2 Thess 2:14), are glorified as we glorify him. In amazement we forget ourselves. We do the only thing that we can do in God's presence and say all that we can ultimately say about God. As Brunner (211) says:

> 'In this final word which the creature may say about God, the creature exists only for God....., fulfilling its own essence by the fact that it is no longer, and needs no longer to be, anything but the perfect mirror of God's glory'.

See also: Paul's Prayers for the Churches

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Sin – What Is It?

A Theology of Sin – What is Sin? (Note: This is coming from a Weslyan perspective)
http://www.eternalsecurity.us/what_is_sin.htm

Excerpt:

Sin, as one doctrine of the Christian system, is the common denominator of the other doctrines.

Richard S. Taylor makes this point at the outset of his classic work*, A Right Conception of Sin.* [1] His argument is that any doctrine that relates to sin, is effected by our understanding and definition of sin. Most errors in theology can usually find their roots in a defective definition of sin. This I have found to be profoundly true. We have two key players in theology, and one main problem: We have God; we have man; and we have the problem of sin. All systematic theology comes down to this reduction.

We find in theology that God is holy, and that this holiness prevents God from being able to have the relationship with man that He desires. Man, on the other hand, is separated from God because of sin. Man can do nothing in the way of reconciling or mending the relationship, so God must be the One to find a way to bring us both together. God's holiness is spurned on by His love to make a way. Grace is God's answer through the atonement of Christ on our behalf. This is where most theologians agree. All orthodox theologians will accept these points. So why do we end up so far apart in explaining how this wonderful grace comes our way? Why are we so divided? The answer lays primarily in our definition of sin.

If our definition of sin causes Christians to view things so differently, does this not imply that the problem resides in a faulty view of what sin really is? Instead of tackling the problem of how God saves us through the atonement to determine our definition of sin, wouldn't it be far better to seek a definition of sin before we attempt to determine how the atonement works? Theologians put way too much emphasis on their theological support for their definition of sin. Sin tends to get defined by how we make the atonement work instead of what the Scriptures say that sin is. Circular reasoning makes for great arguments, but those that can differentiate between the facts, and the theories used to support those facts, will find themselves closer to common ground.

What Then Is The

"Biblical"

Definition of Sin?

While it would be desirable to come outright with a definition to work from, I believe it will be of better use to the reader to see that any definition that is arrived at must be based upon an inductive study of Scripture concerning sin.

Much of the difficulty in defining sin is that there is no universal consensus as to what the nature of sin really is. Any definition given will no doubt be scrutinized and summarily rejected by some for this very reason. Even though an attempt will be made to arrive at a usable definition, I fear that many will either outright reject the definition because it does not meet their theological presuppositions, or that a singular definition does not do justice to the whole realm of what sin is. We cannot easily gloss by this most important doctrinal theme and just rely upon our theological pillows for comfort. To have right belief we must have right understanding of fundamental truths.

Sin is generally admitted to be twofold:

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

1. "In sin did my mother conceive me." Ps. 51:5.

2. "He that commiteth sin is of the devil." 1 Jn. 3:8.

The first indicating a nature or state we are born with. Some call it original sin, inherited depravity, total depravity, fallen nature, etc. It is thought to be the result of a state in which we all inherit from Adam through birth.

The second type of sin is what we would call actual sin. These are sins committed as an act. It is described as unbelief, rebellion, self-will, unrighteousness, idolatry.

Both types can be described as unclean, impure, unholy.

When one reads of a statement of sin in the Bible, we are confronted with the question as to whether the passage speaks of sin as a state, sin as an act, or both.

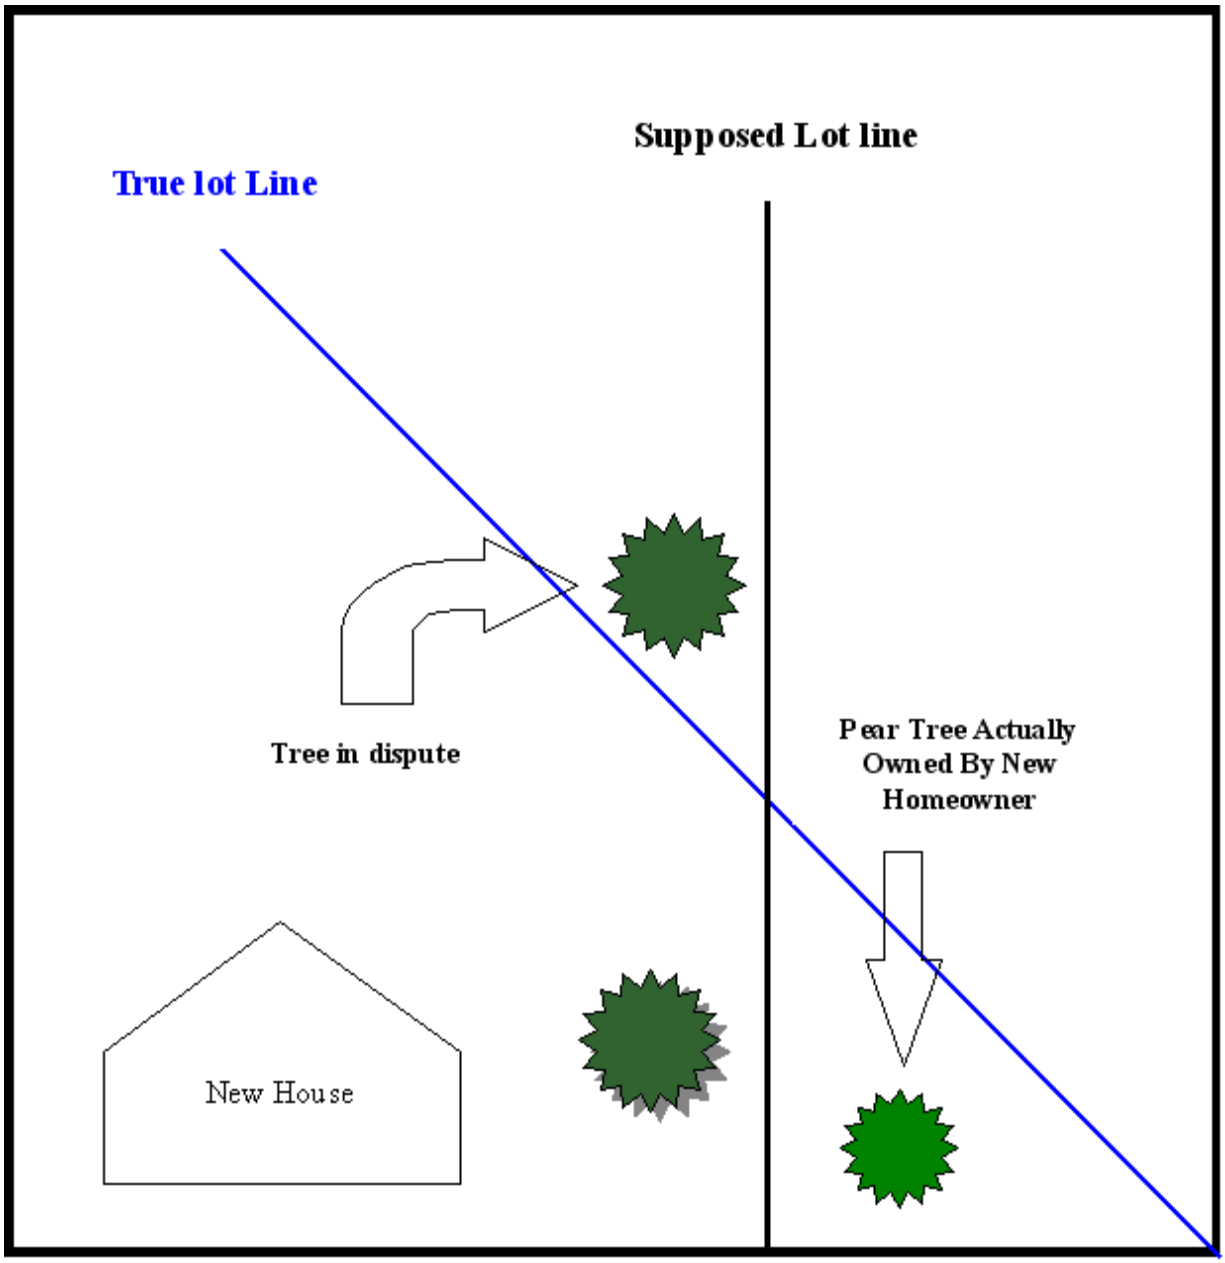
Original sin, depravity, or corrupt nature, is displayed as the state in which all unregenerate people are in before salvation. Some suppose that this means that we are all guilty of the sin of Adam, some see it as something that is acquired through an act of the will after infancy, and others believe that it is an inherited nature in which each of us is born, but does not imply personal guilt for what Adam did. Depravity would not be our fault, it would be our misfortune. This misfortune makes us unfit for heaven, requiring the atonement for cleansing, but not forgiveness. The later of the views is what I see as being brought forth in the Scriptures. This will be covered in greater detail under the heading of The Depravity of Man.

Sin as an act is of more importance to us here and now. It is something that is in the realm of our responsibility, and as such, should be examined to see what, if anything can be done about it.

Two examples of sin as a verb, an act, are presented to see the elements constitute a "sin."

"Sin is the transgression of the law." 1 Jn. 3:4

In this, we see an essential element... transgression of the law.



Secondly we see, "To him, therefore, that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him it is sin." James 4:17

In this we see the second element... knowledge of what is wrong, and willfulness to do wrong.

Sin, as an act, is defined by Wesley as "A willful transgression of a known law." This holds to the elements in question. The idea that we gain by this is that sin, as an act of rebellion, requires that one understands that they are doing wrong.

Leslie D. Wilcox gives an example of this in volume 3 of his Profiles in Wesleyan Theology.[2] He gives us an example of a man who buys a house and property. According to his understanding, the property line goes straight back from his house. On what he believes to be his land is a fruit tree, so he picks and takes the fruit. The neighbor sees this, and comes out of his house furious and screaming, accusing his new neighbor of being a thief for stealing his fruit! Unbeknownst to the new neighbor, the property line goes at an angle, and the fruit tree is clearly in the neighbors yard.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The question is, did he sin? According to Wesley's definition he did not (in the sense of an act of rebellion), for it did not carry the essential elements. First, he did not know he was doing wrong. Secondly, he did not willfully violate his neighbor, but yet, to all rights and appearances, the new neighbor broke the law and stole what was rightfully his neighbors. Now, once he was informed of the fact that he violated the law, then he owed his neighbor restitution for his loss.

Now, what if the new neighbor was taking pears from the tree that was on his property, but he thought they were on his neighbors property? Did he sin by taking fruit that was his property? Yes! Sin is a matter of the heart and intent, not necessarily the result of what occurred. If he thought that he was stealing his neighbors pears, he was committing a sin in his own heart, a willful transgression of a known law of God. This illustration helps us to rightfully differentiate between a mistake, an act of ignorance, and a willful act of sin.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

This gives us insight into many passages of Scripture such as in 1 Corinthians where a man was involved with incest. Paul, a Jew who knew the Law, was in a pagan land where they knew little or nothing of the Law. Paul constantly remarks with exasperation, "Did you not know?" This is how they could be carnal, yet obedient up to the light that they had about right and wrong. Once informed of the sinfulness of this act, Paul suggests that Church discipline be enacted as to "turn such a one over to Satan." Luke records in Acts 17:30, that, "the times of this ignorance God winked at; but now commandeth all men every where to repent." God views mistakes and "sins" of ignorance differently than willful "high-handed" sins, which is to be seen throughout Scripture. "Sin" as an act is something that the Bible asserts is unavoidable. To remain true to the Scriptures, we must differentiate between intentional sin, and "sins" of ignorance. God reveals that He makes the differentiation, so we must do so also. There is a sin which leads to death (willful sin), and that which does not, (sins of ignorance) 1 John 5:16. This is evident by the context which states, "We know that whosoever is born of God sinneth not; but he that is begotten of God keepeth himself..." 1 John 5:18. There is no subtle endorsement for a doctrine that Christians 'sin in word, thought, and deed everyday,' in this passage or anywhere else in Scripture.

We also have examples of the Old Testament saints who did things that would be sinful in our understanding of Christian ethics. We need you understand that many of then lived before the Law. Many of them had limited light. We can see now what they did was wrong, but we cannot say in all cases that they knew, and were willfully disobeying God. If it is not stated in Scripture, we have no right to interject willfulness where God has not.

Many already have a bias as to what sin is, and will paint the picture much broader. This idea that God judges according to a man's light and knowledge does not fit in with their current definition of sin. For those of you who feel that way, consider the following: "Jesus said unto them, if ye were blind, ye should have no sin: but now you say, We see; therefore your sin remaineth." John 9:41. "if I had not come and spoken unto them, they had not had sin; but now they have no cloak for their sin." John 15:22. "And that servant, which knew his lord's will, and prepared not himself, neither did according to his will, shall be beaten with many stripes. But he that knew not, and did commit things worthy of stripes, shall be beaten with few stripes." Luke 12:47-48. "Therefore to him that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him it is sin." James 4;17.

I am sure that the last verse quoted has come into question as to whether that is the meaning of the passage. Most erroneously read sins of omission into the passage. The reference is not speaking of sins of omission, but sins of sinning against known light. Commentator, J.P. Lange says of this passage, "The reference is not to sins of omission, but to sinning against the light and knowledge, to doing evil the knowledge of good not withstanding... the persons, whom James addressed knew well enough that they ought to do good, but separated their knowledge from their practice and did evil. (Lange's Commentary,)[3] James, pages 121-122. This observation caught me off-guard. I had been trained to read sins of omission into the passage: but Lange is right, the context speaks only of sins that they were doing, and not sins of leaving things undone.

It is great that we have a definition to work with, but what makes this definition any better than any other? This is a valid question in which we can derive an answer.

TESTING OF A DEFINITION

To narrow the definition of sin as a act to "a willful transgression of a known law of God," seems to not go far enough for many people. Many choose a definition of, "to deviate in any manner from an absolute standard of perfect behavior." This makes anything less than the perfection of God to be sinful. This definition, although the most commonly used one, makes the Bible out to be a book of absurdities. First, such a definition accuses Adam and Eve of sin in the garden before the fall. Any tripping over a stone, or spilling a drink would deviate from a absolute perfection. Secondly, it generally includes omissions, which condemns our Lord Himself for not healing everybody, for not visiting every prisoner, and for not caring personally for every widow. By such an absolute standard, nobody can do anything right. Doing nothing becomes sin. God does not command us to be God, but godly to the extent that we can in our humanity.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

W.T. Purkiser in his book, Conflicting Concepts of Holiness,[4] suggests that we test our definition of sin by taking the verses of the Bible that speak of sin as an act, and inserting our definition in place of the term "sin." If our definition makes sense in place of the word, it is likely a good definition. If it makes the passage to be nonsense, or contradicts the passage, then it is an impossible definition.

Let's put some of the 41 references of sin as a verb to the test. As a reminder, I will state the two alternative definitions again.

Sin is:

Wesley's definition: A willful transgression of a known law of God. (Ethical definition).

Legal definition: To deviate in any manner from an absolute standard of perfect behavior.

Romans 2:12, "For as many as have sinned without law shall also perish without law; and as many as have sinned in the law shall be judged by the law."

Wesley's definition: "For as many as have willfully transgressed a known law of God without law shall also perish without law; and as many as have willfully transgressed a known law of God in the law shall be judged by the law."

Legal definition: "For as many as have deviated in any manner from an absolute standard of perfect behavior without law shall also perish without law; and as many as have deviated in any manner from an absolute standard of perfect behavior in the law shall be judged by the law."

So far, both definitions work, but it makes little sense to why God would inform us of the legal sense, for we could never do anything about such a failure.

Romans 3:23, "For all have sinned, and come short of the glory of God."

Wesley's definition: "For all have willfully transgressed a known law of God, and come short of the glory of God."

Legal definition: "For all have deviated in any manner from an absolute standard of perfect behavior and come short of the glory of God."

Both seem to work here too.

1 Jn.1:10, "If we say that we have not sinned, we make him a liar, and his word is not in us."

Wesley's definition: "If we say that we have not willfully transgressed a known law of God, we make him a liar, and his word is not in us."

Legal definition: "If we say that we have not deviated in any manner from an absolute standard of perfect behavior, we make him a liar, and his word is not in us."

Both work again, but the legal definition appears to border on the lines of being awkward.

Matthew 18:15, "Moreover if thy brother shall trespass against thee, go and tell him his fault between thee and him alone: if he shall hear thee, thou hast gained thy brother."

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Wesley's definition: "Moreover if thy brother shall willfully transgress a known law of God, against thee, go and tell him his fault between thee and him alone: if he shall hear thee, thou hast gained thy brother."

Legal definition: "Moreover if thy brother shall deviated in any manner from an absolute standard of perfect behavior, against thee, go and tell him his fault between thee and him alone: if he shall hear thee, thou hast gained thy brother."

The legal definition does not work well here. It is clearly not the intent of the passage.

John 5:14, "Afterward Jesus findeth him in the temple, and said unto him, Behold, thou art made whole: sin no more, lest a worse thing come upon you."

Wesley's definition: "Afterward Jesus findeth him in the temple, and said unto him, Behold, thou art made whole: willfully transgress a known law of God no more, lest a worse thing come upon you."

Legal definition: "Afterward Jesus findeth him in the temple, and said unto him, Behold, thou art made whole: deviate in any manner from an absolute standard of perfect behavior no more, lest a worse thing come upon you."

The legal definition does not make any sense here either. The fact that in your humanity your next breath is not as perfect as God's, renders you a sinner. How can one who is not God, be commanded by God to be as perfect as God? The ethical definition works without a flaw.

John 8:11, "She said, No man, Lord. And Jesus said unto her, Neither do I condemn thee: go, and sin no more."

Wesley's definition: "She said, No man, Lord. And Jesus said unto her, Neither do I condemn thee: go, and willfully transgress a known law of God no more."

Legal definition: "She said, No man, Lord. And Jesus said unto her, Neither do I condemn thee: go, and deviate in any manner from an absolute standard of perfect behavior no more."

Once again, an impossible command if we use the legal definition.

Romans 6:15, "What then? shall we sin, because we are not under the law, but under grace? God forbid."

Wesley's definition: "What then? shall we willfully transgress a known law of God because we are not under the law, but under grace? God forbid."

Legal definition: "What then? shall we deviate in any manner from an absolute standard of perfect behavior because we are not under the law, but under grace? God forbid."

This is clearly speaking of avoidable sins with the exclamation of "God forbid!" The legal definition makes the passage an absurdity.

1 Corinthians 7:28, "But if thou marry, thou hast not sinned; and if a virgin marry, she hath not sinned..."

Wesley's definition: "But if thou marry, thou hast not willfully transgressed a known law of God; and if a virgin marry, she hath not willfully transgressed a known law of God..."

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Legal definition: "But if thou marry, thou hast not deviated in any manner from an absolute standard of perfect behavior, and if a virgin marry, she hath not deviated in any manner from an absolute standard of perfect behavior..."

The legal definition is once again nonsense. It is an impossible definition of the verb "sin."

1 Corinthians 15:34, "Awake to righteousness, and sin not; for some have not the knowledge of God: I speak this to your shame."

Wesley's definition: "Awake to righteousness, and (do not) willfully transgress a known law of God; for some have not the knowledge of God: I speak this to your shame."

Legal definition: "Awake to righteousness, and (do not) deviate in any manner from an absolute standard of perfect behavior; for some have not the knowledge of God: I speak this to your shame."

Shame because they do not exhibit absolute perfection? Such a remark would be laughed off by any audience! The legal definition fails miserably.

One last one.

1 Timothy 5:20, "Them that sin rebuke before all, that others also may fear."

Wesley's definition: "Them that willfully transgress a known law of God rebuke before all, that others also may fear."

Legal definition: "Them that deviate in any manner from an absolute standard of perfect behavior rebuke before all, that others also may fear."

I don't know about you, but if we take the legal definition as the Biblical definition in this case, then many would have fear; fear of having anything to do with Christianity!

My friends, more can be stated, but even one example proves the legal definition to be an impossibility. Any definition of a word that only works some of the time, and fails to work most of the time, and cannot pass the test of literal and practical application, cannot be the right definition! But people will still cling to their old understanding of what an act of sin is in defiance of the facts. The old definition works for them, it feeds their theology.

What Sin Is Not

Once again, we come full circle to answer our original question. We can gather some clarification of what sin is by observing what it is not. "We hold positively that sin is not only an accident or misfortune, it is not a mere stepping stone in man's moral development, but that it is a condemnable fault. The sinner is blameworthy in the sight of God. Sin has its seat in the will and is an evil thing in the world. When a man opposes his will to the perfect will of God, he is not merely unfortunate, but he is a culpable wrong-doer. He who voluntarily opposes God's will is blameworthy in the sight of God and is liable to punishment."[5] Sin is not merely being human, but is an avoidable thing in which we are held accountable for. Everywhere in Scripture we are exhorted to "sin not." But so many define sin in a way that makes these commands to be utter nonsense! Sin is sin, and reaps the same result. If the standard of what is sin is "anything that deviates from the actual perfection of God," then all we can do is to sin! But God is clear, we are not to sin; we do not have to sin! (Ezek. 3:21; 1 John 2:1). So many in their definition of sin unwittingly create an attitude that murder is as bad as forgetting a promise! To this strange idea of sin, Dr. Phineas F. Bresee remarked that "A failure to distinguish between sin and infirmity, puts an undue emphasis upon sin, and has a tendency to discourage earnest seekers from pressing on to full deliverance from the carnal mind. Calling that sin which is not sin, opens the door to actual sinning".[6] This took a while for it to sink in when I first read it, but I soon realized that it was quite true. If sin is deadly, as we know it is, and everything that falls short of God's perfection is a sin, it is ridiculous to even attempt to try avoid sin, for the very imperfection of your next heartbeat, or your next breath, is not as perfect as what God's would be, and is therefore "sinning." "But to make everything sin is, in effect, to make nothing sin".[7] To make that which is amoral, i.e., forgetfulness, mistakes, unintentional offenses resulting from ignorance, to be "sin," is truly to make "nothing" sin. If we make no differentiation whatsoever, we leave door wide open for allowing all sorts of sin.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Richard S. Taylor states, "Choice of evil, or sin in act, always produces the combination of the three facts, and such a combination always brings forth death.'[8] The "three facts" that Taylor refers to are: "the result of sin? It involves (1) separation from God, (2) depravity of the moral and spiritual nature, and (3) just punishment."[9] Sin is a choice; an avoidable choice. "Sin is a clenched fist and a blow in the face of God,"[10] Otherwise, sin would be merely a misfortune, something in which we are held accountable for when we had no power to choose otherwise. It is clearly an injustice to damn someone for something that they cannot avoid doing. No ability; no responsibility. "If we view the problem scripturally, sin is inexcusable. If it is unavoidable, however, it is excusable. Therefore to say sin is inexcusable is to declare sin to be avoidable."[11] An erroneous doctrine of sin that makes "nothing" to be sin fails miserably, especially in light of the terrible consequences of sin. A wrong idea of what sin really is could easily sink the most devout Christian into despair. The only options left for those that desire to be consistent is to either defy Scripture and allow for sin altogether, or to believe the Scriptures and ensure that their doctrinal understanding of sin is in alignment with the Scriptural possibility of not sinning.

Many are not satisfied with the definition of sin as I have presented. For fear that I may be claiming that "sins of ignorance are not really sins," they will not find that assertion here. Those who do not differentiate between an "act" of sin, and a "mistake" will argue that even sins of ignorance are stated to be in need of atonement in the Scriptures. They will find no disagreement with me that sins of ignorance are truly sins and are in need of atonement! But I will assert that the Scriptures clearly treat "sins of ignorance" differently than "willful acts" of sin. "Certain New Testament passages have a bearing on this matter. One of them is Heb.10:26. "For if we sin deliberately" (RSV); "For if we go on sinning willfully" (NASB); "For if we sin willfully" (KJV); and "If we deliberately keep on sinning" (NIV). This passage implies that we can sin without it being willful and deliberate."[12] But also note that in this passage "unwillful" and "sins of ignorance" are treated completely different from willful and deliberate sinning, especially in its end result! "[E]ven unintentional sins need to be atoned for--or cleansed moment by moment--by Christ. Leviticus 4-5 teaches that such sins need to be atoned for. When a person "sins unintentionally...he is guilty" (4:27), and "When he is made aware of the sin...he must bring...his offering for the sin he committed" (v.28). Likewise in the New Testament, such sins need to be cleansed away. In 1 John 1:7 we read, "But if we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship with one another, and the blood of Jesus, his Son, purifies us from all sin." Here, as the believer is "walk[ing] in the light," some things are called "sin." They are so serious that the blood of Jesus Christ needs to cleanse them away. It is to be noted, though, that the word for "purifies" in in the present tense in the Greek. This means that such a believer is cleansed right as the sin occurs..."[13] Note the contrast between 1 John 1:7 and Hebrews 10:26. Deliberate and willful sin is treated with the utmost severity. Sins of ignorance, while still sins that need cleansing, are immediately met with grace. Also note that one can be pure in motive, thereby "walking in the light" yet commit a multitude of unknown and unwillful sins without violating his or her conscience. A "deliberate" sin however, involves rebellion against a known law of God, and is incompatible with "walking in the light." There is no automatic cleansing for those who sin with a "high hand."

Conclusion

We started the examination of sin by attempting to emphasize the importance of finding a Biblical definition. Sin touches nearly every critical facet of theology and must be carefully examined to avoid tainting our theological doctrines. If we assume that it is something that it is not, then we build a tower of theological presumption upon it. Sin is central to the doctrine of salvation and the atonement. This is certainly an area where we cannot afford to be in error; the fate of our eternal souls could hang in the balance!

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

We have also observed that the most popular concept of sin today is the legal model. It paints the brush broadly, yet leads us to inevitable failure. The nature of sin is not that we fail to succeed in being equal to God, it is the failure to ascend to the capacity that we are able as human beings. Our limited knowledge can lead us to failures, but these failures are not rebellion if the are done so in ignorance. God knows the heart and intent of every person. No one is punished with eternal damnation the sin of Adam, but we all suffer the misfortune of an inherited depravity. This nature we are born with is met with grace to respond, which makes each individual personally accountable.

We also tested the popular idea of sin, and the Wesleyan definition of sin within the context of different passages. The Wesleyan model fits every single passage that uses sin as a verb. Only a small percentage of passages worked with the legal model.

Sin is a choice; an avoidable choice through the grace of God. If it is avoidable, then we are accountable. Sin as an act of the will is to be separated from sins of ignorance, or mistakes. With the exception of including "ignorance" as a sin that always carries the same damaging effect as willful sin, the following definition seems to follow along with the points of this article, and those that have preceded it in this series.

"Sin is to be defined primarily in relation to God. It is disobedience, unbelief, ignorance, [the idea that "ignorance" is the same as "disobedience or unbelief" I strenuously deny!] and the passive assertion of usurped autonomy, and the wicked deviation from, or violation of, God's righteousness will and law. The breach of a right relationship with God carries with it the disruption of a right relationship with others and the disintegration of the self. But this is a derivative, for it is because of sin against God that there is sin against others and oneself (Ps.51:4)."[14] I can accept many of the finer points of this definition as it relates to the practical aspect of what sin is and does. While it is important to understand what sin is, we must keep in focus that sinning always has some bearing upon our relationship with God and others. Hopefully by realizing this, we will be motivated by love to avoid the damaging effects of sin; but if we cannot be motivated by love, this knowledge should give us a healthy fear of the reality of what our sin does, not only to us, but God and others!

---

1. A Right Conception of Sin, Richard S. Taylor, page 9, Beacon Hill Press, Kansas City, MO. 1945.

2. Profiles In Wesleyan Theology, Leslie D. Wilcox, 3:166, Schmul Publishing Company, Inc., Salem, OH. 1985

3. Lange's Commentary on the Holy Scriptures, John Peter Lange, D.D., Volume 12, James, pages 121-122, Zondervan Publishing House, Grand Rapids, MI. New Edition 1960.

4. Conflicting Concepts of Holiness, W.T. Purkiser, pages 40-48, Beacon Hill Press of Kansas City, Kansas City, MO. Revised edition 1972.

5. Systematic Theology, S. J. Gamertsfelder, D.D., Ph. D., page 413, Evangelical Publishing House, Harrisburg, PA. 1938.

6. Christian Theology, H. Orton Wiley, footnote 2:508, from Bresee's Sermon: Death and Life, Beacon Hill Press, Kansas City, MO, 1952.

7. Exploring Our Christian Faith, W.T. Purkiser editor, page 293, Beacon Hill Press of Kansas City, Kansas City, MO. 1978.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

8. A Right Conception of Sin, Richard S. Taylor, page 26, Beacon Hill Press, Kansas City, MO. 1945.

9. A Right Conception of Sin, Richard S. Taylor, page 24, Beacon Hill Press, Kansas City, MO. 1945.

10. A Right Conception of Sin, Richard S. Taylor, page 66, Beacon Hill Press, Kansas City, MO. 1945.

11. A Right Conception of Sin, Richard S. Taylor, page 74, Beacon Hill Press, Kansas City, MO. 1945.

12. A Wesleyan-Holiness Theology, J. Kenneth Grider, page 292, Beacon Hill Press, Kansas City, MO. 1994.

13. A Wesleyan-Holiness Theology, J. Kenneth Grider, page 293, Beacon Hill Press, Kansas City, MO. 1994.

14.The International Standard Bible Encyclopedia revised, Geoffrey W. Bromiley editor, 4:518, William B. Eerdmans Publishing Company, Grand Rapids, MI. 1988

Main Menu: A Theology Of Sin

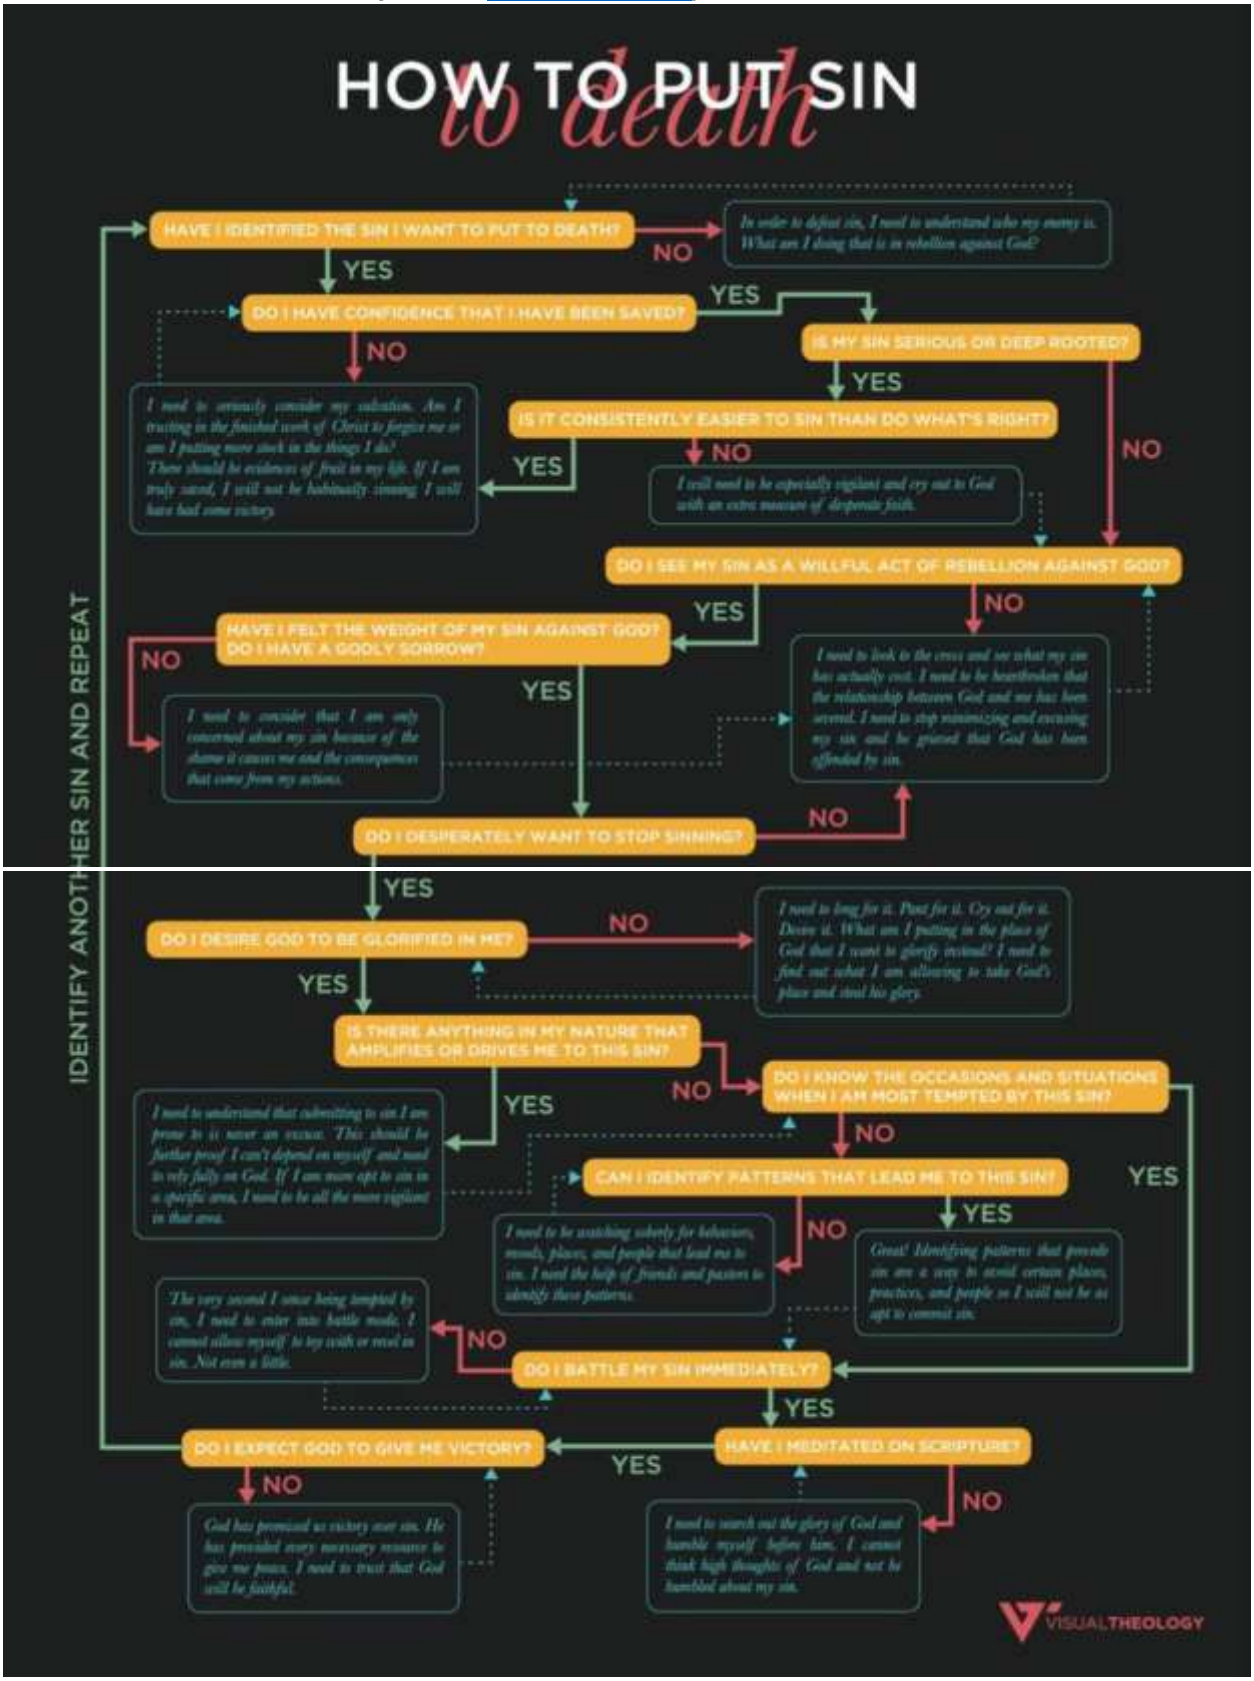
The Holiness of God

What is Sin?

The Wages of Sin

The Depravity of Man

The Grace of God



Sin and the Atonement

Must we Sin?

Chastisement and the Christian

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

How to Put Sin to Death (source: Visual Theology)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Trinity (The Trinity of God)

The Historic Case for the Trinity [Recommended]

https://www.bethinking.org/god/the-historic-case-for-the-trinity

Excerpt:

An oft-repeated objection to the Trinity is that the Scriptures provide no theological basis upon which one can build a case for the Trinity. Further, those unfamiliar with Christian origins and the historic development of Christian doctrines propose that the initial followers of Christ were not Trinitarian, even in some nascent form. Therefore, prior to interacting with the Muslim perception of the Trinity and the challenges involved with presenting the Trinity to Muslims, it would beneficial to define an orthodox doctrine of the triune Godhead.

This goal will be accomplished by first examining scriptural evidence for the Trinity; that is, the designation that the Father is God, the Son is God, and the Holy Spirit is God. Second, this is accomplished through a survey covering major developments in Trinitarian thought during the first four centuries of church history. The resulting orthodox definition of the Trinity will synthesize the contributions of revelation and history… (http://answering-islam.org/authors/hartman/trinity_historic.html [Alt. Link])

N.T. Wright on Trinity Sunday (1997)

https://re-worship.blogspot.com/2014/06/nt-wright-on-trinity-sunday.html

Excerpt:

"In the church's year, Trinity Sunday is the day when we stand back from the extraordinary sequence of events that we've been celebrating for the previous five months—Advent, Christmas, Epiphany, Lent, Good Friday, Easter, Ascension, Pentecost—and when we rub the sleep from our eyes and discover what the word 'god' might actually mean. These events function as a sequence of well-aimed hammer-blows which knock at the clay jars of the gods we want, the gods who reinforce our own pride or prejudice, until they fall away and reveal instead a very different god, a dangerous god, a subversive god, a god who comes to us like a blind beggar with wounds in his hands, a god who comes to us in wind and fire, in bread and wine, in flesh and blood: a god who says to us, 'You did not choose me; I chose you.'

You see, the doctrine of the Trinity, properly understood, is as much a way of saying 'we don't know' as of saying 'we do know.' To say that the true God is Three and One is to recognize that if there is a God then of course we shouldn't expect him to fit neatly into our little categories. If he did, he wouldn't be God at all, merely a god, a god we might perhaps have wanted. The Trinity is not something that the clever theologian comes up with as a result of hours spent in the theological laboratory, after which he or she can return to announce that they've got God worked out now, the analysis is complete, and here is God neatly laid out on a slab. The only time they laid God out on a slab he rose again three days afterwards.

On the contrary: the doctrine of the Trinity is, if you like, a signpost pointing ahead into the dark, saying: 'Trust me; follow me; my love will keep you safe.' Or, perhaps better, the doctrine of the Trinity is a signpost pointing into a light which gets brighter and brighter until we are dazzled and blinded, but which says: 'Come, and I will make you children of light.' The doctrine of the Trinity affirms the rightness, the propriety, of speaking intelligently that the true God must always transcend our grasp of him, even our most intelligent grasp of him."

~ N.T. Wright, in For All God's Worth: True Worship and the Calling of the Church (Grand Rapids: William B. Eerdmans Publishing Company, 1997), p. 24.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Is N.T. Wright Wrong About Jesus? (2013)
http://theaquilareport.com/is-n-t-wright-wrong-about-jesus/

N. T. Wright on Paul's Trinitarian Theology (2014)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=ET9roCrWLXw

Does the Doctrine of the Trinity Make Sense?
https://pioneertheology.wordpress.com/2007/03/26/does-the-doctrine-of-the-trinity-make-sense/

Excerpt:

> If this would opening you and written have syntax it great grammar is understanding then you proper wouldn't with sentence difficulty?

No, I have not become incapable of grammatical writing; I do still know how to write an English sentence. But those words that lead off this essay will eventually help me "make sense" of the doctrine of the Trinity.

For many years as a Christian—even after several years of theological education—I regarded the doctrine of the Trinity as something that the Bible taught and the church confessed, but I didn't understand. It made no sense to me and made no impact on my faith. I suspect that many Christians are like that—accepting the doctrine, confessing it, and having no idea how it might have an impact on their lives of faith.

That is how I was; but today I know and teach the doctrine of the Trinity as "an eminently practical doctrine." (Catherine Mowry LaCugna) This change in my understanding came as I learned to approach doctrine as I described it in my previous article: as the means by which the church teaches us the Biblical vision and the practices of discipleship. Then the doctrine of the Trinity began to make sense…

N.T. Wright: The Prayer of the Trinity (1992)
http://ntwrightpage.com/2016/04/05/the-prayer-of-the-trinity/

Wright Reviews Hill re: Paul and the Trinity by Wesley Hill http://livingchurch.org/2015/08/04/wright-reviews-hill/

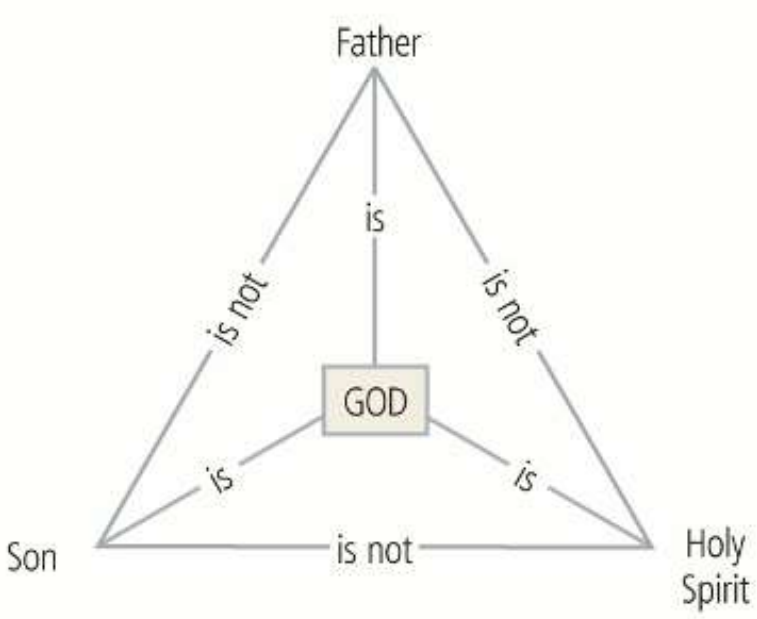
Hill Responds to N.T. Wright
http://livingchurch.org/2015/08/20/hill-responds-nt-wright/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



The Trinity

The biblical teaching on the Trinity embodies four essential affirmations:

1. 1.There is one and only one true and living God.
2. 2.This one God eternally exists in three persons—God the Father, God the Son, and God the Holy Spirit.
3. 3.These three persons are completely equal in attributes, each with the same divine nature.
4. While each person is fully and completely God, the persons are not identical.

The differences among Father, Son, and Holy Spirit are found in the way they relate to one another and the role each plays in accomplishing their unified purpose.

The unity of nature and distinction of persons of the Trinity is helpfully illustrated in the diagram doctrine-02.

God Is One God: Monotheism

There is nothing more fundamental to biblical theology than monotheism (the biblical belief that there is one and only one God): “Hear, O Israel: the LORD our God, the LORD is one” (Deut 6:4). This verse, known as the Shema in Hebrew (from the opening verb of the verse, meaning “hear” or “listen”), is one of the most familiar and foundational verses in the OT. God rejects polytheism (belief in many gods) and demands exclusive devotion: “I am the LORD, and there is no other, besides me there is no God” (Isaiah 45:5; cf. Deut 4:35, 39; 1 Kings 8:60; Isa 40:18; 46:9). The NT affirms the deity of the Father, Son, and Holy Spirit, as we shall see, but does not waver from OT monotheism (John 17:3; 1 Cor 8:4-6; 1 Tim 2:5; James 2:19). Jesus quotes the Shema in a debate with the Jewish leaders (Mark 12:29), and Paul continues to teach that there is one God while recognizing Jesus as the divine-human Mediator between God and man (1 Tim 2:5).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Implications of Monotheism

Because there is only one God, idolatry of any kind is evil, foolish, wrong, and harmful. Worship of other "gods" robs the true God of the devotion and glory he alone deserves. Idolatry can take many forms. Idols are not only man-made objects but are anything allowed to compete with God for ultimate loyalty. According to Jesus, money can become an idol: "You cannot serve God and money" (Matt 6:24). Greed, lust, and impurity can also become indicators of idolatry (Eph 5:5; Col 3:5). Idolatry is foolish, deceptive, and dangerous—and may even involve demonic activity (1 Cor 10:19-20).

Because there is only one God, he alone should be the ultimate object of the believer's affections. He alone deserves absolute allegiance and obedience. The Great Commandment that follows the Shema is the obvious implication of monotheism: "You shall love the LORD your God with all your heart and with all your soul and with all your might" (Deut 6:5). The one true God deserves all we are and have. He deserves wholehearted love because nothing compares with him.

God Is Three Persons: The Tri-unity of God

As the nature of God is progressively revealed in Scripture, the one God is seen to exist eternally in three persons. These three persons share the same divine nature yet are different in role and relationship. The basic principle at the heart of God's triune being is unity and distinction, both coexisting without either being compromised. Anything that is necessarily true of God is true of Father, Son, and Spirit. They are equal in essence yet distinct in function.

The doctrine of the Trinity is most fully realized in the NT where the divine Father, Son, and Spirit are seen accomplishing redemption. But while the NT gives the clearest picture of the Trinity, there are hints within the OT of what is yet to come. In the beginning of the Bible, the Spirit of God is "hovering over the face of the waters" at creation (Gen 1:2) and is elsewhere described as a personal being, possessing the attributes of God and yet distinct from Yahweh (Isa 48:16; 61:1; 63:10). Some interpreters think that the plurality within God is seen in the Hebrew word for God, 'Elohim, which is plural in form (though others disagree that this is significant; the word is used with singular verbs and all agree that it has a singular meaning in the OT). In addition, the use of plural pronouns when God refers to himself hints at a plurality of persons: "Then God said, 'Let us make man in our image'" (Gen 1:27; cf. Gen 3:22; 11:7; Isa 6:8). The plurality of God also seems to be indicated when the Angel of the Lord appears in the OT as one who represents Yahweh, while yet at times this angel seems to be no different in attributes or actions from God himself (cf. Gen 16:7 , 10-11 , 13 ; 18:1-33 ; Ex 3:1-4:31 ; 32:20-22 ; Num 22:35 , 38 ; Judg 2:1-2 ; 6:11-18). There are also passages in the OT that call two persons God or Lord: "Your throne, O God, is forever and ever. The scepter of your kingdom is a scepter of uprightness; you have loved righteousness and hated wickedness. Therefore God, your God, has anointed you with the oil of gladness above your companions" (Ps 45:6-7). David says, "The LORD says to my Lord: 'Sit at my right hand, until I make your enemies your footstool'" (Ps 110:1). The God who is set above his companions (Ps 45:6) and the Lord of Psalm 110:1 are recognized as Christ in the NT (Heb 1:8, 13). Christ himself applies Psalm 110:1 to himself (Matt 22:41-46). Other passages give divine status to a messianic figure distinct from Yahweh (Proverbs 8:22-31; 30:4; Dan 7:13-14).

The OT glimpses of God's plurality blossom into the full picture of the Trinity in the NT, where the deity and distinct personalities of Father, Son, and Spirit function together in perfect unity and equality (on the deity of Christ and the Holy Spirit, see The Person of Christ). Perhaps the clearest picture of this distinction and unity is Jesus' baptism, where the Son is anointed for his public ministry by the Spirit, descending as a dove, with the Father declaring from heaven, “This is my beloved Son, with whom I am well pleased” (Matt 3:13-17). All three persons of the Trinity are present, and each one is doing something different.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The NT authors employ a Trinitarian cadence as they write about the work of God. Prayers of blessing and descriptions of gifts within the body of Christ are Trinitarian in nature: “The grace of the Lord Jesus Christ and the love of God and the fellowship of the Holy Spirit be with you all” (2 Cor 13:14); “Now there are varieties of gifts, but the same Spirit; and there are varieties of service, but the same Lord; and there are varieties of activities, but it is the same God who empowers them all in everyone” (1 Cor 12:4-6). The persons of the Trinity are also linked in the baptismal formula of Matthew 28:19-20, “baptizing them in [or into] the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit.” There are many other passages that reveal the Trinitarian, or at least the plural, nature of God (e.g., John 14:16 , 26 ; 16:13-15 ; 20:21-22 ; Rom 8:9 ; 15:16 , 30 ; 2 Cor 1:21-22 ; Gal 4:4-6 ; Eph 2:18 ; 4:4-6 ; 1 Pet 1:1-2 ; 1 John 4:2 , 13-14 ; Jude 20-21).

Differences in roles also appear consistently in biblical testimonies concerning the relationships between the Father, Son, and Holy Spirit. The uniform pattern of Scripture is that the Father plans, directs, and sends; the Son is sent by the Father and is subject to the Father's authority and obedient to the Father's will; and both Father and Son direct and send the Spirit, who carries out the will of both. Yet this is somehow consistent with equality in being and in attributes. The Father created through the Son (John 1:3 ; 1 Cor 8:6 ; Col 1:16 ; Heb 1:2), and the Father planned redemption and sent the Son into the world (John 3:16 ; Rom 8:29 ; Gal 4:4 ; Eph 1:3-5). The Son obeyed the Father and accomplished redemption for us (John 4:34 ; 5:19 ; 6:38 ; Heb 10:5-7 ; cf. Matt 26:64 ; Acts 2:33 ; 1 Cor 15:28 ; Heb 1:3). The Father did not come to die for our sins, nor did the Holy Spirit, but that was the role of the Son. The Father and Son both send the Holy Spirit in a new way after Pentecost (John 14:26; 15:26; 16:7). These relationships existed eternally (Rom 8:29; Eph 1:4; Rev 13:8), and they provide the basis for simultaneous equality and differences in various human relationships.

Within God there is both unity and diversity: unity without uniformity, and diversity without division. The early church saw this Trinitarian balance clearly. For example, the Athanasian Creed (c. A.D. 500) says:

> We worship one God in the Trinity and the Trinity in unity; we distinguish among the persons, but we do not divide the substance. . . . The entire three persons are co-eternal and co-equal with one another, so that. . . we worship complete unity in Trinity and Trinity in Unity.

This unity and diversity is at the heart of the great mystery of the Trinity. Unity without uniformity is baffling to finite minds, but the world shows different types of reflections of this principle of oneness and distinction at every turn. What is the source of the transcendent beauty in a symphony, the human body, marriage, ecosystems, the church, the human race, a delicious meal, or a perfectly executed fast break in basketball? Is it not, in large part, due to the distinct parts coming together to form a unified whole, leading to a unified result? Unity and distinction—the principle at the heart of the Trinity—can be seen in much of what makes life so rich and beautiful. Woven into the fabric of the world are multiple reflections of the One who made it with unity and distinction as the parallel qualities of its existence.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Historical Misunderstandings of the Trinity

One of the most fundamental ways to misunderstand the Trinity is tritheism, which overemphasizes the distinction between the persons of the Trinity and ends up with three gods. This view neglects the oneness of the natures of Father, Son, and Holy Spirit. At the other end of the spectrum is the heresy of modalism (also known as Sabellianism, named after its earliest proponent, Sabellius, 3rd century), which loses the distinctions between the persons and claims that God is only one person. In this view, the appearance of the three persons is merely three modes of existence of the one God. For instance, God reveals himself as Father when he is creating and giving the law, as Son in redemption, and as Spirit in the church age. A contemporary version of modalism is found in the teaching of Oneness Pentecostalism. Both tritheism and modalism fail to maintain the biblical balance between the one reality of God and his eternal existence in three persons. A third error is to deny the full deity of the Son and of the Holy Spirit, and to say that they were at some time created. This is the heresy of Arianism (after a teacher named Arius, c. A.D. 256-336), and it is held today by Jehovah's Witnesses.

Practical Implications of the Trinity

What are some of the practical implications of the doctrine of the Trinity?

1. The doctrine of the Trinity makes definitive revelation of God possible as he is known in Christ: “No one has ever seen God; the only God, who is at the Father's side, he has made him known” (John 1:18). No man can see God and live (Exodus 33:20; 1 Tim 6:16), but God the Son provided an actual manifestation of God in the flesh.

2. The Trinity makes the atonement possible. Redemption of sinful man is accomplished through the distinct and unified activity of each person of the Godhead: “how much more will the blood of Christ , who through the eternal Spirit offered himself without blemish to God , purify our conscience from dead works to serve the living God” (Heb 9:14).

3. Because God is triune, he has eternally been personal and relational in his own being, in full independence from his creation. God has never had any unmet needs, “nor is he served by human hands, as though he needed anything, since he himself gives to all mankind life and breath and everything” (Acts 17:25). Personhood becomes real only within realized relationships, and the reality of relationship can only exist where one has something or someone that is not oneself to relate to; if, then, God had not been plural in himself he could not have been a personal, relational God till he had begun creating, and thus would have been dependent on creation for his own personhood, which is a notion as nonsensical as it is unscriptural. Between the persons of the Trinity, there has always existed total relational harmony and expression; God is, from this standpoint, a perfect society in himself. Apart from the plurality in the Trinity, either God's eternal independence of the created order or his eternally relational personal existence would have to be denied.

4. The Trinity provides the ultimate model for relationships within the body of Christ and marriage (1 Cor 11:3; 12:4-6; Eph 4:4-7).

The doctrine of the Trinity is well beyond human ability to ever fully comprehend. However, it is central to understanding the nature of God and the central events in the history of salvation, in which God is seen acting as, in effect, a tripersonal team. Biblical Christianity stands or falls with the doctrine of the Trinity.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

	FATHER	SON	HOLY SPIRIT
Called God	Phil 1:2	Joh 1:1,14; Col 2:9	Act 5:3-4
Creator	Isa 64:8, 44:24	Joh 1:3; Col 1:15-17	Gen 1:2; Job 33:4, 26:13
Resurrects	1Th 1:10	Joh 2:19, 10:17	Rom 8:11
Omnipresent	1Ki 8:27	Mat 28:20	Psa 139:7-10
Omniscient	1Jo 3:20	Joh 16:30	1Co 2:10-11
Sanctifies	1Th 5:23	Heb 2:11	1Pe 1:2
Life giver	Gen 2:7	Joh 1:3, 5:21	2Co 3:6, 8
Fellowship	1Jo 1:3	1Co 1:9	2Co 13:14
Eternal	Psa 90:2	Mic 5:1-2	Rom 8:11
Speaks	Mat 3:17	Luk 5:20, 7:48	Act 8:29, 11:12, 13:2
Love	Joh 3:16	Eph 5: 25	Rom 15:30
Searches the heart	Jer 17:10	Rev 2:23	1Co 2:10
Scripture	Isa 55:11	Rom 10:17; Col 3:16	2Pe 1:21; Heb 3:7

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Meditation on God as He Reveals Himself

https://relevancy22.blogspot.com/2011/08/names-of-god-in-scripture.html

MEDITATION ON GOD AS HE REVEALS HIMSELF
	Glory to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Spirit: as it was in the beginning, is now, and will be forever. Amen		Glory to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Spirit: as it was in the beginning, is now, and will be forever. Amen		Glory to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Spirit: as it was in the beginning, is now, and will be forever. Amen
1	GOD THE FATHER	34	GOD THE SON	67	GOD THE HOLY SPIRIT
2	CREATOR OF HEAVEN AND EARTH	35	THE WORD	68	SPIRIT OF GOD HOVERING OVER THE WATERS
3	God	36	God	69	God
4	God Most High	37	Second Adam	70	Breath of Life
5	God Who Sees	38	Seed of Woman	71	Spirit of Creation and Renewal
6	Almighty God	39	Bruiser of the Serpent's Head	72	Faithful Servant
7	Everlasting God	40	Abraham's Blessing	73	Dew from Heaven
8	Holy One of Israel	41	Isaac's Offering	74	Pillar of Fire
9	Lord Adonai	42	Rock of Israel	75	Spirit of Wisdom
10	LORD YAHVEH	43	IMMANUEL	76	SPIRIT OF THE LORD
11	Provider	44	Redeemer	77	Anointing
12	Healer	45	Prophet	78	Spirit of Judgment and Burning
13	Banner	46	Mighty God	79	Spirit of Grace
14	Presence	47	Commander of the Lord's Army	80	Streams in the Desert
15	Sanctifier	48	Pierced One	81	Spirit Who Gives Rest
16	Peace	49	Man of Sorrows	82	God's Good Spirit
17	Righteousness	50	Son of Man	83	New Spirit
18	HEAVENLY FATHER	51	I AM	84	PROMISE OF THE FATHER
19	The LORD Our God	52	Bread of Life	85	Power of the Most High
20	The LORD is One	53	Light of the World	86	Comforter
21	Father Who Forgives	54	Gate for the Sheep	87	Spirit of Truth
22	God of the Living	55	Good Shepherd	88	Witness
23	Lord of the Harvest	56	Resurrection and Life	89	Finger of God
24	The Only True God	57	Way, Truth, and Life	90	Living Water
25	Abba	58	True Vine	91	New Wine
26	FATHER OF OUR LORD JESUS CHRIST	59	JESUS OF NAZARETH	92	SPIRIT OF JESUS
27	Savior of All People	60	Messiah	93	Holy Spirit Sent From Heaven
28	Lawgiver and Judge	61	Bridegroom	94	Dove
29	Consuming Fire	62	Lamb of God	95	Tongues of Fire
30	Father of Mercies	63	Great High Priest	96	Mighty Wind
31	God of Love	64	Only Begotten Son of God	97	Spirit Without Measure
32	Majesty in Heaven	65	Lord of Lords and King of Kings	98	Spirit of Glory
33	Beginning and End	66	My Lord and My God	99	Lord Kurios
Final prayer: "I bind unto myself today the strong Name of the Trinity, by invocation of the same, the Three in One, and One in Three." From St. Patrick's Breastplate.

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Nabeel Qureshi: Turning from Tawhid to the Trinity https://www.christianity.com/god/trinity/turning-from-tawhid-to-the-trinity.html

Nabeel Qureshi: Can You Explain the Trinity https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=u0JpwOSKRC0 [Video]

Nabeel Qureshi: 5 Scriptural Points to Help You Understand the Trinity https://www.crosswalk.com/faith/bible-study/5-scriptural-points-to-help-you-understand-the-trinity.html

Sabbatical Excerpt: Nabeel Qureshi on The Trinity https://cafn.us/2014/03/08/sabbatical-excerpt-nabeel-qureshi-on-the-trinity/

Nabeel Qureshi on the history of Mohammad! (see also related videos)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Wop21xgoyAQ [Video]

Ravi Zacharias explains the Trinity https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=c9gwoZNudCI [Video]

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Doctrine of the Trinity

One of the early controversies in the church was that of the nature of God and the Trinity. In brief, in the 4th century, Arius, an elder in Alexandria began teaching that Jesus Christ was a created being, and that before being created by God the Father, Jesus did not exist. (This belief is now called Arianism). The archdeacon of Alexandria, Athanasius, opposed Arius, and in the synod of 321 Arius was deposed. In 325 Emperor Constantine convened the first ecumenical council at Nicea and the matter was considered. One faction or the other predominated over the following years, and Athanasius himself was banished as many as five times when Arianism prevailed.

Eventually the church formulated and adopted the Athanasian creed, which declared Father, Son and Holy Spirit to be equal and co-eternal, affirming the doctrine of the trinity.

But what does the Bible say of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit?

The Deity of God the Father

John 6:27 Labour not for the meat which perisheth, but for that meat which endureth unto everlasting life, which the Son of man shall give unto you: for him hath God the Father sealed.

1 Cor 8:6 But to us there is but one God, the Father, of whom are all things, and we in him; and one Lord Jesus Christ, by whom are all things, and we by him.

Gal 1:1 Paul, an apostle, (not of men, neither by man, but by Jesus Christ, and God the Father, who raised him from the dead;)

Gal 1:3 Grace be to you and peace from God the Father, and from our Lord Jesus Christ,

Eph 6:23 Peace be to the brethren, and love with faith, from God the Father and the Lord Jesus Christ.

Phil 2:11 And that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father.

1 Th 1:1 Paul, and Silvanus, and Timotheus, unto the church of the Thessalonians which is in God the Father and in the Lord Jesus Christ: Grace be unto you, and peace, from God our Father, and the Lord Jesus Christ.

2 Tim 1:2 To Timothy, my dearly beloved son: Grace, mercy, and peace, from God the Father and Christ Jesus our Lord.

Titus 1:4 To Titus, mine own son after the common faith: Grace, mercy, and peace, from God the Father and the Lord Jesus Christ our Saviour.

1 Pet 1:2 Elect according to the foreknowledge of God the Father, through sanctification of the Spirit, unto obedience and sprinkling of the blood of Jesus Christ: Grace unto you, and peace, be multiplied.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

2 Pet 1:17 For he received from God the Father honour and glory, when there came such a voice to him from the excellent glory, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased.

2 John 1:3 Grace be with you, mercy, and peace, from God the Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ, the Son of the Father, in truth and love.

Jude 1:1 Jude, the servant of Jesus Christ, and brother of James, to them that are sanctified by God the Father, and preserved in Jesus Christ, and called:

Luke 3:21 Now when all the people were baptized, it came to pass, that Jesus also being baptized, and praying, the heaven was opened,
Luke 3:22 And the Holy Ghost descended in a bodily shape like a dove upon him, and a voice came from heaven, which said, Thou art my beloved Son; in thee I am well pleased.

The Deity of Jesus Christ, the Son of God.

Mat 18:10 Take heed that ye despise not one of these little ones; for I say unto you, That in heaven their angels do always behold the face of my Father which is in heaven.

Mat 26:39 And he went a little farther, and fell on his face, and prayed, saying, O my Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from me: nevertheless not as I will, but as thou wilt.

Mat 26:42 He went away again the second time, and prayed, saying, O my Father, if this cup may not pass away from me, except I drink it, thy will be done.

Mat 26:63 [NIV] But Jesus remained silent. The high priest said to him, "I charge you under oath by the living God: Tell us if you are the Christ, the Son of God."
Mat 26:64 "Yes, it is as you say," Jesus replied. "But I say to all of you: In the future you will see the Son of Man sitting at the right hand of the Mighty One and coming on the clouds of heaven."

John 8:17 It is also written in your law, that the testimony of two men is true.
John 8:18 I am one that bear witness of myself, and the Father that sent me beareth witness of me.
John 8:19 Then said they unto him, Where is thy Father? Jesus answered, Ye neither know me, nor my Father: if ye had known me, ye should have known my Father also.

John 9:35 Jesus heard that they had cast him out; and when he had found him, he said unto him, Dost thou believe on the Son of God?
John 9:36 He answered and said, Who is he, Lord, that I might believe on him?
John 9:37 And Jesus said unto him, Thou hast both seen him, and it is he that talketh with thee.
John 9:38 And he said, Lord, I believe. And he worshipped him.

John 10:30 I and my Father are one.
John 10:31 Then the Jews took up stones again to stone him.
John 10:32 Jesus answered them, Many good works have I showed you from my Father; for which of those works do ye stone me?

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

John 10:33 The Jews answered him, saying, For a good work we stone thee not; but for blasphemy; and because that thou, being a man, makest thyself God.

John 13:13 Ye call me Master and Lord: and ye say well; for so I am.

Rev 1:8 I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the ending, saith the Lord, which is, and which was, and which is to come, the Almighty.

Eph 3:9 And to make all men see what is the fellowship of the mystery, which from the beginning of the world hath been hid in God, who created all things by Jesus Christ:

Col 1:12 Giving thanks unto the Father, which hath made us meet to be partakers of the inheritance of the saints in light:
Col 1:13 Who hath delivered us from the power of darkness, and hath translated us into the kingdom of his dear Son:
Col 1:14 In whom we have redemption through his blood, even the forgiveness of sins:
Col 1:15 Who is the image of the invisible God, the firstborn of every creature:
Col 1:16 For by him were all things created, that are in heaven, and that are in earth, visible and invisible, whether they be thrones, or dominions, or principalities, or powers: all things were created by him, and for him:

Col 2:8 Beware lest any man spoil you through philosophy and vain deceit, after the tradition of men, after the rudiments of the world, and not after Christ.
Col 2:9 For in him dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead bodily.

John 1:1 In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God.
John 1:2 The same was in the beginning with God.
John 1:3 All things were made by him; and without him was not any thing made that was made.
John 1:14 And the Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us, (and we beheld his glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father,) full of grace and truth.

The Word is identified as God and creator here in John, and the Word was made flesh, God incarnate. In conjunction with Ephesians 3:9 and Colossians 1:12-16, this is clearly speaking of Jesus Christ as God and Creator.

The Deity of the Holy Spirit.

Acts 5:3 But Peter said, Ananias, why hath Satan filled thine heart to lie to the Holy Ghost, and to keep back part of the price of the land?
Acts 5:4 Whiles it remained, was it not thine own? and after it was sold, was it not in thine own power? why hast thou conceived this thing in thine heart? thou hast not lied unto men, but unto God.

Here in verse 3, Peter says Ananias has lied to the Holy Ghost, and in the next verse Peter says Ananias has lied to God. Clearly then according to Peter, the Holy Spirit is indeed deity, a part of the Godhead. This is also apparent from the following verse in the book of Matthew-

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

> Mat 28:19 Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost:

According to Matthew, baptism is to be in the name of all three persons of the Godhead.

Also, according to Scripture, the Holy Spirit -

- Participated in creation - Gen 1:2
- Is a Comforter - John 14:26
- Is eternal - Heb 9:14
- Speaks - 1 Tim 4:1; Rev 14:13
- Teaches - John 14:26
- Reveals the future - Luke 2:26
- Bears Witness - Rom 8:16
- Guides to the truth - John 16:13
- Gives life (quickens) - Rom 8:11; 1Pet 3:18
- Reproves - John 16:8
- Makes Intercession - Rom 8:26
- Indwells the believer - 1 Cor 6:19
- Distributes gifts - 1 Cor 12:11
- Seals the believer - Eph 1:13, 4:30
- Invites the Sinner - Rev 22:17
- Can be Blasphemed - Mat 12:31-32
- Conceived Jesus in Mary - Mat 1:20

A Trinity, but only one God

> Mal 2:10 Have we not all one father? hath not one God created us? why do we deal treacherously every man against his brother, by profaning the covenant of our fathers?
>
> Mark 12:32 And the scribe said unto him, Well, Master, thou hast said the truth: for there is one God; and there is none other but he:
>
> Rom 3:30 Seeing it is one God, which shall justify the circumcision by faith, and uncircumcision through faith.
>
> 1 Cor 8:6 But to us there is but one God, the Father, of whom are all things, and we in him; and one Lord Jesus Christ, by whom are all things, and we by him.
>
> Eph 4:6 One God and Father of all, who is above all, and through all, and in you all.
>
> 1 Tim 2:5 For there is one God, and one mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus;
>
> James 2:19 Thou believest that there is one God; thou doest well: the devils also believe, and tremble.

One God, Yet Triune

All three entities of the Trinity were present at the baptism of Jesus-

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Mat 3:13 Then cometh Jesus from Galilee to Jordan unto John, to be baptized of him.
Mat 3:14 But John forbad him, saying, I have need to be baptized of thee, and comest thou to me?
Mat 3:15 And Jesus answering said unto him, Suffer it to be so now: for thus it becometh us to fulfil all righteousness. Then he suffered him.
Mat 3:16 And Jesus, when he was baptized, went up straightway out of the water: and, lo, the heavens were opened unto him, and he saw the Spirit of God descending like a dove, and lighting upon him:
Mat 3:17 And lo a voice from heaven, saying, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased.

So the Bible teaches that the Father, the Son Jesus Christ, and the Holy Spirit are all deity, each distinct, yet each part of the Godhead, but there is only one God. While difficult for humanity to comprehend, the Trinity is indeed the truth, not because of the creeds of men, but because it is taught by the Bible.

[Source: http://biblelight.net/trinity.htm]

Return to the beginning: Trinity

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Key Themes in the Gospel of John

1. Jesus is God.	1:1–2, 18; 5:17–18; 8:58–59; 10:30–33; 20:28
2. Jesus existed before the creation of the world.	1:1–2; 8:58; 17:5, 24
3. Jesus has supernatural knowledge.	1:48; 2:4, 19, 23-25; 3:14; 4:17–18; 6:51, 70; 8:28; 9:3; 10:15, 17-18; 11:4, 14; 12:24, 32; 13:10–11, 38; 21:18–19
4. Jesus is the Messiah and the Son of God.	1:36, 41, 49; 3:18; 4:25, 29; 5:25; 7:26, 27, 31, 41, 42; 9:22; 10:24, 36; 11:4, 27; 12:34; 19:7; 20:30–31
5. Jesus is the "I am."	4:26; 6:20, 35, 48, 51; 8:12, 18, 24, 28, 58; 9:5; 10:7, 9, 11, 14; 11:25; 13:19; 14:6; 15:1; 18:5–6 (cf. Ex. 3:14–15; Isa. 41:4; 43:10–13, 25; 45:18; 51:12; 52:6)
6. Jesus, the sent Son, reflects the sender.	3:17, 35-36; 5:19–26; 6:40; 8:35–36; 14:13; 17:1
7. Jesus is the fulfillment of Jewish festivals and institutions (including the temple).	1:29, 36; 2:14–22, esp. v. 21; 4:23–24; 8:12; 9:5; 19:14
8. Jesus is the giver of eternal life.	1:4; 3:15–16, 36; 4:14, 36; 5:24, 26, 39-40; 6:27, 33, 35, 40, 47-48, 51, 53-54, 68; 8:12; 10:10, 25, 28; 11:25; 12:25, 50; 14:6; 17:2–3; 20:31
9. The signs of Jesus show that he is the Messiah (cf. also Jesus as the Messiah and Son of God, above).	2:1–11, 13-22; 4:46–54; 5:1–15; 6:1–15; 9:1–41; 11:1–44
10. The witnesses to Jesus testify that he is the Messiah.	1:7–8, 15, 19, 32, 34; 3:11, 32-33; 4:39; 5:31–39; 8:14, 18; 10:25; 15:26–27; 18:37; 19:35; 21:24
11. Father, Son, and Spirit are united in their work of revelation and redemption.	14:17–18, 23, 26; 15:26; 20:21–22
12. Jesus' death is the basis of salvation.	1:29; 3:14–15; 6:51–58; 10:15; 11:50–52; 12:24; 15:13
13. God is sovereign in salvation.	3:21; 5:21; 6:37–45, 64-65; 10:16, 26-30; 15:16; 17:2, 6, 9
14. Salvation is obtained through believing in Jesus as the Messiah and the Son of God.	1:12; 3:15, 16; 5:24; 6:29, 35; 8:24; 11:25–27, 42; 12:44; 17:8, 21; 20:31
15. Believers can experience the benefits of salvation already in the here and now, during this present evil age.	3:18, 36; 4:23; 5:24; 6:39–40; 10:10, 26-29; 11:25–26
16. Believers are called to continue Jesus' mission (cf. also Jesus as the sent Son, above).	4:38; 15:16; 17:18; 20:21–22

Source: ESV Study BIble

History of Salvation Summary

Jesus comes as God in the flesh (1:14), the revealer of the Father (14:9), and the messianic King (1:41, 49; 4:25; 6:15). He fulfills the OT and its symbols, especially its promises of everlasting salvation. The ultimate fulfillment comes with his crucifixion and resurrection. Source: ESV Study BIble

See*: Gospel of Jesus the Messiah (Christ)

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Trinity
http://plato.stanford.edu/entries/trinity/

History of Trinitarian Doctrines http://plato.stanford.edu/entries/trinity/trinity-history.html

The Historic Case for the Trinity [Recommended]
https://www.bethinking.org/god/the-historic-case-for-the-trinity

http://answering-islam.org/authors/hartman/trinity_historic.html (alt. link)

What did it mean to call Jesus "God"? NT Wright (by Scot McNight) (2013) http://www.patheos.com/blogs/jesuscreed/2013/11/05/what-did-it-mean-to-call-jesus-god-nt-wright/

Excerpt:

NT Wright, in his Paul and the Faithfulness of God, examines Paul's theology as a mutation or reframing of classic Jewish monotheism themes (alongside election and eschatology), including who God is. This has led for centuries to the question If Jesus is God or if he is not God. The framing of that question, though, is often backward or sideward and often enough not — in fact, Wright would say rarely — from the ground level of 1st Century Jewish Christians.

A Thomistic Response to N.T. Wright on Metaphysics, Trinitarian Formulas, and the Historical Jesus
https://everydaythomist.wordpress.com/2009/08/24/a-thomistic-response-to-n-t-wright-on-metaphysics-trinitarian-formulas-and-the-historical-jesus/

N.T. Wright: Simply Christian (Review by Ben Myers)
http://www.faith-theology.com/2006/10/tom-wright-simply-christian.html

Excerpt:

The book's central metaphor is that of "echoes." In our longing for justice, our hunger for spirituality and relationship, and our delight in beauty, we are hearing "echoes of a voice" – and it is in the story of Jesus that we "recognize the voice whose echoes we have heard" (p. 61).

Wright points out that Christianity "is not about Jesus offering a wonderful moral example," nor is it about Jesus "accomplishing a new route by which people can 'go to heaven when they die,'" nor about "giving the world fresh teaching about God." On the contrary, "Christianity is about something that happened" (pp. 78-79). Through Jesus, "God's future has arrived in the present" – now, "[i]nstead of mere echoes, we hear the voice itself: a voice which speaks of rescue from evil and death, and hence of new creation" (p. 100).

Our unfulfilled longings are thus echoes of the voice that has now spoken in the resurrection of Jesus: "When Jesus emerged from the tomb, justice, spirituality, relationship and beauty rose with him" (p. 100). Further, the Christian doctrine of the Trinity derives directly from what took place in Jesus: "God, the true

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

God, is the God we see in Jesus of Nazareth" – and this God "not only happens to love us," but "he is love itself" (p. 118), so that "within the very being of this God there [is] a give-and-take, a to-and-fro, a love given and received" (p. 102).

N.T. Wright: The Prayer of the Trinity (1992)

http://ntwrightpage.com/2016/04/05/the-prayer-of-the-trinity/

Excerpt:

…I therefore suggest that we might use a prayer that, though keeping a similar form to that of the Orthodox Jesus Prayer ("Lord Jesus Christ, Son of the living God, have mercy on me, a sinner."), expands it into a trinitarian mode:

> Father almighty, maker of heaven and earth:
> Set up your kingdom in our midst.
>
> Lord Jesus Christ, Son of the living God:
> Have mercy on me, a sinner.
>
> Holy Spirit, breath of the living God:
> Renew me and all the world.

Return to the beginning: Trinity

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Meaning Of ἁρπαγμός In Philippians 2:6 - An Overlooked Datum For Functional Inequality Within The Godhead

https://bible.org/article/meaning-harpagmos-philippians-26-overlooked-datum-functional-inequality-within-godhead

Excerpt:

I think this interpretation opens the way for us to see an orthodox subordinationism within the Godhead.[41] Although the Father and Son are one in their essence (that is, both of them existing in the form of God), they are distinct in their persons (that is, they each respectively fulfill certain roles and functions that are peculiar to their own Person).[42] The character of this intra-Trinitarian relationship is what makes redemption possible. According to the Father's predetermined plan (Acts 2:23), the Father sends the Son into the world as a man and as a servant.[43] The Son does not try to abdicate his role by grasping for functional equality with the Father (Phil 2:6). On the contrary, the Son obeys the Father and enters onto the stage of human history (Phil 2:7). In this sequence of events, we see that the Son not only obeys the Father in his incarnation but that he also obeys the Father from all eternity. For this reason, if the Son were not obedient to the Father's sending him into the world and if he were not distinct from the Father in his Person (and thus in his role and function), then redemption would have been impossible, for the Son never would have obeyed the Father, and there never would have been an incarnation.

There are some ecclesiological ramifications that emerge from this view of the Trinity. First of all, it is neither unbiblical nor disrespectful to say that men and women fulfill different roles in the church and in the home. Because the great apostle has said elsewhere that the relationship of God the Father to God the Son is the paradigm for the relationships that exists between husband and wife in the home and men and women in the church (1 Cor 11:3), there is a great dignity in fulfilling the role that God has appointed for each individual. Just as the Father and Son are One in essence but distinct in their Persons, so there is a corresponding reality in earthly relationships between men and women. For instance, though wives are commanded to fulfill a role of obedience to their husbands (1 Pet 3:1), redeemed husbands and wives are one in their standing before God; they are fellow heirs of the grace of life (1 Pet 3:7). There is no essential inequality here, only a functional one. In this understanding, the man is no more superior in worth or significance over his wife than the Father is over Christ. On the contrary, the fulfilling of the roles appointed by God is ultimately a very glorious thing (Phil 2:11).

Whatever we conclude about this text, we must agree that Phil 2:6 stands as one of the most sublime statements of Christology in all of the New Testament. In it we see the self-humiliated love of the Son of God manifested in pre-incarnate submission to his Father. Herein is set forth the great paradigm of subservience to God the Father. Here is Christ, in all of his exalted lowliness, showing forth the demure obedience that would characterize his entire earthly life and work. And here we see that his magnificent obedience was not one that was born in a manger two thousand years ago, but was one that was born in eternity within the glorious intra-Trinitarian mystery. In love, the Father appointed His Son to do His bidding in the incarnation. The Son's obedience, born in eternity, accomplished not only the redemption of sinners but also the very manifestation of the love of God. Jesus said, “I glorified Thee on the earth, having accomplished the work which Thou hast given Me to do. And now, glorify Thou Me together with Thyself, Father, with the glory which I had with Thee before the world was” (John 17:4-5). Amen.

Return to the beginning: Trinity

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Trinity in Salvation, the Means of Grace, and Saving Graces https://apostles-creed.org/confessional-reformed-christian-theology/soteriology/infographic-trinity-salvation-means-grace-saving-graces/

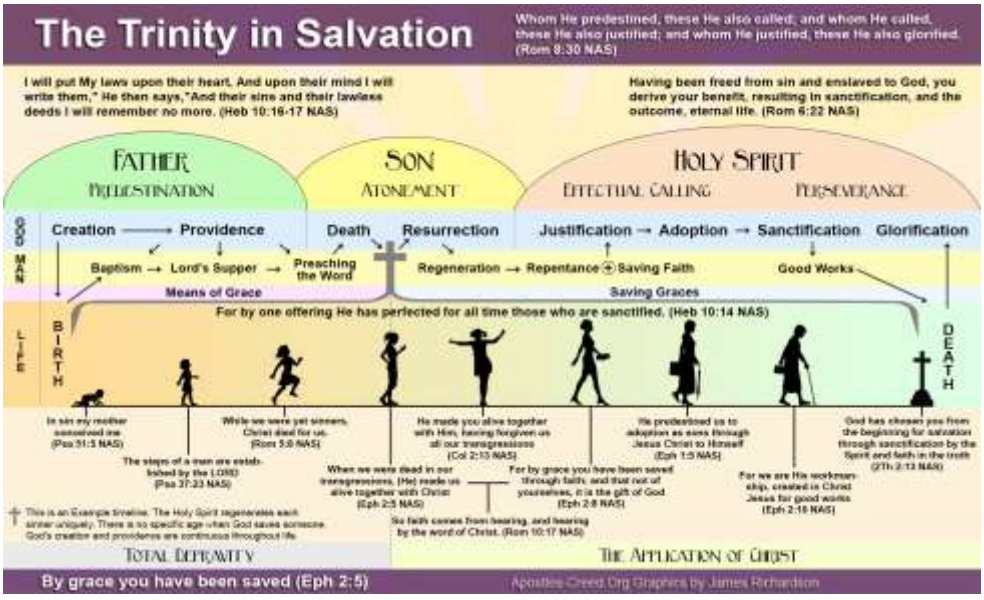
Excerpt:

The understanding of the Trinity and how God saves us is critical. God the Father predestines us, The Son redeems us in His atonement, and the Holy Spirit regenerates us and causes us to persevere through sanctification. All aspects of the plan of salvation are controlled by God the Father, Son and Holy Spirit.

The Father Predestines



He predestines us in that He created us and governs all our actions through His providence. He works through the means of Baptism, the Lord's Supper, and the preaching of the Word to bring us to Christ.

The Son Redeems

He redeems His people by dying for their sins and raising from the dead. Christ's death on the cross forgave the sins of His people for all time; past, present and future. Christ's resurrection causes His people to spiritually be born again and regenerated by His Spirit.

The Holy Spirit Seals

He applies the redemption of God's people whom were predestined before before creation. The Holy Spirit regenerates God's people and grants them repentance and faith. The repentance and faith results in their justification and thus are adopted children of God. The Holy Spirit sanctifies God's people and causes them to do good works as evidence of their faith. These are the saving graces that God gives us for our salvation. God's people are kept in the faith by the work and power of the Holy Spirit.

See next page for larger view…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Non-Standard Doctrinal Perspectives on God, Jesus

The Real Christ … How the Real Christ was Lost (non-Trinitarian)

http://www.realchrist.info/4-7.html

Excerpt:

> I feel I am obligated to make the point that the real, genuinely human Son of God whom we have reconstructed from the pages of Scripture is at variance with the Trinitarian perspective. The Trinity grew out of Gnosticism, which taught that life comes by leaving the world and the flesh. But John's Gospel especially emphasizes how the true life was and is revealed through the very flesh, the very worldly and human life, of the Lord Jesus. True Christianity has correctly rejected the trinity and defined a Biblically correct view of the atonement. But we need to make something of this in practice; we must use it as a basis upon which to meet the real, personal Christ. In the 2nd century, the urgent, compelling, radical, repentance-demanding Jesus was replaced by mere theology, by abstracting Him into effectively nothing, burying the real Jesus beneath theology and fiercely debated human definitions. And we can in essence make the same mistake. And I might add, it was this turning of Jesus into a mystical theological 'God' which made Him so unacceptable to the Jews. The preaching of the real, human Jesus to them ought to be more widely attempted by our churches. It must be realized that the growing pressure to make Jesus 'God' was matched by a growing anti-Judaism in the church. Some of the major proponents of the Trinitarian idea were raving anti-Judaists such as Chrysostom, Jerome and Luther. And in more recent times, Gerhard Kittel, editor of the trinity-pushing Theological Dictionary of the New Testament was also a regular contributor to the official Nazi publication on the Jewish 'problem'. It was Hitler who pushed the idea that Jesus was not really a Jew, suggesting that the humanity of Jesus should be de-emphasized and the divinity stressed, so that the guilt of the Jews appeared the greater. The point is, we have been greatly blessed with being able to return to the original, Biblical understanding of Jesus, which worldly theology and politics has clouded over for so many millions. But we must use this to build a Christ-centered life...

The Real Christ (Book)

http://www.realchrist.info/rcpdf.pdf [PDF]

http://www.realchrist.info/rcword.doc [MS Word doc]

The Real Christ – Non-Trinitarian Perspective [Downloadable as PDF]

http://www.realchrist.info/

Questions:

Is "The Real Christ" an example (good or bad) of an Inductive or a Deductive approach to the study of the Bible?

(See: "Inductive vs Deductive Bible Study" section in this document for details)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Is our salvation dependent upon whether we believe in the "Trinity" or not?

http://www.patheos.com/blogs/rogereolson/2013/04/1807/

http://reformedanswers.org/answer.asp/file/40397

http://www.crosswalk.com/blogs/dr-ray-pritchard/the-trinity-and-salvation-11616391.html

http://www.reasons.org/articles/no-trinity-no-salvation

http://www.forerunner.com/orthodoxy/X0005_4._Trinity.html

http://www.christianity.com/god/trinity/god-in-three-persons-a-doctrine-we-barely-understand-11634405.html

http://www.jesus.org/is-jesus-god/holy-trinity/must-we-understand-the-trinity-for-salvation.html

http://www.the-highway.com/grace_Pilgrim.html

http://biblehub.com/library/aquinas/nature_and_grace/article_eight_whether_explicit_belief.htm

http://www.newadvent.org/summa/3002.htm#article8 (Catholic)

See also*: NonTrinitarianism

Greek Philosophy and the Trinity --- Not Vetted --- http://www.bibleanswerstand.org/philosophy.htm#_Conclusion

Greek Philosophy's Influence on the Trinity Doctrine --- Not Vetted --- http://www.ucg.org/bible-study-tools/booklets/is-god-a-trinity/greek-philosophys-influence-on-the-trinity-doctrine

See also*: Greek Philosophy / Greek Philosophy use by Paul

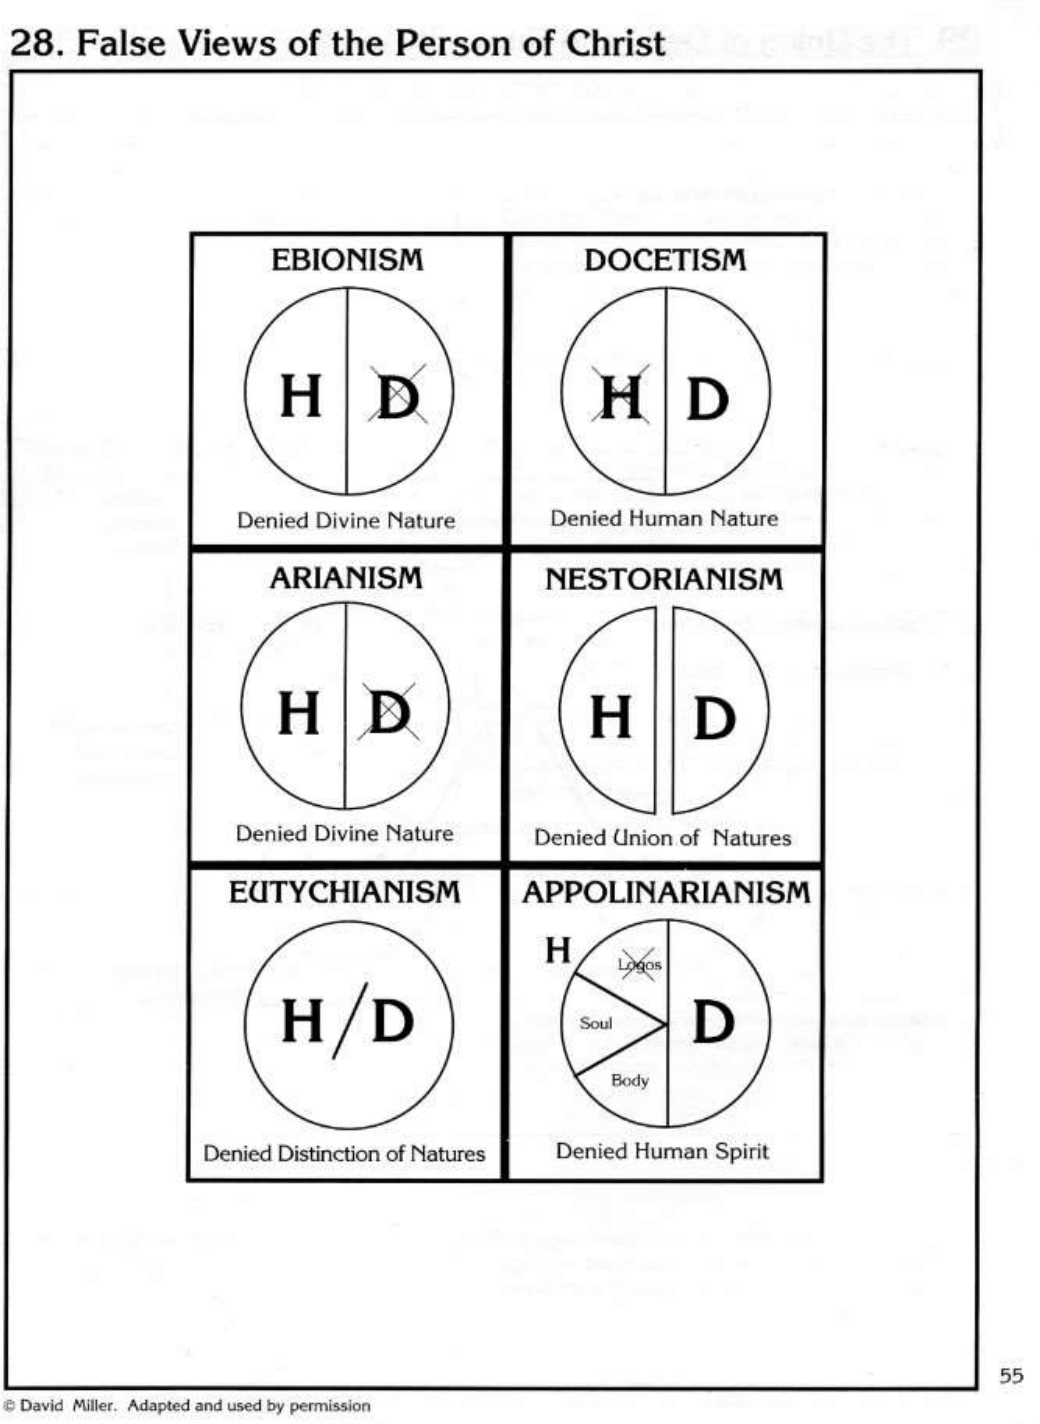
Return to the beginning: Trinity

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



False Views of the Trinity

Return to the beginning: Trinity

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

False Views of the Person of Christ

See also*: Docetism

Return to the beginning: Trinity

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Predestination Definitions:

Source: [Predestination: It's Nothing Like You Were Told] See updated version: [Predestination Revivisted]

See*: [Predestination, Election, Chosen, and Related Terms]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Repentance

NBD: Repentance

In the OT two words are regularly translated ‘repent’ or some near equivalent— nāḥam (‘be sorry, change one's mind’) and šûḇ (in the sense, ‘turn back, return’).

nāḥam is used infrequently of man (Ex 13:17; Job 42:6; Je 8:6; 31:19), but regularly of God, where it is often said that God ‘repents of evil’ proposed or initiated. This vigorous speech arises out of Israel's understanding of God's attitude to men in terms of personal relationship. The language of course did not imply anything fickle or arbitrary on God's side, but simply that the relation was a changing one. In particular, when man removes himself by his self-will from God's direction and care he finds that the God-willed consequence of his evil is more evil (Ge 6:6f.; 1Sa 15:11,35; 2Sa 24:16; Je 18:10). But whoever repents, even at the eleventh hour, whoever turns (again) to God, finds a God of mercy and love, not of judgment (Je 18:8; 26:3,13,19; Jon 3:9f.; the importance of the intercessor who is willing to stand before God on behalf of his people is emphasized in Ex 32:12-14 and Am 7:3,6). So even though God's firmness of judgment against SIN is in no doubt (Nu 23:19; 1Sa 15:29; Ps 110:4; Je 4:28; Eze 24:14; Zec 8:14), he has shown himself more often as a gracious God, faithful to his people even when they are faithless—a God, in other words, ‘who repents of evil’ (Ex 32:14; Dt 32:36; Jdg 2:18; 1Ch 21:15; Ps 106:45; 135:14; Je 42:10; Joe 2:13f.; Jon 4:2).

The call for repentance on the part of man is a call for him to return (šûḇ*)* to his creaturely (and covenant) dependence on God. Such calls are particularly frequent in the pre-exilic prophets. Am 4:6-11 makes it clear that the evil that God intends as a consequence of Israel's sin is not malicious or vindictive, but rather is intended to bring Israel to repentance. He who commits evil finds further evil willed by God. But he whorepents of his evil finds a God who repents of his evil. One of the most eloquent pleas for repentance comes in Ho 6:1-3 and 14:1-2—a plea alternating with hope and despair (3:5; 5:4; 7:10), with 11:1-11 particularly poignant. Equally moving are the hopes of Isaiah expressed in the name of his son, Shearjashub (‘a remnant shall return’, 7:3; see also 10:21f.; 30:15; cf. 19:22) and the pleadings of Jeremiah (3:1-4:4; 8:4-7; 14:1-22; 15:15-21), both mingled with foreboding and despair (Isa 6:10; 9:13; Je 13:23).

Other powerful expressions are Dt 30:1-10; 1Ki 8:33-40,46-53; 2Ch 7:14; Isa 55:6-7; Eze 18:21-24,30-32; 33:11-16; Joe 2:12-14. See also particularly 1Sa 7:3; 2Ki 17:13; 2Ch 15:4; 30:6-9; Ne 1:9; Ps 78:34; Eze 14:6; Da 9:3; Zec 1:3f.; Mal 3:7. The classic example of national repentance was that led by Josiah (2Ki 22-23; 2Ch 34-35).

In the NT the words translated ‘repent’ are metanoeō and metamelomai. In Gk. they usually mean ‘to change one's mind’, and so also ‘to regret, feel remorse’ (i.e. over the view previously held). This note of remorse is present in the parable of the tax collector (Lk 18:13), probably in Mt 21:29,32; 27:3 and Lk 17:4 (‘I am sorry’), and most explicitly in 2Co 7:8-10. But the NT usage is much more influenced by the OT šûḇ; that is, repentance not just as a feeling sorry, or changing one's mind, but as a turning round, a complete alteration of the basic motivation and direction of one's life. This is why the best translation for metanoeō is often ‘to convert’, that is, ‘to turn round’ (CONVERSION). It also helps to explain why John the Baptist demanded BAPTISM as an expression of this repentance, not just for obvious ‘sinners’, but for ‘righteous’ Jews as well—baptism as a decisive act of turning from the old way of life and a throwing oneself on the mercy of the Coming One (Mt 3:2,11; Mk 1:4; Lk 3:3,8; Ac 13:24; 19:4).

Jesus' call for repentance receives little explicit mention in Mk. (1:15; cf. 6:12) and Mt. (4:17; 11:20f.; 12:41), but is emphasized by Lk. (5:32; 10:13; 11:32; 13:3, 5; 15:7, 10; 16:30; 17:3f.; cf. 24:47). Other sayings and incidents in all three Gospels, however, express very clearly the character of the repentance which Jesus' whole ministry demanded. Its radical nature, as a complete turning round and return, is emphasized by the parable of the Prodigal Son (Lk 15:11-24). Its unconditional character appears from the parable of the Pharisee and tax collector—repentance means acknowledging that one has no possible claim upon God, and submitting oneself without excuse or attempted justification to God's mercy (Lk 18:13). The 'turn round' in previous values and life-style is highlighted by the encounter with the rich young man (Mk 10:17-22) and Zacchaeus (Lk 19:8). Above all, Mt 18:3 makes it clear that to convert is to become like a child, that is, to acknowledge one's immaturity before God, one's inability to live life apart from God, to accept one's total dependence on God.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The call for repentance (and promise of forgiveness) features regularly in Luke's record of the preaching of the first Christians (Ac 2:38; 3:19; 8:22; 17:30; 20:21; 26:20). Here metanoeō is complemented by epistrephō ('to turn round, return'— Ac 3:19; 9:35; 11:21; 14:15; 15:19; 26:18,20; 28:27), where metanoeō means more a turning away (from sin) and epistrephō a turning to (God) (see particularly Ac 3:19; 26:20), though each by itself can embrace both senses (as in Ac 11:18; 1Th 1:9).

It is clear from Ac 5:31 and 11:18 that no difficulty was felt in describing repentance both as God's gift and as man's responsibility. At the same time Isa 6:9-10 is cited several times as an explanation of men's failure to convert (Mt 13:14f.; Mk 4:12; Jn 12:40; Ac 28:26f.).

The writer to the Hebrews also indicates the importance of initial repentance (6:1), but whereas he questions the possibility of a second repentance (6:4-6; 12:17), others are even more emphatic in their belief that Christians can and need to repent (2Co 7:9f.; 12:21; Jas 5:19f.; 1Jn 1:5-2:2; Rev 2:5,16,21f.; 3:3, 19).

There are only a few other references to repentance in the NT (Ro 2:4; 2Ti 2:25; 2Pe 3:9; Rev 9:20f.; 16:9, 11). We should not assume that talk of repentance and FORGIVENESS invariably featured in the earliest preaching. In particular Paul rarely uses either concept, and they do not occur at all in the Gospel and Epistles of John, whereas both strongly emphasize that the Christian life starts from the positive commitment of FAITH.

Bibliography

G. Bertram, epistrephō , TDNT 7, pp. 722-729; G. Bornkamm, Jesus of Nazareth , 1960, pp. 82-84; J. Jeremias, New Testament Theology , 1: The Proclamation of Jesus , 1971, pp. 152-158; O. Michel, metamelomai , TDNT 4, pp. 626-629; J. P. Ramseyer, in J. J. von Allmen (ed.), Vocabulary of the Bible , 1958, pp. 357-359; A. Richarson, An Introduction to the Theology of the New Testament , 1958, pp. 31-34; E. Würthein and J. Behm, metanoeō , TDNT 4, pp. 975-1008; F. Laubach, J. Goetzmann, NIDNTT 1, pp. 353-359.

Source: New Bible Dictionary: J.D.G.D.

NDT: Repentance

The OT often speaks of repentance to describe Israel's turning back to their God (e.g. 2Ch 7:14), in response to a promise of restored fortunes for the nation. In the NT, however, the preaching of repentance is greatly heightened and given specific content for the individual. This feature starts with the preaching of John the Baptist (Mt 3:5-12; Lk 3:7-14). The Gk. words used throughout the NT are mainly forms related to the verb metanoein, 'to change one's mind'. This small phrase, however, describes a radical change in the individual's disposition, for the change of mind concerns his judgment upon himself and his sin together with an evaluation of God's demands upon him. The transformation implied, therefore, is not a matter merely of mental judgment, but of new religious and moral attitudes (a turning to God , 1Th 1:9) and of new behaviour (Ac 26:20), as John's preaching spelt out.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Since repentance is God-directed and affirms newly received principles, it is inseparable from faith by which alone comes the knowledge of God. It is a serious misrepresentation of Scripture to separate repentance and faith as if the former were in any sense a condition of receiving the latter. This is clear from the fact that apostolic preaching sometimes summoned people to repent (Ac 2:38; 17:30; 26:20) but on other occasions to believe (Ac 13:38-41; 16:31). Equally, forgiveness of sins follows upon either repentance or faith (Ac 2:38; 3:19; 10:43). Repentance and faith, therefore, are simply two aspects of the same movement, though it is true that, in the case of faith, the NT emphasizes consciousness of Christ (Ac 20:21). Hence repentance, like faith, is regarded as a gift of God (Ac 5:31; 11:15-18; 2Ti 2:25).

The importance of repentance is seen from the early preaching of the apostles and from its place as a first principle of the Christian message (Heb 6:1). Although there is in conversion a decisive change of mind, the renewing of the mind towards God is a continuous process (Ro 12:2; Ep 4:23) just as faith is to be increased. Turning, and renewal of faith in the Christian's life, are the active side of the process called sanctification, of which regeneration and preservation are the passive aspects.

Due to the increased emphasis on penitence (sorrow for sin) associated with repentance, the idea of confession and penance came to overshadow the sense of ‘changing one's mind', and it was Luther who rediscovered the NT Gk. word, metanoein . With this he replaced the prevailing Latin Vulgate rendering of ‘do penance', and allied repentance closely to faith.

It cannot be stressed too much that repentance is a moral act involving the turning of the whole person in spirit, mind and will to consent, and subjection, to the will of God. It is in a very real sense a moral miracle, a gift of grace. Terms often confused with repentance, such as penitence, remorse or penance, do not do justice to the impact of grace which we call repentance.

Bibliography

F. Lauback and J. Goetzmann in NIDNTT I, pp. 353-362; J. Murray, Redemption—Accomplished and Applied (Edinburgh, 1973); W. Telfer, The Forgiveness of Sins (London, 1959).

Source: New Dictionary of Theology: R.Kearsley.

TBD: Repentance

Literally a change of mind, not about individual plans, intentions, or beliefs, but rather a change in one's attitude about God. Such repentance accompanies saving faith in Christ (Ac 20:21). It is inconsistent and unintelligible to suppose that anyone could believe in Christ yet not repent. Repentance is such an important aspect of conversion that it is often stressed rather than saving faith, as when Christ said that there is joy in heaven among the angels over one sinner who repents (Lk 15:7). The apostles described the conversion of the Gentiles to Christ as God granting them “repentance unto life” (Ac 11:18). Evangelical repentance and faith in Christ are in fact inseparable, though a convert may be aware of one aspect more than another.

Such penitence is not an isolated act but a disposition of the mind, providing a spur for behavior that accords with God's declared will. Recognition of daily sins and shortcomings provides the occasion for renewed acts of penitence and for fresh exercises of faith in Christ. One of the deepest and most noteworthy expressions of such penitence is David's account of his adultery with Bathsheba (Ps 51). Whole churches are, on occasion, called to repent (Rev 2:5). 2Co 7 contains an interesting and full description of such corporate repentance involving the elements of sorrow for sin and a determined resolve to forsake old sinful ways and to behave properly. While repentance is often accompanied by deep feelings, it is not equivalent to such feelings but is rooted in convictions about the sinner's own need before a holy God.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Both John the Baptist (Mt 3:2; Mk 1:4) and Christ (Mk 1:15) were preachers of repentance, calling not the righteous but sinners to repent. And in accordance with the Great Commission (Lk 24:44-49), the apostles continued the same kind of preaching—beginning with Peter's preaching on the Day of Pentecost (Ac 2), with noteworthy results. See Confession; Conversion; Forgiveness; Regeneration; Salvation.

Source: Tyndale Bible Dictionary

NDBT: Repentance

The biblical notion of repentance refers to the radical turning away from anything which hinders one's wholehearted devotion to God, and the corresponding turning to God in love and obedience.

Repentance in the OT

With only a few exceptions (* e.g. Jon 3:10; Isa 19:22), repentance is associated in the OT with God's chosen people. Thus one should understand the concept, usually expressed metaphorically by the Hebrew verb 'to turn' (šûḇ), to be grounded in the gracious covenant that God had previously established with Israel (Da 9:3-14; 2Ch 7:14a,17-18; Ne 1:5-7). Since the people who entered into this covenant were to reflect God's nature (Lev 19:2; 20:22-26; Dt 10:12-13), their turning away in unbelief and unfaithfulness implies a personal rejection of him (Dt 4:23; 11:16; 1Sa 15:11; 1Ki 9:6; 2Ch 7:19,22; Ps 51:4; Je 11:10; 34:13-16). In response to the people's sin, God is presented as similarly turning away from them, bringing about the realization of the covenant curses (* e.g. Dt 4:15-28; 30:15-20; Da 9:11-14). But these curses are ultimately intended to move his people to repentance once again (Dt 4:29-30; 1Ki 8:33,48). Thus, God initiates repentance both through the call to remember the blessings of the covenant and through the outworking of his covenantal justice (see Righteousness, Justice, and Justification) (Isa 44:22; 55:1-3; Ne 9:26-31; Je 5:3; 29:10-14; 44:4-6).

Repentance therefore involves the turning away from those actions and attitudes that are offensive to God and his nature (1Sa 7:3; Je 4:1; Eze 14:6). It naturally includes the confession of sin, appropriately accompanied by mourning and regret (Joe 2:12-13; Je 3:13). Given the covenantal context, this is often expressed as 'turning back' to God, (which explains the frequent translation of šûḇ as 'return': Dt 30:2; 2Ch 30:6-9; Isa 31:6; Je 3:22; 31:18-19; La 3:40; Ho 6:1; 14:1-2, NIV). While the condition of the heart is hardly ever explicitly discussed in the legislation governing sacrifices for sin, the implicit assumption is that the offerers have humbled their hearts before God. This is confirmed elsewhere in the OT, where a sacrifice without a contrite heart is considered to be offensive to God and even sin (Am 4:4-6; Ho 6:6; Ps 40:6-8; 51:16-17; 1Sa 15:22; Pr 15:8; 21:3). Conversely, true repentance generates acceptable sacrifice (Ps 51:18-19).

The behaviour resulting from true repentance is covenant love, purity and obedience that comes from the heart (see e.g. Dt 30:6,8,10). The merciful divine benefits given in response to repentance include the forgiveness (see Mercy) of sin and the restoration of the covenant relationship (Dt 4:30-31; 2Ch 7:13-16; Ps 51:7-12; Isa 55:7; Je 15:19-21; 32:31-41; Eze 18:21-23; Ho 14:5-8; Mal 3:7,10-12).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Repentance in the NT

John the Baptist and Jesus repeat the OT covenantal call for repentance. In the NT the scope of this call becomes universal as the church goes out in mission to all nations (Mt 28:18-20; Ac 1:8; 17:30; 2Pe 3:9). All have turned away from God (Ro 3:9-18), so there is a universal need for the corresponding turning away from sin (Ro 2:5-10; 2Co 12:21) and to God (1Th 1:9; Ac 14:15; 15:19; 1Pe 2:25). This notion is communicated principally through cognate words (metanoeōḥ / metanoia) which express the complete reorientation of the person, although a verb which means 'turning' (epistrephō*)* is also used. As in the OT, God is understood to be the initiator of repentance both through the threat of judgment and the gift of his grace (* cf. 2Ti 2:24-25).

Both John the Baptist and Jesus proclaim the need for repentance in light of the impending judgment associated with the kingdom's arrival (Lk 3:7,9,17; 13:1-5; Mt 11:20-24; 12:39-42)—only those who have turned from their sinful ways will be forgiven (Lk 3:3; 7:47-50; 19:9; Mk 1:4; 9:45; cf. Ac 3:19; 5:30-31; 2Ti 2:24-25). Similar calls for repentance from sin can be found throughout the NT, often associated with the threat of judgment (Ac 3:19-26; 8:21-24; 14:15; 17:30-31; Rev 2:5,16; 3:3; 9:20-21; 16:9-11; cf. also Heb 6:4-6).

But Jesus frequently presents the gracious goodness of God as the reason for repentance. Since with him the kingdom had already arrived in an inaugurated form (Mt 12:28; 13:24-30,33; Mk 4:21-32), salvific power was being mediated through his ministry, liberating people from Satan's stronghold (Mt 12:29). Thus, Jesus' demand for repentance stresses God's covenantal grace, for he is its fulfilment and embodiment. Accordingly, Jesus' association with such despised groups as the tax collectors and harlots (Lk 7:37-50; 19:1-10; Mk 2:13-17) shows that he has come to seek out the lost (Lk 19:10; 15:4-32; Mk 2:17). Appropriately, then, joy and celebration are often associated with repentance in Jesus' proclamation, evincing the grace which is its context (Mt 13:44; 22:1-10; Lk 5:27-29; 19:6,8; cf. also Ro 2:4; Ac 9:35; 11:18,21). Mourning and regret are also found, however (Lk 7:37-50; 15:17-20; 18:13-14; cf. 2Co 7:9-10).

See also: Hardening .

Bibliography

U. Becker et al. in NIDNTT 1, pp. 353-362; J. Behm and E. Würthwein in TDNT 4, pp. 975-1008; L. Goppelt, Theology of the New Testament, vol.1, (Grand Rapids, 1981) pp. 77-138.

Source: New Dictionary of Biblical Theology: J. M. Lunde

From N.T. Wright: Believing and Belonging [re: the Church], Simply Christian (2006)

http://ntwrightpage.com/2016/04/04/believing-and-belonging/

Excerpt:

When we see ourselves in the light of Jesus's type of kingdom, and realize the extent to which we have been living by a different code altogether, we realize, perhaps for the first time, how far we have fallen short of what we were made to be. This realization is what we call "repentance," a serious turning away from patterns of life which deface and distort our genuine humanness. It isn't just a matter of feeling sorry for particular failings, though that will often be true as well. It is the recognition that the living God has made us humans to reflect his image into his world, and that we haven't done so. (The technical term for that is “sin,” whose primary meaning is not “breaking the rules” but “missing the mark,” failing to hit the target of complete, genuine, glorious humanness.) Once again, the gospel itself, the very message which announces that Jesus is Lord and calls us to obedience, contains the remedy: forgiveness, unearned and freely given, because of his cross. All we can say is, “Thank you.”

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

To believe, to love, to obey (and to repent of our failure to do those things): faith of this kind is the mark of the Christian, the one and only badge we wear. That is why, in most traditional churches, the community declares its faith publicly in the words of one of the ancient creeds. This is the stamp of who we are. When we declare our faith, we are saying yes to this God, and to this project. That is the central mark of our identity, of who and what the church is. This, by the way, is what St. Paul meant when he spoke of “justification by faith.” God declares that those who share this faith are “in the right.” He intends to put the whole world to rights; he has already begun this process in the death and resurrection of Jesus, and in the work of his Spirit in the lives of men and women, bringing them to the faith by which alone we are identified as belonging to Jesus. When people come to Christian faith, they are “put in the right” as an advance sign, and as part of the means, of what God intends to do for his whole creation.

Christian faith isn’t a general religious awareness. Nor is it the ability to believe several unlikely propositions. It is certainly not a kind of gullibility which would put us out of touch with any genuine reality. It is the faith which hears the story of Jesus, including the announcement that he is the world’s true Lord, and responds from the heart with a surge of grateful love that says: “Yes. Jesus is Lord. He died for my sins. God raised him from the dead. This is the center of everything.” Whether you come to this faith in a blinding flash or by a long, slow, winding route, once you get to this point you are (whether you realize it or not) wearing the badge which marks you out as part of the church, on an equal footing with every other Christian who ever lived. You are discovering what it means to wake up and find yourself in God’s new world.

What’s more, you are giving clear evidence that a new life has begun. Somewhere in the depths of your being something has stirred into life that was previously not there. It is because of this that many early Christians reached for the language of birth. Jesus himself, in a famous discussion with a Jewish teacher, spoke of being born “from above”: a new event similar to, though distinguished from, ordinary human birth (John 3). Many early Christians picked up and developed this idea. As a newborn baby breathes and cries, so the signs of life in a newborn Christian are faith and repentance, inhaling the love of God and exhaling an initial cry of distress. And at that point what God provides, exactly as for a newborn infant, is the comfort, protection, and nurturing promise of a mother.

N.T. Wright: What Is The Gospel? (2013)

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=ICHovRHJAYY [Video]

https://vimeo.com/54601664 [Video]

Excerpt:

Here’s a transcription of what is repentance as it relates to the gospel (from 5:05 min. into the video):

When Jesus says “Repent and believe in the good news” towards the beginning of his ministry in Mark chapter 1, there’s almost an exact parallel to that in the Jewish writer, Josephus. He talks about a time when he went to Galilee in the 60’s of the first century and he said to one of the brigand leaders, “Repent and believe in me!” What Josephus was saying was, “Give up your way of doing stuff…I’ve got a better idea…Come with me!” That’s what those words sounded like in Galilee in the first century! When Jesus told people to repent, he didn't mean "Have some kind of sad religious experience." He meant "You're going the wrong way! You're going to have to turn around because God is doing a new thing. If you're going to part of that new thing, you're going to have to give up the way you've been going. "

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Repentance and forgiveness, the Wright way (2013)

http://www.walkingwithgiants.net/bible/gospels/repentance-and-forgiveness-the-wright-way/

Summary and Critique

Balancing Out (W)Right: Jesus' Theology of Individual and Corporate Repentance and Forgiveness in the Gospel of Luke (2012)

http://www.etsjets.org/files/JETS-PDFs/55/55-2/JETS%2055-2_299-321_Chatraw.pdf [PDF]

The Relationship Between Faith and Repentance (2016)

https://theologymix.com/biblical-interpretation/relationship-faith-repentance/

Before embarking on a discussion on the relationship between any two things, it is important to define the meaning of the two things we are discussing. In this particular case, our question deals particularly with the terms "faith" and "repentance," and how the two relate to one another specifically in the process of salvation.

Faith and repentance are both completely necessary for the salvation of the sinner. Faith involves both a mental assent to the truths of the Gospel and an embracing of those truths personally by the person who assents to them. Repentance is a change of mind, whereby the sinner agrees with God regarding sin, turns from sin, despises sin, hates sin, and rejects sin. The relationship between faith and repentance as it pertains to salvation is that repentance is an integral part of saving faith. We agree with Barackman here when we say saving faith consists of "assent, repentance, and trust.[41]" One cannot properly repent unless they first believe the facts of the Gospel, or have mental assent regarding those truths. Further, one cannot logically turn to God without first, logically speaking, turning from sin.

The act of "turning" is very appropriate in illustrating why the Biblical authors can speak of either faith, or repentance, as being singularly essential for salvation. They can do this because in order to "turn" one must by necessity turn away from something, and toward another thing. I cannot "turn" north, without turning away from the south, east, and west. So when the Biblical authors use these terms, individually, or together, they carry the same meaning for whether one repents, or believes, they cannot do either, without doing the other. I can say to a man heading south on a particular street "Stop heading south, you must go north." I can also say "you need to go north" or "south is the altogether wrong direction." Each of these statements carry the same exact meaning.

So too, whether the Scriptures say "…repent and believe in the gospel" (Mark 1:15), "Believe in the Lord Jesus, and you will be saved, you and your household" (Acts 16:31), or "Repent therefore, and turn back, that your sins may be blotted out" (Acts 3:19), they are saying precisely the same thing for repentance and faith are, as we have seen, inseparable pieces of a faith that saves.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Repentance

http://getgodsgift.org/index.php?p=1_12_Repentance

Excerpt:

"Repent of Sin." This often-quoted phrase "repent of sin" does not even occur in the Bible. Most people are quite shocked to find that it does not appear in the Scripture. Nowhere does the Scripture use the phrase, "repent of sin" to be saved. Scripture does say in Acts 20:21, "repentance toward God" (change of mind), and "faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ."

Repentance is the translation of the Greek word "metanoia". The literal meaning of "metanoia" is "a change of mind". "Meta" means "change". "Noia" means "mind". So, therefore, "metanoia" means a "change of mind". Before learning about metanoia, I am sure that you are already familiar with a Greek word with the prefix "meta". That word is "metamorphosis". "Meta" means "change", and "morphosis" means "form or structure". This word metamorphosis is used to describe the change a caterpillar goes through to become a beautiful butterfly. I am sure that you have studied about this change of form. Repentance, therefore, (metanoia) is a change of mind.

This misuse of the word repentance has caused untold confusion among believers and unbelievers alike. Satan, the author of confusion (I Corinthians 14:33), has delighted in this misuse of the word repentance. One of the counterfeits Satan is using today is the misuse of the word repentance. To insist upon a repentance that in any sense includes a demand for a change of conduct either toward God or man is to add an element of works or human effort to faith.

Let's define. Penance is payment for sin. Penitence is sorrow for sin. Works and something of self is turning from sin. But repentance (metanoia) means a change of mind. Repentance in salvation means a change of mind from any idea of religion that man might have and accepting God's way of salvation. Man's great need is to understand God's way of salvation and accept His sacrifice. "For God so loved the world, that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life (John 3:16)."

Why do we have the problem? The problem has come about because "metanoia" should never have been translated into the English word "repent". "Repent" (English word) does not mean the same thing as "metanoia" (Greek word). Perhaps what the translators should have done was a "transliteration" of the Greek word. For example: the translators of the King James Bible took the Greek word "baptizo", dropped the "o", and replaced it with an "e". They brought the new word "baptize" into the English language. This is called transliteration. They should have done this with "metanoia", and the problem would have been eliminated. Can you imagine preachers saying 'METANOIA' to their congregations? At least the correct meaning would be known.

Understanding the doctrine may relieve some of the confusion you or your friends may have had concerning repentance. Here is a way to get a handle on it. Remember this, "A person may 'repent' without 'believing', but a person cannot 'believe' without 'repenting'." A person may "repent" (change their mind) without "believing" (trusting Christ), but a person cannot "believe" (trust in Christ) without repenting (having changed their mind).

Repentance is necessary for salvation, but keep in mind that it means "a change of mind". ..

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Repentence vs Faith [Recommended]

http://www.4himnet.com/bnyberg/The_Free_Grace_Gospel-Repentance_vs_Faith-Nyberg.pdf [PDF]

Is repentance necessary for salvation?

https://bible.org/question/repentance-necessary-salvation

Excerpt:

Emotions run high and opinions vary widely on this issue, but I'll share my convictions on this issue.

The word "repent" has to be understood within the context in which it is being used. In fact, very often, it should not even be translated "repent" because of the wrong preconditioned theological connotations this carries. It is a matter of what some would call, "illegitimate totality transfer." This occurs when the meaning of a word in one passage is carried over to every other place the word occurs. The Greek word for "repent" is metanoia (noun) or metanoeo (verb). It basically means a change of mind and the context must determine what is involved in that change of mind. In passages where salvation is in view it is equivalent to believe or trust in and involves a change of mind about any form of self-trust in human works, good deeds, religious tradition, etc. followed by a trust in the finished work of Christ which alone has the power to save us. It means a turning from self-trust to trust in Christ.

Believe and repent are never used together as if teaching two different requirements for salvation. When salvation from eternal condemnation is in view, repent (a change of mind) and believe are in essence used as synonyms. Lewis Chafer wrote:

Too often, when it is asserted—as it is here—that repentance is not to be added to belief as a separated requirement for salvation, it is assumed that repentance is not necessary to salvation. Therefore it is as dogmatically stated as language can declare, that repentance is essential to salvation and that none could be saved apart from repentance, but it is included in believing and cannot be separated from it (Lewis Sperry Chafer, Vital Theological Issues, Roy B. Zuck, General Editor, Kregel, Grand Rapids, 1994, p. 119).

Roy B. Zuck writes:

Repentance is included in believing. Faith and repentance are like two sides of a coin. Genuine faith includes repentance, and genuine repentance includes faith. The Greek word for repentance (metanoia) means to change one's mind. But to change one's mind about what? About sin, about one's adequacy to save himself, about Christ as the only way of salvation, the only One who can make a person righteous ("Kindred Spirit," a quarterly publication of Dallas Seminary, Summer 1989, p. 5).

In Luke's rendering of the Great Commission he uses repentance as a single requirement in the same sense as believing in Christ (Luke 24:46-47). As Dr. Ryrie says of this verse, "Clearly, repentance for the forgiveness of sins is connected to the death and resurrection of Christ." The repentance comes out of the recognition of one's sin, but the object of repentance is the person and work of Christ, or faith in Christ. Interestingly, in Luke 8:12 he uses believe alone, "Those along the path are the ones who hear, and then the devil comes and takes away the word from their hearts, so that they may not believe and be saved."

A comparison of other passages clearly supports the fact that repentance often stands for faith in the person and work of Christ. Compare Acts 10:43 with 11:17-18; 13:38-39 with 2:38. Also, note Acts 16:31 which uses "believe" alone.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The stated purpose of the Gospel of John is to bring men to faith in Christ (20:31), yet John never once uses the word repent, not once. If repentance, when used in connection with eternal salvation, is a separate or distinct requirement from faith in Christ, then John does not give the whole gospel. And if you can believe that, you can believe anything. Speaking of the absence of John's use of repent in His gospel, Ryrie writes:

And yet John surely had many opportunities to use it in the events of our Lord's life which he recorded. It would have been most appropriate to use repent or repentance in the account of the Lord's conversation with Nicodemus. But believe is the word used (John 3:12, 15). So, If Nicodemus needed to repent, believe must be a synonym; else how could the Lord have failed to use the word repent when talking to him? To the Samaritan harlot, Christ did not say repent. He told her to ask (John 4:10), and when her testimony and the Lord's spread to other Samaritans, John recorded not that they repented but that they believed (vss. 39, 41-42). There are about fifty more occurrences of "believe" or "faith" in the Gospel of John, but not one use of "repent." The climax is John 20:31: "These have been written that you may believe . . . and that believing you may have life in His name." (Charles C. Ryrie, So Great Salvation, Victor Books, p. 98).

What about Acts 20:21? "… solemnly testifying to both Jews and Greeks of repentance toward God and faith in our Lord Jesus Christ." Some would say, "Doesn't this passage teach that faith and repentance are not synonymous and that repentance is a separate requirement?" No! Paul is summarizing his ministry in Ephesus and what he solemnly proclaimed to both Jews and Greeks, specifically, repentance toward God and faith in our Lord Jesus Christ. The two words, repentance and faith, are joined by one article in the Greek text which indicates that the two are inseparable, though each focuses on a different aspect of the one requirement of salvation, namely, faith in Christ. We can legitimately translate it like this. "Solemnly testifying … a change of mind about God, and faith in our Lord Jesus Christ." Repentance, metanoia, focuses on changing one's mind about his previous conception of God and disbelief in God or false beliefs (polytheism and idolatry) about God (see 1 Thess. 1:9). On the other hand, belief in Christ, as an expression of a change of mind, focuses on the new direction that change about God must take, namely, trusting in Christ, God's Son, as personal Savior.

It has also been suggested that in this summary Paul is emphasizing the distinction between the particular needs of Gentiles and Jews. Gentiles who were polytheistic needed to change their minds about their polytheism and realize that only one true God exists. Jews needed to change their minds about Jesus and realize that He is their true Messiah (Ryrie, p. 98).

Regarding Acts 20:21: See additional commentary re: Paul's testifying

See also*: Faith

For additional details about Repentance, Faith and their relation to Salvation see my other separate references resource:

The Gospel, Salvation and Evangelism

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Atonement (incl. Christus Victus / Penal Substitution)

Covenantal Nomism

Imputed / Imputation (see Righteousness) (Definition)

Justification (also resources spread throughout this document)

(See also above)

Pistis Christou (Faith/Faithfulness in/of Christ/Messiah)

Righteousness (this topic & related resources are found throughout these Notes)

(see also: Romans Glossary)

For more, go to: Index

Paul

Paul's Use of Greek Philosophy in the Bible / Greek Philosophy

Paul's Worldview

Old Testament Sayings in Paul's Letter to the Romans (Chart)

Church History, Early (including Antiochene and Alexandrian Theology)

Apostolic Fathers – Writings / History

Culture / Customs, History (Bible Backgrounds)

Luther, Martin

Galatians

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Ephesians Related

[Romans related] [Galatians related]

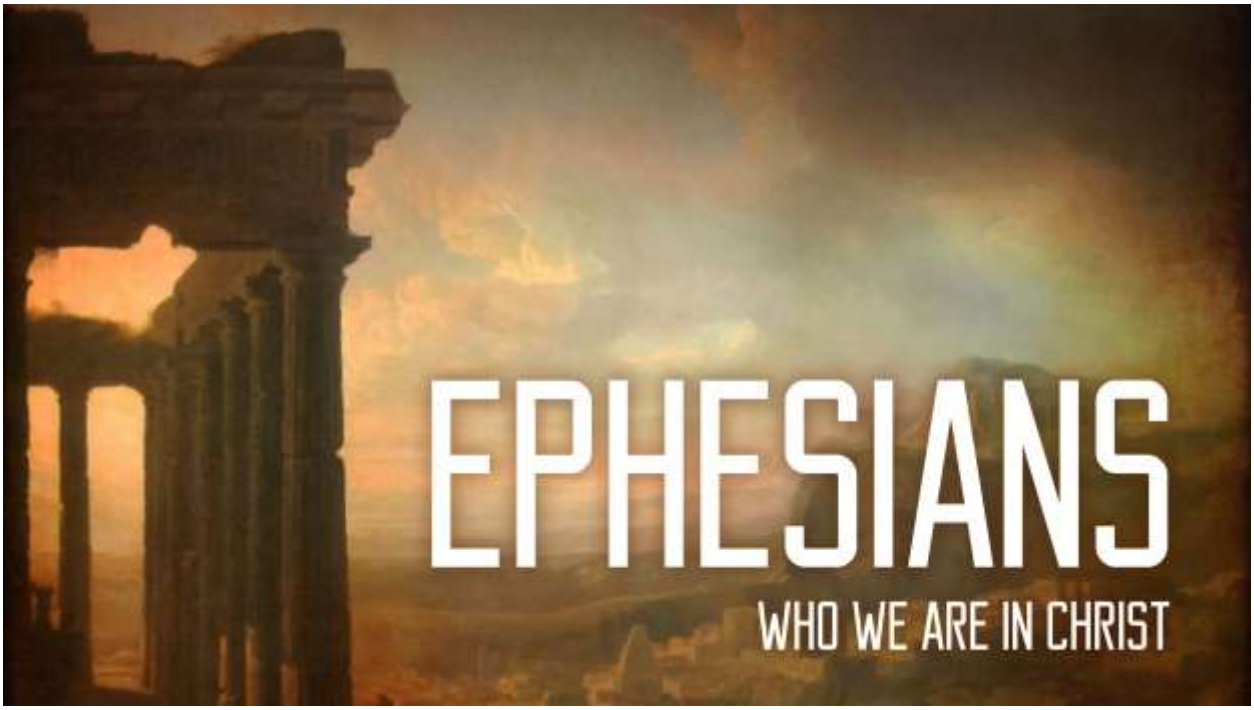

Image Source: https://bigvalleygrace.org/ephesians/ [Ephesians TOC]

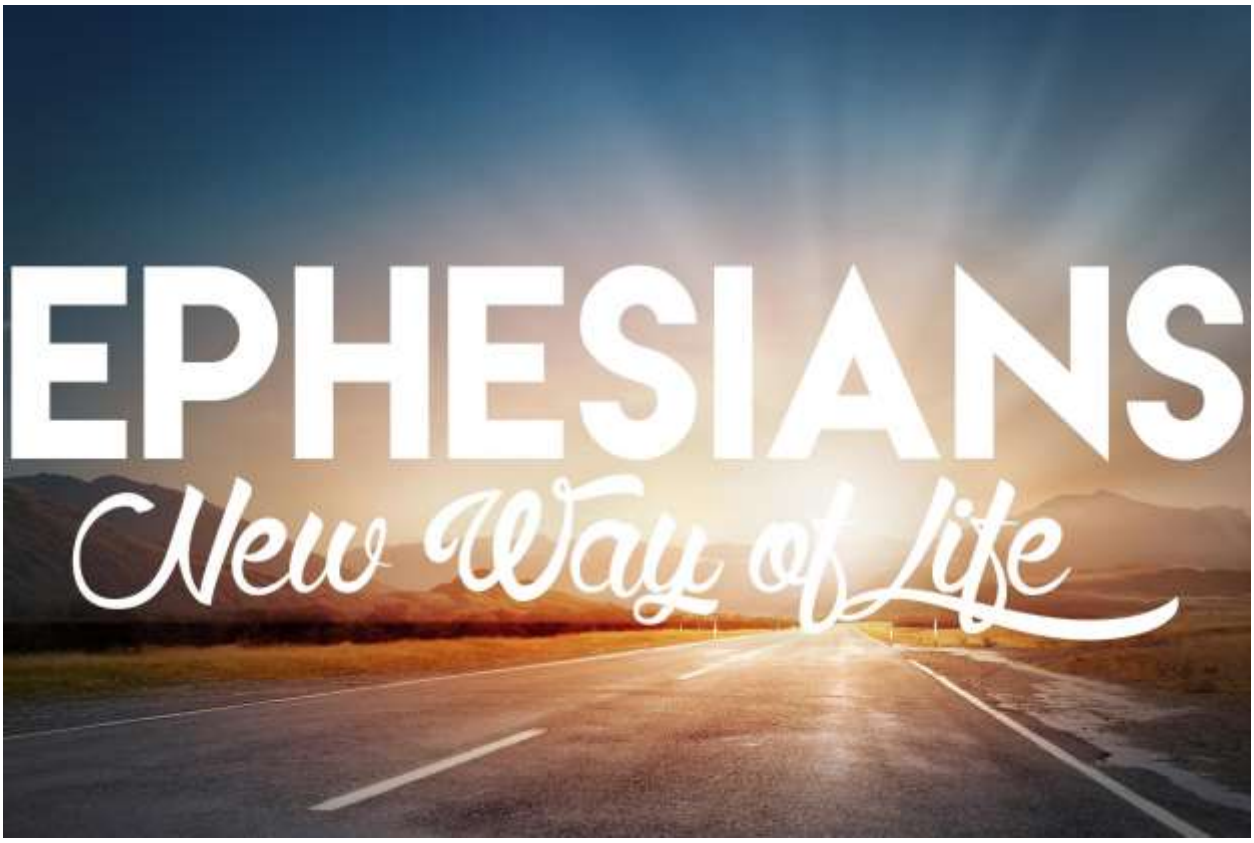
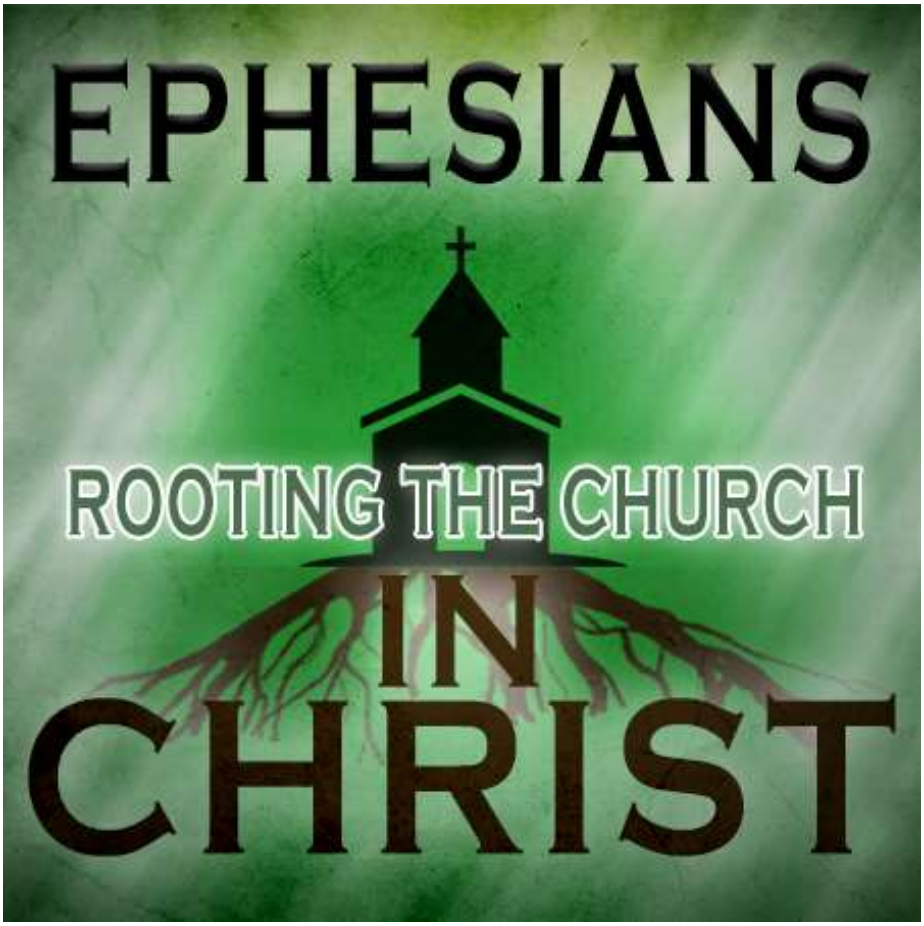
Image Source: https://thewellhastings.com/series/ephesians/ [See*: Ephesians – Highlights by Chapter]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



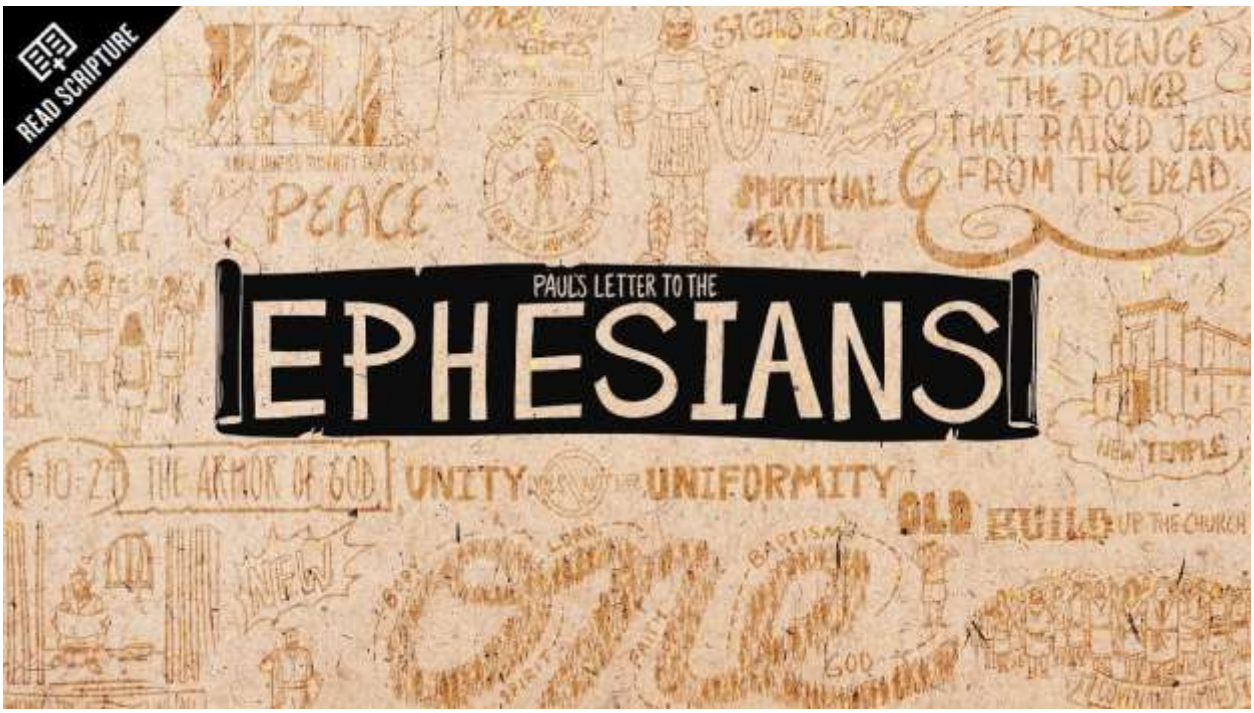
Ephesians deals with topics at the very core of what it means to be a Christian, both in identity and in action.



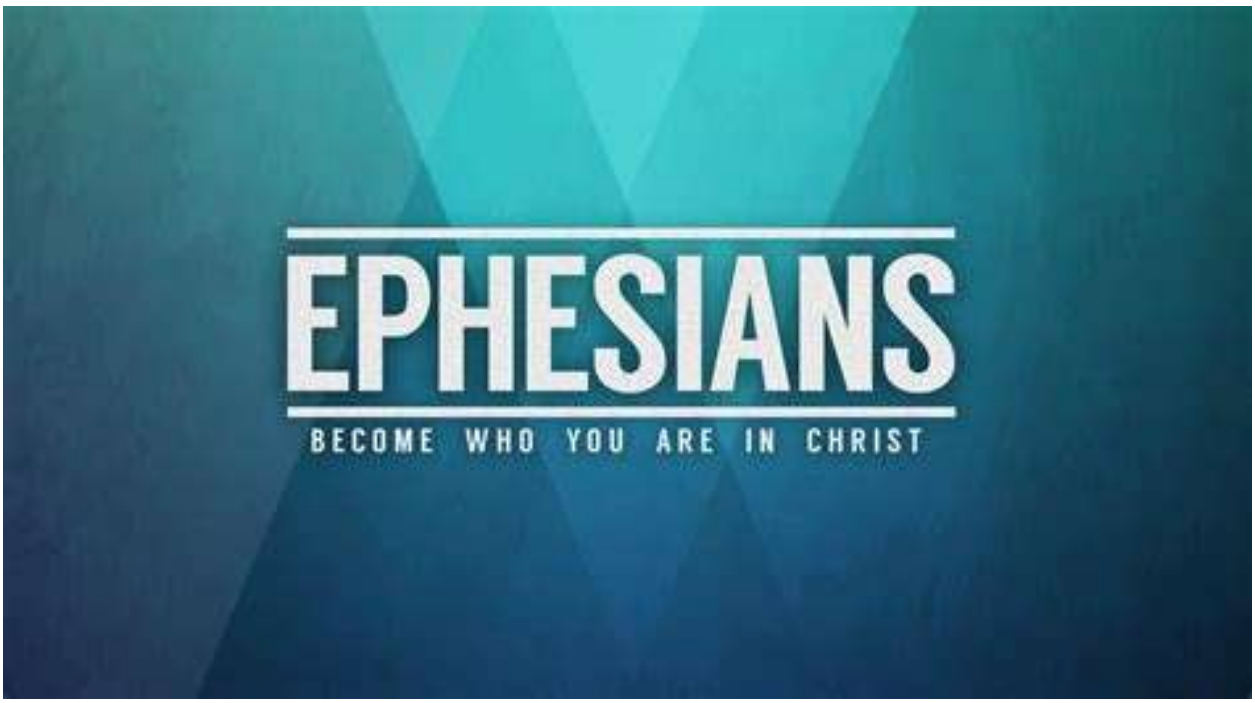
http://www.2020community.ca/past-studies.html

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



http://www.valleyavenue.org/sermons/ephesians-31-13-foundation-maturity/



https://ncfchurch.org/ephesians

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

See*: [The Bible Project – Ephesians]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

http://prayscripture.org/2014/10/18/what-book-will-we-pray-through-next-4/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

N. T. Wright: Welcome to Study of Ephesians http://ntwrightonline.org/portfolio-items/ephesians/

See also:

Dr. Thomas Constable's Expository Notes

J.V. McGee Background – The Prison Epistles

Ephesians vs Colossians [Dr. Utley] [Intro]

Dr. Wallace – Intro, Argument and Outline

Purpose, Background, Structure; Letter Writing

N.T. Wright – Ecclesiology / Justification [Intro]

Church (Ekklesia): Local / Universal [Membership]

Ephesians (NOT Romans) – Paul's Theology

Kingdom of Heaven vs Kingdom of God

Ephesians – Facts (Beginning)

Ephesians – Charts/Outlines

Ephesians – Maps

Ephesians – Ephesus History (Videos)

Ephesians – Paul's Journeys / Timeline

Ephesians – Farewell at Miletus

Ephesians – The Bible Project

Ephesians – Welcome / Intro.

Ephesians – Overviews - Guides

Ephesians – Gene Getz Videos

Ephesians – Highlights by Chapter

[Ephesians related Videos List] [Humor - Images] [Go to Ephesians Section End]

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Chart Outlines of the Book of Ephesians

EPHESIANS

	Introduction (1:1–2)	Our Position in Christ	Our Practice on Earth	Conclusion (6:21–24)
		Section 1: What God has done for us (1) Emphasis: sovereignty Section 2: What Christ has done in us (2:1–10) Emphasis: grace Section 3: What Christ has done between us (2:11–3:21) Emphasis: reconciliation	Section 1: Our new unity (4:1–16) Section 2: Our new walk (4:17–6:9) Section 3: Our new strength (6:10–20)
		CHAPTERS 1–3	CHAPTERS 4–6
Emphasis		Doctrinal: vertical relationship with God	Practical: horizontal relationship with others
Core Phrase		"He chose us in Him." (1:4)	"Walk in a manner worthy of the calling." (4:1)
Subjects		Declarations of heavenly truths (God's accomplishments)	Exhortations for earthly living (Christians' assignments)
Prayers		Paul's prayer for Ephesians (1:15–23); Paul's prayer for the whole church (3:14–21)	Christians' prayers for one another (6:18–20)
Theme		The holy community God is creating and how it is to live out its calling
Key Verses		1:9–10; 4:1–3
Christ in Ephesians		Jesus is the source of spiritual blessing, the Cornerstone of the church, and the goal of spiritual maturity (1:3; 2:20; 4:11–16).

Copyright © 1982, 1997, 2010 by Charles R. Swindoll, Inc. All rights reserved worldwide.

Source: https://www.insight.org/resources/bible/the-pauline-epistles/ephesians

Structure Layout of Ephesians (according to the ESV Text)
https://markbass.files.wordpress.com/2012/03/ephesians-structural-layout.pdf [PDF]

The Significance of the Chiastic Structure of Ephesians 1:3 - 14 for Defining 'Predestined'
http://nagasawafamily.org/paul_ephesians.1.03-14.predestination.pdf [PDF]

Ephesians Analysis
http://www.genesishistory.org/content/EphesiansAnalyzed.pdf [PDF]

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

Berean Pictorial Chart
https://levendwater.org/berean_pictorial_charts/chart_no_01_ephesians.htm

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

	CHAPTER 1	CHAPTER 2	CHAPTER 3	CHAPTER 4	CHAPTER 5	CHAPTER 6
EMPHASIS	DOCTRINAL - What We Should Know			PRACTICAL - How We Should Live
THE CHURCH	Our Position in Christ			Our Practice on Earth
SUBJECT	Chosen in Christ	Saved by Grace	Members of His Church	Life in the Church	Life in the Home	Life in the World
SUMMARY	:1-2 Greeting :3-14 Chosen by the Father, Redeemed by the Son, Secured by the Spirit :15-23 Prayer for Understanding	:1-3 Our Depravity :4-10 His Grace :11-22 Our Unity	:1-13 The Mystery of the Gospel Through the Church :14-21 Prayer for Obedience	:1-16 Walk in Unity :17-24 Walk in Purity :25-5:2 Walk in Love	:3-20 Walk in Holiness :21-6:9 Walk in Submission • Wives & Husbands • Children & Parents • Slaves & Masters	:10-20 Stand in Power :21-24 Salutation
PRAYERS	For the Ephesians 1:15-23		For the Entire Church 3:14-21			For One Another 6:18-20
PSALM 1:1 MOTIF	SIT We Are Seated With Him in the Heavenly Places 2:6			WALK Walk Worthy of Our Calling 4:1		STAND Against the Devil's Schemes 6:11
HOLY SPIRIT	:13 Seals	:18 Unifies :22 Builds Residence	:5 Revealer :16 Power Source	:3 Unifies :23 Renews :30 Grieves	:18 Controls	:17 Defends :18 Intercedes
THE BODY OF CHRIST	:23 Church=Body	:16 One Body	:13-14 Mystery :21 Brings Glory	:12-16 Built Through Gifts	:22-32 Christ's Bride

Source: https://thewellcommunity.org/bible-charts

For more charts/outlines see: Ephesians – Highlights by Chapter

Key Themes

1. All people are by nature spiritually dead, transgressors of God's law, and under the rule of Satan.	1:7; 2:1–3, 5, 11–12
2. God predestined his elect to redemption and holiness in Christ according to the free counsel of his will.	1:3–14; 2:4, 8–9
3. God's rich mercy in Christ has saved sinners; this free gift is by grace through faith alone.	1:7–8; 2:4–14
4. Christ's earthly work of redemption was part of his cosmic reconciliation and exaltation in this age and the next.	1:15–23; 3:1–13
5. Christ's reconciliation entails uniting all people, whether Jew or Gentile, into his one body, the church, as a new creation.	1:23; 2:10–15; 3:1–21; 4:1–6
6. Christ's people are renewed to new lives of holiness in thought, word, and deed, and must reject their old, sinful lifestyles.	4:1–3, 17–32; 5:1–20
7. Holiness of life entails submission to proper authorities, and loving and considerate care for those in submission.	5:21–6:9
8. Christ has given powerful gifts to his church to bring about her unity, maturity, and defense against the onslaughts of the devil and his allies.	4:7–16; 6:10–19

ESV Study Bible

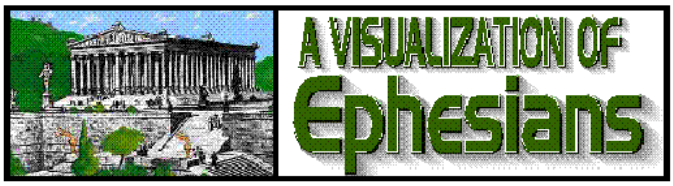
Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Major Themes for The Book of Ephesians

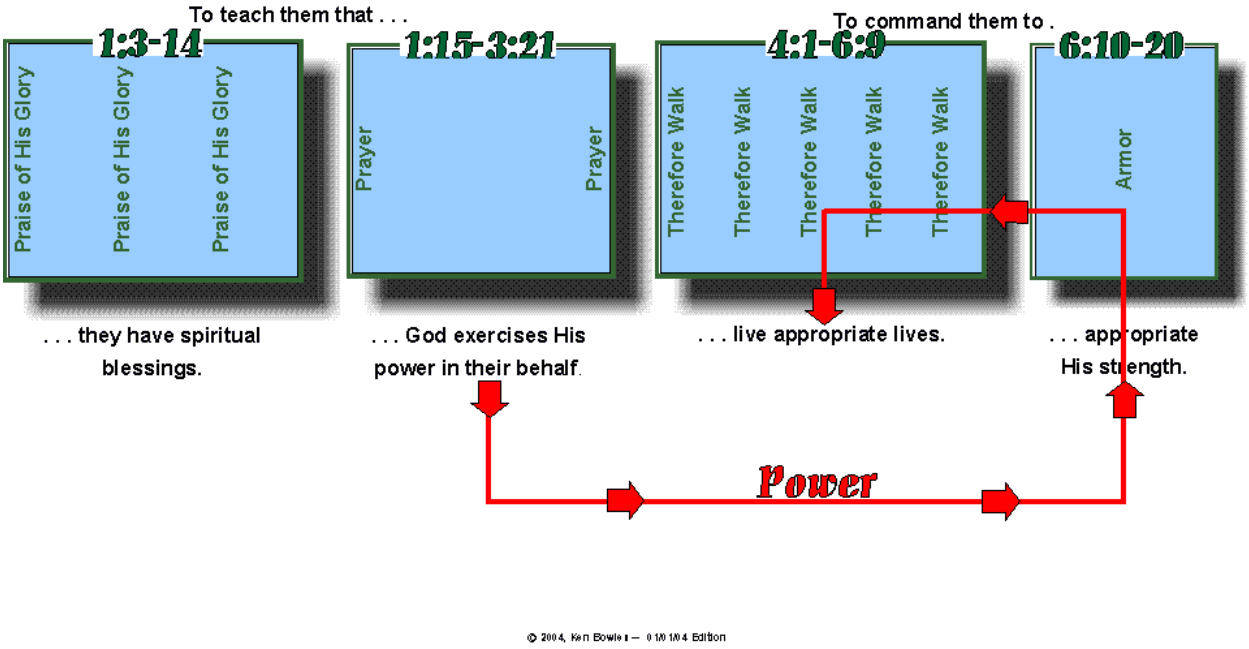
http://www.foundationsforfreedom.net/References/NT/Pauline/Ephesians/Ephesians0/Ephesians0_Themes.html

Excerpt:



Ephesians presents many significant themes which bring major contributions of thought. Some are listed below.

- The glorious position of Christ
- The holy calling of God's people
- The equipping of God's people to do what God has appointed them
- God's general purpose for the church and the believers
- The means God displays His glory
- The transition between the Old and New Covenants
- Paul's authority to speak the Gospel
- The meaning and implications of the Gospel of Jesus Christ
- The Holy Spirit's work in the lives of His people
- The innate sinful nature of mankind
- The nature and means of salvation
- The transformation that takes place in His people (from sin)
- The unique lifestyle of God's people
- Unity among God's people
- The ability of God's people to withstand Satan and his forces
- The importance and style of prayer needed for the welfare of the church

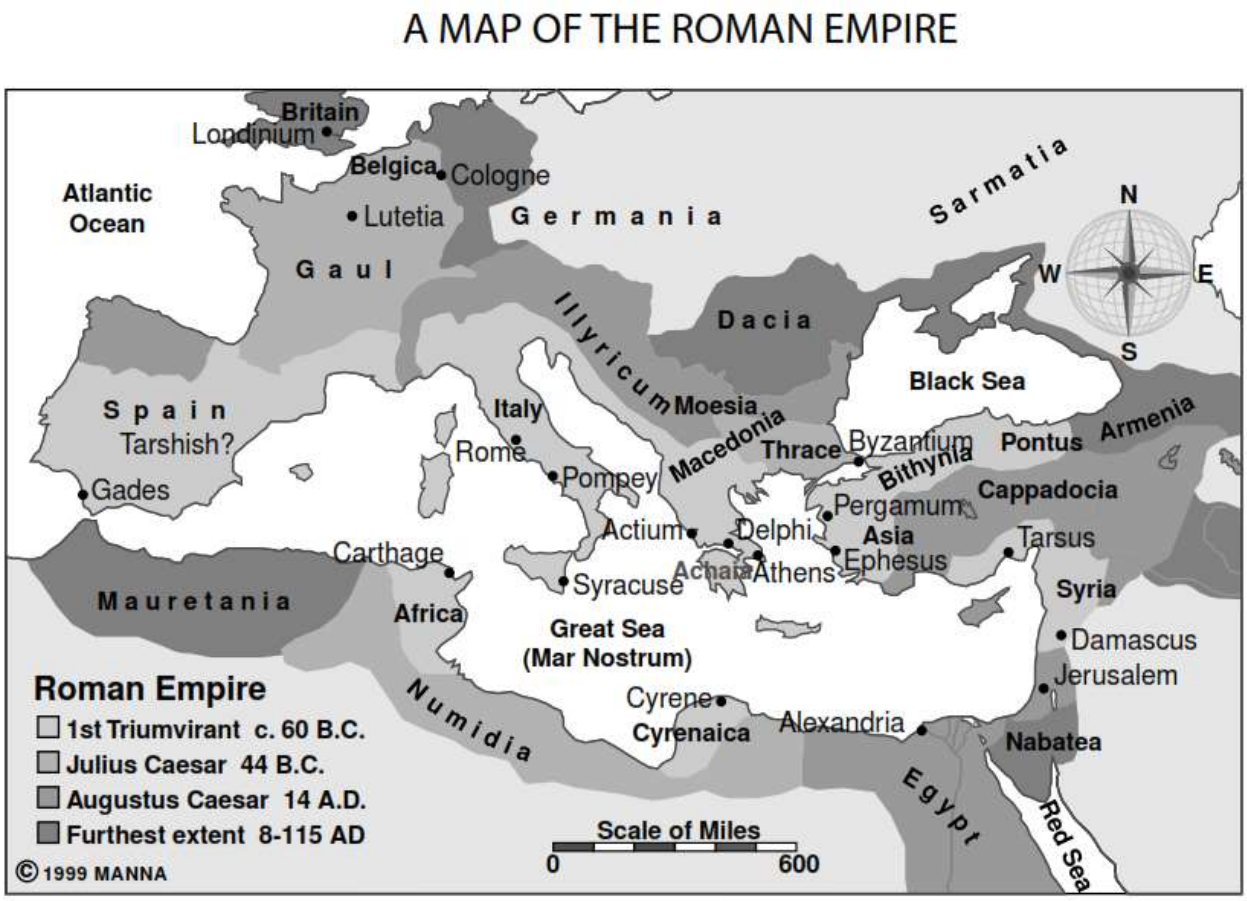


Together they present a powerfully packed book. Each paragraph calls us to renewed thinking that leads to faithful godly lives. The rest of this article will present a few of these topics in greater detail as they have to do with understanding the whole book.

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Overall Purpose: To encourage the Ephesian Christians by indicating how God exercises His power on their behalf.



Source: https://www.oocities.org/k9ocu/VisualizationEph.htm

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Maps

Ephesians Bible Study – Matt Hennecke
http://www.thinkonthesethings.com/materials/Eph.pdf [PDF]

See also maps: Chronology and Locations of the Writing of Acts and Paul's Letters

Ephesians – Ephesus History

Ephesians – Farewell at Miletus

Paul: Background/Maps (outside of this Ephesians section)

Maps of Bible (and Charts, Illustrations, Timelines)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Setting of Ephesians

(c.A.D. 62)

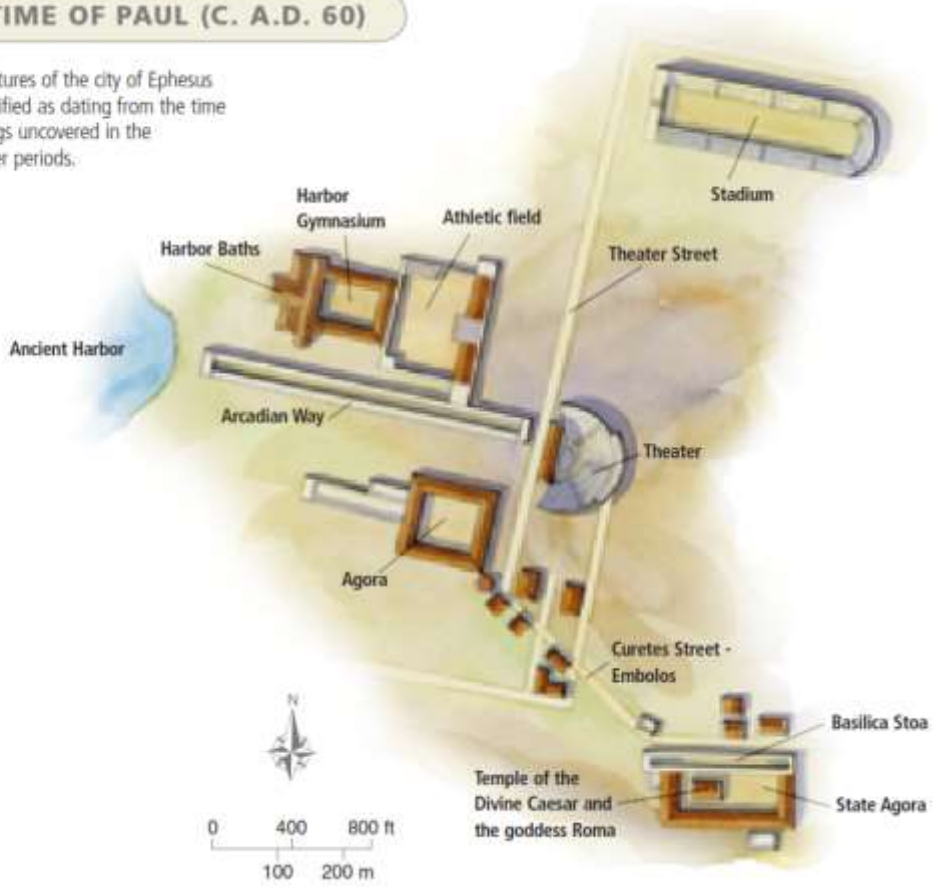
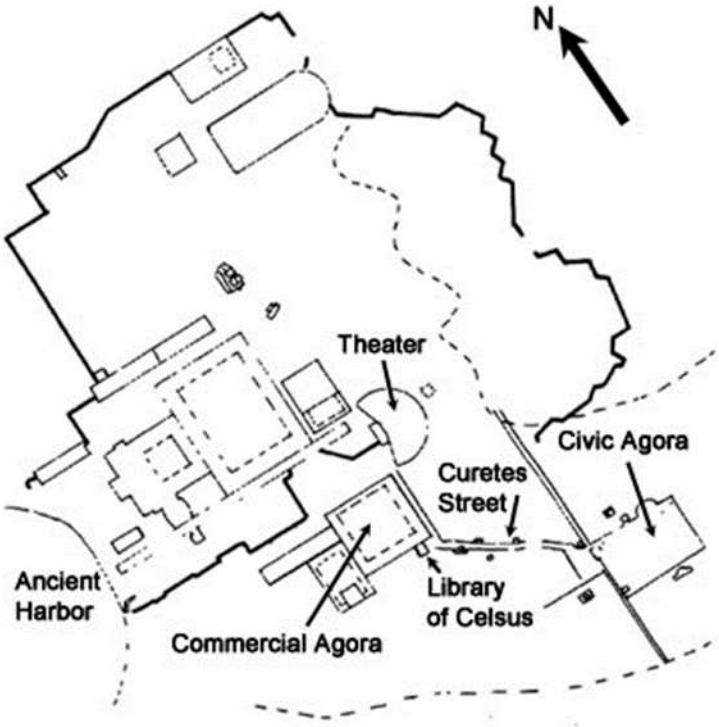
Ephesus was a wealthy port city in the Roman province of Asia. It was a center of learning and was positioned near several key land routes in western Asia Minor. Paul probably wrote his letter to the Ephesians while under house arrest in Rome (Acts 28).

ESV Study Bible – Ephesians Introduction Excerpt [Recommended]
http://www.centuryone.com/NT-excerpt-ephesians-intro.pdf [PDF]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

THE CITY OF EPHESUS

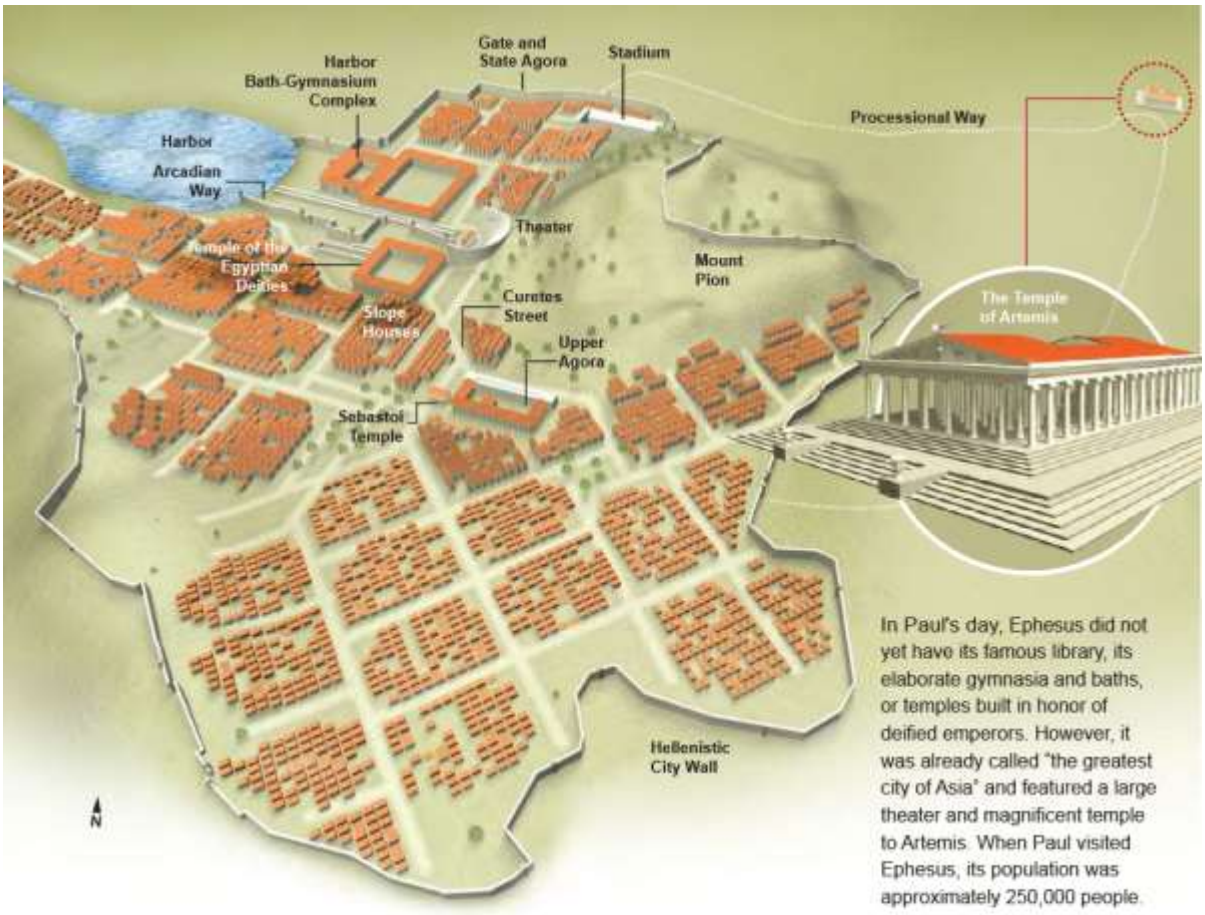




Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

EPHESUS IN THE TIME OF PAUL (C. A.D. 60)

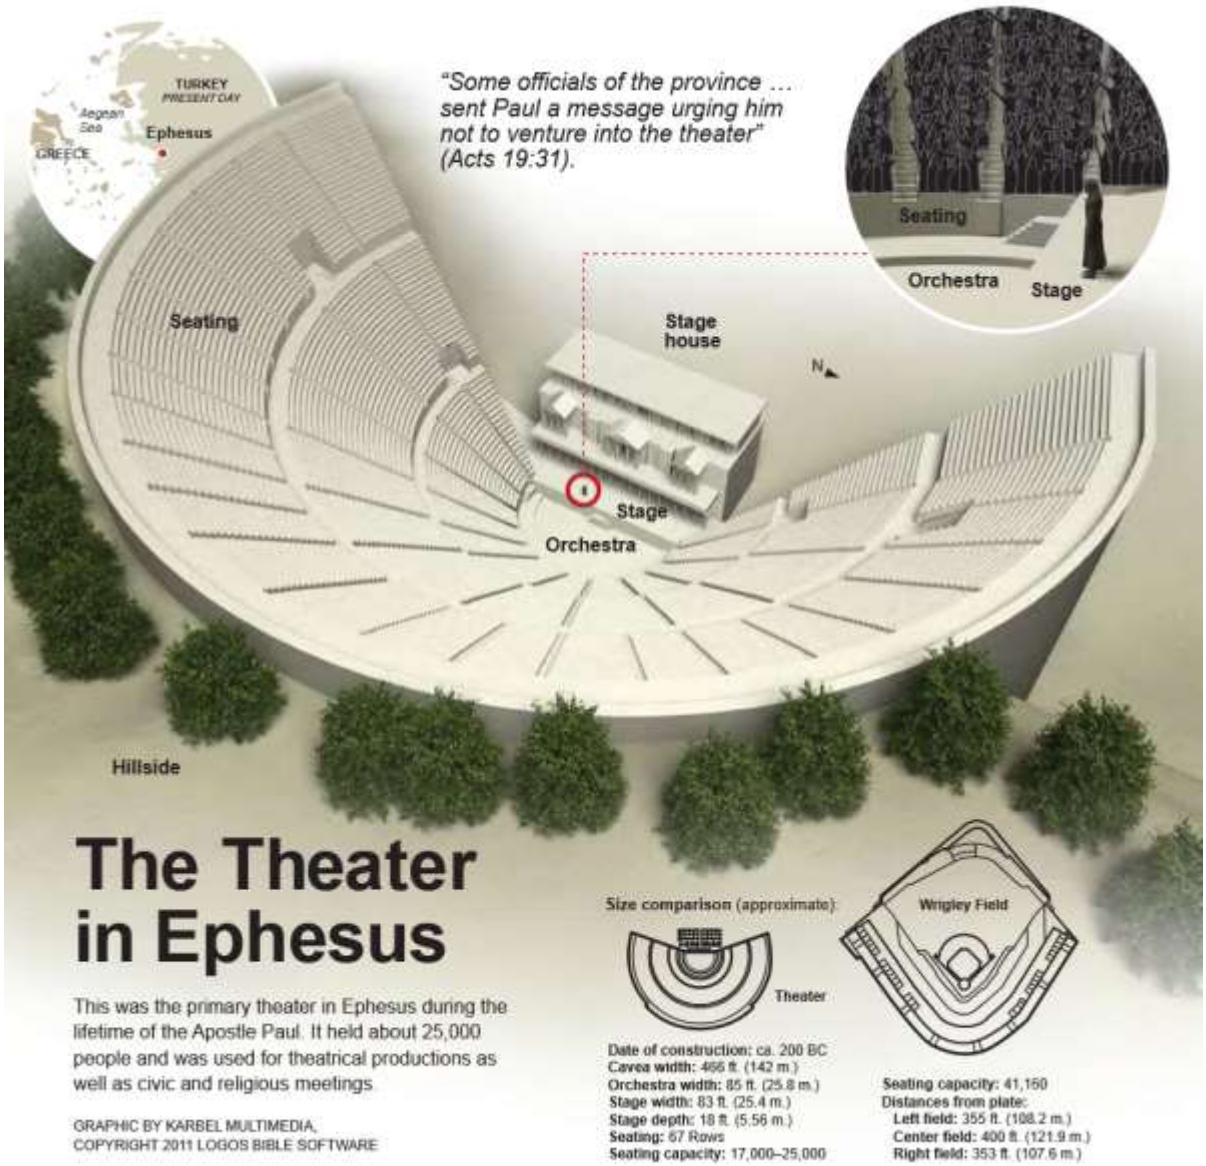


The city plan below shows those features of the city of Ephesus that archaeologists have so far identified as dating from the time of Paul. Many of the notable buildings uncovered in the excavation at Ephesus date from later periods.

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Ephesus in Paul's Day



Ephesus was a thriving port in the first century, situated on the only major east–west road system in the area. Nearly a century had passed since it had last been invaded. The city was proud and prosperous, and a strong Jewish community thrived there.

GRAPHIC BY KARBEL MULTIMEDIA, COPYRIGHT 2011 LOGOS BIBLE SOFTWARE

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

See*: Pictures of Theater

See also*: Odeum (or Odeorn) [Theater]

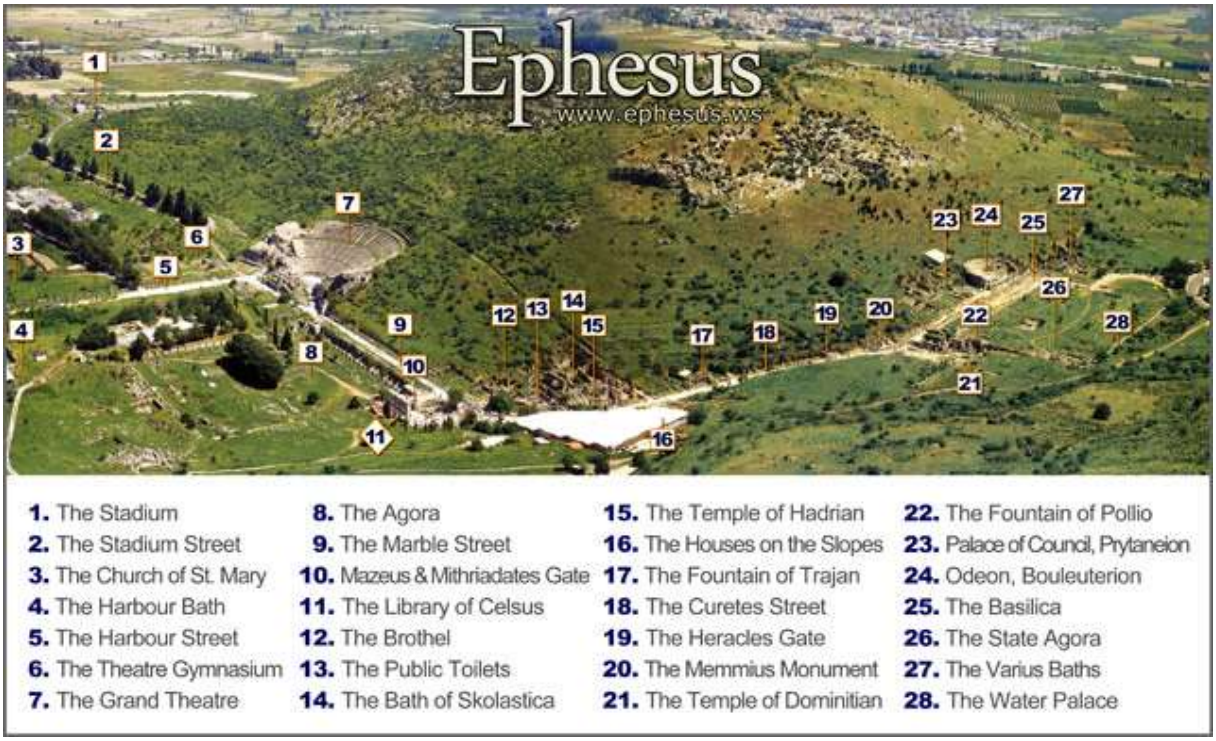
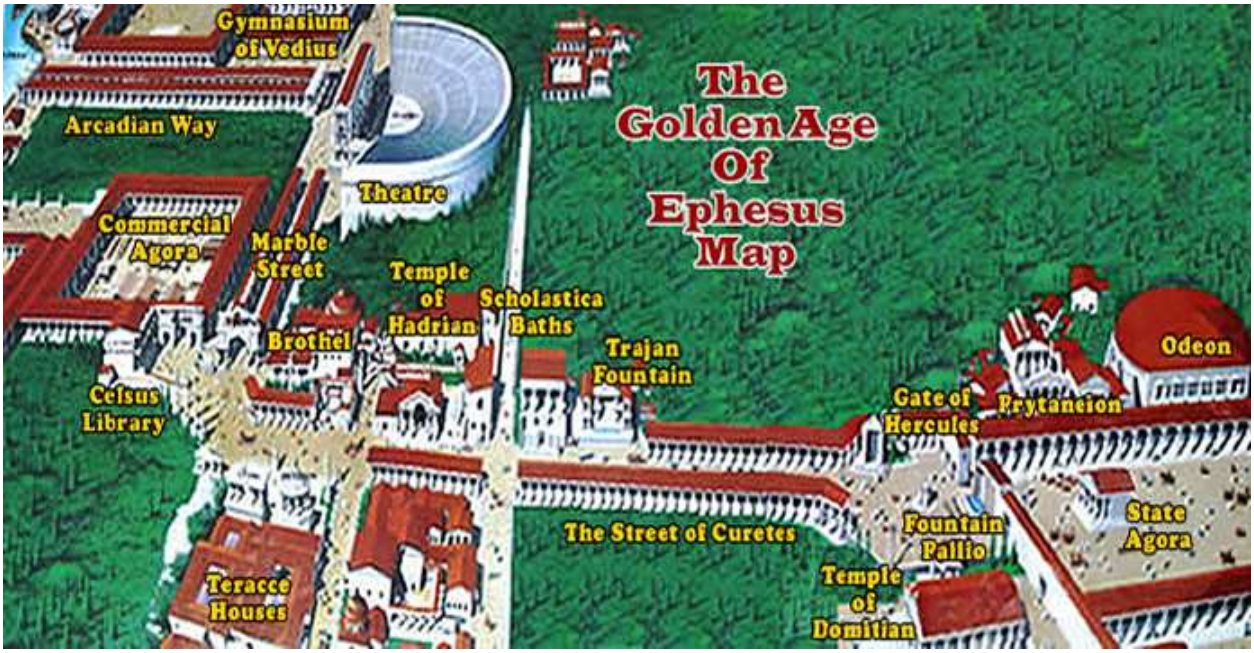
Temple of Artemis

House of the Virgin Mary

Videos of Ancient Ephesus



Maps of Ancient Ephesus / More Maps of Ancient Ephesus (following pages)



Ephesus.us – History, information and pictures of Ephesus Ancient city http://www.ephesus.us/

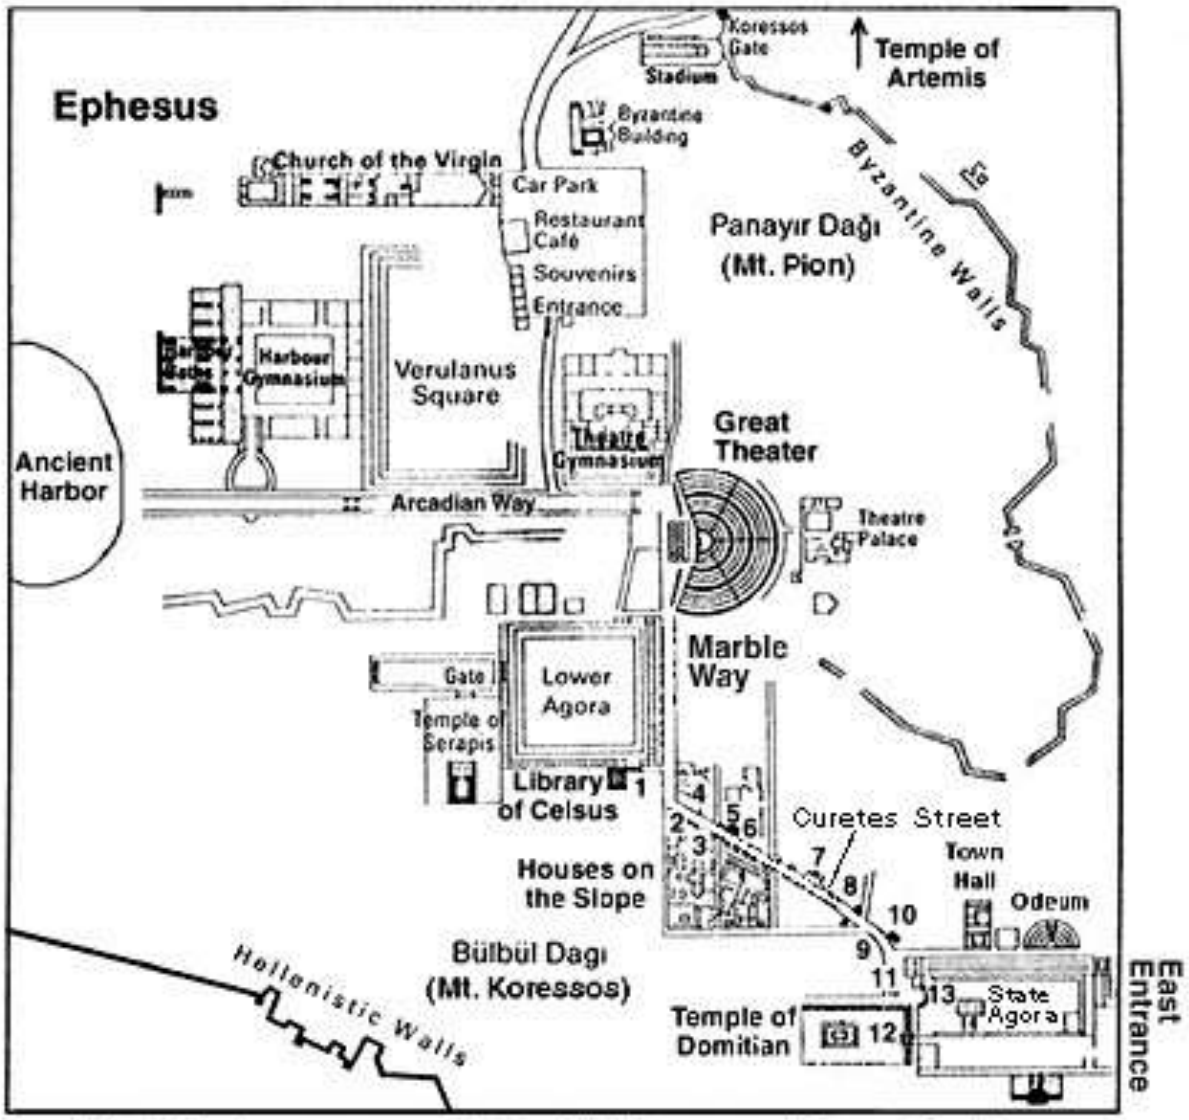
 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



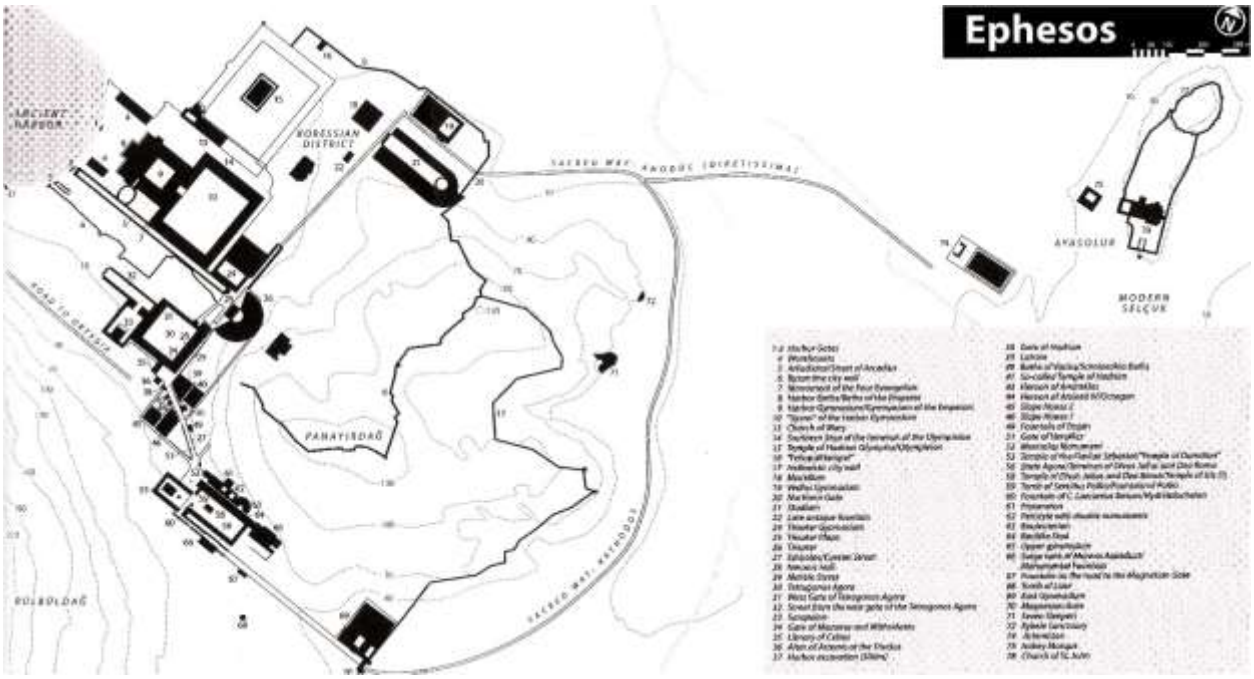
Maps of Ancient Ephesus

http://www.ephesus.ws/ephesus-map.html

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



See next page for larger view…

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

See larger view next page…

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Ancient Ephesus and the New Testament
http://www.patheos.com/blogs/markdroberts/series/ancient-ephesus-and-the-new-testament/

Ancient Ephesus and the New Testament

How our knowledge of the ancient city of Ephesus enriches our knowledge of the New Testament

by Rev. Dr. Mark D. Roberts

Copyright © 2011 by Mark D. Roberts and Patheos.com

Note: You may download this resource at no cost, for personal use or for use in a Christian ministry, as long as you are not publishing it for sale. All I ask is that you acknowledge the source of this material: http://www.patheos.com/community/markdroberts/.
For all other uses, please contact me at mark@markdroberts.com. Thank you.

(See also: Videos about Ancient Ephesus)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

[Go to Index] Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only [Go to Top - TOC]

Ancient Ephesus and the New Testament:

Introduction

For many of us, the events of the Bible seem to take place in some distant, magic world of "Bible lands," a wonderland rather like the one discovered by Alice. We read about Jerusalem, Nazareth, Corinth, and Ephesus, but picture some hazy world shaped by illustrations in our children's Bibles. The places in which the stories of the Bible happened seem unreal, and, therefore, so can the stories.

The more we actually know about the places in which the Bible was written and in which the stories happened, the more we'll be able to read the Bible as it was meant to be read, as the account of real experiences by real people in real places. Moreover, we'll be able to understand the meaning of the Bible more accurately and precisely.

I've spent a great deal of my life studying the Bible from both an academic and a pastoral perspective. I've also examined in great detail many of the archeological descriptions of biblical sites. The Internet has made all of this much easier and quite wonderful, actually. (Check out sites such as http://www.holylandphotos.org/ and http://www.bibleplaces.com/). But, until a few years ago, I had visited only one place that could count as part of "Bible lands." In 1984, and again in 2004, I visited Rome, the city to which Paul's famous letter is addressed, and which is referenced in several New Testament passages. Strictly speaking, however, none of the biblical stories actually took place in Rome.

So you can imagine how excited I was in 2007 and then again this past summer (2011) to visit some of the locations in which New Testament events actually happened. In 2007, I visited Athens and Ephesus. This year, I was able to visit Patmos, Crete, Antalya (Attalia), Cyprus, and Israel, in addition to Ephesus (for the second time). Many of these islands or cities play a relatively minor role in the New Testament, with the obvious exception of Israel, of course.

The Arch of Titus in Rome, which commemorates the fall of Jerusalem and the destruction of the temple in AD 70

Athens appears in the New Testament as the place where Paul preached his famous "sermon" on the Areopagus (Mars Hill, Acts 17:22ff). But Ephesus is arguably one of the most important of cities in early Christianity. Jerusalem probably takes first place in this competition, but Ephesus runs a close second, along with Antioch. In the second century and beyond, Rome became the most prominent city for Christianity.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Why was Ephesus so significant for early Christianity? In part, this had to do with the prominence of the city itself in the first century and its central location along the coast of Asia Minor (modern day Turkey). But, more importantly, Ephesus attracted many influential Christian leaders, including Paul, John, and Timothy. (Ephesus claims to be the last place where Mary, the mother of Jesus, lived, though the historical evidence for this is mixed at best. I'll have more to say about this later.)

Prior to my visit to Ephesus, I had studied this city in great detail. It almost felt as if I had been there. So you can imagine my joy in actually seeing the extensive remains of the ancient city of Ephesus with my own eyes. During my first visit to Ephesus, the temperature was well over 100 degrees, but this didn't wilt my enthusiasm. This year, I toured the ancient city with the temperature hovering around 90 degrees. Much better! I was also able to see parts of the city that I had missed in 2007.

In the posts that follow, I'll share some of my pictures of Ephesus and explain how our knowledge of the ancient city enriches our understanding of the New Testament, especially Acts 18-19. If you've been to Ephesus, this can serve as a helpful reminder. If you've never been there, consider this an introduction and invitation.

The Location and Environment of Ephesus

Ephesus, or what is left of it, lies on the western edge of modern day Turkey, just about five miles inland from the Aegean coast. The picture to the right shows the location of Ephesus. It is close to the modern town of Selcuk. Most tourists visit Ephesus by way of the port city of Kusadasi, which is about a 45-minute drive from Ephesus. The countryside between these two cities is fertile, lush with agriculture. It reminded me of farmlands inland from San Diego, California.

See also*: Ephesians – Maps

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

See also: Ephesians – Maps

Given the current location of Ephesus, you might be surprised to learn that it was once a major port city. No, Ephesus didn't move, or not much, anyway. Ancient cities did tend to move around a bit. When a city burned down, they'd rebuild it nearby. Ephesus was no exception. But it wasn't a change of location that made Ephesus a port city. Rather, it was the changing shoreline. In ancient times, Ephesus had a harbor, such that the city went right up to the water. But sediment from the Cayster River eventually filled in the harbor. (The photo to the right shows the location of the ancient harbor, with the ruins of the city in the center and foreground of the picture.)

Ephesus itself lies in a valley. It is protected by steep hills on either side. In days gone by, this would have helped to guard the city from enemy attack. The valley also adds to the beauty of the location, even today.

One of the most famous of Ephesus's ancient structures, the Temple of Artemis, was not located in the center of the city as it was found in Roman times. Rather, the Artemision was a mile or so out of town. All that remains of the temple is a single pillar, which lies just to the left of the center of the picture to the right. (In the photo to the right, Ephesus lies on the other side of the two low hills in the middle of the picture, and at the bottom of the larger hill in the background. If you look carefully at the center of the picture, you can see the single pillar that remains of the Temple of Artemis. Ironically, you can see much more of this Temple in the British Museum or in the Hagia Sophia in Istanbul.)

Tomorrow, we'll begin our online photo tour of Ephesus.

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Touring Ancient Ephesus

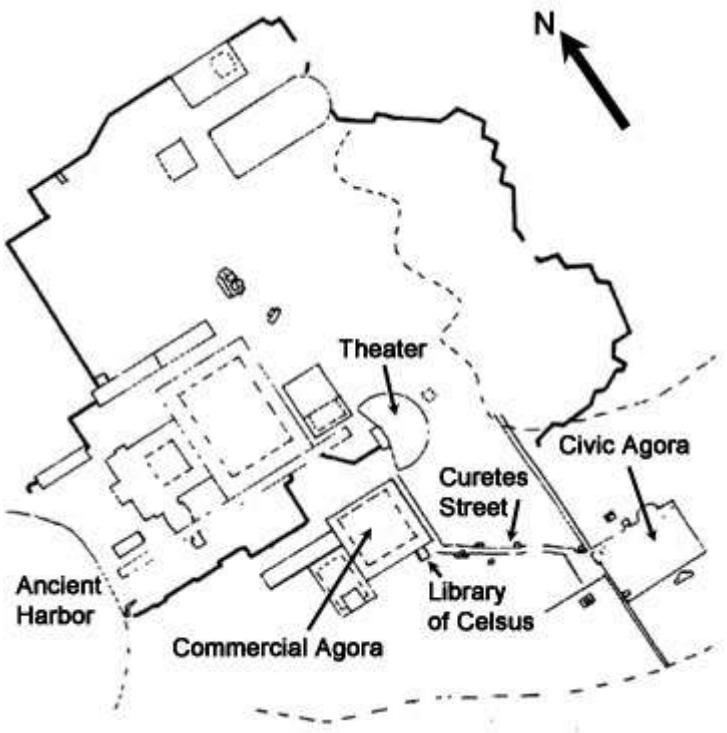
Ancient Ephesus lies in a valley between two hills. This valley slopes toward the sea. Therefore, tours of the city tend to start at the eastern end and work toward the west, which means tourists can walk downhill rather than up. This is helpful in the summer especially, when the temperatures can be quite steamy. When we were in Ephesus in 2007, the thermometer was well over 100 degrees Fahrenheit, and there is almost no shade available among the ruins. It was cooler in 2011, with temperatures in the low 90s. In the photo to the right, you can see Ephesus nestled between the hills. To the left, you can see the seats of the theatre. The white buildings are the place where many ancient houses are currently being excavated. The tour begins in the middle of the saddle.

Near the eastern entrance to ancient Ephesus you'll find plenty of vendors, some of them literally sticking their wares into your face, only a couple of inches from your nose. You can buy clothing, hats (recommended for the tour if it's hot and sunny), soft drinks, and various souvenirs. Don't bother with the supposedly authentic old coins. They're neither authentic nor old. In this location you'll see one of my favorite signs in the world: Genuine Fake Watches. You've got to commend the vendors for their honesty. But this sign raises a question: What would fake fake watches be?

The beginning of the tour of Ephesus is relatively unimpressive. For the most part, you see dozens of stones, obviously part of ancient buildings. But you won't see any restored ruins, except in the distance. Almost all of what makes Ephesus so special lies out of view, down the slope of the valley.

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



Near the beginning of the tour there was a stack of what looked like pieces of terra cotta pipe. Indeed, these sections of pipe were once part of the elaborate fresh water system for Ephesus. The Romans, who were masters of moving water around, had built aqueducts that brought water to the city. Then large pipes, pieces of which you can see in the photo to the right, moved the water around to key locations of the city (the baths, fountains, men's toilet, etc.).

Tomorrow the tour continues.

Touring Ancient Ephesus, Part 2

A tour of Ephesus usually begins, as I explained yesterday, at the eastern end of the city because from there you walk downhill rather than uphill. In the map to the right, the tour would begin just to the right of the civic agora. On this map, you can see several of the major features of the ancient Ephesus, including the two agoras (public gathering places), the theatre, and the Library of Celsus. When you're walking through Ephesus today, it seems small, like a town that might have had 5,000 residents. In fact, ancient Ephesus had perhaps as many as 200,000 residents. Many of their homes have not been excavated or refurbished. But even with all the original structures intact, a person today would be impressed by the extent to which people were crowded together in this city, as in others throughout the Roman Empire.

See also: Ephesians – Maps

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Library of Celsus is the most beautiful of the restored buildings in Ephesus, and is often the place of evening concerts and other festivities. This library, which was once one of the largest in the ancient world, was not built during the first century AD, the time of greatest interest for New Testament scholars. It was constructed in AD 135 by a man who built it in honor of his father, Celsus, who had been a governor of Asia Minor (the location of Ephesus in the Roman Empire). Today, the library consists of a rebuilt façade, without the rooms that once contained thousands of scrolls.

For students of the New Testament and early Christianity, the Library of Celsus contains an easily overlooked treasure. It was, in fact, overlooked by many of the archeologists who painstakingly rebuilt the facade of the library. On the steps leading up to the entrance of the library, there is an easily missed carving, perhaps a piece of ancient graffiti. You can see it in the photo to the right. It is a menorah, a Jewish symbol. It was carved into the steps by some unknown Jewish resident of Ephesus sometime after the building of the library. Why is this unimpressive carving so important? Because it is the only archeological evidence we have for the existence of a Jewish community in Ephesus. The book of Acts testifies to such a community and their synagogue. But, as of this time, evidence of the synagogue has not been found.

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

If your tour begins in the eastern end of Ephesus, you first walk into one of the two agoras (or public squares) of the ancient city. There's not much left of this civic agora, the place where the official business of Ephesus was once conducted. One of the buildings alongside the civic agora was the Prytaneion. This building was the center of city business. It was dedicated to the goddess Hestia, and contained the city's sacred flame that was never allowed to go out. There is not much left of the Prytaneion, apart from a couple of rebuilt pillars. It was in this location that two statues of the goddess Artemis were discovered. They are now found in the Ephesus museum. I'll have more to say about them later.

One of the highlights of the Ephesus tour is the men's toilet, found along Curetes Street. This bathroom, as we'd say in the USA, once contained about twenty places for men to do their business. It had a running water sewage system in its day. Perhaps the most surprising part of this bathroom is that the seats were placed very few inches apart, without any barriers. So a man might find himself sitting next to another man, almost touching as they used the facilities. Apparently, men used this as a place to socialize. There certainly wasn't much privacy, that's for sure. In 2007, you could sit on the ancient toilets. Today, they are now off limits so as to preserve them.

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The public [pay] toilets of Ephesus were ahead of their time!

Source: https://www.aroundtheworldl.com/2016/10/10/ephesus-ancient-ruins/

Rather than continue this blog "tour" of Ephesus, I'm going to change gears in my next post and begin to make connections between the New Testament and the ancient city.

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Ephesus in the New Testament

Early Christianity was significantly an urban movement. This might sound surprising if you're used to thinking of Christians continuing the mode of Jesus, whose ministry happened largely (but not only) in rural Galilee. Yet, when we pay close attention to the facts of Christianity in the first-century A.D., we see the prominence of cities, including Jerusalem, Antioch (in Syria), Corinth, Rome, and Ephesus.

Arguably, Ephesus was the most important city for Christians at the end of the first century. Jerusalem had pride of place at first. Rome was growing in influence in the early second century. Yet, not only was Ephesus situated rather in the center of an area in which Christianity was thriving, but also it was an important city in its own right. Moreover, it was associated with several prominent Christians, including Paul, Timothy, John, and perhaps even the Virgin Mary. (People who live near Ephesus today, along with many Roman Catholics throughout the world, believe that Mary lived just outside of Ephesus during her last days on earth. The photo to the right shows the center of Ephesus today, Curetes Street with the Library of Celsus in the distance.)

Curetes Street, the "main drag" of ancient Ephesus

Source: http://traveltripjourney.blogspot.com/2013/04/ephesus-turkey.html

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The fact that Christianity was primarily an urban movement helps to explain its rapid spread throughout the Roman world. Cities were the hubs of travel, trade, and culture. If one influenced a major city in a region, then one would also be able to influence the whole region. Thus, for example, if Paul were to establish a vital Christian presence in Ephesus, then this would spill over to other cities throughout Asia Minor.

Papyrus 46, showing portions of Galatians and Philippians

When we think of Ephesus and the New Testament, most of us would at first remember the letter of Paul called "The Letter to the Ephesians" or, simply, "Ephesians." But it turns out that the connection between this letter and Ephesus is rather tenuous. Some of the earliest manuscripts of the letter do not contain the words "in Ephesus" (en Epheso in Greek). For example, Papyrus 46, one of the oldest and most reliable manuscripts of Paul's letters, does not mention Ephesus. (The picture to the right shows part of this manuscript.) Many scholars believe that the so-called Letter to the Ephesians was originally a circular letter intended for several churches, including the church in Ephesus. This many also explain why the letter has so little in it that is uniquely Ephesian (no mention of the Temple of Artemis, for example).

The oldest references to Ephesus in the New Testament are found in Paul's First Letter to the Corinthians. There, he writes:

If with merely human hopes I fought with wild animals at Ephesus, what would I have gained by it? (1 Cor 15:32)

I do not want to see you now just in passing, for I hope to spend some time with you, if the Lord permits. But I will stay in Ephesus until Pentecost, for a wide door for effective work has opened to me, and there are many adversaries. (1 Cor 16:7-9)

Unfortunately, we don't know exactly what Paul means by fighting wild animals at Ephesus. The Ephesians were enthusiastic for games in which African animals fought against animals or people. But it seems most likely that Paul is speaking metaphorically, referring to some conflict that he had in Ephesus. Nevertheless, it does seem obvious that Paul was writing the letter we know as 1 Corinthians from Ephesus, where he was engaged in missionary work for an extended period of time. It was during this time that he must have "fought with wild animals." Perhaps Paul was referring to the conflict we read about in Acts 19. I'll turn to this in my next post in this series.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Apostle Paul in Ephesus

In my last post, I quoted a passage from Paul's first letter to the Corinthians in which he wrote, "But I will stay in Ephesus until Pentecost, for a wide door for effective work has opened to me, and there are many adversaries" (1 Cor 16:8-9). This fits perfectly with the picture painted of Paul's Ephesian ministry in Acts of the Apostles.

In Acts 18, Paul visited Ephesus briefly on his trip from Corinth back to Jerusalem (18:18-22). Verse 24 introduces a Jewish teacher named Apollos, who taught in the synagogue in Ephesus. This synagogue hasn't been located by archeologists. Apollos accurately passed on some truths about Jesus, but didn't know the whole story. So a leading Christian couple, Priscilla and Aquila, taught Apollos the what he had been missing. More fully informed, Apollos journeyed on to Corinth.

Acts 19 begins with Paul's appearance at Ephesus. First, he laid hands on some disciples who received the Holy Spirit with power (19:1-7). Next, he presented the message of the kingdom of God in the Jewish synagogue, arguing persuasively. But when most of the Jews were closed to Paul's message, he moved to the lecture hall of Tyrannus, where he continued preaching for two years. Today, we do not know exactly the location of this lecture hall. In all likelihood, it was a place where the men of Ephesus gathered for lectures on various subjects, including philosophy and religion. Ephesus was well known in the ancient world as a place of learning, and Paul would have been seen as one more philosopher with a tempting message offering transformation and immortality. (The photo to the right shows the Odeum [or Odeon] in Ephesus, a theatre that could seat more than 1,000 people. Public lectures were given here. This was also the place where the city business was done.)

The Odeum in Ephesus

Paul's ministry flourished, in part because of the power of God that brought healing and deliverance from demonic oppression. Many Ephesians who had been enamored with magical practices (what we'd call dark magic, not stage magic) renounced these practices and publicly burned their books of magic.

This sounds innocuous enough to us, but it doesn't take too much imagination to see how the success of Paul's ministry led to trouble. Magic and superstition permeated Ephesian culture, so that the burning of magic books would have seemed antisocial. It would be rather like if a whole bunch of people in my city got together and burned their their Christian books. Moreover, the people who wrote, bought, and sold books of magic would rightly have perceived an economic threat from Paul and those influenced by him.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

This latter issue, the economic danger posed by Paul, in fact led to a major brouhaha in Ephesus. I'll examine this more closely in my next post.

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Odeum

http://www.ephesustoursguide.com/ephesus/the-odeum

The Odeum [or Odeon] in Ephesus, a theatre that could seat more than 1,000 people. Public lectures were given here. This was also the place where the city business was done

Wikipedia: https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Odeon_%28building%29

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Artemis and Her Temple

In my last post, I summarized the beginning of Paul's ministry in Ephesus as it's described in Acts 19. We saw that, after first being stymied in his effort to reach out to Ephesian Jews through the synagogue, Paul switched to a lecture hall, where he experienced a more positive response to his preaching. In fact, the success of Paul's ministry led to a major disturbance in the city. In order to grasp the nature of this uproar, we must understand one of the most important facts about ancient Ephesus: it was home to the temple of Artemis.

All that's left of the temple of Artemis near ancient Ephesus
(See: Temple of Artemis Model)

In 2007, a survey of 100 million voters resulted in a new list of the Seven Wonders of the World. In its current state, the Temple of Artemis would never make such a list. But in its heyday, which includes the first century A.D., this temple was considered one of the Seven Wonders of the World. It was one of the largest temples in the world and drew visitors from far and wide.

The goddess Artemis was a combination of the Greek goddess named Artemis, the virginal goddess of the hunt, and a local goddess with a very different job identity. In Asia Minor, the region of Ephesus, this Greek goddess was combined with elements associated with the Anatolian goddess Cybele, who was associated with the earth and with fertility, and was sometimes known as the Great Mother. (Yes, the Ephesian Artemis somehow combined the virginal Artemis with Cybele, the fertile mother. The photo to the right shows a statue of Artemis that was found at Ephesus and is now prominently displayed in the Ephesian museum. The "crown" on her head is a representation of the temple. The "eggs" surrounding her midsection are perhaps some fertility symbol, though scholars don't agree on their denotation.)

Statue of Artemis of Ephesus

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Artemis is the Ephesus Museum

https://ladeetravels.blogspot.com/2012/09/selcuk-turkey-ephesus-museum-efes.html

"Beautiful Artemis" is the main attraction in this part of the Ephesus Museum.

The Seven Wonders of the Ancient World: Great Pyramid of Giza, Hanging Gardens of Babylon, Temple of Artemis at Ephesus, Statue of Zeus at Olympia, Mausoleum at Halicarnassus, Colossus of Rhodes, and the Lighthouse of Alexandria.

Yes, the "Temple of Artemis at Ephesus" was one of the Seven Wonders of the Ancient World! The Temple was first constructed in c. 550 BC and destroyed in 356 BC by arson by Herostratus. It was built again in 323 BC then destroyed by Goth plundering in AD 262. There was a model of the Temple in the center of the room at the museum, but I was totally distracted by the two statues and didn't get a photograph. I did find a photo so that you could see a model. Click here.

There are two statues of Artemis in this museum.

This is the "Great Artemis" statue. It is from the time of Trajan (a Roman Emperor).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Great Artemis' headdress has a temple on top.

Lions hug the arms (see in the lower left).

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Lions cling to her arms. You can see them on both arms. Bulls, bees, and angels on skirt.

This horse was a roof decoration from the altar.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

This statue of Artemis is named "Beautiful Artemis". Two feline animals area at her side. My research said that this was "like Cybele", but I didn't see a statue of her here. I did take a moment to read about her history, and it is quite interesting as she had a widespread cult. Enough about her (but read the scoop on her here). I also found one comment that said that scholars differ in opinion. Are those eggs, multiple breasts, or bulls testicles?

She is the Goddess of Fertility and the Hunt. She is from the time of Hadrian (Roman Emperor, adopted son of Trajan).

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

One note said "The eyeballs remain on this one", but I didn't notice that the eyeballs were missing on the other one.

The two feline animals.

She has a "necklace" made of the zodiac figures. You can clearly see the lions on her arms.

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

These are the carvings in her lower dress.

A full view of the statue.

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

A closeup of the lions on her arm.

The two Artemis statues were in a separate room, with a lot of traffic. People were kind and would wait in turn to take photos, giving the one with the camera room to get nice photos.

_____

End – Artemis at the Ephesus Museum

_____

For Ephesus, having the temple of Artemis nearby (about a mile from the main city) was a great boon. On the one hand, the presence of such a temple demonstrated the importance of Ephesus and was thought to bring special blessing upon the city. On the other hand, worshipers came from all around to visit the temple, and in so doing spent lots of money on lodging, offerings, souvenirs, and so forth.

Today, little is left of the temple of Artemis. You must use your imagination to picture its former glory. There is, however, a model of the temple in the museum which can help to fill in the blanks.

Model of temple of Artemis of Ephesus

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Model of Temple of Artemis

Source: https://www.ancient.eu/ephesos/ See More

Ironically, you can see more of the temple of Artemis in two distant locations. The British Museum in London displays portions of the pillars represented in the model to the right. A couple of large pillars, purportedly from the temple of Artemis, are integral to the Hagia Sophia in Istanbul.

Columns in the Hagia Sophia claimed to be from the temple of Artemis

Part of a pillar from the temple of Artemis, found today in the British Museum, London

Therefore, anything that threatened the prominence of Artemis and her temple would have been seen as a major threat to Ephesus itself. In my next post we'll see how this played out in Acts 19.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Paul and the Silversmiths

Now that we know something about the goddess Artemis and her importance for Ephesus, we're ready to get back to the story of Paul's ministry in this city.

As Paul's ministry began to thrive in Ephesus, a certain Demetrius became concerned. He was a silversmith who made little pieces of jewelry in the image of the goddess Artemis or, as most scholars think, of her temple. These were not souvenirs that worshipers took home with them, but rather small offerings given to the goddess when devotees visited her temple. Demetrius, noting the growing impact of Paul's ministry, gathered the other silversmiths together and presented his case:

"Men, you know that we get our wealth from this business. You also see and hear that not only in Ephesus but in almost the whole of Asia this Paul has persuaded and drawn away a considerable number of people by saying that gods made with hands are not gods. And there is danger not only that this trade of ours may come into disrepute but also that the temple of the great goddess Artemis will be scorned, and she will be deprived of her majesty that brought all Asia and the world to worship her." (Acts 19:25-27)

Notice that Demetrius was worried, first of all, about the potential loss of income if too many people were to become Christians. Second, he was worried about the loss of glory for Artemis.

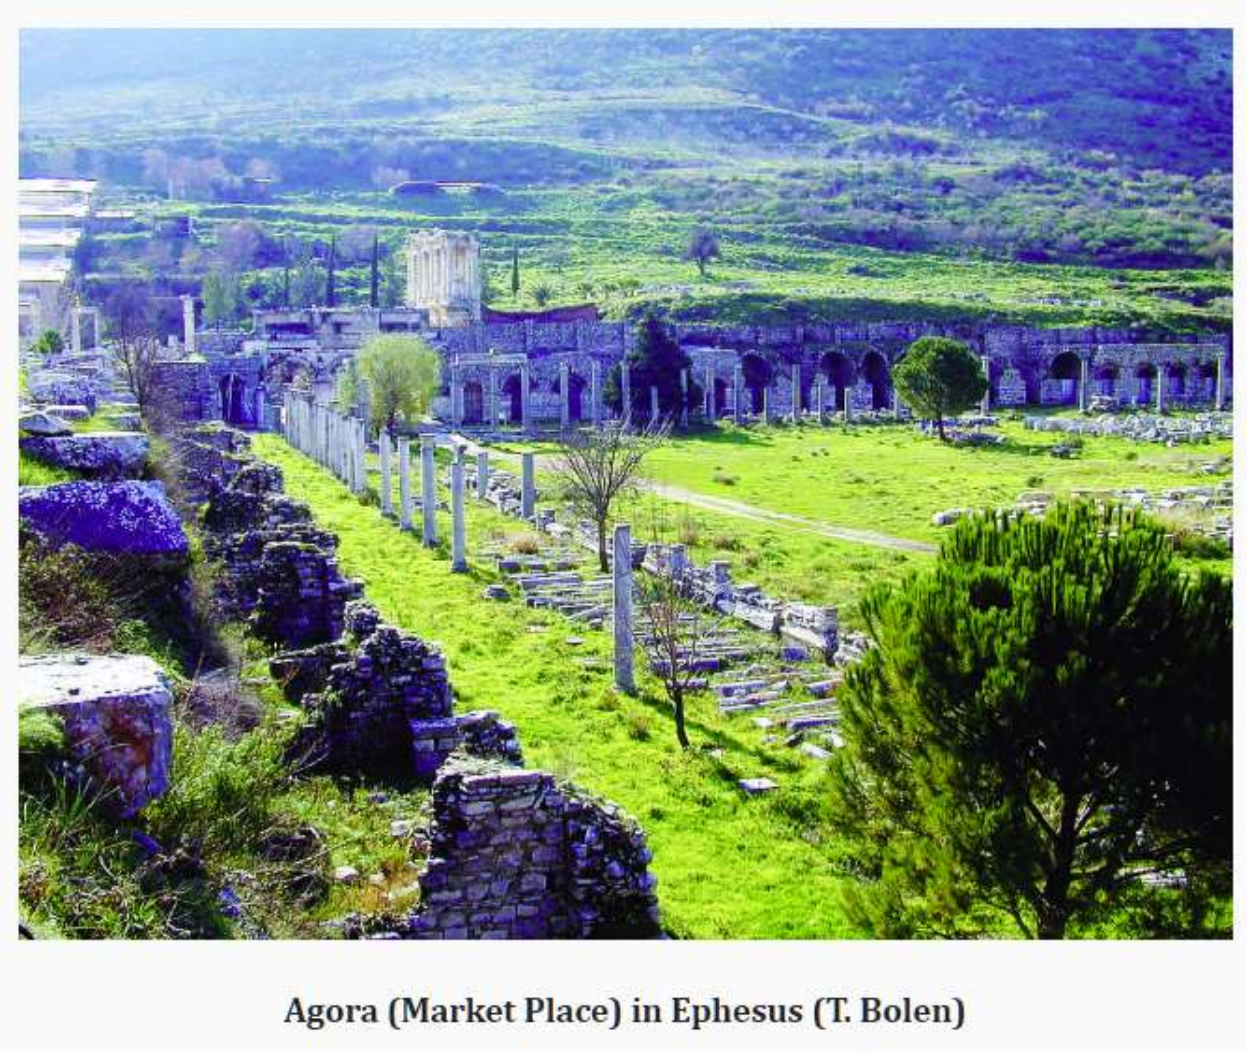
Demetrius understood something essential about Christianity, something that reflected accurate insight. He knew that when people become Christians, they stop worshiping pagan gods. While we might assume this to be true, nobody in Ephesus would have done so (besides the Jews, who were vigorous monotheists). It was very common in the ancient world for people to add new gods to their personal pantheon. It was uncommon for them to insist that there was only one true God. If Paul had offered up Jesus, not as the only Savior of the world, but simply as one more savior among many, then the Ephesians would probably have built a temple to Jesus and included him in their pagan celebrations. But Christianity was distinctive, unsettling so, from an Ephesian point of view, in that it claimed the total allegiance of followers. Thus Demetrius rightly concluded that the success of Christianity would lead to the demise of Artemis worship. (That this very thing ultimately happened in the Roman Empire is celebrated on one of the ceiling frescoes in the Vatican. Tommaso Laureti, painting in the late 16th century, represented the "Triumph of Christianity" with a shattered statue of a god before the cross of Christ.)

Tommaso Laureti, "Triumph of Christianity," late 16th century.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Though Acts doesn't tell us exactly where Demetrius made his speech, it most likely happened within the commercial agora (or marketplace), that is adjacent to the Library of Celsus. This large space is quite open today, but once would have been surrounded by colonnades, under which merchants and craftsmen sold their goods. It was a central gathering place in Ephesus, one that would be filled with people. Plus, it was near the theater, which figures prominently in the story of Paul and Ephesus.

Commercial agora in Ephesus



Demetrius's effort was successful. The enraged silversmiths began shouting praises to Artemis. They grabbed some of Paul's companions and dragged them to the theater. This theater, much of which is still intact, is an impressive structure even today. It could contain up to 25,000 people. Folks sitting in the "cheap seats" would have had an impressive view of the harbor (now just a marshy area). According to Acts, Paul wanted to go to the theater, no doubt to defend his friends. But some Christians and even some of the city officials convinced Paul that this would not be wise.

The theater in Ephesus
(above links to layout and maps)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Agora (Market Place) in Ephesus (T. Bolen)

(Source: Zondervan Bible Commentary)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The (Primary) Theater in Ephesus (see also Odeum or Odeon)

Source: http://ancientephesus.com/ephesus

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Source: http://traveltripjourney.blogspot.com/2013/04/ephesus-turkey.html

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Source: http://traveltripjourney.blogspot.com/2013/04/ephesus-turkey.html

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Source: http://traveltripjourney.blogspot.com/2013/04/ephesus-turkey.html

I'll finish up the story of Paul and the silversmiths in my next post in this series…

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Paul and the Silversmiths, Part 2

When we last left our series on Ancient Ephesus and the New Testament, the city was in an uproar. A gang of silversmiths, at the instigation of a certain Demetrius, was rioting, dragging several of Paul's colleagues to the theater. When Paul tried to go to the theater, he was dissuaded by some of other Christians and even some civic officials. It simply wasn't safe for Paul to show up in such a chaotic and dangerous environment.

Vendors in Ephesus, not far from the theatre

The description in Acts 19 of the mob in the theater is ironic, though in a way not immediately recognizable in English. It reads: "Meanwhile, some were shouting one thing, some another; for the assembly was in confusion, and most of them did not know why they had come together" (v. 32). Even in English, one can see the humor in that most in the mob didn't even know why they were there. But the word translated here as "assembly" is, in Greek, ekklesia. As you may know, this word is usually translated as "church" in the New Testament. In secular Greek, *ekkles*ia meant "assembly of people," but usually stood for the orderly gathering of citizens of a given city. So ekklesia in Acts 19:32 is doubly ironic, in that the mob surely isn't a church, and it surely isn't orderly.

At some point during the fracas a Jew named Alexander tried to speak. Though we don't know why he did this, it's most likely he was going to put some distance between the Jews of Ephesus and Paul. But Alexander was shouted down while the mob chanted: "Great is Artemis of the Ephesians!" for a couple of hours.

Finally, the town clerk (more like the mayor than the office manager), got the people quiet. He made a diplomatic speech, reassuring the crowd that Paul and company were "neither temple robbers nor blasphemers of our goddess" (v. 37). If Demetrius had a complaint, he should bring that up in an orderly way, through the courts or the proconsuls. The clerk closed by saying, "If there is anything further you want to know, it must be settled in the regular assembly" (v. 39). Here, once again, we find the use of ekklesia, now in the Greek expression en tei ennomoi ekklesiai ("in the lawful assembly").

Why would the clerk have spoken in Paul's defense, especially since it seems likely that he was a worshiper of Artemis? The answer comes in verse 40: "For we are in danger of being charged with rioting today, since there is no cause that we can give to justify this commotion." Who would charge the Ephesians with rioting? The Romans. And the

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Romans didn't ignore civic unrest because they knew it could easily turn against them. If the Ephesians were to allow a riot, Rome might very well clamp down on Ephesian freedoms and authority. No matter what the clerk actually thought of Paul and the Christians, he was eager to keep the peace. And, according to Acts 19, in this he was ultimately successful.

What Demetrius feared ultimately came to pass, though not only because of the growth of Christianity. In time, the worship of Artemis began to fade and her famed temple lost its glory. Today, you can see more interesting remnants of the Ephesian Artemision in the British Museum in London than in Ephesus itself. But this is not to say that Christianity is dominant in Ephesus and environs. Turkey is predominantly a Muslim country today, though most Turks are secular in their orientation (this may be changing, however). And the most prominent church in the area, very near the Artemision, is itself in ruins. Christian activity around Ephesus is mostly centered in a small house that is supposedly the place from which the Virgin Mary was taken to heaven. I'll say a bit more about this next time.

Part of a pillar from the temple of Artemis, found today in the British Museum, London

The House of the Virgin Mary?

For most of my life, I never gave much thought to what happened to Mary, the mother of Jesus, after his death. I figured that she went to Jerusalem, where James, one of her other sons (or stepsons, if you prefer), was a prominent early Christian leader. A good bit of ancient tradition supports this hunch, as it turns out. (See, for example, the online Catholic Encyclopedia article on "The Blessed Virgin Mary.")

It's curious that Mary received little special attention among the early Christians. In fact, her life after Jesus' death remains largely a mystery. But, when I took my first trip to Ephesus in 2007, I learned that many people believe that Mary spent her last days near this city, and that's where she died (or was taken up to heaven).

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Many tours of ancient Ephesus include a side trip to the so-called House of the Virgin Mary. This sacred site lies several miles south of Ephesus, up on the top of a mountain. Unlike barren Ephesus, Mary's house is hidden in a forest, where the temperatures are several degrees cooler and shade is ample. If you're visiting Ephesus in the summer, you'll appreciate the literal atmosphere at Mary's house.

The so-called House of the Virgin Mary near Ephesus

The evidence for Mary having spent her last days here is circumstantial and supernatural.

The circumstantial evidence is this:

• Shortly before his death, Jesus entrusted his mother to the care of the Beloved Disciple (John 19:26-27).

• Christian tradition holds that the Beloved Disciple was John.

• Christian tradition also associates John with Ephesus, where he supposedly spent the latter part of his life. It is believed that he was buried there, and that his body used to lie under the Basilica of St. John (now in ruins, as you can see in the photo to the right).

The ruins of the Basilica of St. John, near Ephesus

• It is possible that John took Mary with him to Ephesus, perhaps because Jerusalem in the late first century A.D. was not hospitable for the mother of the controversial Messiah. Or perhaps she moved to Ephesus after the destruction of Jerusalem by the Romans in A.D. 70.

The supernatural evidence is this:

• Early in the 19th century, a German nun named Anne Catherine Emmerich claimed to have visions. Among these, she "saw" the house of the Virgin Mary, and described it in great detail. Her visions were ultimately published, and near the end of the 19th century a Catholic research team found the site described by Emmerich, though she had never seen it in person. (Emmerich's writings on the death of Jesus had a profound influence on Mel Gibson and his The Passion of the Christ.)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Catholic tradition is divided on the final residence of Mary, though several popes have endorsed Mary's House as a religious shrine. A few years ago, Pope Benedict XVI visited the site, honoring it with his presence and words, though not definitively declaring it to be Mary's house.

The buildings on the site are not old enough to have been the actual dwellings of Mary. But it's certainly possible that they were built in the place and design of the original buildings. A Turkish website has several Quicktime videos that allow you to take a virtual tour of the [House of Mary] site and its buildings.

(See also: Videos about Ancient Ephesus)

One of the more interesting features of Mary's House is a prayer wall near the dwelling. Pilgrims come from all over the world to this place, and many offer special prayers. These prayers are written on small pieces of paper that are attached to the wall.

As it turns out, Christians are not the only ones who make pilgrimages to Mary's House. Many Muslims come as well, since they honor Mary as the mother of the prophet Jesus. For this reason, when Pope Benedict XVI visited Mary's House, he said, "From here in Ephesus, a city blessed by the presence of Mary Most Holy — who we know is loved and venerated also by Muslims – let us lift up to the Lord a special prayer for peace between peoples."

Prayer wall at the House of Mary near Ephesus

Did Mary actually live near Ephesus? Was this her final dwelling? I don't believe we have adequate historical grounds for deciding the question either way. But if you're ever in Ephesus, it's worth a trip up to Mary's House, especially if it's a hot day and you'd like some moments of relief.

See also*: Videos of Ancient Ephesus (and House of Mary)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

How the Wealthy Lived in Ancient Ephesus

During my last visit to Ephesus, I had the opportunity to tour the so-called “Terrace Houses,” which are stacked in three terraces on Bulbul Mountain in the center of Ephesus. Centuries ago, they were buried by landslides that were likely caused by earthquakes. The Terrace Houses are currently being excavated, with the promise of many more similar excavations yet to come.

Here are some pictures I took of the Terrace Houses (except for the first photo, which I found on WikiCommons).

View of the location of the Terrace Houses (under those white protective roofs).
http://commons.wikimedia.org/wiki/File:Kuretenstra%C3%9Fe100.jpg

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Side view of the Terraces Houses from Curetes Street

Some elements of the Terraces Houses have been well preserved. But many of the mosaics that covered the walls and floors have to be reassembled. The German headline refers to this as "The Biggest Puzzle in the World."

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Another view of the a small part of the puzzle, with results pictured on the wall

A view showing at least two of the houses being excavated

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

This close-up gives you a sense of the elaborate and beautiful frescoes that once covered the walls of these houses.

Using terra cotta pipes, the houses had indoor running hot and cold water, as well as heat.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

A mosaic of a lion on one of the floors of the Terraces houses.

If you visit Ephesus, I recommend a tour of the Terrace Houses. This requires, I believe, reservations made in advance.

Is Ephesus Greek or Roman?
https://ephesusday.com/ephesus-greek-roman-guided-tour-ephesus/

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Ancient History Encyclopedia: Ephesus (2009)

https://www.ancient.eu/ephesos/

Excerpt:

According legend, Ephesus (also Ephesos) was founded by the tribe of the Amazons, great female warriors. The name of the city is thought to have been derived from "Apasas", the name of a city in the "Kingdom of Arzawa" meaning the "city of the Mother Goddess" and some scholars maintain that the sign of the labrys, the double-axe of the mother goddess which adorned the palace at Knossos, Crete, originated in Ephesus. Ephesus was inhabited from the end of the Bronze Age onwards, but the location was changed owing to floods and the whims of various rulers. While Carians and Lelegians were among the city's first inhabitants, Ionian migrations began around 1200 BCE and Ephesus is chiefly known as a Ionian Greek city.

Greek Ephesus

The city was founded for the second time by the Ionian Androclus, son of Codrus, and the cities that were established after the Ionian migrations joined in a confederacy under the leadership of the city of Ephesus. The region was devastated during the Cimmerian invasion at the beginning of the 7th century BCE but, under the rule of the Lydian kings, Ephesus became one of the wealthiest cities in the Mediterranean world. Ephesus was a center of learning and the birthplace and home of the great Pre-Socratic philosopher Heraclitus. Women enjoyed rights and privileges equal to men and there are records of female artists, sculptors, painters and teachers. At night the streets of the city were brightly lit with oil lamps, a luxury not many cities could afford. Under the rule of King Croesus of Lydia, construction of the great Temple of Artemis at Ephesus was begun, one of the Seven Wonders of the Ancient World (destroyed, the first time, by fire in 356 BCE, the same night Alexander the Great was born). The defeat of Croesus by Cyrus, the King of Persia, brought the whole of Anatolia under Persian rule but Ephesus continued to prosper as an important port of trade. When the Ionian city-states rebelled against Persian rule in the 5th century BCE, Ephesus remained neutral and thus escaped the destruction suffered by so many other cities at the hands of the Persians.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Seven Wonders of the Ancient World were:

- the Great Pyramid at Giza, Egypt
- the Hanging Gardens of Babylon
- the Statue of Zeus at Olympia, Greece
- the Temple of Artemis at Ephesus
- the Mausoleum at Halicarnassus
- the Colossus of Rhodes
- the Lighthouse at Alexandria, Egypt

The Seven Wonders were first defined as themata (Greek for 'things to be seen' which, in today's common English, we would phrase as 'must sees') by Philo of Byzantium in 225 BCE, in his work On The Seven Wonders. Other writers on the Seven Wonders include Herodotus, Callimachus of Cyrene and Antipater of Sidon. Of the original seven, only the Great Pyramid exists today

Hellenistic Ephesus

Ephesus remained under Persian rule until liberated by Alexander the Great in 334 BCE. Upon entering Ephesus, and seeing the reconstruction of the Temple of Artemis not yet complete, Alexander offered to rebuild it. The Ephesians, however, refused his offer, claiming it was not seemly for one god to build a temple to another. Lysimachus, one of the generals of Alexander who became ruler of the region after Alexander's death, began renewal and development of the city, which he called Arsineia after his wife Arsinoe. He constructed a new harbor, built defensive walls on the slopes of the Panayýr and Bülbül mountains and moved the city approximately two miles south-west. The Ephesians, however, refused to leave their homes and the traditional site of their city so Lysimachus had the city's sewage system blocked up during a great storm, thus rendering the houses uninhabitable and forcing the citizens to move. In 281 BCE the city was re-founded under the old name of Ephesus and, again, was known as one of the most important commercial ports in the Mediterranean.

Roman Ephesus

In 129 BCE the Roman Empire acquired Ephesus according to the will left by Attalos, King of Pergamon, by which they were bequeathed his kingdom. During this time, the heavy taxes imposed by the Roman government led to the rebellion of Mithridates and, in 88 BCE, a massacre of all the Latin speaking inhabitants of the city was carried out during the storming and sack of Ephesus by the Roman army under Sulla. The city suffered severe damage in an earthquake in 17 CE. After that Ephesus became once more a very important center of trade and commerce. The historian Aristio, and others, describe Ephesus as being recognized by all the inhabitants of the region as the most important trading center in Asia. It also remained a leading political and intellectual center, boasting the impressive Celsus Library and the second school of philosophy in the Aegean.

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Celsus Library, Ephesos

From the 1st century CE onwards, Ephesus was visited repeatedly by early Christians (most notably Saint Paul, who preached and was 'booed' in the theater there), and Mary, the mother of Jesus, is said to have retired there along with Saint John (John's tomb and Mary's house may still be visited today). The Biblical Book of Ephesians is an epistle written by Paul to the Christian community at Ephesus. The city that became famous in later times, for the Cave of the Seven Sleepers, who were reputed to be seven Christian saints who were walled up in a cave above Ephesus for their faith in 'pagan times', slept for two hundred years, and emerged after Christianity had come to power, thus proving the 'truth' of the faith in the resurrection of the body.

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Artemis of Ephesus

Marble statue of the Ephesian Artemis, 125-175 CE. (Selcuk Museum, Selcuk, Turkey)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Temple of Artemis, Ephesus

The lonely reconstructed column standing on the site of the Temple of Artemis at Ephesus. The Temple of Artemis, also...

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Videos of Ancient Ephesus

Rick Stevens: Ephesus, Turkey: Ancient City [Recommended]
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=mvPCtrZ1K00 [Video] (~5 min.)

Magnificent Ancient Ruins of Ephesus, Turkey (With Facts/Figures) [Recommended]
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=9oOFOAxKo-s [Video] (~11 min.)

Virtual Walkthrough: Ephesus
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=iQqd3yrRLIU [Video] (under 12 min.)

TURKEY: the historic city of EPHESUS (EFES, ΕΦΕΣΟΣ), a complete tour https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=uPQe_0NwASQ [Video] (~55 min.)

Ephesus - A walk through guided tour of this Ancient City https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=XBJ5tSh3lgY [Video] (~50 min.)

House of the Virgin Mary - Ephesus (with Costa Magica)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=9TP8B3Q65S0 [Video] (under 5 min.)

2010 10 16 Virgin Mary and St John, Ephesus, Turkey https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Oqk3foFuWoI [Video] (~13 min.)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Ancient City of Ephesus

http://ancientephesus.com/ephesus

Ephesus is an amazing ancient city which was established by Greeks and enlarged by Romans. During its history city was an important metropolitan of ancient world.

Besides being an important ancient settlement, Ephesus is also the most visited ancient city of Modern Turkish Republic. From all over the world people come Ephesus to feel breeze of history.

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Ancient City of Ephesus History

Ephesus founded by Athens as a colony in the 10th century BC. When it was first founded, people dedicated city to Goddess Artemis who is known as maiden huntress goddess of Greek culture.

Artemis is more than this in Ephesus as Ephesus is not only a Greek settlement but also it was an Anatolian settlement. Artemis was goddess of Fertility, goddess of giving birth shortly; Artemis was the Mother Goddess of Ephesus who controls every single inch of city.

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

During the Classical Greek era Ephesus was one of the 12 cities of the Ionian League. The city flourished after it was given to the Roman Republic by Greek King Attalos III in 133 BCE.

During Roman Empire era, Ephesus enlarged and flourished so lived its golden age and became one of the biggest city of ancient world. Ephesus economy was fed by port trade and idol trade of Artemis. As Ephesus dedicated to mother goddess Artemis, Ephesians built a gigantic temple for her and this temple became centre of her belief, sure it help a lot to cities economy too.

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

This city was the one of the gate of Asia to Europe this opportunity made Ephesus also an early biblical city of Christianity. During 1.A.d city was visited by St. Paul and St. John. During missionary visits apostles Christianized the city of Ephesus. Sure, it was not easy and many people were persecuted by pagan believers to protect Artemis culture and gigantic income of Artemis idol trade.

In the years Ephesus became one of the bishop of Christianity, and survived long years as a Christian city.

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Ephesus was destroyed by Goths during its history, also local river (Cayster River (Küçük Menderes)) silted up the port of city. Big earthquakes and malarial mosquitoes finally finished Ephesus sometime between the 6th and 10th century. The site was completely abandoned after the 14th century. After city was abandoned, it was covered naturally in time and most of the city was buried by dust and dirt.

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Archaeological research in Ephesus started in 1863, when British architect John Turtle Wood, sponsored by the British Museum, began to search for the Artemision. In 1869 he discovered the pavement of the temple and stopped excavation in 1874. In 1895 German archaeologist Otto Benndorf resumed excavations. In 1898 Benndorf founded the Austrian Archaeological Institute which plays a leading role in Ephesus today.

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Ephesus: Astounding Ancient Greek and Roman Ruins

https://www.aroundtheworldl.com/2016/10/10/ephesus-ancient-ruins/

The Great Theater of Ephesus could hold 25,000 spectators!

The Temple of Hadrian has such pleasing lines.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The public [pay] toilets of Ephesus were ahead of their time!

Arches next to the Library: the Gate of Augustus.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The steep stairs of the Great Theater.

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Ephesus – A Walk Through Roman & Greek History

https://www.zewanderingfrogs.com/ephesusa-walk-through-roman-greek-history/

The main “street”, the Curetes Way, heading gently down the hill to the Library of Celcus. Walking by former shops siding the way, picturing Romans and Greeks alike shopping along for faraway exotic wine or precious food felt almost real.

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

We carried on by the Marble Road, leading from the Library to the Great Theater. A beautiful road made of the same name material, you can still see some stones featuring gladiators, and other scenes picturing the ancient life. The Theater, located on the slope of the Panyair Dagi mountain, is a Roman reconstruction of around 41 to 117 AD and contains 25,000 seats. With amazing acoustic features, performances are still hosted in the ancient setting.

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Moving along Harbor Street, also known as Arcadian Way, we could imagine ancient shops and busy patrons walking along the 0.3 miles long (530 meters) and 36 feet wide (11 meters) street, a testament of Ephesus as an important commercial hub.

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

We made our way to the Temple of Artemis but not much is left today of the temple, one of the Seven Wonders of the Ancient World. A lone column standing in the middle of an abandoned field, with the remaining of a people where a couple of ducks wander freely – that's basically it. Most of the few fragments discovered by the British Museum's archaeological excavation of the 1870s are now in the London museum, or in the Istanbul Archaeological Museum. The oldest remain found dates around 550 BC, and showed that the temple was initially surrounded by 36 columns, before being burnt by a fire in 356 BC. Rebuilt and expanded in the 2nd century BC to include 127 columns. As for the earlier temple, this one was also destroyed by another fire and by an earthquake, the final strike came around 268 AD by raiding Goths. But the current swampy and unmaintained aspect of the area did not leave much place for the imagination unfortunately.

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Temple of Artemis in Ephesus; one of the Seven Wonders of the Ancient World (T. Bolen)

Source: Zondervan Bible Commentary

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Ephesus – Apostle Paul's Missionary Journeys

The Theater in Ephesus

The above great theater of Ephesus was started under Lysimachus in the third century B.C. It could hold twenty-five thousands spectators and was the largest outdoor theatre in the ancient world. It exhibited fights between wild beasts and between beasts and men.

Ephesus was the capital and premier city of Asia Minor's western region (known as proconsular Asia). It was the Athenians who initially colonized the city, which is located near the mouth of the Cayster river (and opposite the island of Samos). It was famous for possessing a Temple dedicated to a pagan goddess named Diana. This pagan shine is generally considered one of the seven wonders of the ancient world. For many years during the Roman period the city was considered the second largest populated area of the Roman Empire (the largest being the empire's capital city of Rome). In the first century B.C. the city had a population of more than 250,000, making it the second largest city in the WORLD.

The Apostle Paul, after staying in Corinth for a year and a half, travels to Ephesus in the spring of 52 A.D. The journey to the city, with friends Priscilla and Aquila, is considered part of what is called Paul's second evangelistic or missionary journey. Although he (likely) starts the first Christian church in the city he stays for only a short period.

18. And after Paul had remained there many days, he took leave of the brethren and sailed away to Syria, and with him Priscilla and Aquila. Now Paul had shorn his head in Cenchrea because he had made a vow. 19. And he came to Ephesus, and left them there; but he himself went into the synagogue and reasoned with the Jews. 20. And when they asked him to remain with them for a longer time, he did not consent, 21. But took leave of them, saying, "I must by all means keep the feast that is coming at Jerusalem; but I will return again to you, God willing . . . " (Acts 18:18 - 21, HBFV)

During Paul's third missionary journey he returns to the city and lives in it for almost 3 1/2 years. Shortly after arriving in the city Paul runs across some believers who, though baptized to repentance by John the

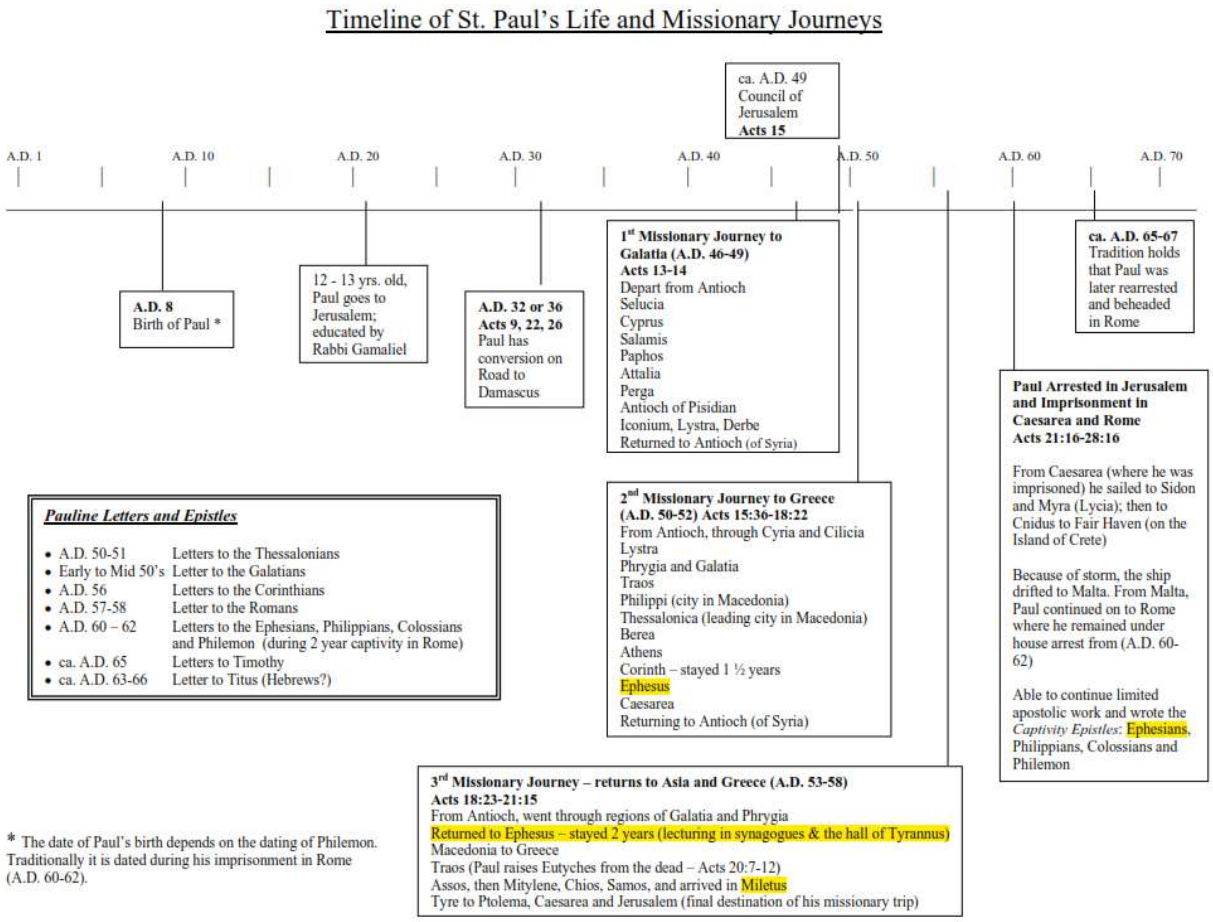
 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Baptist, never received or even knew about God's spirit. He rectifies the situation by rebaptizing the twelve men and laying hands of them in order for them to finally receive the spirit.

1. Now it came to pass that while Apollos was in Corinth, Paul traveled through the upper parts and came to Ephesus; and when he found certain disciples, 2. He said to them, "Did you receive the Holy Spirit after you believed?" And they said to him, "We have not even heard that there is a Holy Spirit." 3. Then he said to them, "Unto what, then, were you baptized?" And they said, "Unto the baptism of John."

4. And Paul said, "John truly baptized with a baptism unto repentance, saying to the people that they should believe in Him Who was coming after him - that is, in Jesus, the Christ." 5. And after hearing this, they were baptized into the name of the Lord Jesus. 6. Now when Paul laid his hands on them, the Holy Spirit came upon them, and they spoke with other languages and prophesied. (Acts 19: 1 - 6, HBFV)

Ephesus is also the first of seven churches residing in Asia Minor given a spiritual evaluation directly from God.



Acts 15:36 – 20:38

See also*: Ephesians – Maps

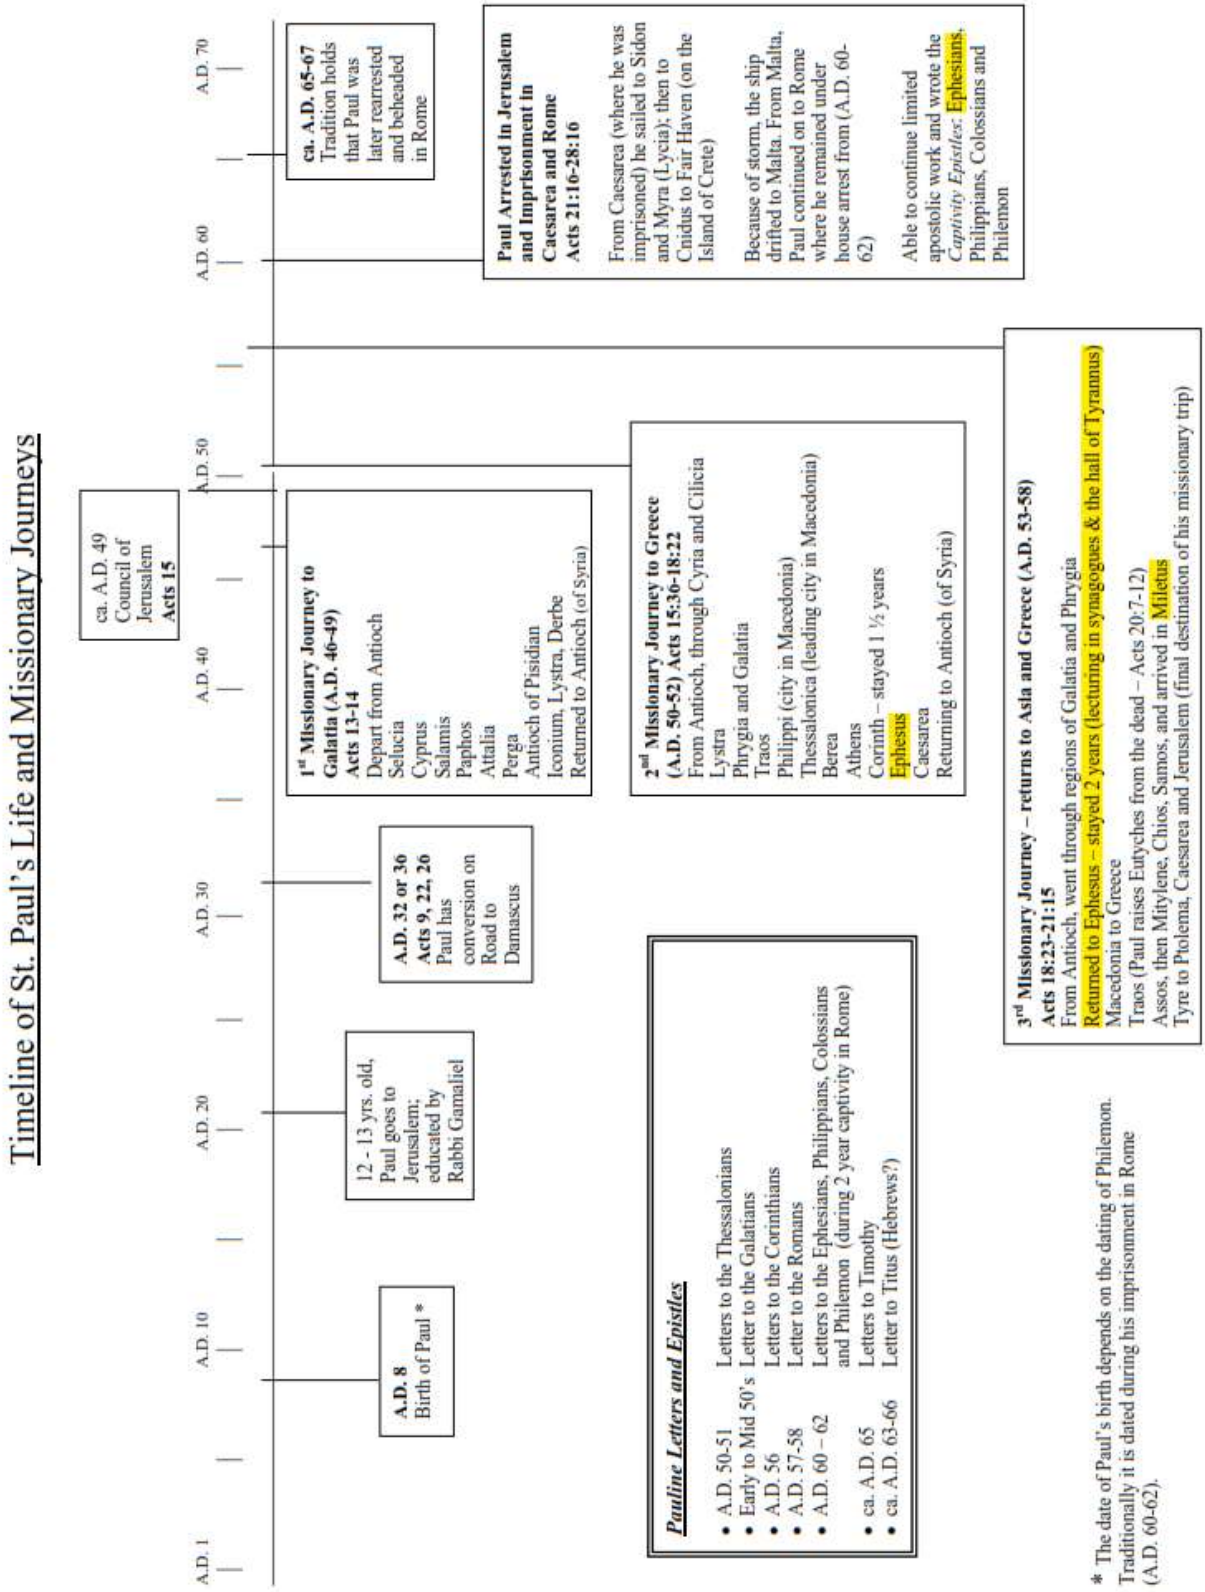
 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Timeline of St. Paul's Life and Missionary Journeys

https://static1.squarespace.com/static/569543b4bfe87360795306d6/t/577d67356b8f5b54343a8d6e/1467836213293/st._paul_timeline.pdf [PDF]



Note: Dates are approximate. Current scholarship dates Paul's letter to the Galatians around the A.D. 48-49 range.

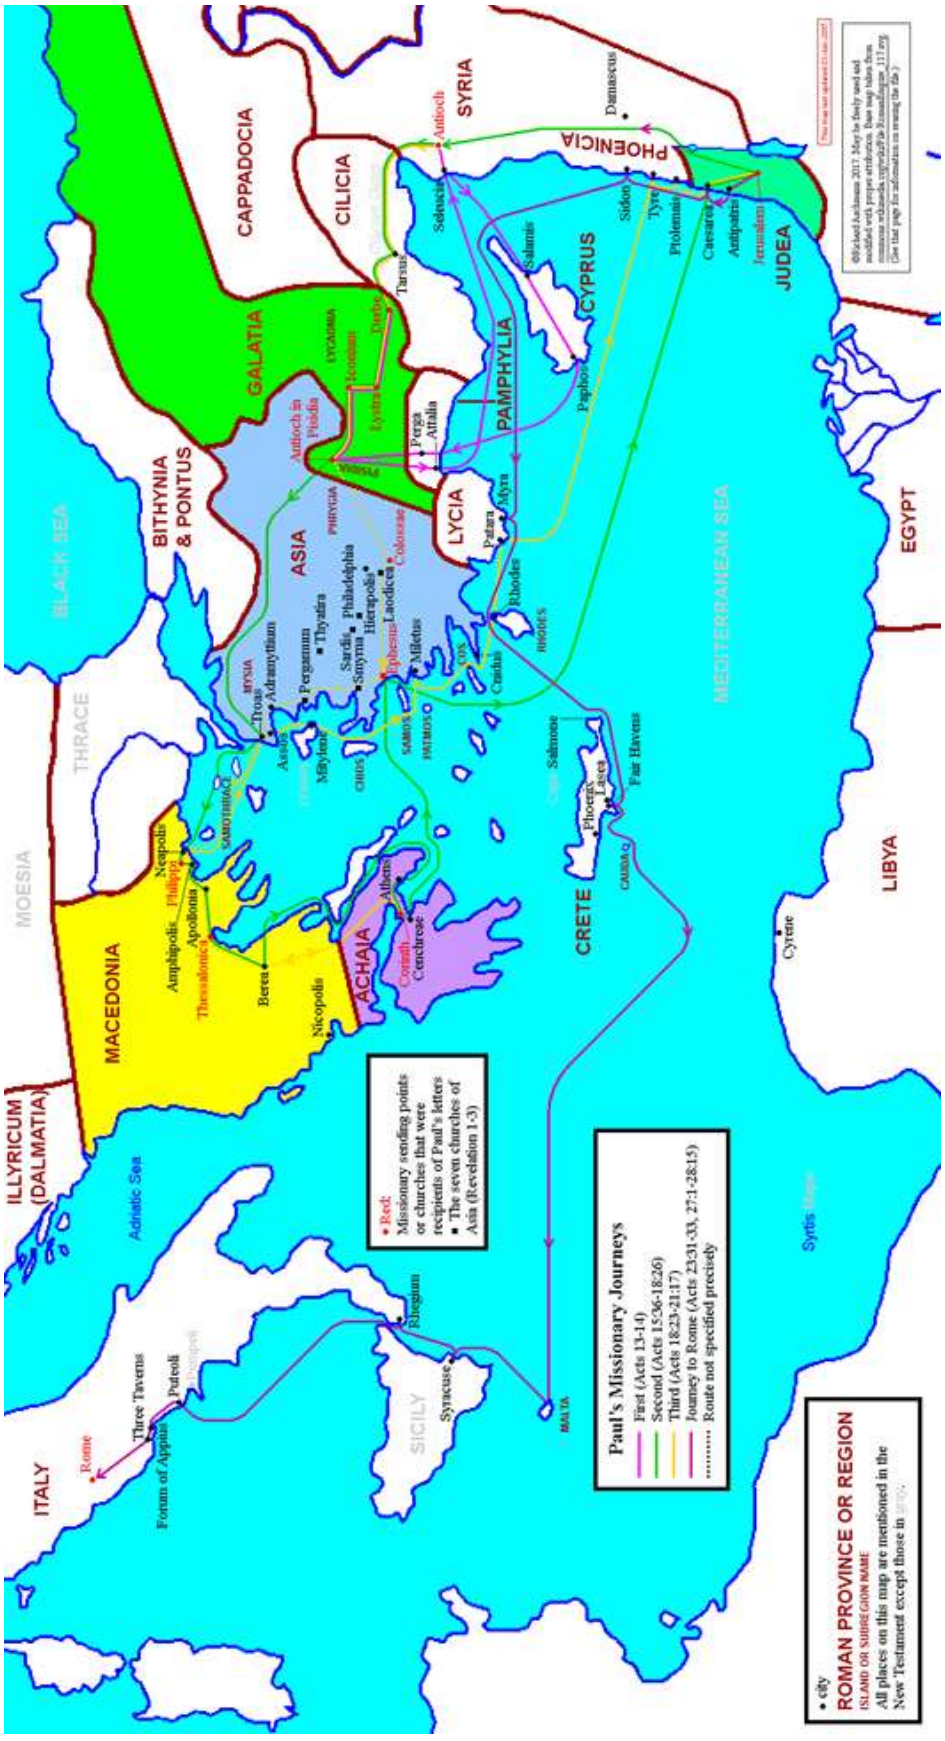
See next page for larger view…

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

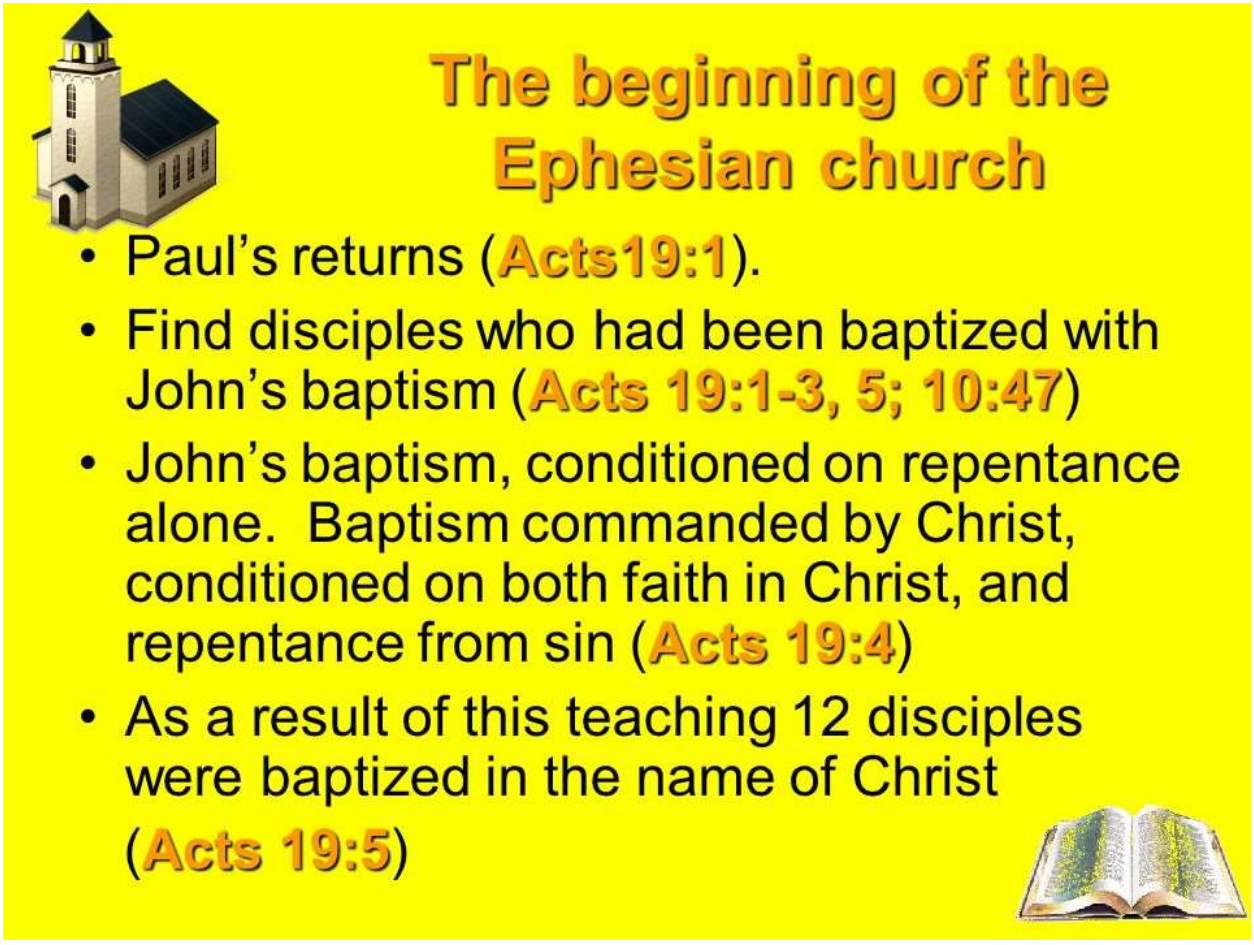
 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Chronology and Locations of the Writing of Acts and Paul's Letters



http://www.aschmann.net/BibleChronology/WherePaul%27sLettersWereWritten-changes%20since%202017-06-23.pdf [PDF]

See next page for larger view…



Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

http://slideplayer.com/slide/258714/

Acts 15:36 – 20:38

5 1 While Apollos was in Corinth, Paul passed through the interior regions and came to Ephesus, where he found some disciples. 2 He said to them, "Did you receive the Holy Spirit when you became believers?" They replied, "No, we have not even heard that there is a Holy Spirit." 3 Then he said, "Into what then were you baptized?" They answered, "Into John's baptism." 4 Paul said, "John baptized with the baptism of repentance, telling the people to believe in the one who was to come after him, that is, in Jesus." 5 On hearing this, they were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus. 6 When Paul had laid his hands on them, the Holy Spirit came upon them, and they spoke in tongues and prophesied — 7 altogether there were about twelve of them. 8 He entered the synagogue and for three months spoke out boldly, and argued persuasively about the kingdom of God. 9 When some stubbornly refused to believe and spoke evil of the Way before the congregation, he left them, taking the disciples with him, and argued daily in the lecture hall of Tyrannus This continued for two years, so that all the residents of Asia, both Jews and Greeks, heard the word of the Lord. (NRSV) Acts 19:1-10

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

PAUL'S FAREWELL TO THE EPHESIANS

A.D. 66. Miletus.

Luke: Acts 20: 17-19, 22, 25, 32-38.

From Miletus he (Paul) sent to Ephesus and called for the elders of the church.

And when they had come to him, he said to them: “You know, from the first day that I came to Asia, in what manner I always lived among you, serving the Lord with all humility, with many tears and trials which happened to me by the plotting of the Jews; how I kept back nothing that was helpful, but proclaimed it to you, and taught you publicly and from house to house, testifying to Jews, and also to Greeks, repentance toward God and faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ.

“And see, now I go bound in the spirit to Jerusalem, not knowing the things that will happen to me there, except that the Holy Spirit testifies in every city, saying that chains and tribulations await me. But none of these things move me; nor do I count my life dear to myself, so that I may finish my race with joy, and the ministry which I received from the Lord Jesus, to testify to the gospel of the grace of God.

“And indeed, now I know that you all, among whom I have gone preaching the kingdom of God, will see my face no more.

“Therefore I testify to you this day that I am innocent of the blood of all men. For I have not shunned to declare to you the whole counsel of God.

“Therefore take heed to yourselves and to all the flock, among which the Holy Spirit has made you overseers, to shepherd the church of God* which He purchased with His own blood.

“For I know this, that after my departure savage wolves will come in among you, not sparing the flock. Also from among yourselves men will rise up, speaking perverse things, to draw away the disciples after themselves. Therefore watch, and remember that for three years I did not cease to warn everyone night and day with tears.

“So now, brethren, I commend you to God and to the word of His grace, which is able to build you up and give you an inheritance among all those who are sanctified.

“I have coveted no one's silver or gold or apparel. Yes, you yourselves know that these hands 146* have provided for my necessities, and for those who were with me. I have shown you in every way, by laboring like this, that you must support the weak.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

And remember the words of the Lord Jesus, that He said, ‘It is more blessed to give than to receive.’”

And when he had said these things, he knelt down and prayed with them all. Then they all wept freely, and fell on Paul's neck and kissed him, sorrowing most of all for the words which he spoke, that they would see his face no more. And they accompanied him to the ship.

Footnotes

146:* By tent-making. The custom of the Jewish rabbis was to acquire a mechanical trade. Paul's was tent-maing.

Extra Note 1:

Distance between Miletus and Ephesus: 63 miles

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

See also*: Ephesians – Maps

Ephesians – Paul's Journeys / Timeline

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The photo below shows the ruins of the large Harbor Monument which was built originally in 63 B.C. This monument was at the end of the Lions' Harbor, one of four harbors at Miletus.

Ruins of the large harbor at Miletus. Photo by Ferrell Jenkins.

At this harbor, or somewhere very near, Paul's ship docked. After his meeting with the elders from Ephesus, they accompanied him to the ship for his departure to Jerusalem.

[Source: http://ferrelljenkins.wordpress.com/2012/05/07/paul-stopped-at-miletus/]

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Lion Harbor Monument

Miletus was located on a small peninsula that jutted from the south into the bay of the Meander River. The ancient bay made an obstacle for direct land travel from Miletus to Ephesus. Today, Miletus is 5-6 miles (9-10 km) away from the Aegean Coast because silt has filled the bay. Direct travel between Miletus and Ephesus is now possible on dry land. The southeastern extremity of the ancient bay is now a lake (Bafa Golu).

[Source: http://www.bibleplaces.com/miletus.htm]

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

MILETUS [SMITH]: (Acts 20:15,17) less correctly called MILETUM in (2 Timothy 4:20)

Miletus lay on the coast, 36 miles to the south of Ephesus, a day's sail from Trogyllium. (Acts 20:15)

Moreover, to those who are sailing from the north it is in the direct line for Cos. The site of Miletus has now receded ten miles from the coast, and even in the apostles' time it must have lost its strictly maritime position.

Miletus was far more famous five hundred years before St. Paul's day than it ever became afterward. In early times it was the most flourishing city of the Ionian Greeks. In the natural order of events it was absorbed in the Persian Empire.

After a brief period of spirited independence, it received a blow from which it never recovered, in the siege conducted by Alexander when on his eastern campaign. But still it held, even through the Roman period, the rank of a second-rate trading town, and Strabo mentions its four harbors.

At this time it was politically in the province of Asia, though Caria was the old ethnological name of the district in which it was situated. All that is left now is a small Turkish village called Melas, near the site of the ancient city.

MILETUS [ISBE]: mi-le'-tus (Miletos): A famous early Ionian Greek city on the coast of Caria, near the mouth of the Meander River, which, according to Acts 20:15--21:1, and 2 Timothy 4:20 (the King James Version [KJV] "Miletum"), Paul twice visited.

In the earliest times it was a prominent trading post, and it is said that 75 colonies were founded by its merchants. Among them were Abydos, Cyzicus and Sinope.

In 494 BC, the city was taken by the Persians; it was recovered by Alexander the Great, but after his time it rapidly declined, yet it continued to exist until long after the Christian era. In the history of early Christianity it plays but a little part.

The Meander brings down a considerable amount of sediment which it has deposited at its mouth, naturally altering the coast line. The gulf into which the river flows has thus been nearly filled with the deposit. In the ancient gulf stood a little island called Lade; the island now appears as a mound in the marshy malarial plain, and Palatia, the modern village which stands on the site of Miletus, is 6 miles from the coast.

Without taking into account the great changes in the coast line it would be difficult to understand Acts 20:15-21, for in the days of Paul, Ephesus could be reached from Miletus by land only by making a long detour about the head of the gulf. To go directly from one of these cities to the other, one would have been obliged to cross the gulf by boat and then continue by land. This is what Paul's messenger probably did. The direct journey may now be made by land.

Miletus has been so ruined that its plan can no longer be made out. Practically the only remaining object of unusual interest is theater, the largest in Asia Minor (originally seating 5,300 in the Hellinistic period, later expanded to 25,000 seats in the Roman period), which was not built in a hollow of the hillside, as most ancient theaters were, but in the open field.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Additional references:

The Bible Timeline
http://timeline.biblehistory.com/home

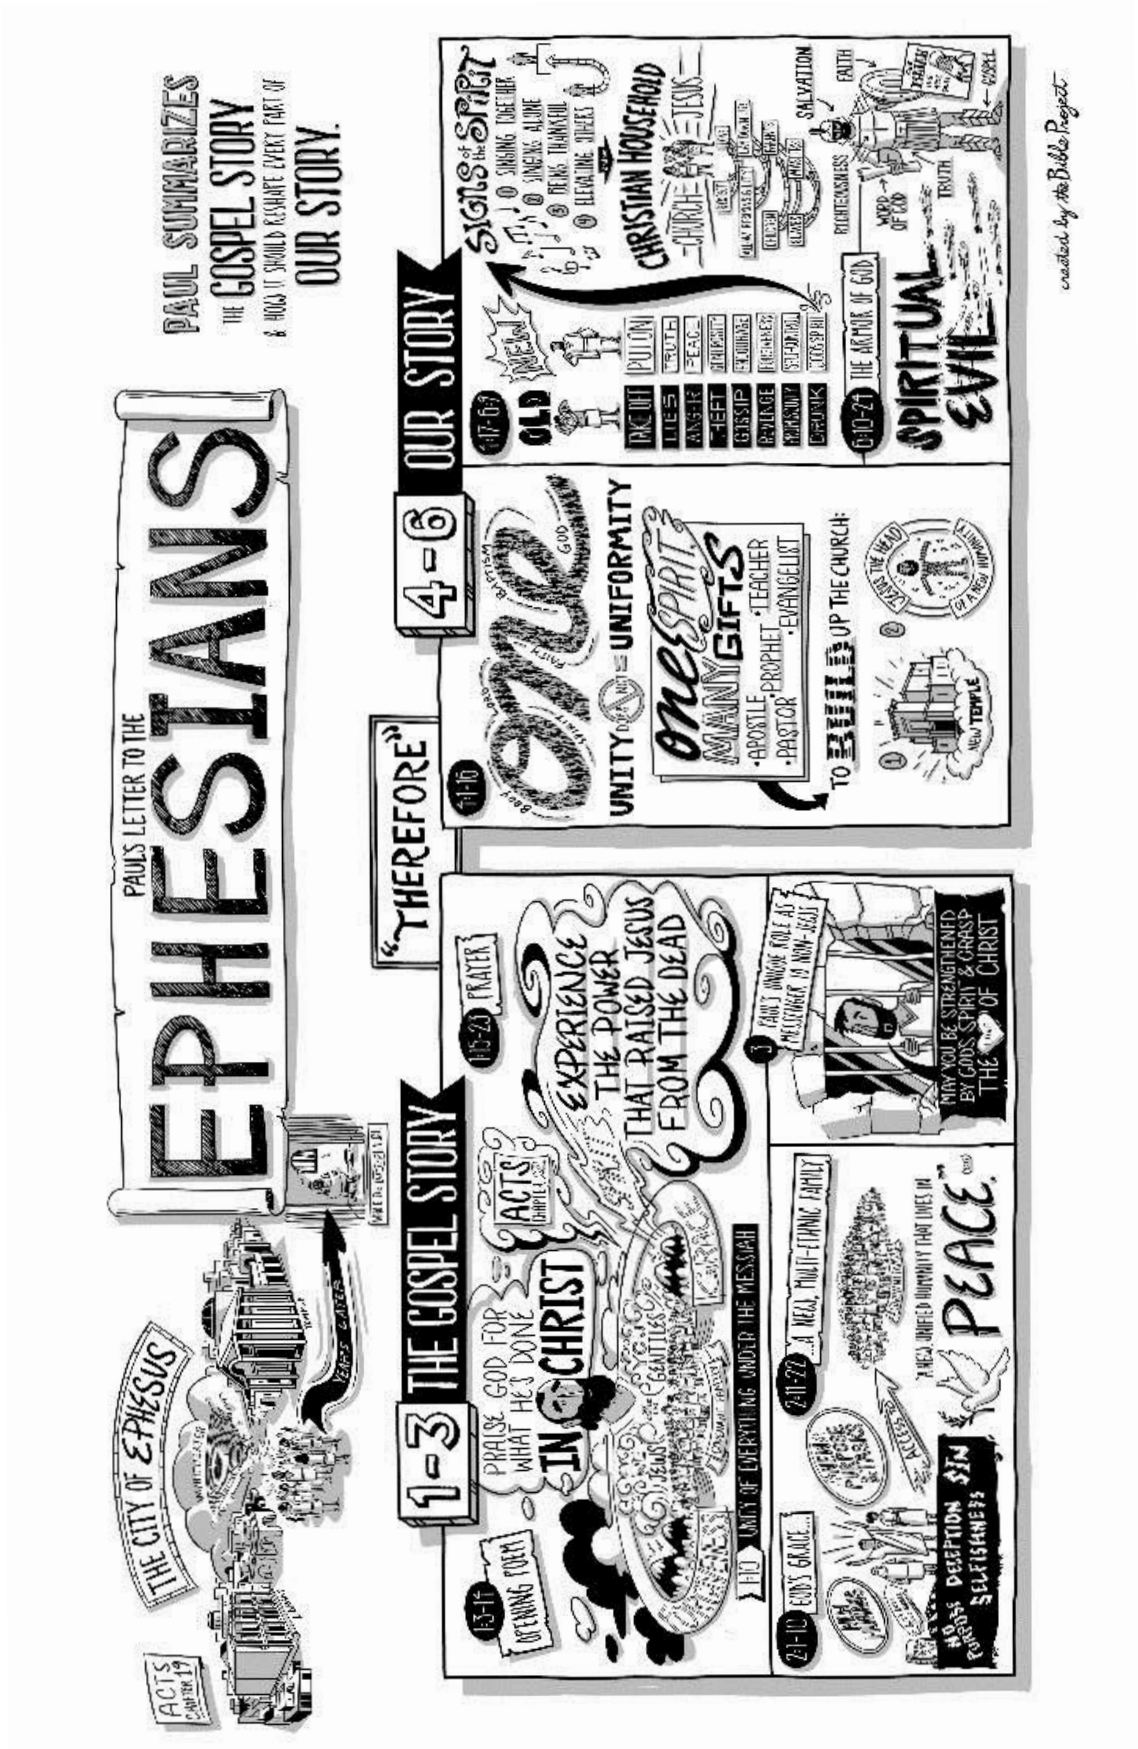
Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Bible Project: Ephesians

https://thebibleproject.com/explore/ephesians/

https://d1bsmz3sdihplr.cloudfront.net/media/Posters%20Download/55-Ephesians-FNL.jpg (Poster)



https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Y71r-T98E2Q [Video] [Recommended]

See next page for larger view…

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Welcome, Introduction and Overview by N.T. Wright

N. T. Wright: Welcome to Study of Ephesians (2016)
http://ntwrightonline.org/portfolio-items/ephesians/ [links to video]

Overview of Ephesians in 15 Minutes by N. T. Wright (2010)
https://mysteryoffaithblog.com/2010/09/27/n-t-wright-overview-of-ephesians-in-15-minutes/ [links to video]

Full Version (of Chapel address presented at Wheaton College Theology Conf., 2010)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=WCRMRKSiV2c

See more re*: Wheaton College Conference (2010)

Why Ephesians? (audio-only portion of above overview, with added slides and sounds)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=-9BBwS91rzU [Video]

Theological Journeying: N.T. Wright re: Ephesians, Predestination, Justification
https://stevenedwardharris.com/category/theology-biblical/n-t-wright/

See more NT Wright on Predestination

The Letter to the Ephesians (N.T. Wright) (2013) [Recommended]
https://ojs.st-andrews.ac.uk/index.php/TIS/article/view/1215 [Downloadable as a PDF]

Main Journal Page: https://ojs.st-andrews.ac.uk/index.php/TIS/issue/view/124

See also*: The Bible Project: Ephesians

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Re: N. T. Wright on Ephesians - Ecclesiology and Justification

http://21stcenturyreformation.blogspot.com/2010/04/n-t-wright-on-ephesians-ecclesiology.html

Excerpt:

It stuns me as I reflect how many times I have read the book of Ephesians and have been unable to incorporate Paul's use of the word "church" in to the themes of this great book. But if you read the book of Ephesians and start with the assumption that Ephesians is about the church, it all comes into focus.

Think about Paul's use of the word "mystery". I have always been dumbfounded by this theme. Paul says the mystery of the gospel has been revealed to him. As we read we are anticipating Paul to state the mystery clearly and we expect the mystery to be that the Messiah died for sins that we could be reconciled to God. Is not this the great mystery? But alas, Paul's great mystery, the reason he was called is not to proclaim that individuals are justified, but the great mystery is > the administration of the mystery which for ages has been hidden in God who created all things;[10]so that the manifold wisdom of God might now be made known through the church to the rulers and the authorities in the heavenly places.

The mystery is the wisdom of God in reconciling both Jews and Gentiles into one church. If you follow the logic of Ephesians the great truth is that justification produces one unified church. Christ has taken away the dividing wall that was the Law and its ordinances and made one body.

When Paul speaks of marriage he says, "This is a great mystery, But I am not talking about you and your spouse. I am talking about the great mystery of Christ and the Church. Not Christ and the individual, not about marriage, this paragraph of scripture is about Christ and the church, the great mystery. This is ecclesiology!!!

So what is the point. The point is that the purpose of God, the great purpose, is to build a new temple, the church, in our day. This era is the church age and yet we have a low view of the church. God's glory is not just through "life transformation" but church transformation.

I had a discussion with a young man the other day. He was talking about how people are planning on re-building the temple in Jerusalem and his take was that therefore the end is near. I said in response "but in the New Testament the new temple is the church. Haven't christians been rebuilding the temple for 2000 years. We are the third temple". Yeah, but the temple is going to be built in Jerusalem and then the end will come, he said. What part of "we are the temple don't you understand". My friends the radical wonderful beautiful new temple that is being built to the glory of God is us. Paul saw it and it was this vision that drove him in his journey's.

That's Paul's perspective and without understanding this perspective we will not understand the radical implications and challenge of the New Covenant. There are many more references to the church in Ephesians but that will have to be for another post.

See also: Ephesians – Welcome / Introduction and Overview – N.T. Wright

Church (Ekklesia): Local and Universal

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

[Go to Index]
Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only
[Go to Top - TOC]

Ephesians, NOT Romans, Represents Paul's Theology [Recommended]

https://timgombis.com/2013/01/22/ephesians-not-romans-represents-pauls-theology/

I've been claiming that Romans is a pastoral letter from Paul written to resolve a developing conflict in the Roman church (or, network of house churches). Paul's arguments, therefore, are directed to that end—to bring about unity among all those in Christ, both Jewish and non-Jewish.

This letter is often regarded, however, as Paul's systematic theology. Near the end of his apostolic career, on this scenario, Paul sits down to write his magnum opus—his fullest statement of the gospel. Here's how he regards all humanity under judgment, the justification of the ungodly by grace through faith, the mechanics of sanctification, how election works, and how Christians ought to behave themselves.

The Christian church—at least in the West, and especially Protestants—has read Paul through the lens of Romans. We have historically regarded this letter as the center of Paul's theology.

I don't think this is right. Inasmuch as we can speak of a "center" of Paul's theology and insofar as any extant NT letter represents that, I think Ephesians is a better candidate. Among other reasons, here are just a few:

First, Romans is situational while Ephesians isn't. Paul argues as he does in Romans because he's trying to resolve a conflict. Many of his statements are directed to that end, and when they're taken out of their communicative context and transformed into abstract theological principles, they give a distorted picture of Paul's theology.

Ephesians, on the other hand, isn't situational. It's probably a circular letter that Paul intended to be read to a range of churches in Asia Minor, informing them of what God has done in Christ and how they can participate in that. Because Paul writes to give multiple Christian communities a broad understanding, we can say that Ephesians represents Paul's basic gospel proclamation (i.e., Paul's "theology").

Second, and along that line, the argumentative trajectory of Romans isn't replicated in any other NT letter. That is, when Paul writes to other churches, he doesn't reproduce the shape of his presentation in Romans. Galatians is somewhat similar because of a similar situation, but even here, there are significant differences in what he says.

The basic shape of Ephesians, on the other hand, is replicated in Colossians. Now, most NT scholars have argued that these letters are post-Pauline productions and likely copied from each other, so I know I'm assuming that both are authentically Pauline. One could just as easily argue, however, that Ephesians represents Paul's fundamental proclamation—his basic "theology." When he writes a letter of welcome and introduction to the Colossians—a church he didn't found and hasn't visited—he articulates his basic understanding of the faith. And this, of course, is nearly identical to Ephesians.

Third, when Luke, Paul's ministry colleague, sketches Paul's proclamation, he has him repeatedly proclaiming Jesus' resurrection, ascension, and current reign as cosmic lord. I've argued elsewhere that this is precisely what drives Paul's argument in Ephesians, with Eph. 1:19-23 as the thesis statement.

As I said, I'm making some assumptions about authorship here, and much more must be said to settle things conclusively, but I think a better case can be made that Ephesians, not Romans, represents Paul's understanding of the gospel. I'm not alone on this limb, by the way—N. T. Wright and Luke Timothy Johnson have made similar suggestions.

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Ephesians: Purpose, Background and Structure

http://mattdabbs.com/2014/05/12/ephesians-purpose-background-and-structure/

Excerpt:

City of Ephesus

- Second in importance only to Rome
- Made capital of Asia (Turkey)
- Some say up to 250,000 in Ephesus but probably too high…more like 50-60k
- Home of the temple of Artemis (one of the 7 wonders of the world) and that is reflected in Acts 19:24
- Ephesus was a city that had a lot of magic and idolatry (Acts 19:17-20) and the letter to the Ephesians often reflects that in Paul's discussion of spiritual forces at work in the world and the supremacy of Christ over them: (1:18-23, 2:2-3, 6:10-12)

Paul's activity surrounding Ephesians

Paul took 3 missionary journeys and went to Ephesus near the end of the first journey and then at the start of the second.

- Journey #1 – Antioch to Cyrpus to Asia Minor (Turkey) and back to Antioch (with Barnabas)
- Jerusalem council – Acts 15 (48/49 AD) dealing with how to bring Gentile Christians into the new covenant
- Journey #2 Jerusalem (49) to Antioch (dispute over John Mark) – Barnabas carries on with John Mark and Paul picks up Silas – Derbe – Lystra (meet Timothy) – Philippi – Athens – Corinth (Priscilla and Aquila – followed him on to Ephesus) – Ephesus – Caesarea – Antioch (1 year)
- Journey #3 – Galatia – Ephesus (2 years see Acts 19:10 – wrote Corinthians during this time) – Macedonia – Achaea – Philippi – Troas – Miletas – Tyre – Caesarea – Jerusalem (arrested)
- Imprisoned in Caesarea (2 years)
- Transferred to prison in Rome (2 years) – ends book of Acts

Tradition says Paul was released from prison to do further ministry but was imprisoned again by Nero and executed. The book of Acts doesn't tell us what happened to Paul because Acts isn't Paul's story. Acts is the story of the fulfillment of Acts 1:8, that the Gospel is to go to the ends of the earth and Acts ends with the Gospel going to Rome. So Paul was in Ephesus twice, the second time staying 2 years (third missionary journey). He established this church and knew these Christians.

- Acts 19:1-2 – when he got to Ephesus there were already some believers there (from his 2nd journey?)
- Acts 19:8ff – Paul teaches the Ephesian Jews about Jesus for 3 months – mixed results (19:9 but 19:17-18)
- 20:1 – Paul left the disciples there and went on his way to Macedonia (3rd missionary journey)

That is when Paul was in Ephesus…but when did Paul write the letter?

- Eph 3:1 – prisoner of Jesus Christ
- Eph 4:1 – I, the prisoner of the Lord
- Eph 4:11 – prisoner for the Lord
- Eph 6:19-20 – ambassador in chains
- Most think this was written during his first imprisonment in Rome

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Ephesians is one of Paul's 4 prison letters, which include:

- Ephesians
- Colossians
- Philippians
- Philemon

Why did he write the letter? The Occasion of Ephesus

Occasion drives the purpose. So if we can figure out a plausible reason why Paul would have said something, we might have a clue as to what was going on in that church to instigate Paul's writing the letter. You don't teach correctively on problems in worship if the church has no problems in worship. As you read Ephesians it reads as if it is written to a church that has a mix of Jew & Gentile Christians:

- 1:12-13 – "we who were first to put our hope in Christ…and you also" reads like Jews/Gentiles
- 2:14 – "He is our peace, who has made the two groups one…"

It is highly possible that Ephesians was written primarily to ex-pagan Christians who had made their way out of a pagan past but needed to be taught why and how (in that order) to live for Christ and to the Jewish Christians there in Ephesus to explain to them the mystery (1:8, 3:3,9) of God's including the Gentiles into the family of faith.

The structure of Ephesians reflects its purpose:

Ephesians is pretty clearly divided into two sections – Ephesians 1-3 & 4-6.

There are 41 commands in Ephesians, 1 of which is found in chapters 1-3. That command is found in 2:12 – "remember". Contrasted to that are the 40 commands Paul gives them in chapters 4-6 (thanks to Dr. Oster for initially pointing that out to me). If you look at 4:1 it serves as a great transitional statement between the two major sections of the letter, "As a prisoner for the Lord, then, I urge you to live a life worthy of the calling you have received." The calling they have received was what Paul was describing in Ephesians 1-3 and the way to live the life that is worthy of that calling is what Paul lays out in Ephesians 4-6. Chapters 1-3, then, are the things one needs to know to live that life and chapters 4-6 is what one needs to do to live that life. Paul starts with "why"…before all the commands and "to do's" he tells them why it is necessary because what we do is driven by what we know.

Continued next page…

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Genre: Letter writing in the Roman World (continued from article on previous page)

Ephesians and all of Paul's writing are letters. In Paul's day letters were written in a very particular way and Paul follows exactly that format in how he wrote his letters. Here is how it plays out in Ephesians:

- Name of writer: "Paul" (1:1)
- Name of recipient: "to God's holy people in Ephesus" (1:1)
- Greeting: "Grace and peace to you…" (1:2) [for more on this see below]
- Prayer/thanksgiving: "Praise be to the God and Father…(1:3ff, see also 1:16 – thanksgiving and prayer!)
- Body: 2:1-6:20
- Final greeting: 6:21-24

Contemporary letter example:

Here is an example of an ancient letter written in the second century in Egypt to give you an idea of how that format worked in a non-biblical example (ancient letters were usually more like the length of Philemon. Paul's letters are lengthy]. There are thousands of ancient letters that have been found and the majority follow these rules.

> Claudius Agathas Daimon [name of writer] to most beloved Sarapion [name of recipient], greetings [greeting]. Since I am going to Thebes, I salute you dearest, sweetest Sarapion and I exhort you also to do the same thing. If you need anything from Thebes, I encourage you to write to me, dearest, and it shall be done [body]. I pray for your health continually together with that of your children, Farewell [prayer/final greeting].

One of the interesting things Paul did in writing his letters was to take the customary greeting "Greetings" and Christianize it charein/χαρειν, which means "greetings" or "hail" to charis/χαρις, which means "grace". Paul not only adapted the typical Greek greeting but added to it the traditional Hebrew greeting of "peace" (Hebrew "shalom" or in Paul's case Greek "eirene". See Acts 15:23-29 as another example (Uses greetings instead of grace)

Skip to "An Introduction to Ephesians"

For more about Paul's letter and it's structure see:

Dr. Utley – Ephesians vs Colossians

Ephesians – Charts/Outlines

Continue next page: "The Genre of NT Letters and Epistles"…

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Genre of New Testament Letters and Epistles

http://www.crivoice.org/ntletters.html

Excerpt:

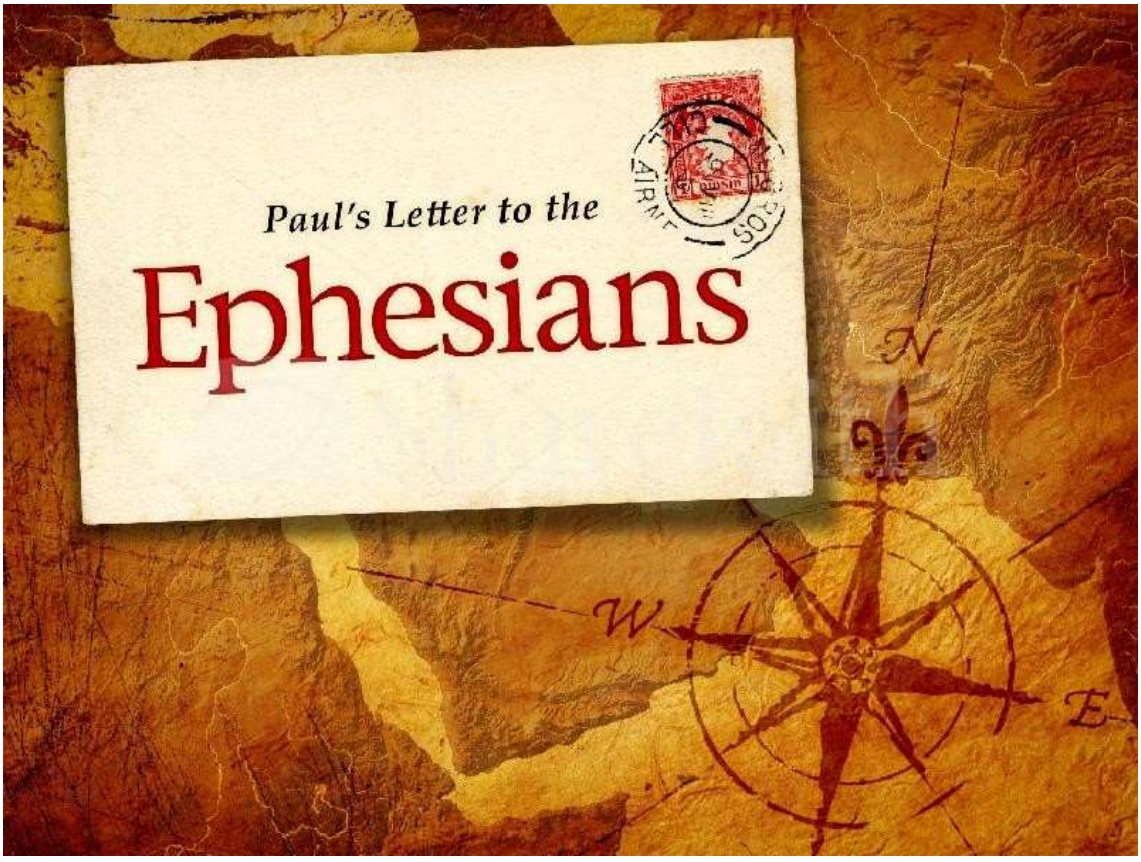
There were four general elements of ancient Greco-Roman letters.

1) opening salutation containing writer's name, the recipient's name, and a greeting

2) a prayer, blessing, or thanksgiving

3) the body of the letter (what the sender wanted to say that occasioned the letter)

4) final greeting and farewell



Most of the New Testament letters follow this convention

Letter Writing In The Ancient World

https://earlychurchhistory.org/communication/letter-writing-in-the-ancient-world/

The Historical Context of Paul's Letters to the Galatians and Romans

http://hermeneutics.kulikovskyonline.net/hermeneutics/galromhc.pdf [PDF]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

New Testament Letter Structure

http://catholic-resources.org/Bible/NT_Letters.htm

Excerpt:

Standard Structure of Ancient Letters:

Written communications today follow some fairly common and standard formats:

- Personal letters usually begin something like "Dear Mary" and end with "Love, John." We write the date near the top right, sometimes add a P.S. after the signature, fold the letter, put it in an envelope, and write the recipient's address and the return address on the outside.
- Business memos or E-mail messages often have a four-part header (To: / From: / Date: / Re: or From: / Sent: / To: / Subject:).

Most letters written in the ancient world also followed a standard format, but one which is slightly different from today. The New Testament letters that were written by and/or attributed to Paul and the other Apostles usually follow the standard expectations of their day. Although there are some variations in individual letters (esp. in the body and conclusion), the basic structure of the New Testament letters can be outlined as follows:

I) Letter Beginning	II) Letter Body	III) Letter Conclusion
1. Sender(s): From whom 2. Recipient(s): To whom 3. Formulaic Greeting 4. Thanksgiving (or Blessing)	1. Initial Exhortation 2. Thesis Statement 3. Theological Discussions 4. Ethical Admonitions	1. Practical Matters 2. Individual Greetings 3. Personal Postscript 4. Doxology (or Prayer)

Special Features of Paul's Letters:

- Letter Beginning:
  - Senders: Paul is rarely the only author, but one or more co-authors are usually mentioned (who else is named? which letters name Paul alone? why?)
  - Recipients: These letters are not addressed to all the people in the respective cities, but only to small groups of Christian believers (exactly how does Paul refer to them?)
  - Formulaic Greeting: Paul combines a variation of the usual Greek greeting (chaire - "Grace") and the common Jewish greeting (shalom - "Peace") (what does this tell us about Paul? about his readers?)
  - Thanksgiving: Paul almost always gives thanks to God for something about the recipients (their faith, hope, and love, or the good example they give for other Christians).
- Sections and subsections: all of the letters written by or attributed to Paul contain the standard three main sections, but not all Pauline letters structure the subsections exactly as listed above:
  - A subsection is sometimes omitted (e.g. in the opening of Gal; at the end of 1 Thessalonians)
  - The order of subsections is sometimes rearranged (esp. the endings of many of Paul's letters)
  - Some letters have more than one section of the same type (e.g. two "thanksgivings" in 1 & 2 Thessalonians; several "prayers" in Romans)
  - Theological, ethical, and practical concerns are often complexly intertwined, esp. in the long letters (so the verse divisions in the "Letter Body" sections below are only approximate suggestions).
  - Paul almost always concludes with a doxology (praise of God), prayer, or blessing for the believers to whom he/they are writing.

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Structural Charts of all the NT Letters:

A careful consideration of exactly which verses of each letter belong to each of these standard sections (or which are missing) can lead to some important observations about the nature and message of that letter.

Abbreviations: CJ = "Christ Jesus"; JC = "Jesus Christ"; Square Brackets [ ] indicate verses that do not quite fit the typical section descriptions.

The Seven Undisputed Pauline Letters (with 2 Thess, for comparison to 1 Thess):

Letter:	1 Thess	[2 Thess]	1 Cor	Phil (see below for partition theory)	Phlm	2 Cor (see below for partition theory)	Gal	Rom
I) Letter Beginning: Sender(s): From whom	1:1a - Paul, Silvanus, & Timothy	1:1a - Paul, Silvanus, & Timothy	1:1 - Paul an apostle, & our brother Sosthenes	1:1a - Paul & Timothy, servants of CJ	1a - Paul prisoner of CJ & Timothy our brother	1:1a - Paul apostle of CJ & Timothy our brother	1:1-2a - Paul an apostle of God & all those with me	1:1-6 - Paul a servant of JC, called to be an apostle.
Recipient (s): To whom	1:1b - to the Church of the Thessalonians in God Father & Lord JC	1:1b - to the Church of the Thessalonians in God Father & Lord JC	1:2 - Church of God in Corinth and all who call on Jesus!	1:1b - to all saints in CJ in Philippi, with bishops & deacons	1b-2 - to Philemon, Apphia, Archippus, & house church	1:1b - Church of God in Corinth and all saints in Achaia	1:2b - to Churches of Galatia	1:7a - to all God's beloved in Rome, called to be saints
Formulaic Greeting	1:1c - Grace to you and peace	1:2 - Grace to you and peace from God Father & Lord JC	1:3 - Grace to you and peace from God Father & Lord JC	1:2 - Grace to you and peace from God Father & Lord JC	3 - Grace to you and peace from God Father & Lord JC	1:2 - Grace to you and peace from God Father & Lord JC	1:3-5 - Grace & peace from JC, who gave himself for our sins.	1:7b - Grace to you and peace from God Father & Lord JC
Thanksgiving (or Blessing)	1:2-10 - faith, love, & hope; & 2:13-16 - for accepting God's word	1:3-4 - faith & love growing; & 2:13-15 - God chose you for salvation	1:4-9 - grace, riches, wisdom, spiritual gifts given to strengthen you	1:3-11 - you share in the Gospel, in righteousness & love	4-7 - love, faith, sharing, joy & encouragement	1:3-11 - Blessed be the God of JC, Father of mercy & God who consoles	X [1:6-10 - "I am amazed. "]	1:8-15 - faith & spiritual encouragement
II) Letter Body: Initial	2:1-12 - follow Paul's	[1:5-12] - God's judgement	1:10-17 - appeal for unity,	1:12-30 - spread of the Gospel;	8-10 - appeal on	1:12–2:13; 7:5-16 - on	[1:11–2:21 - Paul's	X

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Exhortation	example; 2:17--3:13 - Paul's relation to Xns in Thessalonica	at the revelation of Jesus	not division in the community		behalf of Onesimus	reconciliation	life & preaching]
Thesis Statement	?	?	1:18 - message of the cross: foolish or powerful ?	[2:1-2 - be united in mind & love]	[11 - word-play: useless/useful]	?	1:11-12 - Paul's Gospel is from JC; 2:15-21 - justification thru the faith of CJ	1:16-17 - gospel is the power of God for salvation thru faith
Theological Discussions	4:13–5:11 - death, resurrection & the parousia	2:1-12 - events before the coming of JC	1:19–4:21 - true wisdom in JC; [5:1--15:58 also very theological]	2:1–3:1 - unity & humility in CJ; [3:2--4:1 - against circumcision]	11-16 - freedom & brotherhood	[2:14--7:4 - Paul's role as apostle]	3:1–5:12 - the Law & Faith; Abraham; Hagar vs. Sarah	1:18–11:36 - law, sin, faith; Adam, Abraham, Jesus; baptism, death, life
Ethical Admonitions	4:1-12 - live God's will; love one another; 5:12-22 - life in community	3:6-15 - warnings against idleness & disobedience	5:1–15:58 - about the Corinthians' problems & questions	4:2-9 - Euodia & Syntyche; Rejoice always	17-21 - repaying debts; obedience	[10:1–13:10 - warnings against false apostles]	5:13–6:10 - lots of warnings; bear others' burdens	12:1–15:21 - life in the body of Christ; mutual love
III) Letter Conclusion: Practical Matters	5:25 - pray for us	3:1-5 - request for prayers	16:1-14 - the collection, travel plans, warnings	4:10-20 - thanks for gifts sent through Epaphroditus	22 - prepare a guest room	[8:1-24; 9:1-15 - help the poor] 13:1-10 - Paul's third visit	X	15:22-33 - travel plans; 16:17-20 - be careful of evil
Individual Greetings	5:26 - Greet all brothers & sisters	X	16:15-18 - commending Stephanas.; 19-20 - from Asia greetings	4:21-22 - greet saints in CJ; all saints greet you, esp. Caesar's house	23-24 - greetings from five companions (cf. Col 4:10)	13:11-12 - greet one another with holy kiss; all the saints greet you	X	16:1-16, 21-23 - lots of greetings to Rome & from Corinth
Personal Postscript	X	3:17-18 - Paul	16:21-24 - a curse	X	19 - I, Paul, write this	X	6:11-17 - more	X

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

		marks every letter this way	on those who don't love the Lord		with my own hand, I will repay		warnings re. circumcision & the cross	[16:22 - by scribe Tertius]
Prayer or Doxology	[3:11-13] 5:23-24 - May God sanctify you; & 5:28 - Grace of JC be with you.	[2:16-17] 3:5, 16, 18 - May the Lord give you love peace & grace	16:23-24 - grace of Lord Jesus & my love be with you in Christ	4:20 - to God be glory; 4:23 - grace of the Lord JC be with your spirit	25 - grace of Lord JC be with your spirit.	13:13 - grace of Lord JC, love of God, & communion of HS with all	6:18 - grace of Lord JC be with your spirit. Amen.	[11:33-36] [15:13] 16:25-27 - to God be glory
Letter:	1 Thess	[2 Thess]	1 Cor	Phil	Phlm	2 Cor	Gal	Rom

The Six Disputed Pauline Letters (and Hebrews for comparison, even though it is not in standard letter format):

Letter:	2 Thess	Col	Eph	1 Tim	2 Tim	Titus	[Hebrews]
I) Letter Beginning: Sender(s): From whom	1:1a - Paul, Silvanus, & Timothy	1:1 - Paul, apostle of CJ, and Timothy our brother	1:1a - Paul, apostle of CJ by the will of God	1:1 - Paul, apostle of CJ by command of God and CJ	1:1 - Paul, apostle of CJ by will of God, for life in CJ	1:1-3 - Paul, slave of God & apostle of JC...	X
Recipient(s): To whom	1:1b - to Church of Thessalonians in God Father & Lord JC	1:2a - to saints & faithful in Christ in Colossae	1:1b - to saints in Ephesus, faithful in CJ	1:2a - to Timothy, my loyal child in the faith	1:2a - to Timothy, my beloved child	1:4a - to Titus, my loyal child in the faith we share	X
Formulaic Greeting	1:2 - Grace to you & peace from God Father & Lord JC	1:2b - Grace to you & peace from God Father	1:2 - Grace to you & peace from God Father & Lord JC	1:2b - Grace, mercy & peace from God Father & CJ Lord	1:2b - Grace, mercy & peace from God Father & CJ Lord	1:4b - Grace & peace from God Father & CJ Savior	X
Thanksgiving (or Blessing)	1:3-4 - for faith & love growing; & 2:13-15 - God chose you for salvation	1:3-8 - for faith, love, hope; Gospel is bearing fruit	1:3-14 - Blessed be God & Father of our Lord JC...; & 1:15-23 - prayer of thanks	X	1:3-7 - for your sincere faith; rekindle God's gifts	X	X
II) Letter Body: Initial Exhortation	[1:5-12] - God's judgement at the revelation of Jesus	1:9-14 - prayer for knowledge, wisdom, strength	[1:15-23 - in prayer form]	1:3-20 - remain in Ephesus to preserve	1:8-18 - do not be ashamed of serving the Gospel	1:5-16 - put the churches on Crete in order	X

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

				true doctrines
Thesis Statement	?	[1:15-20 - Hymn to Christ]	[1:20-23 - God's power in Christ]	X	X	X	1:1-4 - God has spoken thru his Son
Theological Discussions	2:1-12 - events before the coming of JC	1:15–2:23 - salvation in Christ, not thru philosophy	2:1–3:21 - life in CJ for the Gentiles	[2:1–6:19 - some theology mixed in]	2:1–3:9 - faith vs. godlessnes s	X	most of 1:5–11:40 - Jesus, the great high priest, surpasses all
Ethical Admonitions	3:6-15 - warning against being idle	3:1–4:6 - life in Christ; rules for Xn household s	4:1–6:20 - unity in the body of Christ; household code	2:1–6:19 - rules for church leaders & community conduct	3:10–4:8 - follow Paul's example of faith & suffering	2:1–3:11 - teach sound doctrine & good works	2:1-4; 3:7–4:16; 5:11–6:12; 10:19-39; esp. 12:1–13:19
III) Letter Conclusion: Practical Matters	3:6-15 - warn against being idle	4:7-9 - Tychicus & Onesimus sent; 4:16 - exhange letters w/ Laodicea	6:21-22 - sending Tychicus, faithful minister	X	4:9-18 - come soon; bring cloak, books & writings; beware of opponents	3:12-14 - support the missionaries ; come soon	13:23 - Timothy has been freed
Individual Greetings	X	4:10-17 - from & to many people (cf. Phlm 23)	6:23 - peace to the whole communit y	[6:20-21a - final admonition]	4:19-21 - greet Prisca, Aquila, etc.; four others greet him	3:15a - all here greet you; greet those who love us	13:24 - greet all the leaders & saints;
Personal Postscript	3:17-18 - Paul marks every letter this way	4:18a - remember my chains	X	X	X	X	[13:22 - bear with my exhortation]
Prayer or Doxology	3:5, 16, 18 - May the Lord give you love peace & grace	4:18b - grace be with you	6:24 - grace to all who have undying love for our Lord JC	6:21b - grace be with you	4:22 - Lord be with your spirit; grace be with you	3:15b - grace be with all of you	13:20-21, 25 - may God of peace make you complete; grace be with all of you
Letter:	2 Thess	Col	Eph	1 Tim	2 Tim	Titus	[Hebrews]

The "Catholic Epistles" or "General Letters" (and the Letter in Acts 15):

The last seven letters of the NT (and the brief letter cited in Acts 15) are slightly different from the Pauline letters in form and structure, yet still follow the general conventions of ancient letters:

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

- Most of them were not written to a specific individual or community (except 2 & 3 John), but are addressed to a more "general" readership.
- Thus, they are not named for the person(s) who received the letter (as Paul's letters are), but rather for the apostle who wrote it (or to whom it is attributed, since the authorship of some is disputed today).
- There were probably multiple copies made and distributed to several different Christian communities (much like papal encyclicals are sent to all bishops today, or like people send out Christmas letters to all their friends at once).
- Thus they are usually called the "General Letters" or "Catholic Epistles" (not because they were written for or by the Roman Catholic Church, but because the word "catholic" means "universal").
- 1 John is not really a letter (it lacks the typical beginning and end); James lacks a typical letter ending; most of these lack an initial "Thanksgiving" subsection; and most have fewer "personal greetings" at the end than Paul's letters have.

Letter:	James	1 Peter	2 Peter	1 John	2 John	3 John	Jude	Acts 15:23-29
I) Letter Beginning : Sender(s): From whom	1:1a - James, servant of God & of Lord JC	1:1a - Peter, an apostle of JC	1:1a - Simeon Peter, a servant & apostle of JC	1:1 - "We" 2:1 - "I"	1a - The elder	1a - The elder	1a - Jude, servant of JC, brother of James	23b - The apostles & elders, your brothers
Recipient(s): To whom	1:1b - to twelve tribes in Dispersion	1:1b-2a - to exiles of the Dispersion in Asia Minor	1:1b - to those who received faith thru our God & Savior JC	1:1 - "to you" 2:1 - "My little children"	1b-2 - to the "elect lady" & her children (Xn church)	1b - to beloved Gaius, whom I love in truth	1b - to those called, beloved in God	23c - to brothers in Antioch, Syria, Cilicia of Gentile origin
Formulaic Greeting	1c - "Greetings"	1:2b - grace & peace be yours in abundance	1:2 - grace & peace in knowledge of God & Jesus our Lord	X	3 - grace, mercy & peace from God Father & JC	X	2 - mercy, peace, and love	23d - greetings
Thanksgiving (or Blessing)	X	1:3-12 - for new birth in living hope	X	[1:1-4 - we preach so you may have fellowship & joy]	[4 - joy seeing children walking in truth]	[2-4 - a prayer in joy for hi "children" walking in truth]	X	X
II) Letter Body: Initial Exhortation	1:2-4 - consider trials as joy;	1:13-16 - "be holy, for I am holy"	1:3-15 - Peter's "testament"	[1:5-10 - walk in light, confess sins]	5 - love one another	5-8 - welcome; support traveling missionaries	3 - appeal to contend for the faith	24-27 - we heard that some have upset you
Thesis Statement	[1:3 - testing of faith	1:22-25 - you've been	1:16-21 - Christian teaching	1:5-10 - God is light;	6 - love is "walking" acc. to the	X	4 - "ungodly intruders"	28 - decision of the HS

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

	produces endurance & maturity	purified & born anew	comes thru eyewitnesses & Holy Spirit	Jesus cleanses us from sin	commandments		pervert God's grace & deny Jesus	& of us not to burden you beyond the necessities
Theological Discussions	[esp. 2:14-26 - faith without works is dead]	1:17–4:19 - you are chosen race, royal priesthood, holy nation, God's own people	2:1-22 - punishment for false teachers (cf. Jude 4-11); 3:3-18a - promise & delay of the Lord's coming	2:1–5:21 mixed: God is love; children of God vs. antichrists	7, 9 - deceivers & anti-christs deny Jesus	X	5-19 - judgment on unbelievers & sinners	X
Ethical Admonitions	1:5–5:12 - many ethical points, esp. on speech & riches	[esp. 2:11–3:12 - "household code" & Christian suffering]	[mixed in throughout, esp. 2:10-22]	2:1–5:21 mixed: love one another; abide in God	8 - be on guard, not to lose reward	11 - imitate good, not evil	20-23 - build faith, pray, love, be merciful	29ab - abstain from idolatry, blood, etc.; you'll be doing right
III) Letter Conclusion: Practical Matters	5:13-20 - prayers & anointing of sick; forgiveness for sinners	5:1-10 - elders should humbly care for the flock	[3:15-16 - proper understanding of Paul's letters]	X	10-11 don't welcome false teachers	9-10 - problems with Diotrephes; 12- welcome Demetrius	X	X
Individual Greetings	X	5:13-14a - church in "Babylon" & "my son Mark" greet you; greet one another	X	X	13 - sister church sends greetings	15b - greet the friends by name	X	X
Personal Postscript	X	5:12 - written thru brother Silvanus	3:1-2 - this my second letter... to remind you...	[5:13 - I write to you believers so you know	12 - more to write, but hope to visit	13-14 - more to write, but hope to see you soon	X	X

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

				eternal life]
Prayer or Doxology	X	5:11 - to Christ be power forever; 5:14b - peace to all in Christ	3:18b - to Lord/ Savior JC be glory now & eternally	[5:21 - keep away from idols]	X	15a - Peace to you	24-25 - to God, thru Jesus, be glory, majesty, power...	29c - Farewell
Letter:	James	1 Peter	2 Peter	1 John	2 John	3 John	Jude	Acts 15

Combined & Edited Letters:

Another common practice in the ancient world was to collect and republish the letters of famous people like Paul. In this process, shorter letters were sometimes combined or other editorial changes made.

For example, what is normally called the "Second Letter of Paul to the Corinthians" (2 Cor) might be a compilation of what were originally between two and five separate letters. Some scholars use letters A-G to distinguish all the different letters Paul may have written to the Christians in Corinth, even though the NT contains only two canonical letters:

- Cor A = a previous letter, now missing (mentioned in 1 Cor 5:9)
- Cor B = most of 1 Cor (Paul responds to oral and written reports from Corinth; see 1Cor 1:11; 7:1; 16:17)
- Cor C = 2 Cor 2:14 – 6:13; 7:2-4 (Paul defends his apostleship against various unnamed opponents)
- Cor D = 2 Cor 10:1 – 13:10 (the so-called "Letter of Tears"? - as mentioned in 2 Cor 2:3-4; 7:8-12)
- Cor E = 2 Cor 1:1 – 2:13; 7:5-16; 13:11-13 (a "Letter of Reconciliation")
- Cor F = 2 Cor 8 (instructions for how to organize the collection for the poor in Jerusalem)
- Cor G = 2 Cor 9 (more instructions for the Jerusalem collection)

Similarly, some scholars think that Paul's Letter to the Philippians (Phil) is a later compilation of three originally separate letters:

- Phil A = Phil 4:10-20 (a short "Note of Thanksgiving" for monetary gifts Paul received from the Philippians)
- Phil B = Phil 1:1 – 3:1; [4:2-9?]; 4:21-23 (a "Letter of Friendship" with thanks, news, and exhortations)
- Phil C = Phil 3:2 – 4:1 [or to 4:3 or 4:9?] (a stern warning against the "dogs" who require the circumcision of Gentiles)

See also: Genre of Letter Writing in the Roman World

Paul's Letters and the New Testament

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Just an FYI:

http://www.shofarsfromafar.com/product/SFA-HW-888

The Copyists: their Work and Goals

http://www.bible.ca/ef/topical-the-copyist-their-work-and-goals.htm

Excerpt:

The New Testament documents are first century writings. As they were being written, there was already a consciousness of the divinely inspired nature of the work (e.g., 1 Cor. 14:37). Those who accepted the documents as Scripture would have a desire in making, keeping, maintaining, and passing around copies of these works. The process of copying would have begun as soon as the works were penned. “After the books of the New Testament were written they were carried all over the Roman Empire. The Christians everywhere took care of them, and copied and multiplied them in the century immediately following their production” (Price 154). Many copies began to be circulated, and this would naturally give rise to questions about the source and genuineness of the copies. Who were these copyists?

“It is scarcely possible to overstate the importance of early scribes” (Lightfoot 30). Yet, while people generally think in terms of professional scribes doing most of the copying of the New Testament documents, the reality is that, according to Roberts,

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

> "many of the first copies of the Gospels were made, not by professional scribes, but by literate lay copyists. As the early church rapidly expanded throughout the Roman world in the first centuries A.D., there was a pressing need for multiple copies of authoritative Christian documents, including Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John. Nonprofessional copyists must have stepped in to meet this need." (28)

Not all copyists were professionals, which alone can account for many variances in manuscripts. "The earliest copies of Christian writings were probably made for the local church by some member of the congregation" (Lightfoot 30). However, that not all were professional copyists should not be confused with the desire they had to take great care in making copies, for there would have been a strong conviction that they were copying the very word of God. "Care for the precise wording of the biblical text is attested, therefore, at the start of the Christian era" (Millard 143). As time passed, however, the job of copying was more entrusted to professional scribes who were in monasteries. Prices notes:

> "Scholars such as Origen, Eusebius, and Jerome greatly stimulated Biblical learning, and caused the multiplication and preservation of its sacred manuscripts. That sacred calling was later confined almost exclusively to monasteries, of which there were hundreds in the Orient. In the period of the ninth to the fifteenth century cursive manuscripts were produced in great numbers in these monasteries, each of which had its scribe or scribes, whose chief business was the copying of the sacred Scriptures. The profession of scribe was so revered that a writer of the sacred books was exempted from working in the gardens of a monastery, lest the skill of his pen be marred by injury to his hands." (154-155)

As Lightfoot describes (30-31), typically, a scribe would not be seated at a desk, but rather sitting on a stool of some kind with the manuscript on his knees. His pen was likely a reed, sharp and split for a nib. His ink came from soot mixed with gum and water. Other tools helped to keep the pen in good working order. A scribe might draw lines on his materials (papyrus or parchment) so he could keep his text straight. A careful scribe needed much time to prepare and accomplish his task.

By the third century A.D., scribes would do their work in a "writing room" or "scriptorium" (Lightfoot 31). The scribe would listen to a reader and copy what he heard. This practice, utilized by the Romans, could facilitate making numerous copies at once. Of course, it would also give the added risk of errors due to misunderstood communication. Did the scribe copying Romans 5:1 hear "echomen" (we have) or "echōmen" (let us have)? Simply listening would be difficult to distinguish the two. Homophones (sound-alike words) can easily result in using the wrong word.

The work of a scribe was no small task. From the scroll to the codex (book form, for which Christians are credited), the papyrus to parchment and vellum, the task of the scribe was the same: get the text accurately inscribed on the material.

Early Bible Making

http://www.rosarychurch.net/bible/making.html

Brief History of Writing Instruments
https://www.thoughtco.com/brief-history-of-writing-4072560

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

An Introduction to Ephesians

https://kingdomnewtestament.wordpress.com/2012/06/06/bonus-an-introduction-to-ephesians/

Though some have doubted it because of the lack of personal greetings so common in his letters, the apostle Paul is stated twice as the author of Ephesians (1:1; 3:1), a letter likely written while the apostle was under house arrest in Rome (3:1; 4:1; 6:20) around AD 60. The other Prison Epistles — Colossians, Philippians, and Philemon — would have been written at this same time.

The Temple of Artemis

Ephesus was an important city in the ancient world and in the life of Paul. Situated at the nexus of sea and land trading routes, Ephesus became both a commercial and cultural center, by far the most important in Asia Minor and one of the top five most important cities on the Mediterranean. Home to the Temple of Artemis (Diana), one of the seven ancient wonders of the world, Ephesus also became a religious center as pilgrims flocked to the temple seeking a blessing from the many-breasted fertility goddess. You may recall it was Ephesus where the silversmiths rallied a large part of the city to chant "Great is the Artemis of the Ephesians" for two straight hours (Acts 19:23-34). Paul spent almost three years here (Acts 19:10) growing very close to the leaders in the church and using the Ephesian church as a home base for his evangelism of western Turkey. This Ephesian church is the one to whom Paul sent Timothy in 1 and 2 Timothy towards the end of the apostle's life in an effort to set them straight when they apparently went off track. John would warn the Ephesian church to regain their "first love" in Revelation 2.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Ephesians may be the most general of Paul's letters. Whereas Paul usually addressed a problem or threat to the church, he only seems to be encouraging the Christians in Ephesus to know how blessed they are and to stand firm in those blessings appreciating the high calling of the Church. In a unique way, Ephesians talks about how the work of God on behalf of Christians impacts all areas of life — spiritual, religious, ethnic, and social. The general nature of this letter makes some theorize Ephesians was really a circular letter sent to many churches in western Turkey.

Sermons on Ephesians

https://redeeminggod.com/sermons/ephesians/

See also*: Introduction to Ephesian History (J. Vernon McGee) (Audio)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

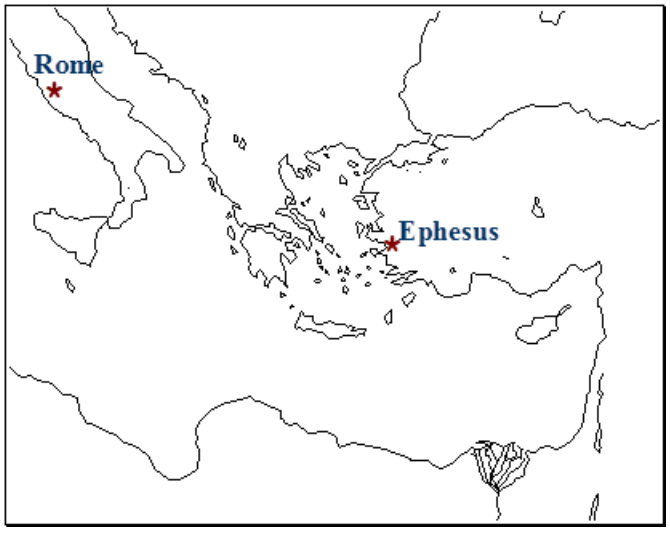
Ephesians Overviews, Commentaries and Study Guides

Ephesians Commentaries & Sermons
http://www.preceptaustin.org/ephesians

Dr. Thomas Constable's Expository Notes on Ephesians [PDF] - Sonic Light
http://www.soniclight.com/constable/notes/htm/NT/Ephesians/Ephesians.htm

http://www.soniclight.com/constable/notes/pdf/ephesians.pdf [PDF]

http://www.soniclight.com/constable/notes.htm (Main Page: PDFs and Online HTML)



Excerpt:

Historical background

Almost all Christians believed in the Pauline authorship of Ephesians—until the nineteenth century, when destructive biblical criticism gained much influence (cf. 1:1; 3:1).[1] The critics built a case against Pauline authorship from linguistic and stylistic features, literary comparisons chiefly with Colossians, historical evidence, and doctrinal peculiarities.

"When all the objections are carefully considered it will be seen that the weight of evidence is inadequate to overthrow the overwhelming external attestation to Pauline authorship, and the Epistle's own claims."[2]

Most conservative New Testament scholars hold to the tradition that Paul wrote Ephesians, along with Colossians, Philemon, and Philippians, the other "Prison Epistles," during his first Roman imprisonment, A.D. 60-62 (3:1; 4:1; 6:20; cf. Acts 28:16-31). During that time Paul was under house arrest. He lived in his own rented quarters, under guard by Roman soldiers. He was allowed visitors and could minister, without hindrance, as far as his confinement permitted (Acts 28:16, 30-31). He was not chained in a prison cell at this time, as he was during his second Roman imprisonment when he wrote 2 Timothy (cf. 2 Tim. 1:16).

See also: Ephesians – Maps

For some interpreters, the reference in 2 Timothy 4:12, to Paul having recently sent Tychicus to Ephesus, seems to put the composition of Ephesians in the second imprisonment (cf. Eph. 6:21-22). However, the similarities between Ephesians and Colossians have led most scholars to conclude that Paul wrote these two letters at the same time.[3] The evidence for his having written Colossians and Philemon during the first imprisonment is strong.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

"Ephesians bears much the same relation to Colossians that Romans does to Galatians, a fuller treatment of the same general theme in a more detached and impersonal manner."[4]

Some scholars believe Paul wrote Colossians before Ephesians.[5] A significant difference between these very similar epistles is that in Colossians, Paul was combating a false doctrine concerning Christ. In Ephesians, he did not address a particular problem or situation that occasioned that epistle.[6]

Paul knew Ephesus and the church in that city very well. He had ministered in Asia Minor, the Roman province of which Ephesus was the capital, with Ephesus as his headquarters, for about three years: A.D. 53-56 (Acts 19:1—20:1). It appears that he sent this epistle to the Ephesian church, so that the Christians there would subsequently circulate it among the other churches.[7] At least two other New Testament books went first to Ephesus: 1 and 2 Timothy. John's Gospel, his three epistles, and Revelation probably did as well (cf. Rev. 2:1). Tychicus evidently delivered this epistle to the Ephesian church (Eph. 6:21-22).

Purpose

Paul's frequent references to the church as a "mystery" (divine secret), previously unknown but now revealed, identify the apostle's main purpose in writing, as having been the exposition of the mystery of the church (1:9; 3:3-4, 9; 5:32; 6:19). His emphasis on the church as Christ's body, in which both Jewish and Gentile believers are one, suggests that Paul wrote to promote unity in the Ephesian church and in the universal church. The emphasis on the importance of love is also strong.[8] More than one-sixth of Paul's references to "love" in his 13 epistles occur in Ephesians. This also shows that he wanted to promote Christian unity in the church.

"Possibly realizing that the Ephesians were starting to forsake their first love, Paul wrote this letter to encourage them to love both God and their fellow saints more deeply."[9]

"The letter focuses on what God did through the historical work of Jesus Christ and does through his Spirit today, in order to build his new society in the midst of the old."[10]

Emphases

In addition to the church and love, Ephesians emphasizes God's action in planning, decreeing, and providing salvation, the importance of the Christian's growth in knowledge, the importance of living out one's faith consistently, and spiritual warfare. Ephesians is one of the most well-loved of Paul's epistles, because it is both very important doctrinally and extremely practical.

Norman B. Harrison considered Ephesians, Philippians, and Colosians as written to the spiritual man, 1 and 2 Corinthians and Galatians as written to the carnal man, and Romans as written to the natural man.[11]

Genre

Though the general genre of Ephesians is a letter, it is not a letter in the same form as most of Paul's other letters. There is no evidence in Ephesians that Paul wrote it to respond to a particular situation; it is not an "occasional" epistle. In this, it is similar to Romans. Both epistles are more like public speeches than private conversations.

"He [the writer] is meditating, and developing certain thoughts—and clothes them in the form of a letter."[12]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Message

The Book of Ephesians enables us to view God's creation from an alpine altitude. When we study this book, it is as though we have climbed a high mountain peak, because the book gives us that kind of perspective on what God has created. Recall the opening scenes in "The Sound of Music" movie, where Maria Von Trapp is standing in a high meadow looking out over the valleys and mountains beyond. Yet the "creation" Ephesians opens up to our vision is not the physical creation, but the church and its position and importance in the panorama of God's program. The church is the subject of Ephesians. The church began on the Day of Pentecost, and will end at the Rapture.

One of the features of this book, that distinguishes it from other Pauline epistles, is its universal character. Ephesians deals with matters of perspective that are important to all churches of all periods of church history. Ephesians is not like 1 Corinthians, which concerns itself primarily with the situation of one local congregation. It is more like Romans, which deals with the great revelations that transcend local church polity.

Ephesians is an exposition of one of the most important statements Jesus ever uttered during His earthly ministry. That statement is in Matthew 16:18: "I will build My church, and the gates of Hades shall not overpower it." Various epistles similarly expound other teachings that Jesus gave while He walked this earth. For example, the Epistle of James is an exposition of Jesus' Sermon on the Mount. John's first epistle is an exposition of Jesus' Upper Room Discourse. Likewise, Ephesians explains Jesus' teaching concerning the church. All the New Testament epistles deal with the church, of course. But Ephesians lifts us above all the other revelation on this subject, and puts the church in perspective within the plan of God. Paul developed both the building of the church and the conflict of the church, suggested in Jesus' statement, in Ephesians.

Paul introduced the central teaching of Ephesians in its first verse. We read, "To the saints . . . in Christ Jesus." This phrase indicates the composition of the church, and it alerts us to what will follow in the epistle. The phrase "the saints" reflects the diversity and differences that exist within the church. Paul had much to say in this letter about God's individual blessing of believers (e.g., 1:3—2:10). However, the phrase "in Christ Jesus" emphasizes the unification of these individuals in one united church. Paul also had much to say about the corporate calling of believers in this letter (e.g., 2:11—3:19). The church is one organism that God has created from individual believers in this age, whom God has united in a vital relationship with Jesus Christ. The figure of the human body, with its diverse members controlled by one head (2:14-16), is the perfect illustration of the church.

As we examine the central teaching in Ephesians, we can see that it falls into two parts. First, there is revelation concerning the eternal character* of the church. Second, there is teaching about the temporal conduct* of the church.

Consider first the revelation concerning the eternal character of the church. Ephesians tells us three things about the character of the church.

First, it reveals its conception. The church was in the plan of God from eternity past. It was not something that God devised (concocted) on the day that Jesus Christ died because the Jews had rejected their Messiah. Some dispensational expositors have referred to the church as a "parenthetical" part of God's eternal plan. That does not mean the church was an after-thought by God. The church is just as much a part of God's plan for human history as the nation of Israel. God did not reveal it in the Old Testament. It was a mystery, a New Testament revelation not previously revealed. Nevertheless it was always part of God's plan. This is important for us to realize, because when we see that God brought the church into existence, it is easier to believe that Satan will never destroy the church.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The second thing Ephesians reveals about the eternal character of the church is its construction. Whereas God viewed the church in the past as part of His eternal plan, He is constructing it in the present by His eternal power. In Ephesians, there is much emphasis on "power"—the tremendous power of God. Paul prayed that his readers would grow in their understanding of the eternal power of God, the power that raised Jesus from the grave (1:18-19). Paul used four different Greek words for power in 1:19. This "resurrection power" is the same power that has raised the Christian up, and seated him or her with Christ in the heavenly realms now (2:4-6). Also, it is the same power available to us Christians as we engage our spiritual enemy, who is trying to tear down the church (6:10-11). Too often Christians fail because they think the church cannot succeed. They fail to appreciate the eternal divine power presently available to build the church and to defeat its foes.

The third thing we learn from this epistle about the character of the church is its consummation. This too involves an eternal perspective. Ephesians reveals that the church will serve the purpose of God throughout eternity future (2:4-7; 3:8-10). The church will demonstrate the richness of God's grace to all beings forever (2:7). It will also demonstrate the richness of God's wisdom to all beings forever (3:10).

In summary, Ephesians reveals the important place that the church has in God's eternal plan for history. In the past, He conceived of it as part of His eternal plan. In the present, He is constructing it with His eternal power. In the future, He will bring it to consummation in fulfillment of His eternal purpose.

Whereas the revelation of the church's eternal character constitutes a major portion of this epistle, Paul also taught much about the temporal conduct of the church. The church's eternal character has major implications for its temporal conduct (4:1). We can organize this part of the revelation under three headings as well.

The first implication of the character of the church that Paul stressed relates to its "construction." Since the church is what it is, the unified body of Christ, it is very important that Christians preserve this unity (4:1-3). Note that this is not a unity among professing Christians that we must achieve. It is a unity among genuine Christians that we must preserve. We must be very careful to avoid causing divisions in the body of Christ. One of the seven things Solomon wrote that the Lord hates is someone who spreads strife among his brothers (Prov. 6:19).

A second implication of the character of the church relates to its "confession." The church, Paul urged, must make a confession, or give testimony, to God. This is the will of God (5:15-17). Christians do this by sanctifying all of life to God, setting it apart to Him for His honor and glory. Consequently, Paul talked about the basic relationships of life—husbands and wives, parents and children, employers and employees. Our faith must have an impact on these relationships. The church makes its confession before the world, not primarily by formulating creeds of belief, but by demonstrating sanctification in conduct.

Third, another implication of the character of the church that Paul explained relates to its "conflict" with the forces opposed to God's purposes. Christians must arm themselves, stay alert, and take a stand against these spiritual forces (6:10-11).

To summarize, the church must maintain unity as it grows. It must sanctify every relationship as it makes its confession to the world. And it must stand firm against its spiritual enemies as it conflicts with Satan's forces. These points clarify Matthew 16:18: "I will build my church, and the gates of Hades shall not overpower it." The church cooperates with God as He builds it in three ways. First, it must remain united itself. Second, it must present a message of purity and holiness to the world by its sanctified relationships. And third, it must fight God's enemies after putting on the whole armor of God.

Attempting to summarize the teaching of Ephesians into a short message statement, I would phrase it this way. Ephesians reveals that the church is part of God's eternal plan, and it grows as a result of God's power working through believers' lives, overcoming their spiritual enemies.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

We consider next the abiding appeal that this letter contains. I previously said that Paul summarized the central revelation of Ephesians in 1:1: "the saints . . . in Christ Jesus." Similarly, he summarized the timeless exhortation of this letter in 4:1: "Walk . . . worthy of the calling with which you have been called."

First, Christians are to walk in view of God's eternal plan. That is, we should live now with God's purposes throughout eternity clearly in view. God chose us before the creation of the world so that He could conform us to the image of His Son (1:4; Rom. 8:29). We are to "grow up . . . into Him . . . even Christ" (4:15). The extent to which we are living in holiness and in love is the extent to which we are conforming to God's eternal plan. Paul did not tell us to be holy because decency demands it, or because God may discipline us if we do not. We are to live thinking about God's eternal plan and remembering that God had our individual lives in His mind from eternity past. Reading Scripture regularly is one way to remind ourselves of this.

Second, we can walk according to God's plan only by appropriating His almighty power. God is able to enable us to walk in this plan by His power. "Now to Him who is able to do exceeding . . ." (3:20-21). We have the power to walk worthily. However, we must allow God's Spirit to control us if we want to walk in harmony with God's will (5:18). This involves consciously yielding control to Him (cf. Rom. 6:13).

Third, we are to walk opposing God's unseen enemies, as well as in view of God's eternal plan and appropriating God's almighty power. We need to balance the passive "be filled with the Spirit" with the active "stand firm" (6:14). Our enemies are not primarily other people but the unseen demonic personalities behind them. In former years, many people scoffed at the idea of demons and malignant spiritual forces. Today, there is a more realistic awareness of their existence and powerful influence in the world. We must engage spiritual enemies with spiritual arms: truthfulness, righteous conduct, the gospel, trust in God, the Word of God appropriate to the need, and prayer (6:14-18).

Finally, let us apply the message of this epistle to ourselves.

The measure of the church's power to change the world is the measure of her other-worldliness. Many in our day criticize the church for being uninvolved, or at least not involved enough, with the physical problems of people. Ephesians teaches us that the way to help people the most is by dealing with unseen issues: unity, love, holiness, prayer, and evangelism. We do the church's work much more effectively by praying, than by picketing, protesting, or politicking. The measure of the church's power to help the world is the measure of her other-worldliness. The church must remember her heavenly calling in the eternal plan of God in order to realize all that God purposes for her.

"The church of God can never help God when she ceases to be other-worldly. When she is other-worldly she helps the world; and cannot avoid doing so."[13]

Conversely, the measure of the church's other-worldliness is the measure of her influence in the world. If we really see God's purpose for the church, we can never remain unconcerned about, or uninvolved with, the physical problems of people. Was our Lord insensitive to suffering, unconcerned about injustice, or lacking in compassion toward the oppressed? Never! And He is the Head into whom we are to grow up.[14]

J. Vernon McGee Study Guide: The Prison Epistles (including Ephesians)

A quartet of men left Rome in the year A.D. 62, bound for the province of Asia, which was located in what was designated as Asia Minor and is currently called Turkey. These men had on their persons four of the most sublime compositions of the Christian faith. These precious documents would be invaluable if the originals were in existence today. Rome did not comprehend the significance of the writings by an unknown prisoner. If she had, these men would have been apprehended and the documents seized. [Audio]

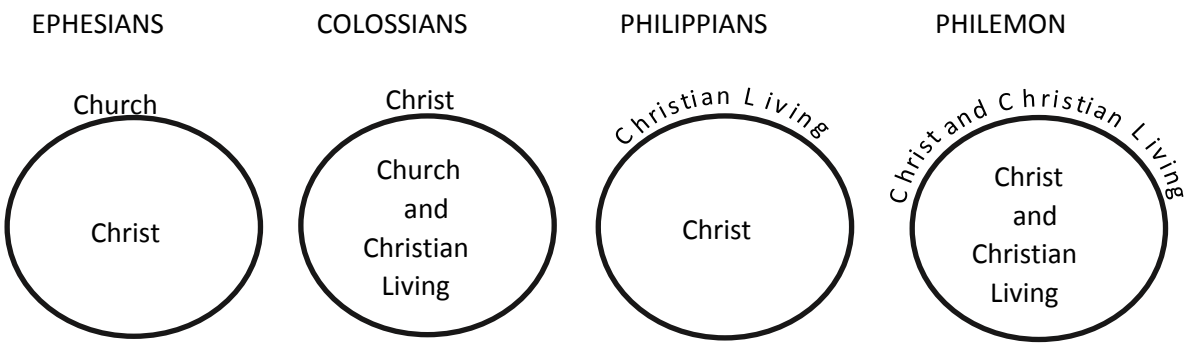
When they bade farewell to the apostle Paul, each was given an epistle to bear to his particular constituency. These four letters are designated the "prison epistles of Paul," since he wrote them while imprisoned in Rome. He was awaiting a hearing before Nero who was the Caesar at that time. Paul, as a Roman citizen, had appealed his case to the emperor, and he was waiting to be heard.

(1) Epaphroditus from Philippi (Philippians 4:18) had the Epistle to the Philippians.
(2) Tychicus from Ephesus (Ephesians 6:21) had the Epistle to the Ephesians.
(3) Epaphras from Colosse (Colossians 4:12) had the Epistle to the Colossians.
(4) Onesimus (Philemon's slave) from Colosse (Philemon 10) had the Epistle to Philemon.

These epistles present a composite picture of Christ, the church, the Christian life, and the interrelationship and functioning of all three. These different facets present the Christian life on the highest plane.

EPHESIANS presents "the church, which is his body" (Ephesians 1:22, 23) — this is the invisible church, of which Christ is the head.

COLOSSIANS presents Christ who is "the head of the body, the church" (Colossians 1:18). The emphasis is upon Christ rather than on the church.



PHILIPPIANS presents Christian living, with Christ as the dynamic: "I can do all things through Christ, who strengtheneth me" (Philippians 4:13).

PHILEMON presents Christian living in action in a pagan society. "If thou count me, therefore, a partner, receive him as myself. If he hath wronged thee, or oweth thee anything, put that on mine account" (Philemon 17, 18). The gospel walked in shoe leather in the first century — it worked.

In EPHESIANS, Christ is exalted above all things, God having "put all things under his feet" (Ephesians 1:22). Christ is the center of the circle of which the church is the periphery.
In COLOSSIANS, Christ is the fullness of God (pleroma). He is the periphery of the circle of which Christian living is the center (Colossians 2:9, 10).

In PHILIPPIANS, Christ is the center of the circle; Christian living is the periphery. The kenosis (emptying) is given (Philippians 2:5-8).

In PHILEMON, Christ is both the center and circumference: "Hearing of thy love and faith, which thou hast toward the Lord Jesus, and toward all saints" (Philemon 5).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

McGee: Ephesians

WRITER: Paul (1:1)

DATE: About A.D. 62
Paul arrived in Rome in A.D. 61 as a prisoner, and for 2 years he lived in his own hired house where he received those who came to him (Acts 28:16, 30).

THEME:
Ephesians reveals the church as God's masterpiece (poema — see Ephesians 2:10), a mystery not revealed in the Old Testament. It is more wonderful than any temple made with hands, because it is constructed of living stones and indwelt by the Holy Spirit (2:20-22). It is the body of Christ in the world — to walk as He would walk and to wrestle against the wiles of the devil (1:22, 23; 4:1; 6:11, 12). Someday the church will leave the world and be presented to Christ as a bride (5:25-32).

Dr. Pierson called Ephesians "Paul's third-heaven epistle." Another has called it "the Alps of the New Testament." It is the Mt. Whitney of the High Sierras of all Scripture. This is the Church Epistle.

TITLE:
The inscription (en Epheso) is omitted from the better manuscripts. It is thought that the Epistle to the Ephesians was a circular epistle, which included Ephesus and thereby explains the insertion of its name in some manuscripts. It is likewise thought that this epistle is the one to the Laodiceans referred to in Colossians 4:16. This could correspond to the last of the seven letters to the churches in Revelation 2 and 3 rather than to the first church. The contents of the Ephesian letter correspond more to the condition of the Ephesian church than to the one in Laodicea.

John Eadie concludes that this epistle is Paul's message to the church in Ephesus. He quotes from the testimony of the early church to sustain this thesis (Irenaeus, Clement of Alexandria, Origen, Tertullian, Cyprian).

Ephesians is the great church epistle, intended for all churches irrespective of geography, for the church is "one body" and its location is "in the heavenlies."

PAULAND EPHESUS:
The Holy Spirit forbade Paul, on his second missionary journey, to enter the province of Asia — where Ephesus was the prominent center.

> Now when they had gone throughout Phrygia and the region of Galatia, and were forbidden by the Holy Spirit to preach the word in Asia. (Acts 16:6)

He traveled west until he came to the sea, where it was necessary for God, by means of a vision, to direct him to Macedonia. He was led by the Spirit into Europe as far as Corinth, after which he returned by way of Ephesus.

> And he came to Ephesus, and left them there, but he himself entered into the synagogue, and reasoned with the Jews. (Acts 18:19)

Being favorably impressed by the opportunities for missionary work, he promised to return. This he did on the third missionary journey. He discovered that another, by the name of Apollos, had been there in the interval between his second and third missionary journeys; but Apollos had preached only the baptism of John — not the gospel of grace. Paul began a ministry there that was far-reaching. For two years he spoke in the school of Tyrannus, and the gospel penetrated into every center of the province of Asia. Evidently, it was at this time that the churches addressed in Revelation 2 and 3 were founded as a result of this ministry of Paul.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

> And he went into the synagogue, and spoke boldly for the space of three months, disputing and persuading the things concerning the kingdom of God. But when some were hardened, and believed not, but spoke evil of that way before the multitude, he departed from them, and separated the disciples, disputing daily in the school of one, Tyrannus. And this continued for the space of two years; so that all they who dwelt in Asia heard the word of the Lord Jesus, both Jews and Greeks. (Acts 19:8-10)

This was probably the "high water mark" in the missionary labors of Paul. He considered Ephesus his great opportunity and stayed there longer than in any other place. The people of Ephesus heard more Bible teaching from Paul than did any other people, which is the reason he could write to them the deep truths contained in this epistle.

> But I will tarry at Ephesus until Pentecost. For a great door, and effectual, is opened unto me, and there are many adversaries. (1 Corinthians 16:8, 9)

He met great opposition, but God marvelously preserved him, which encouraged him to continue (see Acts 19:23-41). Paul loved this church in Ephesus. His last meeting with the Ephesian elders was a tender farewell (see Acts 20:17-38).

Ephesus was the principal city of Asia Minor — and probably of the entire eastern section of the Roman Empire. It was virile and aggressive at this time, while the culture of Athens was decadent, and the commercialism of Corinth was corroded with immorality.

The Temple of Diana was one of the seven wonders of the ancient world, being the largest Greek temple ever constructed (418 by 239 feet). It was built over a marsh on an artificial foundation of skins and charcoal so that it was not affected by earthquakes.

> The quarries of Mount Prion had supplied the marble; the art and wealth of Ephesian citizens and the jewellery of Ephesian ladies had been plentifully contributed for its adornment; its hundred and twenty-seven graceful columns, some of them richly carved and colored, were each the gift of a king; its doors, ceiling, and staircase were formed respectively of cypress, cedar, and vine-wood; it had an altar by Praxiteles and a picture by Apelles; and in its coffers reposed no little of the opulence of Western Asia. Thus Xenophon deposited in it the tithe…which had been set apart at Athens from the sale of slaves at Cerasus…a many-breasted idol of wood, rude as an African fetish, was worshipped in its shrine, in some portion of which a meteoric stone may have been inserted, the token of its being "the image that fell from Jupiter"…still further, a flourishing trade was carried on in the manufacture of silver shrines…or models of a portion of the temple. These are often referred to by ancient writers, and as few strangers seem to have left Ephesus without such a memorial of their visit, this artistic "business brought no small gain to the craftsmen." But the spread of Christianity was fast destroying such gross and material superstition and idolatry, for one of its first lessons was, as Demetrius rightly declared — "they be no gods which are made with hands." (John Eadie, A Commentary on the Greek Text of the Epistle of Paul to the Ephesians)

OUTLINE:

I. Doctrinal, Chapters 1 — 3
The heavenly calling of the church (vocalization)

A. The church is a BODY, Chapter 1

1. Introduction, vv. 1, 2

2. God the Father planned the church, vv. 3-6
"A body hast thou prepared me" (Hebrews 10:5)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

3. God the Son paid the price for the church, vv. 7-12
   "Redemption through his blood" (v. 7)
4. God the Holy Spirit protects the church, vv. 13, 14
   "By one Spirit were we all baptized into one body" (1 Corinthians 12:13)
5. Prayer for knowledge and power, vv. 15-23

B. The church is a TEMPLE, Chapter 2 1. The material for construction, vv. 1-10

Those "dead in trespasses" (v. 1) are made into a living temple

2. The method of construction, vv. 11-18
3. The meaning of the construction (quo animo), vv. 19-22
   "Groweth unto an holy temple in the Lord" (v. 21)

C. The church is a MYSTERY, Chapter 3 1. The explanation of the mystery, vv. 1-4

Not revealed in the Old Testament

2. The definition of the mystery, vv. 5-13
   Jews and Gentiles are partakers of the same body — the church 3. Prayer for power and knowledge, vv. 14-21
   "Strengthened with might" (v. 16) and "to know the love of Christ" (v. 19)

II. Practical, Chapters 4 — 6
The earthly conduct of the church (vocation)

A. The church is a NEW MAN, Chapter 4 1. The exhibition of the new man, vv. 1-6

"Endeavoring to keep the unity of the Spirit" (v. 3)

2. The inhibition of the new man, vv. 7-16
   "No more children"(v. 14); "grow up into him"(v. 15); "perfect man" (v. 13)
3. The prohibition of the new man, vv. 17-32
   "Walk not as other Gentiles walk" (v. 17); "be ye kind one to another" (v. 32)

B. The church will be a BRIDE, Chapter 5 1. The engagement of the church, vv. 1-17

"For I have espoused you to one husband that I may present you as a chaste virgin to Christ" (2 Corinthians 11:2)

2. The experience of the church, vv. 18-24
   "Be filled with the Spirit" (v. 18)
3. The expectation of the church, vv. 25-33
   "That he might present it to himself a glorious church" (v. 27)

C. The church is a SOLDIER, Chapter 6

1. The soldier's relationships, vv. 1-9
   "No man that warreth entangleth himself with the affairs of this life" (2 Timothy 2:4)
2. The soldier's enemy, vv. 10-12
   "The wiles of the devil" (v. 11)
3. The soldier's protection, vv. 13-18
   "The whole armor of God" (v. 13)
4. The soldier's example — Paul, a good soldier of Jesus Christ, vv. 19-22
5. The soldier's benediction, vv. 23, 24

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

These notes, prepared by J. Vernon McGee, are for the purpose of giving assistance to the listeners of the THRU THE BIBLE RADIO program. They are to be used with the Bible and will be more meaningful as you look up all the Scripture references. Due to the necessary brevity of both notes and broadcasts, a list of recommended books is included for those wanting a more detailed study. These books may be obtained from a Christian library or bookstore or ordered from the publishers.

RECOMMENDED BOOKS

Bruce, F. F. The Epistle to the Ephesians. Westwood, New Jersey: Fleming H. Revell Co., 1961.

Eadie, John. A Commentary on the Greek Text of the Epistle of Paul to the Ephesians. London: R. Griffin, 1854.

Foulkes, Francis. The Epistle of Paul to the Ephesians. Grand Rapids, Michigan: Wm. B. Eerdmans Publishing Co., 1963.

Hendriksen, William. Exposition of Ephesians. Grand Rapids, Michigan: Baker Book House, 1967.

Hodge, Charles. An Exposition of Ephesians. Grand Rapids, Michigan: Wm. B. Eerdmans Publishing Co., 1856.

Ironside, H. A. In the Heavenlies. Neptune, New Jersey: Loizeaux Brothers, 1937. (Especially good for young Christians.)

Kelly, William. Lectures on Ephesians. Oak Park, Illinois: Bible Truth Publishers, n.d.

Kent, Homer A., Jr. Ephesians: The Glory of the Church. Chicago, Illinois: Moody Press, 1971. (An excellent, inexpensive survey.)

McGee, J. Vernon. Exploring Through Ephesians. Pasadena, California: Thru the Bible Books, 1961.

Meyer, F. B. Ephesians — Key Words of the Inner Life. Fort Washington, Pennsylvania: Christian Literature Crusade, n.d. (Devotional.)

Moule, Handley C. G. Studies in Ephesians. Grand Rapids, Michigan: Kregel Publications, 1893. (Excellent. Romans, Philippians, Colossians, and Philemon in the same series; 2 Timothy apart from this series.)

Paxson, Ruth. Wealth, Walk, and Warfare of the Christian. Westwood, New Jersey: Fleming H. Revell Co., 1939. (Excellent devotional emphasis.)

Strauss, Lehman. Devotional Studies in Galatians and Ephesians. Neptune, New Jersey: Loizeaux Brothers, 1957.

Vaughan, W. Curtis. Ephesians: A Study Guide Commentary. Grand Rapids, Michigan: Zondervan Publishing House, n.d.

Wiersbe, Warren W. Be Rich. Wheaton, Illinois: Victor Books, n.d.

Wuest, Kenneth S. Ephesians and Colossians in the Greek New Testament. Grand Rapids, Michigan: Wm. B. Eerdmans Publishing Co., 1953.

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

49 Ephesians 01 01 04 J Vernon McGee Thru the Bible https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=qcx_2HfZatk [Audio]

This is the audio corresponding to the preceding "The Prison Epistles" notes.

McGee – Introduction to the History of Ephesus https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=YzLJRNKqQFs [Audio]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Here also example of McGee's preaching, both Video and Audio:

But God by J. Vernon McGee
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=fJeNqnekQJQ [Video]

On a Clear Day You Can See Forever by J. Vernon McGee https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=69_MhdniYY8 [Video] Includes mention about Theonomy

Dr. J. Vernon McGee - A Perplexed Pharisee In the Presence of the Saviour https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Plqng1iq8f0 [Video]

Psychological Preaching - J Vernon McGee - FULL Sunday Sermons
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Tm4d0o7oy9w [Audio] Wrong type of self-esteem = arrogance; warning about Carl Rogers

The Power of the Word of God by J. Vernon McGee https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=bIMXRmS0pto [Video]

See also*:

Dr. Thomas Constable's Expository Notes

Dr. Utley – Ephesians vs Colossians [Intro]

Dr. Wallace – Intro, Argument and Outline

Paul's First Roman Imprisonment (2 Years)
http://www.biblecharts.org/apostlepaulcharts/12%20-%20Pauls%20First%20Roman%20Imprisonment.pdf [PDF]

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Ephesians Compared With Colossians

Colossians, Ephesians, Philippians and Philemon (275 pages) (Dr. Bob Utley) http://www.ibiblio.org/freebiblecommentary/pdf/EN/VOL08.pdf [PDF]

See also: Introduction to Ephesians https://bible.org/seriespage/introduction-ephesians-0

The literary relationship between Paul's two letters (by Dr. Utley, see above link)

1. Paul heard of the heresy in these churches which he had never visited personally from Epaphras.

2. Paul wrote a hard-hitting letter in short, emotional sentences, directed at the false teachers. The central theme was the cosmic lordship of Jesus. This is known as Paul's letter to the Colossians.

3. Apparently, soon after writing Colossians, with time on his hands in prison, he developed these same themes. Ephesians is characterized by long sentences and developed theological concepts (1:3-14, 15-23; 2:1-10, 14-18, 19-22; 3:1-12, 14-19; 4:11-16; 6:13-20). It takes Colossians as a starting point and draws out its theological implications. Ephesians' central theme is the unity of all things in Christ, which was a contrast to the incipient Gnostic concept.

Related literary and theological structure

See*: Ephesians – Charts/Outlines

Genre of Letter Writers

Similarity of the basic structure

a. they have very similar openings

b. they have doctrinal sections dealing primarily with Christ

c. they have practical sections admonishing Christian lifestyle using the same categories, terms and phrases

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

d. they have closing verses exactly alike in 29 consecutive words in Greek, with only two different words added in Colossians.

Similarity of words or short phrases

Eph. 1:1c	and Col. 1:2a	"faithful"
Eph.1:4	and Col. 1:22	"holy and blameless"
Eph. 1:7	and Col. 1:14	"redemption. . .forgiveness"
Eph. 1:10	and Col. 1:20	"all things. . .heaven. . .earth"
Eph. 1:15	and Col. 1:3-4	"heard. . .love for all the saints"
Eph. 1:18	and Col. 1:27	"the riches of the glory"
Eph. 1:27	and Col. 1:18	"head. . .church"
Eph. 2:1	and Col. 1:13	"you were dead"
Eph. 2:16	and Col. 1:20	"reconcile. . .cross"
Eph. 3:2	and Col. 1:25	"stewardship"
Eph. 3:3	and Col. 1:26,27	"mystery"
Eph. 4:3	and Col. 3:14	"unity"
Eph. 4:15	and Col. 2:19	"head" and "grow"
Eph. 4:24	and Col. 3:10, 12, 14	"put on . . ."
Eph. 4:31	and Col. 3:8	"anger" "wrath" "malice" "slander"
Eph. 5:3	and Col. 3:5	"immorality" "impurity" "greed"
Eph. 5:5	and Col.3:5	"idolatry" (coveting)
Eph. 5:6	and Col. 3:6	"the wrath of God"
Eph. 5:16	and Col. 4:5	"making the most of the time"

Theologically synonymous concepts

Eph. 1:3	and Col. 1:3	a prayer of thanks
Eph. 2:1,12	and Col. 1:21	alienation from God
Eph. 2:15	and Col. 2:14	hostility of Law
Eph. 4:1	and Col 1:10	worthy walk
Eph. 4:15	and Col. 2:19	Christ's body growing to maturity from its Head
Eph. 4:19	and Col. 3:5	sexual impurity
Eph.4:22,31	and Col. 3:8	"lay aside" sins
Eph.4:32	and Col. 3:12-13	Christians kind to one another
Eph. 5:4	and Col. 3:8	Christian speech
Eph. 5:18	and Col. 3:16	filling of Spirit = word of Christ
Eph. 5:20	and Col. 3:17	thanksgiving to God for all things
Eph. 5:22	and Col. 3:18	wives be subject to husbands

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Eph. 5:25	and Col. 3:19	husbands love your wives
Eph. 6:1	and Col. 3:20	children obey your parents
Eph. 6:4	and Col. 3:21	fathers do not provoke children
Eph. 6:5	and Col. 3:22	slaves obey masters
Eph. 6:9	and Col. 4:1	masters and slaves
Eph. 6:18	and Col. 4:2-4	Paul's request for prayer

See also*:

Dr. Wallace – Ephesians: Intro, Argument and Outline (Dependence on Colossians)

Theopedia: Colossians
https://www.theopedia.com/epistle-to-the-colossians

See more Ephesians vs Colossians on next pages…

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only
Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

Ephesians and Colossians

(Source: Zondervan Bible Commentary)

A comparison of vocabularies shows clearly what has always been known, that these two letters have much in common. Indeed they have, though they have some fundamental differences also.

(a) Words

The evidence of word-lists shows that the letters are close together as to date, and that there is an overlapping of related themes. The result is that one often throws light upon the other. It is instructive to compare Eph. 1:4 with Col. 1:22, 23, 28; 1:17 with 1:9; 1:20 ff. with 2:10; 2:5 f. with 3:3; 3:1–5 with 1:26; 3:16–19 with 1:27; 4:13–16 with 2:19; 4:20–24 with 3:10; 5:3–7 with 3:5–8; 5:5–17 with 4:5; 5:18 f. with 3:16; 5:22–24 with 3:18; 5:25–27 with 1:28; 6:21 f. with 4:7 f. For almost identical phraseology compare Eph. 1:7 with Col. 1:14; 2:5 with 2:13; 3:2 with 1:25; 4:16 with 2:19; 4:22–24 with 3:8–10; 4:32 with 3:13; 5:19 f. with 3:16 f. Three words common to these letters will repay closer study, i.e. oikonomia, plan or stewardship; plērōma, fulness; and mystērion, mystery. That they are used with different meanings is hard to substantiate satisfactorily, for context determines precise meanings, and many words in any case have a degree of ambiguity and some range of meaning.

(b) Style

There are slight differences of style. For example, a fulness of expression in Eph. which is unusual: 3:5 'his holy apostles and prophets'; and a tendency to hyperbole: 1:19; 3:8, 20. A softer, heavier style which may be attributed to the fact that in Col. Paul is in battle with opponents whilst in Eph. he is not dealing with any pressing situation and he may well have relaxed his rule to eschew any 'excellency of speech' (1 C. 2:1, 4). Mixing of metaphors, abrupt transitions and large parentheses are typical of Paul's style, and can scarcely be hidden, nor indeed convincingly copied.

(c) Contents

Col. is aimed at a particular local need and therefore contains what is absent from Eph.: personal greetings (4:9–17); doctrinal warnings (2:6–9); arguments against error (2:16–23); a developed Christology (1:15–20), Eph. being concerned with ecclesiology. Col. 4:18 is something which would necessarily be omitted from a circular.

(d) Viewpoint

The only important question of divergence in a matter common to both letters concerns the headship of Christ. It is pointed out that this is ecclesiastical in Eph. 5:23, but cosmic in Col. 2:10. But Eph. contains 1:22; and Col. contains 1:18 and 2:19. The headship of Our Lord is in fact universal, and within this is His headship of the Church which is organic rather than organizational.

Destination and Occasion

The following things have to be taken into account in any satisfactory explanation of this. i. Early MSS and writers witness to the omission of 'in Ephesus' at 1:1. ii. All MSS nevertheless refer to the letter as To Ephesians. iii. Marcion calls it the epistle to the Laodiceans. iv. There are no personal greetings. v. The letter does not deal with any local questions, nor is it polemic in character. vi. Tychicus, of the province of Asia (Ac. 20:4), accompanied the letter to a definite circle of brethren. vii. Paul wrote from prison (3:1; 4:1), probably from Rome (6:20). viii. Eph. 3:2 might be considered rhetorical, but not 1:15. Paul envisaged a circle large enough to include some with whom he was unacquainted.

Epaphras had brought somewhat disturbing news about the churches in the area of Colossae (Col. 1:7, 8; 4:12, 13), necessitating a letter attacking error. Having dealt with that Paul might well consider the time opportune for a positive constructive summary of his teaching without having to turn aside to deal with controverted points. The Gnostics were developing their doctrines into a philosophical scheme. While

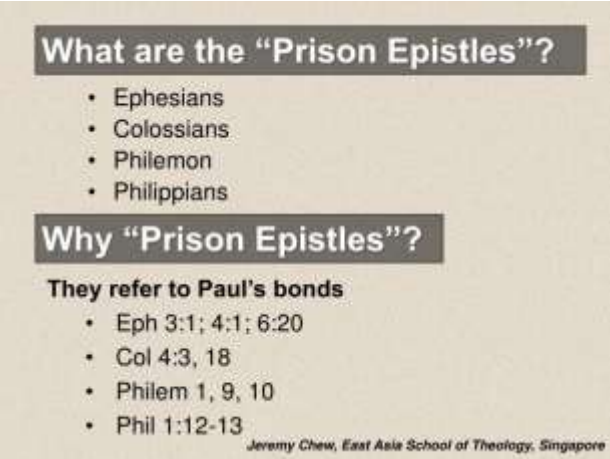
 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Tychicus waited for some turning point in events at court to carry news to Asia (Eph. 6:21; Col. 4:7, 8) Paul would have time to lay out with precision an encyclical letter, which would inevitably be coloured by the recent composition of Colossians, and also have connections with all his other letters of any importance. With the issue of his trial soon to be reached a clear statement of the inspired basis and significance of the believing Jews' and Gentiles' union in the Church was now needed for the Church at large, together with a clarification of this in the light of the divine purpose in history. Ephesians is just such a letter. It would certainly be sent to an important and strategic centre whence a truly Pauline church could circulate it widely. Either the original had a blank space for the destination to be filled in, and the different handwriting then set the contemporary textual critics questioning it, or, perhaps more likely, the address to Ephesus was deleted from the circulated copies. Marcion probably saw one with Laodicea entered therein. Local matters and personal greetings would obviously be omitted, and the verbal instructions to Tychicus could cover all that Paul wanted to say to churches he knew personally. See 6:21 where the 'you also' perhaps envisages a larger circle of recipient churches.

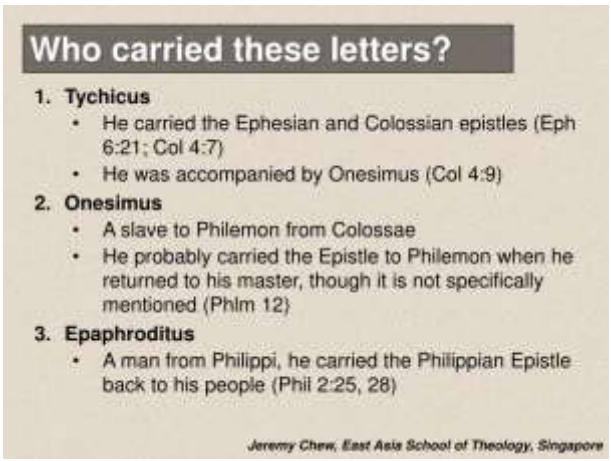
A Comparison of Ephesians and Colossians

https://onenesspentecostal.com/ephcolossians.htm

COLOSSIANS AND EPHESIANS COMPARED

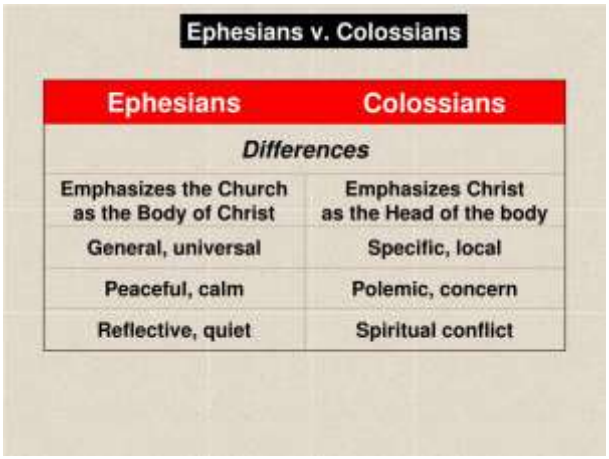


COLOSSIANS	EPHESIANS
CHRIST AND THE COSMOS	CHRIST AND THE CHURCH
Emphasis on Christ Head of the Church	Emphasis on the Church Body of Christ
MORE PERSONAL; LOCAL	LESS PERSONAL; LOFTY
COMBATS ERROR DIRECTLY	COMBATS ERROR INDIRECTLY
TONE: intensity and tumult of a battlefield	TONE: calmness of surveying the field after victory

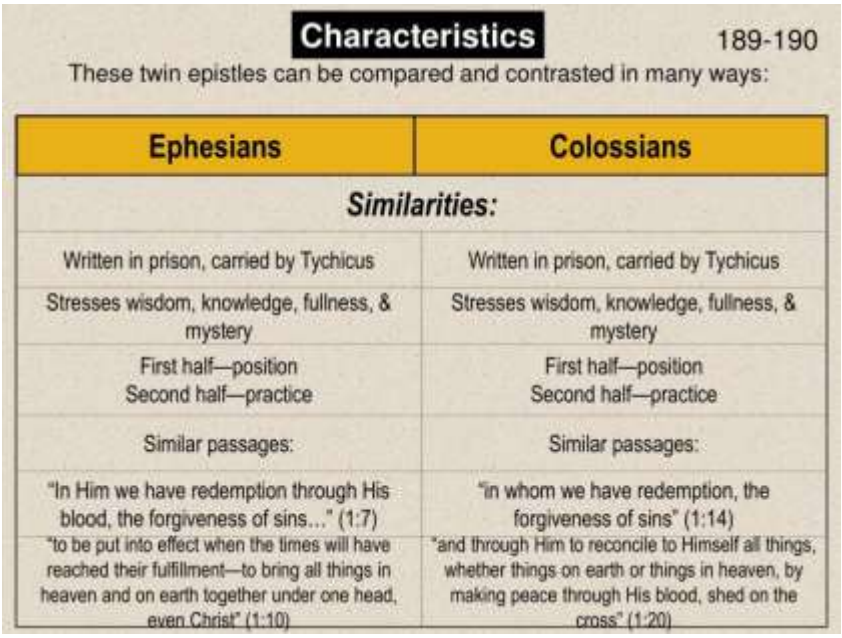


Source: http://www.danielakin.com/wp-content/uploads/old/Resource_201/Exposition%20of%20Ephesians%20-%202.pdf [PDF]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



The Prison Epistles - PowerPoint PPT Presentation (selected slides)



https://www.slideserve.com/aelwen/the-prison-epistles

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Possible chronology of Paul's writings following F. F. Bruce and Murry Harris with minor adaptions.

	Book	Date	Place of Writing	Relation to Acts
1	Galatians	48	Syrian Antioch	14:28; 15:2
2	I Thessalonians	50	Corinth	18:5
3	II Thessalonians	50	Corinth
4	I Corinthians	55	Ephesus	19:20
5	II Corinthians	56	Macedonia	20:2
6	Romans	57	Corinth	20:3
7-10	Prison Letters
	Colossians	early 60's	Rome
	Philemon	early 60's	Rome
	Ephesians	early 60's	Rome
	Philippians	late 62-63	Rome	28:30-31
11-13	Fourth Missionary Journey		Ephesus (?)
	I Timothy	63 (or later,	Macedonia
	Titus	63 but before
	II Timothy	64 a.d. 68)	Rome

RECIPIENTS

A. Many manuscripts (Chester Beatty Papyri, P^{46}; Sinaiticus, א; Vaticanus, B; Origen's Greek text, and Tertullain's Greek text) omit "in Ephesus" in 1:1. The RSV and Williams translations omit the phrase.

B. The Greek grammar of v. 1 can accommodate a place name. Possibly, as a circular letter, the place name of the church was left blank so it could be supplied when read aloud to the churches. This might explain the phrase in Col. 4:15-16, "letter from the Laodiceans," which was possibly the Book of Ephesians (Marcion called Ephesians by the title "letter to the Laodiceans").

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

C. Ephesians was written primarily to Gentiles, 2:1; 4:17, whom Paul had not personally met, 1:15; 3:2. The churches in the Lycus River Valley (Laodicea, Hierapolis, and Colossae) were started, not by Paul, but by Epaphras (Col. 1:7; 4:12; Philemon 23).

Another chronology…

Chronology and Locations of the Writing of Acts and Paul's Letters

http://www.aschmann.net/BibleChronology/WherePaul%27sLettersWereWritten-changes%20since%202017-06-23.pdf [PDF]

See: Ephesians – Paul's Journeys / Timeline

See also*:

Dr. Thomas Constable's Expository Notes

J.V. McGee Background – The Prison Epistles

and

Dr. Wallace Introduction starting on following page…

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Ephesians: Introduction, Argument, and Outline (Dr. Daniel B. Wallace)

https://bible.org/seriespage/10-ephesians-introduction-argument-and-outline

I. Introduction

A. The Author

Except for the pastorals, Ephesians has the worst credentials for authenticity, in critical circles, among all of Paul's epistles. The argument against Ephesians' authenticity, however, rests exclusively on internal evidence, for as even Kümmel admits, "without question Ephesians was extraordinarily well attested in the early Church."[1]

1. External Evidence

Ephesians is found in the two earliest canons, Marcion's (who gives it the title "Laodiceans") and the Muratorian canon. Clement of Rome, Hermas, Barnabas, Ignatius, and Polycarp all allude to it. Tertullian, Clement of Alexandria, and Origen all quote from it. Further, it is found in $\mathfrak{P}^{46}$, the earliest Pauline MS, normally dated at c. 200 CE (though recently one scholar has dated this papyrus in the 70s CE![2]).

2. Internal Evidence

Our discussion will follow (roughly) the lines of Wood's essay: traditional arguments for authenticity, arguments against Pauline authorship, and responses to the critical assessment.[3]

a. Traditional Arguments for Authenticity

There are three traditional internal arguments used for authenticity.

1) Explicit Statements

"In the introduction the author identifies himself and then proceeds in typically Pauline fashion to ascribe his apostolic authority to the will of God (Eph 1:1; cf. 2 Cor 1:1; Gal 1:1; Col 1:1). Paul's name reappears later (3:1) as in his undisputed letters (2 Cor 10:1; Gal 5:2; Col 1:23; 1 Thess 2:18)."[4] This, of course, is not to say that the letter must be by Paul, but it is to argue that without such internal testimony, no such claim could be made.[5]

2) Literary Affinities

Both in terms of structure and vocabulary, Ephesians "smells" Pauline. Structurally, we see the same sequence of salutation, thanksgiving, doctrinal exposition, moral appeal, final courtesies, and benediction. This outline, of course, represents the usual practice in letter-writing in Paul's day, but a comparison with the non-Pauline documents underlines his distinctive approach, particularly in his treatment of ethics as an extension of theology.[6]

In terms of vocabulary, "many words not found elsewhere in the NT occur both in Ephesians and in the rest of Paul's letters. . . . [Indeed,] the vocabulary approximates more closely to that of the earlier Pauline correspondence than does that of Colossians, the authenticity of which is scarcely questioned."[7]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

3) Theological Consistency

This epistle is thoroughly consistent with Paul's undisputed letters in its theology. Yet, this consistency is not wooden: the language is different, sometimes a new angle on an old theme is developed, there is a detachment involved (as seen by the lack of personal references). Even Mitton, the great champion of inauthenticity in this century, starts his argument with the remarkable concession, "Pauline authorship can rightly be assumed until it is disproved."[8]

b. Arguments Against Pauline Authorship

The arguments against authenticity can be grouped into three large categories: historical, linguistic/literary, theological.

1) Historical Arguments

There are two historical arguments: (1) assuming the salutation "to the saints in Ephesus" in 1:1 to be genuine, Paul could not have written this letter because he betrays no personal acquaintance with his audience (cf. 1:15); (2) the author's personal references are forced and artificial (cf. 3:4 where he speaks of the "holy apostles" which, since it includes him, seems pretentious).

2) Linguistic/Literary Arguments

There are three linguistic/literary arguments: (1) the vocabulary is not as Pauline as it could be, there being thirty-five (35) words which Paul never uses elsewhere, though some of these occur in early patristic writings; (2) the style "is thought to be much more complex and cumbersome than Paul's usual lively presentation"[9]; and (3) Ephesians displays a demonstrable dependence on Paul's undisputed letters, particularly Colossians (as many as 73 verses are virtually identical), yet many of the terms are not used in the same way (e.g., "head," "mystery," "fullness," etc.).

3) Theological Discrepancies

The theology of Ephesians seems quite advanced beyond Paul's undisputed writings: the church is now universal; there is a refined Christology; "in Christ" is now instrumental rather than mystical (some might call this a regression); etc. Further, some of this seems at odds with the undisputed letters (especially the "in Christ" formula). Finally, there is an absence of some of the typically Pauline themes: justification by faith is not mentioned in those terms; there is little emphasis on eschatology; etc.

In sum, these three arguments have been sufficient to convince perhaps the majority of NT scholars that Ephesians is not authentic. Many scholars argue that Ephesians was the product of a disciple of Paul who produced this epistle as sort of an introduction to the corpus Paulinum.

c. Responses to the Denial of Pauline Authorship

1) Historical Arguments

This is admittedly the weakest argument against Pauline authorship. First, the salutation in 1:1 ("in Ephesus") is not found in the best MSS, prompting at least the probability that this letter was originally intended to be a circular epistle (see later discussion under "destination"). Second, that the author called the apostles "holy" (ἅγιοι) in 3:4 is not different in kind than his addressing the audience as "saints" (ἅγιοι).

Further, there is an interesting self-deprecating note which is fully consonant with Pauline authorship. In 3:8 the author says that his is "less than the least of the saints." Not only is this in the context of the "holy apostles" (which necessarily rules out pretension in 3:4), but it makes an advance over the apostle's similar statement in 1 Cor 15:9 ("I am the least of the apostles"). This is a subtle, yet powerful, piece of internal evidence on behalf of authenticity, for not only does Paul not merely mimic his earlier self-assessment (as a forger might be prone to do), but he evidences development in his own Christian walk. Although some regard this self-deprecation as theatrical, a careful reading of the later pseudepigraphical literature never reveals any forger following the same track. In other words, if this is the work of a later writer, he is the only one of the scores of apostolic would-be copyists to have done this. Almost universally, later pseudepigraphists (as well as early patristic writers) elevate the apostles, placing them on untouchable pedestals. Unless parallels to Eph 3:8 could be produced in the later writings, the most objective reading of this verse is as an authentic statement of the apostle to the Gentiles.[10]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

2) Linguistic/Literary Arguments

a) Vocabulary. Although it is true that the author employs thirty-five words not found elsewhere in the Pauline corpus, this is comparable to Galatians (31) and Philippians (40), two undisputed books! Not only this, but Ephesians is longer than either Galatians or Philippians, making it proportionately better off than either of them. We might add here that although some of the unique terms in Ephesians show up only in patristic literature (e.g., "in the heavenlies"), this may well be due to the fathers borrowing from Ephesians, rather than the other way around.

b) Style (and the Role of an Amanuensis). Much more serious than mere lexical stock is the issue of style. It is undeniable that Ephesians is not nearly as lively, but is in fact more reflective in its style. Part of this must surely be explained on the basis of the occasion: Ephesians betrays no pressing battles, no occasion which has gotten under Paul's skin. As Wood remarks, "He could afford to be more reflective. The style of Ephesians matches Paul's mood."[11]

If we were to stop here, we would do a great injustice to the evidence. To be sure, the style is more reflective. But there is more; the syntax simply does not seem to be Paul's. In particular, the opening salutation (1:3-14) is one long, cumbersome sentence. One scholar called it "ein Monstrosität!" Although Paul is known for anacolutha, these occur almost exclusively when his emotions get the better of him (especially in Galatians and 2 Corinthians). Such is hardly the case here. Further, there are several constructions in this letter which are unparalleled in the undisputed books.

In response, the possibility of an amanuensis being responsible for some of the wording is not at all unlikely. Longenecker (among several others) has shown that the nonliterary papyri display several different kinds of amanuenses at work—sometimes they wrote by dictation, other times, with greater freedom. His application to the Pauline epistles is illuminating:

Just how closely the apostle supervised his various amanuenses in each particular instance is, of course, impossible to say. The nonliterary Greek papyri suggest that the responsibilities of an ancient secretary could be quite varied, ranging all the way from taking dictation verbatim to "fleshing out" with appropriate language a general outline of thought. Paul's own practice probably varied with the special circumstances of the case and with the particular companion whom he employed at the time. More time might be left to the discretion of Silas and Timothy (cf. 1 Thess 1:1; 2 Thess 1:1) or to Timothy alone (cf. 2 Cor 1:1; Col 1:1; Philem 1; Phil 1:1) than to Sosthenes (cf. 1 Cor 1:1) or Tertius (cf. Rom 16:22)—and perhaps much more to Luke, who alone was with Paul during his final imprisonment (cf. 2 Tim 4:11).[12]

There are two other factors to consider in this issue of an amanuensis: (1) the occasion for the writing of this letter (including the method of composition), and (2) the fact that this is one of Paul's later writings. We will address the compositional issue later, but for now it should be observed that the most disputed letters in the Pauline corpus are those which were written toward the end of his life. Apart from 2 Thessalonians (which is sometimes disputed), all of the disputed letters, if authentic, would be dated in the 60s. The significance of this may be that as time progressed, and as Paul dictated more and more letters (most of them now lost), his long-time companions could be trusted more and more to work from an annotated outline, rather than copy down a verbally dictated letter. If so, then any arguments from vocabulary or stylistic considerations which do not take sufficient account of an amanuensis at work are immediately suspect.[13] Still, the final product would be Paul's responsibility, and since he customarily appended a personal note at the end of each of his letters (cf. 2 Thess 3:17), there is ample evidence that he read over the letter carefully before it was sent.[14]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

c) Dependence on Colossians. There are four arguments we can use on behalf of authenticity in light of the dependence upon Colossians.

1) The verbal proximity between these two letters is exactly what we might expect, given the historical reconstruction that these were both sent to Asia Minor at the same time (cf. Eph 6:21-22/Col 4:7-8). This is a pattern already established in the Corinthian correspondence, as well as the Thessalonian letters. Indeed, one might even argue that Paul's style is quite amorphous, though its fluidity is in somewhat of a fixed state for a short period of time. (Hence, the reason the pastorals are so similar is, again, because they were sent at about the same time to the same general vicinity).

2) "On the other hand, would an imitator have dealt so freely with the text of Colossians? Is it not probable that he would have adhered more slavishly to the script? It is when an author borrows from himself that he can take liberties with what is after all his own material."[15]

3) Upon close analysis, what is most remarkable is that there is only one verse which is identical in both Ephesians and Colossians: Eph 6:22/Col 4:8.[16] Yet this verse is quite mundane with respect to the great theological truths found in these two letters, for it simply details the reasons why Paul is sending Tychicus! For Eph 6:21-22/Col 4:7-8, there are 32 words in sequence; in the rest of the parallels, at most only seven or eight-word parallels occur. This poses a major problem for the forgery view: How could a forger parallel the thought of Colossians so closely, without, save one verse, quoting verbatim from it for more than a few words? What forger would be so careful with Colossians all the way through, only to stumble over Tychicus? But there is a further problem with the forgery view.

4) In my examination of the pseudepigrapha, the duplication between Ephesians and Colossians is unparalleled. The pseudepigraphical letter to the Laodiceans, for example, is an unimaginative patchwork from four of Paul's letters. The leading characteristics of forgeries is that they are unimaginative, make no new theological advances (except in the area of ecclesiastical hierarchy), and they borrow excessively from more than one authentic epistle. In this respect, Ephesians is unique: it is highly original, develops Pauline theology to a higher level, and borrows excessively only from Colossians (though there are, to be sure, hints from other epistles). Not only this, but the pseudepigrapha usually borrow from the main epistles of Paul; Ephesians is borrowing from one of Paul's less popular letters. These are weighty considerations against the imitation theory. (See also: Dr. Utley – Ephesians vs Colossians)

3) Theological Discrepancies

Although it is certainly true that theological formulation in Ephesians is, at times, different than Paul's earlier letters (which may be no more than a function of the amanuensis), and further, that it does seem to be more developed theologically, "mere differences of doctrine cannot be accepted as evidence of dissimilar authorship unless a genuine lack of harmony is proved."[17] The case is quite similar to the relation of Galatians to Romans: the first, an occasional letter, is less developed theologically; the second, a more reflective letter, is more developed. Both the time when written and the reason for writing shape Paul's style and theological statements. "That the theology of the Epistle [of Ephesians] is more fully developed than in any of its predecessors is so far from being inimical to the presupposition of a Pauline origin that it actually befriends it."[18]

By way of conclusion, although the internal arguments against authorship are weighty, once regard for the role of an amanuensis, genuine theological development in Paul, and the reason for the writing of this letter are taken into account, these arguments are not as impressive. Apostolic authorship must still be given the palm, especially since the external evidence is so clear and early.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

B. Place of Origin

The traditional view that this letter was written while Paul was in a Roman prison has been assailed from two corners: some claim Ephesus is a better starting point, others suggest Caesarea. Before deciding on this issue, it must first be recognized that, on the assumption of authenticity, where Paul was when he wrote Ephesians is where he was when he wrote Colossians and Philemon. This can be seen by several pieces of evidence: (1) the commendation of Tychicus, as the bearer of the letter, found in exactly the same form in both Eph 6:21-22 and Col 4:7-8, surely indicates that he was sent with both epistles at the same time; (2) the strong verbal overlap between Colossians and Ephesians must, if authentic, indicate that the two were written at the same time; (3) Colossians is inseparable from Philemon[19]—that is, they must both have been sent at the same time. Hence, all three letters were written and sent at the same time. Consequently, if there is anything in either Colossians or Philemon which helps to narrow down where Paul was imprisoned at the time of writing, such would equally apply to Ephesians.

1. Caesarea

A Caesarean imprisonment is improbable for two reasons: (1) Onesimus, the runaway slave, would hardly have gone to Caesarea. Not only would he not have escaped notice as easily, but he would most likely not have had very good access to Paul. In Rome, however, Paul was under house arrest and had relatively free mobility.[20] (2) In Phile 22 Paul requests Philemon to prepare lodging for him, in anticipation of his release. This would hardly be the case in Caesarea, however, for Paul appealed to Caesar, prolonging his imprisonment by more than two more years.

2. Ephesus

On behalf of Ephesus are two arguments (both negative in character): (2) the great distance between Rome and Colossae (1200 miles) suggests that Onesimus would hardly have made the journey; it would be easier for him to travel to a nearby city; (2) in Phile 22 Paul asks Philemon to prepare him lodging, suggesting that he intended on returning to Asia Minor after his release. But he had written the Romans a few years earlier of his plan on going westward, even to Spain (cf. Rom 1:10ff; 15:19ff.). It should be noted that both of these arguments only help an Ephesian imprisonment, not a Caesarean (because Caesarea is far from Asia Minor and because Asia Minor would conceivably be en route to Rome and Spain from Caesarea).

In response: (1) There is just as much likelihood that Onesimus would want to travel to Rome, because it was far away as to Ephesus because it was close by—especially since he robbed Philemon, giving himself travel funds.[21] Not only this, but he would surely have been detected in Ephesus by other Christians, perhaps even by some of Paul's traveling companions. But whether he would have been able to visit Paul before being detected is doubtful. (2) Paul could easily have changed his mind about going to Spain, or he might have wished to visit his friends in Asia Minor before journeying westward—especially to gain emotional strength after having suffered imprisonment for several years.

Not only this, but an Ephesian imprisonment is improbable: (1) We have no positive evidence that Paul was ever imprisoned in Ephesus. (2) If the "in Ephesus" in Eph 1:1 is original, then this view is almost impossible; even if not original, there is the strong possibility that Ephesians was sent to the churches in Asia Minor (with Ephesus being the port of entry, giving cause for the traditional view). And if so, then Paul most likely was elsewhere when all three letters were sent.

3. Rome

Both because of Paul's known imprisonment in Rome, and because of the tradition of a Roman imprisonment for these letters,[22] the burden of proof must rest with a non-Roman origin. As we have seen, the arguments against the Roman theory are not convincing. On behalf of Rome, however, is an important internal clue: Luke is with Paul during his imprisonment (Col 4:14; Phile 24). Luke's presence

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

with Paul is supported by Acts while Paul was in Rome, "whereas the Ephesian ministry of Paul does not occur in a 'we' section and it may reasonably be doubted whether Luke was with Paul during this period."[23]

In conclusion, the traditional view that Paul was in Rome when he wrote Ephesians, Colossians, and Philemon, is still the most reasonable view.

C. Date

This letter was sent while Paul was in prison in Rome (59-61 CE). Since the apostle gives no indication that he will be released soon (contra Philippians), it is likely that this was written before the end of his imprisonment. Further, it is obvious that it was sent along with the letter to the Colossians and the letter to Philemon. Once the occasion for the writing of Colossians/Philemon is established,[24] it can be reasonably supposed that all three letters were written sometime during the middle of Paul's imprisonment—hence, c. 60 CE. But more than that can be said here.

Philemon 22 seems merely to be an expression of the hope of release from prison, without giving any indication as to when. If this is read as an expression of imminent release, then the relative dating of Ephesians-Colossians-Philemon in relation to Philippians may need some revision. But other considerations certainly suggest that Philippians is the last of the so-called prison epistles: (1) Phile 22 may be a somewhat exaggerated statement (intended to reflect Paul's positive attitude more than the reality of imminence), for if Paul was in Rome, it would take him several weeks to travel to Asia Minor; (2) Epaphras is mentioned in Phile 23, as someone known to Philemon (cf. also Col 4:12), without any mention of his illness (cf. Phil 2:25ff.)—even though news of his illness was known to Christians outside of Rome (ibid.); (3) Only Timothy is with Paul when he wrote Philippians (Phil 2:19-21), while Luke, Demas, Aristarchus, Mark and Epaphras are with him when he wrote Colossians-Ephesians-Philemon (cf. Col 4:10-14; Phile 23-24). Whatever else this indicates, it is evident that Philippians cannot be dated at the same time as the other three epistles; (4) the final proof is that Paul sends Epaphroditus to the Philippians (Phil 2:25-30) with the epistle, while he is still with Paul when the apostle wrote the other three letters. All of this evidence points to Philippians being written not only at a different time than the other three prison epistles, but at a later time. Hence, a date of c. 60 CE is most appropriate for Ephesians, Colossians, and Philemon.

D. Destination

1. Ephesus

Traditionally, the letter has been assumed as having been sent to the church at Ephesus. However, in 1:1 the words "in Ephesus" (ἐν Ἐφέσῳ) are not found in the oldest and best MSS ($\mathfrak{P}^{46}$ ℵ* B* et al.), as well as MSS mentioned by Basil and the text of Origen. Not only this, but Marcion refers to the letter as having been sent to the Laodiceans, and Tertullian and Ephraim do not show awareness of the traditional designation.

In addition, there is good internal evidence to suggest that Ephesus was not the exclusive addressee: (1) the author evidences no direct knowledge of the recipients (cf. especially 1:15; 3:2 and 4:21 are also sometimes taken to indicate this); (2) the author deals with no personal problems, nor gives any personal greetings. What are we to make of this evidence?

2. An Introduction to the Pauline Corpus

Some regard it as conclusive that this letter was not sent to any particular church, but was instead intended to serve as an introduction to the corpus Paulinum. There are problems with this view, however. (1) Those same scholars also deny apostolic authorship to this epistle. If apostolic authorship is affirmed, this view is denied. (2) There is no evidence whatever that Ephesians ever headed the list of Pauline letters—either among the MSS or among the early canon lists. (3) The mention of Tychicus as the bearer of this letter is meaningless if this is intended as a preface to Paul's letters: "There is no adequate occasion for adding so personal and direct a reference to Tychicus when the other parts of the epistle are allegedly so impersonal."[25] (3) "The major difficulty is the literary problem. As an introduction to the whole Pauline corpus it is inconceivable that the writer would have given such preponderance to Colossians."[26]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

3. Laodicea

On the basis of (1) Marcion's title and (2) the reference in Col 4:16 to an epistle coming from Laodicea, some have concluded that this letter was originally sent to Laodicea. Although there is some plausibility to this view (and a modified form of it is indeed what we will adopt), the basic problem is that there is no MS evidence for "in Laodicea." As weak as "in Ephesus" is, "in Laodicea" is weaker still.

4. Circular Letter

In light of the textual uncertainty about "in Ephesus," as well as the lack of personal names and controversy, a widely held view is that this letter is a circular letter sent to the churches of Asia Minor. This almost has to be the case if the epistle is authentic, for (1) Eph 1:15 negates Ephesus as the exclusive recipient (since Paul spent three years in Ephesus and this statement could not therefore be made of them), and (2) Eph 6:21-22 ties the sending of this letter to the sending of Colossians (cf. Col 4:7-8).

Beyond this are two subsidiary points. (1) The textual problem in 1:1 is solved by the circular letter theory. In this case, the letter would have been carried by Tychicus and he would have sailed from Rome for Ephesus, the port of entry into Asia Minor. There probably was a blank space in Paul's letter as to location and Tychicus was to instruct each church in Asia Minor to fill in the blank. Since Ephesus had by far the largest church in Asia Minor, it is natural that "in Ephesus" would end up in most copies. Further, Tychicus immediately left Ephesus and went directly to Colossae (cf. Col 4:7-8) while the letter took on a life of its own. This brings us to our second argument. (2) Going counter-clockwise in Asia Minor, starting at Ephesus, Laodicea is the most natural stop between Colossae and Ephesus. The reference in Col 4:16 to the letter coming from Laodicea can quite naturally refer to a copy of Ephesians. That Marcion refers to Ephesians by that name ("to the Laodiceans") may well be due to ancient MS testimony to which he was privy. Once Tychicus had gone to Colossae, he would then return to Rome or go elsewhere in Asia Minor, but his letter-bearing responsibilities would be over once he got to Colossae.[27] It is quite possible either that the instructions about filling in the blank space in Paul's circular letter had gotten garbled or that they were carried out only orally as the letter was read in the various churches. If this were the case, the textual history of Eph 1:1 makes sense.[28]

E. Occasion/Purpose and Method of Composition

1. Occasion/Method of Composition

While Paul was sitting in prison, contemplating his upcoming trial and potential work in the west, he began formulating some parting comments to make to the churches of Asia Minor. As he dialogued with his amanuensis over its contents, a rough draft of Ephesians was probably put together in outline form. The amanuensis then began to fill in the details.

Then, startling news from the east came: there was a new heresy in Colossae which was infecting the church there. At about the same time, Onesimus appeared before Paul with his confession of abandoning and robbing his owner, Philemon.[29]

At this juncture, Paul decided several things: (1) write to the Colossians with appropriate warnings, though taking the material mostly from a letter which already addressed some of the very same issues in a larger perspective; (2) write to Philemon, urging him to take Onesimus back, as a freeman—and even to prepare a room for the apostle himself; (3) finish the letter to all the churches in Asia Minor and have it sent with the other two letters.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

If this reconstruction is correct, it fits several pieces of the puzzle: (1) the reason Ephesians looks so much like Colossians is because one letter was intentionally used as the basis for the other, with some necessary modifications made to fit the occasion. (2) The reason Ephesians does not look like the rest of Paul's letters (except Colossians) in style or vocabulary is because (in part) it was done as a contemplative piece, originally intending to be something of a swan song, summing up Paul's theology for the churches in Asia. (3) Since Colossians is an occasional letter, written with some urgency, the only way for a contemplative letter like Ephesians to have been sent at the same time is for Ephesians to have been written (at least in draft form) prior to Colossians. (4) When Paul learned of the new influx of heresy he changed his plans of going westward and decided to visit Asia one more time. This would not alter the fact that Ephesians was intended to be a reflective summary of his theology, but the initial occasion for the writing of Ephesians was a short-lived one which evaporated with news from Colossae.

2. Purpose

Originally, before Paul heard the news of heresy in Colossae, he intended to write to the churches in Asia Minor about Christ and the church. This was intended to be a summary of his theology in its most practical form. Since the churches had been grounded in the doctrines of individual (and vertical) reconciliation (justification by faith especially), they now needed to get along with one another (corporate and horizontal reconciliation). There was unity in their position in Christ; there needed to be unity in their practice in the church, too.

Ephesians, then, is similar to Romans and, at the same time, dissimilar: both epistles are contemplative, summing up key theological themes of the apostle to the Gentiles; but as Romans is an introductory letter, designed to establish a base for his ministry in the west, Ephesians is a parting note, intended on getting Christians to grow in unity and love with one another. There may be another similarity between the two letters: ever since Claudius' expulsion of Jews from Rome, there may well have been tension between Jewish Christians and Gentile Christians in the churches. Both Romans and Ephesians seem to betray this uneasiness and, in fact, both seem to address an attitude of Gentile superiority as an undercurrent adversely affecting the life of the church.

Note:

Amanuensis – where used in the Bible http://classic.net.bible.org/dictionary.php?word=Amanuensis

See also:

Dr. Thomas Constable's Expository Notes

J.V. McGee Background – The Prison Epistles

Dr. Utley – Ephesians vs Colossians [Intro]

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Ephesians Study Guides

The Uniqueness of Ephesians Among the Epistles https://bible.org/seriespage/1-uniqueness-ephesians-among-epistles

Did You Know? – Mysterious facts about Ephesus
http://www.ephesus.us/ephesus/did_you_know_ephesus.htm

Ephesians – An Inductive Bible Study http://www.grace-bible.org/uploads/publications/Ephesians_16_web.pdf [PDF]

Workbook on Ephesians – David Padfield
http://www.padfield.com/acrobat/nt/ephesian.pdf [PDF]

Ephesians Study Guide – Mark Copeland
http://executableoutlines.com/ep.htm

http://executableoutlines.com/pdf/ep_sg.pdf [PDF]

Ephesians Study Guide – Matt Hennecke
http://www.thinkonthesethings.com/materials/Eph.pdf [PDF]

ESV Study Bible – Ephesians Introduction Excerpt [Recommended]
http://www.centuryone.com/NT-excerpt-ephesians-intro.pdf [PDF]

An Introduction To The Book Of Ephesians https://bible.org/article/introduction-book-ephesians

Wikipedia: Ephesians

The Epistle to the Ephesians, also called the Letter to the Ephesians and often shortened to Ephesians, is the tenth book of the New Testament. Its authorship has traditionally been credited to Paul the Apostle but, starting in 1792, this has been challenged as Deutero-Pauline, that is, written in Paul's name by a later author strongly influenced by Paul's thought. [see counter by Dr. Danial Wallace below]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Ephesians Study Videos by Gene Getz from his Life Applications Study Bible

Dr. Getz Bio: http://www2.bhpublishinggroup.com/qr/GetzBible/author.asp

Regarding Dr. Gene Getz and the following videos: [Recommended]
Gene now serves as President of the Center for Church Renewal and has completed a 7-year Bible project using the Holman Christian Standard Bible. The "Life Essentials Study Bible" is the first Multi-Media Study Bible which contains 1,500 principles from Genesis to Revelation. Using QR codes associated with each biblical principle, the reader can access over 250 hours of video teaching on these principles by Dr. Getz. Gene also airs a 2-minute daily feature on numerous radio stations called "Bible Principles" which can also be accessed by going to www.bibleprinciples.org where you'll also discover information about Gene's Life Essentials Study Bible.

See https://bibleprinciples.org/ for access to the same teaching videos for Galatians (as above) and also for all the other books of the bible. (Video Search)

Here is the list of Life Application videos for Romans from the site:

Ephesians; Principle #1; Eph. 1:1-2; p. 1625
Communities of Faith: To apply most biblical exhortations in the New Testament effectively, we must think in terms of local churches.
Video

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Ephesians; Principle #2; Eph. 1:3-14; p. 1626
Our Position in Christ: Because of our eternal hope and secure relationship with God through Jesus Christ and the Holy Spirit, we should never cease to praise and worship Him.
Video

Ephesians; Principle #3; Eph. 1:15-19; p. 1626
Measuring Corporate Maturity: When we evaluate the maturity of any local church, we should look for the ways believers are manifesting faith, hope, and love in their relationships with God and one another.
Video

Ephesians; Principle #4; Eph. 2:1-10; p. 1627
God's Gift: When we present the message of hope in Christ, we must make sure that all people understand that good works do not contribute in any way to their salvation experience.
Video

Ephesians; Principle #5; Eph. 2:11-22; p. 1628
Oneness in Christ: Regardless of our ethnic backgrounds, social status, gender, or race, when we become believers we are to function as members of one family.
Video

Ephesians; Principle #6; Eph. 3:1-13; p. 1628
Servants of the Gospel: As unified members of Christ's body, we are to serve God and one another, demonstrating to both the visible and the invisible world the message of God's love and grace through Jesus Christ.
Video

Ephesians; Principle #7; Eph. 3:14-21; p. 1629
Experiencing God's Power: To live in God's will as individuals and as communities of faith, we must not only understand God's power but we must experience this power.
Video

Ephesians; Principle #8; Eph. 4:1-6; p. 1629
Walking Worthy: When we truly understand what God has done for all of us in Jesus Christ, we should respond by living godly lives in love and unity.
Video

Ephesians; Principle #9; Eph. 4:7-16; p. 1630
Building Up One Another: To become mature in Christ as local communities of faith, we must all function as members of one another.
Video

Ephesians; Principle #10; Eph. 4:17-24; p. 1631
Walking in Newness of Life: Since God chose each one of us to live holy lives, we are to become what He created us to be.
Video

Ephesians; Principle #11; Eph. 4:25-5:5; p. 1632
Walking in Love: Because of Christ's supreme act of love for us, we are to walk in love in all of our relationships.
Video

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Ephesians; Principle #12; Eph. 5:6-14; p. 1632
Walking in the Light: Because of our new life in Christ, we are to illuminate the darkness created by sin.
Video

Ephesians; Principle #13; Eph. 5:15-21; p. 1633
Walking Wisely: To walk wisely, we must continually allow the Holy Spirit to enlighten our hearts to discover what God's will is, particularly as revealed through the authors of Scripture.
Video

Ephesians; Principle #14; Eph. 5:22-6:9; p. 1634
Walking in Love and Submission: To walk in God's will, we must practice mutual love and submission in all of our relationships.
Video

Ephesians; Principle #15; Eph. 6:10-20; p. 1635
Walking in God's Strength: To walk worthy of our great calling in Christ, we must rely on God's strength and protection.
Video

Ephesians; Principle #16; Eph. 6:21-24; p. 1635
God-Ordained Communication: To experience God's blessings in our lives, we must communicate with one another.
Video

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Videos in this "Reference Notes on Ephesians" Section

N. T. Wright: Welcome to Study of Ephesians (2016)
http://ntwrightonline.org/portfolio-items/ephesians/ [links to video]

Overview of Ephesians in 15 Minutes by N. T. Wright (2010)
https://mysteryoffaithblog.com/2010/09/27/n-t-wright-overview-of-ephesians-in-15-minutes/ [links to video]

Why Ephesians? (audio-only – portion of above overview, with added slides and sounds)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=-9BBwS91rzU [Video]

The Bible Project: Ephesians (Introduction and Overview of book)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Y71r-T98E2Q [Video]

Ephesians 1:1-14 Summary of the Blessings 'in Him'
https://vimeo.com/202231068 [Video]
In this short video, Prof. N.T. Wright explains the beauty and wonder of how the benefits listed in Eph 1:1-14 are fulfilled in the Messiah, King Jesus.

One in Jesus: N.T. Wright on Predestination
http://oneinjesus.info/2015/12/n-t-wright-on-predestination/ [Links to his video]

The main purpose for including this is not for link to the video, but for the comments section that shows a good/respective/reasoned give and take by opposing views on the topic. (This resource references the same video as the direct link immediately below.)

Dr. N.T. Wright on Predestination, Election, Chosen (2014)
re: Romans 8:23-29, Ephesians 1:3-14, Romans 9-11
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=qKwIijhZW-M [Video]

What does Jesus say about Hell?
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=GRqyW_XT42o [Video]

Gene Getz Life Applications: Ephesians

J. Vernon McGee related videos (and audio)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

Videos about Ancient Ephesus

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

"Paul on the Unity of the Church" by N.T. Wright - Session One (2014)
Why Unity Mattered to Paul
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=1NZ2epO9cjI [Video]

Galatians 2, 1 Corinthians 8-10, etc.

"Paul on the Unity of the Church" by N.T. Wright - Session Two (2014)
Path to Unity: Messiah and the Spirit
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=cnB0j0HQa8Q [Video]

Ephesians esp. Chapter 3 (e.g., verse 10,); 1 Corinthians 8-10, Romans 14, etc.

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Getting The Most Out of Ephesians [NTWEPH]

The most successful tourist attraction to appear in London in recent years is the London Eye. From a distance it looks like a giant Ferris wheel, but this is no fun-fair ride. For a start, it's far, far bigger: it rises to 450 feet above the River Thames. Its thirty-two capsules can each hold twenty people, and it takes them half an hour to rotate the full circle. Plenty of time to have a wonderful view of all central London, with its historic buildings and palaces, its cathedrals and abbeys, its parks and gardens, with Big Ben and the Houses of Parliament in the foreground. The London Eye is, in fact, not only a wonderful sight in itself, visible from many points in the capital. It is the place from which you can get the best possible view of London. To do any better, you'd have to go up in an airplane, and indeed it [was] operated and run by a partnership including British Airways at one point [It's currenty Merlin Entertainment].

The letter to the Ephesians stands in relation to the rest of Paul's letters rather like the London Eye does to the rest of the capital. It isn't the longest or fullest of his writing, but it offers a breathtaking view of the entire landscape. From here, as the wheel turns, you get a bird's-eye view of one theme after another within early Christian reflection: God, the world, Jesus, the church, the means of salvation, Christian behavior, marriage and the family, and spiritual warfare. Like someone used to strolling around London and now suddenly able to see familiar places from unfamiliar angles—and to see more easily how they relate to each other within the city as a whole—the reader who comes to Ephesians after reading the rest of Paul will get a new angle on the way in which his thinking holds together.

This letter was originally intended as a circular to various churches in the Ephesus area. It was written around A.D. 60-62 while Paul, the apostle to the Gentiles, was in a Roman prison. (For an account of how Saul of Tarsus became Paul, a believer in Jesus the Messiah, read Ac 9:1-31.) A copy of this letter might well have remained in the possession of the church in Ephesus, and someone later on might have assumed that it was written to Ephesus rather than from there.

Since in Colossians—which is very similar to Ephesians in many ways—Paul says that he's sending a letter to Laodicea which will be passed on to them, it's clear he did indeed sometimes write circular letters. The present letter might even be that "letter to Laodicea," though we can't now be sure of that. And at the start of chapter 3 of the present letter, Paul seems to be talking to various people who don't know him and his work firsthand—which would hardly have applied in Ephesus itself, where he spent a long time (Ac 19). If we suppose that he intended the letter to go to several young churches within a hundred miles or so of Ephesus, we shan't go far wrong. (For more on this letter, also see my Paul for Everyone: The Prison Letters, on which this guide is based, published by SPCK and Westminster John Knox.)

As we study Ephesians in this guide, we look to be strengthened and encouraged as Christians for the new tasks that lie ahead. We should also remember that all genuine Christian life and action flows out of worship. True worship of the true God cannot help telling and retelling, with joy and amazement, the story of what this God has done in Jesus the Messiah. Enjoy the view. You won't get a better one.

Colossians 4: [15] Give my greetings to the brothers and sisters who are in Laodicea and to Nympha and the church that meets in her house. [16] And after you have read this letter, have it read to the church of Laodicea. In turn, read the letter from Laodicea as well.

See also*: Dr. Utley – Ephesians vs Colossians

The Bible Project: Ephesians

Continue to Ephesians Highlights by Chapter…

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Ephesians Highlights by Chapter

For introduction media see: Ephesians – Welcome / Intro.

Charts of Ephesians
https://www.slideshare.net/magiclimber/charts-of-ephesians

See previous page for getting the most out of Ephesians

Theme: Christ, the head of the church, has blessed us with all spiritual blessings.

AN EPHESIANS OVERVIEW

Sit	Walk	Stand
Our Position in Christ • Blessed with all spiritual blessings in Christ Jesus (1:3) • Seated with him in heavenly places with Christ (2:6)	Our Practice in Christ "The Five Walks"	Our Provision in Christ • The armor of God for the spiritual battle • Closing
Theological	Applicational
Eph. 1:3-3:21	Eph. 4:1-6:9	Eph. 6:10-20

© Dr. Daniel R. Lockwood

For more book structure charts see also: Ephesians – Charts/Outlines

Ephesians Chapter 1
Ephesians Chapter 2
Ephesians Chapter 3
Ephesians Chapter 4
Ephesians Chapter 5
Ephesians Chapter 6

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Ephesians Chapter 1

Predestination		vs 1-2 (Community/Getz)
NT Wright	Chart	vs 7 Redemption vs 10 vs 3-4	Chiastic	Church Universal/Local vs 5-6	Humor	Chp. Summary Outline

Election

Ephesians 1:1-14 (Verse by Verse)

In Christ

Ephesians TOC (Table of Contents)

Ephesians 1:3-14 (Doxology)

Return to: Ephesians Highlights (by Chapter, Main Menu)

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Ephesians 1:1-2

Gene Getz: Life Application Video

Ephesians; Principle #1; Eph. 1:1-2; p. 1625
Communities of Faith: To apply most biblical exhortations in the New Testament effectively, we must think in terms of local churches.
Video

Ephesians 1:3-14

Ephesians 1:3-14 are all one long sentence in the Greek. So really, it should all be looked at in one piece. But our western, English-speaking minds have trouble grasping such a long sentence, so the translators of our Bibles have split it up into more manageable sections.

Overall, the flow of this sentence is that we have spiritual riches [Blessings] from God the Father (Ephesians 1:4-6), from the Son (Ephesians 1:7-12) and from the Holy Spirit (Ephesians 1:13-14).

Source: https://redeeminggod.com/sermons/ephesians/ephesians-1_3-4/

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Ephesians 1:1-14 Verse by Verse

1 Paul, an apostle of Christ Jesus through the will of God, to the saints who are in Ephesus, the faithful in Christ Jesus:

2 grace to you and peace from God our father and the Lord Jesus Christ.

3 Blessed be the God and father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who blessed us with every spiritual blessing in the heavenly places in Christ,

4 for he chose ["chose" is similar to "elected"] us in him before the foundation [or creation] of the world to be holy and unblemished before his sight [,] /in love/,

5 having predestined us for adoption [as sons / children] into himself through Jesus Christ, according to the good favor [kind intention] of his will,

6 for [to] the praise of the glory of his grace which he graced us with [freely bestowed on us] in his beloved.

7 In him [In Christ] we have redemption through his blood, the forgiveness of transgressions [sins], according to the wealth of his grace

8 which he caused to overflow into [lavished on] us, in all wisdom and understanding

9 having made known to us what was the mystery [secret] of his will, according to his good favour [pleasure] which he purposed in him[self] [Christ]

10 in the dispensation [management/administration/plan] of the fullness of time(s), to recapitulate [head up / sum up / gather together / bring into one the whole / to unit] all things in Christ [Messiah], the things in heaven and the things on earth in him.

11 We were also allotted [obtained / assigned] an inheritance] in him,
-or- In Christ we too have been claimed as God's own possession
-or- In him we were also chosen (having been made heirs)
-or- In whom we also received [were made] an inheritance having been predestined according to the purpose of him who carries out all things according to the intention of his will,

12 for us to be to the praise of his glory those who are the first to hope in Christ [Messiah].

13 In him also we heard the word of truth, the gospel of your salvation, and having also believed in him we were sealed with the Holy Spirit of promise, 14 who is a first payment [guarantee / down payment] of our inheritance until the redemption of [God's] possession, for the praise of his glory.

[Edited by LY]

See also: Chiastic Structure of above text

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

Return to the beginning: Ephesians Highlights – Chapter 1 (Menu)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Ephesians 1:1-14 "Praise God From Whom All Blessings Flow"

"Praise God From Whom All Blessings Flow"
Ephesians 1:1-14

In the plan of salvation:

1.	We have been blessed by the Father.	1:1-6
	1) He has blessed us with a commission.	1:1-2
	2) He has blessed us in election.	1:3-4
	3) He has blessed us in separation.	1:4
	4) He has blessed us with affection.	1:4
	5) He has blessed us in predestination.	1:5
	6) He has blessed us with adoption.	1:5
	7) He has blessed us with union.	1:6
2.	We have been saved by the Son.	1:7-12
	1) We have redemption.	1:7-8
	2) We have revelation.	1:9-10
	3) We have riches.	1:11-12
3.	We have been sealed by the Spirit.	1:13-14
	1) We have God's protection.	1:13
	2) We have God's down payment.	1:14
	3) We are God's possession.	1:14
	4) We have God's praise.	1:14

Source: http://www.danielakin.com/wp-content/uploads/old/Resource_201/Exposition%20of%20Ephesians%20-%202.pdf [PDF]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Ephesians 1:1-14 Summary of the Blessings 'in Him'

https://vimeo.com/202231068 [Video]
In this short video, Prof. N.T. Wright explains the beauty and wonder of how the benefits listed in Eph 1:1-14 are fulfilled in the Messiah, King Jesus.

Ephesians 1:1-14 Blessings from God [NTWEPH Chp 1]

Have you noticed how sometimes you have a story in the back of your mind which keeps peeping out even when you're talking about something else?

Imagine you've come back from work and the bus has been late again. You stood for half an hour on the station platform getting cold and cross. Then when it arrived it was so full of people you had to stand, uncomfortably, all the way home.

But when you tell your family or friends about the trip you find you're also telling them a larger story. Everybody knows the buses aren't running properly because the present government has allowed the system to get worse and worse. But there's an election coming soon, and then you'll be able to vote out this government and put in another one that might get you decent bus service.

So as you talk about your anger over this evening's ride, you are talking as well about your anger with the present government. And as you talk about how things could be better with the bus you normally catch, you are talking as well about how good things are going to be with the new government. There is a larger framework, a larger story, within which your own smaller stories become more interesting and important.

Read Ep 1:1-10. Paul's great prayer at the opening of this letter is a celebration of the larger story within which every single Christian story—every story of individual conversion, faith, spiritual life, obedience and hope—is set. Only by understanding and celebrating the larger story can we hope to understand everything that's going on in our own smaller stories, and so observe God at work in and through our own lives. Before Paul tells the story, however, he introduces himself.

How do you see the beginnings of this plan unfolding today?

> Paul tells the story of the cross of Jesus in such a way that we can hear, underneath it, the ancient Jewish story of Passover. Passover was the night when the angel of death came through the land of Egypt, and the blood of the lamb sprinkled on the doorposts rescued the Israelites from the judgment that would otherwise have fallen on them. Telling the story like this—the story of Jesus the Messiah, and the meaning of his death, told in such a way as to bring out the fact that it's the fulfillment of the Exodus story—is a classic Jewish way of celebrating the goodness of God. Worship, for Christians, will almost always involve telling the story of what God has done in and through Jesus.

Read Ep 1:11-14. What is our promised inheritance (v. 11)? How do we know we will receive this inheritance (vv. 12-14)?

> The word Paul uses for "guarantee" here is a word used at the time in legal or commercial transactions. Suppose I wanted to buy a plot of land from you, valued at $10,000. We might agree that I would pay you the first $1,000 as a "down payment," guaranteeing the full sum to come in the future when the details were complete. The Spirit is the "down payment": part of the promised future, coming forward to meet us in the present.

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Ephesians 1: Jesus the King [Based on N.T. Wright's Translation of the NT]

https://kingdomnewtestament.wordpress.com/2012/06/06/ephesians-1-jesus-the-king/

Excerpt:

Over in England, it was the 60th anniversary of Queen Elizabeth II's coronation this past weekend. Unless you have just been away from a media outlet of some sort you have seen the celebrations — flotilla, horse races, Sir Elton John, and all. Now imagine walking into the middle of the crowds outside Buckingham Palace and shouting, "There is another queen, one better and more powerful than Elizabeth!" Yeah. I am thinking that wouldn't go over well, even as fair-weather as the British people are about their royals.

But that is essentially what Paul does as he starts Ephesians. This is where N. T. Wright's choice to translate "Christ" as "king" really makes the point. Eleven times in twenty-three verses Paul calls Jesus the "king." But there already was a king in Ephesus: Caesar. And if that wasn't enough to fill their hearts they had the blessings of the local goddess Artemis. This was not a people in need of another king, another power, and more blessing. Yet, that is exactly how Paul starts. How confrontational! Notice how in-your-face these verses sound when you remember where they are being read:

> His plan was to sum up the whole cosmos in the king — yes, everything in heaven and on earth, in him. (1:10)
>
> This was the power at work in the king when God raised him from the dead and sat him at his right hand in the heavenly places, above all rule and authority and power and lordship, and above every name that is invoked , both in the present age and also in the age to come. Yes: God has "put all things under his feet." (1:20-22a)

Artemis was usually depicted with many breasts from which her worshipers were nourished. Her blessings sustained life. Yet, Paul packs blessing after blessing into Ephesians 1 as he reminds the Ephesian Christians what they have received from God, not Artemis (1:3):

- Being holy and irreproachable in God's sight (1:4)
- Adoption as God's sons and daughters (1:5)
- Deliverance by the forgiveness of sins (1:7)
- Making known the secret of God's purposes to us (1:9)
- Marked by the Spirit as an inheritance (1:11, 13)
- Being made wise, understanding things others do not (1:17)
- Enlightenment to the "eyes of your inmost self" (1:18)
- Knowledge of the amazing power of God towards us (1:19)

Artemis (Diana)

Paul also sneaks the real issue into the chapter three times:

To the holy ones in Ephesus who are also loyal believers in King Jesus. (1:1)

I'd heard that you are loyal and faithful to Jesus the master (1:15)

You will know the outstanding greatness of his power toward us who are loyal to him in faith (1:19)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The real question that the Ephesians had to grapple with first was to which king they would be loyal. To whom would they go for blessing?

There is no book in the Bible that contains more references of predestination than in the book of Ephesians and no chapter more so than chapter one. [Quote link]

See*: Greek Word Study: Predestination

See also:

Election

In Christ

Ephesians 1:1-14
(Verse by Verse)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

N.T. Wright says: "Ephesians 1.3-14 is, among other things, a retelling of the exodus story" (The Resurrection of the Son of God, p.236)…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

N.T. Wright: Ephesians 1:1-14: Some Thoughts on Predestination

https://stevenedwardharris.com/2010/01/09/ephesians-11-14-some-thoughts-on-predestination/

Excerpt:

Yes, I really am wading into this debate. It is unfortunate "wading" in the pool is what is required, since for Paul, predestination is an ocean of grace:

> Paul, an apostle of Christ Jesus through the will of God, to the saints who are in Ephesus, the faithful in Christ Jesus: grace to you and peace from God our father and the Lord Jesus Christ.
>
> Blessed be the God and father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who blessed us with every spiritual blessing in the heavenly places in Christ, for he chose us in him before the foundation of the world to be saints and unblemished before his sight in love, having predestined us for adoption into him through Jesus Christ, according to the good favour of his will, for the praise of the glory of his grace which he graced us with in his beloved. In him we have redemption through his blood, the forgiveness of transgressions, according to the wealth of his grace which he caused to overflow into us, in all wisdom and understanding having made known to us what was the mystery of his will, according to his good favour which he purposed in him in the management of the fullness of time, to recapitulate all things in Christ, the things in heaven and the things on earth in him. We were also allotted [an inheritance] in him, having been predestined according to the purpose of him who carries out all things according to the intention of his will, for us to be to the praise of his glory those who are the first to hope in Christ. In him also we heard the word of truth, the gospel of your salvation, and having also believed in him we were sealed with the holy Spirit of promise, who is a first payment of our inheritance until the redemption of [God's] possession, for the praise of his glory. [Who's Tranlation???]

This passage screams Exodus. The redemption of a people through blood—the lambs' blood on the doorposts; the fullness of time—430 years since Abraham (Gal. 3:17); the first payment of an inheritance—the tabernacle in the desert; predestination of a people—the choosing of Israel (Ex. 19:4); ruler over all things in heaven and earth—God's rule (Ex. 19:5); and the praise of his glory—a kingdom of priests (Ex. 19:6). This suggests Paul is deliberately evoking the Exodus, the central history of Israel's faith, to say that in Christ (which appears constantly in this passage) a new Exodus has taken place.

But this means that in no way is Paul talking about the predestination of individuals, but about a people: the "saints," the "faithful." What has happened in Christ is that predestination opens up from Israel to the whole world, all things in heaven and on earth in him. Never was "I" chosen from the foundation of the world, but "he chose us in him." He "predestined us" (v.5), "we were also allotted an inheritance" (v.11), and the holy Spirit is "our inheritance" (v.14). The central divide is not between these and those individuals, but between the Church and those outside it (in John, the "world"); just as before Christ the divide was between Jews and Gentiles. Others passages would need to be examined to establish this as well (something NT Wright has already done in many places), especially Romans 9-11, a passage massively important simply for what it handles: Israel and Church, predestination, law, covenant and justification.

More NT Wright on Predestination…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

One in Jesus: N.T. Wright on Predestination

http://oneinjesus.info/2015/12/n-t-wright-on-predestination/ [Links to his video]

The main purpose for including this is not for link to the video, but for the comments section that shows a good/respective/reasoned give and take by opposing views on the topic. (This resource references the same video as the direct link immediately below.)

Dr. N.T. Wright on Predestination, Election, Chosen (2014)

re: Romans 8:23-29, Ephesians 1:3-14, Romans 9-11
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=qKwIijhZW-M [Video]

N.T. Wright on Election (PFG Review) (2013)

http://www.patheos.com/blogs/euangelion/2013/10/n-t-wright-on-election-in-pfg/

Theological Journeying: N.T. Wright re: Ephesians, Predestination, Justification

https://stevenedwardharris.com/category/theology-biblical/n-t-wright/

For details see*: Predestination, Election and Related Terms

See also*: Ephesians – Welcome / Introduction and Overview – N.T. Wright

N.T. Wright – Ecclesiology / Justification

Election

In Christ

Return to beginning of*: Ephesians Chapter 1: Predestination

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

Ephesians Highlights – Chapter 1 (Menu)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

God-Given Blessings (Ephesians 1:3-4)

http://www.gardendalegoodshepherd.org/blog/2011/06/this-weeks-memory-verse-ephesians-13-4/

Remember: Paul is describing the intents/objectives and actions of an eternal and timeless (not bound by time) God from within/through our confines of space and time.

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Foundation:

[NIV] Matthew 25: [31] "When the Son of Man comes in his glory, and all the angels with him, he will sit on his throne in heavenly glory. [32] All the nations will be gathered before him, and he will separate the people one from another as a shepherd separates the sheep from the goats. [33] He will put the sheep on his right and the goats on his left.

[34] "Then the King will say to those on his right, 'Come, you who are blessed by my Father; take your inheritance, the kingdom* prepared for you since the creation [foundation] of the world.

[35] For I was hungry and you gave me something to eat, I was thirsty and you gave me something to drink, I was a stranger and you invited me in, [36] I needed clothes and you clothed me, I was sick and you looked after me, I was in prison and you came to visit me.' (i.e., the Righteous, as in v.37))

25:34 inheritance. See Ac 20:32; Ep 1:14,18; 5:5; Col 1:12; 3:24; Heb 9:15; 1Pe 1:4. kingdom. See note on 3:2. since the creation of the world. Cf. Ep 1:4. [NIVSBN08]

[ESV] Matthew 25: [31] "When the Son of Man comes in his glory, and all the angels with him, then he will sit on his glorious throne. [32] Before him will be gathered all the nations, and he will separate people one from another as a shepherd separates the sheep from the goats. [33] And he will place the sheep on his right, but the goats on the left.

[34] Then the King will say to those on his right, 'Come, you who are blessed by my Father, inherit [Lk 12:32; 22:29] the kingdom [ch. 20:23; [1Co 2:9; Heb 11:16]] prepared for you from the foundation of the world.

[35] For I was hungry and you gave me food, I was thirsty and you gave me drink, I was a stranger and you welcomed me, [36] I was naked and you clothed me, I was sick and you visited me, I was in prison and you came to me.' (i.e., the Righteous, as in v.37))

25:34 King . The Son of Man upon his throne (v. 31) recalls the prophecy of Dan 7:13-14, in which the Ancient of Days bestows the kingdom upon "one like a son of man." blessed by my Father. The blessing to the "sheep" (Matt 25:32) consists of their inheritance of the Father's kingdom, given not as a reward for good works but because of their saving relationship with the Father and the Son. [ESVSB]

Return to the beginning of*: Ephesians Highlights – Chapter 1 (Menu)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

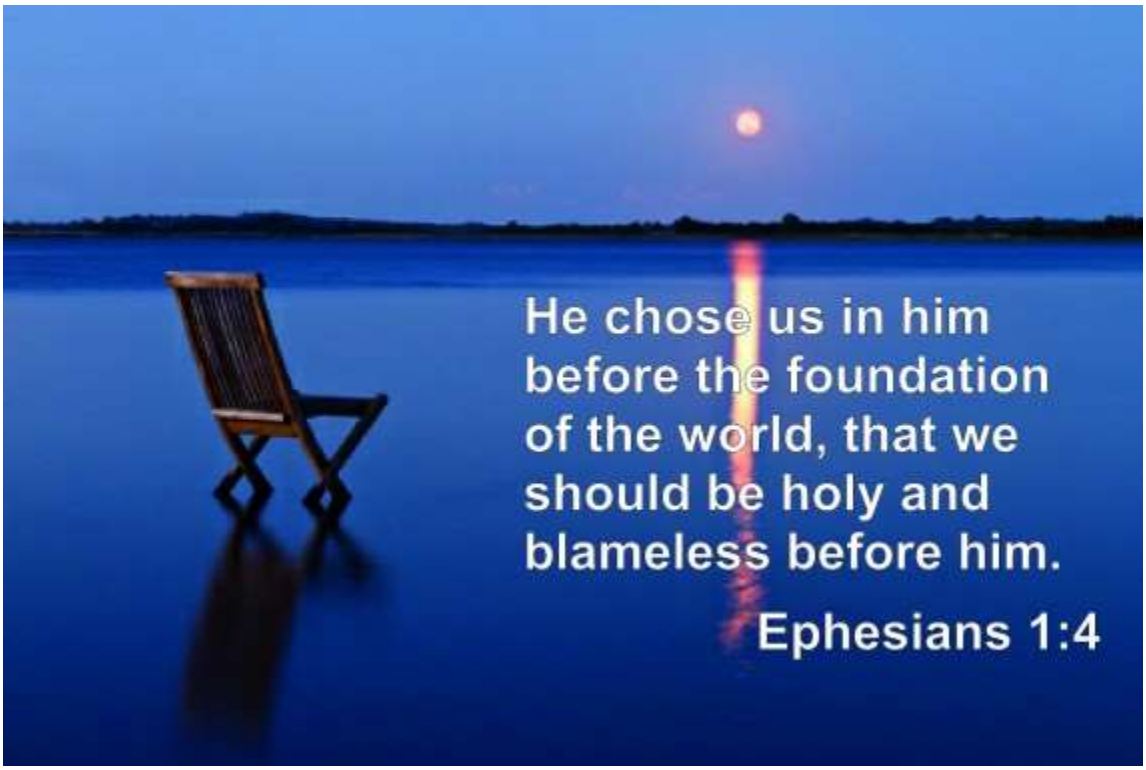
Ephesians 1:3-4 – Election and Predestination [Recommended]

https://redeeminggod.com/sermons/ephesians/ephesians-1_3-4/

Excerpt:



(see next page)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

God-Given Task (Ephesians 1:4)

Who was chosen?
When are they chosen?
Why are they chosen?

If you ever played sports on a playground as a kid, you know the way team selection often works on children's playgrounds. Two kids get selected as team captains, and then all the other kids line up in front of them, and those two kids take turns choose who they want on their team.

Is this how it worked on playgrounds when you were a kid? Did you ever get chosen first? Do you remember how great that felt? Did you ever get chosen last? Do you remember how bad that felt?

When I was growing up, I wasn't the most athletic kid in the playground, but I also wasn't the most unathletic. This means that while I almost never got chosen first, there was never a time that I got chosen last. I very clearly remember being so grateful for that. There was this kid named Michael in my class who almost always got chosen last. He was pigeon toed and had big, thick glasses, and was super uncoordinated. And I remember watching him, eyes downcast, staring at his feet, pushing dirt around with the toe of his shoe, and then finally, when everyone else had been picked, the team that got stuck with him said, "Ok, fine. I guess Michael's on our team." And all the team members groaned.

I remember being so glad I was not Michael.

It feels good to be chosen. It feels bad to never be chosen, or to be chosen last.

Today, we are going to talk about election, which is a fancy, theological word for "chosen," and we are going to talk about how God chooses people to be on His team, and how you can make sure that when it comes to being chosen to play on God's team, you can make sure that you are chosen first. Not last; not in the middle, but first. Our team captain is Jesus, and He wants to choose you first. We'll see how that happens today.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

As we gear up for this, I want to make sure I state right from the start that I believe in election and predestination. It is a Biblical truth that cannot be ignored or refuted. However, I want to say right from the beginning that I also believe that the two most common theological systems in regard to election and predestination are both wrong. These two systems are most often known as Calvinism and Arminianism. Calvinism is named after the Reformer John Calvin, and Arminianism is named after the Reformer James Arminius. Most people believe that you have to be one or the other, a Calvinist or an Arminian. But having carefully studied both, I am proud to say I am neither. I'm not even a mixture of the two—a Calminian, as some like to say. What I am, I don't have a name for—other than Christian— and I know of many out there who believe just as I do regarding this issue.[1]

Most people think the whole debate between Calvinism and Arminianism revolves only around the issue of election and predestination. There is a lot more to it than that. For many years I was a 5-point hyper-Calvinist, and I would love to share with you what I have learned since then. But we do not have space here.

Ephesians 1:3-14 are all one long sentence in the Greek. So really, it should all be looked at in one piece. But our western, English-speaking minds have trouble grasping such a long sentence, so the translators of our Bibles have split it up into more manageable sections. Overall, the flow of this sentence is that we have spiritual riches from God the Father (Ephesians 1:4-6), from the Son (Ephesians 1:7-12) and from the Holy Spirit (Ephesians 1:13-14).

Our God-Given Blessings (Ephesians 1:3)

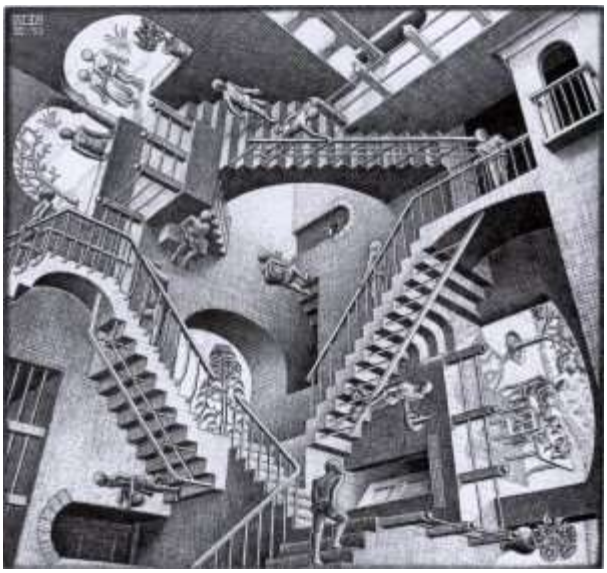
Ephesians 1:3. Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who has blessed us with every spiritual blessing in the heavenly places in Christ, Ephesians 1:3 is a summary of chapters 1, 2 and 3. It is kind of the thesis sentence. Paul begins with praise to God for these spiritual blessings. And Paul tells us where these blessings are – in the heavenly realms. These are not earthly treasures which moths and rust destroy and which thieves break in and steal; these are real, everlasting heavenly blessings.

Remember several years ago when clothes and appliances and tools all had the "Made in America" stickers on them? Supposedly, they were better made and more durable than foreign made products. I suppose that could be debated, but Paul's point here is that these blessings we have are stamped with a seal that says "Made in Heaven." These will last.

Notice also the key term "In Christ." We are blessed because we are in Christ. Let me share with you briefly some of what this term implies – because it effects how we understand the rest of the text. First, no one is "in Christ" who is not a believer. Only believers are "in Christ."



Secondly, being in Christ is something that happens to us only when we place faith in Christ for eternal life. No one is in Christ before they are saved. Being in Christ is what gives believers their blessings and privileges that the rest of the world does not have. Everything we have as Christians, we have because we are in Christ. Verse 4 tells us the very first blessing we have in Christ. The first blessing is…

Our God-Given Task (Ephesians 1:4)

Continued next page…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Ephesians 1:4. just as He chose us in Him before the foundation of the world, that we should be holy and without blame before Him in love.

This is a key verse in the Calvinism/Arminianism debate in regard to election.[2] Some notice that the term election in not even in this verse. In fact, the word election is not found in the entire letter of Ephesians. But since "to elect" simply means "to choose," I believe we can take this passage as a key text on election and predestination, because the term "he chose us" is found in this verse.

Since being chosen is in view, there are three questions we can ask which will help us understand the text – and all texts similar to it. First, who is chosen, and second when are they chosen, and third, why are they chosen? Let's answer them one by one.

1. Who is chosen?

The text says he chose us in Him. The phrase "in Him" tells us that this blessing of being chosen is something that we have in Christ. Christ is the first chosen person. Christ is the choice servant of God (cf. Luke 9:35; 23:35; 1 Peter 2:4, 6).

Most people teach that election and the choice of God has to do with God deciding which unsaved sinners He wants for Himself. But right away, we see problems with this, for Christ is the first chosen one, and He was not an unsaved sinner. Whether or not it is true that God chooses to save some unsaved sinners, we see already that, at least with Jesus, the choice or election of God is not always of unsaved sinners to salvation. God's first choice was Jesus Christ.

Ephesians 1:4 shows us furthermore that when God chose Christ, He also chose us. Whom does the "us" refer to? From Ephesians 1:1-2, they refer to Paul and the believers to whom he was writing. In verse 3 the word "us" refers to those who are blessed in the heavenly realms. In verses 6, 7 and 8, "us" refers to those who have received the riches of God's grace. So whom does the "us" refer to? It cannot refer to anybody but those who are already Christians.

So here we see exactly the same thing we saw with Christ. Christ is the eternally begotten Son of God, and God chose Him for a special task. But in choosing Christ, God also chose those who are in Christ—in other words, Christians. This verse does not teach that God chose unregenerate people to become Christians. This verse teaches that God chose Christians.

[eklegómai = chosen; eklektós = elect/chosen]

1588 eklektós (an adjective, derived from 1586 /eklégomai, "to select, choose," also used as a substantive/noun) – properly, selected (chosen from, out of), especially as a deeply personal choice – literally "chosen, out of a personal preference (intention)." See 1586 (eklegomai).

1586 eklégomai (from 1537 /ek, "out of" and 3004 /légō, "speaking to a conclusion") – properly, to select (choose) out of, by a highly deliberate choice (i.e. real heart-preference) with a definite *out*come (as with the destination of divine selection for salvation).

Sometimes, in trying to understand a verse like this, it helps to look at what it is not said. If, as many teach, God chose those whom He would save, and either passed over the rest (single predestination) or actively chose to send the rest to hell (double predestination), then this verse should say "He chose us to be in Him." If God chooses some of the unregenerate to be regenerate, then this verse should say that

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

God chose us to be in Him. But that is not what it says. It says, "He chose us in Him" not "He chose us to be in Him." Whatever this choice is, it was done when we are already in Christ. Christ and Christians are the chosen ones, but the emphasis is on Christ.

Jesus ultimately is the chosen one, and by nature of being in Christ, we were chosen because He is chosen.

The only individual chosen in Ephesians 1:4 is Christ. When we place faith in Christ, we are placed "in Him" and so become chosen in Him because He is chosen. In other words, Christians are elect because we are in Christ and He is elect. Only those who are in Christ can be referred to as elect or the chosen in Christ.[3]

God's choice of Israel in Abraham is revealing, though not exactly parallel. Abraham was chosen by God to be the father of the elect nation Israel. Because all Israel was in Abraham's loins and would come from Abraham's seed, they too were chosen by default because he was chosen, and they were in Abraham at the time he was chosen.

But while Abraham was chosen at a point in time, Paul goes on in verse 4 to state when Jesus Christ was chosen. This is the next question we want to ask the text to help us understand what election is.

2. When Did the Choice Occur?

The next phrase in Ephesians 1:4 is before the foundation of the world. Since the primary chosen one is Christ, the primary focus of this phrase is also Christ. It is Christ who was chosen before the foundation of the world.

This means that before the world was ever created, Jesus Christ was chosen, and by inference, all who would eventually be placed "in Christ" by faith in Him were therefore also chosen. So this choice took place in eternity past, before the foundation of the world.

This then leads to the third question about election, which is the most important of all.

3. Why Were They Chosen?

This is the missing piece of the puzzle that fits everything together. If you've ever been confused about election – here is the key. The question we are asking now is: "Why did God choose all those who have placed faith in Christ?"

He chose them, according to the end of Ephesians 1:4, so that we should be holy and without blame before Him in love. This is a task believers are to strive for and a future that God guarantees.

Notice that there is nothing in this verse about God choosing some to receive eternal life, while leaving all others to be damned—as the Calvinists teach. Neither is there anything about God looking ahead in time to see who would believe in Him for eternal life and then choosing them—as the Arminians teach. There is nothing of either teaching here. Paul says first, that those who are chosen are those who are in Christ. In other words, only believers are chosen, and they are not chosen to receive eternal life—they are chosen to fulfill a task or purpose. As Paul describes it here, they are chosen to be holy and blameless!

Let me state it more bluntly. Election is never to eternal life. God chooses certain individuals for a task, not for eternal life.

The people of Israel are the perfect example. God chose Abraham, and in choosing Abraham, God also chose all the people who could come from Abraham, namely, all the people of Israel.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

So let me ask you, were all Israelites the chosen people of God? Yes, they were. But did all Israelites have eternal life? No, they did not. So you see that even with the people of Israel, election does not mean that God decides to give eternal life to some people. All Israel was elect, but not all Israelites had eternal life. What this means is that election has nothing to do with who has eternal life and who does not, and everything to do with God's choice of certain people and nations to perform certain tasks and purposes in He plan for the world.

Judas is the perfect example. Did you know that Judas was chosen (John 6:70)? But most believe that Judas did not have eternal life. Therefore, how can we say that Judas is chosen? We must say that he was chosen, not to eternal life, but to fulfil a certain purpose or task. And that makes perfect sense with what we see Judas do in the Gospels.

Both Abraham's election and Christ's election and all those who were in Abraham and all those who are in Christ are chosen, not to salvation, but to a task.

Now, here is one distinction I want to make. While not everybody is chosen by God, that is, while not everybody has a specific task within God's plan and purpose for the world, all Christians have been "chosen" in Christ. This is Paul's point here in Ephesians 1:4. Though not everybody is chosen, all believers are chosen, because we are in Christ, and He is the chosen one.

The first three chapters of Ephesians are all about the blessings and privileges we have as members of the family of God. And as I indicated already, Ephesians 1:4 is the introductory summary statement of all these blessings and privileges. Paul states that source of these blessings and privileges is found in the fact that we are in Christ, and since Christ is the ultimate "Chosen One," we who are in Christ are also therefore chosen in Him. Jesus Christ has the most important role and responsibility in God's plan and purposes for this world, and since you and I are in Jesus, we get to participate with Jesus in that plan and purpose. This is what it means to be chosen in Him.

God's choice has nothing do with who will go to heaven and who will be sent to hell, of who has eternal life and who does not. His choice in Ephesians 1:4 and He chooses them to perform tasks while we are here on earth. God chooses Christian men and women to perform a task. A study of God's choosing and election throughout Scripture will reveal the same truth. God does choose. He does elect. But never to eternal life or eternal death; He chooses groups or individuals for certain tasks.

This also makes sense of His choice of Abraham and the Israelites, his choice of King Cyrus, His choice of the twelve apostles including Judas, and His choice of Christians. Some of those He chooses do have eternal life, but some of them will never have eternal life. Of course, all who have eternal life are also chosen. And all who are chosen, or chosen to perform a task in God's plan and purpose for this world.

With this view, even unregenerate people, like Pharaoh, Cyrus, Judas, and the Jewish people can be chosen, even if they never received eternal life.

The question left though, is "How do we receive eternal life?" If God does not elect certain ones to receive eternal life, and if all who have eternal life, are also the ones who get chosen by God to perform certain tasks, how does one receive eternal life? If God doesn't choose who has eternal life and who does not, how then do we receive it?

Well, as Scripture reveals all over the place, we receive eternal life by believing in Jesus for it.

What this means is that if you want to be chosen, if you want to picked, if you want to be on God's team so that you can play in the game of life and accomplish God's plan and purposes for this world, you do not have to wonder whether or not God has chosen you. If you believe in Jesus for eternal life, then you are chosen. All who are in Christ are also elect in Christ. So if you want to be elect, if you want to be chosen, then all you need to do is be in Christ, and this accomplished by the Holy Spirit when we believe in Jesus for eternal life.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

It is a wonderful blessing to be chosen by God for a task. It reveals to us that we are special to God and that He wants us on his team. If you have ever followed the NFL draft, you know that NFL teams draft members onto their team who will fill in the holes, or replace members who have retired or moved to other teams. If their quarterback has been getting sacked a lot, and they need to beef up their offensive line, they will draft big, strong linemen. If their passing game is not that good, they will draft a wide receiver. If other teams are able to run the ball a lot against them, they will draft some good defensive players. And in such drafts, there are always first round picks, second round picks and so on. The teams try to pick what they need the most.

Guess what? God too has a team, and it is going to win the Super Bowl, and you are on that team to fulfill a specific purpose. He has chosen you, drafted you, for a certain task. You are a first-round draft pick. If you listen to Him, and go to training camp, and work out with the team, and attend practice, you might even be in the starting line up.

Do you know why you are on His team? Do you know what special abilities and talents you have which make you special? When you discover and use them, life will become significant and meaningful. This is the task you were chosen for. This is the role you were meant to fulfill.

Jesus is our team captain. He was chosen to be the team captain before the foundation of the world. But all who are in Jesus Christ by faith in Him, were also chosen to play on God's team, and this choice also happened before the foundation of the world.

This means that if you are a believer in Jesus for eternal life, you too were chosen in Jesus before the foundation of the world. You too were chosen first. This means that you are the star player on the team. You are the one with the special skills and abilities. You are the one who will help us win the game. The rest of Ephesians explains how you will do this.

The rest of Ephesians explains what your roles are, and what tools God has given you to perform these tasks. Please join us so you can know what God has given you and what he want you to do.

NOTES:

[1] For more reading on this subject try: The Other Side of Calvinism by Laurence Vance, Beyond Calvinism and Arminianism by C. Gordon Olson, The Dark Side of Calvinism by George Bryson, Calvinistic Paths Retraced by Samuel Fisk, Election and Predestination by Samuel Fisk, and God's Strategy in Human History by Paul Marston and Roger Forster.

[2] Vance, The Other Side of Calvinism, 357.

[3] Olson, Beyond Calvinism and Arminianism, 188.

More sermons on Ephesians

https://redeeminggod.com/sermons/ephesians/

Return to beginning of*: Ephesians Chapter 1: Predestination

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

Ephesians Highlights – Chapter 1 (Menu)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Ephesians 1:5-6 – Predestined Unto Adoption as Sons [Recommended]

https://redeeminggod.com/sermons/ephesians/ephesians_1_5-6/

Excerpt:

I. Definition of Predestination
II. Future of the Predestined (Ephesians 1:5a)
III. Reasons for Predestination (Ephesians 1:5b-6)

We have only just begun to work our way through Ephesians, and today we are covering Ephesians 1:5-6. Paul begins his letter with two issues that have plagued Christianity from the very beginning. These are the issues of election and predestination.

Both of these issues are found in these opening verses, and we must make sure we understood what Paul was talking about before charging ahead into the rest of letter. These two issues are central to understanding the rest of the letter.

We are in a section that is one big long sentence in the Greek. Ephesians 1:3-14 are one sentence. Ou[r] translations have conveniently divided it up into smaller more manageable pieces, but this one long sentence is all about the spiritual blessings or spiritual possessions or spiritual riches that believers have in Christ.

The four verses that open this long sentence concern the blessing of our security from the Father. He has promised, He has chosen, He has decided that those who place faith in Jesus Christ for eternal life, these He will bring finally and ultimately into heaven.

That in a nutshell, is what the issues of election and predestination concern. When we looked at Ephesians 1:3-4 about election, God chose believers in Christ as more important than anything else in the world for the task of being holy and blameless in His sight.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

This is something He has given us the tools to do now, and something that ultimately will not be accomplished until we become sinless and perfect in heaven. God promises to make sure that this happens.

Are you tired of life? Are you tired of sickness and pain? Are you tired of death and sorrow? God's promise in verse 4 is that in all that He created, we are number one on His priority list, and that when we make it to heaven, there will be no more sin, there will be no more sickness, there will be no more death or pain. The truth of election is that God values us. We are important to Him.

What a blessing of God for the child of God! I think I can endure any amount of pain and hardship now, during this brief life of mine, if I know that when I die, I will spend an eternity without pain and sickness. That is what Ephesians 1:4 promises with the truth of election. It is also what Ephesians 1:5 promises with the truth of predestination.

1. Definition of Predestination (Ephesians 1:5a)

Epehsians 1:5a. In love He predestined us

Ephesians 1:4 was a key verse on election, this is a key verse on predestination. They are similar ideas, but with one key difference.

Election has to do with God's people, predestination deals with God's purposes. Election is the who; predestination is the what.

Some people are scared of predestination, but we should not be – for whatever it is, it begins with the love of God.

Before we discuss what this verse is teaching on predestination, we should make sure that we understand what the word "predestination" means. To define it, you can take the word and cut it in two. Pre means "before" or "previously" and destined means "to decide." So the word predestined means to previously decide, or to decide beforehand.

From the Greek, it literally means "to mark out beforehand." When I used to direct summer Bible camps, I had a game planned that needed boundaries. So several hours before the game was scheduled to be played, I took some rope and went out into the forest and marked out the boundaries beforehand. That is similar to what God has done for us and our future.

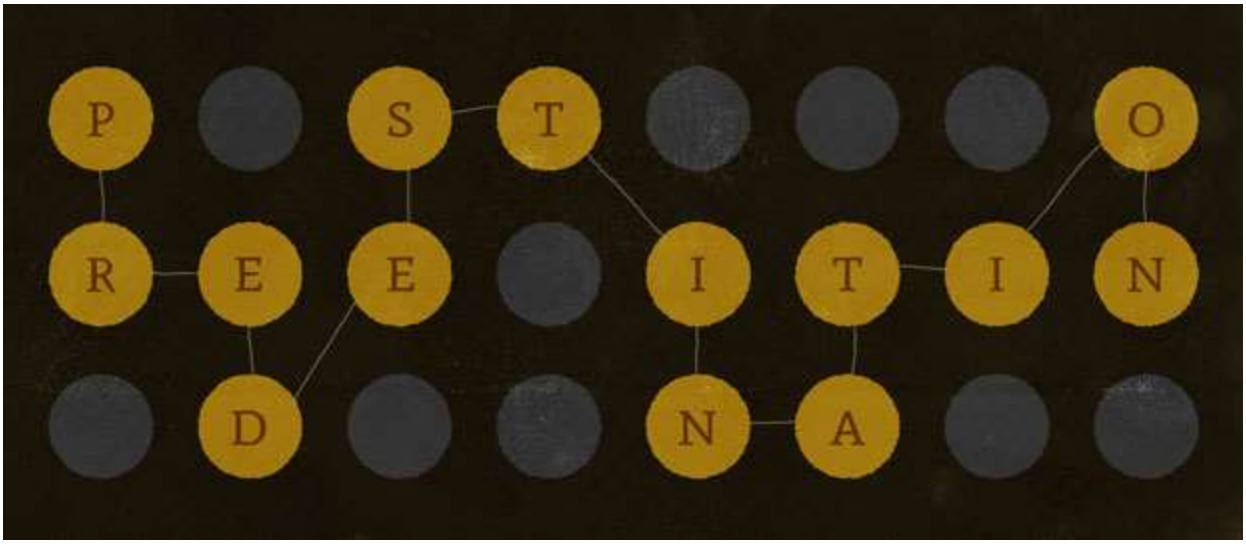
All of us predestine things every day. If we are thinking ahead, we are king of deciding beforehand what we will do in a certain situation. Have you ever thought about what you would do if you won a million dollars? If so, you have predestined the million dollars. Have you ever thought about what you might do when you retire? If so, you have predestined your retirement.

Before Wendy gave birth to our first child, we found out that we were going to have a girl. In the weeks after we learned this, we predestined her name, we predestined where she will sleep, how she will affect our schedule and the many other things that need to be decided before she gets here.

Of course, with humans, even though we decide things, that does not guarantee that it will happen, because we are not in control of everything. But God is in control. He does have all power. So when He predestines something, it is guaranteed to happen.

So what has God predestined? The first thing to understand is what God has not predestined.

Harry Ironside, that wonderful teacher of God's word once said:



> "People have had it drilled into them that away in the past God foreordained that certain people should be lost and certain others should [have eternal life]. I would like to get that out of your minds this morning. …[That teaching] is not found in the Bible. God's predestination is not to

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

> [eternal life]. God's predestination is that those who receive the Lord shall be like the Lord Jesus. That is predestination and nothing else is."[1]

The rest of Scripture proves this. In the only two places Scripture speaks of predestination—here in Ephesians 1 and also in Romans 8–9— there is never any mention of God predestinating some to heaven and others to hell.[2] Rather, He predestined, He decided beforehand, not that some would receive eternal life and others be condemned to eternal death, but that those who placed faith in Jesus Christ would be adopted as God's sons—would be eternally secure, would make it finally to heaven, and would be conformed to the image of His Son.[3] Predestination has to do with the believer's future, not with the believer's past.

So with this understanding of predestination in mind, let us go on to consider what Paul says about predestination.

2. Future of the Predestined (Ephesians 1:5a)

In Ephesians 1:5, Paul writes that God predestined us to be adopted as his sons.

Let's take this one part at a time. Notice first those two little words "to be".

Remember in Ephesians 1:4, how I pointed out that if God had chosen whom he was going to place in Christ, then the verse should say "He chose us to be in Christ" but that it does not say this? It says, He chose us in Christ.

Well here, we see that we are predestined to be adopted.

Again, many will teach from this verse that God has chosen from the world of the unregenerate those whom He wants to receive eternal life. But notice that eternal life is not mentioned here. Adoption is. And when you do a study of what it means to be adopted as his sons, we learn that it is a future event called glorification where we receive new bodies that are completely free of sin and all of sin's effects. The key verse on this is found in the middle of the only other passage on predestination. It is Romans 8:23, and it says that we wait eagerly for our adoption as sons, the redemption of our bodies.

This is something God predestined for all Christians, and it is something that has not yet happened. God predestined, or decided that those who believed in Jesus for eternal life, these same people would be adopted into His family that is, He would save them fully, and give them new and perfect bodies that will last for eternity! That is what it Scripturally means to be adopted as sons.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Admittedly, the idea is a bit confusing. Many people look at this term "to be adopted as his sons" and ask "But don't we become children of God when we are born again? When we place faith in Christ for eternal life, doesn't this also make us God's children?" The answer is yes, it does. So if we are already children, what is the adoption?

A distinction must be made being born again into the family of God and being adopted by God. When we read in Scripture that we are children of God by faith in Jesus Christ, and yet we will be adopted by God we get confused. To our minds, because of the way adoption works in our own country, this doesn't make a whole lot of sense.

In America, only orphans are adopted. No one ever adopts their own children. But at the time of Paul, adoption was something altogether different. I explain more about this in my Gospel Dictionary course.

In the Roman world, fathers had what was known as patria potestas, or the father's power. It meant that a father had absolute power over his children as long as he lived and as long as they lived. If he was in financial need, he could sell his children into slavery. If he was angered by his children, he could legally kill them, imprison them, or make them his slaves. The father maintained this right even when his son became old enough to have a family of his own, even if the son held political office, and even if he was honored by all men. There are instances in Roman history of all of these things happening.[4]

It was also Roman law that a child could never possess anything, no matter how old they became. If you were a father, and your son was the age of 30 years old, and became very rich, all that the son owned was considered to be the property of the father until the father died.

It is also true that most fathers had many children by many different women. They were not polygamists; for the most part, they only had one wife. But many households also had slave women with whom the father often conceived children. These children were his children, they were not orphans, but—and this is the key—they were not heirs.

So imagine the scene. A father could have multiple sons. He could have multiple sons by his wife, and he could have multiple sons by slave women. By default, the oldest son of the wife was considered the heir. But if the father didn't like the oldest son, and he liked a younger son of his wife, or even a son of one of the slave women, the father could adopt one of his own sons as his heir, thereby disinheriting the eldest son. It was even a common practice for a father to adopt the son of some other family as his heir. This was a way to form alliance between rich and powerful families.

So in biblical times, adoption had nothing to do with welcoming an orphan into your family and making them your son or daughter. Instead, it was a way to declare one of your sons as an heir, or even the son of someone else as your heir. It had nothing to do with becoming a son in the family, and everything to do with being named the heir of the family wealth, power, and position. The adopt a son was to legally give them the right to the family inheritance. The legal ceremony of adoption was quite impressive and it gave the adopted the child the title of "heir."

So when Paul says that God has predestined us to be adopted as sons, he is saying that God promises to make us His heirs. As long as the child remained unadopted, he was considered to be slave, even though he was a child born of the Father.

Again, Paul talks about this exact idea over in Galatians 4:7: "So you are no longer a slave, but a son; and since you are a son, God has made you also an heir."

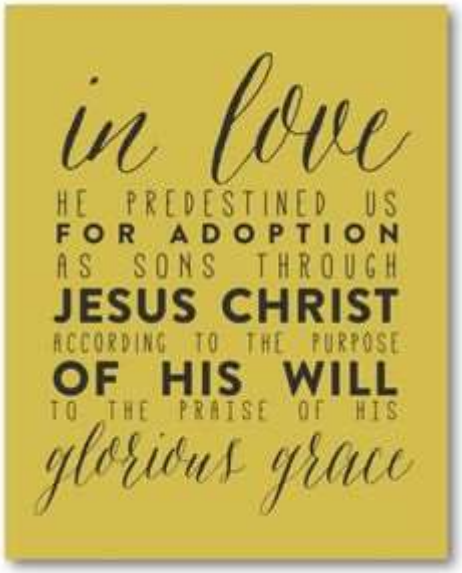
We are sons by birth when we placed faith in Jesus Christ, yet, though sons, it is as if we were still slaves. But because of our Father's great love for us, He has decided that He will adopt us as heirs. We get into God's family by regeneration—or the new birth, but we become heirs of God through adoption. And while we are adopted now, we don't receive the full inheritance of our adoption until we enter into the eternal kingdom after death.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

That is what Paul says God is promising to us here. God has named us heirs. We are heirs of God and co-heirs with Jesus Christ. This promise of predestination is not about God deciding who gets to heaven and who goes to hell; it is about God decided that rather than just one son getting all of His inheritance, all of His children get to share in the inheritance of His family. What a wonderful promise and blessing for His children!

Even Charles Spurgeon agreed when he said that "our conformity to Christ is the sacred object of predestination."[5]

3. Reasons for Predestination (Ephesians 1:5b-6)



The rest of Ephesians 1:5 and on into Ephesians 1:6 tells us why God has decided to do this for us. We see it is because it pleases him. God does this out of His good pleasure.

We see next he wants to adopts us because it is his will to do so. It is not our will. Romans 9:16 tells us that these things are not because of man's will, man's desire or man's effort. It is all due to God's will and God's mercy.

Then in Ephesians 1:6, we see that God does this because it will be to the praise of his glorious grace. Everything that God does, He does for His own glory and for His own praise. And here, it is all because of his grace.

This grace, as we see at the end of Ephesians 1:6 is not earned, it is not merited, it is not worked for. This grace is freely given us in the One he loves. It is freely given. There are no strings attached to this gift. It is freely given. It is not something we worked for, or else it would be given to us as pay.

Many years ago, when Queen Elizabeth reigned in England, a certain woman dressed up as a page and hid herself in the Queen's bedroom with the hopes of killing the Queen as she slept. But before the queen was allowed to enter, the servants searched the room and discovered the assassin. They took her knife from her, bound her arms and brought her before the Queen. Knowing that her case was hopeless, she threw herself at the feet of her Sovereign and begged for the queen to show her grace. The queen looked at her quietly, and coolly said, "If I show you grace, what promise will you make for the future?" The woman looked up and said, "Grace that has conditions, grace that has strings attached, is no grace at all." Queen Elizabeth understood the truth of this, and said, "You are right; I pardon you by my grace," and they let the woman go. History tells us that from that moment Queen Elizabeth had no more faithful devoted servant than that woman who had intended to take her life.[6]

Eternal life is by grace alone. This means it is a free gift from God. It is received by all those who accept it through faith. And those who believe in Jesus in such a way, God promises to adopt them as His children so they can be heirs. Since these promises of God are so, since they are wonderful blessings from our Heavenly Father, we should live just like that assassin who became a servant—with gratitude and thankfulness for all that He has done and what He is going to do.

What does the truth of predestination mean for you?

Maybe you will resolve to share the riches of Christ with your friends or coworkers. Maybe you will decide to lead your family in daily reading God's Word. Maybe you will find some area of ministry here at church to get involved in. Maybe you will give generously of your money.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

These are all just possible suggestions. The way each of you, individually, show your gratefulness to God is something you need to spend time thinking and praying about, saying "God, you have given me so much, and you have promised to give me even more! What can I do to give back to you? Not because I have to, but because I love you."

I would encourage each of you to spend some time today and this week seeking how you can give back to God.

We have looked briefly at the issues of election and predestination. We have seen that they are not words describing who receives eternal life and who does not. Rather, they are promises of God to His children that He will bring them through to the end. He promises to make us holy, and He promises to make us heirs. And that which God promises, He is able to keep. We are eternally secure in the hands of God because of his election and predestination. What an amazing blessing for today!

Notes:

[1] Edward Drew, quoted by Fisk, 41.

[2] Samuel Fisk, Election and Predestination (Bicester, England: Penfold, 1997), 37.

[3] H.A. Ironside, In The Heavenlies: Exposition of Ephesians (Neptune, NJ: Loizeaux, 1973), 34-35.

[4] William Barclay, The Letters to the Galatians and Ephesians (Philadelphia: Westminster, 1976), 79-80. See also, T. Rees, "Adoption" in International Standard Bible Encyclopedia (Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1979), 54; and Missler, 11.

[5] Charles Spurgeon, Treasury of the New Testament: Vol II (Grand Rapids: Zondervan, 1950), 72.

[6] Ironside, 41.

More sermons on Ephesians

https://redeeminggod.com/sermons/ephesians/

For details see*: Predestination, Election and Related Terms

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

Return to beginning of*: Ephesians Chapter 1: Predestination

Ephesians Highlights – Chapter 1 (Menu)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Predestination, Election and Foreknowledge! What Does The Bible Say?

http://kenbirks.com/bible-studies/Predestination.pdf [PDF]

Excerpt:

The purpose of this lesson has been to come to an understanding of what the Bible has to say concerning predestination, election and the foreknowledge of God. The following points have been made scripturally clear throughout this lesson:

 Predestination and election flow out of God's foreknowledge.

 Foreknowledge is God's ability to know before hand what the future holds, because of His omniscience.

 Predestination is the exercise of divine sovereignty in the accomplishment of God's ultimate purpose or decree.

 While foreknowledge is to know beforehand that certain things will happen, predestination is to arrange or determine beforehand how they shall happen.

 Through foreknowledge God saw that Adam would fall and as a result predestinated man's reconciliation through Jesus Christ, the Lamb of God.

 Election is a sovereign act of God's grace whereby He chose in Christ Jesus for salvation all those who He foreknew would accept Him.

 Whoever comes to the saving knowledge of Jesus Christ and confesses and believes in their heart that He rose from the dead shall be saved and become a part of the elect. God does not will some to be saved and some to be lost.

 Election is according to grace, yet grace does not force its way, it stands at the door and knocks just as Christ does.

 God's grace can be resisted by those who harden their hearts to the wooing of the Father.

 God in His decision to create man placed a higher value on freedom than on sinless conformity to His will.

 God has given every man a free will to accept God's grace when he decides to meet the conditions which God has established for receiving it.

 There are some Scriptures that have the potential of being misunderstood if not looked at carefully in their full context. When looking at them in their proper context it becomes very clear that there is no such thing as limited atonement.

 The call of God's grace is not irresistible and limited to the elect. The drawing power of God is limited by the hardness of man's heart, but when man's heart is being humbled, God is able to draw men unto salvation through Jesus Christ.

 God does not predestine some to be saved and some to be lost. He knows the future, but gives us the choice.

 The purpose of predestination language in John's gospel is not to expose the exclusion of certain men from salvation because they were not chosen by the father, but to emphasize that from start to finish eternal life is the gift of God and does not lie under the control of men. A person who tries to gain eternal life on his own terms will find himself unable to come to Jesus because it has not been granted to Him by the Father. He has in fact been resisting the Father.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

VIIa.5. Please Define "Predestination" in Ephesians 1:5

https://heritagebbc.com/bible-question-and-answer-archive-5/viia-5-please-define-predestination-in-ephesians-1-5/

Excerpt:

Question*: Would you explain Ephesians 1:5 concerning the meaning of the word "predestination.

Answer: The word "predestination" comes from the Greek verb "proorizo." It means, according to Vine's Expository Words on the Greek New Testament, to "mark out beforehand, to determine before, foreordain." In essence, "predestination" means that something has been predicted by God and it must and will come to pass. The word "predestinate" as translated in the KJV is found only twice; that being in Romans 8:29 and 30. "Predestinated is found only twice and that is in Ephesians; once in Ephesians 1:5 and once in 1:11. These two words do not appear in the Old Testament. We shall examine WHO is predestinated, WHAT event is predestined and WHEN it will take place.

6. Let us begin with Ephesians 1:5.

"Having predestinated us unto the adoption of children by Jesus Christ to Himself, according to the good pleasure of his will."

Notice who is predestinated. It can only be one of two groups. The saved or the lost. Paul identifies the children of God as the object of being predestinated, "Having predestinated us (plural pronoun)." This is Paul and every saved person. God did not predestinate anyone to be saved; but this teaches He predestinated something for those who are already saved.

What did God predestinate for the Christian? The Scriptures are pure and simple. The Christian is predestinated unto the adoption of children (Greek, HUIOTHESIA, meaning sonship). When we trust Christ as our Savior, we become His children:

"But as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons (Greek, teknon, meaning—"a child") of God, even to them that believe on his name." (John 1:12).

When? We are positioned in Heaven as a son now; but we do not come to the realization of our Sonship until the Rapture.

The Jewish Bar Mitzvah may aid in understanding adoption and Sonship. Bar Mitzvah means "a son of the commandments, or the placing of a son." When a Jewish boy reaches the age of 13, he is then considered as an adult. He is expected to accept adult religious responsibilities. It is a joyful occasion accompanied by gifts from friends and family. He is no longer considered a child; but an adult son.

The word "adoption" is from the Greek word "huiothesia," from "huios;" meaning "a son," and "thesis," "a placing." Therefore..."the placing of a son." Just as a Jewish boy is placed as an adult son on the day he reaches 13, we Christians also experience our Sonship when we are placed in Heaven at the day of the Rapture. This is when we have our physical bodies redeemed for a new glorified body. It could be no clearer than stated in Romans 8:23:

"And not only they, but ourselves also, which have the first fruits of the Spirit, even we ourselves groan within ourselves, WAITING FOR THE ADOPTION, TO WIT, THE REDEMPTION OF OUR BODY."

IN SUMMARY:

WHO: Negative: nowhere are the lost said to be predes-tinated to be saved

WHAT: Positive: the saved are predestinated to receive something.

WHEN: At the Rapture. 1 Thessalonians 4:17, 1 Corinthians 15:50-54.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The false teaching of predestination for salvation is nothing more than a subtle, Satanic attack against God's character. John 3:16 says that,

"For God so loved the WORLD, that he gave his only begotten Son, that WHOSOEVER, believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life."

How could God love the world and then pick only a few to predestinate to salvation and let the rest go to Hell? Christ's death and Resurrection paid for the sins of all humanity and whosoever believeth in him has everlasting life!

Predestination: Thomas Aquinas and Calvin

http://www.faith-theology.com/2006/04/predestination-thomas-aquinas-and.html

Excerpt:

In popular books, and even in some theological text books, it is sometimes said that the idea of predestination was invented by John Calvin. Anyone who can say such a thing must never have read Augustine, or Anselm, or Duns Scotus, or Luther—or even Calvin himself (since part of Calvin's aim is to prove that his doctrine of predestination was also the teaching of the Fathers).

In fact, even Thomas Aquinas has a detailed doctrine of predestination, which is, in many material respects, nearly identical to that of Calvin.

Here's one quote from Thomas's Summa theologiae (1a.23.5):

> "The reason for the predestination of some and reprobation of others (praedestinationis aliquorum, et reprobationis aliorum) must be sought for in the divine goodness.... God wills to manifest his goodness in those whom he predestines, by means of the mercy with which he spares them; and in respect of others whom he reprobates, by means of the justice with which he punishes them. This is the reason why God chooses some (quosdam eligit) and reprobates others (quosdam reprobat).... Yet why he chooses some for glory and reprobates others has no reason except the divine will (non habet rationem nisi divinam voluntatem)."

Certainly I think the notion of double predestination should be subjected to theological criticism. But let's not pretend that the idea was invented by Calvin!

Why Did God Create You?

http://www.kingdomofchrist.info/why-did-god-create-you/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

N.T. Wright's Treatment of the Theology of Justification

http://www.thepaulpage.com/n-t-wrights-treatment-of-the-theology-of-justification/

Excerpt:

For quite a while now, especially as I have wrestled with the passages in Romans concerning election and predestination, I have struggled with the way those passages didn't fit into the context of the letter. The passages were about the unity of the body, so why was Paul giving the breakdown of how salvation works for individuals when he was writing to an audience of believers? So, I must admit that as I have read Wright's and others' material on Pauline theology I see this interpretation as fitting contextually where the traditional interpretations haven't.

As I have read others' critiques of the "New Perspective,' I haven't been impressed because most of them have obviously approached the subject with the predisposed idea of defending their previous beliefs or the Reformed tradition in which they grew up in or under which they studied. As I read these critiques, they make statements that are misinformed, criticizing incorrectly what Wright has written, arguing against a piece of the theology and not looking at the whole.

Thomas Schreiner narrows Wright's view down to defining God's righteousness as purely 'his faithfulness to his covenant,' and proceeds to argue from the Isaiah passages that God's righteousness must involve God's salvation on behalf of His people.[11] Wright has clearly stated that salvation is what the covenant was about from the start.

I wish that I had time to dig into the background material that Wright has published establishing the Jewish context in the 2nd Temple period. Though it sounds solid, right now I just have to take his word for it. I have not come close to reading everything that Wright has published on this subject, but I am interested in how his interpretation of the meaning of justification/righteousness in the Pauline letters affects his theology of election which Paul references in the same letters, therefore having the same context of kingdom membership. The context of these letters in dealing with justification is not individualistic, though they come down to the individual, for individuals, not ethnic groups, place their faith in Jesus.

If the doctrine of election and predestination is to be seen in the context of covenant, then this leads to a nationalistic view of predestination rather than an individualistic view. Galatians 3:8 ("The Scripture, foreseeing that God would justify the Gentiles by faith, preached the gospel beforehand to Abraham"), along with Romans chapter nine, do lead us in the direction that Paul is using the election of God as part of his argument for the righteousness of God in His faithfulness to His covenant to redeem all of creation to Himself through His Son. If the context of covenant moves one's theology in this direction, I could see this being an argument for Barth's Christocentric and Unlimited Atonement; that Christ died for all people and the effects of Christ's death is universal to all people.

I think it is important in the current debate concerning the 'New Perspective' that we not throw the baby out with the bathwater while trying to protect certain elements of our theology; the position needs to be looked at as a whole body of work and not an attack on the Reformed tradition.

See also: Justification

Paul and Predestination [Assumes Ephesians NOT written by Paul.]

https://medium.com/the-liturgical-legion/paul-and-predestination-7b20c67f9758

Excerpts:

When Saint Paul was writing about concepts of predestination in his Book of Romans, he could not have conceived of the oncoming theological debates that were spawned from his work. From Saint Augustine and his theological clashes with the Pelagians, to the disputes between the Thomists and the Molinists, and culminating with the heavier emphasis placed on the notion by Calvinists and Jansenists,[1] the doctrine of predestination had a huge role in the formation of Christian history. It stems from three places in the attributed Pauline corpus. These places are in Romans 8:28–30, Ephesians 1:4–11, and 1 Corinthians 2:7. From these verses, I intend to establish that predestination is best understood as a mysterious reveal of divine wisdom, which gathers the church, and restores Israel as part of God's eternal plan for creation.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

…

If we understand Ephesians as not having Pauline authorship, but an astute commentary of Paul's theology, then we can give credence that it was either (1) common knowledge of what Paul spoke of in reference to predestination in the early church, or (2) that the author of Ephesians had sources to Pauline texts. The author of Ephesians sees predestination is a reflection of God's wisdom and mystery present in both Romans [Ephesians 4:8], and Corinthians [1st Corinthians 2:7]. It involves Paul helping gentiles know their place within God's plan, as it relates to the Jews, and creation as a whole [64]. For Paul, the church is predestined to be the new creation built with Christ as the foundation of it all due to God's eternal wisdom.

The Logic of Jewish Election (re: N.T. Wright) by Derek Vreeland

https://derekvreeland.com/tag/nt-wright/ (all N.T.W related)

https://derekvreeland.com/2017/12/logic-jewish-election/ (article)

Excerpt:

At the heart of the debate between Calvinism and Arminianism over the doctrine of election is the understanding of God's act of predestination.

Within Calvinism, God predestines the elect for salvation and the "reprobate" are elected for damnation. In other words, God chooses some for salvation and the rest he turns over to the rebellion of their sinful ways. For John Calvin, "By predestination we mean the eternal decree of God, by which he determined with himself whatever he wished to happen with regard to every man. All are not created on equal terms, but some are preordained to eternal life, others to eternal damnation." [1] Election from this perspective is unconditional.

Within Arminianism, God predestines those whom he foreknew. In other words, God knows in advance who will accept Christ and who will reject him. According to John Wesley, "Who are predestinated? None but those whom God foreknew as believers." [2] Election from this perspective is conditional upon the individuals' faith.

Taking a Step Back

This debate has been recycled over and over again for centuries with people taking sides. What we need to do in our generation is to take a step back from the theological debate and take a fresh look at Scripture, starting with Paul, to see how Paul uses the word election. For example in Romans 9 Paul writes:

> And not only so, but also when Rebekah had conceived children by one man, our forefather Isaac, though they were not yet born and had done nothing either good or bad—in order that

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

> God's purpose of election might continue, not because of works but because of him who calls—she was told, "The older will serve the younger." As it is written, "Jacob I loved, but Esau I hated."
>
> Romans 9:10-13 [ESV]

Paul uses the terms "election" and "elect," but what are we to make of it? Does God love some people and thus elects them for salvation and hate others whom he chooses for damnation? Or does God know in advance who will love him and who will hate him? And more importantly, what is "God's purpose of election" anyway?

Paul was a Jewish thinker who wrote using Jewish language and metaphor. In order to understand how he uses the term election we have to peak into the Jewish context of what it meant for Israel to be the elect, the chosen people of God.

N.T. Wright on Election

One of the top takeaways for me from Tom Wright's Paul and the Faithfulness of God was on this very issue of election and what it means for followers of Jesus to be justified and thus members of the elect people of God. The key in understanding election is in understanding the logic of Jewish election.

For Wright, Jewish election is not about salvation but about a vocation.

In other words, Israel was not chosen for election so they could have BFF status with the God of creation. They were chosen by God so they could fulfill humanity's primary vocation of being God's image-bearers in God's world, shining the goodness, truth, and beauty of the Creator into all creation. God did not choose Israel so that they could merely occupy a strip of land in the Middle East with a capital in Jerusalem.

The logic of Israel's election was not God choosing one ethnic group in order to condemn the rest of the world or allow them to remain in pagan darkness. The logic of the election of Israel was God choosing a certain people through whom he would rescue the world with the light of his love. For Wright, the logic of Jewish election is tied to how Paul understood justification.

To be justified is to be put right as the people of God for the purposes of God. In order to see the logic of election within the overarching purposes of God, Wright sketches seven movements which capture the logical context behind his interpretation of Paul's theology of justification in Paul and the Faithfulness of God pages 942-961:

1. "God the creator intends at the last to remake the creation, righting all wrongs and filling the world with his own presence." We begin where the Christian narrative begins; we start with the actions of the one true God making the world as a place to be shared with human beings.

2. "For this to happen, humans themselves have to be 'put right'." Humanity is intricately connected to God's world, so they must be put right. God's way of putting people right is God's act of justification.

3. "God's way of accomplishing this is through the covenant." Even though it may seem like a strange way of setting things right, covenant was, and is, God's way of redeeming his good creation. God intended all along to remain faithful to Israel.

4. "(The covenant) is how the creator God will put humans to rights." God is responsible for setting right a world gone wrong and he has the power and authority to do so. He will not only set the world right through covenant, but his covenant with Israel was his particular way of setting all of humanity right.

5. "All these themes point forward to the decisive divine judgment on the last day, in other words, to 'final eschatology.'" All language regarding justification points to God's future and final act of judgment, where he will sort out the things gone wrong in his good world. Present justification experienced by those in Jesus the Messiah is a foretaste of the justification to come at the final judgment.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

6. "The events concerning Jesus the Messiah are the revelation, in unique and decisive action, of the divine righteousness." In the death of Jesus, sin—the source of humanity's wrongdoing—is condemned, and in the resurrection of Jesus, God's new creation, the very place where the world is being put right, has begun. Through the Messiah we see God's righteousness displayed both in terms of his covenant faithfulness and his restorative justice.

7. "When Paul speaks about people being 'justified' in the present, he is (arguing)…that in the present time the covenant God declares 'in the right,' 'within the covenant,' all those who hear, believe and obey 'the gospel' of Jesus the Messiah." This declaration creates a new situation, a new status for those who are justified and thus welcomed in as the people of God. Justification is not a description of a person's moral character but a declaration of a person's social identity. Wright adds: "Those who are declared or accounted 'righteous' on the basis of Messiah-faith constitute the single covenant family which the one God has faithfully given to Abraham." [3]

As the justified, we are God's elect, members of God's chosen people so that through us God can rescue the world. We are the justified justice-bringers, the chosen healers for the broken and wounded, the elect people for the sake of the world.

---

[1] Institutes 3.21.7 http://www.reformed.org/books/institutes/books/book3/bk3ch21.html

[2] Sermon 58: On Predestination http://www.umcmission.org/Find-Resources/John-Wesley-Sermons/Sermon-58-On-Predestination

[3] The summary of this list is taken from Through the Eyes of N.T. Wright my reader's guide to Paul and the Faithfulness of God.

Greg Boyd: How do you Respond to Romans 9?

http://reknew.org/2008/01/how-do-you-respond-to-romans-9/

Excerpt:

…On the basis of these six considerations I conclude that the deterministic interpretation of Romans 9 is as misguided as it is unfortunate. It is misguided not only because it misinterprets Paul, but because it fundamentally clashes with the supremacy of God's self-revelation in Christ. And it is unfortunate because it tragically replaces the unsurpassably glorious picture of God as Jesus Christ dying on the cross for undeserving sinners with a picture of a deity who defies all moral sensibilities by arbitrarily fashioning certain people to be vessels fit for eternal destruction — and then punishing them for being that way. It exchanges the picture of a beautiful God who reigns supreme with self-sacrificial love and flexible wisdom for a picture of a God who reigns by the arbitrary exercise of sheer power.

I unequivocally affirm that the sovereign God "has mercy on whomever he wants to have mercy, and he hardens whomever he wants to harden." I would simply add that the "whomever" he has mercy on refers to "all who choose to believe" while the "whomever" he hardens refers to "all who refuse to believe." The passage demonstrates the wisdom of God's loving flexibility, not the sheer determinism of God's power.

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Predestined in Christ: Ephesians 1:3-14 and Calvinism

https://jdhollowayiii.blogspot.com/2013/06/predestined-in-christ-ephesians-1-and.html

Excerpt:

At face value, this passage seems to support Calvinist ideas of predestination and election: "he chose us . . . before the foundation of the world," "he predestined us for adoption," "[we were] predestined according to the counsel of his will." This sounds like Calvinism, and I sympathize with everyone who reads this passage and either thinks, "See? There it is!" or "Well, I guess it is in Scripture." However, when one analyzes the passage, and considers its historical context, not only is the Calvinist understanding unnecessary, but also unlikely.

ELECTION

Before Christ, Israel was the elect. Such is common knowledge. Israel was the chosen vessel through which salvation would be brought to the world. However, as N.T. Wright observes, the people of Israel were "bound up in the problem instead of being the bringers of the solution."(1) Thus, if salvation was going to spread to the world, it would have to be accomplished through a very different means. Enter Jesus Christ. The story continued with the "Messiah [doing] for the world what Israel was called to do."(2) Christ, then, is the new elect. Paul spells out God's redefinition of election with Christ at its center. As Markus Barth states, "God administers and carries out election through Jesus Christ."(3) Likewise, Ralph P. Martin states, "Election is . . . universalized to include all who are in Christ."(4)

It then follows that, since Christ is the elect, Wright says,

> "those who hear the gospel and respond to it in faith are then declared to be [God's] people, his elect."(5) This can be seen quite clearly in our passage: "God . . . blessed us in Christ . . . [and] chose us in him. . . . he predestined us for adoption as sons through Jesus Christ. . . . he blessed in the Beloved. In him we have redemption through his blood. . . . he set forth [the mystery of his will and purpose] in Christ . . . to unite all things in him. In him we have obtained an inheritance. . . . In him, you also . . . were sealed with the promised Holy Spirit."

It is clear in this passage that the elect ones are what they are only in Christ. This may seem like a simple, commonsensical statement, but we have to stop and think about how this completely redefines election: election is no longer a chosen people group, nor is it made up of specific individuals who are chosen; rather, it is Christ who is chosen, the elect, and, subsequently, all those who are in Christ. Those who accept the gospel and believe in Christ become in him, they become elect: "when you heard the word of truth, the gospel of your salvation, and believed in him, [you] were sealed with the promised Holy Spirit" (v.13).

PREDESTINATION

How, you might ask, does this perspective explain the references to predestination in this passage? Doesn't the passage suggest that those who are in Christ were predestined to be so?
Not necessarily.

I think all Christians can agree that the Incarnation, Crucifixion, and Resurrection of Christ, the Son of God, were predestined. But do passages like these suggest that we go a step further and say that all those who would be saved by his sacrifice were also predestined? It is unlikely that Paul was saying that in writing this passage, for one only has to affirm that Christ's saving act was predestined in order to say with Paul that we were predestined for adoption.

God predestined that Christ would be the elect and that he would call all people to salvation. Thus, when one says 'Yes' to Christ through faith, one becomes one of the elect and it can rightfully be said that he/she was predestined for adoption (Eph. 1:4-5, 11; Rom. 8:29-30), because it was predestined that Christ would be the elect for all people, and that all who accept him would then be the elect. I was predestined to for adoption, because it was God's purpose in Christ to adopt all who believe in him, and I chose to believe in him. Consider Greg Boyd's analogy:

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

> Suppose you attend a seminar in which a certain video is shown. You might ask the instructor, 'When was it decided (predestined) that we'd watch this video?' To which the instructor might respond, 'It was decided six months ago that you'd watch this video.' Note that it was not decided six months ago that you individually would watch this video. What was decided was that anyone who took this seminar would watch this video. Now that you have chosen to be part of this seminar, what was predestined for the seminar applies to you. You can now say, 'It was decided six months ago that we would watch this video.'(6)

In the same way, Christ's saving act was predestined; it was predestined that all who would believe in Christ would be the elect. Election is an open invitation to all people, and all who say 'Yes' become the elect, who are predestined for adoption, "according to the purpose of him who works all things according to the counsel of his will" (v.11)…

See also comments, for example:

Author's response to a prior comment: I absolutely agree with you. Where I might have misguided you is in that I was mostly talking about the subjective aspect of election. Objectively, you're right, we have all been chosen in Christ. But subjectively, as you said, we have to embrace that reality if we are to participate in it and, ultimately, reap the benefits of that participation. In this, you and I are very much singing the same song.

I would add, however, that though we can only embrace that reality because of the Holy Spirit, I believe the Spirit is always trying to reconcile all people back to the Father. Humans simply have the power to reject that invitation.

NOTE: Predestination is used six times in the scriptures, all in the New Testament (Ac 4:28, Ro 8:29, Ro 8:30, 1 Co 2:7, Eph 1:5, Eph 1:11). The Greek word (proorizo) can be translated as decreed, predestined, foreordain, decided beforehand or destined. Different translations use different English words, but they all are the same Greek word.

http://foundationsforfreedom.net/Topics/Theology/Election-Predestination-Romans08_28-30.html

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Greek Word Study: προορίξω 'proorizo' meaning 'predestine' (Strong's 4309)

https://www.logosapostolic.org/greek-word-studies/4309-proorizo-predestine.htm

This is a word study about the meaning of the Greek word προορίξω, 'proorizo' meaning 'predestine' Strong's 4309 in the New Testament. It gives every verse where the 'proorizo' appears. To obtain a true understanding of this word these scriptures need to be meditated on and notes made of their meaning in different contexts. This requires putting scriptures together where they seem to have a similar meaning, and then meditating even more. The truth will be revealed by the Holy Spirit, who has been given to guide us into all truth (John 16:13). Wherever this word proorizo appears in the Greek, the translation of it is highlighted with yellow. If the word is in italics then there is no equivalent word for it in the Greek. Every blessing be to those who seek the truth of God's word.

#2.1 Scriptures for προορίξω 'proorizo' meaning 'predestine' Strong's 4309

Acts 4:28 For to do whatever your hand and your counsel predestined to be done.
[KJV: determined; NET and NIV: decided]

Romans 8:29 For whom he foreknew, he also predestined to be conformed to the image of his Son, that he might be the firstborn among many brothers.

Romans 8:30 Furthermore whom he predestined, them he also called: and whom he called, them he also justified:and whom he justified, them he also glorified.

1 Corinthians 2:7 But we speak the wisdom of God in a mystery, the hidden wisdom, which God pre-ordained before the ages for our glory:
[KJV: ordained; NET: determined; ESV: decreed; NIV: destined]

Ephesians 1:5 Having predestined us to the adoption of children by Jesus Christ to himself, according to the good pleasure of his will,

Epehsians 1:11 In whom also we have obtained an inheritance, being predestined according to the purpose of him who works all things after the counsel of his own will:

NOTE: Predestination is used six times in the scriptures, all in the New Testament (Ac 4:28, Ro 8:29, Ro 8:30, 1 Co 2:7, Eph 1:5, Eph 1:11). The Greek word (proorizo) can be translated as decreed, predestined, foreordain, decided beforehand or destined. Different translations use different English words, but they all are the same Greek word.

http://foundationsforfreedom.net/Topics/Theology/Election-Predestination-Romans08_28-30.html

See also*: Predestination Definitions See also: Predestination Revised

Return to beginning of*: Ephesians Chapter 1: Predestination

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

Ephesians Highlights – Chapter 1 (Menu)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Bible verses related to Predestination from the (KJV) by Book Order

https://www.kingjamesbibleonline.org/Bible-Verses-About-Predestination_KJV

Proverbs 16:4 - The LORD hath made all [things] for himself: yea, even the wicked for the day of evil.

John 6:44 - No man can come to me, except the Father which hath sent me draw him: and I will raise him up at the last day.

John 15:16 - Ye have not chosen me, but I have chosen you, and ordained you, that ye should go and bring forth fruit, and [that] your fruit should remain: that whatsoever ye shall ask of the Father in my name, he may give it you.

Acts 13:48 - And when the Gentiles heard this, they were glad, and glorified the word of the Lord: and as many as were ordained to eternal life believed.

Romans 8:28-30 - And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to [his] purpose. (Read More...)

Romans 8:29 - For whom he did foreknow, he also did predestinate [to be] conformed to the image of his Son, that he might be the firstborn among many brethren.

Ephesians 1:4-5 - According as he hath chosen us in him before the foundation of the world, that we should be holy and without blame before him in love: (Read More...)

Ephesians 1:4 - According as he hath chosen us in him before the foundation of the world, that we should be holy and without blame before him in love:

Ephesians 1:5 - Having predestinated us unto the adoption of children by Jesus Christ to himself, according to the good pleasure of his will,

Ephesians 1:11-12 - In whom also we have obtained an inheritance, being predestinated according to the purpose of him who worketh all things after the counsel of his own will: (Read More...)

2 Timothy 1:9 - Who hath saved us, and called [us] with an holy calling, not according to our works, but according to his own purpose and grace, which was given us in Christ Jesus before the world began,

1 Peter 1:20 - Who verily was foreordained before the foundation of the world, but was manifest in these last times for you,

2 Peter 3:9 - The Lord is not slack concerning his promise, as some men count slackness; but is longsuffering to us-ward, not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance.

Revelation 13:8 - And all that dwell upon the earth shall worship him, whose names are not written in the book of life of the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world.

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Bible verses related to Predestination from the (KJV) by Relevance

https://www.kingjamesbibleonline.org/Bible-Verses-About-Predestination/

Ephesians 1:4-5 - According as he hath chosen us in him before the foundation of the world, that we should be holy and without blame before him in love: (Read More...)

Romans 8:28-30 - And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to [his] purpose. (Read More...)

Ephesians 1:5 - Having predestinated us unto the adoption of children by Jesus Christ to himself, according to the good pleasure of his will,

John 15:16 - Ye have not chosen me, but I have chosen you, and ordained you, that ye should go and bring forth fruit, and [that] your fruit should remain: that whatsoever ye shall ask of the Father in my name, he may give it you.

Romans 8:29 - For whom he did foreknow, he also did predestinate [to be] conformed to the image of his Son, that he might be the firstborn among many brethren.

2 Peter 3:9 - The Lord is not slack concerning his promise, as some men count slackness; but is longsuffering to us-ward, not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance.

2 Timothy 1:9 - Who hath saved us, and called [us] with an holy calling, not according to our works, but according to his own purpose and grace, which was given us in Christ Jesus before the world began,

John 6:44 - No man can come to me, except the Father which hath sent me draw him: and I will raise him up at the last day.

1 Peter 1:20 - Who verily was foreordained before the foundation of the world, but was manifest in these last times for you,

Ephesians 1:11-12 - In whom also we have obtained an inheritance, being predestinated according to the purpose of him who worketh all things after the counsel of his own will: (Read More...)

Acts 13:48 - And when the Gentiles heard this, they were glad, and glorified the word of the Lord: and as many as were ordained to eternal life believed.

Proverbs 16:4 - The LORD hath made all [things] for himself: yea, even the wicked for the day of evil.

Ephesians 1:4 - According as he hath chosen us in him before the foundation of the world, that we should be holy and without blame before him in love:

Revelation 13:8 - And all that dwell upon the earth shall worship him, whose names are not written in the book of life of the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world.

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

58 Bible Verses about Predestination https://bible.knowing-jesus.com/topics/Predestination

17 Bible Verses that Support Predestination (& The Doctrine of Election) http://www.swordwalk.com/17-verses-that-support-predestination-election/

See also*: Predestination Revisited

For details see*: Predestination, Election and Related Terms

Return to beginning of*: Ephesians Chapter 1: Predestination

Ephesians Highlights – Chapter 1 (Menu)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Annunciation as Election (Scottish Journal of Theology, Ecumenical Perspective) (2001)

http://www.westmont.edu/~work/articles/annunciation.html (See: Predestination – A Brief History)

Excerpt: (See also: Predestination Revisited)

Election's Unhappy Returns

Is the doctrine of election worth the trouble?

In his review of the historical tradition, James McClendon concludes that "the doctrine of election or predestination in Scripture viewed as a whole seems fully to warrant none of the paths ecclesiastical doctrine has so far taken." He finds some hopeful signs, particularly in his own Radical Reformation tradition. Yet his redrawn contours of the doctrine rarely appeal to the tradition so far. "The old associations of the doctrine die so hard that (in my judgment) this part of Christian teaching is of little present service. We do well to emphasize the rule of God in every effective way, while exercising great reserve with regard to this Augustinian deposit."2

The Catholic appraisal is guarded as well. Augustine's doctrine of the Trinity was so compelling that it led the West to alter the Nicene Creed. [see also: Creeds] His doctrine of the Church has determined Rome's ecclesiastical politics. His doctrine of original sin has flowered in Catholic anthropology, Mariology, and sacramental practice. John Henry Newman uses these legacies to illustrate his theory of the development of Christian doctrine:

The highest and most wonderful truths, though communicated to the world once for all by inspired teachers, could not be comprehended all at once by the recipients, but, as being received and transmitted by minds not inspired and through media which were human, have required only the longer time and deeper thought for their full elucidation.3

But where is Augustine's doctrine of specific grace among Newman's illustrations? Augustine's doctrine of predestination was partially ratified at the Council of Orange, and adapted in Thomas' cosmology. But then it was largely disowned at the Council of Trent, and it has been fully elucidated only by those who repudiated Rome's ecclesial claims. Predestination is apparently a dead end in the Catholic tradition, a pruned branch of Newman's tree.

The appraisal is surely higher in the Reformed tradition, where (as Warfield put it) Augustine's doctrine of grace triumphed over his doctrine of the Church, rather than the other way around. Yet even here, Calvin's formulation of the doctrines of election and predestination have fared rather poorly. Within a hundred years of the Reformation, Arminius' followers radically reformulated Calvin's revived Augustinianism, and now dominate the Protestant landscape. The doctrine's primary legacy in today's Reformed traditions (Anglicanism, Methodism, evangelicalism, and even Presbyterianism) seems to be endless bickering and polarization among Arminian and Calvinist true believers, and exhaustion and apathy in the middle. Where the debate has ended, it has ended by sheer attrition — an Elizabethan Settlement without reconciliation or resolution. When one consults the American faithful in matters of election, one hardly hears a ringing endorsement, even though the doctrine played a formative role in the spiritual formation of the West and in the theological heritage of America herself.

A case in point: Before beginning my formal theological education, I personally killed two thriving Bible studies by bringing up election and predestination. In one I watched a woman take the book we were reading together, Michael Scott Horton's Putting Amazing Back into Grace,4 and throw it to the ground in revulsion. She was not amazed; she was horrified.

Augustine's doctrine of election thus fails votes of confidence from radicals, Catholics, evangelicals, and even many Reformed! Needless to say, Eastern Orthodoxy rejects it too (in the Confession of Dositheus). Yet rejection alone has never truly satisfied. As McClendon admits, "that God elects or chooses is a staple of Scripture's narratives," and "once we take seriously the divine prevenience both in creation and redemption, election seems inevitably to follow."[5] What is a theologian to do? Ignoring the doctrine, however tempting, is no solution.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

What follows is my personal penance for breaking up those Bible studies. To diagnose the problem, we will review (though cursorily) a particular feature of election's doctrinal history. To recommend a remedy, we will offer an exegetical and liturgical point of departure in the liturgical practice of Annunciation that casts election in brighter theological light. It does not solve the centuries-long debate between Calvinism and Arminianism, nor does it endorse one school wholeheartedly, but it does shift the terms of the debate in a constructive direction.

Children of Pelagius: A Brief History of the Doctrine of Election

It is ironic, though perhaps not surprising, that we owe the shape of the Western theology of election and predestination to Pelagius. He, like his opponent Augustine, sought to defeat Manichaean dualism. Augustine's arguments against Manichaeism rooted human responsibility for sin in the human free will, which, wrongly exercised, introduced corruption into God's originally good creation. Pelagius pursued the same line of reasoning toward righteousness that Augustine had pursued toward sin, with catastrophic results. His fatal error was treating human depravity as essentially symmetrical to human righteousness. It led his doctrines of sin and grace to root Christian holiness as well as human sinfulness in humanity's created nature. Good Christian practices would begin in a human will that is, if not essentially good, certainly capable of choosing God's baptismal grace and living righteously on its own power afterwards.[6] Sin's power would be merely a consequence of people freely choosing it, and God's grace would be the provision of a one-time forgiveness for pre-baptismal sins, and the law of the sinless Jesus Christ as a normative example for followers to imitate. Furthermore, concentrating his account in the human microcosm led Pelagius and his followers to neglect the macrocosmic narrative of God's saving economy. Each human will effectively occupied the center of its now individualized salvation- or damnation-history.[7]

Pelagius' crucial contribution to the Church's doctrines of sin and grace was thus twofold: First, his teaching, well intended to strengthen the lax Christian morality of his day,[8] instead unforgettably illustrated the trivialization of both sin and grace that inevitably follows when one roots the power to respond to God in the sovereign human will.[9] The Church came to view it as "another gospel," a fundamental failure to appreciate the extent of God's prior favor and sanctifying gifts.[10] In response, Augustine's emphatic reaffirmation of the power of both sin and grace fundamentally shaped Western Christianity. Second (and less often noticed), Pelagius' anthropocentrism powerfully influenced the terms of the debate and the subsequent soteriology of the West. Both Pelagius and Augustine came to be "so preoccupied with the salvation of the individual that they neglected to explore that healthier and saner dimension of corporate salvation which is a recurrent theme in both Old and New Testaments."[11] The story of Jesus Christ became "incidental" to the theological battle.[12]

"It is surprising," says John Ferguson, "how little reference is made in the whole controversy to the personal life of Jesus."[13] But the die was cast. Together, Pelagius' objection and Augustine's response moved the Western account of sin and grace away from a salvation-history centered in God's chosen people Israel and chosen son Jesus, toward innumerable personal histories of sinful inheritance, prevenient grace, and cooperative response. Augustine responded all too well to Pelagius' threat: The compelling narrative of his Confessions overpowered both Pelagius' pseudonarratives of free agents, and the biblical metanarrative of Israel, Jesus, and Church. As a result, he and his allies were defeated in their own victory. The doctrine of election drifted into the Western doctrines of single- and double-predestination: God predestines from eternity a fixed number of creatures to heaven, and (perhaps) the rest to hell. Election would not reemerge from their influence until the twentieth century.[14]

Augustine's bitter war against "Pelagianism"[15] convinced the Church to repudiate Pelagian ideas in 431 and 529. While the Church never canonized the particulars of Augustine's own proposal, Augustinianism remained the dominant influence in the West ever afterwards, especially through Anselm and Thomas

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Aquinas. Revived by the Reformers, Augustine's doctrine of grace became a central distinguishing feature of Protestant theology.

However, Pelagius, Rufinius, Celestius, Julian, and the like were not Augustine's only opponents. Augustinianism has always had strenuous orthodox detractors. The Council of Trent repudiated the Protestant positions and Rome fought Jansenism for centuries, closing off thoroughgoing Augustinian predestination as a Catholic option. And within the Reformed wing of Protestantism, Arminianism arose as a revival of what one might call either moderate Augustinianism or (misleadingly) "semi-Pelagianism."

James Arminius' followers asserted in the Remonstrance of 1610 five famous objections to Calvinism. The Reformed Church of Belgium strenuously denied each Arminian claim in the Canons of Dort of 1619, today most widely appreciated in slogan form as the famous "Calvinist" TULIP.

The TULIP is Augustinian predestination reduced to its essentials. Yet both the Remonstrance and the Canons of Dort, and the confessional traditions they helped to shape, continued to accept Pelagius' frame for the issue of election — an individualized "order of salvation" rather than a story of personal redemption in the context of the wider story of God's chosen people.16 Both still basically honor the ancient limits of the Pelagian-Augustinian debate. By failing to criticize (or even notice?) the framework it had inherited from Augustine's argument against Pelagius, Calvinist Orthodoxy replaced Pelagian anthropocentric soteriology with more of an anti-anthropocentric soteriology than a vision of salvation truly centered in salvation's divine economy.

Or so it appeared to Karl Barth. Calvinism's greatest theologian since Calvin took the doctrine in a revolutionary direction.17 For Barth, Augustine's experiential doctrine of predestination opened up a division between human-centered and God-centered accounts of salvation that had plagued the Church ever since. The key to overcoming it was centering the doctrine firmly in Jesus Christ.

Barth's exposition of God's decrees radically reformulated the older Reformed doctrine of election. A truly theocentric soteriology must arise from the specificity of God's action in Jesus Christ. The Father proclaims in the Lukan Transfiguration scene, "This is my Son, the one I have elected" (ho eklelegmenos, Luke 9:34). Jesus is the elect one, the one on whom God's decrees of "Yes" and "No" fall. In God's eternal decree for fellowship with humanity in his Son, the two accounts are one: The electing God is the elected man. Barth located the doctrine of election not under providence or salvation, as the older infralapsarian and supralapsarian positions in Calvinism had, but under his doctrine of God, identifying God's twofold word of affirmation and negation with the divine Word who would become flesh. All God's chosen are finally rejected and accepted in him (Eph. 1:4). The countless human narratives of salvation find their coherence only in the metanarrative that centers in Jesus. Election is the therefore not a mystery hidden from the gospel of God, but the gospel itself, the Good News "in nuce." It is God's eternal will to narrate the cosmic narrative of creation and redemption.

What Happened to Israel?

Our historical survey is too brief to include many important nuances. Yet it still reveals a rarely noticed omission, ever since Pelagius and Augustine, of the sheer Jewishness of election in its biblical forms. In repudiating Pelagius, the Church failed to appreciate, let alone correct, the deep roots of his thinking (and its own) in worldviews foreign to Israel and its Scriptures. Pelagius' legacy is indeed a separation of the doctrines of election and predestination from God's saving activity, in Israel and specifically in Israel's Messiah.

This separation has given both the heretical and orthodox doctrines of election monstrous qualities that lead to doctrinal and practical abuse. They describe God in ways unpersuasive and unattractive to the faithful — lending themselves to caricatures at the popular level, and sometimes the formal level, of their long polemical history. The Pelagian God becomes a passive legalist. The Arminian God becomes a nominal sovereign who waits forever to rubber-stamp human decisions. The Calvinist God becomes a tyrannical micromanager whose mysterious actions are just simply by definition. The Barthian God rejects and accepts all of humanity on the cross. The scope of God's decrees ironically overpowers the concrete history of Israel, Jesus, and Church that supposedly reveals them, bringing Barth's doctrine of salvation to the brink of soteriological universalism. Barth can do little more than deny the logical force of his own argument and forbid the teaching of universalism. These alternatives are neither conducive to worship nor edifying to the saints. What then?

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Perhaps one should move in the opposite direction, from the Church's practices of worship and edification to its doctrines. But even here we are met with a problem: Is election's liturgical point of departure the Arminian practice of altar calls? Or the Augustinian practice of infant baptism? Our selection amounts to an a priori conclusion. The practices by which people appropriate salvation are already built upon rival accounts of how people are saved.

Yet it is Jesus' story to which Christians witness, not primarily their own. And the Christian year, shaped around the narrative of Jesus and shared by Augustinians, Calvinists, and Arminians, commends a happier location for the doctrine of election: in its feast of the Annunciation. Annunciation points a way out of the Pelagian-Augustinian world in which the doctrines of election and predestination have arisen, putting these doctrines back into their proper biblical and liturgical perspective. Furthermore, to worshipers hungry for specifics about election that Barth will not offer, Annunciation offers more than a specific "Yes" and "No" addressed to Jesus Christ, or a blanket "Yes" and "No" encompassing all humanity. It does so by taking us back to an ancient sign of assurance of God's favor to an embattled, wavering Israelite king: "The young woman is with child and shall bear a son, and shall name him Immanuel" (Isa. 7:14, Communion Antiphon, Feast of the Annunciation).

The Choosing of the Chosen

Though election is eternal (Eph. 1:4), and though it centers on Jesus (Luke 9:34), we only know so because election takes temporal shape (note the perfect tense, not the aorist, in Luke 9:34), in the history of Jesus' people Israel (note what follows in Eph. 2). Annunciation situates Mary's visitation in the contexts of Israel's salvation-history and Jesus' career. These contexts also happen to be the broader and the narrower historical contexts of divine predestination.

The two contexts merge in a young Jewess named Miriam, but begin to converge long before her time. Mary's story echoes not only God's promise to Israel through Isaiah, but even earlier choices on God's part: "When Israel was a child, I loved him; and out of Egypt I have called my son" (Hos. 11:1, cf. Matt. 2:15).

Here "Israel" of course stands for the nation of Israel — from which Jesus comes, which Jesus represents in his ministry (and his Matthean return from Egypt), and over which he reigns as king. But it first stands for Jacob, the second-born son who received a blessing from his father Isaac: "Let peoples serve you, and nations bow down to you. ... Cursed be everyone who curses you, and blessed be everyone who blesses you" (Gen. 27:29). God specially chose Jacob to receive his blessing, as he had chosen Isaac (telling Abraham, "offspring shall be named for you" [Gen. 21:12]). And Abraham himself, an obscure wandering Aramean, gained God's mercy for no apparent reason: "I will make of you a great nation, and I will bless you, and make your name great, so that you will be a blessing. I will bless those who bless you, and the one who curses you I will curse; and in you all the families of the earth shall be blessed" (Gen. 12:2-3). Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, and Jacob's descendents were specially chosen by God as recipients of divine blessing and means through which others are both blessed and cursed. In other words, they are God's chosen, his elect.

The salvation-history that begins in Abraham and culminates in the conception of Jesus (Matt. 1:1-16) is our epistemological starting point for the Christian doctrine of election. And when we start here, we find features missing from the TULIP. First, Genesis' account of election is startling in how it concentrates on election as the means by which God's salvation is extended to others. It is not made immediately available to all; but neither is it restricted to those expressly elected. The overriding logic of election is not an appeal to arbitrariness as evidence of God's absolute power, but an appeal to God's mysterious way of blessing all the families of the earth.18

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Second, the biblical accounts of election reveal a God who apparently prefers the weak to the strong. Thus an undistinguished Aramean and two second-born sons become the channels (not merely the beneficiaries) of God's salvation. Thus David, the youngest and shortest in a family of shepherds, founds an eternal royal line. Thus an adolescent village girl, engaged to a stonemason, is made the Mother of God. The theme of election as reversal permeates the biblical images of God's predestination. It unravels the caricature of a God who decrees blessings and curses autocratically. Insofar as reversal and mission characterize the biblical vision of election, they point out the continuity of God's choice over its arbitrariness.

Third, Augustinian and Calvinist doctrines of double-predestination have a symmetrical feel to them that is missing in the biblical accounts. If there are a decree of salvation and a decree of reprobation, they are not equal opposites. Rather, election's overriding concern is blessing.

Reprobation as a Means of Salvation

This asymmetry is easy to miss, since it is so counterintuitive: How can a decree of reprobation work to further salvation? The three most often quoted biblical examples of God's "predestination to damnation" offer an answer.

Jacob and Esau. The first example is Esau. Jacob deceives his father Isaac into receiving Esau's birthright and his blessing. While Genesis passes over his duplicity without much comment, Malachi attributes the reversal of fortune to God's favor, not to Jacob's or his mother's conniving:

Jacob I loved, but Esau I hated. I have made his hill country a desolation and his heritage a desert for jackals. If Edom [Esau's people] says, "We are shattered but we will rebuild the ruins," YHWH Sabaoth says, They may build, but I will tear down, until they are called the wicked country, the people with whom YHWH is angry forever. Your own eyes shall see this, and you shall say, "Great is YHWH beyond the borders of Israel" (Mal. 1:2-5)!

Paul in turn interprets Malachi in Romans 9, perhaps Calvinism's favorite prooftext for predestination:

When Rebecca had conceived children by one man, our forefather Isaac, though they were not yet born and had done nothing either good or bad, in order that God's purpose in election might continue, not because of works but because of his call, she was told, "The elder will serve the younger." As it is written, "Jacob I loved, but Esau I hated" (Rom. 9:10-13).

Following Augustine (and especially Luther), most Protestants have read Romans as an account of how individuals are saved by their faith in Jesus Christ apart from their own works-righteousness. Accordingly, Rom. 9 becomes an account of how individuals are predestined to salvation or predestined to rejection according to God's inscrutable purpose. Paul even anticipates the objection to such a predestination:

What shall we say then? Is there injustice on God's part? By no means! For he says to Moses: "I will have mercy on whom I have mercy, and I will have compassion on whom I have compassion." So it depends not upon will or exertion, but upon God's mercy (Rom. 9:14-16).

This looks like an airtight prooftext of double-predestination: Paul even counters the Arminian objection before it is raised! But Romans is not about how individuals are saved by their faith in Jesus Christ apart from their own works-righteousness.19 It is about how Jews and Gentiles are saved by the "faith of Jesus Christ" (pistis christou), apart from works of the Torah such as circumcision. It is not about individuals as individuals, but an answer to the question of whether God has abandoned his elect — Israel — in the wake of their rejection of Messiah. "Has God rejected his people?" Paul asks in Rom. 11:1. "By no means! I myself am an Israelite, a descendant of Abraham, a member of the tribe of Benjamin. God has not rejected his people, whom he foreknew" (Rom. 11:1-2a). Jacob and Esau are neither illustrations of

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

God's division of humanity into two camps, nor types of those God conditionally elects. They and the nations they personify are salvation-history, in at least two significant respects.

First, from even before their births, Jacob and Esau duel for the inheritance of Isaac's and Abraham's blessings, and for roles in God's redemptive plan. On the rivalry between these two would-be patriarchs hangs the cosmic history of all humanity. Esau's rejection must be understood not as some arbitrary divine grudge, but in terms of God's promise to Abraham, through whom all the families of the earth will be blessed.

Second, God gives them both roles in the fulfillment of that promise. Israel is the bearer of God's favor for the world, while Edom is a reminder to Israel, then to the world, that YHWH is more than a regional deity (Mal. 1:5).

In Romans, Paul is showing that it is through Jacob — that is, through both Israel's election and Israel's hardening (11:7) — that Gentiles are grafted into the promises of a jealous God, and that it is through the nations — nations like Edom — that Israel will learn God's jealousy for herself and return (11:13-15, cf. Mal. 3). The Malachi passage fits beatifully. Yet Paul's use of it undermines the common notion of election dividing the world into the elect and the damned. In chapters 9-11, believing Israel is elect, while disbelieving Israel is both hardened, as far as the gospel is concerned, and elect, as far as the promise is concerned (11:28-29, 32). In Romans we do not find two neatly distinguished divine decrees that cleanly separate the world into sheep and goats. They overlap — and both are directed toward God's mercy.

Moses and Pharaoh. The second example follows Esau in Romans 9. God hardens Pharaoh's heart "so that I will gain glory for myself over Pharaoh and all his army; and the Egyptians shall know that I am YHWH" (Ex. 14:4). While Pharaoh is another favorite Calvinist example for double-predestination, he too is hardly a random character in history. He plays a crucial role in Israel's deliverance, and thus in the world's deliverance through Israel. So Paul follows Jacob and Esau, paired in Rom. 9:12, with Moses and Pharaoh, paired in 9:15 and 9:17:

For the scripture says to Pharaoh, "I have raised you up for the very purpose of showing my power in you, so that my name may be proclaimed in all the earth." So then he has mercy upon whomever he wills, and he hardens the heart of whomever he wills (Rom. 9:17-18).

The last verse here seems to warrant extending the idea of mercying and hardening (or blessing and cursing) to humanity in general as an Augustinian doctrine of double-predestination. And indeed, Paul seems to anticipate and counter the natural Arminian objection, "Why does he still find fault? For who resists his will?" (Rom. 9:19) with an appeal to the potter's right to mold clay however he pleases. However, here too Paul concentrates on God's redemptive purpose for all of humanity through those he molds. This is the theme of Isaiah 29, whose sixteenth verse he quotes. Egypt and all the earth learn YHWH's identity, and learn to call on his name, in part through Pharaoh's hardened heart. Never in Romans are God's different sovereign purposes taken out of their cosmic, narrative context and made decrees merely concerning the fates of individuals. Jacob and Esau, Moses and Pharaoh are pivotal figures in salvation-history through whose history Jesus emerges as the savior of "all" (Rom. 11:32).

Jesus and Judas. The predestination of Christians follows the same pattern, both within and without Romans. They are the pivotal figures in salvation-history-in-the-making, whom God has called, gathered, mentored, and sent out. Election is therefore to be understood in terms of apostolicity. Jesus' call to discipleship frames Ephesians' doctrine of predestination:

[God] chose (exelexato) us in him before the foundation of the world, that we should be holy and blameless before him. He destined (proorisas) us in love to be his adopted children through Jesus Christ, according to the purpose of his will, to the praise of his glorious grace which he freely bestowed on us in the Beloved One. For he has made known to us in all wisdom and insight the mystery of his will, according to the purpose which he set forth in Christ as a plan for the fulness of time, to unite all things in him, things in heaven and things on earth (Eph. 1:4-6, 9-10).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Ephesians proclaims neither arbitrariness nor eternal mystery on God's part, but a consistent purpose and a mystery disclosed in Jesus Christ, and human agency in fulfilling that purpose. Chapters 3 and 4 make this even more abundantly clear: The purpose of predestination and divine grace is the growth and perfection of Christ's body, which we now see is cosmic in scope, including both Jews and Gentiles (Eph. 3:4-6, 4:12-16).

God's apostles and disciples are his Jacobs and Moseses in the new Israel. And Iscariot is his Pharaoh. Judas Iscariot is our third common illustration of God's decree of perdition. Jesus prays in John 17:12, "I have guarded [those you have given me], and none of them is lost but the son of perdition (ho huios tês apôleias; NRSV "the one destined to be lost"), that the scripture might be fulfilled." Judas, like Esau and Pharaoh, is not some random character chosen to suffer to illustrate God's power. He is an indispensable character in salvation-history, a representative of the disciples who finds himself on both sides of God's electing decrees. His life too fulfills Scripture (Acts 1:16). Through Judas' betrayal, the Son of Man is lifted up, and we are brought into God's promise.

Barth's Evasion

This narrative logic, prominent in Scripture but weak in the tradition at least since Pelagius, justifies Barth's stress on Jesus as the alpha and omega of God's election, as well as his innovation in calling Jesus both the elect one and the reprobate one. It is God's choice of him at the Jordan and on the cross that makes him a curse for us, and it is his curse that makes him a blessing for us (Gal. 3:13-14, following Deut. 27:26). Jesus is a ~~sh~~ort of mirror image of Iscariot. While Jesus too is the subject and object of both elections, his righteousness brings both to a happy outcome. They in turn apply to humanity, but only in him and in the salvation-history that centers on him. Jesus is the heart of God's choice of Israel and the Church.

Yet Barth's doctrine is too weak where its predecessors are too strong. The tradition before Barth concentrated on either the recipients of God's reconciling work, or God's decree that they be reconciled. To keep God's choice (which for Barth is God the Son, the eternal Word) from becoming extrinsic to God's nature, Barth reduces the doctrine to its Christological dimension. He replaces the classical doctrines of election with his doctrine of substitutionary atonement under a new name. Barth simply treats "election" as reconciliation in verbal form. The old doctrine is not radically reformulated at all. It is simply dropped. The Son assumes the roles of both the subject and the object of reconciliation, as if no other objects mattered. The result is a cross on which hang Jacob and Esau, Moses and Pharaoh, the beloved disciple and Judas Iscariot. Barth has not crucified the Father, but he has crucified practically everyone else. In Christ all seem to be crucified, buried, raised, and ascended — even the rulers and authorities who put him there (cf. Col. 1:15)!

Jesus is indeed the Elect One. But what about the secondary characters who are also called God's elect ones (Rom. 8:33), let alone his enemies? This, after all, is the question the Jewish and Augustinian doctrines of election set out to explain. Barth leaves us unable to answer. We must pass over in silence not only questions about our own elections and those of the saints, but even the Bible's eternal condemnations of God's opponents (Rev. 20:10).

How do we correct the excesses of classical doctrines of election without overcorrecting? We need a doctrine that encompasses God's will to reconcile, his Word of reconciliation, and its discrete recipients, who are agents of reconciliation in their own right. We need a doctrine that is more than merely theistic or anthropocentric or Christological, that still addresses the agency and destiny of particular human beings in the context of God's single plan of salvation. We need an act in which Jesus is the main character, but not the only character.

From Jesus to Mary: Annunciation as Election

Annunciation's promise is its focus on another "elect one of God."20 Annunciation celebrates the occasion when God reveals Mary's election to her. Mary is the ideal figure for a doctrine of election that avoids the weaknesses of its predecessors. No one but Jesus plays a more important role in Christology. Yet for all her importance, Mary remains a secondary figure. Her significance depends entirely upon Jesus.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Like Abraham, Mary has done nothing until her visitation to distinguish her. Only her membership in Israel (a matter not of her own choosing) offers any basis for God to regard her in any special way. So when Gabriel comes and says, "`Hail, O favored one, the Lord is with you!'" (Luke 1:28), Mary reacts the way an Arminian might react to the doctrine of election: "She was greatly troubled at the saying, and considered in her mind what sort of greeting this might be" (1:29). Is it a horrible decree? But Gabriel reassures her that the doctrine is one of comfort rather than dread: "Do not be afraid, Mary, for you have found favor with God. And behold, you will conceive in your womb and bear a son, and you shall call his name Jesus" (1:30-31).

Arminians will claim that this annunciation rests on Mary's willingness, which comes in her fiat: "Let it be to me according to your word" (1:38).21 But there is no indication in the text that the angel is waiting for Mary's acceptance of his offer, or even that it is an offer. Everything he says in 1:31-35 is in the indicative: "You will conceive you will bear you will call."22 And Mary's fiat is prefaced by an admission that she does not expect a choice: "Behold, I am the handmaid (doulê, "slave girl") of the Lord" (1:38). She simply hears the message and assents.23 Thus the Catholic prayer for the feast of the Annunciation of the Blessed Virgin Mary has a surprisingly Reformed flavor: "O God, by Your divine decree the Word was made flesh in the womb of the Blessed Virgin Mary at the announcement of the Angel."24

Yet Mary is not coerced. God's grace is not working against her will. It is causing her will. Mary is overshadowed but never violated, and so hers is a virgin birth.25

Next, the angel explains the reason for this extraordinary event. It comes in the familiar terms of Israel's salvation-history (1:32-33), in which Mary now takes a starring role. Mary's own account comes later in her Magnificat (1:52-55), which casts both Mary and her son firmly at the center of God's electing purposes. God's electing mercy towards Mary remembers God's electing mercy towards Abraham and Jacob, calling Mary back to the revolutionary military anthems of Miriam and Hannah. Choosing Mary fulfills the promises to the forefathers of Israel, reverses fortunes in an unjust world, and blesses the whole earth.26 We have already found just these qualities in the election accounts of Genesis, Romans, and Ephesians.

In Catholic and Orthodox Mariology, Mary personifies both Israel and the Church: Israel, because she stands at the end of Israel's pre-messianic lineage (Matt. 1:16), passing Jacob's election onto her son. The Church, because as the first person to hear and accept the Gospel (Luke 1:30-33, 38) and one of the few not to abandon him on the cross (John 19:25), she is the first Christian and a model for Christian discipleship. Vatican II's Dogmatic Constitution of the Church refers to Mary as "a preeminent and altogether singular member of the Church" and as the mother of all Christians. In the Catholic assertion of Mary's immaculate conception, her preservation from original sin, Geoffrey Wainwright even sees a kind of correspondence to the Calvinist doctrine of election. In a special way, Mary was graced, favored, so as to be a worthy mother of the incarnate Second Person of the Trinity. Her election makes her both blessed among women, and a blessing to all who gain life in her son. In some similar way, God's special saving, electing grace towards all his people allows us to bear the Son's presence in ourselves, to each other, and to the world.

Protestants are right to be nervous about the trajectories of Orthodox and Catholic Mariology, and right to offer an alternative account of Mary's role in God's plan. But here too, Mary is a fitting exemplar for election. One helpful account comes from Millard Erickson's systematic theology, in his chapter on the Virgin Birth. He explores Mary in a distinctively evangelical way, as highlighting humanity's helplessness even to initiate the first step in God's salvation. Far from confirming her sinlessness or special standing before God, the sheer divine grace behind the virginal conception shows there to be "nothing particularly deserving" about her.27 One need not appeal to high-church traditions to locate election fruitfully in

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Annunciation. (And there may be more to Fundamentalists' insistence on the Virgin Birth than merely a reaction against modernistic naturalism.)28

Annunciation anchors election in both the Triune economy of salvation and human salvation-history. As a divine fiat, Annunciation is a Trinitarian speech-act. It decrees the eternal will of the Father, inaugurates the earthly mission of the Son, and performs the calling and creating work of the Holy Spirit. In Mary's body, promise meets fulfillment, God meets humanity, and Israel meets Church. Her unremarkable life is the Ground Zero of God's presence in creation. In her, the Triune economy does not merely decree salvation-history, but enters it.

Thus Mary's story crystallizes the themes of God's predestinating election. Like her Son, Mary bears the burden of the Father's commandments and the freedom of his promises, and the power of the Holy Spirit dwelling within her. Her divine favor evokes not the favor of the world, but its suspicion (Matt. 1:19). She feels the joy of God's election as well as the sword of God's reprobation (Luke 2:35) — not merely by her being in Christ, but by Christ being in her. Her calling is not a personal soteriological finish line, but the beginning of an extraordinary life of service in personal relationship with God the Son.

Far from these blessings lifting Mary above and beyond her fellow disciples into some "co-mediatorial" role, they are the very blessings the whole Church experiences as it lives its cruciform life of Christian discipleship. Mary's unparalleled place in the divine economy is, paradoxically, our own. Annunciation crystallizes the doctrine of election precisely because like us, Mary is not Jesus, yet he is the source of all her significance. Mary's story never drifts free from the story of Israel, Jesus, and Church. The unsuspecting slave girl who forms the body and soul of her own Lord is neither a meritorious moral agent, nor a random beneficiary of a capricious tyrant. The Lukan Mary stands in good company. She stands beside Paul's Sarah and Rebecca as well as his Jacob and Moses (Rom. 9:6-18), and is among the friends the Johannine Jesus chooses (John 15:16) and for whom he prays (17:11-12). She is numbered within the Lukan crowds predestined to eternal life (Acts 13:48), and remains in fellowship with the Church in Ephesus and elsewhere.

Eastern Orthodoxy's favorite Old Testament type for Mary is the burning bush of Exodus 3. She is aflame with God's presence, yet the integrity of her created humanity is not compromised. In this image one sees the true harmony between God's sovereignty and purpose for creation, and human agency. God's predestinating election brings "a fire which does not destroy," not only to Mary the virgin, but to all those who through the ministries of God's chosen ones become dwelling places of God's Holy Spirit and members of the body of Christ. "I partake with fearful joy of the divine fire, I who am but a straw," reads the communion prayer of Simeon the New Theologian; "and, O strange miracle, I burn without being consumed, like the ineffable dew in the light, as once the bush."29

Mary's status as representative of election does not immediately solve all the problems involved in the old debates. Questions continue to haunt us, such as how to reconcile the perdition of even a few with the apparently unlimited extent of Christ's atonement, or how to understand a divine decree of reprobation in terms of God's justice. Yet Annunciation reminds us that if we are even to find these questions theologically intelligible, we must not abstract them from the concrete history of God's salvation manifested in Israel, Jesus, and Church, and offered to the ends of the earth.

Magnify the Lord: Calling a New Election

However, Annunciation is much more than an anchor for the doctrine of election and its related issues, and a point of departure for a stronger reformulation of them. It is itself an achievement and embodiment of the doctrine of election. The Magnificat, read during the vigils of the Annunciation, as well as at Matins in the East and Vespers in the West,30 is not only a beautiful expression of Jewish messianic expectation. It is a gold standard for faithful reflection on the doctrine of election. In the context of worship, it reflects the qualities of biblical election we described above. Mary's song is an eruption of praise in the face of God's favor, which has resonated with the entire worshiping Church — Orthodox, Protestant, radical, and Catholic.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Like a film rated "R", the Westminster Confession advises "special prudence and care" when teaching its doctrine of predestination. The Revised Common Lectionary adopts a simpler approach: censorship. Its readings for Ordinary Time long-jump over the texts of homiletical terror in Rom. 9-11.31 By contrast, the Magnificat has needed no such restrictions. Like the doxology that opens Ephesians, it preaches and it worships, even in contexts where Calvinism is unpopular.32 Indeed, it is most popular particularly in such contexts. Catholics and Arminians are not tempted to hurl the powerful and sovereign God of Luke 1 to the floor in revulsion!

The Remonstrance and the TULIP were never intended nor used as liturgical texts, and they should not be evaluated as such. On the other hand, Gabriel's announcement, Mary's and Elizabeth's monologues, and other Annunciation passages may in fact not only be ideal liturgical texts, but also excellent constructive theological texts. They are shaped not by Pelagius' anti-Manichaean agenda, nor by Augustine's anti-Pelagian agenda, nor by anti-Calvinist and anti-Arminian agendas in the Low Countries, but by the ecumenical agenda of Spirit-empowered corporate worship. They are narratively concrete rather than philosophically abstract. They actually comfort and strengthen the Church in the ways Calvinism intends predestination to do, and assure and empower the oppressed better than endless Arminian altar calls. They hold together Reformed respect for God's sovereignty and specific mercies, and Arminian respect for human freedom and God's limitless love. They are models for further reflection on the doctrines of election and predestination. It is in the Church's liturgies, after all, that the biblical visions of election have survived and prospered in the face of both the Pelagian and Augustinian visions.

The Christian practice of Annunciation honors the most vital aspects of biblical election: Its Jewishness; its origin in God's loving character; its themes of reversal, mission, and bias towards blessing over cursing; its salvation-historical particularity; its continuity rather than arbitrariness; its focus in worship; and its climax in Jesus Christ. All these are ways in which traditional doctrines of election could be improved. So let us consider a kind of "Marian TULIP" whose five points are informed principally by election as we find it celebrated throughout the first chapter of Luke:

— Total human capacity for receiving God's free gifts of redemption.
— Prior divine favor on the humble and excluded.
— Sufficiency of God's saving acts in Christ.
— Unrivalled power of God's mercy to accomplish his purpose.
— God's eternal faithfulness in fulfilling his covenant promises.

These five points reframe election and predestination in a more God-glorifying way than either the Remonstrance or the Canons of Dort, and better convey the sense of the faithful. They better reflect the hymnody and prayer language of worshiping churches. Unlike their alternative schemas (but like Rom. 8:30's chain of election), all five apply to Jesus himself, rather than merely to sinners, so that our Lord's election is no longer obscured. It is true that they lack the theological precision of both the Calvinist and Arminian formulations. They are susceptible to both Calvinist and Arminian interpretations. But they are not susceptible to Pelagian interpretation, so their interpretive leeway need not be considered a weakness. Indeed, it hints at ways the longstanding rift between moderate and radical Augustinians might be healed.

Hypothetically, then, let Pelagius rather than Elizabeth ask the incredulous question, "Why is this granted me, that the mother of my Lord should come to me" (Luke 1:43)? Let Mary represent the Church that came to him bearing the Gospel of salvation to which he responded with both faith and works. Its answer to him would be (1:46-55):

My soul magnifies the Lord,
And my spirit rejoices in God my Savior,

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

For he has looked upon the humility of his slave girl.
For behold, henceforth all generations will call me blessed;
For the Mighty One has done great things for me.
Holy is his name,
And his mercy is on those who fear him from generation to generation.
He has shown strength with his arm,
He has scattered the proud in the imagination of their hearts,
He has put down the mighty from their thrones
And exalted the humble;
He has filled the hungry with good things
And the rich he has sent empty away.
He has helped his child Israel,
To remember his mercy,
As he spoke to our fathers,
To Abraham and his posterity for ever.

Is that such a poor response?

---

1 This article is part of a Christology of the liturgical year now under development, tentatively entitled The Reason for the Season: Christology Through the Liturgical Year. Many thanks to Jonathan Wilson, Nancey Murphy, James McClendon, Christian Early, Brad Kallenberg, and Allen Tennison, for their helpful critical comments.

2 McClendon 1994, 183-185, 278.

3 John Henry Newman, An Essay on the Development of Christian Doctrine, in Conscience, Consensus, and the Development of Doctrine (New York: Doubleday, 1992), 67.

4 Michael Scott Horton, Putting Amazing Back into Grace: Who Does What in Salvation? (Grand Rapids: Baker, 1994).

5 McClendon 1994, 182.

6 Rees, 15: "The very arguments for man's responsibility, exercised by use of his free will, which Augustine had deployed against the Manichees, were now being adapted by Pelagius to suit his own case that man had the power to save himself, always provided that he had accepted the saving grace of baptism of his own choice."

7 The sixteen arguments Jerome attributes to Caelestius (De Perf. Iust., ii-vii, 1-16) richly illustrate this. See John Ferguson, Pelagius: A Historical and Theological Study (Cambridge: Heffer, 1956), 62-64.

8 Peter Brown, Augustine of Hippo (London: Faber & Faber, 1967), 346-347.

9 "For [Pelagius], a good action could mean one that fulfilled successfully certain conditions of behavior, for [Augustine], one that marked the culmination of an inner evolution" (Brown, 371).

10 It is this unintentional but persistent failure that causes Rees to appreciate Pelagius as a "reluctant heretic," more worthy of pity than Gal. 1:8-9's anathemas (Rees, 131).

11 Rees, 127. Ferguson calls Augustine's interest "theological, Pelagius' anthropological" (90).

12 Ferguson, 68.

13 Ferguson, 168. In his sympathetic review of Pelagius, Ferguson admits that Pelagius' theology may be justly criticized for its "absence of any clear doctrine of the atonement" (183). Ferguson himself fails to appreciate the significance for election of Jesus' place in the history of salvation.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

14 Is it fair to Pelagius to make him the scapegoat for all of Western Christianity? Pelagius is rightfully named as the instigator of the controversy (Ferguson, 159), in his objection to Augustine's prayer in Confessions 10.40. But the blame deserves to be shared, both by the Englishman who started it, the African who accepted his terms, and by the Europeans who appropriated Augustine's response without paying sufficient attention to its context or limits. Really, all are culpable who fail to appreciate the Jewish shape of election in Scripture.

15 With Augustine's appraisal of the logical consequences of Pelagius' teaching, Brown contends that "Pelagian*ism* as we know it, that consistent body of ideas of momentous consequences, had come into existence; but in the mind of Augustine, not of Pelagius" (345). But by then Pelagius' thought had already been systematized and radicalized by followers like Caelestius (Ferguson, 58ff). For our purposes, Pelagianism is more important than the one after whom it is named.

16 While Arminius' Analysis of the Ninth Chapter of St. Paul's Epistle to the Romans does interpret Rom. 9-11 collectively rather than individually, it draws on Gal. 3-4 in order to develop a typological reading of the characters of Rom. 9 that generalizes them as types of "children of the promise" and "children of the flesh." Their narrative context in Israel's concrete history of salvation is lost. See The Works of James Arminius, trans. James Nichols and William Nichols (Grand Rapids, MI: Baker, 1986), 3:485-519.

17 Karl Barth, Church Dogmatics vol. II.2 (Edinburgh: T&T Clark, 1957), 1-506.

18 Cf. McClendon's similar observation: "Jews and Christians must learn ever to construe divine election as election to service, service to others, so that Abraham's God (and now the risen Christ) is thereby disclosed, by serving all, to be the God of all the earth (Gen. 12:3)" (278).

19 This is not to claim that the text does not support such a conclusion. It only claims that the doctrine of salvation by grace through faith is not Paul's immediate argument. Says James D.G. Dunn in his Word Biblical Commentary: Romans 9-16 (Waco, TX: Word, 1988): "The theme [of Rom. 9-11] is Israel's destiny, not the doctrine of justification illustrated by Israel [Schlier]" (520). See also Dunn, "The New Perspective on Paul: Paul and the Law," in Karl P. Donfried, ed., The Romans Debate, rev. ed. (Peabody, MA: Hendrickson, 1991), 299-308, as well as other essays in that volume.

20 "`Hail, O favored one, the Lord is with you.' By this salutation, the archangel sets Mary apart from the very beginning. She is the Elect One of God." Catherine Aslanoff, ed. The Incarnate God: The Feasts of Jesus Christ and the Virgin Mary (Crestwood, NY: St. Vladimir's Seminary Press, 1995), 1.55.

21 Despite the absence of textual indications and Mary's self-description as a handmaid, the passage is often read as an affirmation of Mary's sovereignty. Aslanoff mentions a nineteenth century Russian bishop's sermon in which he claimed, "In the days when the world was being created, when God pronounced the life-giving and powerful words, `Let it be,' the word of the Creator made creatures appear out of nothing. But on this unique day, when the divine Myriam pronounced her brief and obedient `Let it be so,' I hardly dare to say what happened then — the word of the creature caused the Creator to come into the world." See Aslanoff, 1.59, quoting Leonid Ouspensky and Vladimir Lossky, The Meaning of Icons (Crestwood, NY: St. Vladimir's Seminary Press, 1989), 172.

22 Stephen N. Williams' review of John Sanders' The God Who Risks: A Theology of Providence in "What God Doesn't Know" in Books and Culture 3 (Nov./Dec. 1999), 16, offers a satirical angle on this insight.

23 Is God's choice of Mary conditioned upon foreknowledge of her response, as Arminians claim? Perhaps the answer is provided in Luke's account of God's appearance before Zechariah. The priest, whose life of virtue would satisfy even a Pelagian (Luke 1:6), nonetheless expresses disbelief at God's unexpected good news. Yet rather than taking away his promise of joy and gladness (1:14), Gabriel simply silences him — perhaps to keep him from praying for stones and serpents? — until the bundle arrives and his words give God the proper glory (1:64, 68-79).

24 St. Joseph Daily Missal and Hymnal (New York: Catholic Book Publishing Co., 1966), 825.

25 Lossky himself speaks of "mutual consent" of God and woman — "not a passive acceptance of the Annunciation, but an active surrender of Herself to God's will, a voluntary and independent participation of the Mother of God, and, in Her Person, of all creatures, in the work of Salvation" (173).

26 John Howard Yoder calls Mary "a Maccabean," resisting the spiritualizing of the Magnificat's themes over the centuries and locating her even more firmly in the salvation-history that had continued into the intertestamental era. See The Politics of Jesus, 2d ed. (Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1994), 21-22.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

27 Millard Erickson, Systematic Theology Volume 2 (Grand Rapids: Baker, 1985), 757. He continues, "There were probably countless Jewish girls who could have served to give birth to the Son of God. Certainly Mary manifested qualities which God could use, such as faith and dedication (Luke 1:38, 46-55). But she really had nothing special to offer, not even a husband. That someone apparently incapable of having a child should be chosen to bear God's Son is a reminder that salvation is not a human accomplishment but a gift from God, and an undeserved one at that."

28 The Virgin Birth is one of the "Five Fundamentals." See George Marsden, ed., The Fundamentals (New York: Garland Publishing, 1988).

29 Quoted in Aslanoff, 1.63.

30 Aslanoff, 1.58.

31 After apportioning a week for each chapter in Rom. 5-7, the lectionary devotes four weeks to Rom. 8, then jumps from Rom. 9:1-5 (week between August 7 and 13, Year A) to Rom. 11:13-16 and 29-32 (week between August 14 and August 20) and Rom. 11:33-36 (week between August 21 and 27). Rom. 10:8-b-13 does appear in Year C's First Sunday in Lent, but it too conveniently avoids the general thrust of chapters 9-11.

32 Eph. 1:1-10 is read on the Sunday between July 10 and 16, Year B.

See also: Predestination Revised

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Predestination: It's Nothing Like You Were Told

Updated*: Predestination Revised

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=7jTf58y5ZKg [Video]

For details see*: Predestination/Election and Related Terms

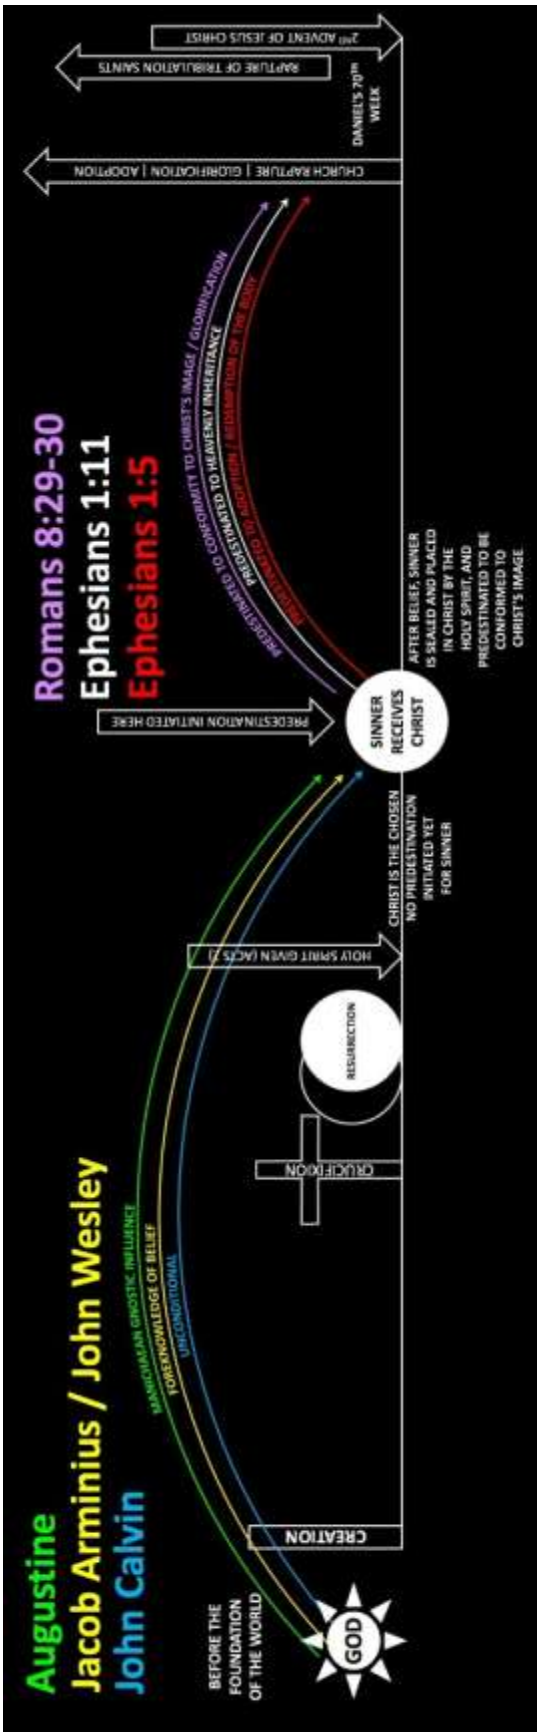
The concept of "predestination" is one of the most misunderstood subjects in scripture. It is famously associated with Calvinism, but even non-Calvinists are largely tainted with Calvinist premises of this concept. The goal of this video is to quickly and easily equip the viewer to break away from the false premises and presuppositions and deal clearly and plainly with exactly what scripture says about the matter. After viewing this video, any honest Bible believer will be able to confidently employ scripture to explain this topic soundly, while avoiding doctrinal error.

http://www.beyondthefundamentals.com/download/predestination_presentation.pdf [PDF]



http://www.beyondthefundamentals.com/download/predestination_presentation_pwd.pptx [PPT]
(Note: Password Protected)

See larger view on next page….

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Significance of the Chiastic Structure of Ephesians 1:3 - 14 for Defining 'Predestined'

http://nagasawafamily.org/paul_ephesians.1.03-14.predestination.pdf [PDF]

Excerpt:

The Chiastic Structure of Ephesians 1:3 – 14

1:3 Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who has blessed us with every spiritual blessing in the heavenly places in Christ, 4 just as He chose us in him before the foundation of the world, that we would be holy and blameless before Him in love 5 He predestined us to adoption as sons through Jesus Christ to Himself, according to the kind intention of His will, 6 to the praise of the glory of His grace, which He freely bestowed on us in the beloved 7 in him we have redemption through his blood, the forgiveness of our trespasses, according to the riches of His grace 8 which He lavished on us in all wisdom and insight 9 He made known to us the mystery of His will, according to His kind intention which He purposed in him 10 with a view to an administration suitable to the fullness of the times, that is, the summing up of all things in Christ, things in the heavens and things on the earth in him 11 also we have obtained an inheritance, having been predestined according to His purpose who works all things after the counsel of His will, 12 to the end that we who were the first to hope in Christ would be to the praise of His glory

13 in him, you also, fter listening to the message of truth, the gospel of your salvation--having also believed, you were sealed in him with the Holy Spirit of promise,
14 who is given as a pledge of our inheritance, with a view to the redemption of God's own possession, to the praise of His glory.

Summary

Blessed be God
We have every spiritual blessing
He chose us in him
That we would be holy and blameless
He predestined us to adoption
According to the kind intention of His will Grace freely bestowed
Redemption by his blood
Forgiveness of our trespasses
Grace lavished upon us
According to the kind intention of His will
In him is an administration [household]
All things summed up in Christ
Things in heaven and on earth
In him we have an inheritance
He predestined us according to His purpose
That we would be to the praise of His glory
You were sealed in him by the Spirit, having believed
We have an inheritance
Praise be to God

Regarding Ephesians 2:11-22…next page…

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Paul employed the chiastic form in Ephesians itself, in 2:11 – 22, suggesting that he had thought a great deal about the literary and poetic arrangement of the material in Ephesians, which reinforces the observation that Ephesians was not directed at a particular church problem.

2:11 Therefore remember then that formerly you, the Gentiles in the flesh, who are called 'uncircumcision' by the so-called 'circumcision' which is performed in the flesh by human hands – 12 remember that you were once separate from Christ, excluded from the commonwealth of Israel, strangers to the covenants of promise
Having no hope and without God in the world.
13 But now in Christ Jesus you who were once far off have been brought near by the blood of Christ.
14 For he is our peace, who has made both groups into one and broke down the barrier of the dividing wall 15 by abolishing in his flesh the enmity, the law of commandments contained in ordinances, so that in himself he might make the two into one new humanity thus establishing peace, 16 and might reconcile them both in one body to God through the cross, by it having put to death the enmity.
17 And he came and preached peace to you who were far away and peace to those who were near 18 for through him we both have our access in one Spirit to the Father.
19 So then you are no longer strangers and aliens but you are fellow citizens with the saints and members of the household of God 20 having been built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets (Jesus Christ himself being the cornerstone 21 in whom the whole building, being fitted together, is growing into a holy temple in the Lord 22 in whom you also are being built together into a dwelling of God in the Spirit.

I have highlighted parallel words or ideas in bold. In Ephesians 2:11 – 22, the center point is a turning point. There is a reversal as Gentiles and Jews are brought together in Christ. They are no longer far and near from God. The enmity is done away with. The Gentiles are no longer strangers and aliens but rather fellow citizens with believing Jews. And the community, which is a new Temple, is made up of the Jewish foundation of apostles and prophets, and also Gentiles who are included. Markers go from 'in the flesh' in v.11 (twice) to 'in the Lord in v.21 and 'in the Spirit' in v.22. The motif of the old Temple in Jerusalem is present in v.11 – 15 in references to being far off and in the reference to the barrier of the dividing wall, but that gives way to the motif of the new Temple 'in Christ' starting from the center extending to the last point. The literary structure itself helps us identify Paul's main emphasis and what he understood to be the monumental change brought about by Jesus vis-à-vis Jewish-Gentile relations.

Return to: Ephesians Highlights – Chapter 1: Predestination

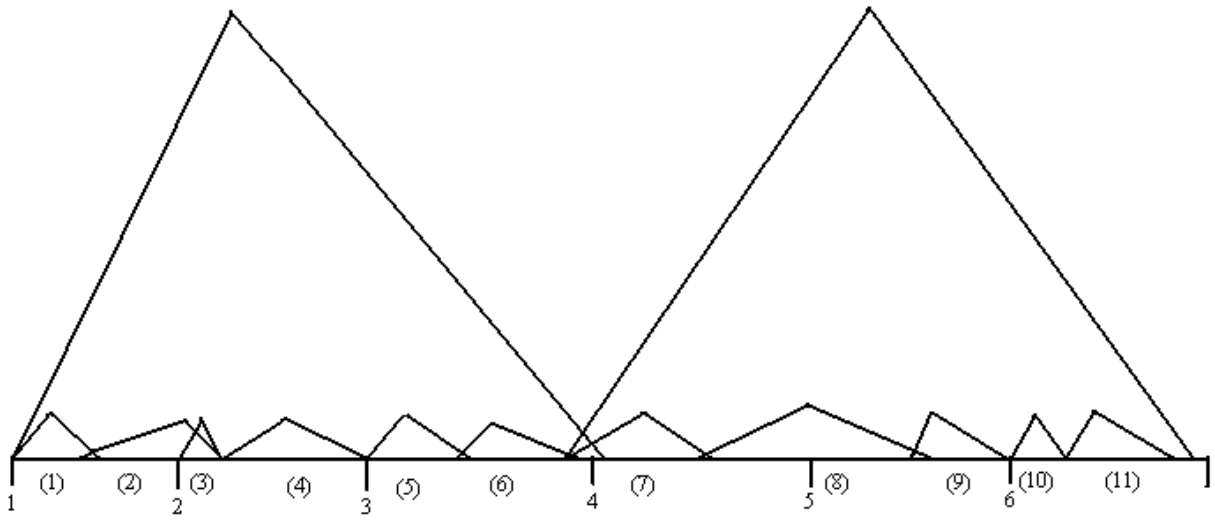
Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

Ephesians Highlights – Chapter 1 (Menu)

Ephesians Highlights – Chapter 2 (Menu)



More Ephesians chiasms on next page…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Ephesians: Chiastic Units

http://newtestamentresearch.com/NT%20Research-Mk%202/ephesians.htm

1.1-2.6 x 2.7-4.1 3.20-5.13 x 4.14-6.22

This work dates from 1975. It consists of two large secondary chiasms, plus a further eleven smaller ones. As far as I can detect, there is no overall chiasm. The first secondary is 'doctrinal', and the second 'ethical' (see the introductory notes that illuminate particular aspects of the materials below). Not all the lesser chiasms are equally convincing.

Biblical Chiasm Exchange: Ephesians (20 Chiasms)

http://www.chiasmusxchange.com/category/g-romans-philemon/ephesians/

The Trinitarianism of Ephesians 4:4-6, a Chiastic Creed

https://kevinfannystevenson.blogspot.com/2013/05/the-trinitarianism-of-ephesians-44-6.html

Excerpt:

4:4 A. One Spirit

4:5 B. One Lord (Jesus)

4:6a C. One...Father

4:6b C. Over all

B. Through all

A. In all

Return to*: Ephesians Highlights – Chapter 4 (Menu)

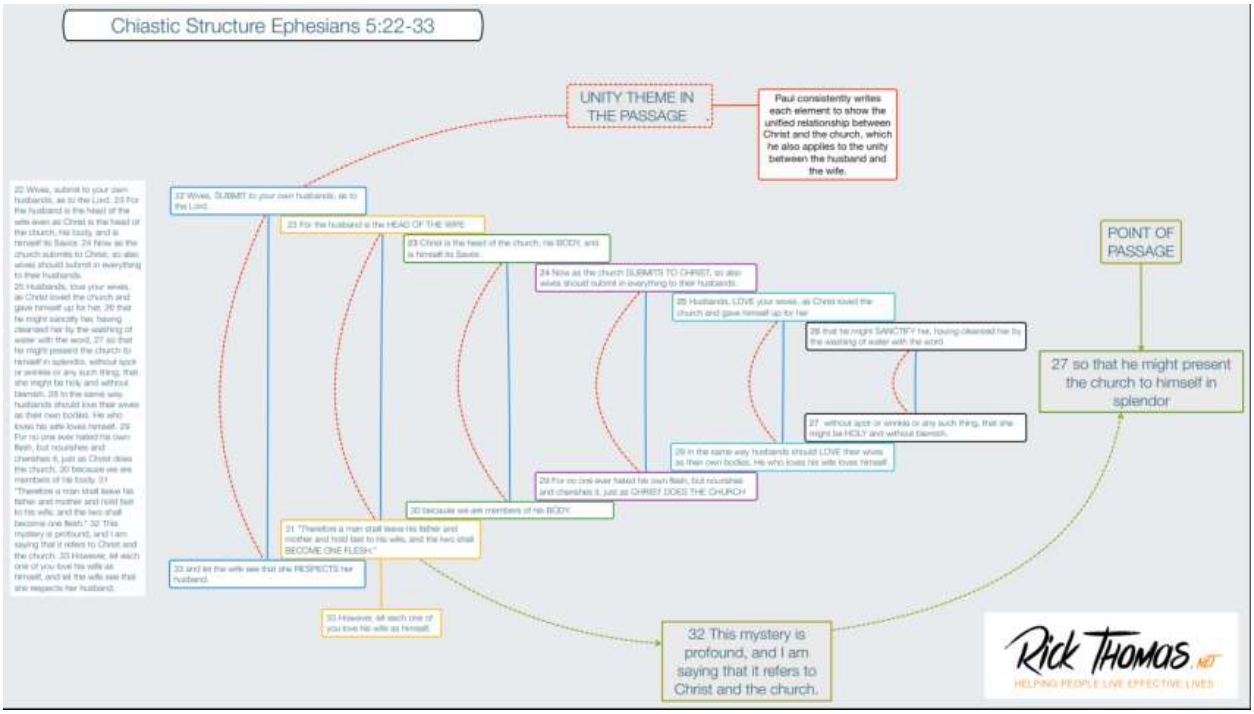
Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

[Go to Index]

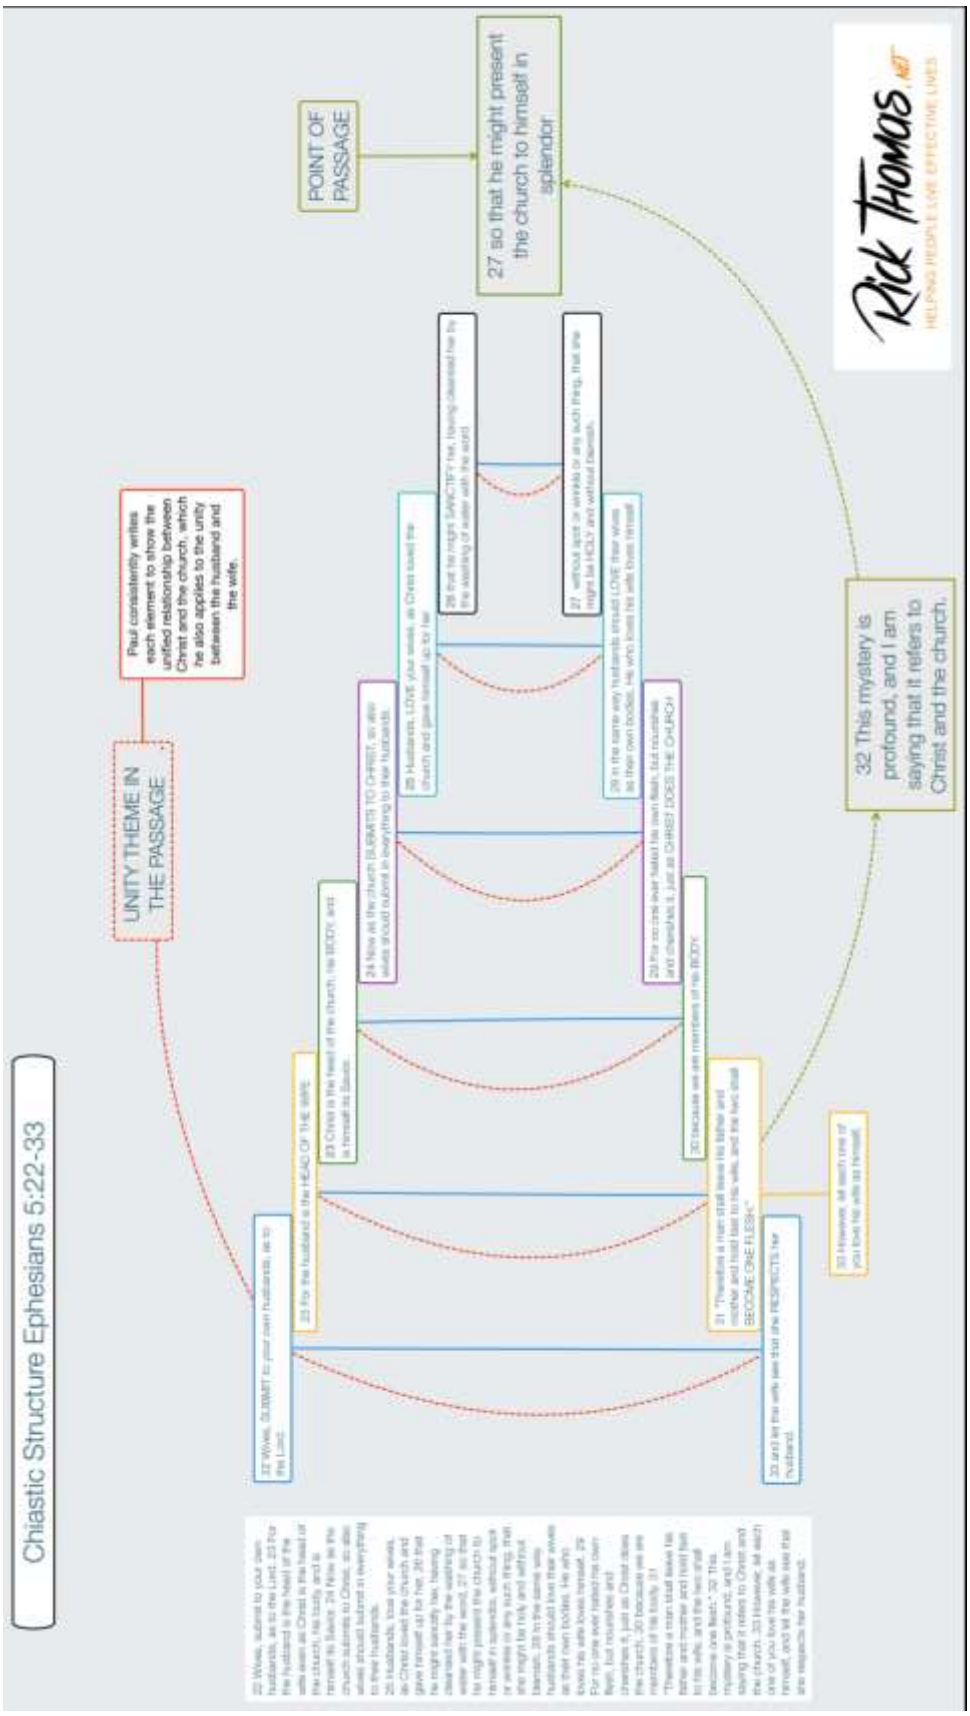


Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

[Go to Top - TOC]

Chiasm: Ephesians 5:22-33 (Should a Wife Respect Her Unkind Husband?)

https://rickthomas.net/wife-respect-unkind-husband/



Excerpt:

See next page for larger view…

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

What is a chiasm / chiastic structure in the Bible?

https://www.gotquestions.org/chiasm-chiastic.html

Excerpt:

Answer: A chiasm (also called a chiasmus) is a literary device in which a sequence of ideas is presented and then repeated in reverse order. The result is a "mirror" effect as the ideas are "reflected" back in a passage. Each idea is connected to its "reflection" by a repeated word, often in a related form. The term chiasm comes from the Greek letter chi, which looks like our letter X. Chiastic pattern is also called "ring structure."

The structure of a chiasm is usually expressed through a series of letters, each letter representing a new idea. For example, the structure ABBA refers to two ideas (A and B) repeated in reverse order (B and A). Often, a chiasm includes another idea in the middle of the repetition: ABXBA. In this structure, the two ideas (A and B) are repeated in reverse order, but a third idea is inserted before the repetition (X). By virtue of its position, the insertion is emphasized.

Some chiasms are quite simple. The common saying "When the going gets tough, the tough get going" is chiastic. The words going and tough are repeated, in reverse order, in the second half of the sentence. The structure is ABBA. Another example of a chiasm, also with the ABBA structure, is Benjamin Franklin's axiom "By failing to prepare, you are preparing to fail." Other chiasms are more complex, even spanning entire poems.

Many passages in the Bible exhibit chiastic structure. For example, Jesus' words in Mark 2:27 are in the form of a chiasm: "The Sabbath was made for man, not man for the Sabbath." Using the ABBA form, the words Sabbath and man are repeated in reverse order. Matthew 23:12 is another example.

A longer chiasm is found in Joel 3:17–21. This one has seven parts, diagrammed this way: ABCXCBA. Here is the passage:

"'Then you will know that I, the Lord your God, dwell in Zion, my holy hill.
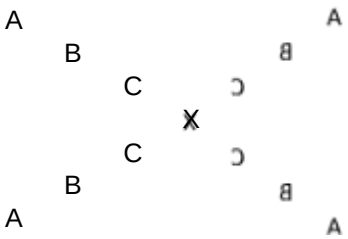
Jerusalem will be holy;
never again will foreigners invade her.
In that day the mountains will drip new wine,
and the hills will flow with milk;
all the ravines of Judah will run with water.
A fountain will flow out of the Lord's house
and will water the valley of acacias.
But Egypt will be desolate,
Edom a desert waste,
because of violence done to the people of Judah,
in whose land they shed innocent blood.
Judah will be inhabited forever
and Jerusalem through all generations.
Shall I leave their innocent blood unavenged?
No, I will not.'
The Lord dwells in Zion!"

Arranging the above text by ideas gives you…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

"'Then you will know that I, the Lord your God, dwell in Zion, my holy hill.
Jerusalem will be holy;
never again will foreigners invade her.
In that day the mountains will drip new wine,
and the hills will flow with milk;
all the ravines of Judah will run with water.
A fountain will flow out of the Lord's house
and will water the valley of acacias.
But Egypt will be desolate,
Edom a desert waste,
because of violence done to the people of Judah,
in whose land they shed innocent blood.
Judah will be inhabited forever
and Jerusalem through all generations.
Shall I leave their innocent blood unavenged?
No, I will not.'
The Lord dwells in Zion!"



The ideas presented in this prophecy then follow this arrangement:

A - God dwells in Zion (verse 17a)
B - Jerusalem is holy (verse 17b)
C - Foreign invaders are banished (verse 17c)
X - The blessings of the Kingdom (verse 18)
C - Foreign enemies are destroyed (verse 19)
B - Jerusalem and Judah are preserved (verses 20–21a)
A - God dwells in Zion (verse 21b)

The basic outline:

A
B
C
X
C
B
A

which if we mirror the above, result in the Chi letter, X

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Other passages that provide examples of chiasms include Ecclesiastes 11:3—12:2; Genesis 6—9; Amos 5:4–6a; Isaiah 1:21–26; and Joshua 1:5–9. Chiastic patterns in the Bible are just one more example of the richness and complexity of God's inspired Word.

How can we ensure a given "chiasm" was intentional by the author, and is not merely fanciful eisegesis?

https://hermeneutics.stackexchange.com/questions/5160/how-can-we-ensure-a-given-chiasm-was-intentional-by-the-author-and-is-not-mer

Theopedia: Chiasmus

https://www.theopedia.com/chiasmus

Excerpt:

Chiasmus is a literary structure in which parallel terms or concepts are first introduced in order and then again in reverse order to make a point, often emphasizing the middle concept which either appears twice in succession (ABB'A') or only once (ABCB'A'). It takes its name from the from the Greek letter ? (chi), and is also called chiasm or chiastic structure.

An example

Ephesians 1:12-14

A. to the end that we should be to the praise of his glory,
B. we who had before hoped in Christ:
C. in whom you also, having heard
D. the word of the truth,
D'. the gospel of your salvation,
C'.in whom you also, having believed,
B'. you were sealed with the Holy Spirit of promise, which is an earnest of our inheritance,
A'. to the redemption of God's own possession, to the praise of his glory.

Chiasmus: An important Structural Device

http://www.onthewing.org/user/BS_Chiasmus%20-%20McCoy.pdf [PDF]

See also*: Chiastic Structure: Ephesians

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Chiastic Structuring – An Introduction

http://newtestamentresearch.com/NT%20Research-Mk%202/chiastic_structuring.htm

Excerpt:

1) WHAT IS CHIASTIC STRUCTURING?

Chiasmus (from the Greek letter Chi: X), or chiastic structuring is a literary device often used by Old Testament and New Testament writers. They use it to build up to their main point and then back off from it in the reverse order (so that the parts 'cross over' like the members of the letter Chi - X).

A
B
C
D The main point the writer is making
D' lies at the centre.
C'
B'
A'

A and A' may help to exegete each other, as may B and B', C and C'.

2) CRITERIA FOR A CHIASM.

Three criteria that will enable one to know that a chiasm has been found are:

1) Parallel members (A & A', B & B', etc.) will have in common subject matter, significant vocabulary, and/or phrases.

2) At least in Paul's letters the centre will be tightly parallel, phrase for phrase. (In long chiasms, say 40-plus verses in Paul, the balancing members at the extremities [like A & A'] may consist of two or three verses each.)

3) The centre will be the main point. (Very often the main point will have already been seen to be the main point by earlier commentators.)

3) HOW TO DETECT CHIASMS.

1) The first step is often to notice two separated passages on the same subject or which use the same infrequently-occurring words, or words which are significant for the author's argument but which do not otherwise occur with frequency in the given section (e.g., such words might be 'God', 'Father', 'Christ', etc.).

2) The intervening material between the two passages is then scrutinized for parallel vocabulary and/or ideas which match each other step-by-step until a centre is reached. Generally the closer one comes to the centre the more precise the parallelism becomes, until it is frequently a phrase-for-phrase balancing.

3) At other times one may begin with a single verse which is itself a chiasm. Having established that there is a centre, one then extends the limits until no more effective parallelism of subject and/or vocabulary is to be found.

4) Occasionally balancing members are antitheses (e.g., A: The good live; A': The wicked die).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

5) Sometimes (as in 1 Corinthians and Galatians) the end of one chiasm overlaps with the beginning of the next, indicating either (1) they are a literary unity and both came into fixed form at the same time, or (2) just possibly the overlapping verses are bridge passages written to join chiasms, one or both of which may have existed earlier and both were extended at each end so as to overlap (i.e., the original chiastic units would have been shorter than the form in which we have them now).

4) SIGNIFICANCE OF DETECTED CHIASTIC STRUCTURES (WITH EXAMPLES)

Detected chiastic structuring can be of help to the textual critic, the source critic and the exegete in one or more of the following ways. (OX = Overall Chiasm; 1st 2^{o} = First secondary chiasm, etc.)

Note: All chiasms indicated below are given in full under the heading of the given writing.

(a) It can help one to see the whole argument and its main point.
Chiastic unit Centre (i.e., main point)
1 Corinthians:
OX: 1.1-8.6a x 8.6b-16.24
For us:
One God, the Father, ...
One Lord, Jesus Christ, ...
But not in all is this knowledge
1st 2^{o}: 1.1-3.11*a* x 3.11*b*-6.12
Only possible foundation: Jesus Christ
3^{o}: 1.1-24 x 1.24-32
To those who are called, Jews and Greeks:
Christ, God's Power and God's Wisdom
3^{o}: 4.1-15*b* x 4.16-6.11
I begat you in Christ: thus be imitators of me.
2nd 2^{o}: 6.1-8.6*a* x 8.6*b*-10.33
Apparently structured on Decalogue
(10th - 1st : 1st - 10th commandments)
3rd 2^{o}: 10.23-13.7 x 13.8-14.40
Love bears/hopes/believes/endures:
all else shall cease.
4th 2^{o}: 14.31-15.45*a* x 15.45*b* -16.24
The First Man Adam became a living soul :
The Last Man a life-making Spirit

…

(see link above for more)

Teaching Tools of Scripture

https://christinesbiblestudy.wordpress.com/2011/10/22/teaching-tools-of-scripture/

See also*: Chiastic Structure: Ephesians

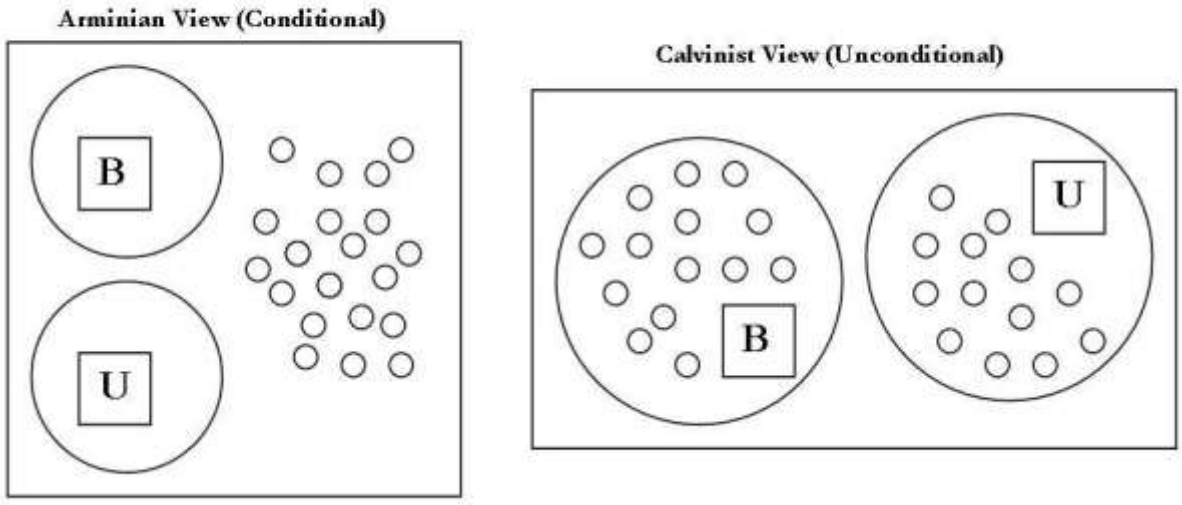
 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



Defining the Will: It's My Will...Or Is It God's? (Calvinist perspective)
http://www.icstc.com/bg/will/1will.html (Week 1 of course)

http://www.icstc.com/bg/will/will.pdf [PDF] (10-Week Course Outline)

Excerpt:

Predestination: Refers to God's determining before there was time where people would spend eternity! This either applies absolutely (certainly) to individuals as Calvinists claim or conditionally to groups of people known as believers and unbelievers as Arminians claim. Predestination falls under the category of God's Sovereignty. Election and Reprobation fall under the category of Predestination.

Predestination

B = Believers; U = Unbelievers

Unconditional Election

• God chose to save some people based on nothing to do with them.

• God the Father graciously chose and predestined some sinners to salvation. His choice was in no way conditioned upon foreseen good or merit or belief or faith of the chosen ones.

• Unconditional Election refers to:

o Individuals, not a particular nation.

o Salvation and service. (We are saved to serve God.)

o Unto faith, not based on faith.

Conditional Election

God chose to save those sinners whom He foresaw having faith

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

• Election to salvation involves both the sinner choosing God and God choosing the sinner. God's choice was conditioned upon man's choice, as God chose before creation those whom He foresaw in time believing in Jesus Christ for salvation.

• Conditional Election refers to:

o Individuals, not a particular nation.

o Salvation, not service. (Election to service is unconditional.)

o Based on faith, not unto faith.

• Both sides agree with election and predestination!

Return to: Ephesians Highlights – Chapter 1: Predestination

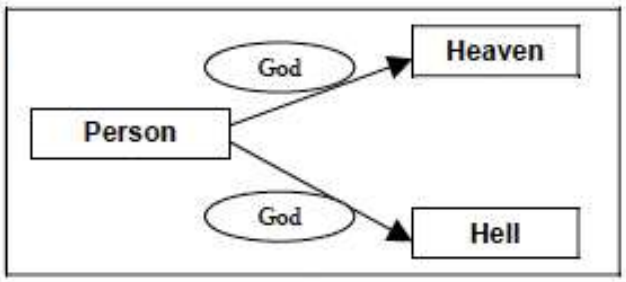
Ephesians Highlights – Chapter 1 (Menu)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Crucial Question:

Why do some go to heaven and others go to hell?



Two major positions have been advanced trying to answer this question.

1. Calvinism

   "God chooses some to go to heaven and some to go to hell."

   Does this give you comfort?

   Can a person ever be sure of going to heaven?

   Biblical response:

   1 Timothy 2:3–4 1 John 2:2

2. Arminianism

   The person chooses to go to heaven or the person chooses to go to hell.

   Does this give you comfort?

   Can a person ever be sure of going to heaven?

   Biblical response:

   Ephesians 2:1

---

3. Biblical View

   Can't be answered with one answer. Two questions:

   Why do some go to heaven?

   Why do some go to hell?

   Biblical response:

   John 3:18

   Ephesians 2:1, 4–4, 8–9

Comfort of going to heaven: 1 John 5:11–13

Return to: Ephesians Highlights – Chapter 1: Predestination

Ephesians Highlights – Chapter 1 (Menu)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

What does ' predestination ' mean?

https://www.pushpublishing.co.uk/predestination/

Excerpt:

Predestination has become a controversial theological topic, despite the fact that the term is relatively rare in the New Testament. The controversy usually revolves around questions such as: what exactly is predestined? Does predestination mean that everything that happens in the universe is pre-determined, decided and controlled by God? Did God deliberately select and destine some individuals for salvation and some for destruction before the creation of the world? The aim of this brief word study is to consider how the term should be understood in its biblical context, and therefore how it would have been understood by the earliest Christians.

'Predestination' is simply 'pre-horizon-ing': the setting of a definition, a boundary, a destiny beforehand.

Definition

The word predestination only appears 6 times in the whole of the New Testament, and not once in the Old Testament [although the related word orizw (horizo) does appear 21 times in the Greek version of the Old Testament]. It translates the Greek word 'pro-horizo' (proorizw), which is made up of the prefix 'pro-' (equivalent to our 'pre-', meaning 'before'), and 'horizo' (orizw), from which we derive our English word 'horizon'. 'Horizo' in Greek has a range of meanings such us 'to define', 'to set the limits or boundaries of a thing', and therefore 'to determine, fix or set' [these definitions are based on the BDAG Greek Lexicon of the New Testament, which cites a word's occurrences in classical Greek literature as well its particular usage in the New Testament as its basis for translation]. A horizon is a helpful visual aid for us to understand the meaning of the word: it is a line of definition, a boundary line, a broad limit, a demarcation. It is not something narrow, individual and constricting, but a horizon or a boundary—something that has definition and limits, but is nonetheless broad and expansive and can encompass a great deal. A line is drawn to define and explain both what our destiny is and what it isn't. 'Predestination' is therefore a reasonable English translation, and is only made problematic by the fact that people read all kinds of different pre-conceived ideas into the concept of 'destiny'. 'Predestination' is simply 'pre-horizon-ing': the setting of a definition, a boundary, a destiny beforehand.

Use in the New Testament

So much for the word itself—but what does the Bible say? Of the six New Testament occurrences of the word, two refer to the crucifixion of Jesus (Acts 4:28; 1 Corinthians 2:7). Most Christians will not be surprised to read that when it came to the central salvific event for the whole of human history, God had thought about it beforehand and had a plan. The remaining four are all about the church—the destiny of believers in Christ (Romans 8:29,30; 1 Corinthians 2:7; Ephesians 1:5; 1:11). Let's look at each of these four examples in turn:

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Romans 8:29 and 30

"Those whom He foreknew, He also predestined to be conformed to the image of His Son…".

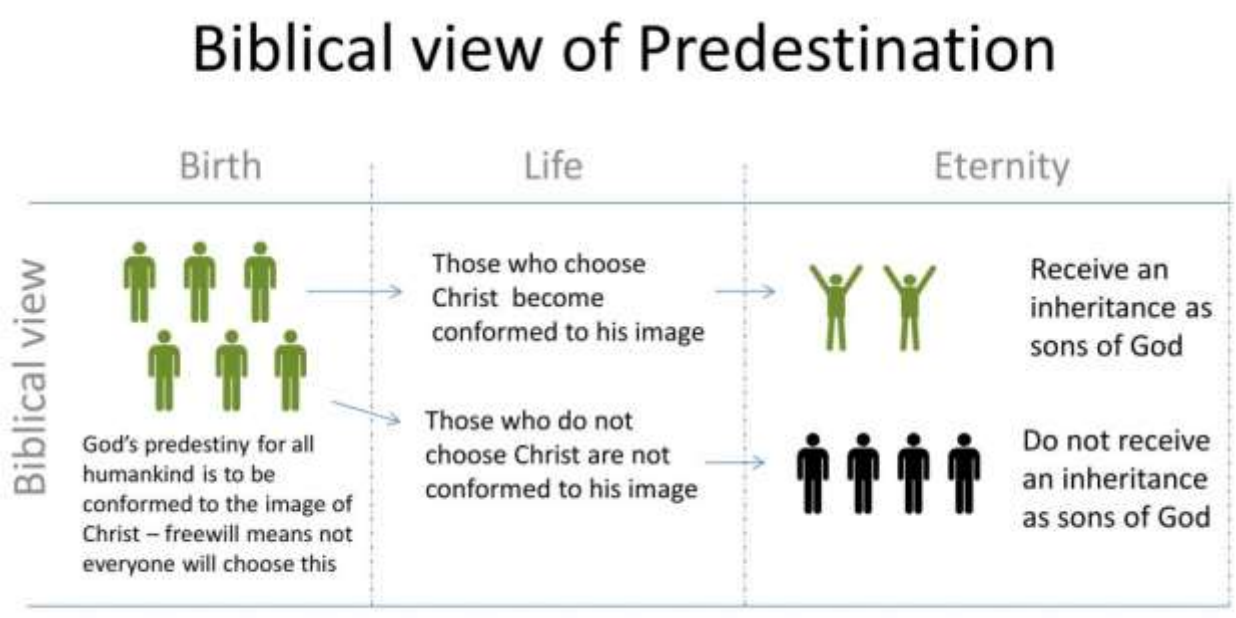
Who and what is it talking about?
These verses tell us the destiny we are given beforehand: to be conformed to the image of God's Son. As far as what we are predestined for is concerned, we have the answer. But does this verse tell us anything about who is predestined? If we read it in its context, yes it does: the whole of chapter 8–right from the very first verse—is concerned with 'those who are in Christ Jesus' (Romans 8:1). In Romans 8:29, what does God know beforehand about those in Christ? That they will need the Spirit's help in their weakness (8:26), and that despite knowing their weakness God has given them a glorious calling and destiny (v29), and He will indeed work with them in every situation in order to achieve that good purpose (v28).

This is the indication from the immediate context of Romans 8, but even if we are determined to push this idea of foreknowledge back pre-creation, it still tells us nothing about God selecting particular individuals to be in or out of the body of Christ. God would have looked ahead from before creation at His glorious plan for humanity and 'foreknown' that there would be a community of people in Christ being conformed to His own image—this was His express purpose and intention in creating, and therefore the existence and character of such a people was both 'predestined' and 'foreknown'.

These verses say nothing about who will be in Christ and who won't, or about certain individuals being predestined for salvation or otherwise. Paul is simply talking to those who are in Christ and telling them what their destiny is.

Ephesians 1:5 and 11

> 5. He predestined us to adoption as sons through Jesus Christ to Himself, according to the kind intention of His will"



What does 'adopted as sons' mean?
Here again we see that predestination is to do with sonship. But a new term is introduced: the 'adoption' as sons. 'Adoption' is a somewhat unhelpful translation of a Greek word that means something very different to what we mean by 'adoption' in English. The word in Greek is literally 'son-placing', and as far as the New Testament is concerned, it speaks of an event that is in the future, not in the past (Romans 8:18-25, particularly v23).

We think of adoption as being at the beginning of the Christian life–the popular idea of being 'adopted into God's family'–but we are not in fact adopted into God's family, we are born into God's family, born of the Spirit (eg John 1:13, 3:5, 1 John 5:1). This is a wonderful truth, as is 'son-placing', which speaks of the future revealing of the sons of God (Rom 8:18). It is based on the Jewish idea of a son coming of age and receiving his inheritance and the rights, privileges and responsibilities that come with it. [For a thorough biblical study of this theme, see G. H. Lang 'Firstborn Sons, their Rights and Risks'.] This ties in exactly with verse 11 of Ephesians 1:

> "11. . . . also we have obtained an inheritance, having been predestined according to His purpose who works all things after the counsel of His will"

In Christ we have become heirs to an inheritance (Galatians 4:7), a concept which is also linked with adoption and predestination in Romans 8 (Romans 8:16-17, 23, 29). Ephesians 1 and Romans 8 are speaking of the same process of being predestined to be conformed to the image of the Son of God, one day to be revealed as sons of God, when we will come into the fullness of our inheritance. This will be our 'adoption' or 'placing as sons'.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The biblical view of pre-destination.

Conclusion

The teaching of the New Testament regarding predestination is therefore clear and consistent. Before creation God had a plan in mind for humanity—that in our union with Christ we would become conformed to the image of God's Son. This is the limit, the definition, the destiny that God has given humanity beforehand—not to be some other kind of creature, or to develop some other kind of character, nor to live for some other destiny or purpose—but together in the body of Christ to be conformed to the character and maturity of Jesus the Son, one day to receive with Him and in Him the fullness of our inheritance as sons of God.

So why all the fuss?

To think through the implications of our understanding of predestination, see my blog article: 'Predestination: what's all the fuss about?' To read about all these issues in much greater depth and to see more of the evidence behind these ideas, see 'God's Strategy in Human History: Volume 1 – God's Path to Victory (chapter 16) and Volume 2 – Reconsidering Key Biblical Ideas (chapter 5), available to buy in the shop.

See also the following (below) article*: Predistanation: what's all the fuss about? …

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Predestination: what's all the fuss about?

https://www.pushpublishing.co.uk/predestination-whats-fuss/

Excerpt:

[This discussion follows on from the previous blog article: 'Predestination: what does it mean?', a brief word study outlining the New Testament's teaching about predestination].

Controversy

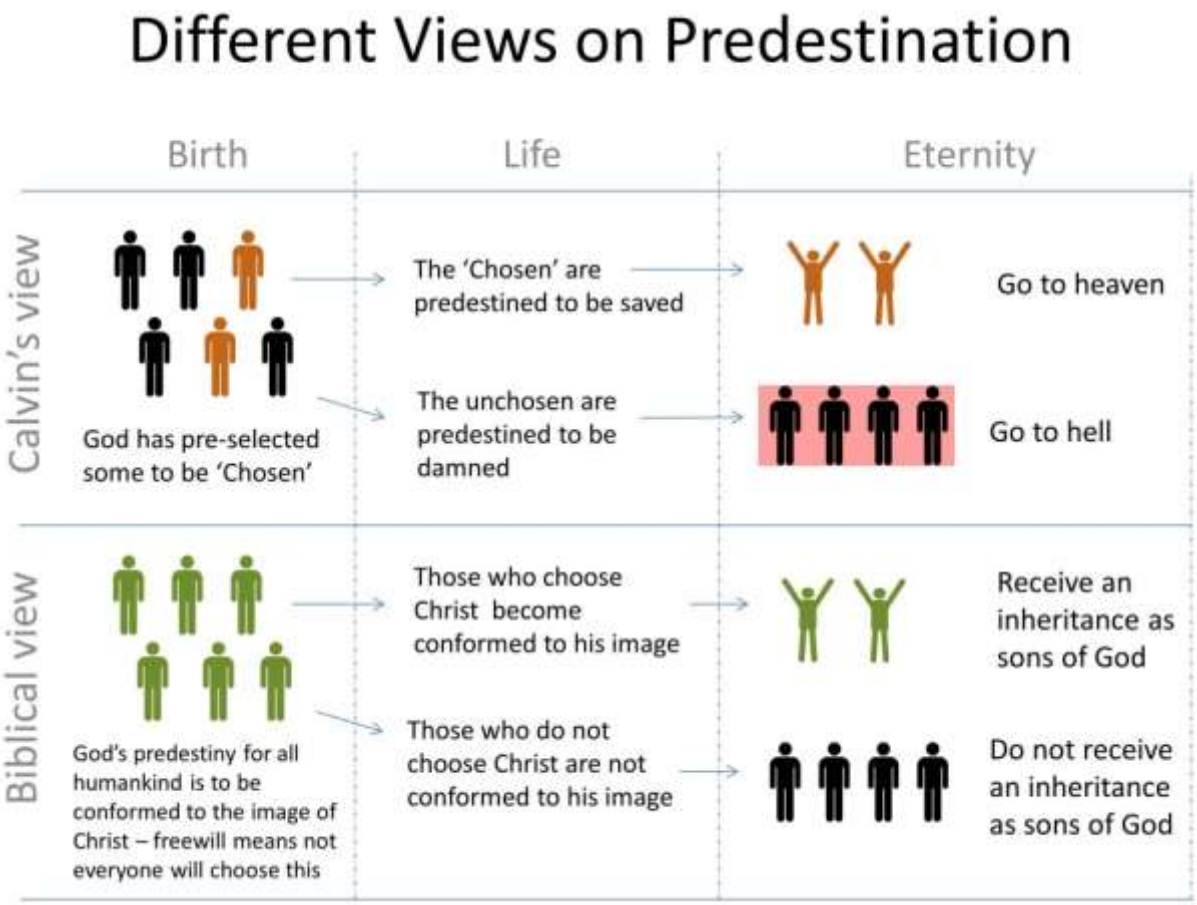
It is a great shame that the doctrine of predestination has come to be seen as a controversial and difficult to understand theological topic. When properly understood it is both simple and beautiful, revealing God's love for humanity and His glorious purposes in creation. Sadly much of this beautiful truth has been buried under centuries of controversy and erroneous tradition.

What's the problem?

Divergent interpretations of predestination present starkly different views when it comes to the nature and character of God, the way He relates to human beings, His purposes, and His activity in human history.

It's hard not to caricature a point of view when summarising, but the two positions sketched below give some idea of the difference it can make.

Augustinian Calvinist/reformed position



Because of the great influence of Augustine on reformation theologians and subsequent church history, this is often seen as the "traditional" view. However, critics would say it is not traditional enough, pointing to the widespread and dramatic theological changes that Augustine ushered in during the 4th/5th centuries.

In short, a consistent Augustinian-Calvinist position holds that God knew and pre-determined with certainty every event (small or large) that would happen in the whole of human history. Free choice is therefore an illusion, as every choice we make has been pre-determined and inevitable since the foundation of the world. Every event is orchestrated and controlled by God, whether good or evil. God also, therefore, decided before creation which individuals would respond to Him and which would reject Him, thus determining who would receive eternal life and who would be condemned to hell. In this view, nothing happens that is not the will of God.

It is easy to see why proponents of this view wrestle to reconcile a God of love with the 'problem of evil'–a problem which only exists as such if you think that God is willing and controlling all the evil. It is also easy to see why people who face radical evil and suffering in their lives struggle with the concept that it is the fore-ordained will of God, and that God is in control of every aspect of it.

See also*: Predestination Revised

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

A lost doctrine?

I remember the impact it had on me when I first heard Roger Forster (co-author of 'God's Strategy in Human History') preach on the subject of predestination and the 'beautiful thought' of God. Ephesians 1:5 speaks of the 'kind intention', 'purpose', 'good pleasure', or 'pleasure and will' of God (according to the various English versions). The Greek word translated is eudokia, made up of two smaller Greek ideas: eu (good, well, excellent, beautiful) and dokia (from dokeo: to think, consider, recognise), hence Roger's rendering: 'beautiful thought'.

The hypothetical story of God's beautiful thought that is used to illustrate predestination then runs like this: before creation, Father, Son and Holy Spirit exist in perfect loving union. At a particular point in time, God has the biggest thought He could possibly have: "let us make man in our own image". Not as some other kind of weird or wonderful creature, nor some angelic being, but man made in the image of God. Developing character takes time, so becoming like God in character must take plenty of time–you cannot snap your fingers and produce Christ-like character overnight. It would also require freedom, choice and the ability to love.

Thus human beings are made with the ability and potential to love like God, and to be conformed to the image of His Son–this is their pre-destiny (Rom 8:29). The possibility comes with great risk (as love always does), a risk that would ultimately cost the pain and sacrifice of the cross. Yet the possibility of human beings made in the image of God–with the potential for real love and Christ-like character–was worth both the risk and the price to be paid. Love longs to give, create and share–despite the risks.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Could human beings reject this purpose? Yes (Genesis 2-3; Luke 7:30). Were the risks, human weaknesses, and all these possibilities foreknown by God? Yes (Romans 8:26-30). Does this mean that every choice and every failure was foreordained and controlled by God? The scripture says nothing of the sort.

Why does it matter?

The way we think about God affects the way we live, the way we treat others, and the kind of people that we become. As Christians, it affects the way we pray, the way we worship, the choices we make, and the way we counsel others. We reflect that which we worship (2 Corinthians 3:18). The biblical teaching of predestination is something to be revelled in, to enjoy–something that should make us rejoice and wonder at the glorious purpose and high calling that God has given to humanity, as well as the love and grace that He has lavished on us despite our failings. It is not something to confuse and perplex us, to make us doubt the integrity of God's love and character, or to write off as a paradox or unknowable mystery.

To consider the evidence behind these issues in the depth they really deserve, see Forster and Marston 'God's Strategy in Human History' Volumes 1 and 2.

See also*: Predestination Revisited

Return to: Ephesians Highlights – Chapter 1: Predestination

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

Ephesians Highlights – Chapter 1 (Menu)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

http://yuriystasyuk.com/six-different-views-of-predestination-what-do-calvinists-and-arminians-believe/

Excerpt:

A friend recently asked me what I personally believe about predestination. His confusion was that because, according to him, it seems that everyone has a different version of predestination. In some sense I agree, there are multiple views, yet I believe they can easily be narrowed down to only a few. Any other differences are only based on semantics and the way we use words, not an actual difference in ideas. Calvin, whose name is often closely associated with the idea of predestination said it is a "baffling question,". He also wrote that "if anyone with carefree assurance breaks into this place, he will not succeed in satisfying his curiosity and he will enter a labyrinth from which he can find no exit." As with many other doctrines, a lighthearted or careless approach can be dangerous. So let's review the different ways people view predestination.

DEFINITION

Predestination (pr-dst-nshn) n.

Combination of two word groups, "pre" and "destination"/"destiny." The idea that one's destination/destiny is predetermined beforehand. Example: If I decide to go to New York, that is my destination and I because have decided beforehand to make the trip, I have predestined myself to go to New York. Also, if I decide beforehand (pre) to take my cat to the vets office (destination), then I have 'predestined' him to go to the vet

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

We shall start with the most “harsh” type of predestination and work our way down

I shall try to keep this as simple as I can without losing important details. (Fortunately for us I will avoid supralapsarianism and infralapsarianism.)

Types (Views/Concepts) of Predestination:

1. Equal ultimacy (hypercalvinism) predestination

2. Calvinist double predestination

3. Calvinist single predestination

4. Corporate predestination

5. Spiritual gifts predestination

6. Ignorant-ism (no predestination)

Let’s define these terms…

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

1. Equal ultimacy (hypercalvinism) predestination

Simply put, "equal ultimacy" says that: Everyone is neutral, and God uses the same equal ultimate force to pull some into good works/heaven and push others into sin/hell, all while ignoring their will. The idea is that people are nice and neutral, they want to become good Christians, and instead God gives no chances. Some people he actively sanctifies making them holy and sending them to heaven. Others he actively demonizes, makes into sinners, and actively pushes them to hell. In both cases he uses an equal amount of force, in both cases people are neutral before, in both cases people don't follow their desires or sometimes are said to have no personality or will. In both cases God forces everyone and that's it. Chances are, if you have never heard of predestination or Calvinism, you equate Calvinism with "equal ultimacy." One of my greatest challenges since embracing the reformed theology has been dealing with this strange position. There is not a Calvinist in the world who has ever believed in "equal ultimacy." Yet every single day I meet people who accuse Calvinists of believing it. So every day I repeat again, "this is a theoretical position, no one believes it, it's a caricature." The biggest criticism with this view is that is stupid and horrendous and no one in their right mind believes it.

2. Calvinist double predestination

Most people who have heard of the phrase "double predestination" have probably assumed it's the same as "equal ultimacy" above. This is very incorrect. All Calvinists do not believe in equal ultimacy and do believe in single or double predestination. In my opinion, once we have clarified we are not for "equal ultimacy," the double vs single predestination is only a game of semantics and words. True historic double predestination simply means this: All freely chose to disregard God and hate him. Then God predestined to save 'some' from that sin they chose, and predestined to pass over 'others.' Salvation is not based on anything we did or could do but of Grace. This first group is called "the elect," and the second group is called "the reprobate." In double predestination everybody freely chose sin and enmity with God. Everyone daily chooses to remain slaves to sin because they love sin and hate Jesus. No one ever wants to repent (John 6:44; Rom 3:11). So Jesus actively pulls some away from sin, and passively does not act on others. As an example lets use Luke 8:10, Jesus says His disciples can only understand Him because it has been given to them and to others it has not. Here God is not actively preventing the Pharisees from joining Him against their will, no, they actually want to stay away. He predestined to passively let them have what they desire in their evil hearts. Others, He predestined to save from that evil desire. The biggest criticism with this view is that it seems to downplay personal responsibility. "If I can't be good, how can God punish me" is a common question. Calvinists often answer this by pointing out that we sin by choice, will, and desire, not against our will, choice, and desire. We all freely choose to sin, no one forces us. So for those that are not elect, it's not a matter of "I want to repent but can't," instead it's "I hate God and I really want to sin." Having no free will is not an issue of "I can't choose the right thing" it[s] always an issue of "I sin because I want to and I like it."

3. Calvinist single predestination

In my opinion (and many others whom I learned from) single predestination is the same as double, just using different language. Primarily because when people hear "double predestination" they often assume it means "equal ultimacy." But theoretically what single predestination means is as follows: All freely chose to disregard God and hate him Then God predestined to save 'some' from that sin they chose. Salvation is not based on anything we did or could do but of Grace. If you noticed, the only thing missing from the double predestination above is "God passed over others." The basic premise of this single predestination is that God saved the elect and the rest just live their lives and will get what they deserve. Often the only noticeable difference between single and double is that supporters of double predestination would talk about God having a dual purpose for actively choosing to save the elect and passively choosing to allow the reprobate to sin as they please. Conversely, proponents of single predestination will say God's only purpose was to choose the elect. I am here, since I think both single and double say the same thing in a different way.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

3. Historic Arminian predestination

Early Arminians understood the word predestination was in the Bible. So thus they devised a way that predestination and libertarian free will could be true. This is: All freely chose to disregard God and hate him. Then God looked into the future to see who would one day of free will choose Him and then, as a result, predestined to save only those. Salvation is based on two things, Gods grace AND us having a better free will response to God than our neighbor. This view does good in that it engages the Bible and deals with a word like predestination. I once talked with a few pastors who didn't believe in predestination, then upon showing them a few passages (Rom 8:29; Eph 1:5) one quickly changed his mind and formulated something similar to the "historic Arminianism" response. Philosophically this view could work. Yet, it requires so much interpretive gymnastics to twist what the Bible says about predestination that, I consider this view very lacking. While Eph 1:5 and 1:11 says we were predestined "according to the purpose of [God's] will" this view says the opposite, that we were predestined according to our personal will. Also Paul in many places says we are not saved by works or merit, yet this view would say we are saved ONLY because of our 'merit' because "God saw that we would respond better than our neighbors." In addition, one of the biggest blows is that this view is not in the Bible. There is nothing that says God chose us based on our good response in the whole Bible. Nothing at all.

4. Corporate predestination

This is my favorite non Calvinist view (it is one of the two common Arminian views). It is that: All freely chose to disregard God and hate him. Then God predestined to save a group through Christ. This view doesn't deal with predestining individuals but predestining salvation in general. So basically whenever the Bible speaks of predestination, it only refers to the fact that God predestined to save people through Jesus before the beginning of time. According to this view, individuals are not chosen one-by-one, instead God chose to have "a church" or "a bride" for Jesus before the beginning of time. This view avoids dealing with all the debates of Calvinism, and the hermeneutical gymnastics of Historic Arminianism, and espouses an attractive position. I like it. God chooses a "group," called His bride, and then whoever joins this group is his. The biggest criticism leveled against corporate election is that it deals with an abstract "empty set" and is impersonal. We can compare it to an empty school bus. In historic Arminianism and Calvinism, God chooses individual people to put onto this school bus. He has personal seats reserved for all his students, whom he knows by name. You have personal faith, a personal relationship with Jesus, personal forgiveness from sin, and are personally predestined for salvation. In corporate election, God only chooses the empty school bus but not people. Some scholars argue that salvation through the cross is about Jesus paying for individual people's sins, not an abstract atonement for a group without individuals. Another way of putting it, Jesus did not die to save an empty school bus, he died for individual people that get onto the school bus. There are also criticism leveled because the predestination passages often use language that refers to individuals (1 Thess 1:4-5)

5. Spiritual gifts predestination

This is a very unique view, that some people I have met invented. Quite frankly, I doubt anyone who is scholarly actually holds to this, and I have not found them. This view, as presented to me by numerous people over the years says: God doesn't predestine people for salvation; they choose that themselves. God's predestination only determines what spiritual gifts you have. This view is held by a few Arminians/Semi-Pelagians, though is popular only in "folk religion" type churches. The primary criticism of this view is that the Bible never says predestination/election is about gifting, while it does say it has to do with salvation. Paul says "He predestined us for adoption as sons through Jesus Christ" not "He predestined us to have different gifts" (Eph 1:5). In fact the first two chapters in Ephesians are all about salvation, and not about spiritual gifts.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

6. Ignorant-ism (no predestination)

This is my favorite view to deal with. It's very simple, it goes like this: "I don't believe in predestination, the Bible doesn't teach it!" The simplest way to deal with this view is to bring up Bible passages. Of course, in my experience, those who are in this position don't like Bible passages. There are many serious Arminians who love the Bible, honor Jesus, and carefully deal with Scripture. The people of this view are not them. Just last week a gentleman emailed me accosting me for believing in the horrors of predestination. I simply responded with Bible passages that used that word. His response was anger and condemnation. I responded politely again, with more passages, saying he ought to have some view of predestination, whatever it is. More condemnation. Here is the main criticism of ignorantism, the Scripture talks of election and predestination in nearly every New Testament book. Mat 11:25-26, Mat 22:14,Mat 24:24, Mat 24:31;Mark 4:10-12; Luke 18:7; John 5:21, John 6:37–39, John 13:18, John 15:16, John 15:19; Acts 4:27–28, Acts 13:17, Acts 13:48; Rom 8:29–30, Rom 8:33, Rom 9:15-33, Rom11:14-15; 1 Cor 1:27–28; Eph 1:3–12; Phil 1:29; Col 3:12; 1 Thess 1:4–5; 2 Thess 2:13; 2 Tim 2:10; Titus 1:1; James 1:18; Jude 1:4; 1 Peter 1:1; 1 Peter 2:4; 1 Peter 2:9; 2 Peter 1:10; Rev 13:8

Predestination

https://www.the-highway.com/predestination_index.html

Page with numerous links to articles by well known theologians about predestination (Calvinist/Reformed in Perspective)

How does free will fit with the doctrine of predestination? (Forum)

https://christianity.stackexchange.com/questions/4236/how-does-free-will-fit-with-the-doctrine-of-predestination

See also*: Predestination Revisited

Return to beginning of*: Ephesians Chapter 1: Predestination

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

Return to*: Ephesians Highlights – Chapter 1 (Menu)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

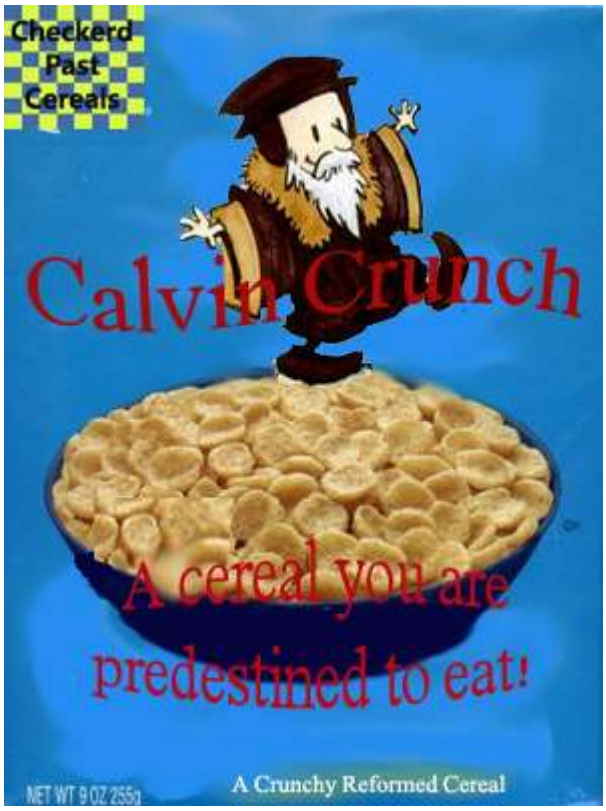
Sweet, Pleasant, and Unspeakable Comfort: The Anglican View of Predestination

(Part I) (Anglican Perspective)

https://conciliaranglican.com/2011/11/11/sweet-pleasant-and-unspeakable-comfort-the-anglican-view-of-predestination-part-i/

Excerpt:



The doctrine of election is one of the most misunderstood of Christian doctrines and one of the most contested within Christian communities. In a previous post, I debated some questions about election with Peter Ould. Since then, I have done more reading in the scriptures and more research into the classical Anglican teaching on this topic and have found that while my previous rejection of Calvinist predestination was appropriate, my understanding of the Anglican approach to election may have been deficient. Over the course of this brief series, I hope to sketch out the Anglican theology of predestination and election that comes through in the Anglican formularies and in classical Anglican teaching. For today, though, let me begin by showing why I believe the Calvinist understanding of predestination to be insufficient in regards to the teaching of holy scripture…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Sweet, Pleasant, and Unspeakable Comfort: The Anglican View of Predestination (Part II) (Anglican Perspective)
https://conciliaranglican.com/2011/11/23/sweet-pleasant-and-unspeakable-comfort-the-anglican-view-of-predestination-part-ii/

Excerpt:

Some people may wonder why I am taking so much time at the outset to show that the classical Calvinist position is wrong. It is not because I want to bash Calvinism. At the risk of sounding condescending ("Some of my best friends are Calvinists!"), I have a great deal of respect for Calvin and for what Calvin gets right. He had a keen mind which was a gift to the Church, and much of what he wrote and taught complements Anglicanism fairly well. Moreover, his work had a huge impact on the Anglican Reformers, and it would be ludicrous for anyone to claim otherwise. Hooker in particular speaks highly of Calvin and praises him for his many theological achievements. Yet Hooker was also willing to point out where Calvinism had it wrong. Often Hooker was generous to Calvin, blaming the problems he saw in Calvinism on Calvin's followers and successors rather than on Calvin himself. There is probably some truth to the notion that later generations of Calvinists have not always properly understood what Calvin was doing. Nevertheless, while Calvin is not personally responsible for coming up with the TULIP language, Calvin's teaching in the Institutes certainly supports the notion of double predestination.

The reason why I choose to begin this series by pointing out the flaws in Calvinist predestination is because it is a crude version of the Calvinist understanding of predestination that most people have in mind when they hear the word predestination. Moreover, in recent times, Anglo-Calvinists have argued that the Calvinist view of predestination is not only compatible with Anglican teaching but is actually explicitly mandated by the formularies. As we shall see, nothing could be further from the case. Anglicanism definitely has a teaching on election which includes predestination, but it is not the double predestination of Calvinism. Classical Anglicanism's rejection of Calvinist predestination must be understood if we are to come to know what Anglicanism actually teaches on this important subject.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

An Explanation of Terms

Before going any further, it would probably be worth our while to stop for a moment and give definition to some of these theological words that I am bandying about. Both election and predestination have to do with salvation. Sometimes it is assumed that predestination is a word that refers to every aspect of our lives, that if you say that you believe in predestination it means that you do not believe in any kind of free will. This is not a view held by Christians. Even Calvinism affirms that individuals have a kind of limited free will when it comes to the every day decisions of our lives, where we work, who we marry, how we style our hair, whether we get pizza or caviar for dinner, etc. The question under consideration is not whether we have any kind of free will but specifically whether or not we have free will when it comes to God. Can we as fallen human beings seek out and find God or is this impossible for us? Or to put it another way, do we have a role in saving ourselves or is it all done on God's end?

In the context of that conversation, election refers to God's action towards the faithful, God's choosing of those who will be saved. We use elect here in the same way it is used when you take an elective course in college. It is not something you have to do. It is something you elect to do, something you choose. The elect are those whom God has chosen. And predestination refers to how that choosing takes place. It's a bit crude, but if we think of heaven and hell as destinations, then *pre*destination would be a decision that God makes about which destination you will arrive at before you even begin your journey. Predestination means that God's election takes place before you were ever born, before even the world began…

Sweet, Pleasant, and Unspeakable Comfort: The Anglican View of Predestination

(Part III) (Anglican Perspective)

https://conciliaranglican.com/2011/12/09/sweet-pleasant-and-unspeakable-comfort-the-anglican-view-of-predestination-part-iii/

Excerpt:

You know, predestination would speed things up on Judgment Day.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

While I have taken great pains to point out that the Anglican position on predestination does not mirror the Calvinist position, it is worth noting that the Anglican position also does not mirror the opposite positions of Arminianism and Universalism. Briefly, Arminians teach that God's predestination of some to receive salvation is based on God's omniscient foreknowledge. God knows that some people are going to choose to respond to the Gospel with faith, and therefore God chooses them. This effectively takes salvation out of God's hands and puts it into ours, something which classical Anglicanism strongly rejects. On the other hand, Universalists argue that God predestines everyone to salvation, thus solving the problem of how to reconcile the Bible's teaching that Jesus died for all people with the doctrine that He elects only some to salvation. But in solving one problem, Universalism creates another by ignoring the many passages in Scripture that speak about hell and damnation. Moreover, Universalism, like Calvinism, divorces salvation from faith by making election arbitrary. The grace with which God chooses a person is impossible for that person to resist, which renders faith nothing more than a show that God puts on rather than the natural response of the human heart to receiving God's favor.

So if the Anglican teaching on predestination is not Calvinist, nor Arminian, nor Universalist, what is it?

See also*: Predestination Revisited

Return to: Ephesians Highlights – Chapter 1: Predestination

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

Ephesians Highlights – Chapter 1 (Menu)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Christian Humor Images

See also*: More Christian Humor

continuing with Christian humor images…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Calvin Crunch – A Cereal You Are Predestined to Eat

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

You know, predestination would speed things up on Judgment Day.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

References:

[Divine Decree]

[Order of Decrees]

[Lapsarianism]

[Predestination – Ephesians]

[Predestination, Election and Related Terms]

See also*: [More Christian Humor]

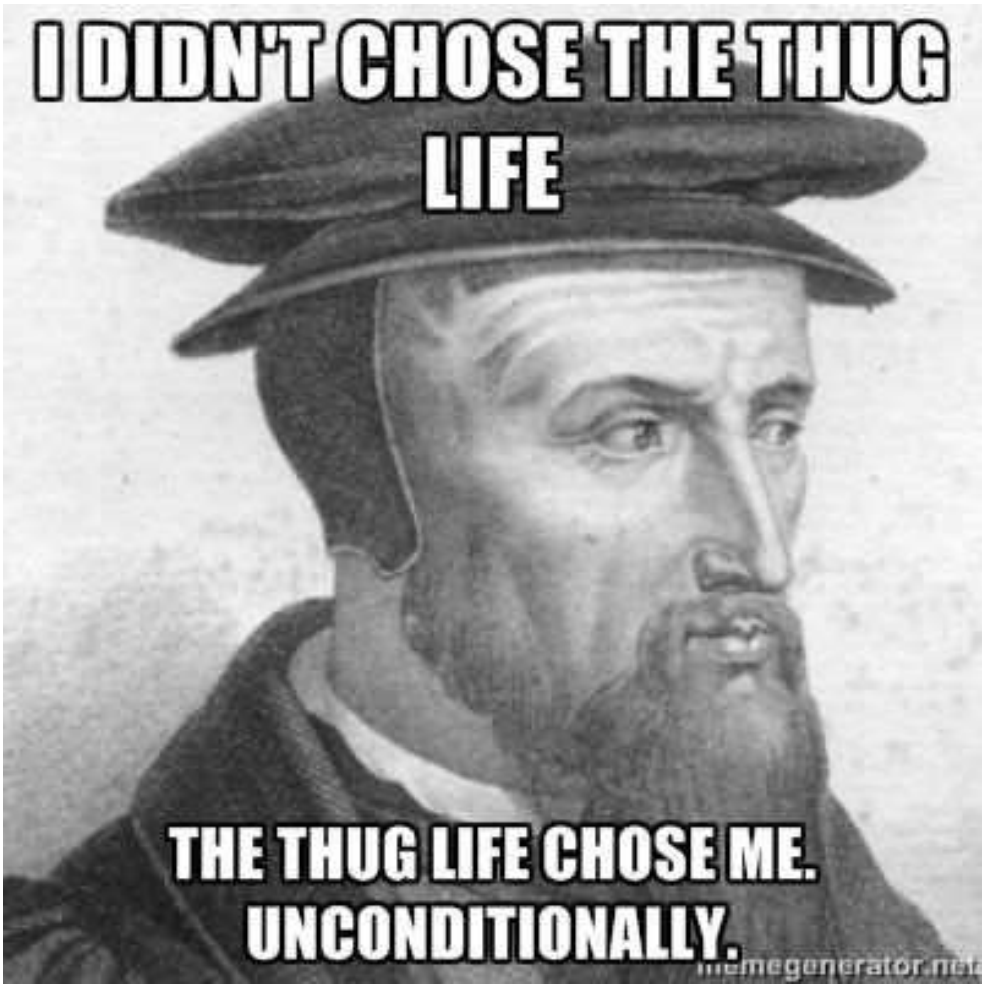
continuing with Christian humor images…

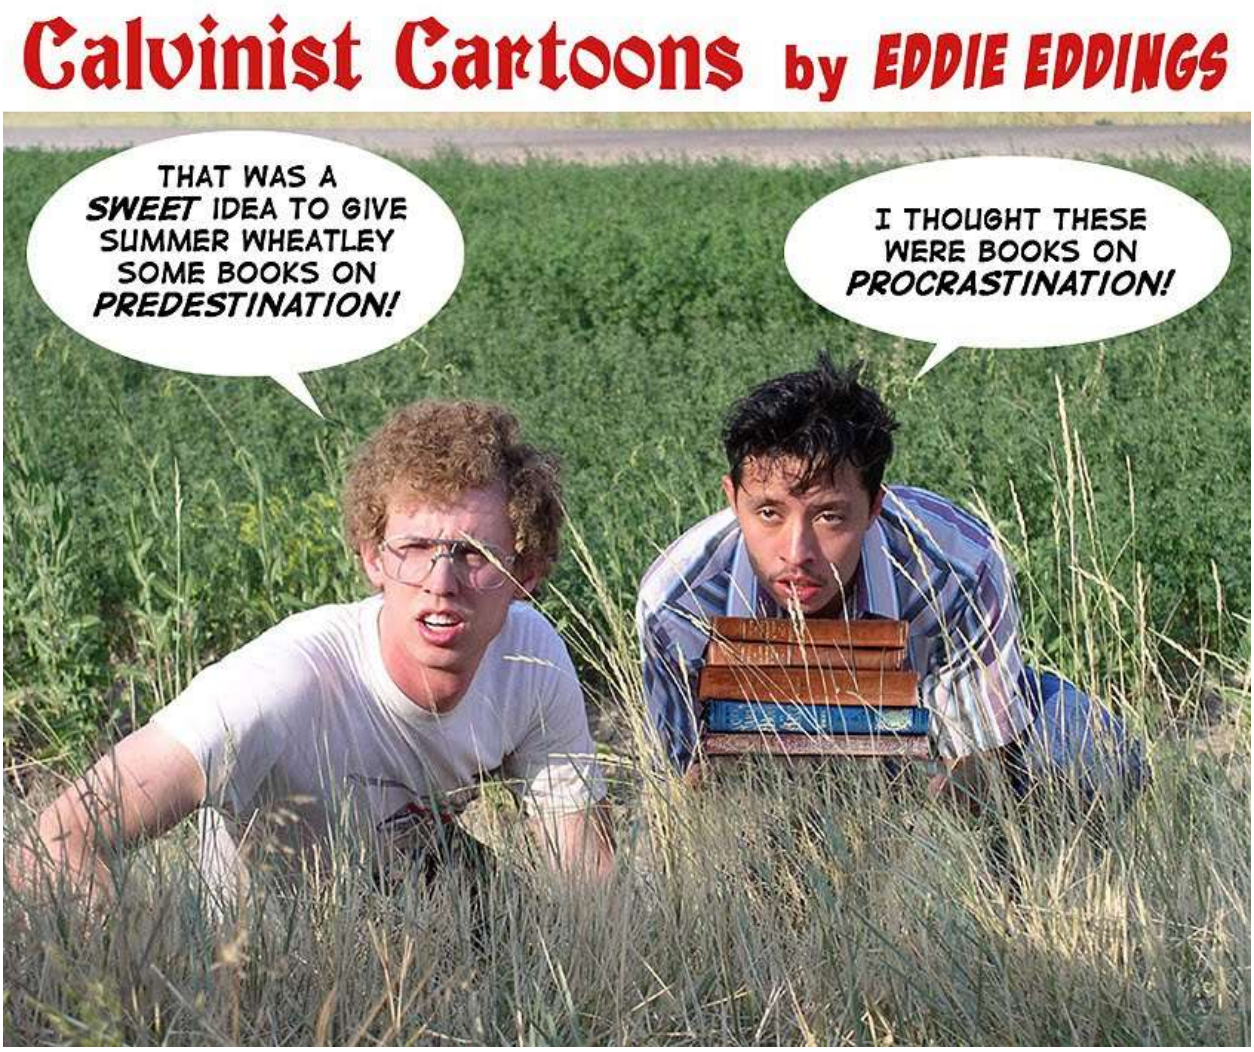


Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

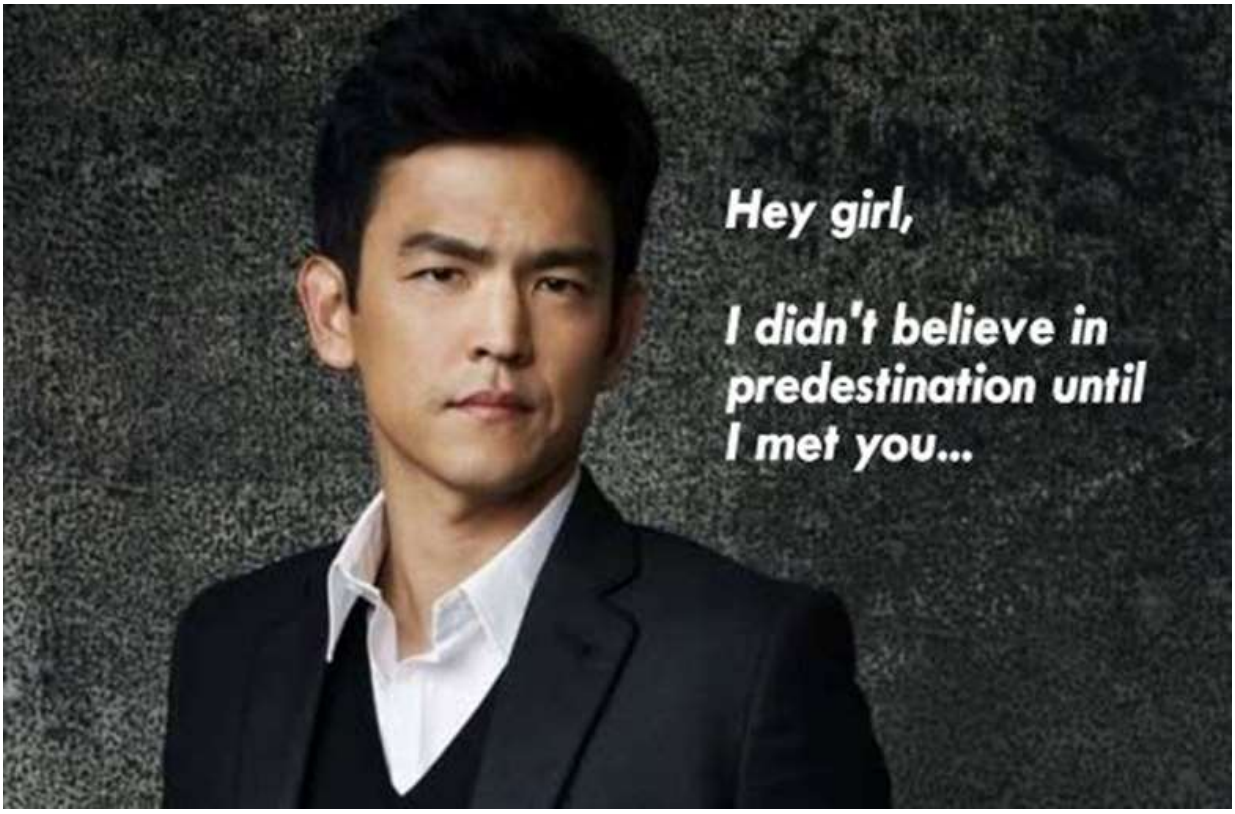
Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Bob never did resolve the predestination versus freewill argument.

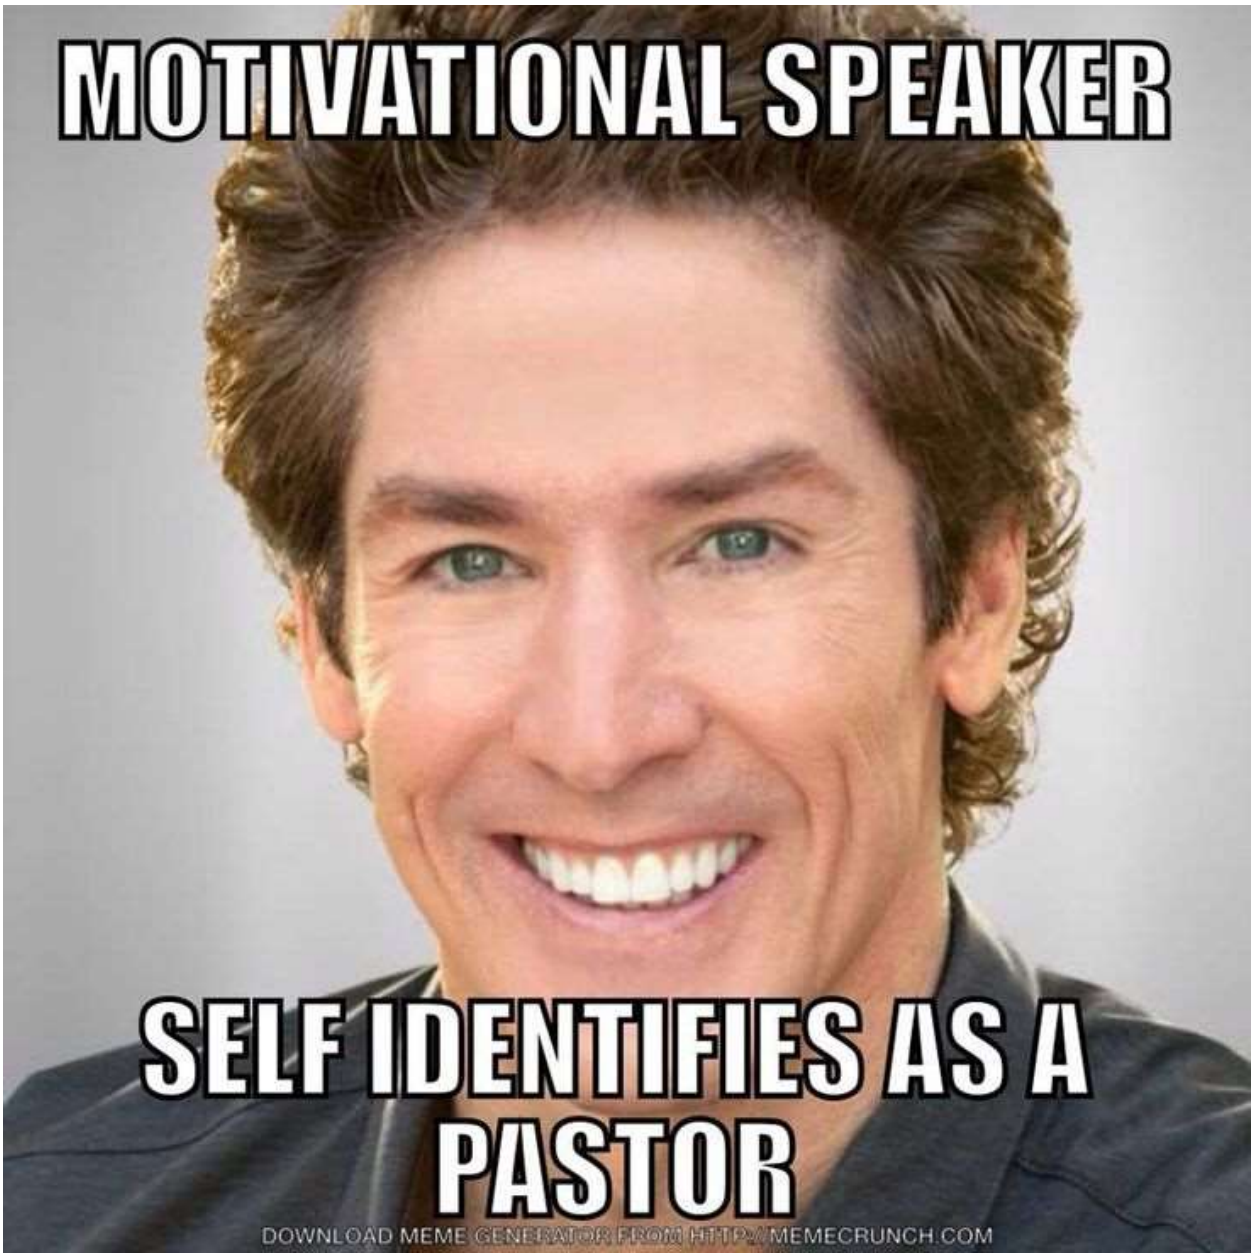
Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Theology Thursday: The Law of 'I' and the Grace of God
http://www.mbird.com/2013/09/theology-thursday-the-law-of-i-and-the-grace-of-god/



"It's easy. The first step is to entirely change who you are."

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

AS LEON UNFURLED THE PIECE OF PAPER HE KNEW HE WOULD NEVER AGAIN PLAY CHARADES WITH MINISTERS

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

"Why isn't my life like a situation comedy? Why don't I have a bunch of friends with nothing better to do but drop by and instigate wacky adventures? Why aren't my conversations peppered with spontaneous witticisms? Why don't my friends demonstrate heartfelt concern for my well being when I have problems? ...I gotta get my life some writers."

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

When Prophets Debate

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

See also: More Christian Humor

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Return to beginning of*: Ephesians Chapter 1: Predestination

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Ephesians 1:3-14 – Spiritual Blessings from Eternity to Eternity (Doxology)

http://www.pericope.org/buls-notes/ephesians/ephesians_1_3_14.htm

Excerpt:

…Ephesians 1:3-14 is the "classical location"on the doctrine of election. Other New Testament passage on this subject are found in Romans 8, 2 Thessalonians 2 and 1 Peter 1.

Ephesians 1:3-14 is really a doxology. This passage begins with the word "Praise be" which means "blessed be." "Praise God for the fact that ..." etc. "To the praise" occurs three times in this text, in verse 6 and 12 and 14. Furthermore, this doxology is Trinitarian. In verse 3 Paul mentions the Father. In verses 3-14 Jesus Christ is mentioned or referred to 14 times! The person ad work of Christ is central to election. The Holy Spirit is plainly refereed to in verse 13.

There is nothing about God's judgment, justice or wrath in this text. It is purest Gospel. Note the following nouns in this text: blessing, 1; love, 1; adoption, 5; good pleasure, 5 and 9; God's will, 5 and 11; God's glory, 6 ,12, 14; grace, 6; redemption, 7 and 14; blood, 7; forgiveness, 7; riches of grace, 7; mystery of His will, 9; purpose, 11; counsel of His will, 11; the Word of truth, 13; the Gospel of our salvation, 13; the promised Holy Spirit, 13; advance payment, 14; inheritance, 14; permanently His, 14; praise, 6, 12, 14. We are overwhelmed.

> Ephesians 1:3 Praise be to the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who has blessed us in the heavenly realms with every spiritual blessing in Christ.
>
> Ephesians 1:4 For he chose us in him before the creation of the world to be holy and blameless in his sight. In love
>
> Ephesians 1:5 he predestined us to be adopted as his sons through Jesus Christ, in accordance with his pleasure and will --
>
> Ephesians 1:6 to the praise of his glorious grace, which he has freely given us in the One he loves.

Paul praises the Father for what He has done for us in Christ: He has blessed us with every spiritual, heavenly blessing. This happened because the Father chose us in Christ before creation. This resulted in our being holy and blameless before God in time. Through Christ, the Father foreordained us to become His children. What prompted the Father to do this? The good pleasure of His saving will. His glorious grace which He showered on us in His beloved Son is to be praised.

The first doxology is found in verse 6. Have you become a Christian? Then rest assured that you are one of God's elect children. Everything depends on your attitude toward Christ Jesus. You did not choose Him. He chose you and ordained you to eternal life. Election is nothing but the true understanding of the grace of God in Christ.

> Ephesians 1:7 In him we have redemption through his blood, the forgiveness of sins, in accordance with the riches of God's grace

Verses 7 to 10 form a unit.

What do we have in Christ? The redemption through His blood, the forgiveness of sins. Here "redemption" refers to the atonement which Christ wrought for all men. It has a different meaning in verse 14.

Note that "redemption" and "forgiveness" stand in apposition to each other. One explains the other. It is the same as objective justification in Romans 5 or objective reconciliation in 2 Corinthians 5.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

What prompted the forgiveness of sins? The wealth of God's grace. However, note that the punctuation is interesting here. The Greek Nestle text is followed by NIV: ". . . in accordance with the riches of God's grace (and the thought continues in the next verse) that he lavished . . ." TEV disposes of the difficulty by making this an exclamation: "How great is the grace of God!"

Ephesians 1:8 that he lavished on us with all wisdom and understanding.

"Which He caused to abound toward us." The richest attribute of God is His unmerited kindness, His "grace." No wonder that many combine verses 7 and 8. The goal of God's kindness is us.

"With all wisdom and prudence." Does this speak of how God caused grace to abound toward us? Thus TEV, JB, NASB. Or does it mean something which God gave to us along with His grace? Thus AAT: "He poured out the riches of His grace on us, giving us every kind of wisdom and understanding." If the phrase modifies the verb then it shows how God begifted us. If it means "along with" it shows what God gave us. Along with AAT, Stoeckhardt, Kretzmann and Lenski, we prefer the "along with" idea.

Kretzmann: And the wisdom and discernment given to us by God make us ready and perfect for a holy blameless conduct in love.

Lenski: That Paul refers to 'wisdom' and 'intelligence' bestowed on us need not be questioned, especially in view of the parallel 'in all wisdom and spiritual understanding' in Colossians 1:9.

Stoeckhardt: The second blessing is that which is called 'in all wisdom and prudence' . . . . The Christians are to think upon and to seek to understand the Lord's exact will and not to be foolish and irrational. Colossians 1:9ff; Philippians 1:9ff; Luke 1:17. The words describe the mind of the righteous in contrast to the disobedience of the ungodly.

We can see this wisdom and prudence, more or less, in the life of God's children.

Ephesians 1:9 And he made known to us the mystery of his will according to his good pleasure, which he purposed in Christ,

"By making known" denotes manner. "The mystery of His will" is the Gospel. It is called a mystery because it has come only by revelation. The unbeliever in no way understand the Gospel. It is foolishness to him, 1 Corinthians 1:18. But to the believer it is the power of God.

In verses 5, 9 and 11 we have "His will." In all cases this is God's saving will, the Gospel. Paul calls it "God's will" because it proceeds only from Him. No synergism here.

AAT: "It was His kindly purpose in Christ to manage everything" etc. His good pleasure which He purposed in Christ Jesus caused Him to do what follows in verse 10.

The point is that God was moved by no outside influence to do what He did. Our salvation from eternity to eternity is safe in Christ Jesus. No one can disturb it. No one can take it from us. John 10:28.

Ephesians 1:10 to be put into effect when the times will have reached their fulfillment -- to bring all things in heaven and on earth together under one head, even Christ.

This verse begins with a purpose clause: "For the purpose of administering the fullness of the ages." We read: "In keeping with His good pleasure which He purposed in Christ for the purpose of administering the fullness of the ages." The phrase "the fullness of the ages" means the same as "the fullness of time" in Galatians 4:4. That is the New Testament era.

In His good pleasure the Father has given the administration of the New Testament era to His Son. Christ governs the entire New Testament era. Why? To bring all things to a unity in Christ.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

"All things" are qualified by two phrases: "the things in the heavens and the things on the earth." We agree with Bengel, Stoeckhardt and Kretzmann that this means the Una Sancta, the Holy Christian Church, made up of those who are still living and those who have passed on to their eternal reward. Lenski and others object to this. They say that this passage speaks of Christ in the Kingdom of power, the same as is indicated in Matthew 28:18, Philippians 2:1-10, and Ephesians 1:22.

But Stoeckhardt says that here Paul is introducing the great Una Sancta doctrine, made so clear in chapters 2 and 3, the one Christian Church, made up of Christian Jews and Gentiles. Stoeckhardt objects to Lenski's explanation saying that not all creation will be united in Christ.

> Ephesians 1:11 In him we were also chosen, having been predestined according to the plan of him who works out everything in conformity with the purpose of his will,

The RSV, TEV, NIV and AAT follow the Greek Nestle text and make a subparagraph here. Note the similarity between verses 4-6 and 11-12.

But there are two differences: in verse 11 we are told that we were elected "in keeping with the purpose of the one who is active in all things in keeping with the plan of His saving will." Secondly, here Paul introduces the Jews in verse 12 which goes with verse 11. What is Paul saying here? The history of the Christian Church from Pentecost to the very end is planned down to the very individual who was chosen already in eternity.

> Ephesians 1:12 in order that we, who were the first to hope in Christ, might be for the praise of his glory.

Another purpose clause. "So that we should be to the praise of his glory." That means "so that we should praise His glory."

Here specifically Paul is talking about "grace," the attribute in God which moved Him to send His Son to redeem all men, and the grace which also chose to everlasting life those whom He caused to come to faith in time.

Paul speaks of those Jews who were saved by the promises before Christ came.

> Ephesians 1:13 And you also were included in Christ when you heard the word of truth, the gospel of your salvation. Having believed, you were marked in him with a seal, the promised Holy Spirit,

In verse 12 Paul spoke of "we," the Jews. In this verse he speaks of "you," the Gentiles.

When they heard the Gospel they were sealed in Christ by means of the promised Holy Spirit. All that goes before, the election by grace from eternity, is brought to a focus here. Sealing means that God claimed them permanently as His very own. They are eternally secure.

> Ephesians 1:14 who is a deposit guaranteeing our inheritance until the redemption of those who are God's possession -- to the praise of his glory.

In verse 12 it was "we." The in 13 we had "you." Now it is "us," both Jews and Gentiles.

The first part of the verse modifies "the Holy Spirit." "Deposit" means a payment in advance. In Romans 8:23 He is called "the first fruit of the Spirit."

Our inheritance is, of course, everlasting life. In verse 5 we were made aware of our election to adoption of sons, becoming His children. Now we have the inheritance in verse 14.

In verse 7, "redemption" denotes the atonement of Jesus. Here it denotes the deliverance from all evil at the time of death.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

God sealed us in Christ by the promised Holy Spirit for the purpose of delivering that which God possesses, His child.

God sealed us to the praise of His glory. His glory very likely includes all the attributes and nouns mentioned throughout this text and summarized at the beginning of these Notes.

The Formula of Concord, S.D., Art. XI, Election, quotes our text twice:

It is beyond all doubt that the true understanding or the right use of the teaching of God's eternal foreknowledge will in no way cause or support either impenitence or despair. So, too, Scripture present this doctrine in no other way than to direct us thereby to the Word, Ephesians 1:13-14, to admonish us to repent, to urge us to godliness, Ephesians 1:15ff, to strengthen our faith and to assure us of our salvation, Ephesians 1:9,13,14. (Tappert 618.12)

Neither should we permit ourselves to try to explore the secret and hidden abyss of divine foreknowledge. Instead we must heed the revealed will of God. For he has revealed and 'made known to us the mystery of his will' and has brought it forth through Christ as that it should be preached, Ephesians 1:9-10. (Tappert 620.26)

In this lengthy passage about what my Father has done for me from eternity to eternity, the idea of faith does not appear until the second last verse. And here is clearly means "by believing" not "because of believing." The doctrine of a person's election totally eliminates any and all synergism, also that of the pseudo-Lutherans who claim that election is "in view of a future faith."

Not until we experience everlasting life will we fully realize the wonders of this passage. No wonder that we frequently find all saints, angels, archangels, Apostles and Prophets falling on their knees in the Book of Revelation singing eternal praises and "Hallelujahs" to the Lamb for sinners slain!

See also*: Doxology in the NT

Return to*: Ephesians Highlights – Chapter 1 (Menu)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

[Go to Index]

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

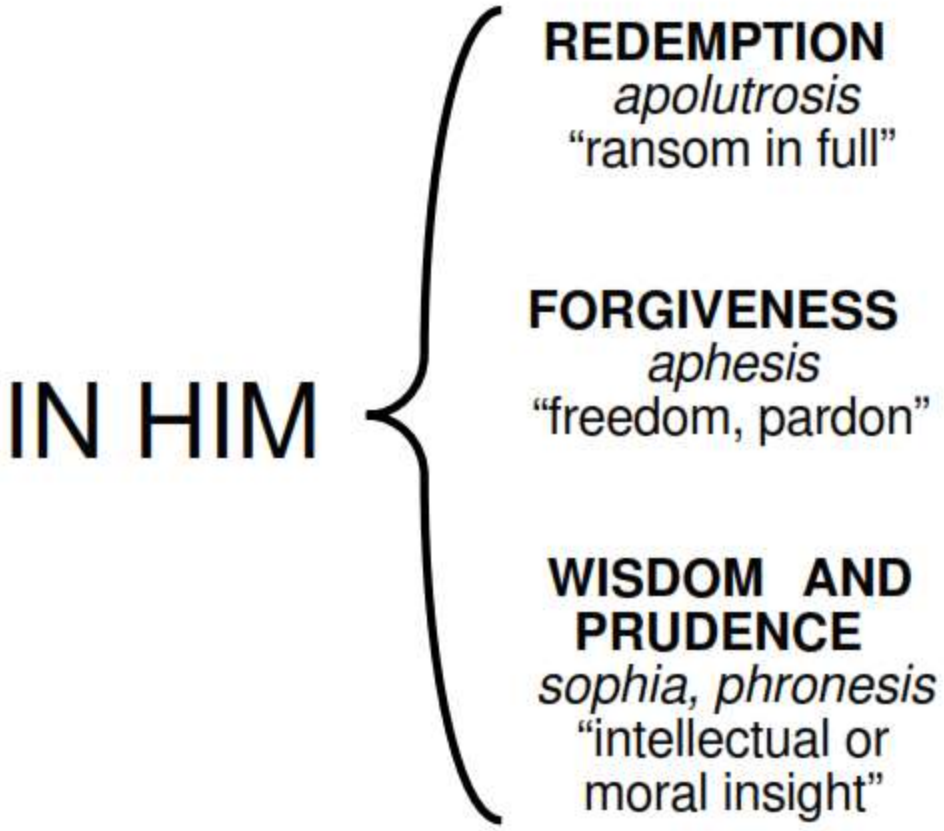
[Go to Top - TOC]

Ephesians 1:7

Ephesians 1:1-14 Summary of the Blessings 'in Him'



https://vimeo.com/202231068 [Video]

In this short video, Prof. N.T. Wright explains the beauty and wonder of how the benefits listed in Eph 1:1-14 are fulfilled in the Messiah, King Jesus.

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Blessings in Christ
(Eph. 1:7-9)

Return to: Ephesians Highlights – Chapter 1 (Menu)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Redemption (Ephesians 1:7)

"Redemption" (Gr. apolytrosin) means release from slavery (cf. v. 14; 4:30; Luke 21:28; Rom. 3:24; 8:23; 1 Cor. 1:30; Col. 1:14; Heb. 9:15; 11:35). It involves buying back and setting free by paying a ransom price. Jesus Christ has redeemed us from sin (Heb. 9:15), namely, set us free from slavery to it (cf. Rom. 6). The blood, representative of the life, of the perfect Sacrifice, had to flow out of Him for this to happen (Rom. 3:24-25; cf. Heb. 9:22). (See also: Romans: Redemption)

New Testament Words for Redemption[63]
Greek Words	English Meanings	References
agorazo (verb)	To buy, to purchase in the market (or slave market)	1 Cor. 6:20; 7:23; 2 Pet. 2:1; Rev. 5:9; 14:3-4
exagorazo (verb)	To buy out, to purchase out of the market (or slave market)	Gal. 3:13; 4:5; Eph. 5:16; Col. 4:5
lytron (noun)	Ransom, price of release	Matt. 20:28; Mark 10:45
lytroomai (verb)	To ransom, to free by paying a ransom price	Luke 24:21; Titus 2:14; 1 Pet. 1:18
lytrosis (noun)	Act of freeing by paying a ransom price	Luke 1:68; 2:38; Heb. 9:12
apolytrosis (noun)	A buying back, a setting free by paying a ransom price	Luke 21:28; Rom. 3:24; 8:23; 1 Cor. 1:30; Eph. 1:7, 14; 4:30; Col. 1:14; Heb. 9:15; 11:35

The immediate result of our liberation from sin's slavery is that God has forgiven our sins (Gr. paraptoma, false steps, transgressions).

> "Thus, the believer is accepted eternally into the family of the redeemed; yet, in that family relationship he will, time and again, need to be forgiven—in the sense of being restored, not into the family, but into the fellowship of the Father and the Son (1 John 1:9)."[64]

Jesus Christ's death accomplished our redemption. This was the extent to which God was willing to go for us. God's grace was that great. The gift of Jesus Christ did not exhaust the supply of God's grace, however (cf. Phil. 4:19). Rather, that gift is an evidence of the extent of God's favor to us (cf. v. 5).

> "That our redemption cost so great a price, the blood of Christ, is the supreme evidence of the riches of the Divine grace. And the measure of what God does for us is nothing less than the limitless wealth of His loving favour."[65]

Ref: http://www.soniclight.com/constable/notes/htm/NT/Ephesians/Ephesians.htm Dr.Constable Notes on Ephesians

Return to*: Ephesians Highlights – Chapter 1 (Menu)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Ephesians 1:7-13a – Salvation in the Son [Recommended]

https://redeeminggod.com/sermons/ephesians/ephesians_1_7-13a/

Excerpt:

America is a nation striving after riches. We all have a definition of what it means to be rich, and most of us have ideas on how to get there. Whether these ideas work or not is another matter. But if you are a Christian, then I would like to be the first to congratulate you on winning the Spiritual lottery! You are unbelievably rich. You have more wealth than you could ever know what to do with.

Where did all of these riches come from? It came from a relative of yours who has a monopoly on almost everything. And He thinks you are the greatest relative He has, and has just made you His heir! You say, "How rich is He?" He owns all the cattle on a thousand hills (Ps 50:10). Through some wise investment decisions, and very wise hiring of certain personnel, maybe one quarter to one-third of the world's population works for Him. Even those that don't work for Him are working for Him whether they realize it or not. He is so rich, anything He wants is His. And guess what, He has just made it known that it is all yours!

This comes as a little bit of surprise to you, doesn't it? Some of you might not have known this. You are like the little old woman who lived in a shack during the days of that great English preacher Charles Spurgeon. He visited her in her shack one day, and noticed a piece of paper nailed to the wall. When he asked her about it, she said that years before, she had cared for an old gentleman, and just before he had died, he had written a little note of appreciation to her followed by his signature. Spurgeon convinced the little old lady to let him borrow the paper, and he took it down to the bank, and upon reading it they exclaimed "We've been wondering to whom the old gentleman left all of his money!" She apparently couldn't read, so Spurgeon helped her get her fortune.

That lady was a wealthy woman, but she didn't know it because didn't understand the words on that little piece of paper. Many Christians are similar. They are wealthy, but they just don't know it because either they have never read or don't understand the piece of paper that tells just how rich they really are.

So if that is you, I'm going to be like Spurgeon and point it out to you. We are working our way through the book of Ephesians, and this little letter is about the riches that are ours in Christ. This is the little piece of paper hanging on your wall, or stuffed in your bookshelf at home that tells you how rich you really are, and most of us have never even bothered to read it.

Now before we go too far here, you need to understand that these are spiritual riches. Some of you may have been getting excited when I talked about wealth, and you imagined that new BMW that you wanted to buy. The riches we have in Christ are not those kind of riches … they are better. The BMW will get scratched and dented, will rust and eventually stop running. The riches that we have in Christ are eternal and will not fade away or be stolen (Matt 6:19-21). The riches Christians have in Christ are like gold and jewels that fill a warehouse in Heaven, and some of them are for our use right now.

The gem we are going to look at today is found in Ephesians 1:7-13 and it is Salvation through Jesus Christ. Turn there if you will. Ephesians 1:7-13. Remember, if you will, that in the Greek, Ephesians 1:3-14 are all one sentence, and reveal three blessings from three sources.

The first blessing is Security from the Father. We saw that the truths of election and predestination guarantee our future holiness and inheritance as His children. He has promised that we will be holy and that we will be heirs. In Ephesians 1:7-13, we learn of the second possession. It is Salvation from the Son.

Now the word "salvation" is not mentioned until Ephesians 1:13, but everything leading up to verse 13 explains, defines, and is encompassed by the one word "salvation." And you will notice as we go through the verses leading up to Ephesians 1:13, that the word "salvation" does not refer to going to heaven when we die. The word "salvation" in the Bible never refers to escaping hell so that we can go to heaven when we die. This is what many Christians mean when they use the word, but this is not the way the Bible uses the word. (See: Paul's references to Hell in the Bible)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The word "salvation" means "deliverance" and the context tells you what kind of deliverance is in view. So as we work our way up to seeing the salvation we have in Jesus Christ, we need to look at the various descriptions Paul includes to talk about this salvation we have in Jesus Christ.

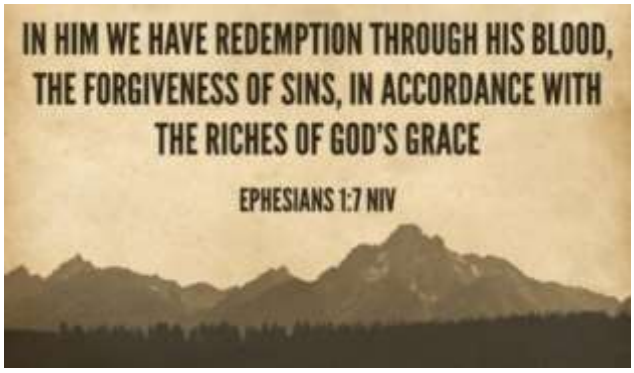
Ephesians 1:7. In Him we have redemption through His blood, the forgiveness of sins, in accordance with the riches of God's grace 8 that He lavished on us with all wisdom and understanding.

Again, Paul begins with that favorite term of his, "in Him." This blessing of salvation is something that we have in Christ alone. If you look through this long opening sentence of Paul, you see that he uses this phrase "in Him" or "in Christ" quite a few times. All the riches and blessings we have as Christians, we only have because we are in Christ.

And what is it that we have in Christ? Paul provides a long list.

First, we have redemption through His blood.

Redemption is the word used for what God is doing here. Remember last week how I told you that when God adopts us as His sons, He is taking his own children, and adopting them as heirs? Redemption is a similar idea. God is taking something that was already His, and is buying it so that it is twice His. In the ancient world, when a soldier was captured in battle, his country could buy him back from the enemy. Or, when a family was in a desperate financial situation, sometimes they would sell one of their family members into slavery, and then—hopefully—when they got enough money, they would buy back their family member (Lev 25:39-55).



We can do the same thing today with pawnshops, except we do it with possessions rather than family members. If you need money, you can go down to the pawn shop and they will give you money for your watch or a ring, and you then have a certain amount of time to go back and redeem your item. If you do not, then they keep it and can sell it for a profit.

So we see here that Jesus redeemed us, or bought us back, through His blood. We must understand that when Paul writes about Jesus redeeming us through His blood, we don't think that Jesus was paying off God or Satan with His blood. It is not as though there was a debt of sin to God or to Satan which could only be paid with the blood of Jesus. Lots of Christians teach this, but it is not a biblical idea.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The redemption that Jesus accomplished through His blood was a rescue or deliverance of humanity from humanity. We were enslaved to an endless cycle of sacred violence and the spilling of blood in God's name, and Jesus, by dying as He did, exposed the myth of redemptive violence and the lies of sacred violence for what they were so that we can be redeemed or rescued from this endless cycle of violence and bloodshed once and for all. I explain this idea further in my Gospel Dictionary course.

This idea is further seen by what Paul says next in Ephesians 1:7.

Second, we have the forgiveness of sins.

Once again, there is so much confusion in Christian circles about forgiveness. But as I have pointed out in my Gospel Dictionary course, in my book The Atonement of God, and in numerous other places, there are two main types of forgiveness sin the Bible. One of these, charizomai forgiveness, is free and unconditional. God extends this forgiveness to all people in all the world for all their sins no matter what. It has been freely extended from the beginning of time simply because God is a loving and forgiving God. Jesus did not have to die to earn this forgiveness. God does not demand blood sacrifice to offer this forgiveness. It is free and unconditional, based solely on the grace of God.

The second type of forgiveness is aphesis forgiveness. But it is not really what we think of when we think of forgiveness. It is closer to the idea of release, or liberation. It is the type of release or liberation we get when we gain freedom from the damaging and destructive power of sin in our lives. This type of forgiveness does have conditions. We must confess and repent and forgive others in order to experience this kind of forgiveness in our lives.

Guess which type of forgiveness is in view here. The context could almost go either way. The idea of the shedding of blood hints that aphesis forgiveness is in view, since the death of Jesus is one way we learn about how to gain release from our sins. But on the other hand, the last part of Ephesians 1:7 talks about the grace of God, and so we could think that charizomai forgiveness is in view. So which is it?

The answer is that Paul is referring to aphesis forgiveness here. And when the rest of the context is considered, this really does make the most sense. Paul is talking about how we can experience the riches and blessings of being in the family of God, and how God seeks to unify us into one family, and how we can live for the praise of His glory. While all of these things are riches of God's grace, they also are conditional upon our living in light of them. Of understanding what we have in Christ and how to access and use these blessings. So this makes sense that aphesis forgiveness is in view, because we must know how this form of forgiveness works and how to make use of it in our lives.

Paul moves on from here to talk about the riches of His grace which He made to abound toward us in all wisdom and prudence.

All of these gifts and blessings which God provided for us are due to His grace, His wisdom, and His prudence (or insight and understanding). God knows what we need to live our lives to the fullest and to live as members of His family, and He has made sure to provide us with everything we need for life and Godliness. This is really what Ephesians is all about.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

But Paul is not done. Ephesians 1:9-10 reveals even more!

Ephesians 1:9-10. And he made known to us the mystery of His will according to His good pleasure, which He purposed in Christ, to be put into effect when the times will have reached their fulfillment—to bring all things in heaven and on earth together under one head, even Christ.

Have you ever known a secret and just wanted to tell it to someone? It's always on the tip of your tongue. You have to watch your every word to make sure it doesn't slip out?

You know what is worse though? When you know that someone else has a secret, and you don't know what it is. The fact that they know something you don't just eats at your mind. You wonder what it could be, and who it could be about, and how it affects you, and why they didn't tell you.

Paul here in Ephesians 1:9 says that for many years, God had a secret, which He has just now made known to the world. Now Paul calls it a mystery. This does not mean it was hard to understand, but simply that it was something previously unknown. There were clues and hints about this mystery throughout the Old Testament, but now God has made it plain as day and wants the whole world to know.

Paul says this was a mystery of God's will, according to his good pleasure and that it primarily involved Christ, and that the accomplishment of this mystery of God's will would not be completed until the end of time.

Now the verse says, when the times have reached their fulfillment, but what the Greek really says, is "when the dispensations of the fullness of times are completed." Some translations might say "administrations," but the best probably is dispensations. Dispensations are ordered stages of God's work in the world. In our house, we have a certain way we like to do things, and a certain place everything goes. In your house, I'm sure it is quite different. God, in history, has acted similarly. In different periods of time, he has ordered things differently to accomplish his purposes best in that era. This, in a nutshell, is what a dispensation is.

Some of you have probably heard of Dispensationalism. Though that theological system gets its name from this verse, don't think that just because it uses a biblical term, it is therefore completely biblical. This is not to criticize it, for I suppose I am closer to Dispensationalism than the alternative systems, but I have no interest in getting bogged down in that discussion today. So let's move on.

What then is this mystery that God will fulfill in the last dispensation? It is found in the end of Ephesians 1:10: to bring all things in heaven and on earth together under one head, even Christ. This means that however bad things might seem now, just wait, for eventually, Jesus Christ will rule over it all.

Now again, Paul is not teaching that everyone will become a Christian here—or that Satan and his demons will be united to Christ. No, this is unbiblical. This verse is saying that Christ will rule over all—will have dominion over all. If you want to see how this works out, read the book of Revelation.

Ephesians 1:11-12 then, summarize the blessings of God in Christ that we have so far been given. Verse 11 has one of those huge errors in translation that the NIV sometimes has. It baffles me why the translators took this liberty here, but they did, and so I want to correct it for you today (Author's Note: I have since switched to the NKJV). The NAS and the KJV have it right.

Remember in Ephesians 1:5-6, it says that God's predestination is to the adoption as sons, which we saw from history and from Scripture means that He has promised to make us His heirs? He has predestined to give us His inheritance.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Ephesians 1:11 repeats this thought. If you have the NIV, look in the first phrase of Ephesians 1:11. See that word "chosen"? Up in Ephesians 1:4, the word "chosen" in the original Greek, is eklegō, and it really does mean "chosen."

Here in Ephesians 1:11, the word is klēroō, and it means to make someone an heir; to be made an heir, or to be given an inheritance. So verse 11 does not say, "In him we were also chosen," but "In him we were made heirs." In fact, the NIV recognizes this with a little footnote, and since they recognize this, I don't know why they didn't just make it say what it means. A word with the same root is translated correctly in Ephesians 1:14, "the Holy Spirit is a deposit guaranteeing our inheritance" so I am baffled as to why they translated it here as chosen.

So having said that, let us read Ephesians 1:11 as it should be read:

Ephesians 1:11. In him we were also [made heirs], having been predestined according to the plan of him who works out everything in conformity with the purpose of his will,

Again, Paul is just reiterating the fact that our predestination was not to eternal life, but to the adoption as sons, the redemption of our bodies, the giving of an inheritance to His children. The inheritance, the riches, the blessings, is what Paul is describing in these first three chapters of Ephesians.

And it was according to the plan of God, which according to verse 9 was previously a mystery, and this plan will be perfectly worked out according to purpose of God's will. There are no flaws in this plan. He has the power and the wisdom and the knowledge to carry it out. When you get a promise from God, it is worth just as much as the fulfillment.

I want to comment briefly on that phrase "works out everything." Some have taken this verse to mean that God controls and causes everything. For example, Paul Helm, a wonderful Christian man, but a little off in his theology, says that "Moral evil … was not unexpected by God; rather, it was ordained by him."

Is that what this verse teaches? That God causes everything? Even evil? This is not the God of Scripture that I know. So what is this verse teaching? I think it is similar to Romans 8:28. God does not cause all things—but He does work in all things—even evil—so that good may result and His purposes may be accomplished. God works in everything for the praise of His glory.

And that is the truth we see in Ephesians 1:12. This verse gives the ultimate reason why God has done all of this for us in Christ.

Ephesians 1:12. in order that we, who were the first to hope in Christ, might be for the praise of his glory.

The first to hope in Christ were simply Paul and the first believers in Ephesus. But this still applies to us as well. It says that all of this that is done is for God's glory. It is not for our glory, or our praise, but for the praise of God's glory alone. The truth of these verses then is that as Christians, we have incredible riches in Christ. We are spiritual multi-billionaires.

Finally, the first part of Ephesians 1:13 summarizes all of the riches we have in Jesus Christ by including them as elements within the word of truth, the gospel of your salvation.

Ephesians 1:13a. And you also were included in Christ when you heard the word of truth, the gospel of your salvation.

The word of truth and the gospel of your salvation are different terms for the same message. This message is simply the good news of salvation.

Understanding the word salvation is going to be very important as we continue to work our way through Ephesians, especially when we get to Ephesians 2:8-9. So let us pause briefly here in verse 13 to point out once again that the word salvation does not refer to going to heaven when you die. Instead, the word means “deliverance” and the context reveals what we are delivered from.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

And Paul, by repeating the words and ideas in verses 12-13 that he also used back in verses 6-7, wants us to see the connection between the ideas. In Ephesians 1:6-7, he wrote about the praise of God’s glory in Jesus Christ the beloved, and then goes on to describe the redemption in His blood and the forgiveness, or release, from sins. So when we see in Ephesians 1:12-13 that Paul repeats himself by talking about the praise of God’s glory in Jesus Christ, we expect to see some similar terminology. And we do. But instead of writing about redemption and forgiveness, Paul uses the word salvation. These ideas are repeated again in verse 14 when Paul once again refers to redemption and inheritance, and so all these themes are wrapped up together.

The point is that here in Ephesians 1:13, the word salvation does not refer to escaping hell and going to heaven when we die. It does not refer to receiving eternal life. Instead, it refers to being liberated from the devastating and destructive consequences of sin in our lives so that we can live now, in this life, the way God wants us to live. How? By recognizing the vast storehouse of riches that we have in Jesus Christ, and then learning to live in light of those now. By starting to draw on our inheritance now. This is what the word salvation means in Ephesians. It is not talking about where we go when we die, but rather, how our life is to be lived now in light of the riches we have in Jesus Christ. This is also how Paul refers to salvation in Ephesians 2, which we will discuss further when we get there.

The concept of salvation in Paul’s writings is very close to the concept of the Kingdom of God in the teaching of Jesus. Just as the Kingdom of God does not refer to going to heaven when we die, and just as the Kingdom of God refers to God’s rule and reign in our lives right now, so also, salvation does not refer to going to heaven when we die, but refers to the redemption and release from our captivity to sin so that we can live lives of freedom, grace, glory, and joy within God’s family here in this life and for all eternity.

So we have seen two great riches in Ephesians 1. We have seen security from the Father in Ephesians 1:4-6, and now salvation from the Son in Ephesians 1:7-13. This salvation from the Son is redemption from captivity and release from the damaging and destructive consequences of sin in our lives. The great riches we have in Jesus not only includes the infinitely valuable free gift of eternal life, but also includes the resources to break free from patterns of sin and to live in our lives as God wants, calls, and desires us to live. In this way, we can rule and reign with Jesus in the Kingdom of God on this earth and for all eternity.

More sermons on Ephesians
https://redeeminggod.com/sermons/ephesians/

Return to*: Ephesians Highlights – Chapter 1 (Menu)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Exegesis of Ephesians 1:1-14 – v.7: Redemption and Forgiveness of Sins

http://nagasawafamily.org/paul_ephesians.1.03-14.exegesis.pdf [PDF]

Excerpt:

Redemption: Ephesians 1:7

Jewish Context	Greco-Roman Context
When the Jews spoke of 'redemption,' they primarily thought of the Exodus, when God delivered them by the blood of the Passover lamb. The entire nation of Israel was in the grip of their tyrannical slavemasters in Egypt. In their sweat and sorrow they cried out for God to redeem them. God then moved Israel from one place to another, from being slaves in Egypt, to being in the promised land, 'by the blood of the Passover lamb.' Every Passover celebration and sacrifice since then reminded them that redemption occurred by the shedding of blood. Redemption does not necessary mean 'payment of a debt.' It certainly can involve a payment, as shown by Israel's redemption-legislation. But it seems to be possible to speak of redemption as a deliverance or transfer independently of a payment, as when Paul speaks of the future redemption of our physical bodies (Rom.8:23, Eph.1:13) without the notion of a payment being attached to that. It means being moved from one realm or dominion to another. The concept of switching authorities is central to the Jewish notion of 'redemption.' Isaiah took the first Exodus as the model for which the second Exodus would be patterned. So Isaiah looks ahead to God's deliverance of Israel out of exile, especially in Isaiah 40 – 55. In particular, Isaiah saw God making a new way through the wilderness for Israel (Isa.40:3 – 6), and God's deliverance of Israel as being through water and fire (Isa.43:1 – 2ff.; 44:27). God describes Himself as Israel's 'Savior' (Isa.43:3, 11) and 'Redeemer' (Isa.41:14; 44:6, 22, 23, 24; 47:4) in contrast to powerless idols, who commands Cyrus to release Israel (Isa.44:28ff.), just as He did Pharaoh of old. It is very notable that God's wrath is not averted from falling on Israel. In fact, God says that Jerusalem has suffered double for her sins (Isa.40:1). Hebrews concurs that every transgression and disobedience already received a just penalty (Heb.2:2). Nevertheless, to sum up, Isaiah still describes the deliverance from exile as a redemption event like a second Exodus.	The word 'redemption' was not associated with Roman adoption practices. 'Redemption' (apolutrosis) referred primarily to the slave trade. Some scholars estimate that there were 60,000,000 slaves in the Roman Empire, about two thirds of the entire Empire. People in Rome sometimes became slaves by being sold into slavery in an auction. When they were bought out of slavery (by a relative, perhaps), they were 'redeemed.' The word meant 'deliverance by the payment of a debt.' It comes from the verb 'lutoun,' which means 'to ransom.'

Application of Redemption Language: Jesus, Paul, and Second Temple Judaism lived in a world that was dominated by questions of when and how God would fulfill His covenant promises. Enslavement by foreign power, including Babylon, Persia, Greece, and then Rome, naturally gave rise to the expectation for God to initiate a new Exodus redemption (e.g. Isa.43:1 – 21) from this new 'Egypt.'

'Redemption' means a deliverance from enemy powers. Just as Mosaic Israel was once under the authority of Pharaoh but was 'redeemed' by God to come under His own authority, so Messianic Israel (and Messianic Gentiles) was under the authority of Satan (not simply Nebuchadnezzar) but was 'redeemed' by Christ to come under his own authority. Paul is thinking of these enemy powers as evidenced by the immediate context in Eph.1:21 – 23 ('rule, authority, power, dominion') and 2:2 (the 'prince of the power of the air'). Paul's point is that God's resurrection power, which raised Jesus and us from the dead, is ours, and, because 'in Christ' we are above the other 'rulers and authorities' of Eph.1:21 – 23 and 2:2, Christ has delivered us from their influence. This framework seems to be why Jesus was called 'the [new Passover] Lamb of God' and why he instituted the Lord's Supper on top of the existing traditional Passover meal. That Paul in Ephesians is referring to the Exodus is further supported by the phrase 'redemption through his blood' (Eph.1:7), a parallel between Jesus and the Exodus Passover lamb.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

'Redemption' as a concept is coordinated with the more fundamental concept of being moved from outside Christ to within him. Elsewhere in Ephesians, Paul is perfectly happy to use words other than 'redemption' to denote this movement. For example, in the second poetic section (2:11 – 22), he says we Gentiles were 'in the flesh' and 'in the world' and strangers to the covenants made to Israel (2:11 – 12). But 'in Christ Jesus' we were brought near (2:13), etc. I think the language shift matches the conceptual shift: When the issue is no longer our transfer from other 'rulers and authorities' but rather our inclusion in the communal and covenantal household of God, 'redemption' is not the appropriate word to use there. Similarly, in the section stressing our personal transformation in Christ and responsibility to not sin (4:17 – 19), Paul's first language is baptismal ('you were taught to lay aside the old self…and put on the new' in 4:20 – 24, just like Rom.6:1 – 11). However, the most precise way to say that God has brought us 'into Christ' from out of the other rulers and authorities, is categorically 'redemption.'

In Galatians and Colossians, Paul also uses the word 'redeem' to describe Christ's authority displacing other authorities. Christ redeemed Jewish Christians from the authority of the Law and its curse (Gal.3:13). Paul portrays the Law of Moses as a type of Pharaoh. Implicitly and by extension, Christ redeemed Gentile Christians from the authorities of the Gentile world, the 'weak and elemental things of the world' (Gal.4:3 – 9). This understanding of Christ's redemptive work for the Gentiles finds more explicit form in Colossians. In Colossians, the twin sister letter to Ephesians, the phrase 'in Christ' is central also, and Paul's first way of entering into the significance of that identification is once again 'redemption, the forgiveness of sins' in Colossians 1:13 – 14. 'Redemption' from one realm ('the domain of darkness') to another ('the kingdom of His beloved Son') is God's decisive act of forming His people; He brings people out from one authority and into Jesus' authority, to be 'in Christ.' 'Redemption' itself is one word out of many others that signals this shift, and Paul uses the particular word 'redemption' precisely when he is also referring, explicitly and implicitly, to other authorities that we were once under.

The Jewish Exodus connotation associated with 'redemption' does not carry the sense of 'payment of debt.' It simply means a powerful act of God to 'move' or 'deliver' a people from a place of slavery to an entirely new place of being under His reign. It is true that in Old Testament usage concerning land, 'redemption' is referred to as requiring a payment. But I believe the payment is incidental to the core meaning of 'redemption,' which can take place without a payment being made in any sense. Note the New Testament usage of 'redemption' does not always involve a payment being made, but simply a transferral or transformation taking place: 'the redemption of God's own possession' (Eph.1:14); 'the redemption of our body' (Rom.8:23). Even in common parlance, we say today, 'That awful situation was redeemed because good came out of it.' No third party is 'paid off' in this redemption; rather, the situation itself is 'moved' or 'transferred' from one state to another. Likewise, Paul says in Colossians 1:13 – 14, 'For he delivered us from the domain of darkness, and transferred us to the kingdom of His beloved Son, in whom we have redemption, the forgiveness of sins.' 'Redemption' for a Christian is being moved by God from being a slave 'in sin' to being a child of God 'in Christ.' Thus for Paul, the death of Jesus does not stand by itself (apart from his resurrection) nor do we regard it from a distance (apart from ourselves). We are intimately joined with Jesus at his death on the cross and raised with him into his new life at his resurrection; this is how we are 'moved' or 'delivered' out of one realm to the other (Rom.6:1 – 11, Col.2:12 – 13; 2:20 – 3:1).

How do we apply this to ourselves today? The Jewish connotation of Exodus is to be prioritized over the Roman one of debt-payment. This subtle difference is significant in ministry. The Roman understanding of 'redemption' as a debt-payment is heard in the common cliché, 'Jesus died for your sins so you didn't have to.' Pastorally, I feel that this is harmful to Asian Americans because debt-payment reinforces guilt: After all, if Jesus takes the punishment meant for you, how does that produce freedom from guilt? In fact, it doesn't – it makes one feel worse, and this has had negative effects. 'Jesus died for your sins so you didn't have to' means that all that changes is God's attitude towards us, that we are fundamentally unchanged, and that we never really experience 'resurrection' for ourselves because supposedly the cross stands fundamentally separate from the resurrection in accomplishing our salvation. Scholars have debated whether this is the right way to understand the death of Jesus; many have decided against it. 'Jesus died and rose for us; we died with Jesus and we rose with him is what Paul actually says in many places (e.g. Rom.6:1 – 11, etc.). That phrase refers to the transformation of a person's identity, the profound reorientation of that person's relationships and ethics, and the experience of being empowered to live life in that way.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

We can list some of the important points that can be pastorally applied to us:

1. 'Redemption' reinforces 'adoption' as changing our family identity. God moves us from one family to His. We are no longer defined by our previous identity, our previous sin, or our previous way of relating. We are defined by being in Jesus!

2. 'Redemption' means being delivered out from under the authority of sin, Satan, the spiritual powers of the world, and the Mosaic Law. In the Jewish context, God brought Israel out of slavery and misery into a whole new identity. The Israelites did not have to listen to their former masters any more! Likewise, God delivers us, if we truly have faith in Jesus, out of the domination of sin. We are freed from it, and are now in the realm of the lordship of Jesus. It is a move from one realm to another.

3. Being redeemed means being delivered out of guilt. Guilt is one of those hidden forces at work within us and between us. We get so used to hearing, 'You should work harder! You should get up earlier! You should speak up more!' that we get used to feeling guilty. So we either shut down, tune out, passively or actively rebel, try harder, get more frustrated, or get upset. Sometimes we get so used to hearing guilt that we pass it along, too. Naturally, we think that guilt ultimately comes from God, who is in the perfect position to wag His finger at us and say, 'You should.' But being redeemed out of our previous identity means that (1) God does not hold that against us; and (2) God does not operate in that realm; He does not motivate us in guilt-producing ways (cf. Rom.8:1).

4. Being redeemed means being delivered out of shame. Shame is different from guilt. Shame goes deeper, because often we internalize negative feelings so deeply that we feel bad not just about our actions, but about ourselves fundamentally. Shame is feeling bad about who we are, not just what we do. For instance, we feel like we're a constant disappointment. We keep listening to the voices that say, 'I'm ashamed of you. You are a burden to me.' Those voices may be voices from the past that we replay like a bad record over and over in our mind. Or those voices may be voices in our present, like a condescending spouse who makes you feel like a failure, parents who criticize you all the time, or even your own voice, which keeps saying in a constant sigh, 'If only I was more…' And again, we think that God is ashamed of us, and that we're shameful before God. Being redeemed by Jesus means that we are fundamentally new; we have a new identity, not a negative, shameful one.

5. Being redeemed provides the basis for our continual experience of God's power. Just as God's first Exodus redemption out of Egypt provided Israel with a sense that His power will be present with them (e.g. Ex.15:1 – 19; Ps.34:4 – 8; Ps.77, etc.), so Paul prays that we will experience the power of God's redemption, His resurrection power to deliver from death, in a continual sense (Eph.1:15 – 2:10).

Continued…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Forgiveness of Sins: Ephesians 1:7

Jewish Context	Greco-Roman Context
The Jewish sacrificial system was supposed to represent God dealing with human sins. However, already in the Old Testament there is an emphasis on the sacrifices cleansing the worshiper symbolically, as opposed to appeasing God symbolically. P.P. Waldenstrom, in his book, Be Ye Reconciled to God, gives an excellent exegetical analysis of the sacrifices with that conclusion. Gordon Hugenberger adds that what mattered in the sacrifices was who ate the sacrifices (Lev.6 – 7). There were three types. The Israelite ate the peace offering. God ate the burnt offering, symbolically, through fire. The priests ate the sin offering, and the 'sin' symbolically accumulated within the priests until the high priest sent the sin into God in the holy of holies on the Day of Atonement (Lev.16). Taken together, the sacrifices represent God consuming sin within Himself, drawing it from the worshiper through the sacrificial animal, and giving peace back to the worshiper. The sacrifices themselves only cleansed 'the flesh' symbolically and temporarily for the purpose of maintaining Israel's position in the promised land (Heb.9:13). They were important, but as a foreshadowing of Jesus cleansing 'the conscience' (Heb.9:14). The New Testament says the sacrificial system would 'remind' people of sin (Heb.10:4), rather than actually take it away. The sins of Israel eventually piled up and resulted in the Babylonian Exile, when Israel was expelled from their promised land, just as Adam and Eve were expelled from Eden. Even though Israel returned to the land under Nehemiah and Ezra, they were still slaves under foreign captors (Dan.9:24-28; Neh.9:36). This meant they were not truly 'forgiven' their sins. Thus, 'forgiveness of sins' also means 'being restored from exile.' It is to be welcomed back home.	Greek and Roman religious systems had some sense of 'appeasing the gods' in their sacrificial ceremonies. But it is unclear whether we can say anything that seems true across the board.

Derivation of 'Forgiveness of Sins' Language: This is definitely a Jewish concept. It is derived from images from Jewish institutions, history, and expectation. The confrontation extends towards both Jewish and Gentile concepts. 'Forgiveness of sins' brought about by Jesus confronts the Jewish concept because Jesus challenged the Temple system. Jesus' 'forgiveness of sins' also confronts the Gentile temple sacrifices on numerous counts: God is not like the 'gods.' He is not arbitrary and arbitrarily 'appeased.' The object of His wrath is not the human being but the corruption in human nature – the 'flesh' as Paul and John called it; the 'heart' as Moses, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, and Jesus referred to it. The objective result of 'forgiveness' is not the changing of God's mind from anger to acceptance, but the changing of the person from being identified with sin to being identified with Christ.

We can list the important points that can be pastorally applied to us:

1. 'Forgiveness of sins' means 'welcome home.' It is moving from a state of exile to a state of restored intimacy, like the prodigal son. Like a child exiled to the time-out chair, we were exiled away from home and fullness of relationship. Now that time is over!

2. 'Forgiveness of sins' means 'innocence regained.' It is when one's sins are no longer counted against you, and no longer remembered. We are freed from that awful burden! One of our primal urges is to be innocent. Just look at all the ways we try to justify ourselves! But God does it for us by placing us in Jesus.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

3. 'Forgiveness of sins' happens not by something Jesus does separate from us, but by us being brought into Jesus. Only Jesus is sinless; only by being 'in Jesus' can we be considered sinless from God's perspective. Sin is counted against you everywhere else.

Return to*: Ephesians Highlights – Chapter 1 (Menu)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Ephesians 1:8b – 12 – The Revelation of God's Will

(Source: NIV Application Commentary: Ephesians)

> [7] In him we have redemption * through his blood, the forgiveness of sins, in accordance with the riches of God's grace
>
> [8] that he lavished on us with all wisdom and understanding. [9] And he made known to us the mystery of his will according to his good pleasure, which he purposed in Christ, [10] to be put into effect when the times will have reached their fulfillment — to bring all things in heaven and on earth together under one head, even Christ.
>
> [11] In him we were also chosen, having been predestined according to the plan of him who works out everything in conformity with the purpose of his will, [12] in order that we, who were the first to hope in Christ, might be for the praise of his glory. [NIV]

Whereas the focus in 1:4 - 6a was on God's choice of people in Christ, Paul now shifts to the revelation of God's plan and how that plan centered on Christ. Words for God's will, purpose, and desire dominate verses 9 and 11. Paul emphasizes that God's work in Christ was not an afterthought or an incidental event in the universe. Rather, it is what God intended all along.

Two problems surface with the phrase "in all wisdom and understanding" (v. 8b).

> (1) Does it belong to verse 8b or verse 9a? Does Paul mean that God's grace was lavished on us in all wisdom and understanding, or that with all wisdom and understanding God made known to us the mystery of his will? Either is possible, but the latter seems more fitting (cf. a similar theme in 1:17; 3:10 - 11).
>
> (2) Does Paul mean that God exercises his own wisdom and understanding when he makes known his will, or does he refer to the wisdom and understanding given to human beings when he makes his will known? Ephesians 3:10 - 11 would suggest the former; 1:17 the latter. "Wisdom" often refers to wise living by humans, but it is also used of God's wisdom, especially in passages that speak of his saving plan. A decision between the two options is difficult, and perhaps both ideas should be included. Each option implies the other, though the focus here seems to be on the display of God's own wisdom and understanding. No distinction is intended between the terms "wisdom" and "understanding." The two words form a hendiadys — one idea conveyed through two words.

The gospel is first of all a revelation about God's purpose and work, and here his revealing activity is a cause for praise. Paul's own ministry is evidence of God's revelation, both in his calling and in his responsibility. The term mystery emphasizes the revelation theme further. Whereas in modern usage mystery refers to what is unknown, in Jewish and early Christian literature this word refers to the hidden divine plan now revealed by God (cf. 3:3 - 9; 6:19).

In this passage all the attention is on God's completing his plan of salvation at the end of time. Some scholars see 1:10 as the key to the whole letter, but as important as it is, this verse is difficult to understand because of two words.

> (1) Oikonomia is rendered in the NIV as "to be put into effect," but this translation suggests that Paul's focus is only on the end time, which is debatable. More commonly this word means "management" or "stewardship." Some translations use "administration" or even "plan," but the latter is not well attested in the New Testament period. Paul uses the term in 3:2 of his own work and in 3:9 of his responsibility for the revelation of God's hidden mystery. The point in 1:10 is that God desired Christ to administer or rule "the fullness of the times" (lit.). This text is about the eternal Lordship of Christ.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

(2) Anakephalaioo has been translated in the NIV as "bring together under one head," but whether the word involves any connotation of "head" or "headship" is doubtful. The word means "sum up" or "recapitulate." The whole universe is to be brought together in Christ. He is the focal point that gives all creation coherence. One day every knee will bow (Phil. 2:10) and God's creation will be unified around Christ. Both troublesome words, then, focus on Christ as Lord of all.

The NIV understands verse 10 to refer to the end of time. Literally the text reads "the fullness of the times." Does this point to the end of time or does it include the entire period since Christ's coming (see Mark 1:15; Gal. 4:4)? Any period of time can be said to be fulfilled. Apocalyptic writers spoke of periods of time set by God, and clearly "the fullness of the times" points to the climax of God's working. Even in Ephesians, although Christ is Lord, all things in heaven and earth are not yet summed up in Christ (1:20 - 21; 5:16; 6:10 - 12). While the primary intent in this text does concern the ultimate fulfillment of God's purpose at the end of time, Paul viewed that fulfillment as already having begun in Christ's life, death, and resurrection. He is already Lord of all times. Just as redemption is both present and future, the revelation of God's will points both to the present and the future.

One of the difficulties in understanding Ephesians is the way the author changes from "we" and "our" to "you" and "your." The first such difficulty occurs in 1:11 - 14. "We" in 1:11 and "our" in 1:14 clearly refer to all Christians, and "you" in 1:13 describes the Gentile recipients of the letter. The difficulty comes in 1:12, with the words "we who were the first to hope in Christ." Some scholars argue the word translated "first to hope" has no temporal focus and see 1:12 as referring to all Christians. As the niv stands, the reference is to Jewish Christians. Since Ephesians is concerned about the relation of Jewish Christians and Gentiles, this inference is probably correct.

Return to*: Ephesians Highlights – Chapter 1 (Menu)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Dispensation – Ephesians 1:10

See also: Dispensational Theology

"Dispensation" (οἰκονομία) is a Biblical word and means stewardship or administration. Paul used it in writing to the Corinthians, Ephesians, and Colossians (1 Corinthians 9.17; Ephesians 1.10, 3.2; Colossians 1.25) about God's dealings with man.

https://doctrine.org/covenant-theology-and-the-new-covenant#comment-109441

See also: Dispensation in Ephesians 3:2

DISPENSATION (οἰκονομία, G3873, to divide, apportion, administer or manage the affairs of a house, Lat. dispensatio, to weigh out or to dispense), a stewardship (Luke 16:2-4; Eph 3:2); a commission (1 Cor 9:17); a plan (Eph 1:10; 3:9); a divine office (Col 1:25) divine training (1 Tim 1:4).

https://www.biblegateway.com/resources/encyclopedia-of-the-bible/Dispensation

In four occurrences (Eph 1:10; 3:2, 9; Col 1:25) the word has the sense of a divine stewardship or administration that is being accomplished by God. In this use the word takes on the significance of "plan" as well as "administration," and is the foundation for further definition.

In Dispensationalism Today, Ryrie sees the passage in Luke 16 as characteristic of the use of the word οἰκονομία, G3873. He observes four pertinent features: (1) There are two parties involved including one who delegates duties and one whose responsibility is to fulfill those duties. (2) There are specific responsibilities involved in the arrangement. (3) A steward may be called to account for his administration of his stewardship. (4) A change may be made if there is unfaithfulness in the arrangement (p. 26).

Therefore, there seems to be two different uses of the word in the NT: the first as illustrated in the parable of Luke 16, and the second as the word comes to be used by Paul in Ephesians and Colossians when he speaks of the divine administrations of God manifest in his program on earth, with some writers making the earlier use illustrative of the latter.

Theological definition. Based on the above use of the word in Scripture, theologians have given further definition to the word in its use as describing the unfolding of God's program on earth. With variations dependent upon the system of the theologian, God's arrangement with man upon which He is working out His plan is called a dispensation.

At this point unity of perspective concerning the term seems to end. The major division is between those who are called covenant theologians and the dispensational theologians. The covenant theologian sees the Covenant of Grace as the overriding unity of Scripture and uses the concept of a dispensation to speak of the manifestations of that covenant. Charles Hodge, for example, asserts that there are four dispensations after the Fall—Adam to Abraham, Abraham to Moses, Moses to Christ, and Christ to the end. These dispensations are simply the outworking of the Covenant of Grace (Systematic Theology [1946], II, 373-77). Louis Berkhof more typically speaks of only two dispensations—the Old and the New.

Dispensation continues on next page…

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

What is a Dispensation According to Scripture?

http://www.teachingtheword.org/apps/articles/?articleid=66756&blogid=6211

Excerpt:

Oikonomia Defined

The word that is translated "dispensation" or "stewardship" at various places in both the Old and New King James Bibles is the Greek word oikonomia. It is the word from which we get our English word "economy".

It can have two different meanings, and the meaning depends on the point of view that the text has in mind. Those two points of view are that of the person who is in* authority, and that of the person who is under* authority. When the Bible is speaking from the viewpoint of the one who is in authority, oikonomia or dispensation is properly translated as "a plan" or "a plan of management." But when the word is used from the viewpoint of the one under authority, the one who is given responsibility for carrying out the plan, the word is properly translated "task" or "responsibility".

Oikonomia Used

Oikonomia is used eight times in the New Testament:

- In Luke 16:1-4, it appears three times in the parable of the unjust steward, and is translated "stewardship" in each case.
- In 1 Corinthians 9:17, Paul uses oikonomia when he says that "a dispensation (NKJV "stewardship") of the Gospel is committed to me."
- In Ephesians 1:10 he speaks of "the dispensation of the fullness of the times."
- In Ephesians 3:2 he speaks of "the dispensation of the grace of God which was given to me for you," that is, for the Gentiles. In a parallel passage in Colossians 1:25, Paul speaks of "the dispensation of God (NKJV, "stewardship from God") which was given to me for you (the church) to fulfill the Word of God."
- In 1 Timothy 1:4, Paul warns Timothy, "Neither give heed to fables and endless genealogies, which cause disputes rather than godly edification which is in faith." The last phrase of that verse, "godly edification which is in faith," contains the work oikonomia, and would be literally translated, "God's plan or administration which is in faith."

Two Examples

In Ephesians 1:10 Scripture speaks of oikonomia from the viewpoint of God as the one who is in authority when it speaks of the "dispensation of the fullness of the times." Paul states in that passage that at the decisive moment in God's all-wise and eternal plan - "in the dispensation of the fullness of the times" - Christ will come again and bring the glorious plan of redemption to its final consummation. (For more detail on the use of "dispensation" in this passage, see our series, What is "The Dispensation of the Fullness of the Times" in Ephesians 1:10?)

In contrast, in Colossians 1:25, Paul uses oikonomia or dispensation not from the viewpoint of the one who is in authority, but from the viewpoint of the one who is under authority - in this case, Paul himself. He says that God made him a minister of the church "according to the dispensation of God which is given to me for you" - or as the New King James Bible more accurately translates it, "according to the stewardship from God that was given to me for you." In other words, Paul has been given responsibility for the carrying out of a part of God's plan.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

And what is that plan? Paul tells us what it is, in the next phrase of verse 25. He says it is "to fulfill the Word of God." In the original language, the word that is translated "fulfill" here can have a number of meanings. It can mean "to fill up to the brim." It can mean, "to consummate." It can mean, "to supply liberally." But in the context of this passage, in the context of Paul's function as a minister of Christ, as a man who has been given a responsibility from God to carry out part of His plan, the word "fulfill" has a more specific meaning. It means, "to carry into effect the Word of God" - "to carry the Word of God through to accomplishment" - or "to execute my duty as it pertains to the Word of God."

And what is Paul's duty as it pertains to the Word of God? He tells us in the next verses, beginning at verse 26. Paul says, "I am made a minister, according to the dispensation of God which is given to me for you, to fulfill the Word of God; even the mystery which hath been hid from ages and from generations, but now is made manifest to his saints: to whom God would make known what is the riches of the glory of this mystery among the Gentiles; which is Christ in you, the hope of glory."

What is 'the dispensation of the fullness of times' in Ephesians 1:10?

http://www.teachingtheword.org/apps/articles/default.asp?articleid=70068&columnid=6211

Excerpt:

What is a Dispensation in this Context?

So we begin with the word "dispensation". Paul uses the Greek word that's translated "dispensation" twice in Ephesians. One of those is in the passage we're considering, in verse 10. We also find this word in Ephesians 3:2, where Paul speaks of the "dispensation of the grace of God which was given to me for you, how that by revelation He made known to me the mystery."

[Note: Some translations use Greek source texts that also have the same word in Ephesians 3:9 in the phrase that is translated "the fellowship of the mystery" in the KJV and NKJV. In other versions it is variously translated "dispensation" (ASV), "administration" (NASB and NIV), or "plan" (ESV). But the most reliable Greek manuscript (the Received Text which is used to translate the KJV and NKJV) has a different word in the Greek, koinonia, which in fact means "fellowship" and not "dispensation".]

The word translated "dispensation" in Ephesians 1:1 and 3:2 is the Greek word oikonomia, which literally means "house order". It's the word from which we get our English word "economy". A dispensation, simply put, is 1.) a plan, or 2.) the carrying out of a plan. How the word is used in the original Greek of the Scriptures - sense number one or sense number two - depends on the point of view. The first usage of dispensation (1:10) is sense number one, from the standpoint of someone who is in authority, someone who makes a plan, who establishes the way that something will operate. The second usage (3:2) is sense number two, from the standpoint of a person who is under authority, who is given the responsibility or stewardship of carrying out some part of the plan.

In chapter three, Paul is speaking from his perspective. He's saying that God has given him a share in the responsibility of carrying out His plan. Paul also uses oikonomia in the same sense in Colossians 1:25, where he says that God has made him a minister of the Gospel "according to the dispensation (KJV, "stewardship" in the NKJV) of God which is given to me for you, to fulfill the Word of God."

But in Ephesians 1:10, Paul is clearly speaking of things not from his perspective as an appointed steward carrying out God's plan, but from God's perspective as the author of the eternal plan. So when Paul uses the word "dispensation" in the phrase "the dispensation of the fullness of times" he is talking about God's plan for the ages, established and settled "before the foundation of the world" (1:4), centered in Jesus Christ, and now approaching its culmination.

See also: Dispensational Theology

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Dispensation

Souce: Zondervan Illustrated Bible Dictionary

This English term is used by the KJV four times as the rendering of Greek oikonomia G3873.

In three of those passages (1 Cor. 9:17; Eph. 3:2; Col. 1:25) it refers to the commission Paul was given so that the gospel of divine grace might be dispensed to others.

The fourth passage (Eph. 1:10, but also 3:9, where KJV translates differently) uses the term more broadly of God's plan of salvation (3:2 shows the conceptual connection between these two uses of the term).

This Greek noun is also used in Lk 16:2-4 with regard to the "management" or "stewardship" of a business (cf. in the same passage the term oikonomos G3874, "manager" or "steward"), and in 1 Tim. 1:4 with the possible meaning of "training."

The modern theological use of the term as a "period of time during which man is tested in respect to obedience to some specific revelation of the will of God" (Scofield) is not found in Scripture.

Nevertheless, the Scriptures do make a distinction between the way God manifested his grace in what may be called the "Old Covenant" and the way his grace has been manifested since the death of Christ in the "New Covenant," and there are accompanying differences in the requirements that God has for believers. Paul has this in mind when he speaks of God's dispensations in Ephesians and Colossians.

In God's redemptive plan the era of law prepared the way, by types and shadows, for the new era of salvation through Christ, which in the NT is regarded as the climax of history (Heb. 1:2).

Dispensation

Source: Easton's Bible Dictionary

(Gr. oikonomia, "management," "economy").

(1.) The method or scheme according to which God carries out his purposes towards men is called a dispensation. There are usually reckoned three dispensations, the Patriarchal, the Mosaic or Jewish, and the Christian. (See Covenant Administration of.) These were so many stages in God's unfolding of his purpose of grace toward men. The word is not found with this meaning in Scripture.

(2.) A commission to preach the gospel (1 Cor 9:17; Eph 1:10; 3:2; Col 1:25).
Dispensations of Providence are providential events which affect men either in the way of mercy or of judgement.

The 7 Dispensations of BIble History

http://knowthebook.com/WhattheBibleTeaches/18%20-%20The%207%20Dispensations.pdf [PDF]

See also*: Dispensational Theology

Return to*: Ephesians Highlights – Chapter 1 (Menu)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

I am marked and sealed with the Holy Spirit (Ephesians 1:13)

Return to*: Ephesians Highlights – Chapter 1 (Menu)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

In Christ

(Source: NIV Application Commentary: Ephesians)

In Christ. The New Testament writers groped for words to explain the reality they found as believers in Jesus as the Messiah and Lord. No single explanation or image was adequate, and consequently they used a variety of figures and sometimes even created new expressions. “In Christ” is just such a creation.

We assume that reality is the physical world around us, which we see and experience. The doxology — as all the Bible — asserts that reality is much larger, that it also includes God and his actions and what takes place “in Christ” and “in the heavenly realms.” In bridging contexts we must expand our thinking to do justice to this “larger reality.” Christians live in two realities at the same time: their physical world and in the heavenlies in Christ. We live in the reality of God’s work in Christ and the gift of his Spirit. What we need for life is found in Christ, or, as Colossians especially emphasizes, Christ is all and all you need.

The idea of being “in Christ” presents one of the most difficult bridging tasks in Ephesians. How could early Christians think they were “in” a person who had been alive with them only a few years earlier and whose brothers they knew? They did not speak of being in James, nor do we speak of being in John Wesley or Martin Luther. The difficulty in our comprehending the idea of being in Christ is compounded by typical evangelical language about conversion. Christians today usually speak of inviting Christ into their hearts in order to be able to go to heaven, but language about “Christ being in us” and a concern over our going to heaven are relatively rare in the Bible, especially in Paul.

Scholars often debate which theological idea is central in Paul’s thought. Some choose justification by faith, but the verb justify only occurs four times outside Romans and Galatians and not at all in Ephesians. “In Christ” with its 164 occurrences, 36 of which are in Ephesians, is much more likely the central motif, or at least a central motif. Just as redemption is “in Christ” (1:7), so justification and every other act of God take place in Christ. In fact, the only way that the atonement makes sense, the only way that Christ’s death is effective for us, is if the union between Christ and believers is so strong that in some way his death is our death and his life is our life. This solidarity is achieved by a double identification via the Incarnation and faith. In the Incarnation Christ identifies with us and by faith we identify with him.

Closely related to the idea of being “in Christ” is the language of doing something “with Christ” or of “dying and rising with Christ.” The result is that believers are so closely connected to Christ that the “body” image is one of the most expressive pictures of the relation. Christians are part of Christ (5:30) and part of each other (4:25). Much of Ephesians is summarized with these two statements.
The statement that Christians are part of Christ has enormous implications for how we understand salvation and Christology. (1) With regard to salvation, Paul teaches that we are embodied in Christ and share his death and resurrection. Evangelicals usually focus on Christ’s substitution for us as the key idea in salvation. As important as substitution is (see 5:2), it is only one aspect of the explanation, not the whole teaching. In fact, the way people understand substitution often militates against Paul’s emphasis on being in Christ, for substitution suggests that Christ takes our place and we are removed from the picture, whereas in Paul’s view we are caught up into Christ and made one with him. (2) With regard to Christology, Paul’s Christ is no longer viewed merely as a human being. He is the cosmic Christ, the focus of God’s activity from eternity (1:4), the one who embodies and represents all humanity (1:6 - 7), the one in whom all God’s good gifts are available (1:3), and the one in whom all creation can be summed up (1:10). Without using Christological titles, Paul’s in Christ thinking expresses a full Christology.

Return to*: Ephesians Highlights – Chapter 1 (Menu)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

[Go to Index]
Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only
[Go to Top - TOC]

The Stupendous Reality of Being "in Christ Jesus"

https://www.desiringgod.org/articles/the-stupendous-reality-of-being-in-christ-jesus

Excerpt:

Being "in Christ Jesus" is a stupendous reality. It is breathtaking what it means to be in Christ. United to Christ. Bound to Christ. If you are "in Christ" listen to what it means for you:

1. In Christ Jesus you were given grace before the world was created. "He gave us grace in Christ Jesus before the ages began" (2 Timothy 1:9).

2. In Christ Jesus you were chosen by God before creation. "God chose us in Christ before the foundation of the world" (Ephesians 1:4).

3. In Christ Jesus you are loved by God with an inseparable love. "I am sure that neither death nor life, nor angels nor rulers, nor things present nor things to come, nor powers, nor height nor depth, nor anything else in all creation, will be able to separate us from the love of God in Christ Jesus our Lord" (Romans 8:38–39).

4. In Christ Jesus you were redeemed and forgiven for all your sins. In Christ we have redemption through his blood, the forgiveness of our trespasses" (Ephesians 1:7).

5. In Christ Jesus you are justified before God and the righteousness of God in Christ is imputed to you. "For our sake God made Christ to be sin who knew no sin, so that in him we might become the righteousness of God" (2 Corinthians 5:21).

6. In Christ Jesus you have become a new creation and a son of God. "If anyone is in Christ, he is a new creation. The old has passed away; behold, the new has come" (2 Corinthians 5:17). "In Christ Jesus you are all sons of God, through faith" (Galatians 3:26).

7. In Christ Jesus you have been seated in the heavenly places even while he lived on earth. "God raised us up with Christ and seated us with him in the heavenly places in Christ Jesus" (Ephesians 2:6).

8. In Christ Jesus all the promises of God are Yes for you. "All the promises of God find their Yes in Christ" (2 Corinthians 1:20).

9. In Christ Jesus you are being sanctified and made holy. "To the church of God that is in Corinth, to those sanctified in Christ Jesus" (1 Corinthians 1:2).

10. In Christ Jesus everything you really need will be supplied. "My God will supply every need of yours according to his riches in glory in Christ Jesus" (Philippians 4:19).

11. In Christ Jesus the peace of God will guard your heart and mind. "The peace of God, which surpasses all understanding, will guard your hearts and your minds in Christ Jesus" (Philippians 4:7).

12. In Christ Jesus you have eternal life. "For the wages of sin is death, but the free gift of God is eternal life in Christ Jesus our Lord" (Romans 6:23).

13. And in Christ Jesus you will be raised from the dead at the coming of the Lord. "For as in Adam all die, so also in Christ shall all be made alive" (1 Corinthians 15:22). All those united to Adam in the first humanity die. All those united to Christ in the new humanity rise to live again.

How do we get into Christ?

At the unconscious and decisive level, it is God's sovereign work: "From God are you in Christ Jesus" (1 Corinthians 1:30, my translation).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

But at the conscious level of our own action, it is through faith. Christ dwells in our hearts "through faith" (Ephesians 3:17). The life we live in union with his death and life we "live by faith in the Son of God" (Galatians 2:20). We are united in his death and resurrection "through faith" (Colossians 2:12).

This is a wonderful truth. Union with Christ is the ground of everlasting joy, and it is free.

"In Christ" by John R.W. Stott

The Meaning and Implications of the Gospel of Jesus Christ

Address given in 1983 at the Leadership Luncheon following the National Prayer Breakfast, Washington, D.C.

http://www.cslewisinstitute.org/In_Christ_page1

Excerpt:

To use Biblical expressions, "The peace of Christ rules in their hearts," "the power of Christ is made perfect in their weakness," and "the life of Christ is made manifest in their mortal flesh."

The commonest description in the Scriptures of a follower of Jesus is that he or she is a person "in Christ." The expressions "in Christ," "in the Lord," and "in him" occur 164 times in the letters of Paul alone, and are indispensable to an understanding of the New Testament. To be "in Christ" does not mean to be inside Christ, as tools are in a box or our clothes in a closet, but to be organically united to Christ, as a limb is in the body or a branch is in the tree. It is this personal relationship with Christ that is the distinctive mark of his authentic followers.

The word "Christian" occurs only three times in the Bible. Because of its common misuse we could profitably dispense with it. Jesus Christ and the Apostle Paul never used the word, or at least not in their recorded teaching. What distinguishes the true followers of Jesus is neither their creed, nor their code of ethics, nor their ceremonies, nor their culture, but Christ. What is often mistakenly called "Christianity" is, in essence, neither a religion nor a system, but a person, Jesus of Nazareth.

…

To be "in Christ" is to find personal fulfillment, to enjoy brotherly unity, and to experience a radical transformation. Only then can we become the world's salt and light, sharing the good news with others, making an impact on society, and above everything else seeking to bring honor and glory to his wonderful Name

My Understanding of the Biblical Doctrine of Election (Daniel B. Wallace)

https://bible.org/article/my-understanding-biblical-doctrine-election

"In Christ" believers are:

- Blessed with every spiritual blessing in the heavenly places (1:3)
- Redeemed through His blood (1:7)
- Receive an inheritance (1:11)
- Sealed by the Holy Spirit (1:13)
- Positional, though not experiential, sitting with Him in heaven (2:6)
- God's new creation (2:10, cp. 2 Cor. 5:17

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

Source: http://www.bibleprophecyblog.com/2015/01/a-dispensational-view-of-spiritual-life.html

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

What Does it Mean to Abide in Christ? by Sinclair Fergeson (2018)

https://www.ligonier.org/blog/what-does-it-mean-abide-christ/

Excerpt:

The exhortation to “abide” has been frequently misunderstood, as though it were a special, mystical, and indefinable experience. But Jesus makes clear that it actually involves a number of concrete realities.

First, union with our Lord depends on His grace. Of course we are actively and personally united to Christ by faith (John 14:12). But faith itself is rooted in the activity of God. It is the Father who, as the divine Gardener, has grafted us into Christ. It is Christ, by His Word, who has cleansed us to fit us for union with Himself (15:3). All is sovereign, all is of grace.

Second, union with Christ means being obedient to Him. Abiding involves our response to the teaching of Jesus: “If you abide in Me, and My words abide in you …” (John 15:7a). Paul echoes this idea in Colossians 3:16, where he writes, “Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly,” a statement closely related to his parallel exhortation in Ephesians 5:18: “be filled with the Spirit.”

In a nutshell, abiding in Christ means allowing His Word to fill our minds, direct our wills, and transform our affections. In other words, our relationship to Christ is intimately connected to what we do with our Bibles! Then, of course, as Christ’s Word dwells in us and the Spirit fills us, we will begin to pray in a way consistent with the will of God and discover the truth of our Lord’s often misapplied promise: “You will ask what you desire, and it shall be done for you” (John 15:7b).

Third, Christ underlines a further principle, “Abide in My love” (15:9), and states very clearly what this implies: the believer rests his or her life on the love of Christ (the love of the One who lays down His life for His friends, v. 13).

This love has been proved to us in the cross of Christ. We must never allow ourselves to drift from daily contemplation of the cross as the irrefutable demonstration of that love, or from dependence on the Spirit who sheds it abroad in our hearts (Rom. 5:5). Furthermore, remaining in Christ’s love comes to very concrete expression: simple obedience rendered to Him is the fruit and evidence of love for Him (John 15:10–14).

Finally, we are called, as part of the abiding process, to submit to the pruning knife of God in the providences by which He cuts away all disloyalty and sometimes all that is unimportant, in order that we might remain in Christ all the more wholeheartedly.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Meaning of Being "In Christ"

http://www.bradleychurchofchrist.com/Topics/Sanctification.htm

Excerpt:

"Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who has blessed us with every spiritual blessing in the heavenly places in Christ..." (Ephesians 1:3). The Scriptures plainly show that every spiritual blessing available to us from God our Father is found "in Christ." But what does it mean to be "in Christ"? We are so in need of all these spiritual blessings (blessings such as forgiveness, intercession, mercy, fellowship, salvation, hope, peace, victory).

First of all, being "in Christ" does not refer to being at a specific physical place, like "in the house" or "in the yard." Rather, the phrase refers to being in a certain position or relationship with respect to the Savior. It would be more similar to the phrase "in the family" which describes relationship, not physical location.

Hopefully this helps us to understand the importance of being "in Christ" a little more clearly. We are talking about fellowship, or sharing, in the good things of God which He says are found "in" His Son.

How Does One Get "Into Christ"?

A first, most reasonable question for those interested in eternal salvation, as well as in the other spiritual blessings of God, would be, "How does one get into the relationship described as being 'in Christ'"?

No Scripture says that we "believe" into Christ or that we "repent" into Christ, though both of these things are prerequisites. There is a specific moment which the Scriptures teach that a believing, repentant individual is "in Christ." We do not have to guess about it. We know the precise point.

The Lord God, in His word, places that moment at baptism! Though many would reject this, saying a believer is in Christ before he or she is baptized, we must instead take the Lord's word for it. He has told us, through the inspired word given from heaven to Paul, that "...do you not know that all of us who have been baptized into Christ Jesus have been baptized into His death? Therefore we have been buried with Him through baptism into death, in order that as Christ was raised from the dead through the glory of the Father, so we too might walk in newness of life." (Romans 6:3,4) and "For all of you who were baptized into Christ have clothed yourselves with Christ." (Galatians 3:27). So we learn that every spiritual blessing is found "in Christ" and that we are baptized "into Christ." This means we must be baptized to gain access to the spiritual blessings in Christ!

Spiritual Blessings

Earlier, we had mentioned some of the spiritual blessings we find "in Christ." Paul, in fact, lists some of them in the following verses of his statement in Ephesians 1:3. He says we are "chosen" or "elect" in Christ (v. 4). He also says we are made "holy" and "blameless" in Him (v. 4). We become "sons" of God through Christ (v. 5). We are told that we have "redemption" and "forgiveness" in Christ through His blood (v. 7). We have obtained an "inheritance" in Him (v. 10,11) as well as our "hope" (vs. 12). Finally, the passage says we are sealed in Him with the "Holy Spirit" (v. 13).

If we desire to receive these spiritual blessings from God, then we must be "in Christ." The Bible says we are "baptized into Christ." So, apart from being baptized into Christ, we cannot have any of these blessings!

One Body in Christ

"For just as we have many members in one body and all the members do not have the same function, so we, who are many, are one body in Christ, and individually members one of another." (Romans 12:4,5). There is one body in Christ. There are not two or three or dozens or hundreds. This one body is the church of Christ (Ephesians 1:22,23; 5:23).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

When we speak of the church, we must understand what it is. It is not a denomination, or even a group of them. We know this because the church existed in the New Testament, but denominations did not. When we say, “Jesus has one church” we do not mean “Jesus has one denomination” or that “Jesus only approves of one denomination and disapproves of all others.” When we talk of the one body, we are not talking about denominations at all.

The word “church” comes from a Greek word (ecclesia) which means “called out.” It refers to the group, or gathering of people who have been called out of the world by the gospel of Christ. They are gathered together, not in a physical place, but into a relationship that is described as being “in Christ.”

New Creature In Christ

“Therefore if any man is in Christ, he is a new creature; the old things passed away; behold, new things have come.” (2 Corinthians 5:17). A really wonderful benefit of being 'in Christ” is that we are remade as individuals. We are still the same persons, but several changes have taken place, and will continue to do so. We noted earlier that we are baptized into Christ (Romans 6:3,4). This passage also says that we rise up from baptism with Christ to 'walk in newness of life.”

We could speak at length as to what this new life entails. We could speak of new purpose (Philippians 3:14) or our new attitude (Philippians 2:5). We could add new speech, new heart, new thoughts, new hope and many, many more.

No Condemnation in Christ

“There is therefore now no condemnation for those who are in Christ Jesus.” (Romans 8:1). That which condemns us is our own sins. In Christ, there is power to take sins away through His gospel (Romans 1:16; 3:23; 6:23).

Our hope in eternity is not our own perfection. It is God's mercy, which is a part of His spiritual blessings. Again, recall that “every spiritual blessings in heavenly places” is to be found “in Christ.” What this means is that “in Christ” we can look forward to one day standing before God uncondemned. Grace has made it possible.

Victory in Christ

“But thanks be to God, who always leads us in His triumph in Christ, and manifests through us the sweet aroma of the knowledge of Him in every place.” (2 Corinthians 2:14). Faithful Christians are on the right track. There might be difficulties along the way, but victory is certain “in Christ” (Romans 8:35-39). In Christ we are partakers of the promise of God (Ephesians 3:6). Even death falls defeated before the Christian, as “asleep in Jesus” we await the resurrection (1 Thessalonians 4:13,14).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

What Does It Mean To Be In Christ?

http://www.patheos.com/blogs/christiancrier/2018/01/05/what-does-it-mean-to-be-in-christ/

Excerpt:

Outside of Christ

It is very clear. Those outside of Christ are outside of the will of God and have the wrath of God abiding on them as it currently stands. They are in a hopeless state. They cannot save themselves any more than Lazarus could have raised himself from the dead. He needed some help, but for all who refuse to come to Christ, they will remain outside of Christ, and that's bad…very bad. When I hear people critique the Bible, I can say that they're reading someone else's mail, because it's written "To the saints who are in Ephesus, and are faithful in Christ Jesus" (Eph 1:1). It is to the faithful and those in Jesus Christ that the Book of Ephesians is written too. We are not of the world so we can't expect the world to love us. On the contrary, they will hate us, but it's really Jesus Who they hate and not us. It's the message they hate more than the messenger…but make no mistake…they hate the messenger too. We must come to recognize that just like I was, "you were dead in the trespasses and sins in which you once walked, following the course of this world, following the prince of the power of the air, the spirit that is now at work in the sons of disobedience" (Eph 2:1-2), and just as I was, "you were at that time separated from Christ, alienated from the commonwealth of Israel and strangers to the covenants of promise, having no hope and without God in the world" (Eph 2:12), however, if you have trusted in Christ, "then you are no longer strangers and aliens, but you are fellow citizens with the saints and members of the household of God" (Eph 2:20). If you haven't trusted in Christ, then you are still outside of Christ, therefore you still have the wrath of God abiding on you (John 3:36b).

Inside of Christ

The Apostle Paul writes, "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who has blessed us in Christ with every spiritual blessing in the heavenly places" (Eph 1:3), and what are some of these blessings? Paul says it was "In love he predestined us for adoption to himself as sons through Jesus Christ, according to the purpose of his will" (Eph 2:4c-5). God's purpose was that "we who were the first to hope in Christ might be to the praise of his glory" (Eph 1:12). Our hope is not in this world or even in us, but we place our hope in Christ, and by trusting Christ we are then in Christ. We believed in His name (John 1:13-14), we believe in His purpose (John 3:16; Mark 10:45), and we believe in His sinless-ness. We are now in Christ because we have placed all our trust in Christ. God then places us into the very righteousness of Christ so that God no longer sees our sins but He sees the righteousness of His Son (2 Cor 5:21). We were chosen in Him by the Father. We were sanctified by His Word and by His Son, and even though we were once in the world (Eph 2:1-2), we are now found to be in Christ. It is only "in him we might become the righteousness of God" (2 Cor 5:21b). To be in Christ is to recognize that "All this is from God, who through Christ reconciled us to himself and gave us the ministry of reconciliation; that is, in Christ God was reconciling the world to himself, not counting their trespasses against them, and entrusting to us the message of reconciliation" (2 Cor 5:18-29).

…

Conclusion

To be found in Christ means you've been reconciled back to God, and at death or at Christ's return, you can enter into the eternal kingdom which descends down from heaven (Rev 21:1-4). Not only will you be in Christ…you will be in the kingdom…the glorious, eternal, and joyous kingdom, and best of all, be before the King of the kingdom. That day will see the end of all sorrow, all suffering, all pain, and even death itself because all the old things have passed away forever (Rev 21:4). Jesus has made all things new (Rev 21:5)!

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

What Does It Mean To Be "In Christ"?
http://www.precious-testimonies.com/Exhortations/u-z/WhatDoesItMeanToBeInChrist.htm

Excerpt:

The phrase, 'in Christ' or 'in Him' is found many times in the New Testament. My favorite verse of all is Colossians 2:10, which reads, 'And you are complete in Him, who is the head of all principality and power.' That idea of completeness should be comforting to us, because is speaks of lacking nothing, not in want, or needing no thing to be added to us. Even though we may have times of physical need, we know from this verse that our times of spiritual need are behind us when we are in Christ. Another section of scripture that is equally as comforting is found in the first chapter of Ephesians. Listen to these comforting words:

Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who has blessed us with every spiritual blessing in the heavenly places in Christ, just as He chose us in Him before the foundation of the world, that we should be holy and without blame before Him in love, having predestined us to adoption as sons by Jesus Christ to Himself, according to the good pleasure of His will, to the praise of the glory of His grace, by which He has made us accepted in the Beloved. - Ephesians 1:3-6

In Him we have redemption through His blood, the forgiveness of sins, according to the riches of His grace which He made to abound toward us in all wisdom and prudence, having made known to us the mystery of His will, according to His good pleasure which He purposed in Himself, that in the dispensation of the fullness of the times He might gather together in one all things in Christ, both which are in heaven and which are on earth-in Him. - Ephesians 1:7-10

In Him also we have obtained an inheritance, being predestined according to the purpose of Him who works all things according to the counsel of His will, that we who first trusted in Christ should be to the praise of His glory. - Ephesians 1: 11-12

In Him you also trusted, after you heard the word of truth, the gospel of your salvation; in whom also, having believed, you were sealed with the Holy Spirit of promise, who is the guarantee of our inheritance until the redemption of the purchased possession, to the praise of His glory' - Ephesians 1:13-14

Look at all that is true of you who believe in this one section of God's Word! If you believe in Jesus, that He died for your sin, trusting in the promises of God, then all of this is true about you right now.

- You are blessed with every spiritual blessing in the heavenly places in Christ
- You are chosen before the foundation of the world
- You are holy and without blame
- You have been adopted
- You are accepted
- You are redeemed
- You have forgiveness of sins
- You know the mystery of His will
- You have obtained an inheritance

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

- You are His glory
- You are sealed with the Holy Spirit
- Your inheritance is guaranteed

What does it do to you to read a list like that? Do you, like me, look at that list and say to yourself, 'I don't deserve that"? Well you're right. You don't deserve any of that. In fact, none of us does.

From the greatest to the least among us, none of us deserves to be treated that way. We deserve to be punished for our sin. I have sinned against the Lord in thought, word, and deed. Try as I might, every day ends with me having done the very things I tried not to do, and not doing the things I tried so hard to do right.

And even if I could become better at not sinning, I know that I would still mess up eventually. No matter how successful I was at mortifying the flesh, no matter how many things I didn't do, or how many good things I accomplished, I would still be left with the problem of my sinful nature. It is still in there.

That is the beautiful thing about the good news. There is someone who can rescue me from this dilemma, and that someone is Jesus the Christ, the Son of God, who became flesh and dwelt among us, who lived a perfect life for me, who died the perfect death in my place, and whom God raised for me so that I could be saved from the penalty of sin, be forgiven, and be declared righteous!

Source: https://bibleteacher.org/2018/01/07/in-christ/

Return to*: Ephesians Highlights – Chapter 1 (Menu)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

CRU: The Believer's Position in Christ

https://www.cru.org/us/en/train-and-grow/spiritual-growth/core-christian-beliefs/the-believers-position-in-christ.html

Excerpt:

This study is about the believers' position in Christ Jesus.

I don't know of anything that is more crucial as a foundation to the Christian life, than for the believer to see what has been completed for him 'in Christ Jesus'. From Ephesians 2:7, we could say that this entire study is embraced within that wonderful phrase 'the riches of God's grace.'

So how do we define grace? A common definition is 'God's Riches At Christ's Expense'. Another definition is 'the unmerited favour of God'. Both of these are true definitions, but the one that I like the best is simply 'God's love set free'. You see grace incorporates all that God desired to do for mankind because of His love, which He is now free to perform, because His justice has been met through the sacrificial death of His son.

So, in acting righteously in view of the cross, God's love is now free to act as He wills! And oh how He has acted for the believer if only we could see it! Just as it says in the passage above, we have (past tense – when we first believed in Jesus) been blessed with every spiritual blessing in Christ, in accordance with His pleasure and will – to the praise of His glorious grace!

So this study will explore the riches of God's grace in regard to the believers' position in Christ. In most of Paul's letters there is a sharp distinction drawn between what God has done for us by grace, and how we are to live in view of this fact. The divine order that God has established through these letters is to first sit and learn of your position in Christ, and then, in view of this position, the exhortation is given to live a life consistent with your position.

In other words, the Christian life is becoming (in your experience) what you already are (in your position in Christ). This divine order is clearly seen in Ephesians, Colossians, and Romans amongst others. For example, and as a study of your own, please read the book of Ephesians and note down all that God has done for you and that which you are called to do yourself. You should see a sharp distinction between the first three chapters and the last three. (With the connection between the two starting at chapter 4, verse 1.) Commenting on Ephesians, Watchman Nee said:

> "Most Christians make the mistake of trying to walk in order to be able to sit, but that is a reversal of the true order. Our natural reason says, If we do not walk, how can we ever reach the goal? What can we attain without effort? How can we get anywhere if we do not move? But Christianity is a queer business! If at the outset we try to do anything, we miss everything. For Christianity begins not with a big DO, but with a big DONE. Thus Ephesians opens with the statement that God has 'blessed us with every spiritual blessing in the heavenly places in Christ' and we are invited at the outset to sit down and enjoy what God has done for us; not to set out to try and attain it for ourselves."

So the purpose of this study is to set forth that which is DONE, and through faith, enable you to rest in the finished work of Christ and your exalted position in Him! The framework for the following has been taken (somewhat loosely!) from Lewis Sperry Chafer's excellent book "Salvation." I recommend you read this book as it contains more than I could add here. Before looking at that which God has done for the believer in Christ, Chafer raises the following five points that are very important to remember.

1. These positions are not experienced, but are facts of the new life out of which precious experiences may grow. For example justification is not experienced but the joy and peace that occurs because of this fact will be.
2. The Christian positions are not progressive. They do not grow or develop from a small beginning. They are as perfect and complete the instant they are possessed as they ever will be in the ages to come. For example, sonship does not grow, as an old man is no more a son of his father at his death than he was at the day of his birth.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

3. These positions are in no way related to human merit. They are made to stand on the unchanging Person and merit of the Son of God. The Christian is 'accepted (now and forever) in the beloved.'
4. Every position is eternal by its very nature. The consciousness and personal realization of these positions may vary with the daily walk of the believer, but the abiding facts of the new being are never subject to change in time or eternity.
5. These positions are known only through divine revelation. They defy human imagination, and since they are not experienced, their reality can be entered into only by believing the Word of God. These eternal riches of grace are for the lowliest sinner who will only believe.

One more thought before you start racing through the list – Think! Yes, think about them. Meditate on them and what it means for you. You see, I've read lists like this before and I know the temptation to race through it. But I believe that these are truths that God would want to firmly establish within our hearts, for they glorify His character and show the extent of His work on the cross for us. So please, go slow, ask the Lord to reveal the truth in it, and mediate upon these things. Further on in his book Sit, Walk, Stand , Watchman Nee says:

> "Our Christian life begins with the discovery of what God has provided. From this point onwards Christian experience proceeds as it began, not on the basis of our own work but always on that of the finished work of another."

Every new spiritual experience begins with an acceptance by faith of what God has done – with a new 'sitting down' if you like.

As you read each point, remember also what has just been said in that these truths are eternal and are as true of you today (if you truly believe in Jesus) as they ever will be. They do not grow or increase, but are free gifts of God's amazing grace. That's why we say that the Christian life is becoming what you are. One more last point – failure. Failure is almost a prerequisite for enjoying what God has done. God has hidden these truths from the proud and self-confident and as such they seldom seem interested, or care to believe that these things be of great benefit. But to those who truly see their need of God, the things of grace become the greatest delight! May you enter in new experiences of God's love as you accept by faith that which God has done 'in Christ.'

THE RICHES OF GRACE IN CHRIST JESUS

All of the following is true of every genuine believer in Jesus Christ. It is God's gift to all through the 'riches of His grace in Christ Jesus.' These things are the result of His 'love set free!'

IN THE ETERNAL PLAN OF GOD

Before the world had even been created, God knew and chose those who would be saved, and in the course of time He called them to Himself. Do we fully understand it? No way! Not until He explains it all in heaven. Do we still believe it? Yes, both through the word of God and the experience of God's call upon our own lives.

Foreknown : Romans 8:29, "For whom He foreknew, He also predestined to become conformed to the image of His Son, that He might be the first-born among many brethren." (Also 1 Peter 1:2.)

Elect : 1 Thessalonians 1:4, "knowing, beloved brethren, your election by God." (Also Romans 8:33, Colossians 3:12, Titus 1:1.)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Predestined : Ephesians 1:11, “In Him also we have obtained an inheritance, being predestined according to the purpose of Him who works all things according to the counsel of His will.”

Chosen : 1 Peter 2:4, “Coming to Him as to a living stone, rejected indeed by men, but chosen by God and precious.” (Also Matthew 22:14.)

Called : Romans 9:11, “. . . that the purpose of God according to election might stand, not of works but of Him who calls.” (Also 1 Thessalonians 5:24.)

BROUGHT NEAR TO GOD

How near to God has Jesus brought the believer? In our position, just as near as Christ is himself! – In our experience, just as near as we wish to go! His blood has been poured out for the sins of the world and the temple curtain has been torn in two!

Reconciled : By God: 2 Corinthians 5:18, “Now all things are of God, who has reconciled us to Himself through Jesus Christ.” (Also Colossians 1:20.)

To God : Romans 5:10, “. . . when we were enemies we were reconciled to God through the death of His Son.” (Also 2 Corinthians 5:20.)

Redeemed : Colossians 1:14, “we have redemption through His blood, the forgiveness of sins.” (Also 1 Peter 1:18, Romans 3:24.)

Brought Near : Ephesians 2:13, “But now in Christ Jesus you who once were far off have been brought near by the blood of Christ.”

Given Access : Ephesians 2:18, “For through Him we both have access by one Spirit to the Father.” (Also Ephesians 3:12, Romans 5:2, Hebrews 4:14-16, 10:19- 20.)

CHILDREN OF GOD

Can someone born, then become be unborn? Can a son in a family somehow cease from being a son? Or can someone who has been adopted, be un-adopted? No, no, and finally, no! If you have been born into a family then you may change your name, but you cannot change your D.N.A and you are forever a son of your father. The same applies for our spiritual birth! The believer is a son of God Himself, born again of incorruptible seed and because of this we cry ‘Abba Father!’ – literally ‘daddy’.

Born again : 1 Peter 1:23, “. . . having been born again, not of corruptible seed but incorruptible.” (Also John 1:12, 3:7.)

Sons of God : 1 John 3:2, “Beloved, now we are sons of God.” (Also 2 Corinthians 6:18, Galatians 3:26.)

New Creation : 2 Corinthians 5:17, “Therefore, if anyone is in Christ, he is a new creation.” (Also Galatians 6:15, Ephesians 2:10.)

Adopted : Romans 8:15, “you received the Spirit of adoption by whom we cry out, ‘Abba, Father.’” (Also Galatians 4:5.)

Heirs : Galatians 4:7, “Therefore you are no longer a slave but a son, and if a son, then an heir of God through Christ.”

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

TOTALLY ACCEPTABLE TO GOD THROUGH JESUS CHRIST!

A good question is 'Do you have to be perfect to go to Heaven?' Most say no, as no one is perfect. Yet could a perfectly holy God allow anything less than perfection into His presence? Obviously not! The answer is therefore yes, you do have to be perfect, but how could this ever be achieved by a sinful creation? In Christ, righteousness and perfection is a gift! His declaration is that believers are forever justified – a position that not only means 'just as if I had never sinned', but also, 'just as if I had done everything right!' Wow!

Justified : Romans 5:1, "Therefore, having been justified by faith, we have peace with God." (Also Romans 3:24, 8:30, 1 Corinthians 6:11, Titus 3:7.)

Righteous : Philippians 3:8,9, ". . . that I may gain Christ and be found in him, not having a righteousness of my own that comes from the law, but that which is through faith in Christ." (Also Romans 3:22, 5:17, 10:3-4, 1 Corinthians 1:30, 2 Corinthians 5:21.)

Sanctified : 1 Corinthians 1:30, "Christ Jesus, who became for us... sanctification." (Also 1 Corinthians 6:11, Hebrews 10:10.)

Made Perfect : Hebrews 10:14, "by one sacrifice he has made perfect forever those who are being made holy." (Also see Hebrews 10:1-2 for the results of being 'made perfect'.)

Accepted : Ephesians 1:6, "to the praise of the glory of His grace, by which He has made us accepted in the Beloved." (Also 1 Peter 2:5.)

Forgiven : Colossians 2:13, "God made you alive with Christ. He forgave us all our sins." (Also Colossians 1:14, 3:13, Ephesians 1:7, 4:32.)

Complete : Colossians 2:10, "And you are complete in Him."'

FOREVER UNITED AND JOINED WITH CHRIST

Watchman Nee once said "If I place a piece of paper in a book and burn the book, where is the piece of paper?" No prize for saying that it has gone, as it has been burned as well. In like manner, believers have been placed 'in Christ', so that whatever has happened to Christ has also happened them. When Jesus died and rose again, so did we spiritually, and never again will God see a believer as anything other than a new creation 'in Christ Jesus'. We are forever united and joined to Christ and His history is our history!

Crucified : Romans 6:6, "For we know that our old self was crucified with him so that the body of sin might be done away with." (Also Galatians 2:20.)

Dead : Romans 6:8, "Now if we died with Christ, we believe that we will also live with him." (Also Colossians 3:3.)

Buried : Romans 6:4, "We were therefore buried with him through baptism." (Also Colossians 2:12.)

Raised : Colossians 3:1, "Since, then, you have been raised with Christ, set your hearts on things above, where Christ is seated at the right hand of God." (Also Romans 6:4.)

Ascended : Ephesians 2:6, "And God raised us up with Christ and seated us with him in the heavenly realms in Christ Jesus."

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

JESUS' VERY OWN POSSESSION

In a parable about the kingdom of God, Jesus likened Himself to a man who found a treasure in a field. And because of His immense joy, He sold all that He had so that He could purchase that field. The treasure within the field stands for those in the world who believe in His name. For them, He was willing to give up all that He had (His life) and 'for the joy set before Him, He endured the cross!' We are the Fathers gift to the Son, His bride, His inheritance and His joy! Amazing.

His Gift : John 6:37, "All that the Father gives Me, will come to Me, and the one who comes to Me, I will certainly not cast out.'' (Also 10:29, 17:6,11,12,20)

His Bride : 2 Corinthians 11:2, "I promised you to one husband, to Christ." (Also Ephesians 5:25-32, Revelation 19:7, John 3:29.)

His Inheritance : Ephesians 1:18, "that you may know the hope to which he has called you, the riches of his glorious inheritance in the saints."

His Possession : Ephesians 1:14, ". . . who is a deposit guaranteeing our inheritance until the redemption of those who are God's possession."

BLESSED WITH THE HOLY SPIRIT

Each believer is also given the Holy Spirit, not only as our means of living the Christian life in this age, but also as a guarantee that as God's possession we will participate in the glory of the age to come! There is no true Christian alive that has not been given the Holy Spirit.

Born : John 3:6, "Flesh gives birth to flesh, but the Spirit gives birth to spirit."

Baptized : 1 Corinthians 12:13, "For by one Spirit we are all baptized into one body."

Indwelt : 1 Corinthians 6:19, "Do you not know that your body is a temple of the Holy Spirit, who is in you?" (Also 2:12, John 7:39, Romans 5:5, 8:9, 2 Corinthians 1:21, Galatians 4:6.)

Sealed : Ephesians 1:13-14, "having believed, you were sealed with the Holy Spirit of promise, who is the guarantee of our inheritance."

WITHIN THE 'MUCH MORE' CARE OF GOD (ROMANS 5:10)

Think of it – when we were sinners and enemies of God, He fully justified us from every charge because our faith in the work of His precious son Jesus. How much more now, as His treasured possession, will believers find themselves the object of His care!

Objects of His Love : Ephesians 2:4, "But God, who is rich in mercy, because of His great love with which He loved us..." (Also 5:2, 1 John 3:1.)

Objects of His Grace : Romans 5:2, "through whom we have gained access by faith into this grace in which we now stand." (Also Ephesians 2:7,8 Titus 2:12,13.)

Objects of His Power : Ephesians 1:19, "and his incomparably great power for us who believe." (Also Philippians 2:13, 1 Peter 1:5.)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Objects of His Faithfulness : Hebrews 13:5, "For He has said 'I will never leave you or forsake you." (Also Philippians 1:6, 1 Corinthians 1:8-9, Jude 24.)

Objects of His Peace : Philippians 4:9, "the God of peace will be with you." (Also 4:7.)

Objects of His Encouragement : 1 Thessalonians 2:16, "by his grace gave us eternal encouragement and good hope." (Also Romans 15:4-5.)

Objects if His Intercession : Hebrews 7:25, "Therefore he is able to save completely those who come to God through him, because he always lives to intercede for them." (Also Romans 8:34, Hebrews 9:24.)

A HEAVENLY HOME ASSURED

Last, but most important of all, He has given us a heavenly citizenship – where we will be fellow heirs with the King of Kings! We live as strangers and exiles on this earth, far from our true home to come. We are ambassadors of God in a country not our own. But our heavenly home is assured and our inheritance is waiting, kept safe by God himself!

Heavenly Citizens : Philippians 3:20, "For our citizenship is in heaven." (Also Ephesians 2:19, Hebrews 12:22.)

God's Household : Ephesians 2:19, ". . . but fellow citizens with God's people and members of God's household." (Also 3:15, Galatians 6:10.)

Heavenly Inheritance : 1 Pet 1:4-5, ". . . and into an inheritance that can never perish, spoil or fade—kept in heaven for you, who through faith are shielded by God's power." (Also Ephesians 1:14, Colossians 3:24, Hebrews 9:15.)

One last thought... from the simplicity of a flower to complexity of space, the more mankind explores the work of God. The more we stand in awe of its perfection. We can now examine the properties of God's creation right down into the cellular level, and this only confirms the thought that God has intelligently created everything and His work is perfect and complete. With such a creative and all-powerful God, do you think He would complete anything less than perfection in His most important work – our salvation? The riches of His grace detailed above are just part of the fact that confirm that He has indeed completed His most perfect work in those that believe! The new creation is the most wondrous of all His creations!

Ok, so there is still one more thought...but it is something awesome to consider. Commenting on the entire list of the work done for the believer, Lewis Sperry Chafer wrote the following:

The "riches of God's grace," that is, His love set free, is incredible! I hope you have seen something more of His amazing work for everyone who has been born again. But like Chafer says, it's only the beginning! One day, when He comes again, the process shall be complete and we shall be changed into His very likeness. And then, for the ages that are to come, His bride shall be a visible witness to the incredible kindness and grace of God. (Ephesians 2:7) Let me end with a quote which seems appropriate and will one day be reality...

> These marvels of grace constitute that 'good work' which He has but begun in those who trust Him. To this much more is yet to be added according to Phil 1.6 "He that began a good work in you will carry it on until the day of Christ Jesus." The 'riches of grace' are the beginning; the final presentation in glory in the likeness of Christ will be the completion. Such a final perfection and such an eternal being is the greatest divine undertaking for the one who has been lost in sin. Nothing less than this would satisfy His boundless love.

"Grace is but Glory begun, and Glory is but Grace perfected." — Jonathan Edwards

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

A Study of "In Christ"

http://www.bibletruths.net/Archives/BTARO90.htm

Excerpt:

Paul wrote, "There is therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus" (Rom. 8: 1). Being in Christ, as we shall see, is urgently important. There are no fewer than thirteen different Greek prepositions translated "in" (King James Version). Though the object of this material is not to critique the translation of these different prepositions as "in" in all their occurrences, suffice us to say that the King James translation did not always adhere to strict grammatical rules as to the technical differences between "in," "into," "unto," "out of," and "by." In general, the Greek preposition "en" (one preposition translated "in") simply denotes location or sphere (see addendum 1). There are other phrases involving "en" that essentially often denote the same basic meaning as "in Christ" (more later).

"In Christ" or its equivalent as used in Ephesians. The phrase "in Christ" or its equal is used about 27 times by Paul in his letter to the church at Ephesus. He addressed the Ephesian Christians as "faithful in Christ Jesus" (Eph. 1: 1). Sometimes Paul simply wrote "in him," Christ being the antecedent (Eph. 1: 4, 7, 11, 2: 21, 22, etc.). However, "in Christ" or "in Christ Jesus" is a recurring phrase. The expression "in Christ," as often used in Ephesians, is explained as follows: "This expression 'in Christ' is one of the hinges of the epistle….denoting the intimate vital union through faith between Christ and his people" (The Pulpit Commentary).

"In Christ" or "in the Lord" in general has a number of fine shades or nuances in its use in Holy Writ. The simple and often intended meaning of "in Christ" or "in the Lord" is to denote a relation with Christ. Hence, Paul wrote, "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who hath blessed us with all spiritual blessings in heavenly places in Christ" (Eph. 1: 3). In these instances of "in Christ," to be in Christ is tantamount to being in his spiritual body, his church (Eph. 1: 22, 23). However, the science of semantics requires that we recognize that we cannot assign to "in Christ" a universal, inflexible, and exclusive meaning. For instance, Paul wrote "This I say therefore, and testify in the Lord…" (Eph. 4: 17). Did he mean, "I testify in the church?" The meaning is apparently "I testify in harmony with Christ, by his power, and in the domain of his guidance" (an affirmation of Paul's inspiration). Paul wrote that children are to obey their parents "in the Lord" (Eph. 6: 1). Here "in the Lord" (en kurio) is obviously and simply saying "in harmony with the Lord's will" (cp. Col. 3: 18, Acts 5: 29, see addendum 2). All children are obligated to obey their parents. It is in this same vein that Paul wrote, "For ye, brethren, became followers of the churches of God which in Judae are in Christ Jesus…" (I Thes. 2: 14).

At this time, let us briefly consider I Corinthians 7: 39. The verse reads, "The wife is bound by the law as long as her husband liveth; but if her husband be dead, she is at liberty to be married to whom she will; only in the Lord." Does the expression "only in the Lord" (monon en kurio) only apply to a widow? Does "only in the Lord" mean she must marry a Christian? If Paul had wanted to teach the widow is to marry a Christian, why did not he simply say so instead of employing an expression that does not flow with the action. Paul would literally be saying, "marry in the church." How does one "marry in the church?" The language is awkward. However, the nuance "according to the will of the Lord" smoothly flows and is in harmony with the context. (See addendum 2.)

Beloved, being in Christ, whether sphere is meant, as such, as in the church or the idea of in consistency with the Lord's will in a technical differentiation, is essential to our spiritual well being. It is in Christ that one is a new creature, the love of God is enjoyed, and redemption is experienced (2 Cor. 5: 7; Rom. 3: 24; 8: 39). Moreover, purity is in Christ, we are begotten in Christ, and sanctification is in Christ (2 Cor. 11: 3; I Cor. 4: 15; I Cor. 1: 2).

The means of entry into Christ. Since being in Christ is so vitally important, how does one gain access into Jesus Christ? Beloved, the scriptures are plain in this matter: "For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ," Paul wrote (Gal. 3: 27). Please appreciate the fact that Paul wrote, "baptized into Christ" (eis christon). I point this out to stress the fact Paul did not teach man is baptized "in Christ." You see, most of the religious world teaches that man is already in Christ (saved) when he is baptized; hence, baptized in Christ. The preposition "eis" (not "en") is always used with reference to forward thrust or to obtain (gain entrance, in this case). (See addendum 3.) Hence, "Christ" (christon) in Galatians 3: 27 is in the accusative case (The Analytical Greek Lexicon, pg. 439).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Addendum 1: En is used with the dative case (New Testament Greek for Beginners, pg. 40, 41, by J. Gresham Machen). The dative case corresponds to the locative, some grammarians list eight cases rather than the five taught by Machen. The locative case is the "in case" (Beginner's Grammar of the Greek New Testament by Davis, pg. 43, 29).

Addendum 2: Paul had just taught in verses 12-14 that the believer was to remain married to the unbeliever. Why would he now, in the same context, issue a command that the widow must only marry "in the church" (whatever that means) or marry a Christian, as some like to arbitrarily inject. Does it not make more sense to say that Paul is evidently teaching by the phrase "only in the Lord" that the widow (inclusive of all) must not marry one who has no right to marry, for instance?

Concerned readers, even though I do all I can to encourage Christians to marry Christians, I become rather upset when I hear I Corinthians 7: 39 used to teach that a Christian must marry a Christian. Do not we realize that if this is the case, the Christian who marries a non-Christian is in fornication and is producing illegitimate children? Such "marriages" must be dissolved, to be consistent. Yet, Paul said the believer and unbeliever are to remain together. Remain in fornication? Certainly not.

I have witnessed the above view encourage such false doctrines as are rampant today that involve laxity toward the unscripturally married. "Yes, it is automatically a sin for a Christian to marry a non-Christian," some say, "but they can repent and remain together." Such views pervert and make a mockery out of repentance!

Fellow students, there is no man who can prove beyond all doubt that "only in the Lord" means a Christian. I meant what I said, no man. However, we can prove in general that the widow and all others must marry "according to the will of the Lord." We are in trouble when we start playing down a generic and inserting a specific. If Paul had wanted to say "a Christian," he would have said so in plain, unambiguous language (typical of language involving a command). However, he did not.

Addendum 3: Machen wrote, "The preposition en, meaning in, always takes the dative case. Thus in the house is expressed by en to oiko; in the truth by en te aletheia, etc. The preposition eis, meaning into, on the other hand, always takes the accusative. Thus into the house is expressed by eis ton oikon" (New Testament Greek for Beginners, pg. 40).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

What Does It Mean To Be "In Christ"

http://www.secureandstrong.com/2013/10/what-does-it-mean-to-be-in-christ.html

Excerpt:

Lately, this seems to be the million dollar question.

Our life group is currently studying through Ephesians. We meet every Thursday night to unpack a handful of verses in Paul's letter, to discuss, share and pray. Nine young women, hungry for the Word, sit thoughtfully in a circle, meditating on how the Gospel changes hearts, minds, and the entirety of our lives.

We find ourselves astounded. Curious. Overwhelmed. Filled with joy. Perplexed. Altogether engaged in living out the riches that we have received by being in Christ Jesus. What it means to be "in Christ" is so simple...yet so complex. Thank the Lord He allows us a lifetime of grace to understand this truth, while we seek to live our lives with Christ as the center.

I deeply desire for my identity in Christ to translate not solely to my head, but ultimately to my heart. What about you? This would mean that every day we are becoming increasingly more caught up and in tune with our identity in Christ.

Being in Christ is the reality of the believer--yet so often we do not live as though we believe our identity in Him to be true.

See if any of the following scenarios resonate with you:

I pray for peace/patience/love/joy when all are already mine to claim in Christ (Galatians 5:22-23).

I grasp for earthly recognition when I have already been accepted in Christ (Hebrews 4:14-16).

I put my hope in beauty and material things, even though my eternal inheritance is in Christ (Colossians 1:11-12).

I strive to perform for God when He has already lavished His grace upon me in Christ (Ephesians 1:7-8).

I compare the gifts I have been given to others' gifts, though I am God's workmanship, created in Christ (Ephesians 2:10).

I try to defeat sin and be perfect in my own strength, when in Christ I already have victory over sin and death (1 Corinthians 15:56-57).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

I listen to the enemy's lies when, in Christ, I have been given the whole armor of God: the Word of truth, the Holy Spirit and the Gospel of peace (Ephesians 6:10-20).

Do any of the above statements sound like you? If so, please know that God's lavish grace is sufficient for our weaknesses! He longs to transform us, day by day, into the image of Christ by making our identity in Christ our living, breathing reality. He does this through the working of His Spirit within us.

It is my prayer that all those in Christ actually live like we believe it! So what exactly does it mean to be in Christ? Here are three thoughts:

ONE: To be "in Christ" means to be united to Christ. Christ becomes the representative of all who believe in Him by faith. Though once we were estranged from God, Christ reconciled us to the Father by His blood on the cross. His unstained record becomes our record, as He represents us to the Father and intercedes for us (think of a trial--Christ comes before the Judge (God) pleading for us, His perfect record exchanged for our sinful one). We are no longer of the world, or of the flesh, because we have been united to Christ, our representative.

This means freedom from guilt, materialism, idolatry, striving--we are no longer of the world! The list goes on and on!

TWO: To be "in Christ" means to partake of the life of Christ. A "partaker" is one who shares in, claims a portion of, and has something of the nature and character of another. Think about that: You partake of Christ's very life, which was perfect on earth and is now exalted in heaven! Because Christ is our representative, our lives share in His life; we are holy, blameless and without fault in the sight of God. We also gain an assured inheritance in eternity.

This means that all of Christ's riches are ours to claim: love, joy, peace, patience, faithfulness, self-control, hope and on and on! We need not live like paupers; we have the riches of Christ.

THREE: To be "in Christ" means to have His Spirit dwelling within us. In Christ, we partake in His life, which means the Holy Spirit dwells within us. Our struggle with sin will not be over until Christ comes again, but we have the Spirit as a guarantee of what is to come--Christ-likeness and the total defeat of sin and death! God works in us through the Spirit to will and work for His good pleasure (Philippians 2:13).

This means that we can submit to the Spirit's work in us, trust Him to lead us, and believe in His truth above all other lifeless versions the world has to offer us.

I don't know about you, but after reading about all my benefits in Christ Jesus, my earthly battles and narrow mindsets seem so temporary and insignificant. I want to defeat them with the truth! Will you claim with me the life of Christ and ask God to impart to us a deeper knowledge of His love?

Heavenly Father, Thank You for uniting us to Christ! You made a way which we never could do ourselves. Strengthen us to live like we believe it. Help us to know more deeply the love of Christ that surpasses knowledge, and to be more like Him every day.

Amen.

Which of these truths about being in Christ do you need to claim today?

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

What It Means to be In Christ

http://www.myredeemer.org/foundation/identity/in_christ.shtml

Excerpt:

Now, about this phrase "in Christ"

God must consider it to be very important because those exact words (or ones very similar) are found in the New Testament over 170 times.

The transition from being "out of Christ" (in the dark, lost, dead) to being "in Christ" (in the light, saved, alive) can really be a stretch of our understanding. To get us started thinking in terms that we can comprehend, God gave us water baptism. It can be thought of as a marvelous one-act play demonstrating how a new believer becomes that new creation described earlier. When you get time later, take a look at the section about baptism and read more about its significance in Christianity. In the meantime, this passage from Romans chapter 6 describes what happens when we become a new creation in Christ.

Or don't you know that all of us who were baptized into Christ Jesus were baptized into his death? We were therefore buried with him through baptism into death in order that, just as Christ was raised from the dead through the glory of the Father, we too may live a new life. If we have been united with him like this in his death, we will certainly also be united with him in his resurrection. For we know that our old self was crucified with him so that the body of sin might be done away with, that we should no longer be slaves to sin– because anyone who has died has been freed from sin. Now if we died with Christ, we believe that we will also live with him. For we know that since Christ was raised from the dead, he cannot die again; death no longer has mastery over him. The death he died, he died to sin once for all; but the life he lives, he lives to God. In the same way, count yourselves dead to sin but alive to God in Christ Jesus. (Romans 6:3-11)

"Baptized into" means "joined with." When you were joined with Christ Jesus you joined Him in His crucifixion, His death, and His resurrection. The message here is that you took on His identity. It's not a coincidence that the same practice has been a part of marriage from the earliest times. The wife is expected to take on the identity of her husband; she shares everything he is and everything that he possesses –at least that's the way marriage was intended to be. And that's the way it is with Christ and His bride –the church –us.

In summary: Because your identity is "in Christ"

- You have joined Him in His death, burial, and resurrection
- Your old identity is gone and your new identity is eternal
- You have been given the righteousness of God

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Knowing Who I Am in Christ

https://www.joycemeyer.org/everydayanswers/ea-teachings/knowing-who-i-am-in-christ

Excerpt:

Not sure who you really are? Read this list of Biblical truths that reveal who God made you to be.

I am complete in Him Who is the Head of all principality and power (Colossians 2:10).

I am alive with Christ (Ephesians 2:5).

I am free from the law of sin and death (Romans 8:2).

I am far from oppression, and fear does not come near me (Isaiah 54:14).

I am born of God, and the evil one does not touch me (1 John 5:18).

I am holy and without blame before Him in love (Ephesians 1:4; 1 Peter 1:16).

I have the mind of Christ (1 Corinthians 2:16; Philippians 2:5).

I have the peace of God that passes all understanding (Philippians 4:7).

I have the Greater One living in me; greater is He Who is in me than he who is in the world (1 John 4:4).

I have received the gift of righteousness and reign as a king in life by Jesus Christ (Romans 5:17).

I have received the spirit of wisdom and revelation in the knowledge of Jesus, the eyes of my understanding being enlightened (Ephesians 1:17-18).

I have received the power of the Holy Spirit to lay hands on the sick and see them recover, to cast out demons, to speak with new tongues. I have power over all the power of the enemy, and nothing shall by any means harm me (Mark 16:17-18; Luke 10:17-19).

I have put off the old man and have put on the new man, which is renewed in the knowledge after the image of Him Who created me (Colossians 3:9-10).

I have given, and it is given to me; good measure, pressed down, shaken together, and running over, men give into my bosom (Luke 6:38).

I have no lack for my God supplies all of my need according to His riches in glory by Christ Jesus (Philippians 4:19).

I can quench all the fiery darts of the wicked one with my shield of faith (Ephesians 6:16).

I can do all things through Christ Jesus (Philippians 4:13).

I show forth the praises of God Who has called me out of darkness into His marvelous light (1 Peter 2:9).

I am God's child for I am born again of the incorruptible seed of the Word of God, which lives and abides forever (1 Peter 1:23).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

I am God's workmanship, created in Christ unto good works (Ephesians 2:10).

I am a new creature in Christ (2 Corinthians 5:17).

I am a spirit being alive to God (Romans 6:11; Thessalonians 5:23).

I am a believer, and the light of the Gospel shines in my mind (2 Corinthians 4:4).

I am a doer of the Word and blessed in my actions (James 1:22,25).

I am a joint-heir with Christ (Romans 8:17).

I am more than a conqueror through Him Who loves me (Romans 8:37).

I am an overcomer by the blood of the Lamb and the word of my testimony (Revelation 12:11).

I am a partaker of His divine nature (2 Peter 1:3-4).

I am an ambassador for Christ (2 Corinthians 5:20).

I am part of a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, a holy nation, a purchased people (1 Peter 2:9).

I am the righteousness of God in Jesus Christ (2 Corinthians 5:21).

I am the temple of the Holy Spirit; I am not my own (1 Corinthians 6:19).

I am the head and not the tail; I am above only and not beneath (Deuteronomy 28:13).

I am the light of the world (Matthew 5:14).

I am His elect, full of mercy, kindness, humility, and long suffering (Romans 8:33; Colossians 3:12).

I am forgiven of all my sins and washed in the Blood (Ephesians 1:7).

I am delivered from the power of darkness and translated into God's kingdom (Colossians 1:13).

I am redeemed from the curse of sin, sickness, and poverty (Deuteronomy 28:15-68; Galatians 3:13).

I am firmly rooted, built up, established in my faith and overflowing with gratitude (Colossians 2:7).

I am called of God to be the voice of His praise (Psalm 66:8; 2 Timothy 1:9).

I am healed by the stripes of Jesus (Isaiah 53:5; 1 Peter 2:24).

I am raised up with Christ and seated in heavenly places (Ephesians 2:6; Colossians 2:12).

I am greatly loved by God (Romans 1:7; Ephesians 2:4; Colossians 3:12; 1 Thessalonians 1:4).

I am strengthened with all might according to His glorious power (Colossians 1:11).

I am submitted to God, and the devil flees from me because I resist him in the Name of Jesus (James 4:7).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

I press on toward the goal to win the prize to which God in Christ Jesus is calling us upward (Philippians 3:14).

For God has not given us a spirit of fear; but of power, love, and a sound mind (2 Timothy 1:7).

It is not I who live, but Christ lives in me (Galatians 2:20).

Who I am in Christ

Who I am in Christ		1 I am a child of God John 1:12 Romans 8:16 1John 3:1-3	2 I am an heir with all who are in Christ Galatians 3:26-29	3 I can call the Lord "Abba Father" Galatians 4:6-7	4 I am His people, a chosen generation 1Peter 2:9-10	5 I am the salt of the earth Matthew 5:13
6 I am the light of the world Matthew 5:14	7 I am a branch of the true vine John 15:1, 5	8 I have been appointed to bear fruit John 15:16	9 I am Christ's personal witness John 15:16	10 I am God's temple 1Corinthians 3:16	11 I am a minister of reconciliation for God 2Corinthians 5:17	12 I am God's co-worker 1Corinthians 3:9 2Corinthians 6:1

Return to*: Ephesians Highlights – Chapter 1 (Menu)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

Ephesians Highlights (by Chapter, Main Menu)

See also*: Christ IN – AS – THROUGH Us

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Source: https://sharonjaynes.com/product/identity-in-christ-prayer-card/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Baptized Into Christ

http://www.lockportchurch.com/resources/bible-course/34-lesson-17-baptized-into-christ.html

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Christ in us; Christ as us; Christ through us

A study of the subjective indwelling of Christ in the Christian individual.
http://www.christinyou.net/pages/inasthrough.html [Downloadable as a PDF]

Excerpts:

Christ in us

Despite the attempts of Protestantism to objectify the benefits of Christ's work in an almost paranoid aversion to anything other than "alien righteousness," there have been evangelical Christians throughout the ages who have understood that the Person and work of Jesus Christ must not be only extrinsically applied, but that the living Person and activity of Christ indwells the spirit of the Christian. This fundamental reality of Christ's actual and spiritual presence within the Christian individual is so well-attested by direct New Testament references that those who "search the Scriptures" and are receptive to spiritual reality invariably recognize the indwelling presence of the living Christ.

Jesus Himself explained that He would give another Helper, the Spirit of truth, and His disciples would know that they were in Him, and He was in them (John 14:20). In His prayer for unity Jesus explained that He would be in His followers as God the Father was in Him, the Son (John 17:23).

The Apostle Paul clearly noted that the mystery of the gospel is "Christ in you, the hope of glory" (Col. 1:27). He asked the Corinthians, "Do you not recognize that Jesus Christ is in you?" (II Cor. 13:5), unless you are not a Christian. The essential reality that constitutes being a Christian is the indwelling presence of the Spirit of Christ. "If anyone does not have the Spirit of Christ, he does not belong to Him" (Rom. 8:9), i.e. is not a Christian. Continuing his explanation to the Romans, Paul wrote, "If Christ is in you,...the spirit is alive because of righteousness. If the Spirit of Him who raised Jesus from the dead dwells in you, He who raised Christ Jesus from the dead will also give life to your mortal bodies through His Spirit who indwells you" (Rom. 8:10,11). The Holy Spirit, the Spirit of Christ, dwells in the Christian (cf. John 14:17; Rom. 8:9-11; I Cor. 6:19; II Tim. 1:14; James 4:5), and "bears witness with our spirit that we are children of God" (Rom. 8:16)…

Christ as us

For some readers this will be a phrase they have not previously encountered in popular Christian literature. They may have heard of "Christ in us" and Christ through us," but not "Christ as us." Admittedly, there is no explicit use of the phrase "Christ as us" in the New Testament, and this makes the phrase suspect in the minds of some Christians. The absence of a direct use of the phrase does not negate its legitimate expression of a Biblical and spiritual concept, however. If that were the case, we would have to deny the use of the words "trinity" and "rapture," for these are words not used in Scripture, but they most certainly express Biblical concepts and are commonly employed in Christian terminology. In like manner, "Christ as us" is a phrase that conveys an important Biblical theme not fully encompassed in the other phrases.

As noted above, "Christ in us" refers in its primary meaning to the location and placement of the presence of Christ within the spirit of a receptive individual. In its secondary meaning it refers to "Christ by means of us," but still does not carry with it the connotation of what the believer has become because of the presence and function of Jesus Christ within. Are we merely an occupied spirit-space? Or an invaded spirit-being? Or are we something/someone that we were not before we became a Christian? Did the spiritual exchange create a change in us? When we are regeneratively "brought into being again" are we different than we were previously? Or did we just receive an "eternal life" package by the placement of the Spirit of Christ within the location of our spirit?

The Biblical evidence reveals that the Christian becomes something or someone that he/she was not prior to becoming a Christian. Paul explains that "if anyone is in Christ, he is a new creature; the old things have passed away; behold all things have become new" (II Cor. 5:17). The unregenerate "old man"

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

(Eph. 4:22; Col. 3:9), worthy of death by personal accountability for sin, "has been crucified with Christ" (Rom. 6:6). Now by spiritual regeneration Christians have become a "new man" (Eph. 4:24; Col. 3:10) in Christ. Christians are transformed from being "a natural man" (I Cor. 2:14) into being "spiritual men" (I Cor. 3:1. Whereas they once were "children of the devil" (I John 3:10) and "sons of disobedience" (Eph. 2:2; 5:6), they are now "children of God" (John 1:12; Rom. 8:16; I John 3:1,2,10) and "sons of God" (Rom. 8:14,17; II Cor. 6:18; Gal. 3:26; 4:6,7; Heb. 2:10). By the presence and function of Jesus Christ within their spirit, believers are identified as "Christians" (Acts 11:26; I Pet. 4:16), indicating that they are Christ-ones.

All of these Biblical expressions and designations evidence the new identity of the one in whom Christ dwells and lives. Regeneration, the indwelling presence of the living Lord Jesus, does have the effect of making a person something that he was not before, a "new creature" with a new identity. Who we are as Christians is based on Who Christ is in us and as us, constituting us as Christ-ones. "Christ as us" is, therefore, a phrase that expresses our new identity in a way that the other phrases cannot convey.

Some might object that the "Christ as us" phrase, dealing as it does with identity, is just addressing a psychological need of modern man to have an individualized sense of self-identity, self-image, self-awareness, self-consciousness, self-concept, self-worth, etc. Not so! The phrase is not used to explain a psychological need or phenomenon, but to explain a spiritual reality of the Christian life that has an abundance of Scriptural statements relating to the fact that the Christian has become something and someone that he/she was not previously. At the very core of our being, in the innermost function of the human spirit, the Christian has become a new person with a new identity. Psychology deals with the distinctive of our individuality in differing personalities, often referred to as a "perceived sense of identity in the psyche," but the deepest level of identity is always in the spirit of a person, and that in derived association and union with the spiritual being that indwells that person's spirit.

"Christ as us" refers to our identity as Christians by reason of His real spiritual presence and His being who He is in us. "Christ is our life" (Col. 3:4), and Christians "live together with" (I Thess. 5:10) and "through" (I John 4:9) Him. "Christ has become to us righteousness" (I Cor. 1:30). "We become the righteousness of God in Him" (II Cor. 5:21) when we are "created in righteousness" (Eph. 4:24) as a "new man" and are "made righteous" (Rom. 5:19). As "new creatures in Christ" (II Cor. 5:17), Christians are "created in holiness" (Eph. 4:24) and are "holy and beloved" (Col. 3:12) as "holy ones" or "saints" (cf. Rom. 1:7; 8:27; Eph. 1:18; 4:12). In Christ we are "perfect" (Phil. 3:15) and "sanctified" (Heb. 10:14) as "righteous men made perfect" (Heb. 12:23), for Christ "has become to us wisdom and sanctification" (I Cor. 1:24,30).

Jesus Christ becomes the basis of the spiritual identity of the Christian, but we must always understand that this is a derived identity, a derived life, a derived righteousness, holiness and perfection. These are not realities that we have become essentially or inherently in and by ourselves, but only by His presence within us. We are made righteous only because Christ, the "Righteous One" (Acts 3:14; 7:52; 22:14; I John 2:1) dwells and functions in us and as us. Christians are only said to be "holy" and "perfect" because Jesus Christ is the "Holy One" (Acts 3:14; 4:27,30), the One "made perfect forever" (Heb. 7:28), who has become the basis of our derived identity.

"Christ as us" is another way of referring to the Christian's "union with Christ" which has been a part of Christian understanding from the beginning of the Church. Christian thinkers have often struggled, however, to explain and articulate what Paul meant by his statement that "the one being joined to the Lord is one spirit (with Him)" (I Cor. 6:17). Likewise, they have shied away from Peter's assertion that Christians "have become partakers of divine nature" (II Peter 1:4). Clinging to the Greek humanistic idea of an inherent "human nature," Christians have often been blinded to the Scriptural explanation that "we were by nature (Greek phusis) children of wrath" (Eph. 2:3) in our unregenerate spiritual condition, when "the prince of the power of the air, the spirit that works in the sons of disobedience" (Eph. 2:2) was indwelling and operative in us, but we are now "partakers of the divine nature (phusis)" (II Pet. 1:4), by the presence and function of "the Spirit of Christ" (Rom. 8:9) within the spirit of the Christian (cf. Rom. 8:16).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Being "partakers (koinonoi) of the divine nature" (II Pet. 1:4) and "partakers (metachoi) of Christ" (Heb. 3:14) implies that Christians are participants in Christ, sharing in the commonality of His nature and identity in spiritual union with Him. This participatory fellowship (koinonia) with the living Lord Jesus (I Cor. 1:9), with God the Father (I John 1:3,6), and with the Holy Spirit (Phil. 2:1) indicates a spiritual union with the Triune Godhead…

Christ through us

Jesus Christ functionally expressing His life as us necessarily merges into an understanding of "Christ through us." As previously explained, the operational union of Christ as us, expressing His life and character through our behavior, was addressed in the previous section, whereas Christ functioning through us in extension to other persons will be the focus of our explanation here. These concepts are obviously integrated and should not be made into rigid categories or definitions. Much of our explanation of Christ's operational function as us could just as well have been explained as Christ's functional expression through us."

Having noted how the character of Christ is expressed in Christian behavior by "the fruit of the Spirit" (Gal. 5:22,23), we now note that the ministry of Christ is performed through us by the "gifts of the Spirit" (cf. Rom. 12; I Cor. 12; Eph. 4:8-16). The "fruit of the Spirit" has to do with the functional expression of the character of Christ, while the "gifts of the Spirit" have to do with the ministry of Christ to others in the context of the Body of Christ. It is most lamentable that in many portions of the Church today the "gifts of the Spirit" are regarded as marks of spirituality or trophies of spiritual possession, rather than as the means of Christ's ministry through Christians. The "gifts of the Spirit" should not be viewed as separated or detached entities or abilities, but only as the functional grace-expressions by which Christ ministers through any Christian in a given situation of another's need. (cf. Fowler, Charismata: the so-called "Spiritual Gifts")

The ministry activity of Jesus Christ during His historical, earthly ministry was accomplished as "the man Christ Jesus" (I Tim. 2:5) was the "man attested by God with miracles and wonders and signs which God performed through Him" (Acts 2:22). Jesus carefully explained that He did nothing of His own initiative (Jn. 5:19,30; 8:28; 12:49; 14:10), but declared, "the Father abiding in Me does His works" (Jn. 14:10). How did Jesus do what He did in His earthly ministry? Even the "miracles and wonders and signs" were what "God performed through Him."

Doctor Luke later writes that "the multitude were listening to Barnabas and Paul as they were relating what signs and wonders God had done through them among the Gentiles" (Acts 15:12). In like manner as Jesus ministered by being receptive to God's activity through Him, the apostles ministered in supernatural ways as God functioned through them. Writing to the Romans, Paul explained, "I do not presume to speak of anything except what Christ has accomplished through me, resulting in the obedience of the Gentiles by word and deed, in the power of signs and wonders, in the power of the Spirit" (Rom. 15:18,19). This is obviously a very explicit reference to Christ's function through the Christian.

The Greek word used in these references just cited is the Greek preposition dia which has a primary and direct meaning of procession through an object, place, or person. It often conveys the meaning of extension through that goes beyond and out from the object, place, or person. This idea of extension beyond ourselves unto others is important in the understanding of "Christ through us" as Christians. A secondary, instrumental meaning of dia is "by means of, which allows the word to have the same secondary meaning as the Greek preposition en, revealing that these prepositions tend to overlap one another in meaning and must not be treated with rigid precision…

Conclusion

The phrases we have considered in this study, "Christ in us," "Christ as us," and "Christ through us," are not necessarily to be understood as progressive, successive or sequential steps or stages of spiritual knowledge or spiritual growth. Though we have differentiated between them, they often meld and merge into an integrated and comprehensive emphasis of "Christ by means of us," as this is a permissible interpretation of all three prepositions. We should avoid analyzing the meaning of these three phrases too precisely or rigidly, allowing the living reality of Christ to express Himself as He will. It is questionable whether the realities that these phrases refer to should be cast into separate theological categories as some have done, attempting to represent them as justification, sanctification, and glorification; or as regeneration, unification, and ministration. Even illustrative analogies such as John's reference to "children, young men, and fathers" (I John 2:12-14) are best avoided, as these are often misleading.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

When an individual is regenerated by the receipt of the Spirit of Christ into his/her spirit (Rom. 8:9), Christ is in that person, immanently indwelling them; Christ forms their identity, functioning as them, for Christ cannot help but act as the Being that He is; and Christ is living through them, laying down His life in intercessory ministry for others.

Despite the caution of defining these internal spiritual realities too precisely, the following differentiations may be helpful for general definition. "Christ in us" has to do with indwelling; "Christ as us" has to do with identity; "Christ through us" has to do with intercession. The preposition "in" refers to location; the preposition "as" refers to function; the preposition "through" refers to extension. "Christ in us" points to Presence the real presence of the living Lord Jesus in our spirit; "Christ as us" suggests Identity His presence establishes our new identity as Christ-ones; "Christ through us" implies Expression Christ's presence and function necessitates His expression through us unto others.

In conclusion let us note that Paul wrote of the Corinthians "being manifested as a letter of Christ,...written not with ink, but with the Spirit of the living God...on tablets of human hearts" (II Cor. 3:3). Christ living by means of us creates a unique living epistle that re-presents Christ to others in the contemporary form of our own lives. Such a presentation of Christ in us, and as us, and through us, may be the only living form of Jesus that another person may ever observe. This adaptation of another's verse seems to capture the point poetically:

"CHRIST is writing a letter in you each day.
The message, that is HIM, must be true.
'Tis the only Jesus that some men may see
The life of Christ expressed as and through YOU.

Return to*: Ephesians Highlights (by Chapter, Main Menu)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Making Christ at Home in Your Heart (Ephesians 3:14-17a) [Downloadable as MS Doc] https://bible.org/seriespage/lesson-22-making-christ-home-your-heart-ephesians-314-17a

Excerpt:

We often talk about "inviting Christ into your heart," but it may surprise you to learn that this is the only text in the New Testament that uses that sort of imagery, and it refers to Christ dwelling in the hearts of those who were already believers. It is not an evangelistic verse. In Revelation 3:20, Christ pictures Himself as standing at the door and knocking. He promises to come in and dine with anyone that opens the door. But the text never states that it is the door to your heart. And, He is speaking to those in the church of Laodicea, who already professed to be Christians. We may argue that they were not genuine believers. But in any case, they were associated with the church.

Our text is Paul's second prayer for the Ephesians (the first was in 1:15-23). He started to pray in 3:1, but he interrupted himself and went into a digression about his ministry on behalf of the Gentiles in light of God's purpose for the ages. Now, he comes back to his prayer, which runs through verse 19, followed by a benediction in 3:20-21. I plan to deal with the section (3:14-21) in three parts. If you think I'm going too slowly, I would defend myself by pointing out that Martyn Lloyd-Jones, who has been called the greatest preacher of the 20th century, took 17 messages (The Unsearchable Riches of Christ [Baker], pp. 106-315)! He also confessed that he could not recall any other Scripture in his preaching ministry where he was so conscious of his own inadequacy and inability as this one (ibid., p. 155). If you want more depth than I can offer, I refer you to his fine work.

Although there is debate on the structure of Paul's prayer, it seems to me that he offers two main requests, which are both prayers for power. The first (3:16) is that the Ephesians would be strengthened with power through the Spirit in the inner man, so that Christ may dwell in their hearts by faith. The second request (3:18) is that they would be able (have the power) to comprehend the incomprehensible love of Christ, so that they may be filled up to all the fullness of God. This is a prayer for their spiritual maturity, that they may be fully conformed to Jesus Christ.

If Paul's request seems humanly impossible, his benediction reminds us that God is able to do far more than we can ask or think, according to His power that works within us. And, he reminds us, all of these amazing blessings are not primarily for our happiness (although we will be supremely happy when they are applied to us), but rather for God's eternal glory. We should also note that this prayer is Trinitarian: Paul prays to the Father that Christ may dwell in their hearts through the power of the Spirit…

Return to*: Ephesians Highlights (by Chapter, Main Menu)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Indwelling Of Christ - Most Relevant Verses

https://bible.knowing-jesus.com/topics/Indwelling-Of-Christ

John 14:20

"In that day you will know that I am in My Father, and you in Me, and I in you.

John 17:23

I in them and You in Me, that they may be perfected in unity, so that the world may know that You sent Me, and loved them, even as You have loved Me.

Romans 8:10

If Christ is in you, though the body is dead because of sin, yet the spirit is alive because of righteousness.

Galatians 2:20

"I have been crucified with Christ; and it is no longer I who live, but Christ lives in me; and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by faith in the Son of God, who loved me and gave Himself up for me.

Ephesians 3:17-19

so that Christ may dwell in your hearts through faith; and that you, being rooted and grounded in love,

Colossians 1:27

to whom God willed to make known what is the riches of the glory of this mystery among the Gentiles, which is Christ in you, the hope of glory.

1 John 3:24

The one who keeps His commandments abides in Him, and He in him We know by this that He abides in us, by the Spirit whom He has given us.

Revelation 3:20

'Behold, I stand at the door and knock; if anyone hears My voice and opens the door, I will come in to him and will dine with him, and he with Me.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Ephesians 1: Election.

(Source: NIV Application Commentary: Ephesians)

If "in Christ" is difficult to explain to a modern culture, surely election is as well. At first glance election seems to be an archaic idea, confined to the biblical mindset and more troublesome than helpful for modern audiences. We have difficulty thinking that God chooses some and ignores the rest. How can God be a God of love and do this? But such conclusions run far beyond the text of Ephesians.

At the same time, perhaps election is not as foreign as first thought. Being selected for a team or an organization, being admitted to a school, or being chosen by someone of the opposite sex are all affirmations of value. In recent times black Muslim extremists have argued that the Jews are not God's chosen people, but that blacks are. Similarly, white supremacists have argued that not Jews but whites are God's chosen race. Both groups are seeking to coopt language for valuing themselves. Election, as it relates to humans, expresses two ideas: the value given to human beings by God and responsibility they owe to God. Both are still important.

The election language in Ephesians 1 is primarily about God and shows why God should be praised. Any conclusions drawn must derive from the fact that this is a doxology, not a systematic theology. This is not to ignore the theological significance of doxologies, but to stay within Paul's intention with his worship. His purpose is to focus on God at work, planning and drawing people to himself through Christ. If the focus is corporate rather than individual and if people are elect only in the Elect One, Christ, then this text has nothing to do with our fear that God chooses some and ignores others. That is a nonbiblical conclusion about the result of election and the question who is elect. The focus of the biblical text is on the cause of election — God — and its purpose — that Christians live holy and blameless before God. God values human beings and draws them — both Jews and Gentiles — to himself in Christ. The focus is God's grace, and this text will not support any discussions about arbitrary decisions from God.

Numerous questions remain about election, and Christians will no doubt disagree on the answers. Can election be lost? Is it possible to have once been in Christ and then be out of him? But this text (and most others) do not treat our questions and suggest they may be misguided. Paul was more interested in praising God for his grace. While granting an element of mystery in the subject of election, certain points must be emphasized:

(1) Election is God's grace in action.
(2) God chose Abraham and then Israel for a task — to bless all the nations of the earth (Gen. 12:3).
(3) Jesus took on the task of Israel as God's Elect One.
(4) People are elect in Christ for relation to God.
(5) While God chooses, people still have choice and are responsible for their decisions.
(6) Election does demonstrate God's favor, which can be a strong support in a time of difficulty, but it is never to be treated as a sign of superiority.
(7) More important, election always implies responsibility. People are chosen to do something.
(8) The ultimate goal of election is the revelation of God's own character; which Ephesians expresses as the praise of his glory.

Consequently, most of the debates about election should be politely set aside. If we focus on praising God for valuing us and if we realize the responsibility that his valuing brings, we have understood Paul, and the other questions on election recede in importance. No one should worry whether he or she is elect. The main question is: "Are you in Christ and one with him?"

The responsibility election brings in this text is ethical: We are to live holy and blameless lives before God. Some will blanche at the call to be holy and blameless. While Paul rejected his so-called blameless experience as a Jew, he still called on Christians to live blamelessly (cf. Phil. 2:15 with 3:6). This text does not promote perfectionism, but it does call for Christians to live lives of service to God.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

For details see*: Predestination, Election and Related Terms

Exegesis of Ephesians: Summary of Notes, Ephesians 1:1-14

http://nagasawafamily.org/paul_ephesians.1.03-14.exegesis.pdf [PDF]

Jewish Context	Greco-Roman Context
Echoes of Israel's story from its Exodus beginning to Babylonian exile. This would mean that the church is the renewed, restored Israel.	A collection of terms that had powerful connotations, but no single storyline.

Systematically, the Jewish connotations take priority, and the Roman connotations, as secondary, can be considered as long as they reinforce the main ideas from the Jewish context.

I believe this position is substantiated by considering other echoes of Isaiah in Ephesians. I have already highlighted Isaiah's use of exodus and redemption language in Isaiah 40 – 55, and how Paul uses the same language in Ephesians 1:3 – 14. Here are other direct quotes, as well as allusions, that I can detect.

Passage in Ephesians	Passage(s) in Isaiah	Topic
1:3 – 14	40:3 – 6; 43:1ff	God redeems His people in a new exodus
1:19 – 23	9:1 – 7; 11:1 – 10	Rule of the Messiah, son of David
2:1 – 10	25:6 – 7; 26:19	God will bring life out of death
2:11 – 22	57:15 – 19	Peace to those near and far, new Temple
3:1 – 13	56:3 – 7	Gentiles will be included in the renewed Israel/new Temple
5:7 – 14	60:1 – 11	Arise, light shines in darkness, nations drawn into the new Jerusalem (Ephesians quote conflates 26:19, 51:17, 52:1, and 60:1)
6:10 – 24	59:14 – 19	God's warrior will wear the armor of righteousness to bring justice and righteousness to the world

Return to*: Ephesians Highlights (by Chapter, Main Menu)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Wycliffe Bible Dictionary (Hendrickson Publishers):

ELECT. "Chosen" or "selected." The main OT verb for this is "bahar" a deliberate selecting of something or someone with attendant preference or pleasure. The NT verb "eklegomai" means to choose or select out of a larger group something or someone for oneself. The related adjectives "hahir" and "eklektos" are translated "elect" or "chosen" and are the result of an act of selection. The words are used of choices human (Gen 6:2; Deut 30:19; Lk 10:42; 14:7) and divine for salvation (Eph 1:4), and for service (Jn 15:16).

Various objects are termed "elect" or "chosen" by God: the nation Israel for special favor and purpose (Isa 44:1; 45:4); several individuals, such as Abraham (Neh 9:7), Aaron (Ps 105:26), David (1 Sam 16:8 ff.); Jerusalem (2 Chr 6:6); a remnant of Jews near the second coming of Christ (Mt 24:22; Isa 65:9); the Church, the body of Christ

(1 Pet 2:9; 5:13; Col 3:12; Tit 1:1); Christ Himself (Isa 42:1; 1 Pet 2:6); the "lady"

(2 Jn 1); and angels (1 Tim 5:21). Elect men are chosen by God's grace (Rom 11:5) and love (Rom 8:33-39; 11:28; Eph 1:4-5) and according to His foreknowledge (1 Pet 1:2); it is never on the basis of human merit (Rom 9:11; cf. 2 Tim 1:9).

Election vs. Free Will

http://bibleone.net/print_tbs34.html

Excerpt:

The Doctrine of Election is a theological truth that threads throughout God's Word. Note the following remarks by C. Fred Dickason, Th.D., Moody Bible Institute, Chicago, Illinois, as recorded in the Wycliffe Bible Dictionary (Hendrickson Publishers).

> ELECT. "Chosen" or "selected." The main OT verb for this is "bahar" a deliberate selecting of something or someone with attendant preference or pleasure. The NT verb "eklegomai" means to choose or select out of a larger group something or someone for oneself. The related adjectives "hahir" and "eklektos" are translated "elect" or "chosen" and are the result of an act of selection. The words are used of choices human (Gen 6:2; Deut 30:19; Lk 10:42; 14:7) and divine for salvation (Eph 1:4), and for service (Jn 15:16).
>
> Various objects are termed "elect" or "chosen" by God: the nation Israel for special favor and purpose (Isa 44:1; 45:4); several individuals, such as Abraham (Neh 9:7), Aaron (Ps 105:26), David (1 Sam 16:8 ff.); Jerusalem (2 Chr 6:6); a remnant of Jews near the second coming of Christ (Mt 24:22; Isa 65:9); the Church, the body of Christ
>
> (1 Pet 2:9; 5:13; Col 3:12; Tit 1:1); Christ Himself (Isa 42:1; 1 Pet 2:6); the "lady"
>
> (2 Jn 1); and angels (1 Tim 5:21). Elect men are chosen by God's grace (Rom 11:5) and love (Rom 8:33-39; 11:28; Eph 1:4-5) and according to His foreknowledge (1 Pet 1:2); it is never on the basis of human merit (Rom 9:11; cf. 2 Tim 1:9).

Election, as it applies to the salvation of a person, encompasses several steps, e.g., foreknowledge, predestination, calling, justification and glorification (Romans 8:29, 30). The difficulty in Election in the matter of salvation, for man anyway, lies in reconciling the sovereignty of God with the freedom of man to choose. God chose every person who would be saved before the foundation of the world, i.e., before creation (Ephesians 1:4, 5). Man's merit or his works have nothing to do with the election process or the act of salvation, since man has no merit and could not generate any merit from the time of his fall in the Garden of Eden onward. Even though man is capable of producing "human good," this commodity is as "filthy rags" in the sight of God (Isaiah 64:6) and is totally insufficient for the purpose of achieving eternal salvation. Only faith alone in Christ alone brings eternal salvation to the recipient. God chose those who are to be saved strictly in accordance with His purpose, pleasure and will (Acts 4:28; Romans 9:11; Ephesians 1:5; 3:11).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Therefore God, in accordance with His purpose and before time, selected every single person who was to be saved through Jesus Christ. On the "other side of the coin" the Bible clearly spells out that salvation is for everyone and is a function of man's will. Note the following passages of Scripture.

> For God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believes in Him should not perish but have everlasting life. (John 3:16)
>
> But whosoever drinks of the water that I shall give him will never thirst. But the water that I shall give him will become in him a fountain of water springing up into everlasting life. (John 4:14)
>
> And it shall come to pass that whosoever calls on the name of the LORD shall be saved. (Acts 2:21)
>
> To Him all the prophets witness that, through His name, whosoever believes in Him will receive remission of sins. (Acts 10:43)
>
> Therefore, as through one man's offense judgment came to all men, resulting in condemnation, even so through one Man's righteous act the free gift came to all men, resulting in justification of life. (Romans 5:18)
>
> For whosoever calls on the name of the LORD shall be saved. (Romans 10:13)
>
> For this is good and acceptable in the sight of God our Savior, who desires all men to be saved and to come to the knowledge of the truth. (1 Timothy 2:3, 4)
>
> For the grace of God that brings salvation has appeared to all men . . . . (Titus 2:11)
>
> The Lord is not slack concerning His promise, as some count slackness, but is longsuffering toward us, not willing that any should perish but that all should come to repentance. (2 Peter 3:9)
>
> Whosoever believes that Jesus is the Christ is born of God, and everyone who loves Him who begot also loves him who is begotten of Him. (1 John 5:1)
>
> And the Spirit and the bride say, "Come!" And let him who hears say, "Come!" And let him who thirsts come. Whosoever desires, let him take the water of life freely. (Revelation 22:17)

Therefore it is just as clear in the Word of God that the love and grace of God is provided for every single man and woman within the realm of time through the sacrifice of His Son. What's more, any person may obtain this love and grace, this gift of eternal life, by exercising his will (choice) to receive by faith (trusting in) Jesus Christ and His sacrifice on the cross for his personal salvation.

How does a believer reconcile "election" with "free agency?" It is fact that the Bible supports both doctrines. To the rational mind they conflict with each other, but it is not totally unreasonable to believe that God has allowed man sufficient mental capacity to understand each doctrine and how they fit together in God's purpose and plan. Of course the simplistic approach could be to simply deny man's ability to reconcile these doctrines, relegating the entire matter to the arena of faith.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

There is of course merit in the simplistic approach. Reason can never be elevated over supernatural revelation. If every aspect of God's plan could be reduced to the level of human reason, there would be no need for faith. The reconciliation of these two doctrines may very well fall within the purview of the following two passages of Scripture.

> For My thoughts are not your thoughts, nor are your ways My ways, says the LORD. For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are My ways higher than your ways, and My thoughts than your thoughts. (Isaiah 55:8, 9)

> The secret things belong to the LORD our God, but those things which are revealed belong to us and to our children forever, that we may do all the words of this law. (Deuteronomy 29:29)

Nevertheless, the number of words penned in commentary regarding the relationship of these two doctrines over the centuries is legion. On the one hand you have the strictly Calvinistic approach stating that man essentially has no say in his salvation, that even his ability to choose must be activated—maybe even controlled— by God. Then there is the strictly Arminian view that has God's plan teetering on man's will. There is truth in both views and maybe even some error. So what is the solution? The following is offered as a possibility and not as a concrete (dogmatic) fact—based on the following:

1. God has elected everyone that is to be saved prior to time and creation.
2. God has offered the possibility of salvation to everyone.
3. Christ paid for the sins of everyone on the cross.
4. Man was created in the image of God, i.e. with a mind, soul and spirit and with the ability to chose (free agency).
5. God has stipulated to man that he must exercise his will and receive (trusting in) His Son for salvation.
6. Although God chose before time in accordance with His purpose, He made His selection in conjunction within an orderly process—a prescribed set of steps (Romans 8:29, 30), which are foreknowledge, predestination, calling (otherwise known as the convicting power of the Holy Spirit), justification (by faith alone in Christ alone) and glorification (sanctification from time and into eternity).
7. Foreknowledge appears to be the foundational or commencement step in the election process (Romans 8:29, 30; 1 Peter 1:2)
8. God's election was not made in a vacuum. The election process cannot be divorced from all of God's attributes, such as His sovereignty (Lord over all), His immutability (unchanging), His omnipotence (all-powerful), His omniscience (all-knowing), His omnipresence (present everywhere all at once) His holiness and His justice—all such attributes coming to focus and to appliance at the moment of selection.

The conclusion is this. Since both doctrines are true and since God transcends all dimensions, to include time and eternity past and present, simultaneously, they (election and man's choice) must transpire in the mind of God at the same instant. God's election does not precede man's choice and man's choice does not precede God's election. One does not depend on the other; rather, they materialize hand-in-hand and are co-dependent on each other in the mind of God. This concept is impossible to understand by the human mind if it thinks only in the realm of "linear time." Mankind normally thinks in terms of linear time—the fact that everything has a beginning and an end. Eternity to man is a place of a lot of time, and God is a Person who has lots of time.

The fact is that God transcends time. He is not subject to it. A study of the physics of time reveals that it is a physical property dependent upon mass, gravity and velocity. An understanding of this scientific reality may be achieved by studying various commentary treatments offered by Chuck Missler of www.khouse.org. Once this is understood, it is also important to note that God exists outside the dimension of time. Whereas man views a parade in various increments from a set position along the parade route, God sees both the beginning and the end of it from a position far above it. God exists everywhere, all at the same time. This understanding is necessary when considering what is meant by the "mind of God."

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

This may be something akin to the "chicken and the egg first" riddle or an accusation of "fence-riding," unless of course one takes into account the nature of God. Multiple transactions that are separated by both time and eternity transpiring simultaneously may be impossible with man, who is confined to four dimensions (width, length, height and time), but it presents no difficulty with God who is not confined to any dimension. In fact science now believes there may be upwards to ten or eleven dimensions. God is not only present in each of them, and probably many more, but He also exists everywhere throughout eternity before and after time. In other words He is everywhere (in every dimension) simultaneously. He is at the beginning, at the end and at all in between simultaneously. This then appears to clarify the meaning of "Elect according to the foreknowledge of God . . ." (1 Peter 1:2) and "For whom He foreknew, He also predestined . . ." (Romans 8:29).

Election therefore does not cancel out free agency, and free agency does not cancel out election. Neither doctrine invalidates the other. They compliment each other. God does in fact elect a person to be saved, but He does it in conjunction (partnership) with the person who exercises his God-given capability to accept His Son once the person has been awakened to his sin and need of Jesus by the Holy Spirit. This process—both the act of electing and the person's exercise of will to receive—happens at the same exact moment in the mind of God who exists before time and creation and at the moment of a person's salvation, all simultaneously. Both acts—one by God and one by man—are executed together in the mind of God "before the foundation of the world."

This concept does not invalidate man's God-given ability and responsibility to choose. Furthermore it does not violate God's sovereignty or any other of His attributes. In fact, it may very well clarify the concept of foreknowledge and its commencement relationship to the election process. As a person, in time, is faced with the decision to either by faith accept or to reject God's offer of salvation, God by means of His foreknowledge and attendance fully comprehends the decision the person will make and correspondingly elects or rejects the person in the matter of eternal life. One may argue that this subjugates God to man, but this writer differs with that assessment. Since the ability and obligation for man to make a choice comes from God in the first place, God is therefore supreme in the entire process. The process is totally in accordance with God's purpose and plan. It is true that God being sovereign could have brought man to eternal life—kicking and screaming—in any manner He would choose. The fact is that He has opted to do it within the parameters of mercy and grace—and the will of man.

Regardless of what position a believer may take regarding these two doctrines, there is one way a person may know if someone is one of the "elect." He need only apply the test of John 3:18, which is "He who believes in Him [Jesus Christ] is not condemned; but he who does not believe is condemned already, because he had not believed in the name of the only begotten Son of God."

Furthermore even if a believer is an adherent to the strict Calvinist viewpoint, he is still under the obligation to spread the Gospel of Jesus Christ to everyone in accordance with the commission given to him by Christ. In the words of J. Vernon McGee in his Thru the Bible commentary, "If God would somehow reveal to me who are the elect ones, I would give the gospel only to them. But God does not do this. He has said that whosoever will may come. That is a legitimate offer to every person."

For details see*: Predestination, Election and Related Terms

Return to* : Ephesians Highlights – Chapter 1 (Menu)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Ephesians 1:15-23 The Power of the King [NTWEPH Chp 2]

So how strong is it?"

My friend was showing me his new telescope. It was set up in an upstairs room, looking out toward sea.

"Well, take a look."

I had been scanning the horizon with my own small binoculars. There were a couple of ships going by. A few small fishing boats closer in. Nothing much else. I put my eye to his telescope and couldn't believe what I saw. The two ships I had seen—suddenly they were so close that I could see their names on the side, and people walking to and fro on deck. But that was only the beginning. Out beyond them, where my binoculars had registered nothing at all, were several other ships: large and small, military and commercial, including a cruise liner. The telescope seemed to have the uncanny power of making things appear out of nowhere.

When have you experienced something unexpectedly powerful?

Read Ep 1:15-23. Power is one of the great themes of Ephesians. Perhaps this is because Ephesus itself, and the surrounding area, was seen as a place of power. Certainly in social and civic terms the city was powerful, and was set to become more so. It was a major center of imperial influence in Paul's day. It was also a center of religious power. Before Paul writes about power, though, he tells his readers how thankful he is for them.

At the center of Paul's prayer for the church in the area, which he now reports, is his longing that they will come to realize that this same power, the power seen at Easter and now vested in Jesus, is available to them for their daily use. Far too many Christians today, and, one suspects, in Paul's day, are quite unaware that this power is there and is available. They are like I was with my friend: until I looked through his powerful telescope I simply didn't know what was out there.

Paul doesn't imagine that all Christians will automatically be able to recognize the power of God. It will take, as he says in verse 17, a fresh gift of wisdom, of coming to see things people don't normally see. And this in turn will come about through knowing Jesus and having what Paul calls "the eyes of your innermost self" opened to God's light.

vv. 21-22. King Jesus as the head of the body of believers has the church as his hands and feet. It is "his body, the fullness of the one who fills all in all." How can we, his church, act as his agents within the present world?

Ephesians 1:19-21 (and 2:1-7)

See: Two Spiritual Kingdoms

Return to*: Ephesians Highlights – Chapter 1 (Menu)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Universal vs Local Church (Ekklesia)

What is the universal church and how is it different from the local church?

https://www.compellingtruth.org/universal-local-church.html

Excerpt:

The English word "church" comes from the Greek adjective kyriakon which means "of the Lord." Culturally, it referred to groups of Christ-followers or homes where they met, but in the Bible, the word is translated as the possessive "Lord's" and never refers to people or a group. Instead, 1 Corinthians 11:20 uses it to refer to the "Lord's Supper", and Revelation 1:10 uses to it identify the "Lord's day". The word in the Bible most often translated as "church" is the Greek ekklesia, which means any gathering of people. When Jesus said, "…on this rock I will build my church…" (Matthew 16:18), He was actually saying He would build His gathering of people.

The Greek ekklesia is used interchangeably of both local congregations and the body of believers as a whole. The difference is found in the context.

Local church

Often in the Bible "church" refers to a local congregation of believers.

Revelation 2—3: In the letters to the churches, the comments are addressed to specific churches in identified towns.

Romans 16:5; 1 Corinthians 16:19; Colossians 4:15; Philemon 1:2: Whenever a church is mentioned in affiliation with someone's home, it refers to a local congregation.

Acts 8:1; 1 Corinthians 1:2; 2 Corinthians 1:1; Galatians 1:2; etc.: When a church is identified with a city or a region, the word refers to local bodies of believers within that region.

"Church" is used the same way today. The local church is a specific body that meets in a designated place and can be comprised of believers and regularly attending non-believers. Our duties to the local church include regular attendance, respect for the leadership, and financial support. It is important for a believer to attend a local church because that is where biblical teaching, serving, and spiritual growth most often occur. The local church is also known as the "church family."

Universal church

At other times, "church" in the Bible means the group consisting of every Christ-follower.

Matthew 16:18; Acts 9:31; Ephesians 1:22-23; Colossians 1:18: In reference to Jesus' church, this includes all believers everywhere.

Acts 8:3; 1 Corinthians 15:9; Galatians 1:13; Philippians 3:6: When Paul persecuted the "church," he persecuted believers wherever he could find them from Jerusalem (Acts 8:1) to Damascus (Acts 9:1-20).

1 Corinthians 5:12; 10:32; 12:28; 14:12; Ephesians 5:23-24; 1 Timothy 3:5, 7, 15: When Paul gives instruction to "the church," he is often referring to the body of believers as a whole.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Today, we have the same distinction. The church universal includes every believer in the world, no matter what denomination, and excludes every non-believer even if they go to a Bible-teaching church. Our responsibilities to the universal church include prayer, support, and not causing division because of minor theological differences. It's important to note that the church universal may include individuals who go to local congregations that do not teach the true gospel.

The "church," whether local or universal, is a group of people seeking God. At no time in the Bible does "church" refer to a building. Despite the money, time, and attention we pay to structures, the true church is people.

Source: https://www.slideshare.net/maximilianyong/the-uniqueness-of-the-catholic-churchrciasfxpj08-presentation (Catholic)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Differences Between the Universal Church and the Local Church https://www.slideshare.net/bryangibson1/universal-local-distinctions

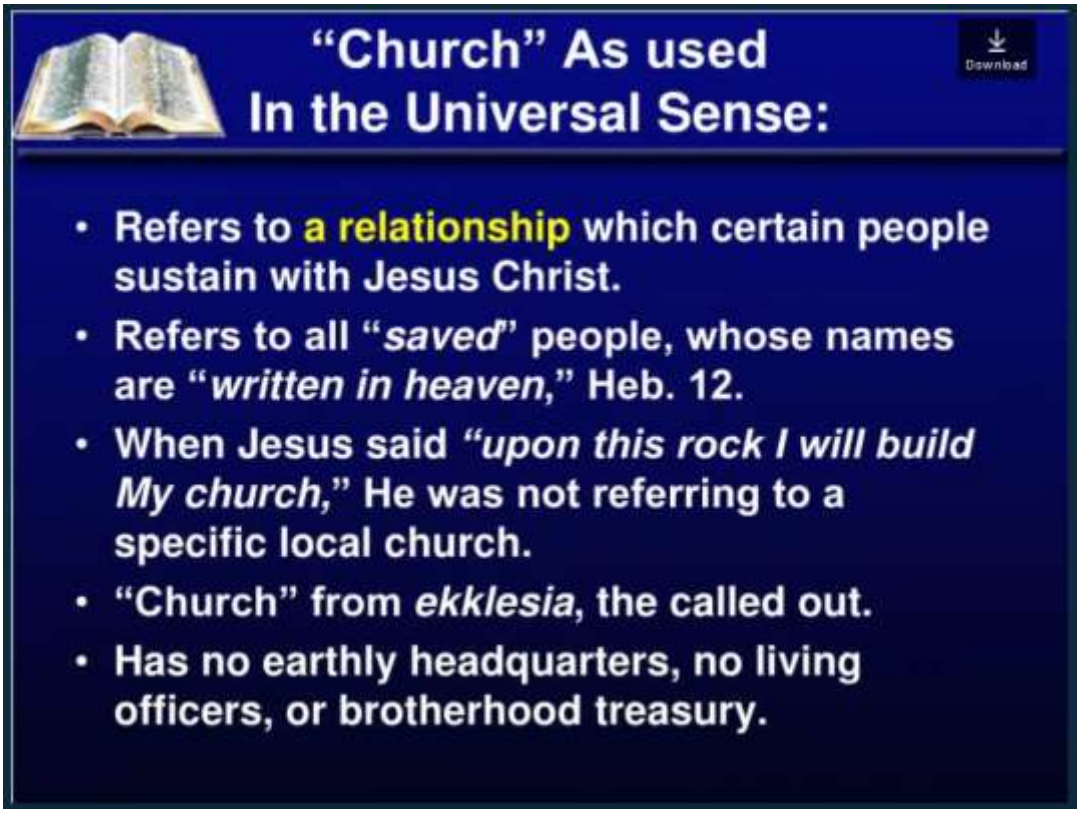
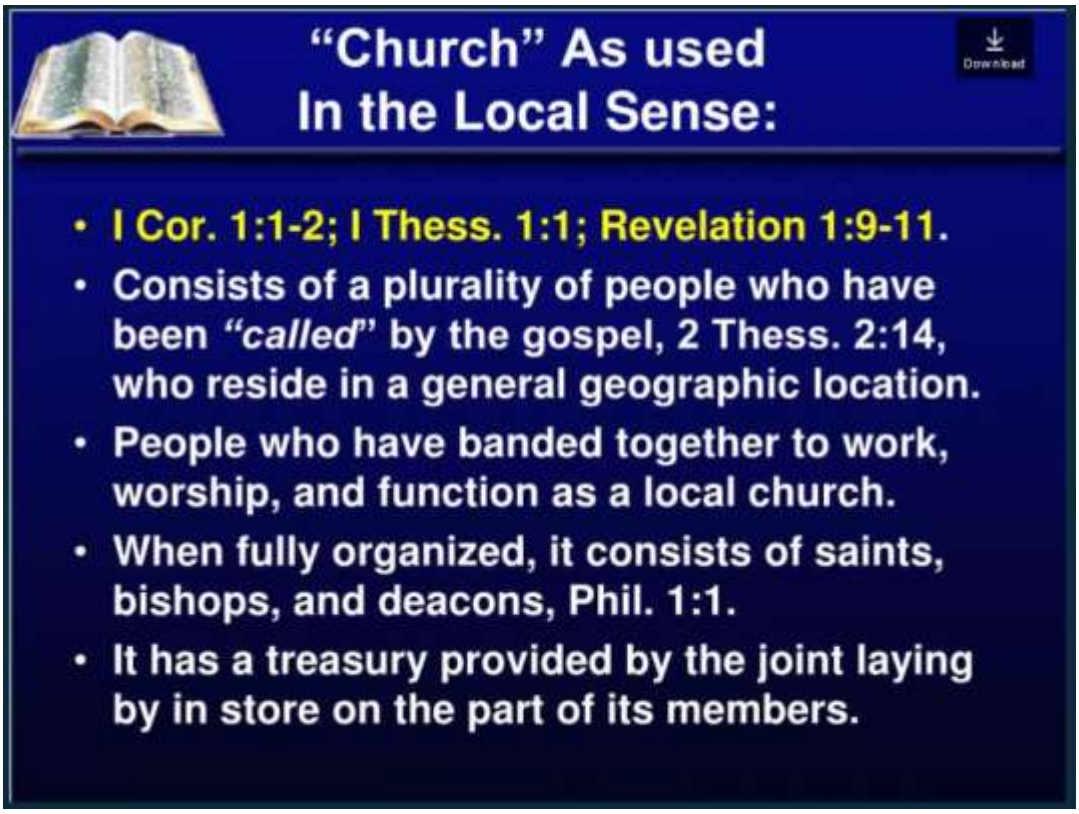
Universal Church	Local Church
In heaven and earth (Eph. 3:15)	Earthly, limited (Phil. 1:1)
Lord adds members (Acts 2:47)	"Join" ourselves to (Acts 9:26)
Entered by baptism (1 Cor. 12:13)	Local control (3 Jn 1:10; Ac 18:27)
All saints here (Gal. 3:27)	Certain saints here (1 Cor. 1:2)
None but the saved (2 Tim. 2:19)	Some "not of us" here (1 Jn. 2:19)
One shepherd only (Jn. 10:16)	Lesser shepherds (1 Pet. 5:2)
Assembled fig. (Heb. 12:23)	Literally assemble (1 Cor. 14:23)
Satan cannot prevail (Mt. 16:18)	Can, often does prevail (Rev. 2:5)

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Conclusions/Applications



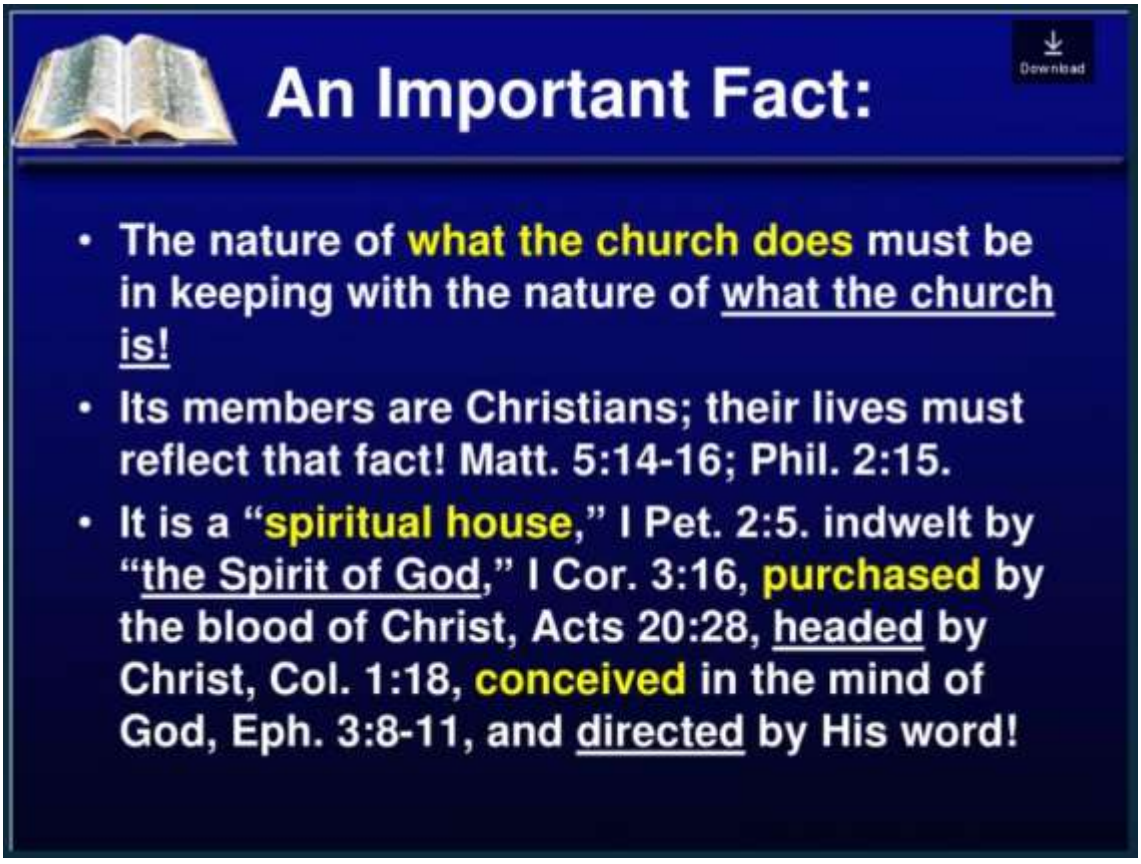
- The universal church is a relationship of individuals with God, that comes FIRST—before you ever join yourself to a local church; and that relationship exists even if a local church refuses to receive you (Acts 9:26; 3 John 1:9-10), provided you continue to walk in the truth.
- The local church is an additional tie, of saints with saints, working together as a team (collectively), in order to carry out God's purposes. And yes, it is God's will that you join yourself to one of these teams.



UNIVERSAL CHURCH ("the body of Christ")	LOCAL CHURCH
one (Romans 12:4-5, Ephesians 4:4)	many (Acts 9:31, 15:41, 16:5, Romans 16:16, 1 Corinthians 7:17, 11:16, 16:19, Galatians 1:2)
spiritual (Galatians 3:28)	physical (Romans 16:4, 1 Corinthians 14:34, 1 Timothy 5:1-2)
organism (Ephesians 1:22-23)	organization (1 Corinthians 16:1, 1 Timothy 3:1,10)
join automatically at salvation (1 Corinthians 12:13, Ephesians 2:18, Romans 8:9)	join voluntarily for discipleship (Ephesians 4:11-12, 1 Timothy 3:2-5, 1 Peter 5:1-2)
cannot leave it (Romans 8:38-39, 2 Timothy 2:13)	can leave it (1 Corinthians 5:2)
instituted at the cross (Ephesians 2:16) first members in Acts 2:4 (Acts 1:4-5, 10:44, 11:15-16, 1 Corinthians 12:13)	first members in Matthew 4:18-22

Source: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Oz4sgNKrieE

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



https://www.slideserve.com/luann/review-of-according-to-the-pattern

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Return to*: Ephesians Highlights – Chapter 1 (Menu)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Source: http://slideplayer.com/slide/6299456/

Me! Join the Church? Why?
http://www.mapministry.org/articles/2015/07/01/me-join-the-church-why

The Church Has Two Missions: Narrow and Broad https://www.9marks.org/article/the-church-has-two-missions-narrow-and-broad/

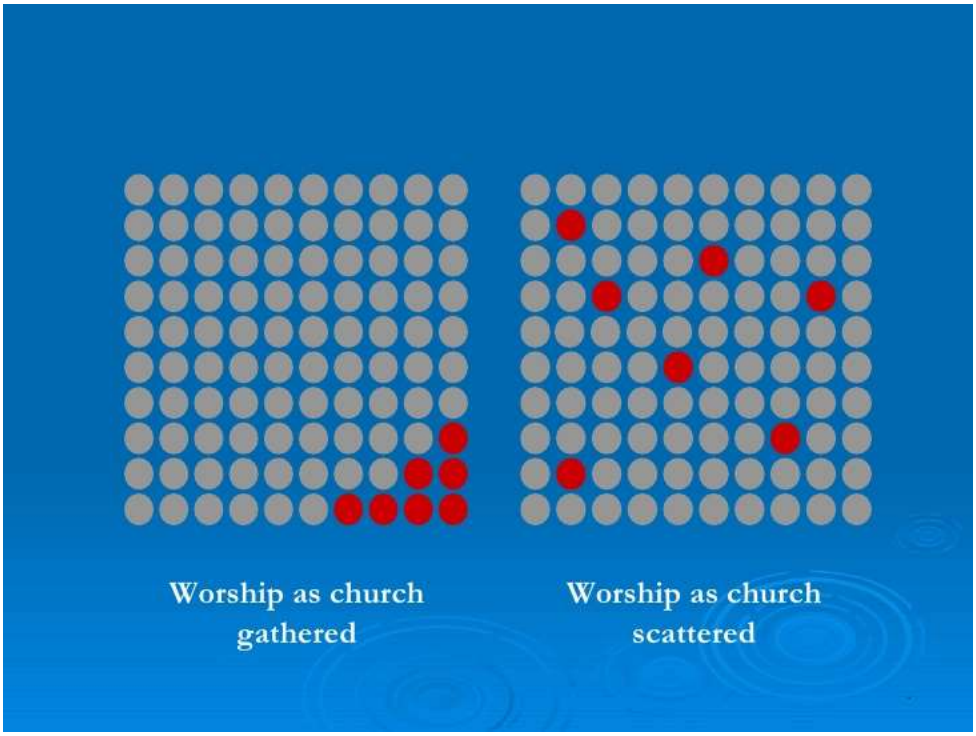
What is the mission of the church? Answering that requires defining what we mean by the "church." Theologians make distinctions between the universal and local church, the invisible and visible church, the institutional and organic church, or the gathered and scattered church. For our immediate purposes, I'm not interested in any of these distinctions…



The New Testament Church vs The Universal Invisible Church Theory
http://www.jesus-is-savior.com/False%20Doctrines/universal_invisible_church.htm
[Warning: This is a KJO site.]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Universal Church Theory – Weighted in the Balances and Found Wanting http://www.thomaswilliamson.net/uct_new.htm

Survey of Bible Doctrine: The Church
https://bible.org/seriespage/8-survey-bible-doctrine-church

Gathered and Scattered: The Missing Element in our Ecclesiology?
http://thinktheology.org/wp-content/uploads/2015/05/Gathered-scattered_Graphic.jpg

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

In Search of the Universal Invisible Church

Chapter 1: http://www.abaptistvoice.com/English/Books/InSearchOfTheUniversalInvisibleChurch.html

Chapter 2: http://baptisthistoryhomepage.com/kazee.2.universal.invisib.html

http://www.baptistbecause.com/Tracts/invch-2.html

Return to*: Ephesians Highlights – Chapter 1 (Menu)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Exploring Membership

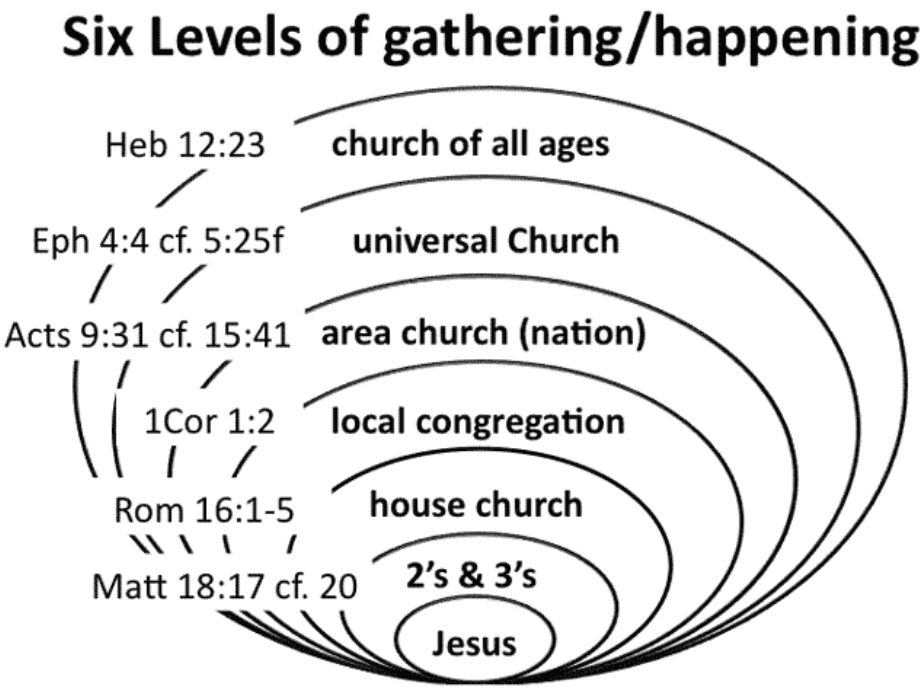
Session1: Intro to Following Jesus

http://followingjesus.org.za/exploring-membership-1/

What does following Jesus have to do with church belonging and membership? To answer the question we begin with Jesus' basic/generic call to all people, then we look at his commission.

Session 2: The Early Church and the Committed Belonging

http://followingjesus.org.za/exploring-membership-2/



Excerpt:

Church – As God's Identifiable Community – 'Happens' at Various Levels:

3.1. The way e*kklesia* is used reveals that it gathers/happens at six 'levels' (see diagram below)

3.2. One cannot claim to 'belong' at one level (e.g. "I'm part of the universal/invisible Church of Jesus Christ") without tangible belonging at the levels of local gathering.

3.3. The most basic levels of church belonging is lived out in the two's and three's of deep friendship, in relational belonging in house-church (Rom 16) and the local gathered church (Acts 20:20).

Session 3: Models of (Local) Church and Membership

http://followingjesus.org.za/exploring-membership-3/

We've looked at a) Jesus and his disciple-community (following Jesus meant joining his community), and b) at belonging and 'membership' in the Early Church. What does this mean for our church? In answer to the question we examine different models of "doing church" and what membership means.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Session 4: Ministry Framework – How We Do Church and Membership

http://followingjesus.org.za/exploring-membership-4/

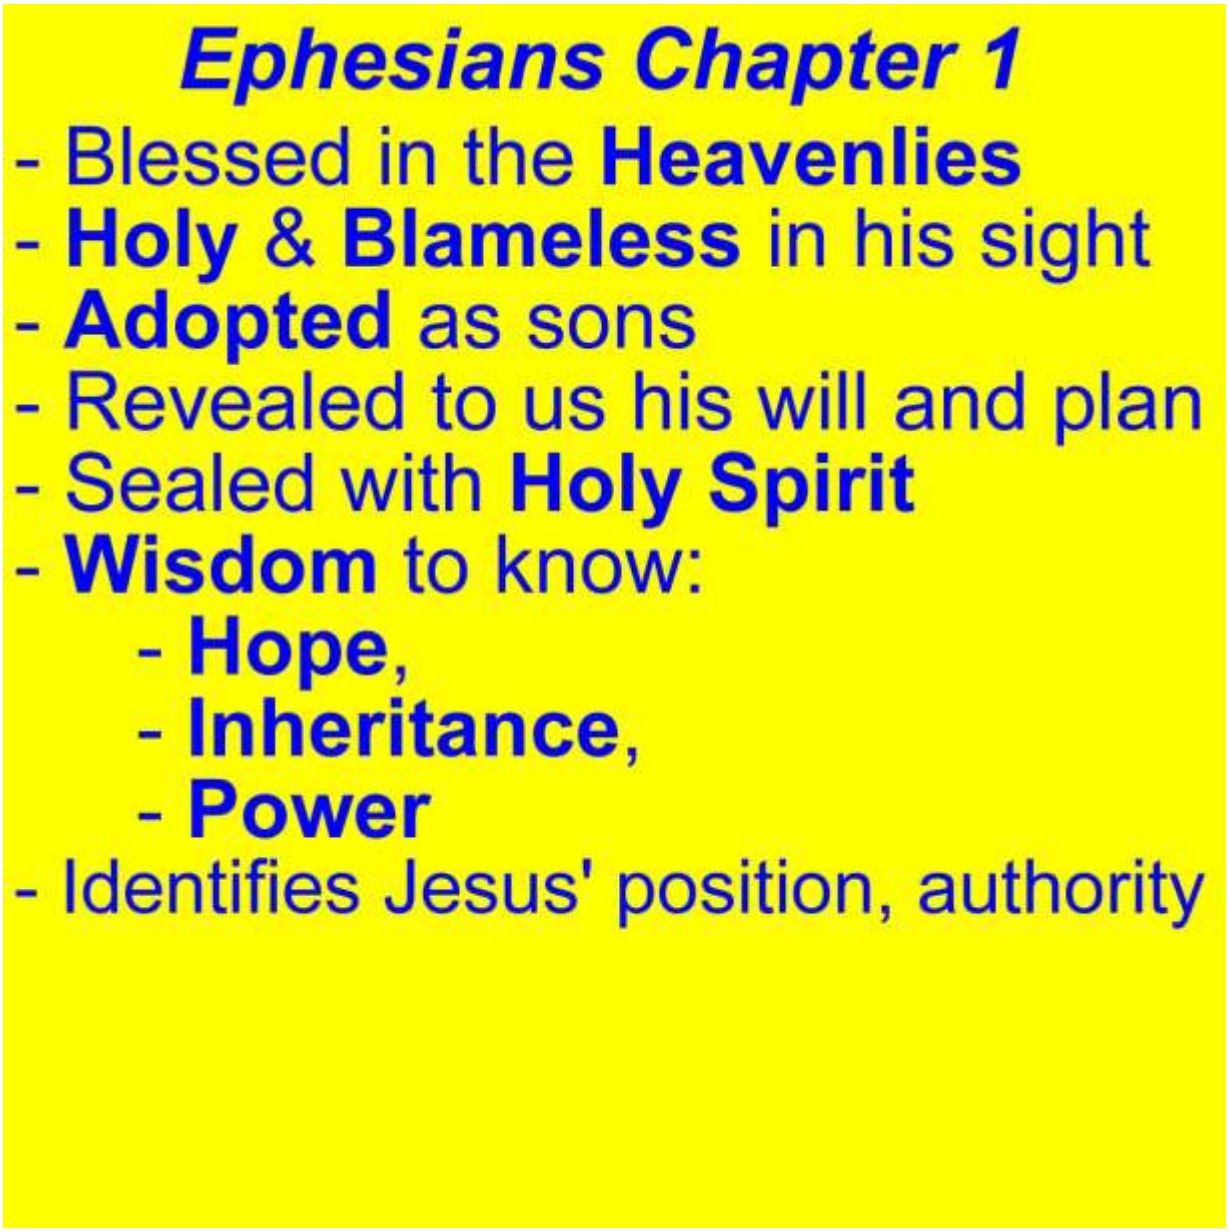
The Sociological Framework contrasted three models of 'doing church' and membership – we embrace the centered set with its values. We now examine the *Ministry Framework*through which we do church – key information for a responsible commitment to Following Jesus. We lay out our mission and vision; values, priorities and practices; leadership, structure and programs; and the specific expectations of belonging and membership (the content of the remaining 3 sessions).

Session 5: Ministry Framework – Continued

http://followingjesus.org.za/exploring-membership-5/

From Session 4: Priorities and practices are what we actually do… what we do first, of most importance, before we do other things. They answer the question of What? we do, and How? we do them… i.e. our basic disciplines and skills that we learn to do and practice on a regular basis – in order to live out our core values, in pursuit of our vision, to fulfill our mission under God.

Session 6: Committing to Membership with Following Jesus



http://followingjesus.org.za/exploring-membership-6/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Ephesians Chapter 1 Summary

(See also: Summary: Ephesians 1:1-14)

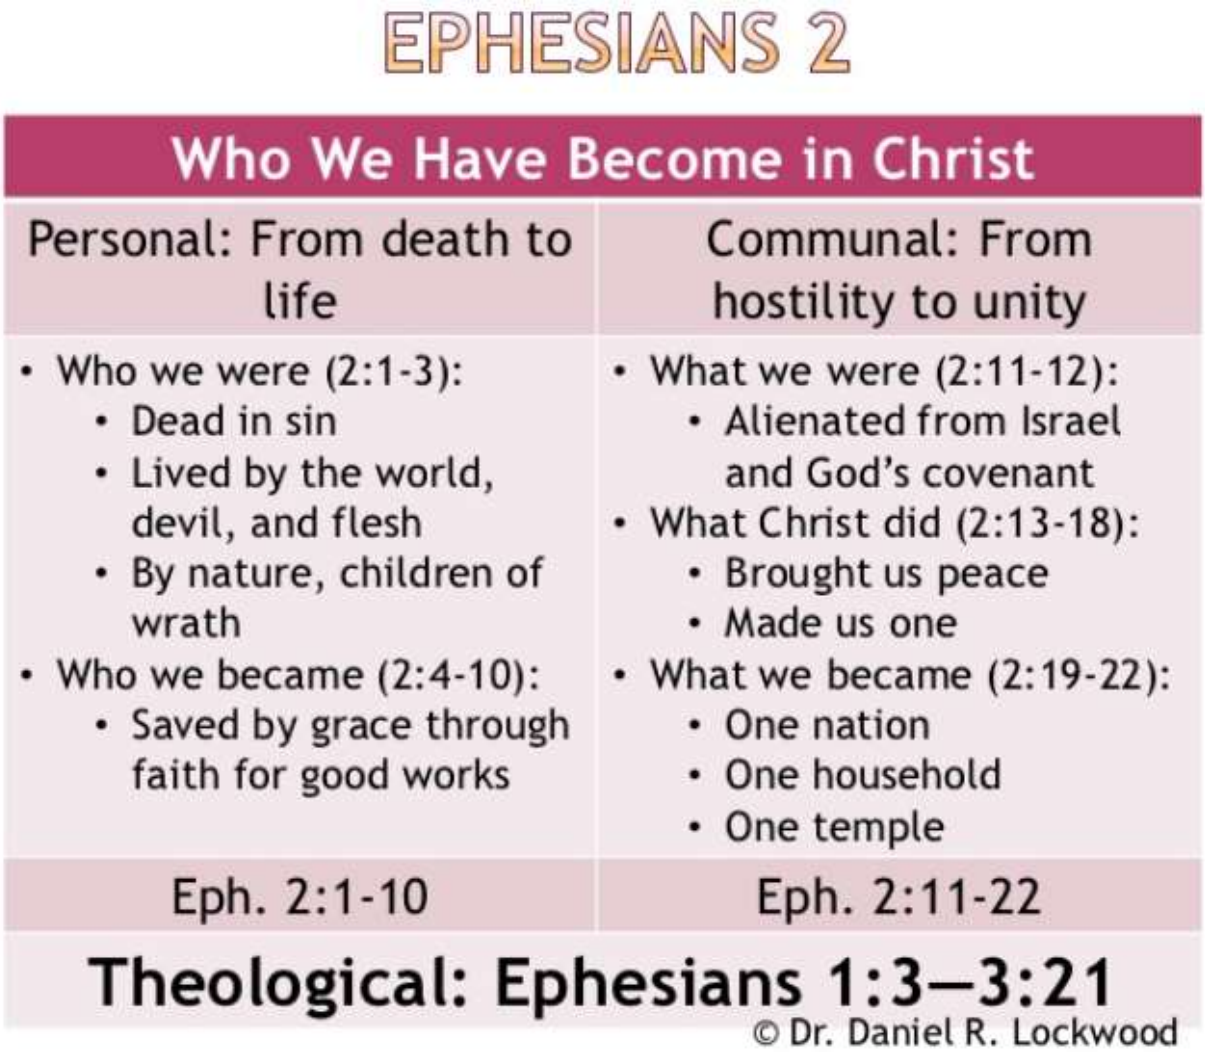
http://www.generationword.com/notes/ephesians/slides/ephesians_slide_webpage.html

Return to: Ephesians Highlights – Chapter 1 (Menu)



Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

[Go to Index]

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

[Go to Top - TOC]

Ephesians Chapter 2

Ephesians 2:1-7 (and 1:19-21)
See*: Two Spiritual Kingdoms

God's Household / Building
(Ephesians 2:19-22)

Ephesians 2:1-10 (Application)

Ephesians 2:2 (NET Bible)

Return to*: Ephesians Highlights (by Chapter, Main Menu)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Ephesians 2:1-10 Life After Death [NTWEPH Chp 3]

Many years ago, I was staying for a few days in Cape Town, South Africa. Among the people I wanted to meet was an elderly man who lived on the edge of the city, in one of the outer suburbs. We arranged by telephone that I should drive out, in a rented car, and have supper with him and his wife.

He gave me detailed instructions on how to find him. Unfortunately, when I set off it was dark, and raining, and I managed to start in the wrong direction on the expressway. Since he had told me to go for ten miles or so before looking for the signs to turn off, I didn't worry until I'd gone at least twelve or fifteen miles and none of the signs were making sense. Eventually I turned off the road and asked at a garage. They hadn't heard of the district I was looking for, never mind the street. I was totally in the wrong part of the city. Only gradually, when we studied the map, did I realize my mistake. I had been driving confidently, believing I was doing the right thing, but with every minute I had been going further and further away from where I wanted to be.

Read Ep 2:1-7. We live in a world where human beings, left to themselves, not only choose the wrong direction, but remain cheerfully confident that it is in fact the right one. What

If the problem is that the settled and habitual behavior of the whole human race leads people on the fast road toward death—the ultimate destruction of their humanness—the answer provided by God is a way through death and out into a new sort of life entirely. What has God done for us to get us on the right road (vv. 4-6)?

God made us alive and raised us up in Christ (vv. 4-6). What does verse 7 say God desires to accomplish by this?

> Of course, lots of people who are heading at speed in the wrong direction want to think of God as a bit stingy, or mean, or small-minded—just as people who are enjoying their drive don't like it if someone tells them they're going the wrong way, and that they're about to pass the last chance to turn off and head back again. But the crucial factor here, as always, is Jesus himself. Take away his resurrection, and for all anybody knows the road to death is the only road there is. Put it back in the picture, though, and you realize two things. First, there is another way. Second, you are urgently summoned to turn round and follow it.

Paul's gospel is all about grace that is more than mere enrichment. It gives life to the dead. It is God's free, undeserved gift.

Many people think they can earn their salvation by doing good works. Do you ever feel like you need to earn God's favor or grace? If so, why do you think it's hard for you to accept his grace as a free gift?

The "good works" which Paul mentions in verse 10 are not the same as the "works of the law" (which he rules out in Romans) which marked people as members of the Jewish community. The "good works" are the way of life Christians must now travel in the right direction, after the disastrously wrong journey described earlier. What are some good works for which God created us?

Verse 10 is one of Paul's central statements of how Christians are at the center of God's new creation. We are, he says, God's workmanship. This word sometimes has an artistic ring to it. It may be hinting that what God has done to us in King Jesus is a work of art, like a poem or sculpture. Or perhaps, granted what he goes on to say, we are like a musical score; and the music, which we now have to play, is the genuine way of being human, laid out before us in God's gracious design, so that we can follow it. They are the way of life which he will describe more fully in chapters 4— 6.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Ephesians Chapter 2 (verses 1-10)

Source: NIV Application Commnetary: Ephesians

To live out the implications of this text requires self-analysis and defiance. Christians must always distinguish between life with and without God. Again the focus is on our minds. What belongs to life as God created it and gave for our enjoyment? What belongs to the world as an attempt to find life in one's self and without God? On first glance the two may look the same — all humans have the same needs and drives — but the two approaches are miles apart. We must distinguish the world that God created from the world that human beings subvert to their own purposes. The former leads to worship of God; the latter leads to the wrath of God. Once we have distinguished God's order from the old order, we are obligated to defiance, a defiance rooted in the confession "Jesus is Lord." If Jesus is Lord, sin and the old world order cannot be our geography, and Christians must say a constant "No" to their attempts to define us.

Geography determines identity: Life in and with Christ (2:4 - 10). A Christian's self-understanding is found outside the Christian, and conversion is a transition to a new identity. Our true identity is not determined by personal characteristics, experiences, and abilities, even though those items are important. It is determined by life in and with Jesus Christ. He is the environment that shapes us. Paul felt this so forcefully that he said: "I have been crucified with Christ and I no longer live, but Christ lives in me" (Gal. 2:20). Specifically, Christ's death and resurrection are events reproduced in our lives. We die to the old world and its tyrannies of sin and self and rise to life in the Spirit (6:14 - 15). As important as imitation of Jesus is, identification with Christ is much more important. Our culture will always shape us, but Jesus Christ must be our primary culture. That is the force of the "co-resurrection" language.

To be in and with Christ means that ours is no longer an individual identity. We are in solidarity with Christ, or as 5:31 puts it, "we are members of his body." Life is relational, and our primary relation is with Jesus Christ. So what is this new identity? Because of our attachment to Christ, believers are people about whom it must be said:

> (1) They have experienced resurrection. Their living death has been turned into true life. They experience salvation as a present reality.
>
> (2) Their new lives are the very creation of God.
>
> (3) Exalted with Christ their Lord, they enjoy unparalleled privilege, honor, and security. They are not held back by fear or vulnerability; rather, they have what they need for life with God.
>
> (4) They experience God's abundant kindness throughout eternity.

In essence this passage screams out "Get a life!" Too often we have become spectators of life and spend enormous amounts of time on trivialities. Is not the fascination with the lives of the "rich and famous" due to our triviality? Why does our society spend so much time watching talk shows that discuss the banal and bizarre? We need to live out the transition from death to life (2:1 - 10) by turning from banality to life with Christ.

So why is the identity question so important? An understanding of identity is not some philosophical or theological question for idle musing. It is an understanding of who we are — whether consciously or unconsciously known — and it determines how we live.

Three more wrong turns. Knowledge of our new identity can lead to pride, escapism, and perfectionism. Each of these is a wrong turn in our walk with God. Each is also a variation on the Christian sin of triumphalism. We as Christians must learn to distinguish our legitimate triumph (e.g., Rom. 8:37; 2 Cor. 2:14 - 3:6) from the arrogant sin of triumphalism.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

(1) The privileges we have from God by virtue of our salvation can easily be turned into pharisaic pride and an accompanying disdain for other people who do not know these facts. If we do that, we forget that all our privileges are due to association with Christ, not to ourselves. Pride is as wrong after conversion as before. Worship and obedience are the only proper responses to God's call.

(2) The ideas of privilege and exaltation with Christ can lead to spiritual escapism, as if to say that because we are exalted with Christ, we need have nothing to do with this world. Nothing could be further from Paul's mind, as the paraenetic sections show. Paul does not support mystic narcissism or ethical passivity; rather, he promotes new creation and identity with Christ as the shaping factor in our lives. Being in Christ affirms that he gives us our identity and determines who we are. As James Stewart points out, union with Christ is the foundation of Paul's ethics.

(3) Texts like this have led some to the delusion of perfectionism. If we are exalted with Christ, should we not be free from all sin? If we are in Christ and he is in us, then should not sin be impossible for us? Again, balance is required. Most of us assume that sin is just a necessary part of life. Our expectations are low in our fight against sin. But Paul's expectations were high. He was optimistic and fully confident believers would live godly lives. But he did not believe in or hint at perfectionism (see 1 Cor. 13:8 - 13; Phil. 3:12 - 16). To believe in perfectionism is to forget the now and not yet character of biblical Christianity. We do live in two ages, and the reality of the old age and its impact on us cannot be ignored. Worse, to believe in perfectionism is to be blinded by one's own spiritual arrogance.

In addition to the wrong turns a caution is in order. This passage presents a picture of radical change in moving from death to life. While this picture is true in reality, not all people experience such a dramatic conversion, nor should they be expected to. People who grow up in godly families may not even be able to identify the time of conversion. Some conversions, like Paul's (Acts 9), are dramatic, other, like Timothy's (2 Tim. 1:5), are gradual; some are revolutionary, some evolutionary — though in both cases the movement is from death to life, dealing with the same theology of sin.

Eternal security? The theological question concerning eternal security is prompted by the triumphal tone of the text and the emphasis of Ephesians on being "in Christ." If one is in Christ, can one move out of Christ? If one is seated with Christ in the heavenlies, can that position be lost? It is tempting to assume that the logic behind this text presupposes eternal security. If we have been saved, does that not presuppose eternal security? (See also: Eternal Security of the Believer)

Such a conclusion is unfair. In the New Testament salvation is past, present, and future. Salvation certainly is enjoyed in the present, and Paul was confident — but not presumptuous — about future judgment. But he is not dealing here with the possibility of apostasy, which the New Testament views as a real threat. Rather, he is describing the privilege of being joined with Christ. Whether that union can be broken has to be addressed from other texts.

We should ask, however, if the anxiety over eternal security does not emerge from an inadequate view of the gospel, one that fails to do justice to Paul's theology of union with Christ. A weak view of faith is propped up with overemphasis on "once saved, always saved." Such preaching has too often resulted in people "making a decision" and not taking faith seriously ever again. Nothing could be further from Paul's understanding of faith, and no one should proclaim such a gospel.

For more about salvation and eternal security see my other separate references resource*: The Gospel, Salvation and Evangelism

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Ephesians 2:2

http://netbible.com/ephesians-22-net-bible

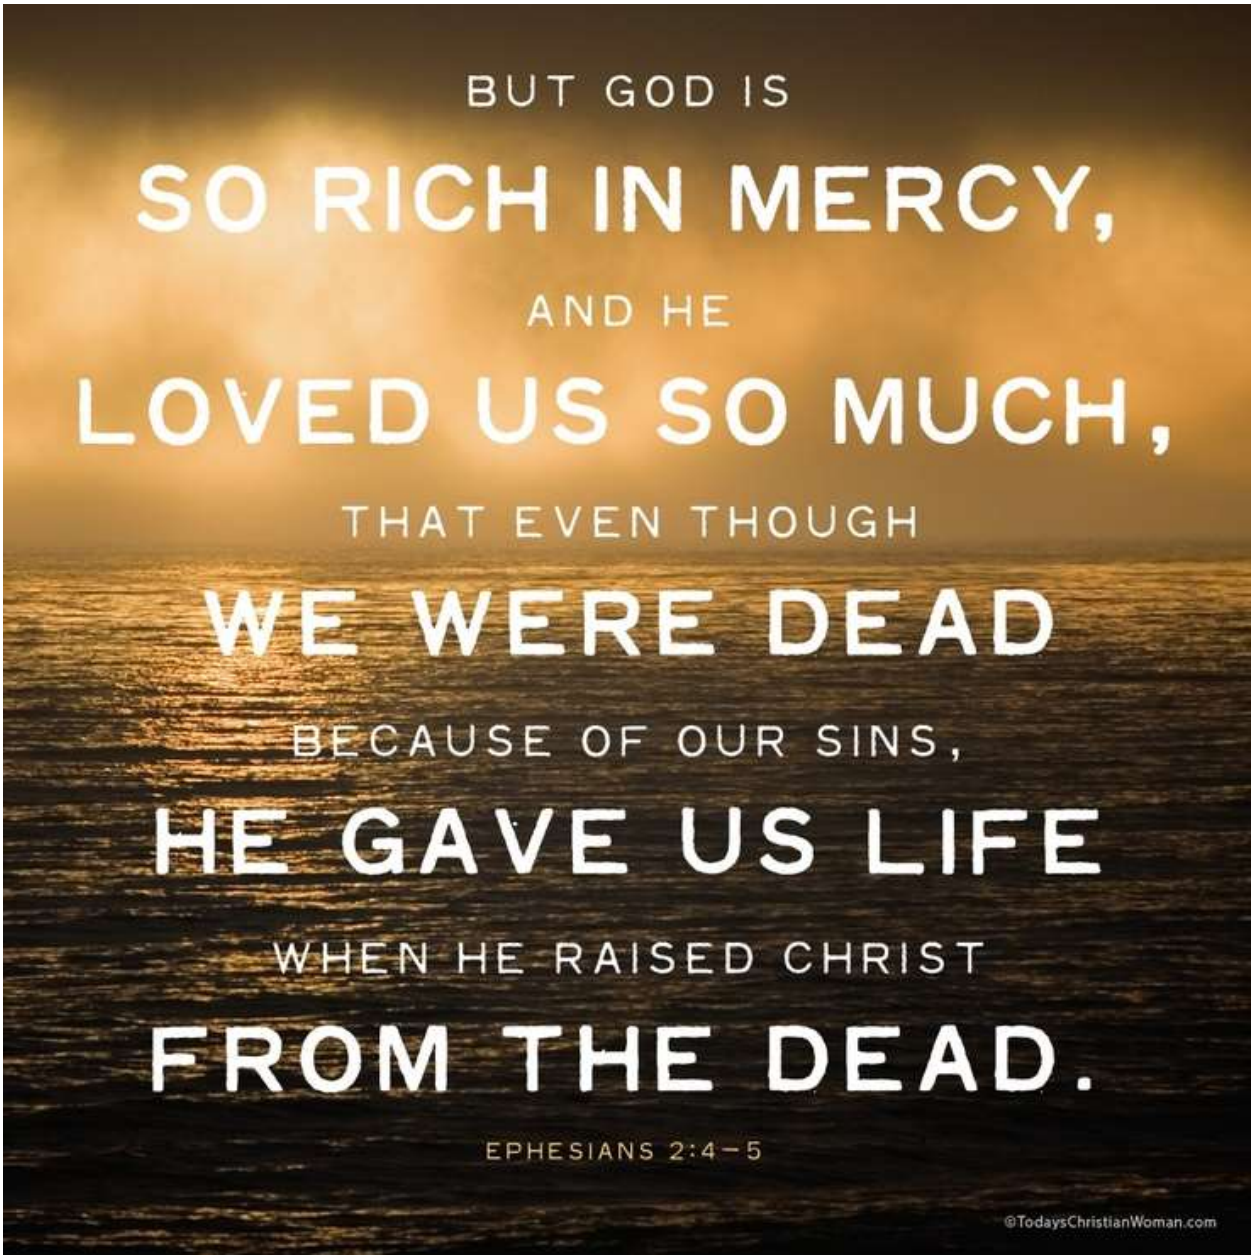
Excerpt:

> "in which you formerly lived according to this world's present path, according to the ruler of the kingdom of the air, the ruler of the spirit that is now energizing the sons of disobedience"

In Ephesians 2.1-3, the apostle Paul describes the status of believers before they believed. He begins by painting a rather bleak picture, "you were dead in your sins"—that is, they were spiritually unresponsive to anything outside of sin. In v. 2, he goes on to speak of these pre-believers as living in such sins "according to the world's present path." That is, the unbeliever's life is dictated more by culture and the age in which he lives than by any transcultural principles. Then, Paul delivers a double whammy: our lives used to be "according to the ruler of the kingdom of the air, the ruler of the spirit that is now energizing the sons of disobedience." In other words, our lives used to be run by the god of this world, the devil himself, who ruled over both our external environment (the kingdom of the air) and over the spirit that energizes the rest of the unbelieving world.

Various Translations

The NET Bible here has a subtle difference from many, if not most, other translations. By adding 'the ruler' before 'of the spirit' it is explicitly denying that the ruler is the spirit. Listen to other translations on this part of the verse:…



[Note: the above article is a good example of the translation challenges that all Bible translators face and a detailed analysis of the various options/challenges in obtaining the "best" (or optimum) English translation.]

Return to*: Ephesians Highlights (by Chapter, Main Menu)

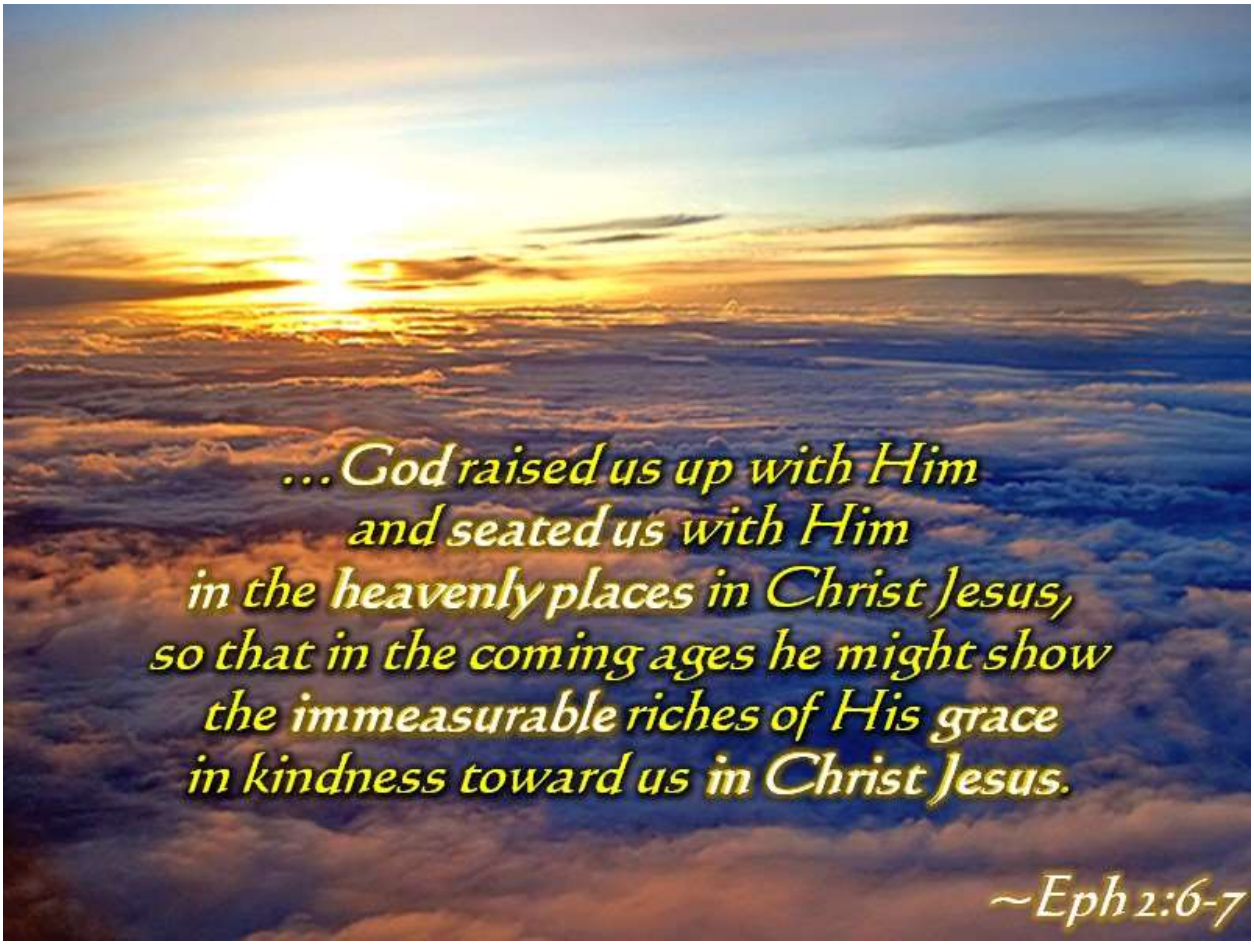
Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Ephesians 2:4-5



Source: TodaysChristianWoman.com

Return to*: Ephesians Highlights (by Chapter, Main Menu)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

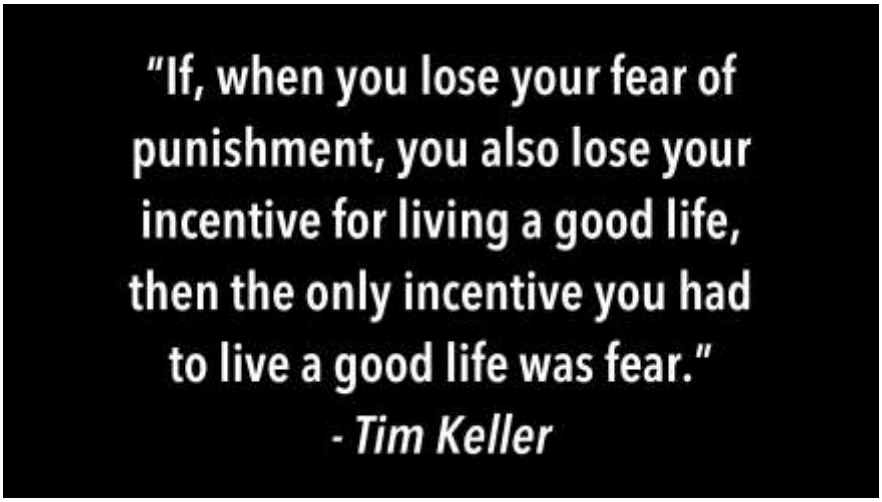
 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

http://songsandscriptures.blogspot.com/2010/03/ephesians-21-10.html

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

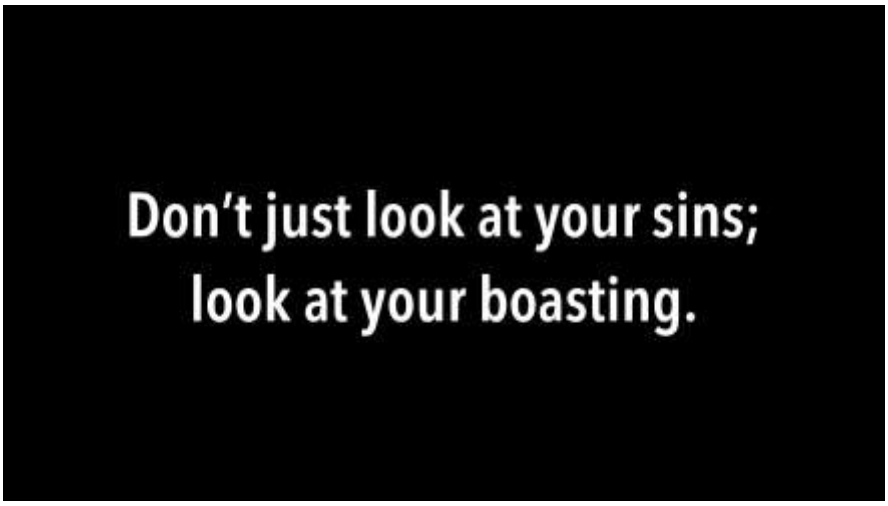


http://songsandscriptures.blogspot.com/2010/03/ephesians-21-10.html

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

re: Boasting

Some people think that if God really gave salvation away as a free gift there would be no incentive to live a good life.



Tim Keller talks about this: "If when you lose your fear of punishment, you lose your incentive to be good, then the only incentive you had to be good was the fear," That would mean, if you try to do good things that ultimately benefit you, the good things you do are not really good. Why not? Because "goodness" is unselfish living so if you do good with a selfish motivation to get good and avoid bad, then the good you do is not good.

Knowing your good deeds won't make you more acceptable to God makes your good deeds good.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Here's what makes you a Christian—don't just look at your sins; look at your boasting.

Look at what you boast in as your righteousness. Look at the things you think justify you as a good person worthy of God's acceptance, and repent of that.

For more details see*: No More Boasting

See also*: Antinomianism

Return to*: Ephesians Highlights (by Chapter, Main Menu)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

http://artbyerinleigh.blogspot.com/2014/01/sunday-scripture-epesians-210-you-are.html

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

https://brojerome.com/2013/04/21/who-we-are-in-him/

REFLECTIONS: God's Poiema

In a passage packed with significance, Paul reminds us that we are God's workmanship — His poiema. The scholars who translated Isaiah's Hebrew into Greek used this same word in a familiar passage: "You turn things around! Shall the potter be considered as equal with the clay, that what is made should say to its maker, 'He did not make me'; Or what is formed [poiema] say to him who formed it, 'He has no understanding'?" (Isa. 29:16). God made us and we are His.

Considered from an ethical standpoint, this basic truth is potent. Our day abounds with sticky questions and moral quandaries — cloning, embryonic stem-cell research, genetic modification, etc. We must remember the human claim to self-determination is bounded by God's claim to ownership. He and He alone holds the deed to each person's life. Adam T. Barr

Source: Zondervan Bible Commentary

Return to*: Ephesians Highlights (by Chapter, Main Menu)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Michelangelo's Salvation

> Ephesians 2:4-10: [4] But God, who is rich in mercy, for his great love wherewith he loved us, [5] Even when we were dead in sins, hath quickened us together with Christ, (by grace ye are saved;) [6] And hath raised [us] up together, and made [us] sit together in heavenly [places] in Christ Jesus: [7] That in the ages to come he might shew the exceeding riches of his grace in [his] kindness toward us through Christ Jesus. [8] For by grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves: [it is] the gift of God: [9] Not of works, lest any man should boast. [10] For we are his workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works, which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them.

The greatest artist Michelangelo Buonarroti produced masterpieces that are among the finest works of art in the world. None can compare to his sculpture of David or the ceiling of the Sistine Chapel. Since he often worked at the bidding of the Pope, nearly all of his subject matter was religious. We should not be surprised that he took appropriate pride in what he was doing for God, but he did so with the problematic perspective of hoping that his work would earn God's favor.

Toward the end of his life, Michelangelo became intrigued with what the Reformers were teaching about making peace with God through faith apart from works. Accepting the reality that all of his good works could do nothing to remove his sin, he embraced Jesus as his Savior. He realized that what he had supposedly done for God actually eclipsed God in his life. In a sonnet titled "On the Brink of Death," he confessed:

> Now know I well how that fond fantasy
>
> Which made my soul
>
> The worshipper and thrall
>
> Of earthly art is vain; . . .
>
> Painting nor sculpture now can lull to rest
>
> My soul that turns
>
> To his great love on high,
>
> Whose arms to clasp us
>
> On the cross were spread

Until his dying day, Michelangelo never stopped expressing himself through art – no longer for merit, but for love.

This is a lesson for those of us who have believed with all of our hearts that our salvation is based by God's grace alone. Far too often we have been guilty of doing good works in an effort to impress others and gain favor with God. No matter how hard we try, we can't do anything to earn God's favor, and we certainly can't outdo his workmanship. All that we do for him should overflow from a heart of love and gratitude for all that he has done for us.

We are trophies of his grace! At the cross he extended to us his favor. Let's live to express our loving gratitude to him.

Joe Stowell, 2006, Our Journey: A Daily Walk in the Word.

RBC Ministries, Grand Rapids, MI

Source: https://www.pilgrimtours.com/website/church_history/italy/devotionals_history/Michelangelo.htm

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Ephesians 2:11-22 Welcome to the Family [NTWEPH Chp 4]

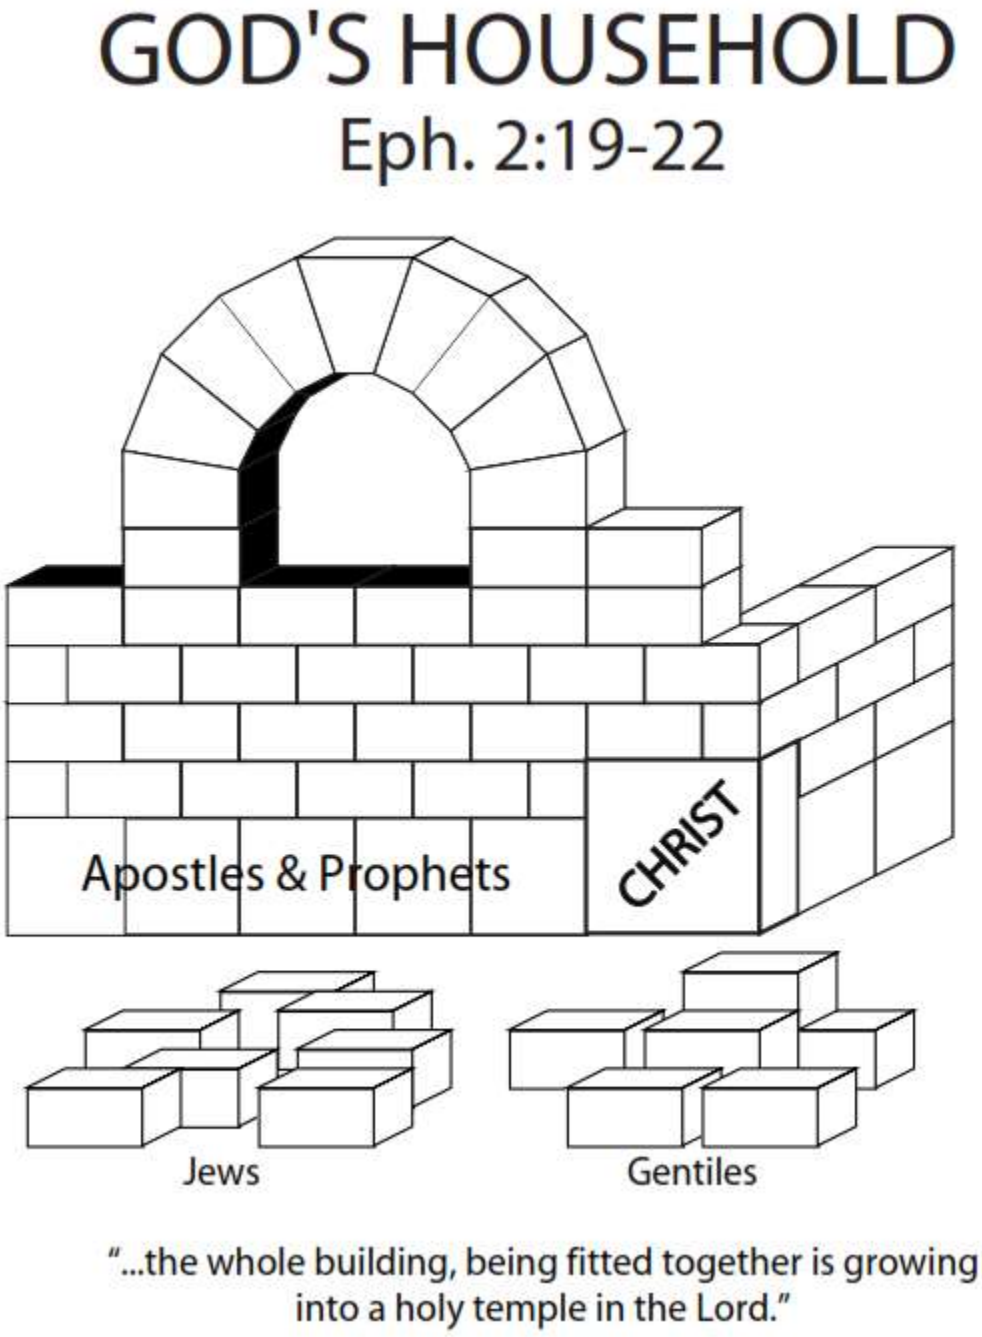
One of the greatest worldwide problems of our time is the plight of refugees and asylum-seekers. People in the West sometimes try to pretend that the world is now a civilized place where most people can go about their business in peace, and at least relative prosperity. But the evidence suggests that is overoptimistic. More people than ever, it seems, are displaced from homes and homelands, and find themselves wandering the world in search of somewhere to live. The countries where they arrive are often overwhelmed, and find that their resources, and their patience, are under strain, despite feeling sympathetic to people who have often suffered a great deal.

What refugees want above all, assuming that they can never return to their original homes, is to be accepted into a new community where they can rebuild their lives and their families. And the ultimate sign of that acceptance is to receive citizenship in the country they have adopted as their own. Their new passport is often their proudest possession. At last they can hold their heads up and build a new sense of identity. They have arrived. They belong.

Read Ep 2:11-16. Spiritually, we become part of a new group too. How does Paul describe Gentiles before they became part of this new group (vv. 11-13)?

> The word Paul uses in verse 12 to describe them as having no god is the word from which we get our word atheists . This is ironic, because that's what Gentiles used to call Jews, and then came to call Christians as well, since neither Jews nor Christians had statues of their gods. Neither, so far as the Gentile eye could see, offered animal sacrifice, consulted oracles or did any of the other things that pagans associated with worship of their gods. Paul, boldly standing on the same ground as Jewish writers of the same period, declares that the pagan gods are actually non-gods. Those who think they worship them are worshiping something that doesn't really exist.

What did Jesus do specifically for Gentiles on the one hand (vv. 12-14) and for Jewish people on the other (vv. 14-15)? Why did God do all this (v. 16)?



> Today's church may no longer face the question of the integration of Jew and Gentile into a single family, though there are places where that is still a major issue. But we face, quite urgently, the question which Paul would insist on as a major priority. If our churches are still divided in any way along racial or cultural lines, he would say that our gospel, our very grasp of the meaning of Jesus' death, is called into question.

Paul describes our equality in Jesus with three images: citizens, family and building. How is each of these three words descriptive of people before and after they become Christians (vv. 19-22)?

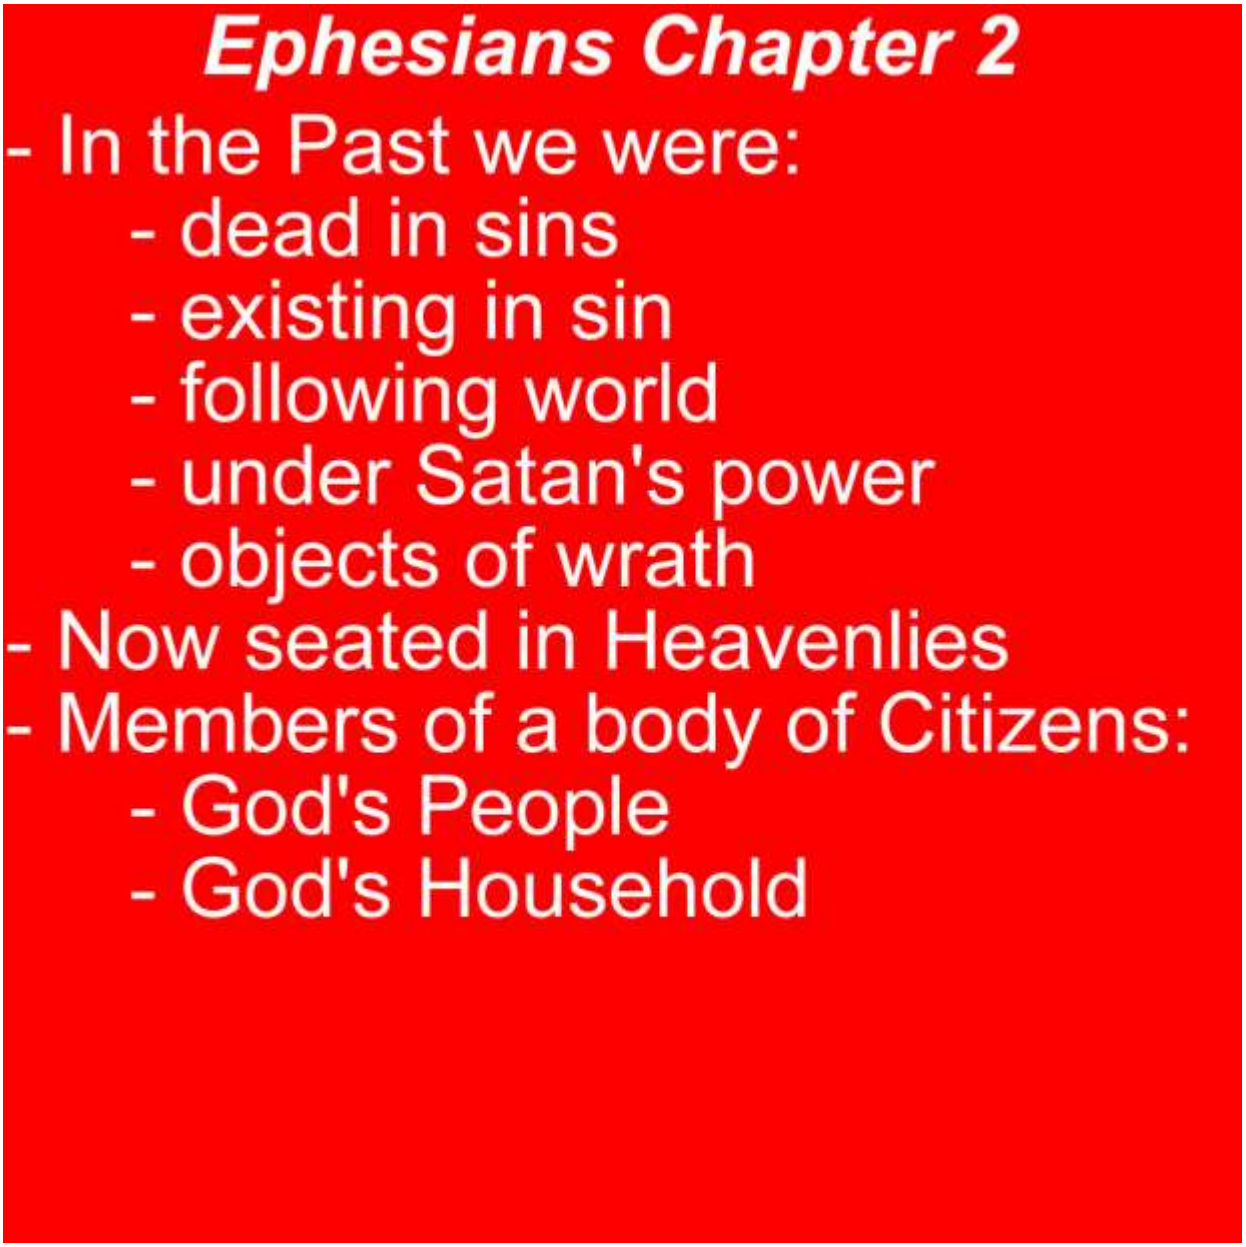
> The closing verses of the chapter take one of the central symbols of Judaism and turn it inside out. The temple in Jerusalem was not only the religious heart of the nation, and the place of pilgrimage of Jews throughout the world. It was also the political, social, musical and cultural heart of Jerusalem—as well as the place of celebration and feasting. The reason for all this was, of course, that Israel's God had promised to live there. It was, many believed, the place where earth and heaven met.
>
> But now Paul is declaring that the living God is constructing a new temple. It consists not of stones, arches, pillars and altars, but of human beings. Some Jews had already explored the idea that a community, rather than a building, might be the place where God would really and truly take up his residence. But until Paul nobody had said anything quite like this.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

God's Household (Ephesians 2:19-22)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Ephesians 2: 19-22



https://shayreyner.com/2012/03/

Return to*: Ephesians Highlights (by Chapter, Main Menu)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

http://www.generationword.com/notes/ephesians/slides/ephesians_slide_webpage.html

Return to*: Ephesians Highlights (by Chapter, Main Menu)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Ephesians Chapter 3

Mystery in Ephesians

(See also: "Mystery" in the Bible)

Return to*: Ephesians Highlights (by Chapter, Main Menu)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

[Go to Index]

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

[Go to Top - TOC]

Ephesians 3:1-13 God's Secret Plan Revealed [NTWEPH Chp 5]

Naomi had started a small dressmaking business. The brightly colored fabrics of her part of Africa were popular not only in the surrounding district but also, she'd heard, in foreign countries.

She employed two women to help with the dressmaking, and a young man to travel to the city to buy supplies and sell the finished products. Together they worked hard, and soon they had more orders than they could easily complete. Naomi hired two more helpers.

One day one of the women said, "You know, I wonder if we could make other things as well as dresses? Curtains? Covers for chairs? Things like that?"

The others agreed enthusiastically.

Naomi smiled. She went to her desk and took out a sealed envelope, which had a date written across the seal—the day on which she started the business. She passed the envelope to the woman who had asked the question.

"Open it, and read it out."

She opened the envelope and read the paper. It contained the plan for a larger business that would make the wonderful fabrics into all sorts of things people might want in their homes.

"I've kept it a secret all this time," said Naomi. "I knew if I told you from the start you'd say I was daydreaming and then you'd have started daydreaming yourselves. We had to prove we could make dresses first. But this is what I planned all along. Let's do it!"

Read Ep 3:1-13. Paul's picture of God in this passage is a bit like the picture of Naomi. What was God's secret plan (vv. 1-6)?

What three great privileges did the Gentiles attain (together with the Jews) in this plan (v. 6)?

> Fancy hearing the news that a family down the street has come into a large and wealthy inheritance—and then being told that you are to become full members of that family, with instant privileges identical to theirs! That's the situation that Christian Gentiles now find themselves in.

What task did God give Paul (vv. 8-9)?

> Paul is the one chosen by God to pioneer the plan. In terms of Naomi and her dressmaking business, he hadn't been expecting the localized and family-based company (Israel) to expand like this (to reach out to include non-Jews on equal terms).

How does Paul describe God's secret plan (v. 10)?

> The heart of the present passage is verse 10, which is one of the New Testament's most powerful statements of the reason for the church's existence: the rulers and authorities must be confronted with God's wisdom, in all its rich variety, and this is to happen through the church! Not, we should quickly add, through what the church says, though that is vital as well. Rather, through what the church is, namely, the community in which men, women and children of every race, color, social and cultural background come together in glad worship of the one true God.
>
> It is precisely this many-sided, many-colored, many-splendored identity of the church that makes the point. God's wisdom, Paul is saying, is like that too: like a many-faceted diamond which twinkles and sparkles with all the colors in the rainbow. The "rulers and authorities," however—both the earthly authorities and their shadowy heavenly counterparts—always tend to create societies and social structures in their own flat, boring image, monochrome, uniform and one-> dimensional. Worse: they tend to marginalize or kill people or groups who don't fit their narrow band of acceptability. The church is to be, by the very fact of its existence, a warning to them that their time is up, and an announcement to the world that there is a different way to be human.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The fact that Paul is in prison is a sign that the Christian way is indeed posing a decisive threat to the rule of evil in the world.

Return to*: Ephesians Highlights (by Chapter, Main Menu)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Mystery (Ephesians 3:3-6) (Dr. Thomas Constable's Notes on Ephesians)

http://www.soniclight.com/constable/notes/htm/NT/Ephesians/Ephesians.htm

(See also: Mystery in the Bible)

3:3 Paul's duty involved receiving "revelation" not previously given (i.e., "the mystery," secret), specifically that Gentiles and Jews were equal partners in the church (2:16; 3:6). Paul had written of this mystery before in this epistle (1:9-10; 2:11-22). Paul did not mean that he was the only apostle who received knowledge of this mystery, as verse 5 shows.

New Testament References to "Mysteries"(things previously unknown but now revealed) [186]
Matt. 13:11	The secrets of the kingdom of heaven
Luke 8:10	The secrets (mysteries) of the kingdom of God
Rom. 11:25	Israel experiencing a hardening of heart
Rom. 16:25-26	The plan of salvation through Jesus Christ.
1 Cor. 4:1	New Testament revelation
1 Cor. 15:51	The Rapture
Eph. 1:9	God's will
Eph. 3:2-3	The administration of God's grace
Eph. 3:4	Christ
Eph. 3:9	The church
Eph. 5:32	Christ and the church
Col. 1:26	Christ in us, the hope of glory
Col. 1:27	Christ in us
Col. 2:2	Christ
Col. 4:3	Christ
2 Thess. 2:7	The secret power of lawlessness already at work
1 Tim. 3:9	The deep truths of the faith
1 Tim. 3:16	Godliness
Rev. 1:20	The seven stars (angels)
Rev. 10:7	The details of the Tribulation
Rev. 17:5	Babylon the great

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

3:4 What Paul had already written about this mystery revealed his understanding of ("insight into") it.

3:5 The mystery was unknown before God revealed it to the New Testament "apostles and prophets." "Prophets" may be a more specific description of "apostles" here (cf. 2:20). That means God did not reveal the church in the Old Testament.

Specifically what is the mystery in view here? Traditional dispensationalists, as distinguished from "progressive dispensationalists" and covenant theologians, have understood the mystery to be the church, the body of Christ.[187] By "traditional dispensationalists," I am referring to normative dispensationalists, which some "progressive dispensationalists" have subdivided into "classical" and "revised" dispensationalists.

"Paul then, is explaining, not limiting the mystery there set forth [by his reference to the equality of Jews and Gentiles]. The concept must stand that this whole age with its program was not revealed in the Old Testament, but constitutes a new program and a new line of revelation in this present age."[188]

"At least four defining characteristics of the church are described as a mystery. (1) The body concept of Jewish and Gentile believers united into one body is designated as a mystery in Ephesians 3:1-12. (2) The doctrine of Christ indwelling every believer, the Christ-in-you concept, is called a mystery in Colossians 1:24-27 (cf. Col. 2:10-19; 3:4, 11). (3) The church as the Bride of Christ is called a mystery in Ephesians 5:22-32. (4) The Rapture is called a mystery in 1 Corinthians 15:50-58. These four mysteries describe qualities that distinguish the church from Israel."[189]

Amillennialists, covenant premillennialists, and progressive dispensationalists say that the mystery is not the church itself, but the equality of Jews and Gentiles.[190] Some of them see the church in the Old Testament.[191]

"The mystery referred to in the 'dispensation of the mystery' (Eph. 3:9) is the relationship of Jews and Gentiles to Christ and to one another. This relationship is the distinguishing characteristic of the church."[192]

"The mystery of verse 6 may thus be summed up as the coequal participation of the Gentiles with Israel in the full messianic salvation that is realized in the crucified and risen Christ and made effective to both through the apostolic proclamation of the gospel. This truth of the unity of Gentiles and Israel in the church, which has already been introduced in connection with the 'mystery of his will' (1:9-14, esp. vv. 12-13) and elaborated in 2:11-22, stands behind all of the teachings of the epistle as the central theme."[193]

These two groups of interpreters view the church differently. Traditional dispensationalists understand the church to be an intercalation or parenthesis in God's kingdom program. Some of them refer to the church as the "mystery form of the kingdom." They see the church as a hiatus in God's dealings with Israel on the earth. Consequently the church is a completely new entity, not simply the continuation of the Old Testament theocracy.[194]

Amillennialists, covenant premillennialists, and progressive dispensationalists view the nature of the church differently. They believe the church is a progressive stage in the historical unfolding of God's kingdom program on earth. It is from this progressive unfolding of the dispensations or economies in God's earthly kingdom program, that the term "progressive dispensationalism" comes.[195] They stress the continuity between the past, present, and future rules of God over the earth. Non-dispensationalists typically refer to the church as the "new Israel." Traditional dispensationalists stress the discontinuity between Israel and the church, both in the past and in the future.

Was the mystery revealed in any sense in the Old Testament, or was this revelation something entirely new in Paul's day? Traditional dispensationalists respond that neither the church as a distinct entity, nor the equality of Jews and Gentiles in the church, was previously revealed. (They do recognize that, in the Old Testament, God revealed that Gentiles would be saved [e.g., Isa. 11:10; 42:6; 60:3; Zech. 2:11; Mal. 1:11].)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Traditional dispensationalists appeal to the meaning of "mystery" for support. "Mystery" (Gr. mysterion) in the New Testament refers to "'a truth which was once hidden but now is revealed,' 'a truth which without special revelation would have been unknown.'"[196] "As" (v. 5) does not mean that God had revealed it previously, but now revealed it more fully in Paul's day, as the context (v. 9; cf. 2:16) and Colossians 1:26 make clear. God had not explicitly revealed anything about the church in the Old Testament.

"The general assertion, sometimes made, that these mysteries did not appear at all in the Old Testament should be modified. They are not there advanced in any clearness or fullness of revelation. However, certain New Testament mysteries are anticipated in Old Testament prophecy and type."[197]

Amillennialists, covenant premillennialists, and progressive dispensationalists say "yes and no." The church was revealed in the Old Testament, not by that name, perhaps, but as a future stage in the earthly kingdom of God. Nevertheless the equality of Gentiles and Jews in one body (2:15-16) was new revelation. On this last point, all of these interpreters agree. Allis, an amillennialist, wrote the following:

". . . it [the mystery] was new and unknown in a relative sense only, being in its essentials an important theme of prophecy from the time of Abraham . . ."[198]

". . . a 'mystery' need not even have been unknown or unappreciated previously, except perhaps relatively so . . ."[199]

"A mystery may be hidden in the sense that its truth has not yet been realized."[200]

The correct interpretation depends on a proper identification of the mystery and an accurate understanding of the nature of the church.

The question of whether or not the Davidic (messianic) kingdom has already begun relates to the answer. Traditional dispensationalists say that it has not begun, since the Davidic kingdom is an earthly kingdom, and therefore Christ will only begin to reign over it when He returns to earth. Amillennialists, covenant premillennialists, and progressive dispensationalists all say that the messianic kingdom has begun, since Christ is now enthroned in heaven.

These groups, however, interpret the nature of the messianic kingdom differently. Some amillennialists say the messianic kingdom is Christ's heavenly rule. Others say that it will be His earthly rule in the new heavens and earth. Covenant premillennialists and progressive dispensationalists say that the messianic kingdom is a two-stage rule. Christ now rules from heaven through the church, and in the future He will return and reign on earth. Thus there is an "already" aspect, and there is also a "not yet" aspect to the messianic kingdom.

If the Davidic kingdom is an exclusively earthly reign of Messiah, then it seems that the church is not just a segment of this kingdom. Messiah would need to be present to reign over this kingdom. Unquestionably He exercises universal sovereignty presently, but this seems to be different from His reign as David's heir over David's earthly kingdom. The church enters into many blessings because of Christ's death, resurrection, and ascension, not because He rules as the Davidic king from heaven now. Some of these blessings are identical to what believers will enjoy when Christ returns to reign on the earth. This should not lead us to conclude, however, that the church is the first stage of Christ's messianic kingdom.

I believe that the mystery in view, here, is the equality of Jews and Gentiles in the church (v. 6).[201] But this is only one mystery concerning the church that the New Testament reveals. Taken together, all these mysteries present the church as a distinct entity in God's plan, and not a continuation or replacement of Israel, or just one aspect of the messianic kingdom. Neither the church, nor the present equal relationship of Jews and Gentiles, was explicitly revealed in the Old Testament, though future Gentile salvation, and

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Gentile blessing through Israel, were. God had revealed His purpose to bless Gentiles along with Jews from Genesis 12:3 onward (cf. Isa. 2:1-4; 61:5-6).

Note that Paul said God revealed the mystery "to His holy apostles and prophets" by the Spirit. He did not reveal the church only to Paul. Ultradispensationalists claim that the church could not have begun before Paul appeared on the scene, since he was the apostle through whom revelation concerning this mystery came.[202]

3:6 This is the content of the mystery (cf. 2:11-22). First, Gentiles and Jews are "fellow heirs" of God's riches that He presently bestows on believers (cf. 2:19; 1:13-14; Gal. 3:29; 4:7). Second, they are "fellow members of the body" of Christ, which is the church (Col. 1:18). Third, they are "fellow partakers of the promise" concerning Christ in "the gospel" (i.e., that whoever trusts in Him has everlasting life; John 3:16; et al.). The mystery is not that Gentiles would enjoy salvation and enter into blessing along with Israel. God revealed that in the Old Testament (Gen. 12:3; Isa. 42:6; et al.). It is that God has joined Jews and Gentiles as equals in one new body, which is the church (cf. 1 Cor. 12:13).[203]

"That Gentiles were to be saved was no mystery (Rom. 9:24-33; 10:19-21). The mystery 'hidden in God' was the divine purpose to make of Jew and Gentile a wholly new thing—'the Church, which is his [Christ's] body,' formed by the baptism with the Holy Spirit (1 Cor. 12:12-13) and in which the earthly distinction of Jew and Gentile disappears (Eph. 2:14-15; Col. 3:10-11). The revelation of this 'mystery' of the Church was foretold but not explained by Christ (Mt. 16:18). The details concerning the doctrine, position, walk, and destiny of the Church were committed to Paul and his fellow 'apostles and prophets by the Spirit' (Eph. 3:5)."[204]

See*: More about Mystery

http://markryman.com/BLOG/tag/ephesians/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Ephesians 3:1-6 – Sacred Secrets

https://redeeminggod.com/sermons/ephesians/ephesians_3_1-6/

Excerpt:

When I first preached this passage years ago, I followed the view that Ephesians 1[?3]:1-13 is a parenthesis in Paul's thought, and that he starts a thought in verse 1, and only picks it up in verse 14 (the repeated phrase "For this reason" provides the primary evidence for this). This approach, I believe, contributes somewhat to missing Paul's entire point.

Paul's primary point in Ephesians can be summarized in one word: "Peace!" Through Jesus, there is peace with God, peace with one another, and together, all of us are working toward universal peace (which includes bringing the principalities and powers back into their proper place).

So Paul's point in Ephesians 3 is that he wants the Ephesian Christians to live at peace with each other.

Why? Well, not only because this is the best way to live and because everybody wants peace, but because the world doesn't know how to attain peace, and if we live at peace with each other, the world will learn how to do so as well. Your life is a sermon to a watching world. By watching us, we show them how to live at peace with each other. (The "watching world" doesn't just include people, but also the principalities and powers.)

Great! But how do we do this? It is impossible to just "get along" with some people. It begins by knowing the love of Christ for you (3:19). That is the first step toward peace. Only once you know that you are loved can you begin to love. And love is the first (and last … and only) step toward peace.

When we approach Ephesians 3 this way, we see that all of Ephesians 3 follows perfectly and logically from the truths we have seen from Ephesians 2. Ephesians 2:1-13 is not a tangent, a rabbit trail, or an aside from Paul. It is an answer to an objection that Paul knows his readers are thinking.

So far in this letter, Paul has told the Ephesians that we are all heirs of God, and that through Jesus, God has brought peace to the world.

Yet Paul knows exactly what his Ephesians readers are thinking. They are looking around at the world, and at their own situation, and at Paul's situation, and they are thinking, "We are spiritually rich? We are heirs of God? There is peace through Christ? It certainly doesn't look like it from our perspective. And it certainly doesn't look like it from your perspective either, Paul. After all, you are sitting in prison. That sure looks like you an heir of God and that there is peace in the world. NOT!"

So beginning in Ephesians 3:1, Paul seeks to address this issue. He first of all admits that he is a prisoner. But he immediately shows that he is not a prisoner of Rome, but is a prisoner of Jesus Christ.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

He is exactly where Jesus wants him to be. Following Jesus leads to some strange places, and sometimes, Jesus wants his followers in prison.

Paul goes on to say that he is a prisoner "for you Gentiles." There are two ways of reading this. Remember, of course, that Paul is a Jew, and remember as well that one of the reasons Paul is in prison in the first place is because of the Ephesians. He almost got arrested in Acts 19 when a riot started in Ephesians because of his preaching, but then when Paul went to Jerusalem in Acts 21, he was initially put in prison because the Jewish leaders thought he had brought Trophimus the Ephesian[s] into the Temple where only Jewish men could go (Acts 21:29).

That entire incident of Acts 19–24 is behind everything Paul wrote in Ephesians 2. Paul has written "The dividing wall of separation has come down. There is now peace between Jews and Gentiles. We are all one family in Jesus Christ." And the Ephesian Christians are saying, "Oh really? Well, when you tried that here, and when you tried that in Jerusalem, it got you arrested and almost killed, and now you are sitting in prison. Are you sure you didn't get thumped in the head one too many times, Paul?"

So in Ephesians 3:1, Paul says, "Yes, that is right. I am a prisoner. But I right where Jesus wants me to be. I am in prison for Jesus. And I am also in prison because of you." But this is not a slam on the Ephesians. This is not blaming them. While Paul is saying, "I'm in prison because of you," he is not blaming them. He is saying, "I'm in prison for your sake, to help you, to show you how this whole thing works."

And how does it work for Paul? How can Paul say that he is in prison for Jesus Christ and that Jesus has brought peace to the world even though Paul looks around and sees nothing but stone walls, iron chains, and Roman guards? Paul explain how in Ephesians 3:2-13.

Here are some basic notes on what he says:

Ephesians 3:2. Paul was given a dispensation from God. This is oikonomia, a special set of "house rules." These are specific guidelines from God by which Paul lives and functions.

Ephesians 3:3-4. What are these house rules? Well, it's this mystery Paul has already written about. Where? In Ephesians 2. That God has introduced peace to the entire world through Jesus Christ, and Paul is a messenger to the Gentiles about this peace.

Ephesians 3:5. In previous ages, humans have always operated under the "us vs. them" principle, which was a principle of rivalry, violence, and death (cf. 2:1-3). But now we have a new revelation by the Spirit through the prophets and apostles, that all of us are one, and our struggle is not against each other (cf. Eph 6:12).

Ephesians 3:6. Instead of division, strife, and rivalry, we are all one family, fellow heirs of God, recipients of the promises (1:3-14; 2:11-22).

Ephesians 3:7. It is this message that Paul has been proclaiming through his words and works by the power of the Holy Spirit.

Ephesians 3:8. Paul was sent to proclaim these truths to the Gentiles.

Ephesians 3:9. This fellowship of all people has been God's plan and goal from the very beginning of creation.

Ephesians 3:10. God is now making this unity visible through the church! And the principalities and powers are taking notice. They are watching and learning. [But they do not like it, because it means they will lose some of their stolen power. Cf. 1:21-22; 6:10-20). This makes a bit more sense when we realize that "principalities and powers" doesn't refer primarily to angels and demons, but to "the powers that be." That is, to the rules, power structures, and domination system of this world. The world system is set up in a way that abuses its power, but God wants all powers to be restored to their proper place, and the first seeds of this are found within the church.]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Ephesians 3:11. This restoration of all things is the eternal purpose of God (cf. 3:9).

Ephesians 3:12. Since this is God's purpose and the goal of Jesus Christ, and is empowered by the Holy Spirit, we can move forward in this purpose with boldness and faith.

Ephesians 3:13. Which explains why Paul is in prison. He is in prison because the powers that be were threatened by him, but ironically, by putting him in prison, Paul now has the opportunity to speak truth to power and present his case before Caesar himself, the ultimate "power" at that time. By Paul's actions, even the prison guards were learning the truths of the gospel. Paul in prison for the gentiles was not a blow to the gospel, but an opportunity for the gospel to shine in the face of the principalities and powers of this world.

Ephesians 3:14-21. Now, therefore, you go and do the same. How? It begins with knowing you are completely loved by God.

Below is the original sermon manuscript from when I first taught this text many years ago… By reading it, and comparing it with the notes above, you can see how my thinking has changed about Paul's message in Ephesians 3.

(The following Outline was borrowed from John MacArthur)

1. The Purpose of our Spiritual Position (Ephesians 3:1-21)
2. Paul's Parenthesis (Ephesians 3:1-13)
3. The Prisoner of the Mystery (Ephesians 3:1-5)
4. The Plan of the Mystery (Ephesians 3:6)
5. The Preaching of the Mystery (Ephesians 3:7-9)
6. The Purpose of the Mystery (Ephesians 3:10-11)
7. The Privilege of the Mystery (Ephesians 3:12-13)

Everybody loves a good mystery.

They love mystery novels. When I was little, many people my age were reading The Boxcar Children, Nancy Drew, The Hardy Boys, and the Bobsy Twins. Of course, those were for children. Today, people are reading books written by Tom Clancy and others.

Even many jobs deal in searching out mysteries. Scientists try to unravel the mysteries of the universe—like how light can be both a wave and a particle. Doctors try to discover the mysteries of the body—like why we have tonsils and how babies die of SIDS. Historians try to uncover the mysteries of history—like what happened to the settlers at Roanoke Island and was there really a city of Atlantis.

Parents, even you try to figure out mysteries at home—although maybe you don't enjoy doing it—like who broke the lamp, and who left the freezer door open so everything melted, and who left your electric drill out in the rain.

We all love mysteries—we like the suspense and the excitement and we get curious about the answers.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Pastors, Bible teachers and theologians have mysteries too. Actually, all Christians are budding theologians, and at one time or another, in trying to understand the Bible, we all ask one very interesting question. We wonder why God, since he knows everything, why God didn't make the Bible easier to understand!

Right? Have you ever wondered that? Have you ever set out to read through the Bible—as I know some of you are doing this year—or have you ever set out to study through a certain book of the Bible or a certain passage—and after struggling with it a bit, you throw up your hands in frustration and give up?

I know you have. I have talked with several of you who have expressed this exact emotion to me. Why didn't God make it clearer?

We've all felt this way at times. If you have not, either you are much more gifted than any other Christian in the world, or you have not seriously studied the Bible. I'll let you decided which it is.

It has been a mystery for me why God made some of the Bible so difficult to understand. This has mystified me for years, and not until recently have I uncovered the answer to why God didn't make Scripture clearer.

You say, "What is it? What is it?" Well, I'll tell you, but I don't want to spoil the answer about—I want to leave it a mystery—and just like all good mysteries, you have to wait until the end to hear the solution.

The reason I've begun talking about mysteries today, is because Paul spends the first 13 verses of Ephesians 3 talking about one of the mysteries that has been revealed to him. There was a mystery in the Old Testament which no one understood, but which was revealed by God to Paul, and he is not explaining it to us. That is what he spends 13 verses doing.

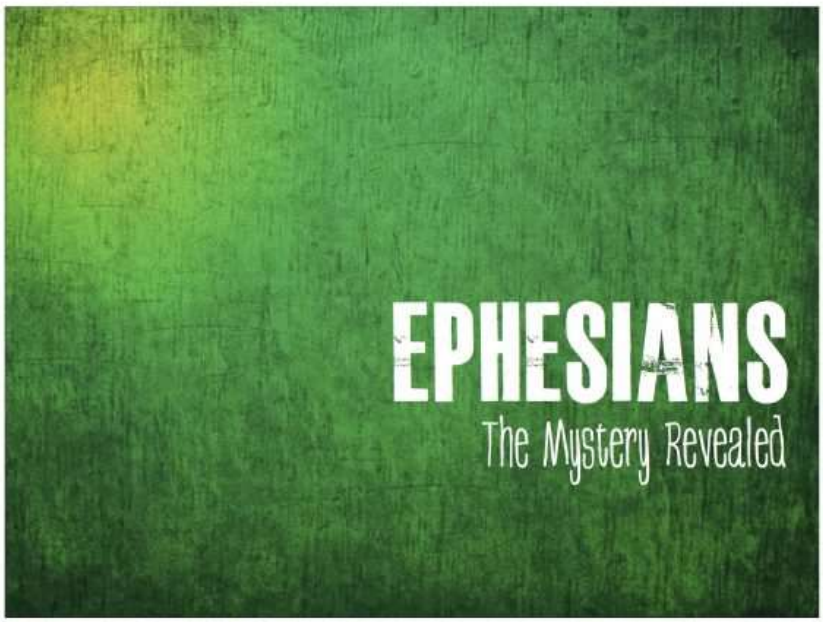
Today, we only have time to look at the first 6 verses of Ephesians 3. These verses introduce us to a mystery.

Paul is a wonderful writer and thinker, but sometimes he gets off on a tangent which throws everything off. Ephesians 3:2-13 are one of these tangents—these rabbit trails that Paul does so often.

Let me show you. Verse 1 begins a prayer for the believers to understand the purpose of their position in Christ, but then Paul decides to talk about something else for a while. He doesn't get back to his prayer until verse 14—where he repeats the phrase "For this reason."

So the real purpose of our spiritual position will not be explained until Ephesians 3:14-21. Ephesians 3:2-13 are Paul's Parenthesis; his tangent; his rabbit trail.

Let's see how he gets onto this parenthesis by looking at Ephesians 3:1.



The Prisoner of the Mystery (Ephesians 3:1-5)

Ephesians 3:1. For this reason I, Paul, the prisoner of Christ Jesus for you Gentiles

In Ephesians 3:1, Paul calls himself a prisoner of Christ Jesus for you Gentiles. That is what gets him sidetracked. He decides to elaborate on why he is a prisoner of Jesus Christ for the Gentiles.

continued…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The reason, as we will soon see, is because of the mystery that was revealed to him. So, in the outline, Ephesians 3:1-5 are about Paul as the Prisoner of the Mystery.

Let's talk about Paul being a prisoner first—as we see in Ephesians 3:1. This was not a figure of speech. We sometimes say, "I am tied to my job" or "I am a prisoner at home." Some men, I hope none of you today, but some men refer to their wives as a "ball and chain" implying that they are chained to their wife and can't do anything fun.

These are all figures of speech. Paul is not using a figure of speech here. He literally is a prisoner. You remember that he was arrested in Jerusalem under false charges. He was almost put to death, but was delivered and was put in prison instead. So he really was a prisoner.

But although he is a prisoner, he literally is a prisoner of Caesar; of emperor Nero in Rome. At the time of writing, he had been in a Roman prison for about 3 years, and in Caesaria before that for 2 years. So while he literally is a prisoner, he is a prisoner of Caesar.

But here, he says he is a prisoner of Christ Jesus. Why does he say it this way? This is typical of Paul and is typical of all saints in Scripture. When bad things happen, they focus on the good that can come from it. Paul could have complained and argued and become bitter about his unjust arrest and the false accusations being made against him. Instead, he realized that he was right where God wanted him, and rather than being a prisoner of Caesar, he was a prisoner for Christ.

Because of this, we know from Scripture that he led many of the guards and many of Caesar's own household to personal faith in Jesus Christ. In fact, even 2000 years later, we can be thankful he was in prison, because it is from prison that Paul wrote most of his letters that we now have in our Bibles. Paul did not let a bad situation get him down, he used the bad situation to glorify God.

Next in Ephesians 3:1, Paul says that he is a prisoner of Jesus Christ for you Gentiles. Paul is saying that the reason he is prison is because of the Gentiles.

Some of you are thinking, "Pastor Jeremy, What does that mean? How is Paul a prisoner because of the Gentiles?" Well, if that's your question, then you're in luck. That is what Paul goes off on a tangent about. In fact, he spends the next 12 verses explaining how he became a prisoner for the Gentiles.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Ephesians 3:2. if indeed you have heard of the dispensation of the grace of God which was given to me for you,

Take the words, If indeed you have heard first. Another way of translating these would be, "Surely you have heard," or "I know you have heard. " Paul had lived with them for almost three years, and remember, it was because a Gentile member from the Ephesian church was traveling with Paul that he was arrested in the first place. So of course they had heard. Paul is simply reminding them about his calling.

The word dispensation is a word we don't use very much anymore. We saw it previously though in 1:10. The Greek word is oikonomia. Oiko means house, and nomia means law, so oikonomia means "law of the house." It is the rules by which a house or business is governed. Synonyms could be "management, stewardship, or an orderly arrangement."

In Ephesians 3:2, Paul says that a dispensation was given to him, and so we could say, as some of your translations do, that he was given a stewardship—he was made a steward or a manager over a certain task or responsibility.

What was this task? Well, the verse says that he was a steward of the grace of God which was given to me for you. Paul was sent by God to declare salvation to the Gentiles. We know from the rest of Scripture that Paul was the apostle to the Gentiles. He was the person God chose to take the good news of salvation to all those who were not Jews.

If you are here today, and you are not a Jew, then you are a Gentile, and since you are Gentile, Paul is writing to you. Though he lived and wrote almost 2000 years ago, Paul's message is still for you and still applies to you. This was Paul's task—his dispensation—what he was made a steward of, and which, he diligently carried out. Paul understood that when God placed him here, He was given a purpose; a task to carry out. When he discovered what that task was, he performed it as completely as he knew how.

He was given a task by God, and he faithfully carried it out. He talks more about it in Ephesians 3:3-4.

Ephesians 3:3-4. how that by revelation He made known to me the mystery (as I have briefly written already, by which, when you read, you may understand my knowledge in the mystery of Christ),

Here is the first mention of them mystery God revealed to Paul!

A mystery in Scripture is not exactly like a mystery in a novel or a mystery movie. A Biblical mystery is a truth that was always present within the pages of Scripture, but was just hidden. We could call them "sacred secrets." They are truths known by God, and most likely mentioned in Scripture, but they are nevertheless hidden from our understanding. God will reveal them in His time, when He wants us to learn them.

Many people today talk about receiving special revelations from God and understanding hidden mysteries. I talked with a man who thought he had a revelation. He was doing some construction, and in the process had left some board lying on his lawn for a week. When the construction was done, he went to clean up the boards, and he noticed that the grass underneath them had turned white. It looked dead.

But as he let the sun touch the grass over the next few days, the grass grew back healthy and green. He realized that this is like some Christians. We have things in our lives which impede our growth. If we remove them, we will continue to grow. This was his "revelation."

But that is not a revelation. A revelation is divine truth not previously known. He didn't have a revelation—he had a good illustration for a truth already known—a picture for a truth everybody knows.

Paul did receive a revelation. He was studying the Old Testament (revelation always comes from Scripture), and God revealed to him a mystery. What was this mystery that God revealed to Him?

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

In Ephesians 3:3-4, Paul mentions that he already wrote to them about this mystery. Where did he do that? He did it in two places already, in Ephesians 1:9-10 and Ephesians 2:11-22. He continues to explain that this mystery was not previously known.

Ephesians 3:5. which in other ages was not made known to the sons of men, as it has now been revealed by the Spirit to His holy apostles and prophets:

In other words, this mystery was hidden in times past, but is now clearly seen. In theological terms, this is called progressive revelation. Progressive revelation is when God takes something he has previously said, and elaborates on it. He makes it clearer. He sheds more light on it. He reveals more.

Paul is saying in Ephesians 3:5, "It has always been there within the pages of Scripture, but somehow, we did not see it until recently, when God revealed it by the Holy Spirit to His apostles and prophets." Paul says here in Ephesians 3:4-5 that this is the mystery was shown to him. It was hidden in Scripture, but now it has been revealed.

Other mysteries in Scripture that have been revealed are the fact that Christ has two comings. He came once as a servant; He is coming again as a king and a judge. People in OT times did not know this. The Trinity was a mystery. OT saints did not know about the trinity. The fact that Jesus came as a lowly carpenter, and came as Savior of the whole world is another mystery. The Jews in the OT thought He would come as a king and only for the Jews.

But none of these are the mystery that was revealed to Paul. The mystery that was revealed to Paul is explained in Ephesians 3:6.

The Plan of the Mystery (Ephesians 3:6)

Ephesians 3:6. that the Gentiles should be fellow heirs, of the same body, and partakers of His promise in Christ through the gospel,

This is what the mystery was. To us, it seems pretty clear. We say, "That's not much of a mystery." But for the average Jew in Paul's day, this was an amazing and controversial idea (Acts 10-15; Galatians). The mystery which was revealed to Paul was that the Gentiles should be fellow heirs, of the same body, and partakers of His promise!

Previously, only the Jews were heirs. Only the Jews had promises and covenants from God. Only the Jews were allowed near to God. Only the Jews had forgiveness of sins from God.

But now they are being allowed in. Now they are being grafted into the body. Now they can partake—or share—in the promise of God! This is the mystery. It seems clear to us, but that is because it has been revealed to us.

Jews who lived prior to Paul did not see this clearly. "No one knew the full meaning of God's promise to Abraham that "in you all the families of the earth shall be blessed" (Gen 12:3) until Paul wrote, "And the Scripture, foreseeing that God would justify the Gentiles by faith, preached the gospel beforehand to Abraham, saying, 'All the nations shall be blessed in you'" (Gal 3:8).

"No one knew the full meaning of Isaiah's prediction, "I will also make You a light of the nations so that My salvation may reach to the end of the earth" (Isa 49:6), until it was explained by Paul to mean the offering of the gospel of Jesus Christ (the Messiah) to the Gentiles as well as the Jews (Acts 13:46-47)."[1]

We say "How could they not understand this?" The answer is that for OT Jews, it was still future! It is like our view of the future. The future—even though certain things are known from Scripture, is still a mystery to us. Paul says in 1 Cor. 13:12, concerning the future, that now we see in a mirror dimly.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

It is like after you get out of a shower, and the mirror is covered with steam. You can barely see yourself. That is what the future is like. We can see a hazy outline in Scripture, but it will not become clear to us until we see it happen. When it does, we will wonder how we ever missed it.

That's how it was for the Jew prior to Paul. They saw bits and pieces of how the Gentile fit into God's plan, but God revealed it clearly to Paul, and he in turn taught it to others.

The plan of the mystery in verse 6 was to include the Gentiles as heirs, into the body and promises that previously belonged only to Jews. How does this happen? He says here in verse 6 that it was through the gospel that the Gentiles were included.

The gospel is the means or the instrument by which the Gentiles would be grafted in. The mystery was not that they could be saved, rather it was that through the gospel, Gentile believers would become one new man with the Jewish believers. Jesus Christ came as the Savior of the entire world, but only those who believe in Him alone will be saved.

And if you have believed, then you are part of this mystery that Paul is so excited about. You have been included in the promises, and become fellow heirs. It is a wonderful place to be.

We've talked about mysteries this morning—the mystery revealed to Paul. Does it ever bother you that God even has mysteries? That God has "sacred secrets?" Does it ever bother you that God doesn't reveal everything all at once? Does it ever frustrate you that God didn't make the Scripture's clearer—more plain—more easily understood? It does me.

You know, He could have, being the sovereign God that He is, he could have laid it out a lot more simply. Why is there this need for mysteries and withholding information, and only giving us light for one step at a time? Why did God choose to do thing this way? It's terribly frustrating, isn't it? Terribly confusing.

The answer, I believe, can be found (as always) in looking to Christ. Christ said over and over that if you know Him then you know the Father also. In other words, Christ does things the same way God the Father does things.

What was Christ's main teaching method? That's right—parables—stories.

Have you ever stopped to wonder why Jesus told parables? Jesus told parables for one main reason. The reason shocked me when I first heard it.

I often hear preachers and pastors say, "Jesus used parables, why don't we?" They teach that Jesus used parables because people love stories, and because it makes the point more memorable.

Armed with that logic, these pastors come week after week to the pulpits in our churches across the land with nothing but a bunch of humorous stories, witty anecdotes, thoughtful quotes, colorful analogies and funny jokes. Sometimes there is a Scripture reference or two thrown in for good measure.

It is my conviction that this is not preaching—though it may be very interesting to listen to, this is not preaching, it is entertainment. God has not called Pastors to entertain, but to preach the Word.

So preaching as some pastors do, though done with good intentions because it is similar to the way Christ taught, has gone wrong because the starting premise was incorrect. They want to imitate Christ's methods, but they never stopped to ask why Christ used the methods that he did.

They believe that Jesus told parables to make his point clearer. But do you want to know why Jesus told parables? He told us why. Do you know why? Maybe you can guess why.

Have you ever tried to read and seriously understand Christ's parables? I, for the most part, unless Christ explains exactly what he means by his parable (which he does sometimes), I am often completely and utterly confused by what he is saying.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Take Luke 16:1-13 for example. A rich man had a money manager who was wasteful, so just before the rich man fired his money manager, the manager went out and cut in half the debt that everyone owed to the rich man. When the rich man found out about this dishonesty, he was not angry, as any of us would have been, he was impressed, and praised the dishonest manager.

Jesus kind of explains what he means there, but this parable—like many others, has always baffled me. What does Christ mean? It takes lots of study and prayerful research to understand what Christ is talking about.

So why did Jesus tell parables? Are you ready for this? The answer is that He told parables to confuse people! He told parables to confuse people! Don't take my words for it, He said it himself!

In Matthew 13:10-15, He has just finished telling a parable, and his disciples had no clue what he was talking about, and so they come to him—out of frustration I'm sure—and say, "Why do you speak to the people in parables?" In other words, they're saying, "We don't understand you either. Would you knock it off?" (cf. Matt 15:15; Mark 4:34; 7:17; Luke 12:41; John 16:29).

Jesus answers them and says, "The knowledge of the secrets of the kingdom of heaven has been given to you, but not to them…This is why I speak in parables: "Though seeing, they do not see; though hearing, they do not understand. In them is fulfilled the prophecy of Isaiah: "You will be ever hearing but never understanding; you will be ever seeing but never perceiving…"

Along with the parables, this passage in Matthew has always bothered me. Why would Jesus use parables if they intentionally left people in the dark? It is only recently that I have discovered one possible answer. The answer for why Jesus told parables if he knew they only confused people is the same answer to why God has mysteries in Scripture, it is the same answer to why God didn't make the Bible clearer.

The answer is that God wants us to seek him. He gives us just enough knowledge, and just enough clues that it will spark our curiosity, to leave some suspense, some mystery. Those who want to learn more, will dig deeper, will press on, will investigate more. Just like a private investigator trying to solve a mystery, God wants us to chase after Him. If we do, Matthew 7:7 says that those who ask will receive, those who seek will find, and those who knock, the door will be opened.

God has mysteries, and Jesus told parables, so that those who wanted to learn more would step out in faith, one step at a time, and seek to learn more. But those who didn't want to learn more would be left in the dark, without knowledge, without a relationship, without the joy that comes from discovering truth.

God and Christ are master teachers. The best teachers are those who use suspense and curiosity—mystery—to get the student to learn on their own. The worst teachers are those who just lay out the information and say "take it or leave it." No one learns that way. You learn best when you discover it for yourself.

So the question now is, "What kind of student are you?" One that gives up because God speaks in parables and mysteries? One that throws up his hands in frustrations because God didn't make it clearer? One that throws a tantrum because he didn't get a copy of the test with all the answers before he had to take it?

Or will you be one that presses on and digs to find the deeper things of God. Yes, it takes work. Yes, it's hard. But then, very often, the most precious jewels are only found deep down.

So what are you going to do? God uses mysteries and parables to see how you will respond. Only as you dig, and seek, and knock, and search, will he reveal to you the answers. And once you begin, you will feel the excitement of the discovery, and you won't be able to stop. You will become the Indiana Jones of the Bible—seeking clues, dodging attacks from the enemy, asking questions…discovering mysteries.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

God has placed them in His Word. Paul found one and is sharing it with us. He continues to explain what he found in verses 7-13.

[1] MacArthur, chapter 8, plan.

Ephesians 3:7-13 – The Mystery Ministry

https://redeeminggod.com/sermons/ephesians/ephesians_3_7-13/

Excerpt:

To properly understand Ephesians 3:7-13, I highly recommend you go back and read the sermon manuscript on Ephesians 3:1-6, especially my opening comments about how my thinking has changed over the years about this important passage.

1. The Purpose of our Spiritual Position (Ephesians 3:1-21)
2. Paul's Parenthesis (Ephesians 3:1-13)
3. The Prisoner of the Mystery (Ephesians 3:1-5)
4. The Plan of the Mystery (Ephesians 3:6)
5. The Preaching of the Mystery (Ephesians 3:7-9)
6. The Purpose of the Mystery (Ephesians 3:10-11)
7. The Privilege of the Mystery (Ephesians 3:12-13) [1]

Life is full of mysteries.

How is it that you can put twelve pairs of socks into the washing machine with all your other clothes, and when you take them out, there are only eight socks and none of them match?

Why is it that the traffic lane or grocery check-out lane which you are in, although it is the shortest, always goes the slowest?

Why is it that the slice of bread with peanut butter on it never falls off your plate in the kitchen – but waits until you are in the living room? And how come it always falls peanut-butter side down?

Why is it that we drive in a parkway, but park on a driveway?

Mysteries.

Here's a current mystery from television commercials: "What is mlife?" If you have seen these commercials, then you know what I am talking about. Some company has come up with an ad campaign where they are advertising something, but don't tell us what it is. At the end of the commercial, they simply say, "What is mlife?" I'm sure nearly everyone who has seen the commercials has been curious. I'm sure that we will be told soon what mlife is and why we can't get by without it.

There are mysteries that are more serious as well. For many people, what happens after death is a mystery. That's an important one to figure out before you die.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

For thousands of years, philosophers have argued over the meaning of life. What is the meaning of life? Is it just to have as much fun and get as many toys as you can before you die? Is that what life is all about? Or is it to give up all your possessions and go off and live in the desert by yourself? Is there some meaning to life beyond ourselves?

Christians, for hundreds of years, have said that the purpose of life is to glorify God and enjoy him forever. I can't argue with that. I think it is true. But I have to ask myself. Why did God make us? God is perfect as He is. He doesn't need more of anything. He doesn't need more knowledge. He doesn't need more joy. He doesn't even need more glory. In other words, He doesn't need humans. Even though the chief end of man is to glorify God and enjoy Him forever, this still doesn't answer the question of "Why God chose to create us in the first place."

Have you ever wondered why you exist? Do you ever ask yourself why you are here? Why God made you?

I want to suggest today that it was more than just for His glory. Ultimately, yes, but He didn't create the universe just because He could. There was another reason. A second purpose. Maybe we'll never know the full answer, but Ephesians 3 suggests a reason.

This passage is the last part of Paul's parenthesis. In Ephesians 3:1, Paul began to tell his readers something, but then he got sidetracked onto a rabbit trail, which is found in Ephesians 3:2-13.

The main idea of Paul's parenthesis is the mystery that was revealed to him. Ephesians 3:1-5 explains that Paul was a Prisoner of the mystery, and in Ephesians 3:6, the Plan of mystery. The mystery is that God had joined the Jewish and Gentile believers into one body. Where before there was separation, now there was unity. Together, they were one new man.

The rest of the mystery is found in Ephesians 3:7-13. These verses are the continuation of Paul's Parenthesis about the mystery revealed to him in Christ. We've seen the prisoner and the plan of the mystery, Paul explains in Ephesians 3:7-9 the Preaching of the Mystery.

The Preaching of the Mystery (Ephesians 3:7-9)

Ephesians 3:7. … of which I became a minister

This points us back to verse 6 where Paul presented the Plan of the mystery. He's continuing to talk about this mystery. The word minister comes from the Greek word diakonos. It is possible that the word has it's origin in a similar Greek word, diakonis, which means "running through dust."[2] In the Roman world, servants would run errands for their masters through the dusty streets, and often times, when the masters went on journey's the servants would trot along in the billowing dust behind the master's horse and body guards.

The word diakonos can also be translated servant or deacon. You have all heard of deacons right? This is where that title comes from. A deacon is someone who serves in the church. They are those men and women who have the God given ability to see what needs to be done and do it – no matter how menial. They are wonderful people to have in a church – deacons and deaconesses. The Greek word is diakonos – someone who runs through the dust.

That is Paul's picture of himself in Ephesians 3:7. He calls himself a diakonos, a minister. He was a minister according to the gift of the grace of God given to me by the effective working of His power.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Paul is just saying that this ministry was a gift given to him by God. The term effective working is the Greek word energion from which we get our word energy, and the word power us the Greek word dunamis from which we get our word dynamite. God was working in Paul with energy like dynamite to carry out the task given to him.

Ephesians 3:8. To me, who am less than the least of all the saints, this grace was given,

In Ephesians 3:7, Paul said he was a minister, a servant running through the dust. Here, he says that he is the least of all the saints. The term least could also be translated very small, quite unimportant, or insignificant.[3] The best translation is exactly what we have here in the NKJV. It is not just that he was the least of all the saints, but he was less than the least.

He wasn't just saying this; this wasn't false humility. Paul really believed it. In 1 Timothy 1:15 he states a similar idea when he calls himself the chief of all sinners. In 1 Cor 15:9, he is the least of the apostles.

I don't think Paul was one of those who was proud of his humility. He wasn't the type to brag about his humility. He said things like this, because he was convinced of how great a sinner he was. He remembered all that he had done to persecute and destroy the church in his former years, and it weighed on him. Yes, he knew that he was forgiven and that all of his sins were washed away by the blood of Christ, but he knew that he didn't deserve it.

A lot of Christians think that the more mature you become and the closer to God you get, the less you sin. While this is true, as you mature, it will seem to you that the very opposite is happening. I think that the closer we get to God, the more aware we become of how sinful we really are. It's like light – since God is light. The closer you get to a light, the brighter the light becomes, and the more flaws the light reveals.

This is why assurance of salvation should never and can never be based on your works. Assurance of salvation is based on Christ and what He has done for us, not on ourselves and what we have to do. If you are basing assurance on your works, you will never have it because as you mature in your Christian walk, if you are honest, you will only think you are getting more and more sinful. This is what we see with Paul here. He calls himself the least of all the saints – because he is convinced of his sinfulness.

Nevertheless, Paul accomplished quite a bit, didn't he? So what separates us from Paul? In my opinion, nothing except willingness. You know, if the truth were to be known, I think Christians today have greater opportunity and greater possibility to serve God than Paul did. I have heard some Christians, when confronted with their lack of activity and dedication say, "Well, I'm not Paul." That's exactly right. You're not Paul. The difference between him and you is that you have more opportunities and more resources than he ever had.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The reason God used Paul so much is because Paul was willing to do what he could. He says he was the least of the saints and the chief of sinners, but we see how God used him anyway. If God can use Paul, God can definitely use you – if you are only willing and ready. The rest of verse 8 and on into verse 9 tells us what ministry God gave Paul.

Ephesians 3:8-9.that I should preach among the Gentiles the unsearchable riches of Christ, and to make all see what is the fellowship of the mystery,

Paul's God given task was to preach. These verses show us the two things he was to preach. First in Ephesians 3:8, he was to preach to the Gentiles the unsearchable riches of Christ. This is the truth found in chapter 1 of Ephesians. Second, in verse 9, he was to preach about the fellowship of the mystery which is the truth found in Ephesians 2.

The word unsearchable means that these riches of Christ are so great that they cannot adequately be explained or even understood. They are beyond finding out. They are without explanation or definition. You cannot fully explore them. You cannot delineate them. They are beyond description. They are beyond enumeration. You cannot catalog them. You cannot create in inventory list.

Let me put it another way. How many waves are on the ocean? The answer – if there is one – is that there are an infinite number of waves, because they just keep on coming. It is the same with the riches that we have in Christ. We cannot number them because they just keep on coming. You think the Duracell battery never stops? Just think about the riches in Christ. They truly are without end.

Paul mentioned some of the riches we have in Christ in Ephesians 1, but when compared with what Christ still has for us, Ephesians 1 is like a single snowflake in comparison to all the snowflakes that have ever fallen and ever will fall.

The unsearchable riches of Christ was the first thing he preached, the second, as we saw in Ephesians 3:9 is the fellowship of the mystery.

Remember Ephesians 2? Even though we were sinners and separated from God and each other, Christ came and brought us all together into one unified body. This is what Paul preached.

Since Paul preached it, does this mean that Paul made it up? No. The rest of Ephesians 3:9 says that this message originated with God when he created the universe.

Ephesians 3:9. which from the beginning of the ages has been hidden in God who created all things through Jesus Christ;

Remember, according to Ephesians 3:5, this mystery was hidden for ages and generations, but was made known by the Holy Spirit to God's apostles and prophets. Paul here in verse 9, wants to make sure that we realize that this mystery was NOT an invention of Paul's, nor was it a sudden decision by God. It was God's plan from the very beginning of the ages. It was hidden in God, meaning we didn't know it, but God had it planned from creation.[4]

Many things are for God to know and his creatures to find out (Prov. 25:2). But when he does reveal things to us, as he did here to Paul, it is our responsibility to shout them from the rooftops, to share it with all who will hear. This is how the Gospel message should be for us. God did not give us the Gospel of Salvation so we could hoard it and hide it, but so that we could share it and shout it.

That is what Paul did here with the mystery revealed to him. Paul, the prisoner of Jesus Christ, was revealed the plan of the mystery and as a result he preached about this mystery to all. Paul's God-given task was to preach to the Gentiles the mystery revealed to him in Christ.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

What is the meaning of life? Here is the first part. This is an answer individually – for each one of us. God has a plan, a goal, a specific purpose in mind for each one of us, and our goal, our task, is to discover what that is, and do it. When you do, you will have an impact upon this world as great – or ever greater – than Paul's.

I believe it was Charles Spurgeon who said that the world has yet to see what God can do through one woman or one man who is totally committed to God. Maybe you will be the one to show the world what this looks like.

Paul's parenthesis has so far explained why he is a prisoner, what the plan of the mystery revealed to him was, and how he individually was called by God to preach to the world about this mystery, Jews and Gentiles. But he still has not told us what the purpose of the Mystery was. Why God chose to join Jewish and Gentile believers into one body – the church.

I mean, have you ever wondered why the church exists? Yes, we're supposed to make disciples of all nations. Yes, we are supposed to worship and glorify God. Yes, we are supposed to be loving communities where people can be supported and encouraged.

These are all things we do. But verses 10-11 of chapter 3 tell us why. These verses are the Purpose of the Mystery. The Purpose of this new unity we have in the church. It will surprise you.

The Purpose of the Mystery (Ephesians 3:10-11)

Ephesians 3:10-11. to the intent (another word for intent is purpose, so here we have the purpose of the mystery) that now the manifold wisdom of God might be made known by the church to …all those in the world who are not yet saved…Is that what your Bible says? NO! Look at it. that now the manifold wisdom of God might be made known by the church to the principalities and powers in the heavenly places,

What does that mean? Well first, we need to know who or what the principalities and powers in the heavenly places are. Principalities is the Greek word archais, and refers to princes of chiefs among the angels and demons. It is used also in 1:21 and 6:12. (cf. also Col. 1:16; 2:10, 15; 1 Cor. 15:24; Rom. 8:38)

Powers is not dunamis, the power of God which we saw in verse 7. Here, the Greek word is exousias. It means celestial rulers and authorities, like angels, archangels, and demons (Eph. 1:21; Col. 1:16; 2:10, 15; 1 Pet. 3:22; 1 Cor. 15:24.) So now that we know who the principalities and powers are – they are angels and demons – what does this verse teach? It says that the church is teaching them about the manifold wisdom of God.

Do you comprehend what Paul is saying? This is unbelievable! God has created the church so that we could teach angels and demons!

The words of the famous song are true. "We are standing on Holy Ground, and I know that there are…angels…all around." When we meet as a church, there are angels watching, listening, and learning. They are getting out their pencils and their pads of paper and taking notes. 1 Peter 1:12 says, concerning the things God has revealed to the church that "even angels long to look into these things." They long to learn the things we get to learn!

Do you long to learn? Do you eagerly look forward to Sunday morning, and your daily devotions, and a small group Bible Study? The angels long to look into these things. And Ephesians 3:10 says that they learn from us as we look into them. The rest of Scripture teaches that they are here, observing our worship (1 Cor. 11:1-10), and that they observe our work and our witness (1 Tim. 5:21; 1 Cor. 4:9-13; Luke 15:10; Luke 12:8-9; Mt. 16:27).[5]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

So, what is the meaning of life in the church? Why does the church exist? Why did God decided to unite Jews and Gentiles into one body in Christ? The reason, according to Ephesians 3:10 is to teach the angels and demons.[6]

But the question still is…Why?…Why? Ephesians 3:10 says God is teaching them about His manifold – or his many faceted wisdom, but it does not tell us why or exactly how we do this.[7]

There are hints throughout Scripture that the reason God created the world and the reason the church exists is to teach the angels something. God did not create us simply because he was lonely or because he wanted to bring himself more glory. God created the world and the church to be a graduate school for the angels and demons. To my knowledge, Scripture does not specifically tell us why, and we will not fully know until we get to heaven – and maybe not even then. But, just like all mysteries in Scripture, there are hints.

Scripture tells us that Christ's death and resurrection were not for the angels (Heb. 2:14-16; 1 Pet. 1:12.) The book of Revelation tells us about the future of Satan and his minions – they are going to be cast into the Lake of Fire. But still, aside from the hints here and there – maybe some of you know more than I, and if so, I would love to learn from you – to my knowledge, it is a Scriptural mystery what exactly we are teaching the angelic realm – what exactly the lesson is that God wants them to learn.

Joseph Dillow, the author of the excellent book The Reign of the Servant Kings gives one possible solution in the prelude. He writes:

"A universal tragedy had occurred. The Morning Star, known as Lucifer, God's perfect one, full of wisdom and beauty, the angelic being whom God had appointed as ruler over the ancient cosmos…had fallen….Lucifer had been given everything. Yet he became proud. He concluded that God's gifts were more important than the giver, that dependence upon God and obedience to His revealed will were not necessary. He became the Satan, God's adversary. He was cast to the earth…

"…And the angels looked on, and the Lord declared: 'We shall give this rebellion a thorough trial. We shall permit it to run full course. The universe shall see what a creature, even the greatest can do apart from God. We shall set up an experiment, and permit the universe of creatures to watch it…In it the spirit of independence shall be allowed to expand to the utmost. And the wreck and ruin which shall result will demonstrate to the universe, and forever, that there is no life, no joy, no peace, apart from complete dependence upon the Most High God, possessor of heaven and earth.'

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

"And God said, 'Let there be light,' and there was light. God saw that the light was good, and he separated the light from the darkness. God called the light "day" and the darkness he called "night." And there was evening and there was morning – the first day.

"'At last!' thought Michael, God's archangel. 'Our Lord will once again rule here!'

"Then God said, 'Let us make man in our image, in our likeness, and let them rule over the fish of the sea and the birds of the air, over the livestock, over all the earth, and over all the creatures that move along the ground.'

"'But,' said Michael, 'what is this? A man? This creature is so weak, so inferior to…Satan. Why has the King placed HIM in…Satan's world and told HIM to rule there. How can such an insignificant creature, much lower than the angels, possibly accomplish the divine purpose. Surely a great mistake has been made!'"[8]

The book continues from there. The book is not a story. It is a book explaining how God has set up the world so that those who serve him will reign. Those who the least will become the greatest. Greatness does not come through pride and conquest, but through service and humility. That's the lesson Joseph Dillow says we are teaching to the angels.

And it very well could be. But whatever God is trying to teach, them, look in Ephesians 3:11 at WHEN he made this his goal.

Ephesians 3:11. … according to the eternal purpose which He accomplished in Christ Jesus our Lord,

In Ephesians 3:9, God's plan of the mystery was from the beginning of the ages, that is, from the beginning of time, or from the beginning of creation. Here in Ephesians 3:11, God's plan to teach the angels and demons was according to the eternal purpose of God. This purpose to teach the angels is logically prior to God's purpose of uniting Jews and Gentiles.

Do you want to know what this means? This verse tells us that the church is the central goal of history. The church is the eternal purpose of God for human history. The church is the reason the universe was created![9] Think about that. What level of importance do you place on the church? If you were to make a list of your top ten priorities for this week, where would church come in on the list? Would church even be on your list?

On God's list of priorities, the church is number 1. God's reason for creating the universe was to create the church – the mystery kept hidden for ages and generations. And the purpose of the church was to teach the angels.

So that is the purpose of the mystery. We've seen the prisoner of the mystery – Paul. The Plan of the Mystery, to unite Jews and Gentiles, the Preaching of the Mystery to the world, and the Purpose of the Mystery – to teach angels and demons. And all of this is accomplished through Christ's church.

We now look quickly at the final point of Paul's Parenthesis – the Privilege of the Mystery.

The Privilege of the Mystery (Ephesians 3:12-13)

Ephesians 3:12. in whom we have boldness and access with confidence through faith in Him.

Ephesians 3:12 is quite clear. The privilege we have in Christ is that we can have boldness to come before God in prayer. We have access (cf. 1:18) to the throne of grace. We can come before God with confidence that he hears us (Heb. 4:16; 10:19; 1 Jn 5:15). All of this, again, like everything we have in Christ, is (at the end of verse 12) ours through faith alone in Christ alone.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Ephesians 3:13 is the conclusion of Paul's parenthesis.

Ephesians 3:13. Therefore I ask that you do not lose heart at my tribulations for you, which is your glory.

Remember, he began in Ephesians 3:1 by talking about how he was a prisoner of Jesus Christ for the sake of the Gentiles. That might be a troubling thought for them, so he has spent several verses assuring them that what he is going through is not a bad thing, but it is exactly what God wants.

Therefore, Paul asks them not to lose heart because of his tribulations, his trials, his troubles, because, he says, they are for your glory. He's saying, "Yes, I am a prisoner, but I am a prisoner because I did what God wanted me to do – namely, share the Gospel with you. If I was not in prison, you would not be saved, because I would never have come to and shared the Gospel with you. My tribulations are for your glory."

I think the lesson from these 13 verses that we looked at last week and today is simple. It is this: God opposes the proud but gives grace to the humble (1 Pet. 5:5; Jam. 4:6). We see it in the life of Paul, and we see it in what God is trying to teach the angels. Paul was very humble. He refers to himself as a prisoner, as a minister, a deacon, someone who runs through the dust, and he refers to himself as the least of all the saints. But God exalted Paul. God gave grace to Paul to carry out a world-wide ministry to the Gentiles. God gives grace to the humble.

On the other hand, in this passage, we have the principalities and powers. Somewhere in their past, some of them became proud and haughty. Led by the Angel of Light, they rebelled against God. But God opposes the proud, so now all of them, those who fell and those who didn't are being taught a lesson by God through us.

So the question then for us is twofold. First, are you humble enough to be used by God? This is a trick question. I do not think we can ever know if we are humble enough. The person who says they are humble enough, obviously is not. So the goal is to ask God to use us despite our pride, and to teach us to rely on him more than on ourselves.

The second question is "What are you teaching to the angels and demons? When they look at you, what do they see? As they attend this church, as they listen to you singing, as they watch you sitting there, listening to me – what do they learn? We always say that Christ is watching us, but we have seen today that the angels are too. Are your actions and thoughts teaching the angels the lessons God wants them to learn?

It has been popular among Christians in years past to ask themselves "What Would Jesus Do?" There were bracelets and T-shirts and all sorts of things that went along with this. This week, I want you to do something different. As you go about your day – to school, to work, or as you interact with your family and friends – ask yourself constantly "What am I teaching the angels?" As they look over your shoulder at what you read, as they sit down on the couch next to you and watch what you watch on television, as they drive in the car and listen to what you listen to – what are they learning from you?

Does your life reveal the truth that "He who is least among you will become the greatest, and He who is the greatest will become the least? That the "first shall be last, and the last shall be first"? Our audience is not just God, we also have students who watch everything we do. What are you teaching them?

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

[1] outline borrowed from John MacArthur.

[2] Zodhiates, 430.

[3] McCalley, 30.

[4] This is an excellent verse in defense of Molinism (The Middle Knowledge of God). This verse does not say that this was God's plan from before creation, it just says that it was God's plan from creation. Prior to creation, there were innumerable worlds which God could have created. He scanned the possibilities, picked one he liked, and created it. It is this moment of picking to the logical next step of creating that verse 9 is talking about. See The Only Wise God by William Lane Craig.

[5] C. Fred Dickason, Angels: Elect and Evil (Chicago: Moody, 1975), 108.

[6] It is true that we exist to worship and evangelize, but these things just bring more people into the church, which is circular reasoning if we are looking for an ultimate reason for the church. God didn't create the church so the church could get more people into the church. That is silly. These functions we do as a church have the overriding purpose of teaching the spiritual realm.

[7] Snodgrass, 168.

[8] Joseph Dillow, The Reign of the Servant Kings (Hayesville, NC: Schoettle, 1993), 1-3.

[9] Stott, 129.

"Paul on the Unity of the Church" by N.T. Wright - Session One (2014)

Why Unity Mattered to Paul

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=1NZ2epO9cjI [Video]

Galatians 2, 1 Corinthians 8-10, etc.

"Paul on the Unity of the Church" by N.T. Wright - Session Two (2014)

Path to Unity: Messiah and the Spirit

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=cnB0j0HQa8Q [Video]

Ephesians esp. Chapter 3 (e.g., verse 10,); 1 Corinthians 8-10, Romans 14, etc.

Return to*: Ephesians Highlights (by Chapter, Main Menu)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Ephesians 3:14-21 Power and Love [NTWEPH Chp 6]

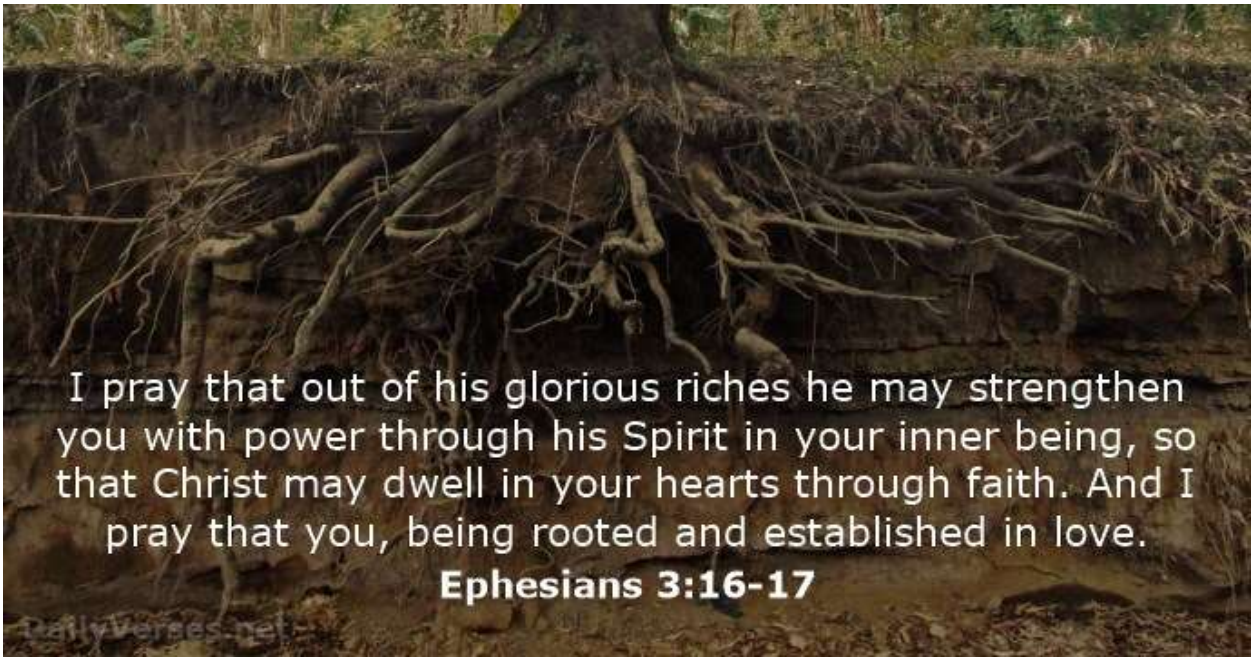
Love and power, power and love; these are the themes of perhaps two-thirds of the novels, plays and poems ever written. The love of power has laid waste continents and empires. The power of love has driven weak people to do powerful things—and, not infrequently, powerful people to do foolish things. These are the forces which shape our lives, our homes, our countries, our politics, our world.

Read Ep 3:14-21. Power and love are the themes that run through the great prayer that Paul prays for the young Christians to whom he is writing. What is Paul's frame of mind when he prays this prayer (vv. 14-15)?

There is nothing perfunctory about Paul's worship and prayer. One gets the sense, here and elsewhere, that his life revolved around it. This, we may suppose, is part of the secret of the extraordinary power that seemed to flow through his preaching, his pastoral work and his writing.

The church in the Western world has perhaps allowed itself to be lulled into thinking that prayer and action are at opposite ends of the scale of Christian activity. On the contrary. Those who want their actions to be effective for God's kingdom should redouble their time and effort in prayer. Prayer brings together love and power: the relation of love that grows up between God and the person who prays, and the flowing of power from God to, and especially through, that person.

That is what Paul's prayer here is all about. Essentially, it is a prayer that the young Christians may discover the heart of what it means to be a Christian.



What characterizes someone in whom King Jesus dwells?

> People talk easily, perhaps too easily, about "inviting Jesus into your heart," or "having Jesus in your heart." The danger here is that it's easy for people, particularly when they are soaked in the culture of Western-style individualism, to imagine that being a Christian consists simply in being able to feel, or believe, that Jesus has somehow taken up residence within. In fact, Paul speaks far more often of Christians being "in Christ" than of Christ being "in Christians." It's important to see our individual experience within the larger picture of our membership in God's family in the Messiah, within the worldwide plan Paul has been talking of in these three chapters.

Return to*: Ephesians Highlights (by Chapter, Main Menu)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

https://dailyverses.net/ephesians/3/16-17

Prayer for Power (Ephesians 3:16-18)

https://redeeminggod.com/sermons/ephesians/ephesians_3_14-17/

Excerpt:

Ephesians 3:16-17. that He would grant you, according to the riches of His glory, to be strengthened with might through His Spirit in the inner man, that Christ may dwell in your hearts through faith; that you, being rooted and grounded in love,

This is a very poor translation. It makes it appear that there are three separate requests here when in fact there is only one. A better translation would be

That He would grant you, according to the riches of His glory, to be strengthened with power through His Spirit in the inner man, Christ dwelling in your hearts through faith, being rooted and grounded in love.

The prayer request, in outline form is as follows:

I pray for that God would strengthen you with power
-according to the riches of His glory (God provided)
-through the Spirit in your inner man (Spirit enabled)
-with Christ dwelling in your hearts through faith (Christ directed)
-being rooted and grounded in love (Church focused)

This is Paul's second prayer in this letter to the Ephesians. It is interesting that in both prayers, he prays for power. The first time is in 1:19. Here is the second time. Paul prays that his readers would be strengthened with power. And in verses 16 and 17, he says that this will happen in four ways. He tells us where the power comes from (from God), how the power is used (by the Spirit), who directs the use of this power (Christ), and what the power is to be used for (love for the church). This is a prayer for God enabled, Spirit empowered, Christ directed, Church focused power. Let's look at each in turn.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Return to*: Ephesians Highlights (by Chapter, Main Menu)

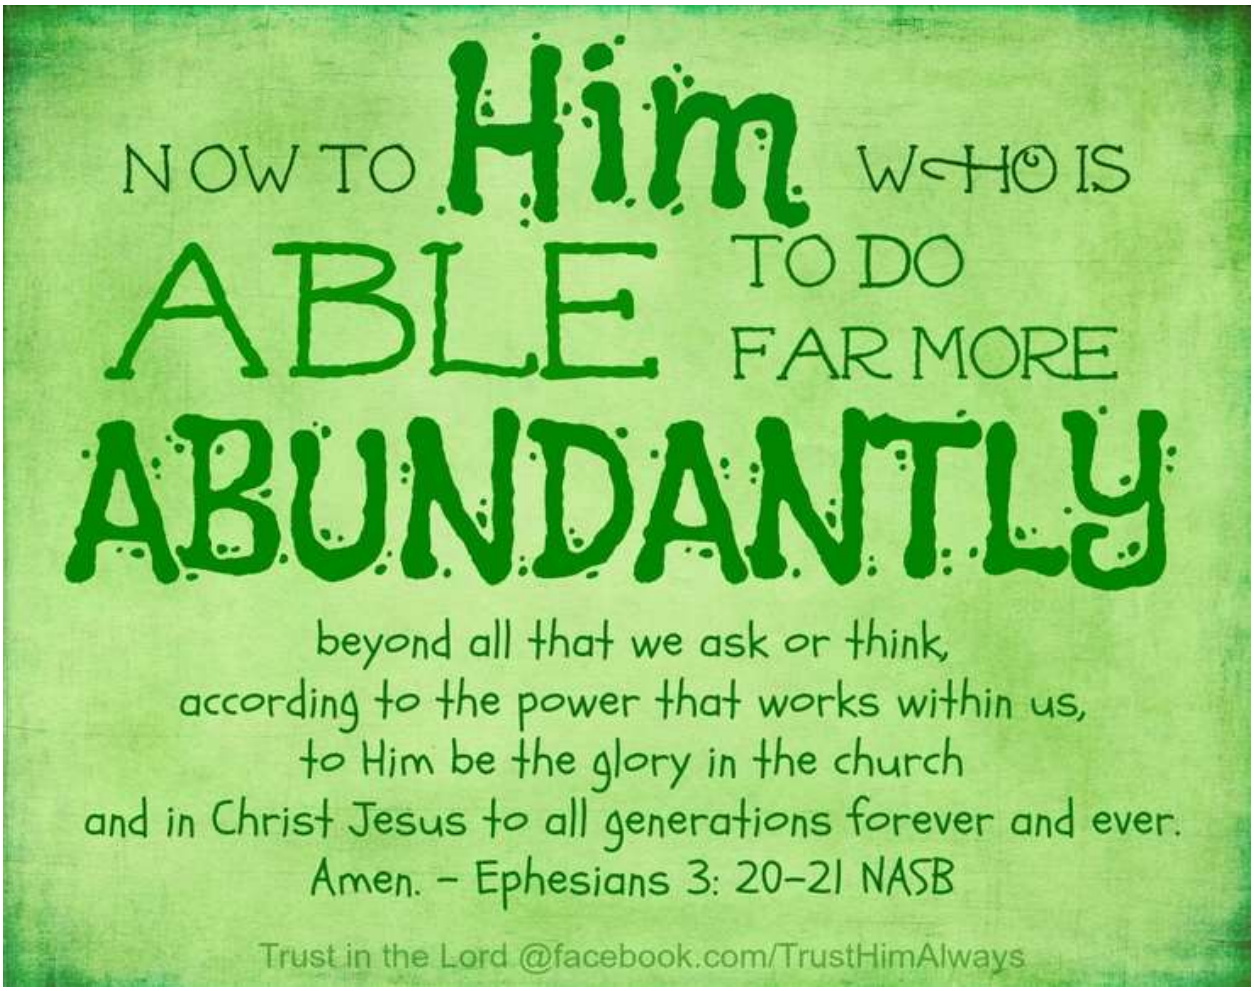
Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Praying for the Impossible (Ephesians 3:18-21)

https://redeeminggod.com/sermons/ephesians/ephesians_3_18-21/



Excerpt:

Paul's Prayer (Ephesians 3:14-21)
A. Introduction (Ephesians 3:14-15)
B. Prayer for Power (Ephesians 3:16-17)
C. Prayer for Knowledge (Ephesians 3:18-19a)
D. Prayer for Fullness (Ephesians 3:19b)
E. Doxology (Ephesians 3:20-21)

Return to*: Ephesians Highlights (by Chapter, Main Menu)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Return to*: Ephesians Highlights (by Chapter, Main Menu)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

http://www.generationword.com/notes/ephesians/slides/ephesians_slide_webpage.html

Return to*: Ephesians Highlights (by Chapter, Main Menu)

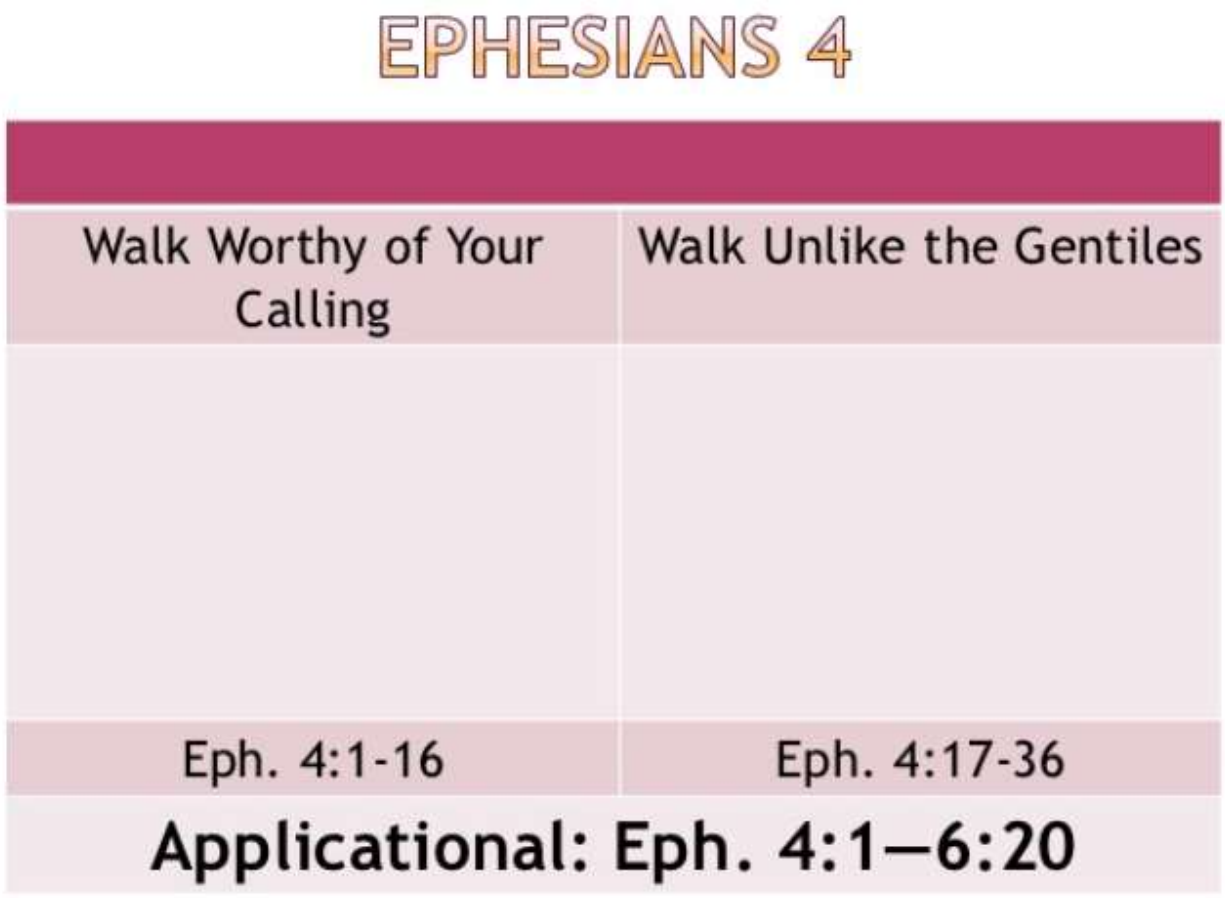
Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Ephesians Chapters 4 thru 6 (Applicational)

THE FIVE "WALKS"

Walk Worthy of Your Calling	Walk Unlike the Gentiles	Walk in Love	Walk as Children of Light	Walk as Wise
Unity of the Spirit	Likeness of God	Sacrifice of Christ	Light of Christ	Filling of the Spirit
As Grownups	As New People	As Beloved Children	As Ones Who Please God	As Spirit-Filled People
Peace	Truth	Charity	Holiness	Wisdom
4:1-16	4:17-36	5:1-8a	5:8b-14	5:15--6:9
Applicational: Eph. 4:1—6:9



© Dr. Daniel R. Lockwood

Return to*: Ephesians Highlights (by Chapter, Main Menu)

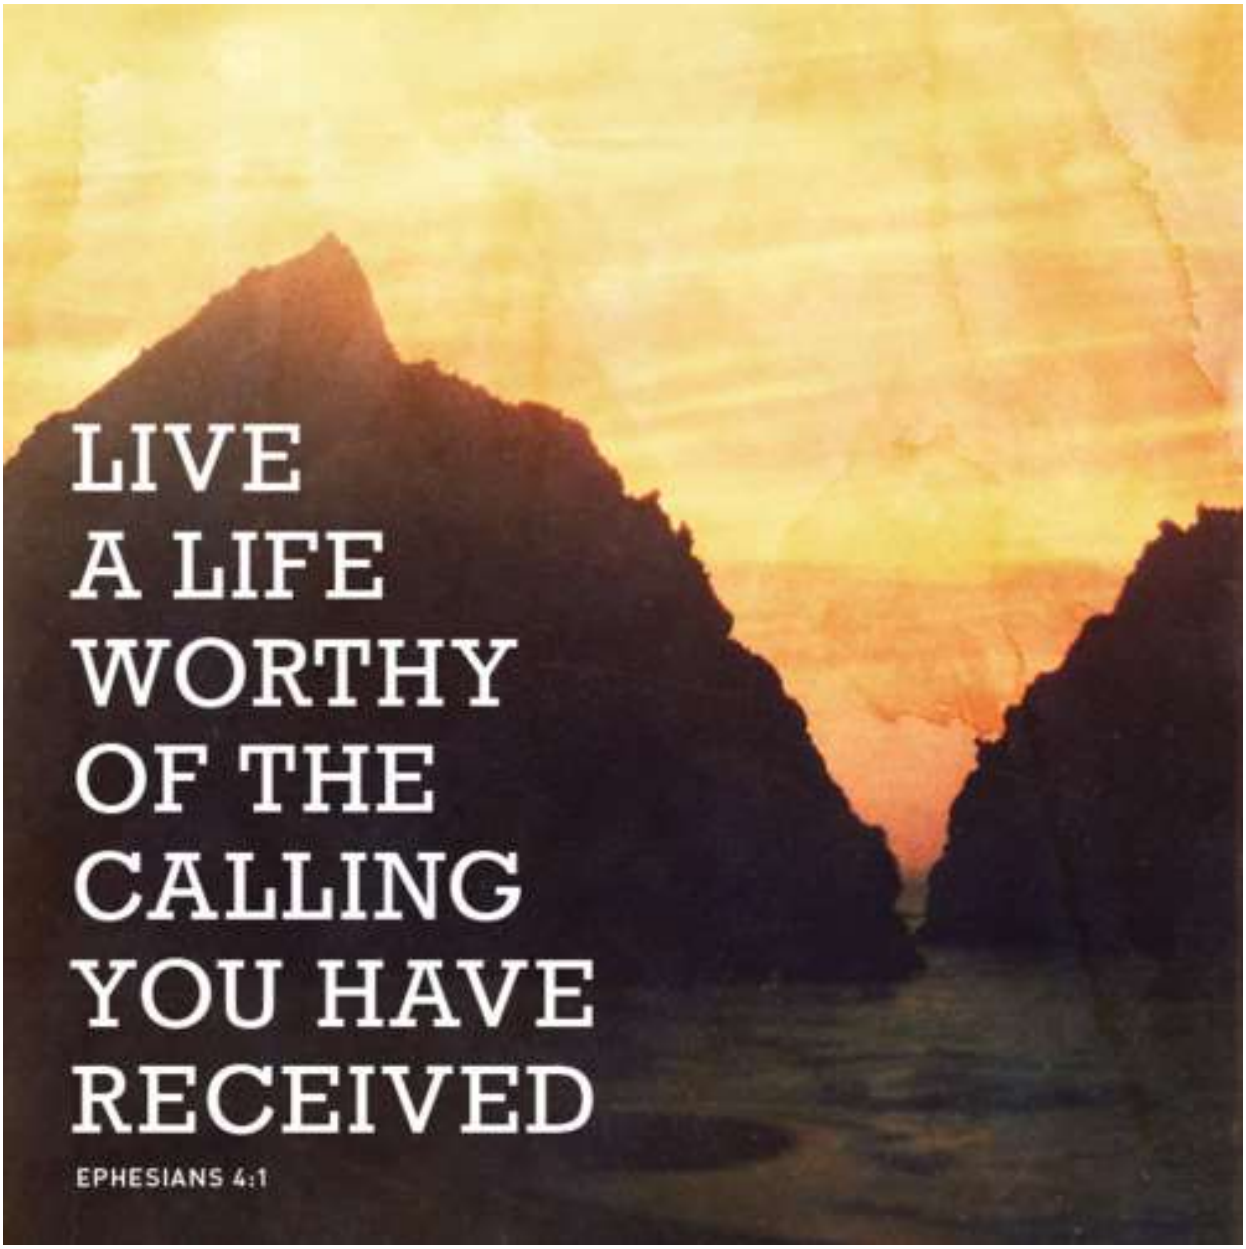
Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Ephesians Chapter 4

Live Your Life Worthy of Your Calling



Unity of/in the Church (Oneness)

Return to*: Ephesians Highlights (by Chapter, Main Menu)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Live a Life Worthy of the Calling You Have Received

Return to*: Ephesians Highlights (by Chapter, Main Menu)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Ephesians 4:1-16 Living Our Calling [NTWEPH Chp 7]

If you buy a new car, what's the first thing you do?

Do you sit down for an hour and read through the manual, to make sure you know every little detail about it before you take to the road? Or do you at once get behind the wheel and go for a drive, enjoying all the things the car can do and not worrying about the details, at least for the moment? In the same way, it's notorious that when people buy a new computer they tend to operate it first and read the instruction manual afterward.

The trouble is, of course, that things go wrong with machinery. They may go wrong even quicker if you don't read the instructions. But most people will at least keep the instruction book handy and refer to it from time to time to see how the machine was meant to behave, what the fundamental instructions were and what needs to be done to ensure that it remains at maximum efficiency.

QUESTION: When you buy something that comes with instructions, do you read the instructions? Why or why not?

Read Ep 4:1-6. In this section, which opens the second half of the letter, Paul takes his readers back to the fundamental instructions on living the Christian life. He reminds them how they began and what it was all about. The Christian life begins with a calling. He isn't referring to the specific "calling" or "vocation" that different Christians have—teacher, nurse, business leader and so forth. What elements comprise that calling to faith Paul has in mind here (vv. 1-5)?

How can we maintain and guard this unity we have with other believers?

> It may be hard for Christians today to grasp just how central this unity was to Paul's vision of the church. We have grown accustomed to so many divisions within the worldwide church. Sometimes customs and practices have grown up in churches which are so different that members of one have difficulty recognizing members of another as fellow Christians. Sometimes, indeed, the boundaries are blurred, and it may be possible for a church to wander off course so much that its claim to be loyal to Jesus Christ is seriously called into question.
>
> But whatever position we take today, the one thing we can't do is to pretend that this isn't a central and vital issue. Unless we are working to maintain, defend and develop the unity we already enjoy, and to overcome, demolish and put behind us the disunity we still find ourselves in, we can scarcely claim to be following Paul's teaching.

What is the "single hope" that goes with our call (vv. 4-6)?

> At every moment, in every decision, with every word and action, Christians are to be aware that the call to follow Jesus the Messiah and give him their complete loyalty takes precedence over everything else.

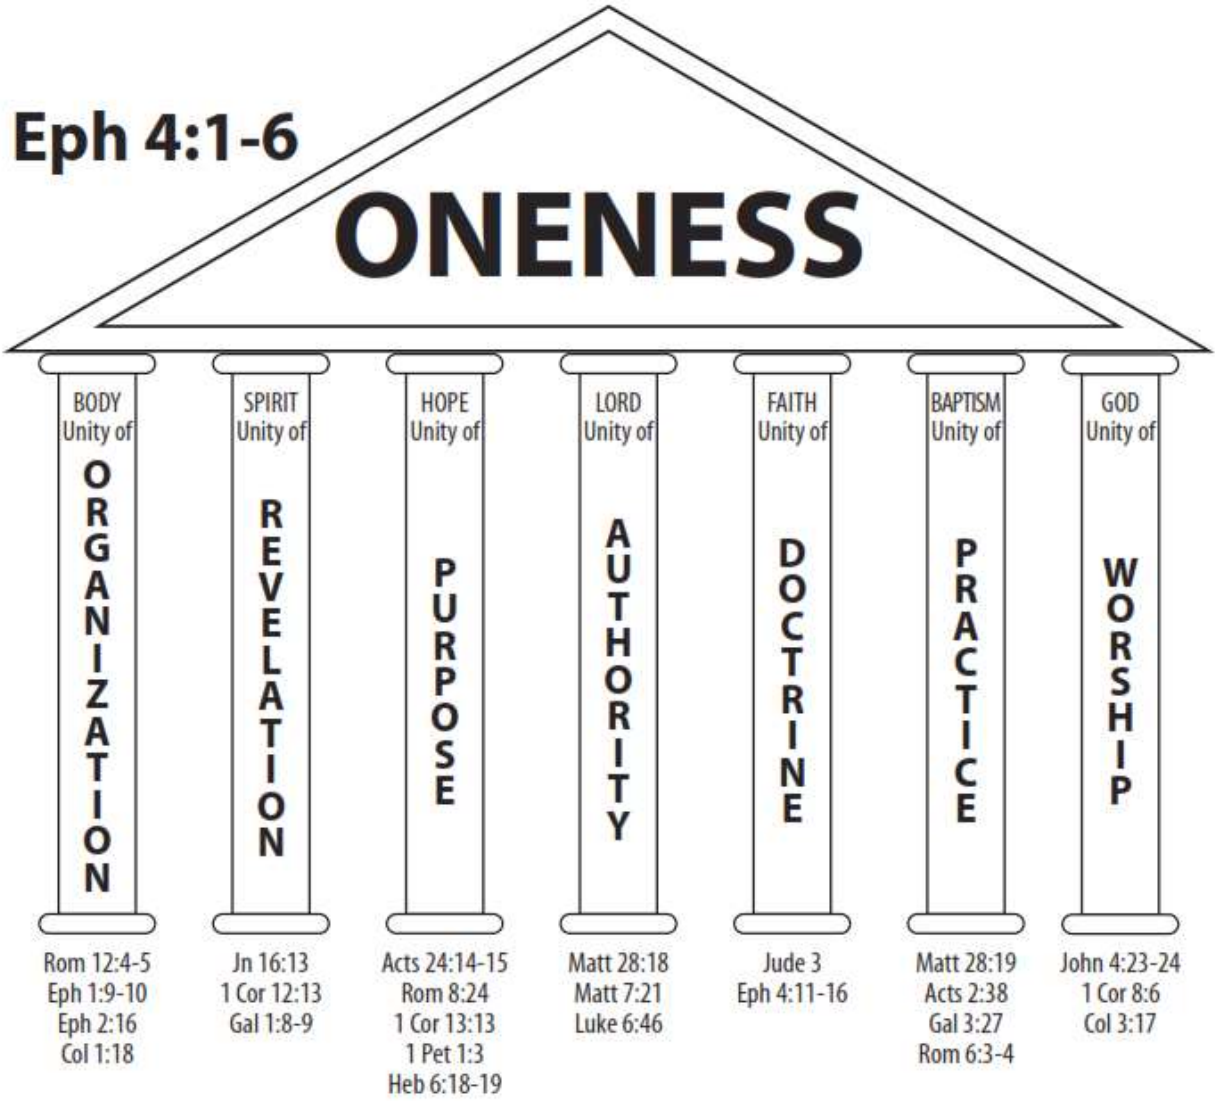
Why does God give some believers the particular leadership gifts mentioned in verses 11-12?

> The list of offices in verse 11 is not exhaustive. Elsewhere Paul adds others. But these five were crucial to the establishment of the first generation of the church. Apostles were witnesses to the resurrection; since the resurrection is the foundation of the church, the testimony of those who had seen the risen Jesus was the first Christian preaching. Early Christian prophets spoke in the name of the Lord, guiding and directing the church especially in the time before the New Testament was written. Evangelists announced to the surprised world that the crucified Jesus was risen from the dead, and was both Israel's Messiah and the world's true Lord. Pastors looked after the young churches; teachers developed and trained their understanding. They did this not least by setting out the many ways in which believing allegiance to Jesus linked Christians into the whole story and life of Israel, building on the promises of the Old Testament.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

It's not the particular gift that matters; it's using the gift that's important. What are the results of using the ministry gifts God gives us (vv. 13-16)?

Based on the images Paul uses in verse 14, what seem to have been the main obstacles to his readers' faith in Jesus?



Note on Ep 4:8-10

Before Paul gives his list of gifts Jesus has given to his church, Paul quotes Ps 68:18. This would have reminded first-century Jews of Moses going up Mount Sinai and coming down with the stone tablets of the law after he had rescued Israel from captivity in Egypt. Paul sees a parallel in Jesus. After "the new Exodus" had been achieved in Christ's death and resurrection, setting the human race free from bondage to sin and death, Jesus "went up" to the heavenly realm where he now reigns. Instead of coming down again with the law, as Moses had done, Jesus "returned" in the person of the Spirit, through whom different gifts are now showered on the church.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Ephesians 4:1-6 – Oneness (Unity)

Return to*: Ephesians Highlights (by Chapter, Main Menu)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

SPIRITUAL WALK 4:1—6:9 (Dr. Thomas Constable's Notes on Ephesians)

http://www.soniclight.com/constable/notes/htm/NT/Ephesians/Ephesians.htm

Paul had explained the unity of Jewish and Gentile believers in the church, and had prayed for the realization of that unity in experience (2:11—3:21). He now told how to attain a spiritual walk, namely, a life that manifests the Holy Spirit's control.

> "The key word in this last half of the book is walk (Eph. 4:1, 17; 5:2, 8, 15), while the key idea in the first half is wealth." [Wiersbe, 2:34]

1. Walking in unity 4:1-16

The apostle began by stressing the importance of walking (or living) in unity. This is one of two classic New Testament passages on unity, the other being John 17. God will not enforce unity in answer to prayer. Believers have a responsibility to obey Him as well.

> "Instruction, intercession and exhortation constitute a formidable trio of weapons in any Christian teacher's armoury." [Stott, p. 146]

Charity, unity, diversity, growth, and maturity are the key concepts in this section.

The basis of unity 4:1-6

4:1 "Therefore" or "then" refers to what Paul had said in chapters 1—3. To "walk" worthily ("in a manner worthy"), or in balance, means to harmonize one's conduct with his or her calling. "Calling" here refers to God's calling to live in unity as Jews and Gentiles in the church (2:13-16). To walk worthily, then, would involve behaving in a united way, living in unity with Jewish brethren if one is a Gentile, or vice versa, in the church.

> "This is not a worldly walk, but it is an earthly walk." [McGee, 5:248]

By referring to himself as the Lord's "prisoner" again (3:1), Paul reminded his readers of his authority to urge ("implore") them to live this way. Though seated "in the heavenly places in Christ," he was also seated in a prison because of his witness for Christ. He was in prison because he had followed God's will faithfully.

4:2 Three virtues contribute to unity in the church. "Humility" is a proper assessment of oneself in God's program.

> ". . . it would be natural for the flesh to be lifted up with pride because of the exalted position obtained." [Chafer, The Ephesian…, p. 118]

> "To face oneself is the most humiliating thing in the world." 239

> "To the Greek mind humility was little else than a vice of nature. It was weak and mean-spirited; it was the temper of the slave; it was inconsistent with that self-respect which every true man owed to himself. The fullness of life, as it was then conceived, left no room for humility." 240

> "The first step towards unity is humility." 241

A humble Jew or Gentile would regard his ethnic counterpart as equal with himself, not as inferior or superior to himself.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

"Gentleness" is the opposite of self-assertion. A gentle person is one whose emotions are under control. Whereas "humility" may have one's relationship to God and His blessings in view, "gentleness" may have the believer's relationship to the world in view. 242

> ". . . meekness is a virtue of the strong, those who could exert force to get their own way but choose not to." 243
>
> Meekness is "the absence of the disposition to assert personal rights, either in the presence of God or of men." 244

"Patience" is endurance even under affliction. When wronged, the patient person does not retaliate (cf. Gal. 5:22; Col. 1:11; 3:12; 2 Tim. 4:2). Relationship to fellow believers may be especially in view. 245

> "Makrothumia, patience, long-suffering is the spirit which bears insult and injury without bitterness and without complaint. It is the spirit which bears the sheer foolishness of men without irritation. It is the spirit which can suffer unpleasant people with graciousness and fools without complaint." 246

Believers should practice all these virtues with loving forbearance toward one another (cf. Rom. 2:4).

239 Barclay, p. 159.
240 Robinson, p. 91.
241 Henry, p. 1853.
242 Chafer, The Ephesian. . ., p. 119.
243 Morris, p. 114.
244 G. G. Findlay, The Epistle of Paul to the Ephesians, p. 265.
245 Chafer, The Ephesian . . ., p. 120.
246 Barcley, p. 163-64.

Unity: Ephesians 4:3-8

4:3 Christians must "preserve the unity" between believers that God has established in the church. Paul viewed "peace" as what keeps potential factions together. He had in mind peace between all kinds of diverse groups in the church, the most basic being Jews and Gentiles.

4:4 Seven elements of unity follow that unite believers in the church. Believers should remember them when tempted to break unity. Again, all three members of the Trinity are in view, and play a part in this process.

"Paul now gives the basis [for unity] by explaining in more detail how elements of the Christian faith revolve around the three persons of the Trinity. Unity is stressed by the sevenfold use of 'one' (eis, mia, en)."[247]

The "one body" is the church, the universal body of believers in the present age (1:23; 2:16; 3:6). The "one Spirit" is the Holy Spirit, who indwells the church as a whole, as well as every individual believer in the church (2:22; 1 Cor. 12:13). The "one hope" is the hope of the future, that each Christian has, and that the whole church has (cf. 1 Pet. 1:3; 3:15). This hope began when God called us to salvation (1:4, 18; 2:7; 4:1). These identifications seem clear from their occurrences elsewhere in the epistle.

4:5 The "one Lord" is Jesus Christ, the Head of the church (1:22-23; Col. 1:18). The "one faith" is probably the faith that each Christian, and the whole church, have placed or exercised in Christ, more than Christianity viewed as a faith (cf. Col. 2:7).[248] This identification links faith to Christ in the context (2:8).

The "one baptism" may be the baptism that unites all believers in the body of Christ. This is Spirit baptism, which water baptism symbolizes. Both kinds of baptism were probably in Paul's mind.[249]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

However, baptism falls in the second triad of elements that relate to Christ, rather than to the first that relate to the Spirit, in this verse. Therefore it may refer to water, rather than to Spirit, baptism. Another possibility is that it refers metaphorically to the believer's baptism into Christ's death. In this case, the "one baptism" would refer to the internal reality, of having been baptized into (identified with) the "one Lord," by means of the "one faith."[250]

4:6 "All" refers to all believers. God is "the one God and Father" of all believers, who are His children. He is "over" them in the sense of being their sovereign. He lives "through" them and manifests Himself "in" them.

Evidently Paul began this list of seven elements of unity with the Spirit's work, because he had been speaking of the unity of the Spirit (v. 3). He then proceeded to discuss the gifts of the Spirit (vv. 7-13; cf. 1 Cor. 12:4-6).

"The unity of the church is due to charis, God's grace having reconciled us to himself; but the diversity of the church is due to charismata, God's gifts distributed to church members."[251]

The preservation of unity 4:7-16

Having described the basis of Christian unity, Paul next explained the means by which Christians can preserve it, namely, with the gifts that the Spirit gives. Paul's emphasis was more on the growth of the body of Christ, the church, in this section, than on individual Christian growth. Each believer contributes to the spiritual growth of the church as he or she exercises his or her particular abilities in service.

4:7 Whereas each believer has received "grace" (unmerited favor and divine enablement) from God (3:2), God does not give each Christian the same "measure" of grace. Paul was speaking of God's "gift" of grace here as the specially provided ability to serve God. Though Jews and Gentiles both receive enabling grace from God, He gives this ability to different individuals in different kinds and amounts (cf. v. 11; Rom. 12:4-6; 1 Cor. 12:4-6).[252]

"It is so in the material creation—the little is as essential to symmetry as the great—the star as well as the sun—the rain-drop equally with the ocean, and the hyssop no less than the cedar. The pebble has its place as fittingly as the mountain, and colossal forms of life are surrounded by the tiny insect whose term of existence is limited to a summer's twilight."[253]

"Gifts are not toys to play with. They are tools to build with. And if they are not used in love, they become weapons to fight with . . . (1 Cor. 12—14)."[254]

4:8 Paul's paraphrase of Psalm 68:18 confirms his statement that God gives "gifts" to people. A military victor has the right to give gifts to those identified with him. Christ, the Victor over sinful people, has the right to give those people to the church as "gifts."[255] In Romans 12 and 1 Corinthians 12, Paul spoke of gifts given to people (cf. v. 7), but here he spoke of people given to the church as gifts.

"Some have alleged that Paul erred in his citation from Psalm 68:18 on at least two counts: (1) he altered the verb of the psalm from 'received' to 'gave,' thus reversing its meaning, and (2) he gave an interpretation to the Old Testament passage that is unwarranted. With regard to the first point, the origin of the reading 'gave' is not to be found in Ephesians 4:8. Rather, this is a variant reading for Psalm 68:18 that has an ancient pedigree, as may be seen by its presence in both the Aramaic Targum and the Syriac Peshitta. However, Paul was not necessarily quoting with one of these sources in mind; the reading probably had a history not limited to its appearance in these particular sources. It was apparently a variant reading that was well known, especially within Jewish rabbinic circles. Furthermore, Paul must be permitted some latitude in his citation. His purpose was not to provide a formal and exact representation of the Old Testament phraseology, but rather to expound and apply the passage to the work of Christ as Lord of the church. That the apostle used a variant reading of the psalm should not in itself be overly surprising.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

"Regarding the second point, it seems clear that Paul used an analogical patterning of Old Testament teaching within the New Testament context. This was common among New Testament writers. Such a practice does not obviate the Old Testament contextual setting, nor does it purport to provide the only fulfillment of the Old Testament passage. When Matthew, for example, related Hosea 11:1 ('Out of Egypt have I called My son') to the flight of the holy family, he did not thereby deny that Hosea 11:1 refers to the Exodus of the Israelites from Egypt. He simply drew an analogy between the two events. Likewise in Ephesians 4:8 the application of Psalm 68:18 to Jesus as the bestower of gifts for ministry within the church does not eliminate or contradict the Old Testament application of the words to the victorious Israelite King. In keeping with common Midrash pesher techniques, but in a way that avoids the excesses to which the method was pushed by some nonbiblical writers, Paul made a valid application of Christological significance to the Old Testament passage. On the one hand, according to Psalm 68:18, God ascended Zion as a victorious king worthy of being the recipient of gifts of homage. On the other hand, according to Ephesians 4:8, Jesus also ascended to the heavenly Zion as the victorious Lord who lovingly bestowed on His church the gifts of ministry essential to her future well-being. The one passage provides the pattern for the other."[256]

A slightly different interpretation follows.

> ". . . Paul apparently followed the Jewish interpretation of the day (the Targum), which paraphrased this verse as follows: 'You did ascend to the firmament, O Prophet Moses! You led captivity captive; you taught the words of the Law; you gave [not 'received,' as in the Heb.] gifts to the sons of men.' (This interpretation saw Moses as God's representative.) Paul followed this Jewish exegesis because it explained that the conqueror distributed the gifts to His loyal subjects. The apostle applied that idea to Christ's victory over the forces of evil and His granting spiritual gifts (cf. Eph. 4:11) to those on His side. By this analogy (based more on the Jewish interpretation of the psalm than on the exact Heb. wording) Paul emphasized the greatness of believers' spiritual victory in Christ."[257]

Josephus, in his Antiquities of the Jews, wrote many times that various royal people received and gave gifts to their friends, sometimes to express gratitude and or to win favor. This was true especially among the royals in New Testament times. I think it is likely that Paul had this custom in mind when he wrote this verse. Christ both received gifts (praise, honor, adulation) from many people for His defeat of Satan at the Cross, and He gave gifts (gifted people, in this case) to the church as the Victor.

247 Hoehner, Ephesians, p. 513.
248 Eadie, p. 275; Salmond, 3:322.
249 Morris, p. 119.
250 Hoehner, Ephesians, p. 518.
251 Stott, pp. 155-56.
252 For defense of the view that spiritual gifts are ministries rather than abilities, see Kenneth Berding, "Confusing Word and Concept in 'Spiritual Gifts': Have We Forgotten James Barr's Exhortations?" Journal of the Evangelical Theological Society 43:1 (March 2000):37-51.
253 Eadie, p. 280.
254 Wiersbe, 2:37.
255 Who the captives were seems to have been of less interest to Paul than the fact that Christ won a great victory (Morris, pp.123-24).
256 Richard A. Taylor, "The Use of Psalm 68:18 in Ephesians 4:8 in Light of the Ancient Versions," Bibliotheca Sacra 148:591 (July-September 1991):335-36.
257 Allen P. Ross, "Psalms," in The Bible Knowledge Commentary: Old Testament, p. 843.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Unity in the Church (Ephesians 4:1-6)

http://www.jesuswalk.com/church/3_unity.htm

Excerpt:

A Word of Confession

I must confess to you all that I am still growing in my understanding of the unity the Spirit brings. God is gradually overcoming my prejudices.

Bible teaching has always been important to me. When I was younger I was sure I was right and everybody else was wrong. But as I've grown older I've had to reverse some of my previously-held positions because I found that the Bible didn't teach them. My tradition taught them, but not the Bible.

I've learned that doctrinal understanding is strongly influenced by the traditions of those who helped shape our faith. We can be trained to look only at a certain set of scripture verses that support our position and to underemphasize others.

From my tradition I can find fault with lots of people's doctrines. I can find errors in Catholicism and Evangelicalism, with Orthodoxy and Liberalism. I can criticize both hyper Calvinists and rigid Arminians. Not to mention various groups that you could call "cults." I'm an expert at finding fault with other groups -- and so perhaps are you.

I've gradually learned that even some in "cults" have a love for Jesus and a zeal for his work that far exceeds many in my own tradition. Is their theology faulty? Without a doubt! But they seem to love the same Jesus I love. They read the same Bible. They seek to obey the same New Testament commands.

In Romans 14, Paul talks about relating to those with different, perhaps stricter convictions. Then he says a word that convicts me:

> "Who are you to judge someone else's servant? To his own master he stands or falls. And he will stand, for the Lord is able to make him stand." (Romans 14:4)

My dear friends, I must confess that I have judged some servants of Jesus that I had no right to judge. Yes, I can evaluate the truth of their doctrine according to the Bible and I must. But I cannot judge their faith or their relationship to God through Jesus. Are they saved? That's for God to judge, not me. Since they confess and seek to follow Jesus as Lord; I must consider them my brothers and sisters (1 Corinthians 12:3), and thus strive to maintain unity with them, too.

The history of the Christian church displays an immense variety of kooky, non-biblical theology, even within so-called "orthodox" groups. Anyone can find fault, but who can "maintain the unity of the Spirit in a peaceful uniting bond"? Can we do that for Christ's sake?

I listen to Jesus' great high priestly prayer and realize that he was praying for you and me:

> "My prayer is not for them alone. I pray also for those who will believe in me through their message, that all of them may be one, Father, just as you are in me and I am in you. May they also be in us so that the world may believe that you have sent me. I have given them the glory that you gave me, that they may be one as we are one: I in them and you in me. May they be brought to complete unity to let the world know that you sent me and have loved them even as you have loved me." (John 17:20-23)

Prayer

Father, forgive me for the times I have separated myself from my fellow Christians. Forgive me for not striving to maintain the unity of the faith. Forgive me for disregarding the uniting bond of peace. Please work more fully in me your own humility, gentleness, patience, forbearance, and love. Display clearly to us the essential unity of your Church here on earth, I pray, through Jesus Christ. Amen.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

How can the church achieve a true, biblical unity?

https://www.gotquestions.org/church-unity.html

The Mandate for Christian Unity – A Study of Ephesians 4:1-6

https://www.christiancourier.com/articles/1382-mandate-for-christian-unity-a-study-of-ephesians-4-1-6-the

Excerpt:

Paul the Prisoner

Paul frequently refers to himself as a "prisoner" (Ephesians 3:1; 4:1; Philippians 1:13; Philemon 9,13; 2 Timothy 1:8). He is both a prisoner "of Christ" (3:1) and a prisoner "in the Lord" (4:1). The apostle was a prisoner literally on many occasions during his ministry (cf. 2 Corinthians 11:23), and specifically when he penned this epistle (cf. 6:20). But in a richer sense he had become the prisoner "of" Jesus in that he had surrendered his self-interests to the bondage of his Lord (Philemon 10,13) for whom he gladly suffered. Too, his relationship "in" the Lord placed his sufferings in an altogether different dimension. There is no virtue in hardship when one is estranged from the Savior.

Temperamental Unity (vv. 1-3)

In the pursuit of Christian unity, it is absolutely crucial that one appreciates the importance of the ideological system he has embraced. Christianity is the sole avenue to God in this concluding dispensation of human history. It is not merely "a religion," it the "the religion" of divine sanction (cf. John 14:6; Acts 4:12; 9:2; 19:9,23; 22:4; 24:14). In view of this foundational truth, the following plea is appropriate…

Conclusion

En route to the cross, Jesus prayed for the "oneness" of all those who profess to believe on him through the testimony of the apostles (John 17:20-22). Those who take seriously their claim of faith in Christ will work conscientiously for unity among fellow believers. They will not celebrate differences that segment people into warring factions that disgrace the name of Christ and the oneness of the Christian cause.

It is a strange circumstance that men will stress the importance of the first three verses of this context, but minimize the unity required of the second three verses. It is stranger even that commentators will maximize the few items upon which "Christendom" is mostly united, and dismiss the numerous crucial matters upon which it remains so hopelessly divided (Hunter 1959, 64-65). Surely the Lord is not pleased with such a disposition.

Return to*: Ephesians Highlights (by Chapter, Main Menu)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

[Go to Index]

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

[Go to Top - TOC]

The Unity of the Church

http://biblehub.com/sermons/auth/edgar/the_unity_of_the_church.htm

Excerpt:

The doxology has just died away with its ascription of glory to God in the Church throughout all ages, and now the apostle turns from his intercession to admonish the Ephesian Christians about the necessity of cultivating lowliness of mind and mutual consideration, that in the Church there may be preserved "the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace." It is plain from the verses that follow that Paul's conviction was that the Divine glory could only be manifested in a Church thoroughly united. To the all-important subject of the unity of the Church we are consequently led.

I. CONSIDER THE UNIFYING FACTS, (Vers. 4-6.) Paul here lays before the Ephesians certain great facts which are meant to contribute to this unity of the Church. These facts we had better enumerate in barest outline.

1. There is one body. This refers to the solidarity of believers, who, so far from being independent units, are dependent parts of one great organism of which Christ is the Head. The unity of the Church is thus shown to be organic, and lying deep down in the nature of things.

2. There is one Spirit. For to the existence of a body there must be a spirit. The body, the Church, is pervaded by the Spirit, the Holy Ghost. It would be a corpse but for this indwelling.

3. There is one hope in all the called ones. The unity of hope is surely a remarkable fact. All the called ones have their faces set towards the future as the golden age, when their ideals shall be realized. Christianity is the religion of hope, the one religion which denies that the former times were better than these, or that the golden age is behind us.

4. One Lord. Jesus reigns as the Church's living Head. He as Mediator is the Source of all authority in the Church. His lordship or headship is a fact which calls for unity.

5. One faith. This asserts that the truth is one. Error is manifold, but the truth as it is in Jesus is one. It seems to our latitudinarian age almost heresy to affirm the unity of the Christian faith. But seeing that its substance consists in facts, it would be madness to relegate these to the region of uncertainty.

6. One baptism. This is baptism into the one Name of Father, Son, and Holy Ghost (Matthew 28:19), so that the Divine Name unifies the baptized believers. "The doctrine of baptism" is reduced to a significant unity thereby.

7. "One God and lather of all, who is over all, and through all, and in all (Revised Version). This is the seventh and last of the unifying facts. The fatherhood of God, all-embracing, all-pervading, speaks of family unity and rebukes all discord. In presence of such facts the wonder is that division could be entertained.

II. CONSIDER THE UNIFYING GIFTS. (Vers. 7-12.) More has been done towards the unity of the Church than confront believers with unifying facts, even in their sevenfold perfection. The ascended Savior has bestowed unifying gifts upon his believing people. We need not tarry over the humiliation by which Christ secured them - a humiliation down to the lower parts of the earth, and involving the tenanting of the tomb and the region of the dead. We hasten to the glorious gifts themselves, which come out of the hands of the ascended and glorified Christ. And here we have:

1. Apostles. We may well restrict the term to the selected witnesses of our Lord's resurrection, the noble band who wrought most earnestly for the unity of the Church.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

2. Prophets. The inspired ones, whose inspiration was always on the lines of Christian unity; for the will of God which they conveyed to men is that believers should be one.

3. Evangelists. Men like Timothy or Apollos, who go forth with the one message, thereby promoting unity in the Church of God. The gospel is not a manifold, as we have seen, but a unity, and he who proclaims it with simplicity and earnestness contributes thereby to the unity of the Church.

4. Pastors and teachers. These gifts are less special, and consequently more important. True pastors, true teachers for God, will aim at the perfecting of the saints, unto the work of ministering, unto the building up of the body of Christ." The note of a Divine gift is the desire to promote the all-important unity. Is it not a glorious thought that orders of men have been established by Christ for this special purpose of promoting the unity of the Church?

III. CONSIDER THE UNIFYING DEVELOPMENT. (Vers. 13-16.) The unifying process is to be educational and so progressive The unity will not spring full-grown and panoplied like Minerva from the head of Jove, but it will grow, as knowledge grows and kindly feeling, "from more to more." And in this patient development Jesus is to be our Ideal, and his fullness and perfection the goal for which we strive. Taking him as our Standard of excellence, we are to grow up into him in all things; and if we do, unity must result. And here we should observe:

1. Our development will carry us beyond childish vacillation. (Ver. 14.) For there is nothing so detrimental to unity as inability to make up our minds about the essential doctrines of the faith. If we are tossed about like vessels unmoored, if we are a prey to designing and cunning men, we cannot contribute anything to the unity of the Church.

2. Our development will enable us to be communicative and so far edifying. (Vers. 15, 16.) For as we grow in knowledge of Christ we learn to speak the truth in love. A speechless member of the community cannot contribute much to unity and edification. We are bound to be witnesses. And loving language about the Lord promotes the glorious unity. It grows as the organism grows in mutual adaptation, strength, and power. The Church, thus growing in the knowledge of the living Head and pervaded by the one Spirit of life and of love, advances towards the perfection which Christ has shown us. Hatless and Monod, in writing on these verses, refer to the indeterminate character of the passage as to the realization of the perfect state being in this world or beyond it. But the emphasis is laid by Paul upon the fact of development, and how each individual may contribute to the consummation in the unity of the Church. If each of us considers his duty in the matter of edifying that body of which, as a believer, he forms a part, the glorious development will make its steady progress towards the perfection to be realized at last. It is surely worth an effort to contribute something to such a purpose. - R.M.E.

Return to*: Ephesians Highlights (by Chapter, Main Menu)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Maintenance and Basis of Christian Unity (4:1–6)

The high ecclesiastical doctrine of the previous sections calls for a manner of life which exhibits the transformation envisaged in it, and because of its nature this must be shown in the Christian community (4:1–16), amongst men in general (4:17–5:20) and in the particular relationships of Christian men and women (5:21–6:9).

v 2, 3 describe the frame of mind which accompanies the actions of the walk, being the new spirit of 23. Twin virtues of the renewed mind are lowliness (now for the first time presented as a virtue) and meekness (being not weakness but the eliminating of self-assertion). The next pair shows how they receive others' actions directed against them. By all these four tempers they are to show an eagerness to forge a bond made of peace by which spiritual unity is safeguarded. The seven unities are a list, being introduced without a verb. Every expression of unity is based on these. one body: The new body of 2:15, 16. one Spirit: Given alike to Jew and Gentile, 1:13. one hope: As previously expounded there are no second-class Christians in God's plan. one Lord: Even Christ the source of all unity. one faith: Either the common faith given to all the saints (Jude 3), or, possibly, the subjective faith each believer puts in Christ. one baptism: Usually taken to refer to baptism in water, but it may reasonably refer to the baptism of the Spirit.

[These seven unities can be compared with the four unities which Paul sets out in 1 C. 12:4–13, where he deals at length with the unity produced by the baptism of the Spirit. The four unities there shown are one Spirit (4, 9, 11), one Lord (5), one God working in all (6) and one body (12 f.). It would be strange to omit all reference to the Lord's supper, which is so clearly connected with the unity of the body (1 C. 10:17), and insert baptism in water which is an unsafe basis of unity (Ac. 8:13, 20–23). In the other items in this list, 'one' seems to mean 'one only' not 'one sort of' ('one faith' is doubtful), and is best so taken here].

The seven items are so arranged that the first is set against the last, the second against the sixth, the third against the fifth, so connecting hope with faith, and Spirit with baptism. The 'one Lord' stands appropriately central to all. one God: He is the Father of all in Christ in the most real sense. He is over all the members, and manifested through all because working in all. Paul uses the abstract word for unity, strictly 'oneness', both here in 3, and later in 13. He is dealing with something spiritual, not a concrete, organized entity, for the NT churches were self-governing, and devoid of any central ecclesiastical bureau of control.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only one body – one God

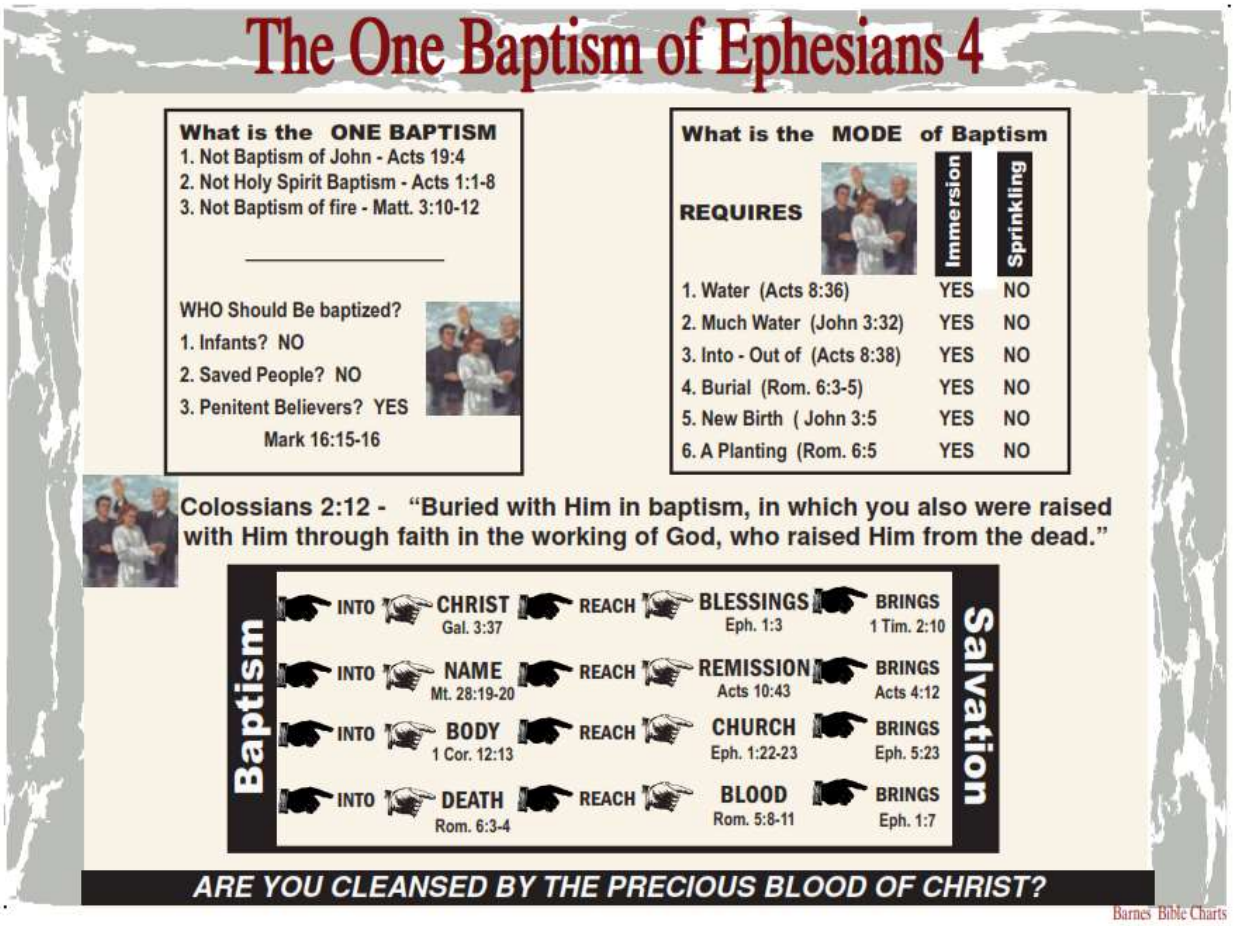
one Spirit – one baptism
one hope – one faith
one lord

REFLECTION

The Ties that Bind
Christian unity does not just "happen." It is cultivated in hearts and affirmed through common confession. Humility, gentleness, patience and love — these virtues facilitate unity. Without them, people consume each other in the heat of confrontation. Biblical fidelity is equally important. Absent a devotion to truth, community devolves into disconnected subcultures, each organized by special interest. The ties that bind us must be intentionally strengthened and vigilantly safeguarded.
Adam T. Barr



Source: Zondervan Bible Commentary

Return to*: Ephesians Highlights (by Chapter, Main Menu)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The One Baptism of Ephesians 4

The Trinitarianism of Ephesians 4:4-6, a Chiastic Creed

https://kevinfannystevenson.blogspot.com/2013/05/the-trinitarianism-of-ephesians-44-6.html

Excerpt:

4:4 A. One Spirit

4:5 B. One Lord (Jesus)

4:6a C. One...Father

4:6b C. Over all

B. Through all

A. In all

See*: Chiastic Creed: Ephesians 4:4-6

Return to*: Ephesians Highlights (by Chapter, Main Menu)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

https://www.kingjamesbibleonline.org/Ephesians-4-6_Inspirational_Image/

Main Bible Verses on Unity
https://www.biblestudytools.com/topical-verses/unity-bible-verses/

https://www.whatchristianswanttoknow.com/bible-verses-about-unity-21-important-scriptures/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

N.T. Wright on Forgiveness of Sins

https://theologiansinc.wordpress.com/2014/02/08/n-t-wright-on-forgiveness-of-sins/

'From the point of view of a first-century Jew, 'forgiveness of sins' could never simply be a private blessing, though to be sure it was that as well, as Qumran amply testifies. Overarching the situation of the individual was the state of the nation as a whole; and, as long as Israel remained under the rule of the pagans, as long as Torah was not observed perfectly, as long as the Temple was not properly restored, so Israel longed for 'forgiveness of sins' as the great, unrepeatable eschatological and national blessing promised by her god. In light of this, the meaning which Mark and Luke both give to John's baptism ought to be clear. It was 'for the forgiveness of sins', in other words, to bring about the redemption for which Israel was longing.' (N.T. Wright, 'Jesus and the Victory of God', p. 271)

Wright: Forgiveness Reframed

http://www.patheos.com/blogs/jesuscreed/2016/10/06/nt-wright-forgiveness-re-framed/

https://www.biblebelievers.com/stauffer/stauffer1_OBRD.html

"Paul on the Unity of the Church" by N.T. Wright - Session One (2014)

Why Unity Mattered to Paul

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=1NZ2epO9cjI [Video]

Galatians 2, 1 Corinthians 8-10, etc.

"Paul on the Unity of the Church" by N.T. Wright - Session Two (2014)

Path to Unity: Messiah and the Spirit

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=cnB0j0HQa8Q [Video]

Ephesians esp. Chapter 3 (e.g., verse 10,); 1 Corinthians 8-10, Romans 14, etc.

Return to*: Ephesians Highlights (by Chapter, Main Menu)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Ephesians 4:7-16 – The Gifts That Develop This Corporate Life

Paul ignores some gifts he has elsewhere listed, and gives those most directly related to the building up of the Church.

First apostles, in the narrower sense of 2:20, the permanent authority.

prophets: Inspired men who revealed the truth of God.

evangelists: Preaching missionaries, through whom men became followers of Christ.

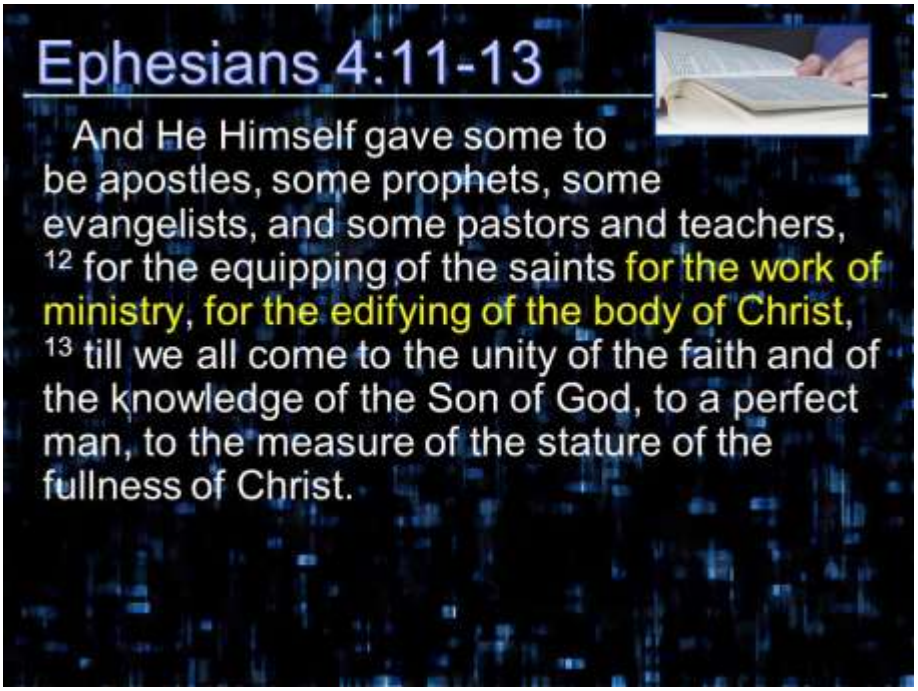
pastors and teachers: Elsewhere called elders or bishops, who cared for the converts and their growth. All pastors in a local church should be able to teach (some privately and others publicly) as well as to shepherd (see 1 Tim. 5:17); but there were also teachers in the Church who had a more roving commission than administrators (Rom. 12:7; 1 C. 12:27).

The three purposes of these gifts are, to prepare people, who will do service, which will build the church. The third and ultimate intention is a recurrent theme of the letter (1:23; 2:21; 3:19; 4:13–16; 5:27). All this activity is to go on until the Church reaches the measure of the fulness of Christ. It is an attained unity, whilst the unity of 4:3–6 is a unity already existent. The integrated oneness of the baby is real enough, but it is not the conscious oneness of the mature man.

The unity towards which the Church moves is one of personal knowledge of the Son of God. The faith is more what we usually mean by knowledge, i.e. full acquaintance with the mind of Christ.

14. then: The final clause — as the Church moves towards this final maturity it graduates from infancy and the instability that is due to inadequate doctrine and inadequate experience of Christ. The spiritual novice is wide open to false doctrine and to false men.

cunning suggests the clever handling of dice. scheming recurs in 6:11, traced to the ultimate source.



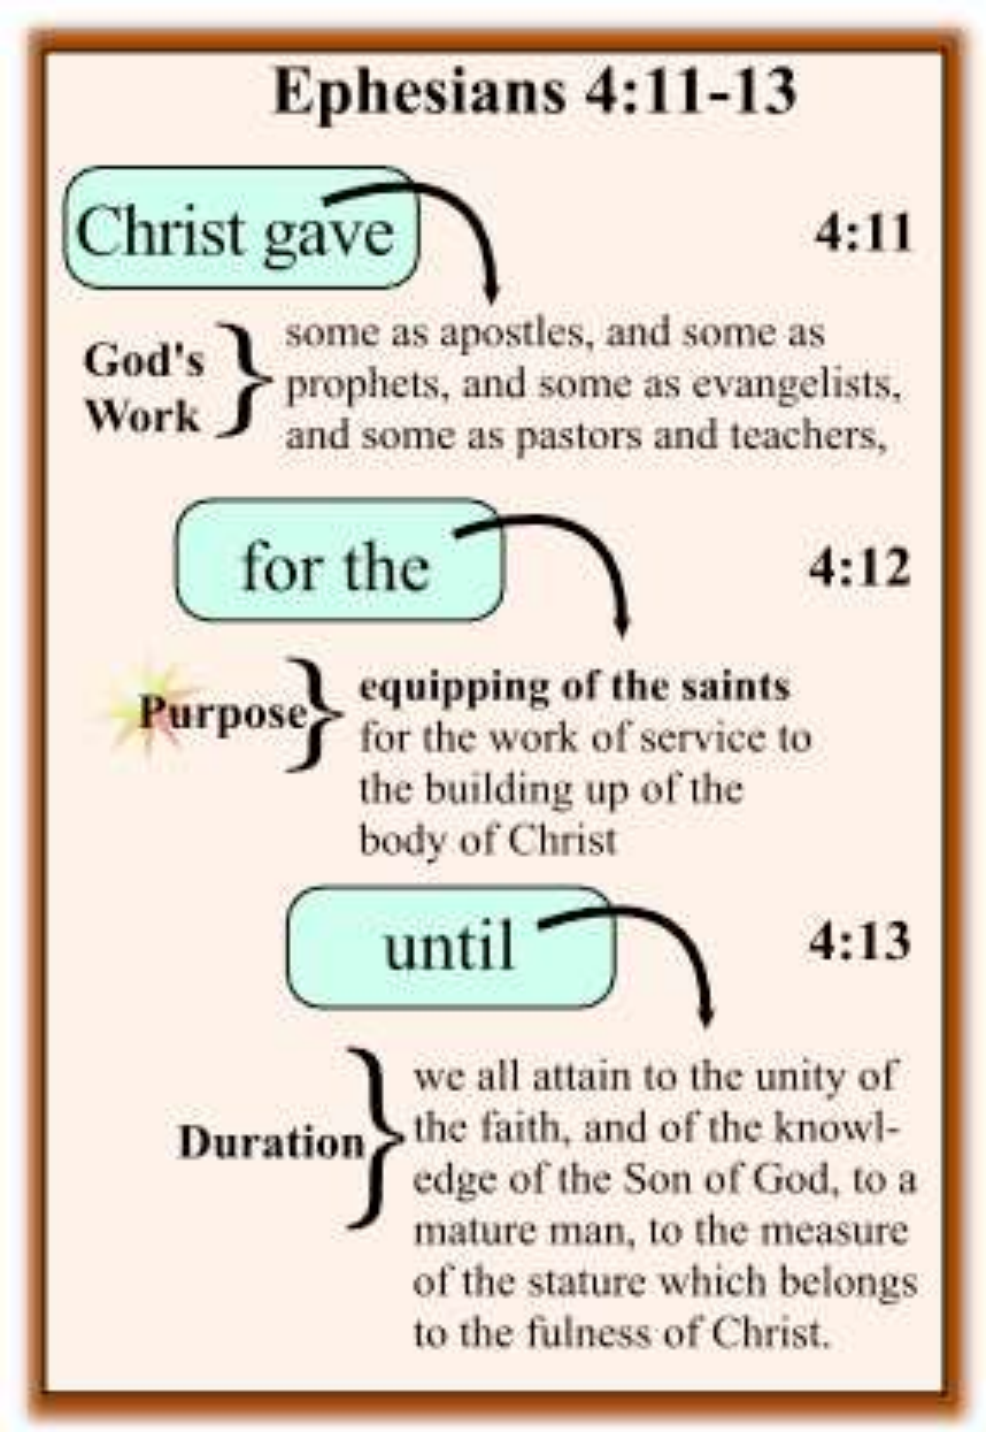
15. speaking the truth in love: Maintaining the true doctrine in a compatible spirit and manner of life, not as a weapon for fighting but to secure a balanced growth in Christ (Col. 3:16). This will produce a mature expression of the Head in every member of the body.

16. joined: An architectural metaphor indicating harmony. held: As a body is by ligaments and joints, indicates solidity. When the parts are each working properly the head will see by its overall control that the whole body develops aright

Source: Zondervan Bible Commentary

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Ephesians 4:11-13



Spiritual Gifts in Paul's Letters

Romans 12:6-8	1 Corinthians 12:7-10	1 Corinthians 12:28	Ephesians 4:11
Having gifts that differ according to the grace given to us	To each is given the manifestation of the Spirit for the common good	God has appointed in the church	And he gave apostles	the apostles
prophecy	prophecy	prophets	the prophets the evangelists ability to distinguish between spirits utterance of wisdom
teaching	utterance of knowledge	teachers	the shepherds and teachers exhorting
	working of miracles	miracles
	gifts of healing	gifts of healing service		helping
leading		administrating
	various kinds of tongues	various kinds of tongues interpretation of tongues giving faith mercy

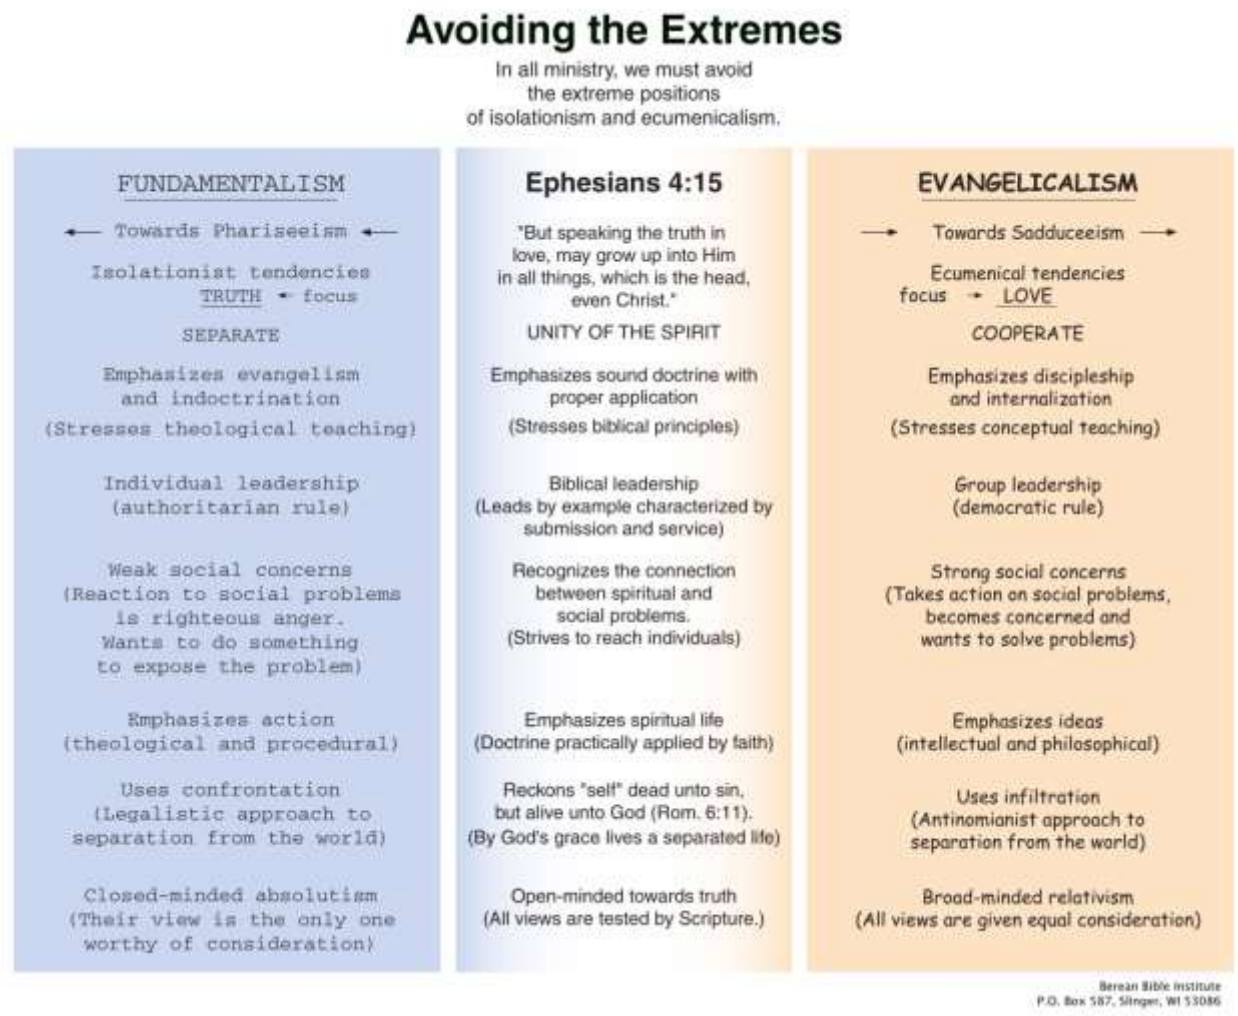
[Source: ESV Study Bible note]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



http://artona.myblog.it/2011/12/30/ephesians-4-31/

Return to*: Ephesians Highlights (by Chapter, Main Menu)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Ephesians 4:15

Source: https://kettlemorainebiblechurch.weebly.com/charts.html

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Ephesians 4:17-5:2 Off with the Old, On with the New [NTWEPH Chp 8]

We couldn't understand why the agency was being so unhelpful.

We had answered the advertisement and were eager to rent the apartment that we had been offered. There were some minor problems, but nothing too difficult to sort out. But every time we telephoned we spoke to a different person, and they never seemed to understand what was happening. They gave different answers each time we asked the questions. They quoted us different rates. The worst thing was that they didn't really seem to care whether we rented the place or not.

When we finally visited the office it became clear. The secretaries and assistants we had been speaking to on the telephone were bright enough. They obviously would have liked to be helpful. But the manager—who had never talked to us himself—was impossible. He was inefficient, haphazard, and we suspected he had a drink problem. But he covered it all up by being a bully. He shouted at his employees and gave them different directions every day. No wonder they hadn't been able to help us much. Only by confronting him directly and making him face the issues could we begin to sort everything out.

When we begin to get to grips with the wrong way and the right way to live a truly human life, it's no good starting with the junior members of the establishment. People often suppose that Christian behavior is simply a matter of getting your body to do certain things and not do certain other things. That's like us trying to do business with the assistants rather than directly with the incompetent manager. Paul makes it clear in this passage that you've got to go about it the other way round. And the incompetent manager isn't the human body. It's the human mind.

Read Ep 4:17-24. How does Paul describe the pagan mind and heart (4:17-18)?

In contrast, what teaching did the believers receive (4:20-24)?

> Paul is urging the young Christians that they allow this teaching of Jesus to have its full effect in their lives. Now that they are "in Christ," they have the responsibility, in the power of the Spirit, to take off the old lifestyle, the old way of being human, like someone stripping off a shabby and worn suit of clothing. It may have become comfortable. You may be used to it, and even quite like it. Familiar old clothes are often like that, and brand new ones often feel a bit strange. But if you want to live as a new person in and for the king, the old suit of clothes has to come off, and the new one has to go on.

What's the overriding reason to change our thinking in order to change our behavior (4:30)?

> The word Paul uses for "God's mark" could refer to the "seal" or official stamp on a document or package, marking it out for a particular use or occasion. The mark indicates who it belongs to and what it's for. If we are marked out by the Spirit's personal presence living in us, think how sad it makes that Spirit if we behave in ways which don't reflect the life and love of God.

Paul says we should imitate God (5:1-2). How can we do that?

Scan through the "new behaviors" again that are found at the end of Ep 4, but this time read them as a description of how God acts toward us. How does that make you think and feel differently about the whole passage? [NOTE: See also charts/list below]

See also*: Old Man and New Man / Old Man and the Flesh

Return to*: Ephesians Highlights (by Chapter, Main Menu)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Ephesians 4:17-24 – In Personal Character

17–19. As always, Paul proceeds from the dogmatic to the pragmatic, for the fulness of Christ can only at present be seen to operate in the Church in the spheres of character and service. These latter are actuated by the operation of the mind, and the moral breakdown of the Gentile world is rooted in the futility of their thinking. They are empty of the real values of God and eternity. This vanity, Paul teaches, originates in an inner cause, a darkened intellect: and in an outer cause, separation from God.

Man is in the dark without God, for God is man's true sunlight. Both these causes spring from the ignorance of God that is in, or among, them, and this ignorance in turn arises from the hardness or obduracy of heart by which men repel God's revelation of Himself. Rom. 1:18–21 unfolds this further, and both sections should be studied, together with Eph. 2:2, 3, for a true understanding of the unbeliever's condition.

19. lost all sensitivity: i.e. ceased to care. The soul, when deprived of spiritual resources, turns for satisfaction to the body, and even the high tides of philosophical culture break eventually on this barren shore.

20–24. heard about Christ: is both to hear Him (hear about Him is inadequate) and to be taught in Him. The latter is initiated by the oral instruction of the new convert. This consisted of that outline of Our Lord's life and teaching which is the core of the synoptic Gospels (Lk. 1:3, 4), and was enjoined upon all (Mt. 28:19 f.); teaching which it is perilous to ignore (1 Tim. 6:3 f.).

the truth that is in Jesus: Absolute truth, not an aspect of it, as if He were to be compared with Confucius. Christ is the truth (Jn 14:6), therefore to learn Christ is to learn truth. The discarding of the old man and the wearing of the new are two halves of one action. The moment by moment repetition of this decision is the secret of the Christian's changed life (Rom. 6:13 f.).

Note the contrast between deceitful and true. Human nature cannot be reformed (Rom. 8:7), it must be regenerated. The new (kainos, new in kind) creation, which replaces the old of Gen. 1:27, restores the likeness of God, and the renewal takes place in the innermost being, in the spirit of the mind. righteousness is right conduct towards God, and holiness, here, is right conduct towards men.

Source: Zondervan Bible Commentary

Return to*: Ephesians Highlights (by Chapter, Main Menu)

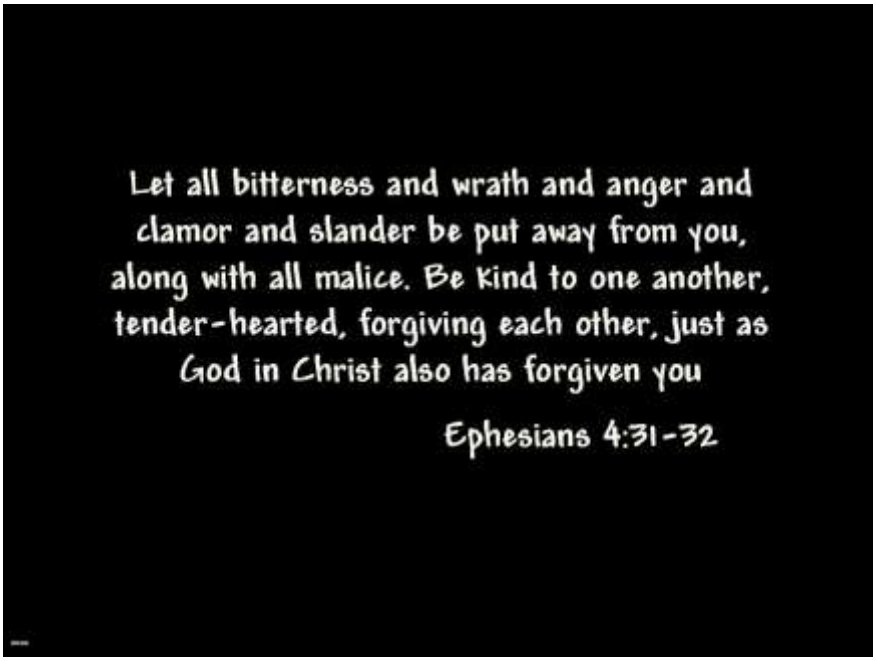
Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



http://www.allwidewallpapers.com/ephesians-4-29-32/

http://www.allwidewallpapers.com/ephesians-4-29-32/ZXBoZXNpYW5zLTQtMjktMzI/

Return to*: Ephesians Highlights (by Chapter, Main Menu)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Forgive One Another

STUDY MAIN TEXT: Ephesians 4:32

Go to*: Forgive One Another

Return to*: Ephesians Highlights (by Chapter, Main Menu)

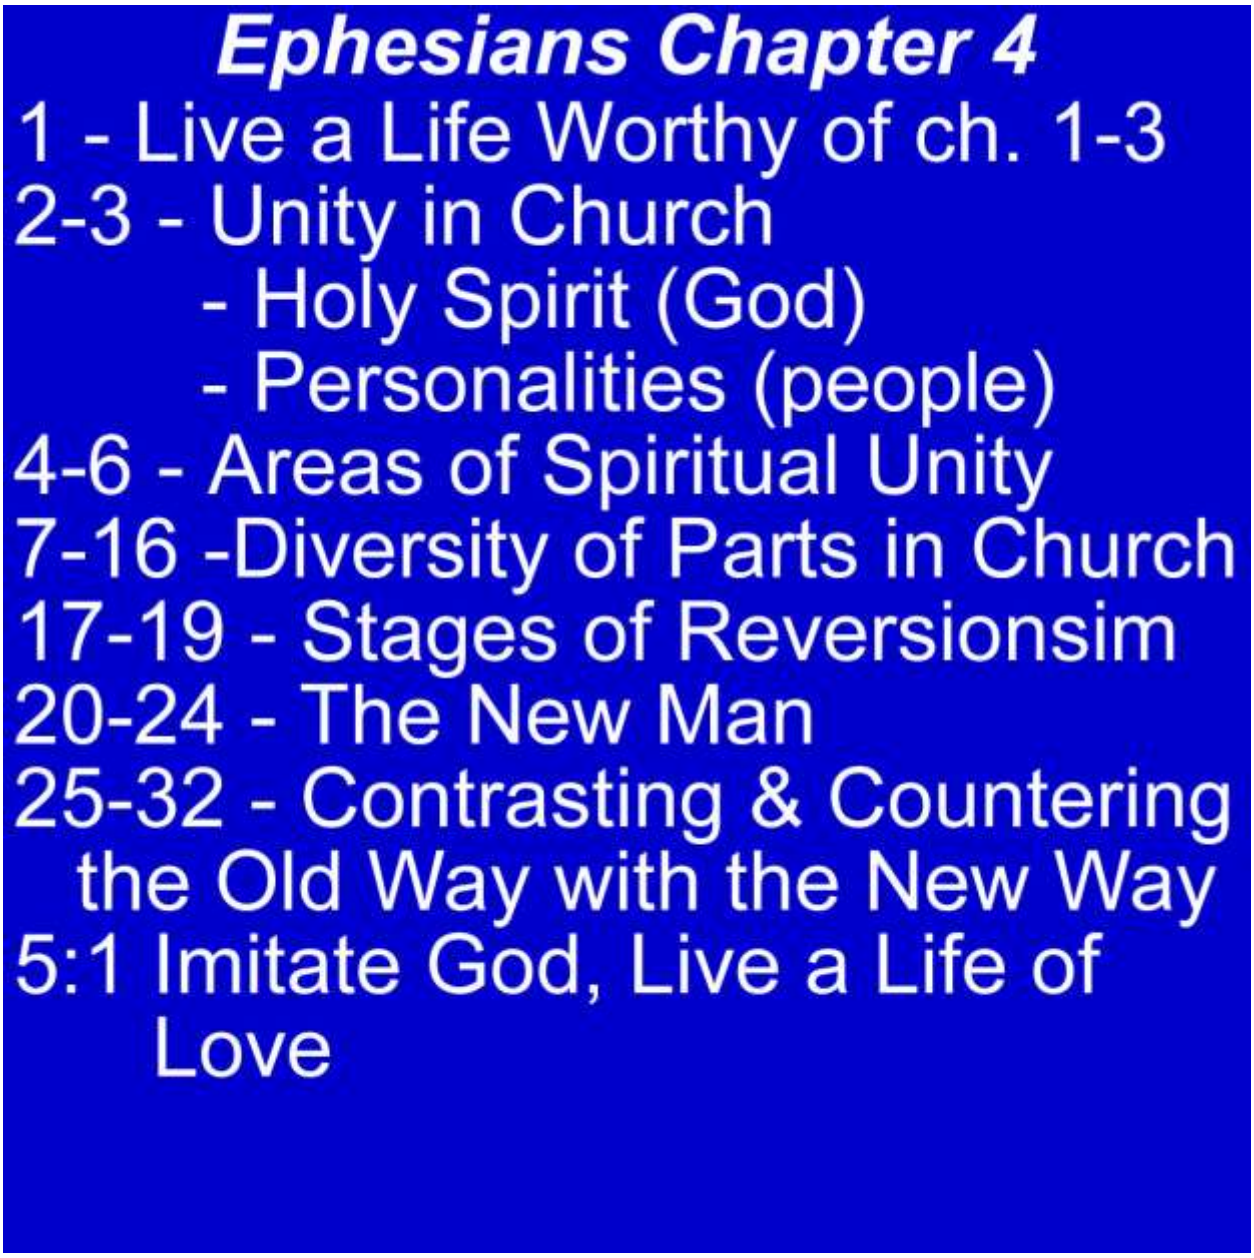
Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



https://becauseofgrace.wordpress.com/tag/ephesians-430-52/

Return to*: Ephesians Highlights (by Chapter, Main Menu)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Return to*: Ephesians Highlights (by Chapter, Main Menu)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Return to*: Ephesians Highlights (by Chapter, Main Menu)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Return to*: Ephesians Highlights (by Chapter, Main Menu)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Return to*: Ephesians Highlights (by Chapter, Main Menu)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Return to*: Ephesians Highlights (by Chapter, Main Menu)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

[Go to Index]
Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only
[Go to Top - TOC]

Return to*: Ephesians Highlights (by Chapter, Main Menu)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Return to: Ephesians Highlights (by Chapter, Main Menu)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Return to: Ephesians Highlights (by Chapter, Main Menu)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Return to*: Ephesians Highlights (by Chapter, Main Menu)

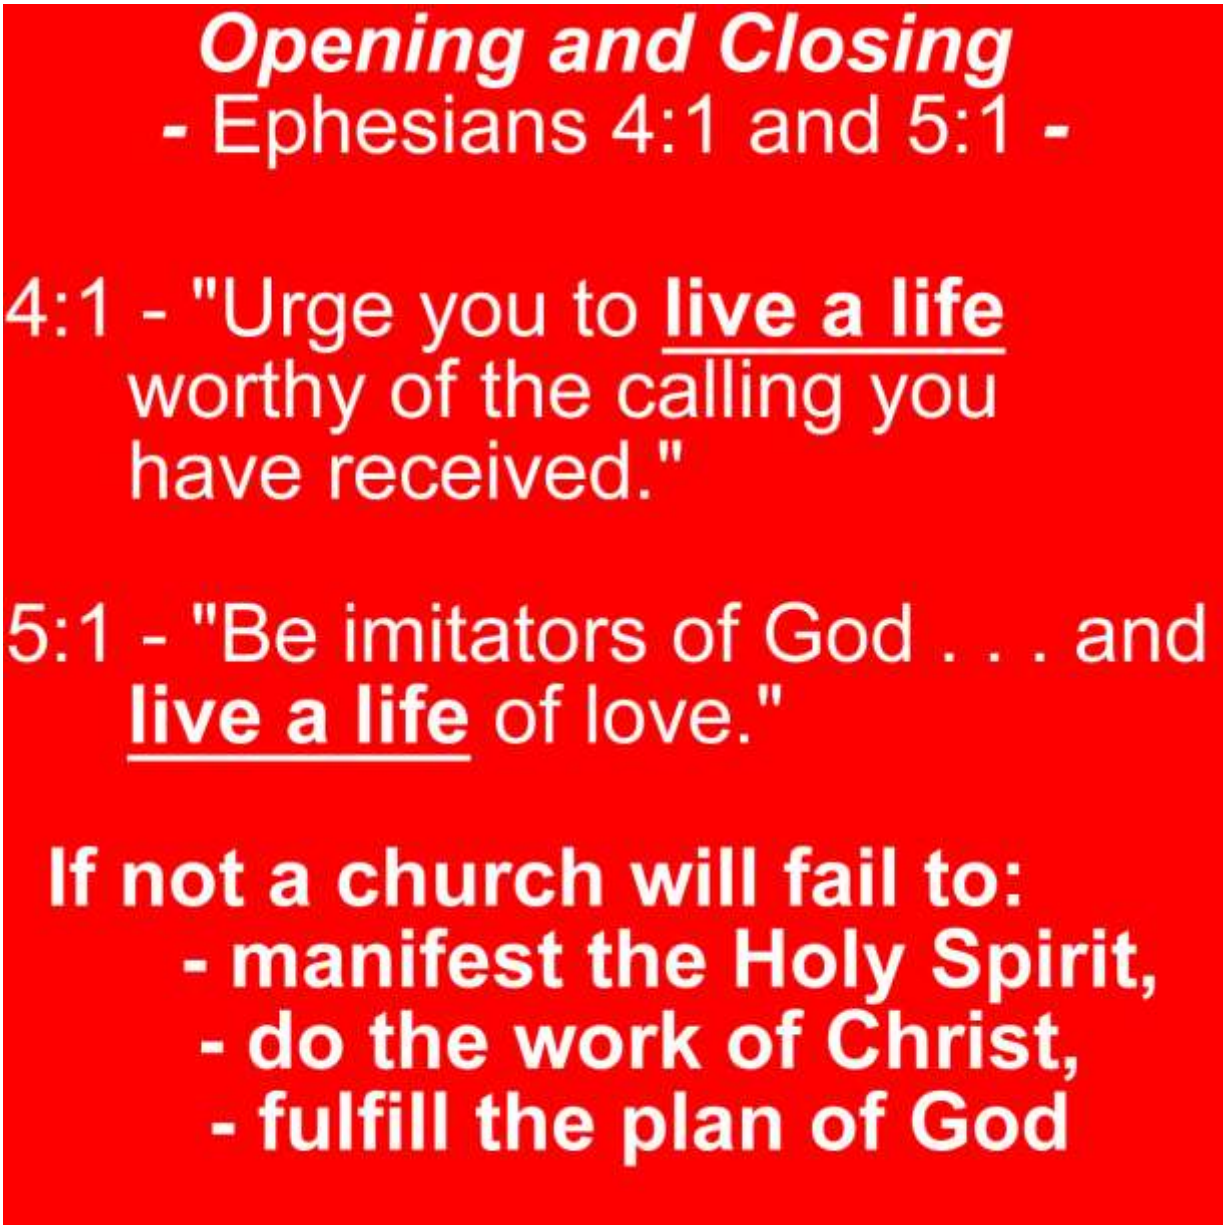
Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

[Go to Index]

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



[Go to Top - TOC]

Return to*: Ephesians Highlights (by Chapter, Main Menu)

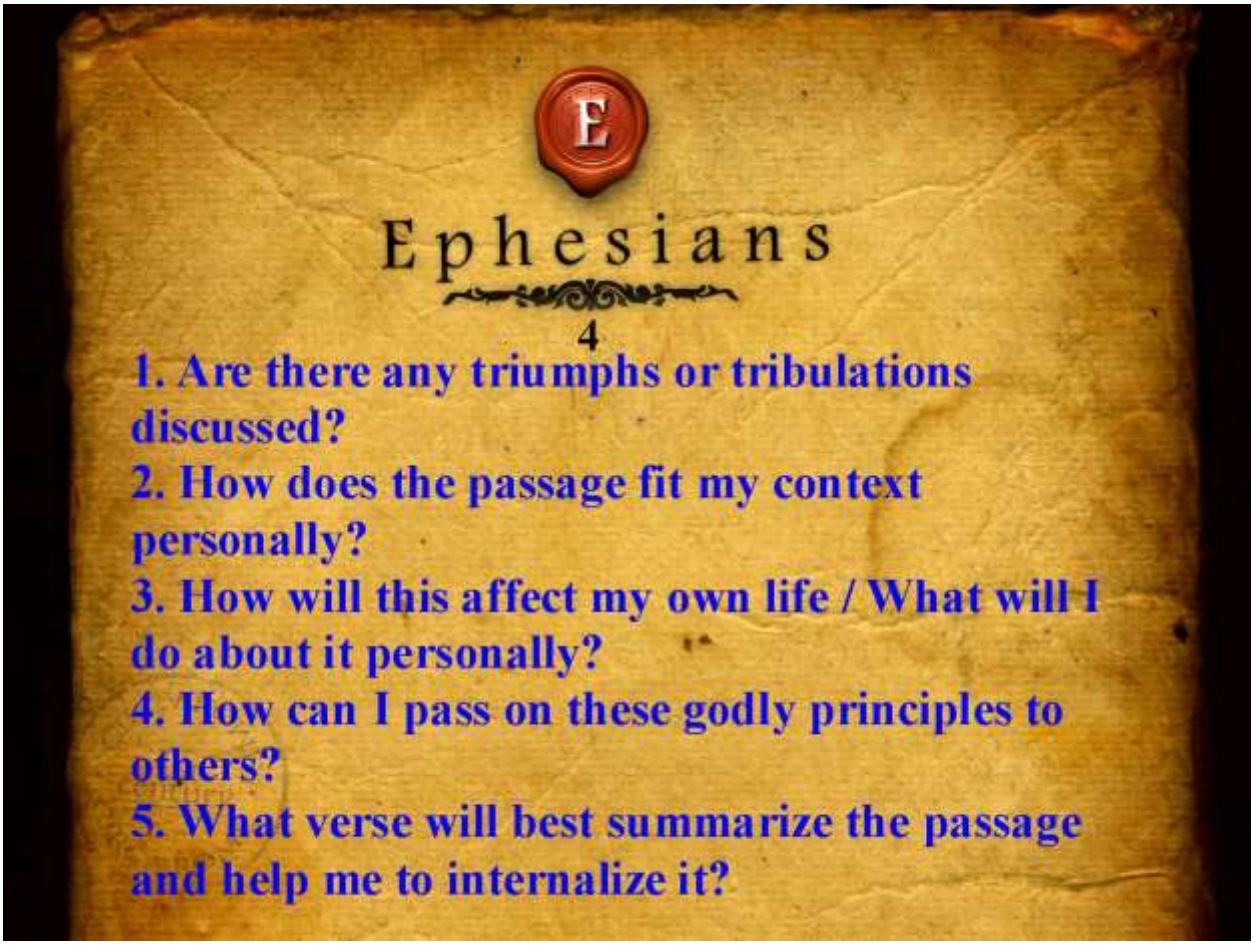
Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



http://www.generationword.com/notes/ephesians/slides/ephesians_slide_webpage.html

Return to*: Ephesians Highlights (by Chapter, Main Menu)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Return to*: Ephesians Highlights (by Chapter, Main Menu)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Ephesians Chapter 5

Kingdom of Heaven vs Kingdom of God (Ephesians 5:5)

Ephesians 5:8

Ephesians 5:24-25 (Husbands/Wives)

Return to*: Ephesians Highlights (by Chapter, Main Menu)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Ephesians 5:3-20 Walking in the Light [NTWEPH Chp 9]

The poster in the college gateway had one large word in the middle of it: SEX. Underneath, in small print, it said, "Now you're interested, how about joining the College Rowing Club?" Whoever designed the poster wasn't suggesting that taking up rowing had anything to do with sex. They were simply exploiting the fact that in contemporary Western society people are so obsessed with sex that the very word attracts people's attention. Anything associated with it seems attractive as well.

Read Ep 5:3-10. In many ways the world of Paul's day wasn't much different from ours today, particularly in the cities where he spent most of his time. Casual sex and all kinds of curious practices associated with it seem to have flourished. What is Paul's remedy for immorality (vv. 3-4,7)?

What reasons does Paul give for this remedy (vv. 3,5-6)?

> Paul has a way of cutting to the heart of the issue. Don't be fooled, he says. There are a lot of empty words out there—words, that is, which sound big and important, which echo and resonate in our culture, but which have nothing inside them, no life, no truth. Precisely because sex is a good, joyous and important gift of God's creation; precisely because it is the means of tenderness and intimacy between husband and wife, as well as the means of God-given procreation; precisely because it is the occasion for great blessing and emotional fulfillment; because of all these, people on the road to genuinely human existence promised in Christ must avoid all cheap imitations.
>
> Casual sex is a parody of the real thing—like drinking from a muddy stream instead of fresh, clear water, or like listening to a symphony from a damaged audio file when a world-class orchestra is playing in the theater around the corner.

If you don't want your garden to grow weeds, one of the best ways is to keep it well stocked with strong, sturdy flowers and shrubs. If you don't want your mind and heart to go wandering off into the realms of darkness, one of the best ways is to keep them well stocked with wise and thankful themes, so that words of comfort, guidance and good judgment come bubbling up unbidden from the memory and subconscious. Hymns and psalms today can still provide exactly this kind of Christian nurture.

The singing that Paul has in mind is the ultimate antidote to living in the darkness of immorality that pervades the surrounding world. Yet again his emphasis is on the mind, and the need for wisdom. It is vital not to slide along through life in a general foolish haze, hoping things will work out all right but not being prepared to think them through, to figure out where this or that type of behavior will really lead.

How have hymns and spiritual songs been important to you?

Return to*: Ephesians Highlights (by Chapter, Main Menu)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

[Go to Index]
Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only
[Go to Top - TOC]

Ephesians 5:5 "…Kingdom of Christ and God."

Note: This section includes references for Kingdom of God and Kingdom of Heaven, including some that consider them interchangeable terms and others that consider them different. Both views and variations are included to allow you to discover and determine for yourself.

Kingdom of Heaven vs Kingdom of God

Summary of the Kingdom of God
https://www.learnreligions.com/what-is-the-kingdom-of-god-701988

So, the simplest way to understand the Kingdom of God is the realm where Jesus Christ reigns as King and God's authority is supreme. This Kingdom exists here and now (in part) in the lives and hearts of the redeemed, as well as in perfection and fullness in the future.

What is the Kingdom of God? Why did Jesus talk about it so much?
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=CIcptDF-fc4 [Video]

What is the kingdom of God?
https://www.gotquestions.org/kingdom-of-God.html

Question: "What is the kingdom of God?"

Answer: The kingdom of God is referenced often in the gospels (e.g., Mark 1:15; 10:15; 15:43; Luke 17:20) and other places in the New Testament (e.g., Acts 28:31; Romans 14:17; 1 Corinthians 15:50). The kingdom of God is synonymous with the kingdom of heaven. The concept of the kingdom of God takes on various shades of meaning in different passages of Scripture.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Broadly speaking, the kingdom of God is the rule of an eternal, sovereign God over all the universe. Several passages of Scripture show that God is the undeniable Monarch of all creation: "The LORD has established his throne in heaven, and his kingdom rules over all" (Psalm 103:19). And, as King Nebuchadnezzar declared, "His kingdom is an eternal kingdom" (Daniel 4:3). Every authority that exists has been established by God (Romans 13:1). So, in one sense, the kingdom of God incorporates everything that is.

More narrowly, the kingdom of God is a spiritual rule over the hearts and lives of those who willingly submit to God's authority. Those who defy God's authority and refuse to submit to Him are not part of the kingdom of God; in contrast, those who acknowledge the lordship of Christ and gladly surrender to God's rule in their hearts are part of the kingdom of God. In this sense, the kingdom of God is spiritual—Jesus said His kingdom was not of this world (John 18:36), and He preached that repentance is necessary to be a part of the kingdom of God (Matthew 4:17). That the kingdom of God can be equated with the sphere of salvation is evident in John 3:5–7, where Jesus says the kingdom of God must be entered into by being born again. See also 1 Corinthians 6:9.

There is another sense in which the kingdom of God is used in Scripture: the literal rule of Christ on the earth during the millennium. Daniel said that "the God of heaven will set up a kingdom that will never be destroyed" (Daniel 2:44; cf. 7:13–14), and many of the other prophets predicted the same thing (e.g., Obadiah 1:21; Habakkuk 2:14; Micah 4:2; Zechariah 14:9). Some theologians refer to the future, open manifestation of the kingdom of God as the "kingdom of glory" and the present, hidden manifestation of the kingdom of God as the "kingdom of grace." But both manifestations are connected; Christ has set up His spiritual reign in the church on earth, and He will one day set up His physical reign in Jerusalem.

The kingdom of God has several aspects. The Lord is the Sovereign of the universe, and so in that sense His kingdom is universal (1 Timothy 6:15). At the same time, the kingdom of God involves repentance and the new birth, as God rules in the hearts of His children in this world in preparation for the next. The work begun on earth will find its consummation in heaven (see Philippians 1:6).

What is the Kingdom of God? by John Piper

https://www.desiringgod.org/interviews/what-is-the-kingdom-of-god

Excerpt:

Rule and Reign

I think the most important thing I could say about the kingdom of God that would help people make sense out of all the uses is that the basic meaning of the word kingdom in the Bible is God's reign — R-E-I-G-N — not realm or people. The kingdom creates a realm, the kingdom creates a people, but the kingdom of God is not synonymous with its realm or its people.

"God decided the kingdom of God would be most gloriously revealed in a crucified and risen king."

For example, consider Psalms 103:19: "The Lord has established his throne in the heavens, and his kingdom rules over all." You can hear the basic meaning of the word kingdom as rule. It doesn't mean that his kingdom rules over his realm; it means that God's reign or rule governs all things.

He sits as king on his throne of the universe, and his kingly rule — his kingdom and his reign — governs all things. The basic meaning of the word kingdom in the Bible is God's kingly rule — his reign, his action, his lordship, his sovereign governance.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Heaven and the Kingdom of God?

https://www.ucg.org/bible-study-tools/bible-questions-and-answers/whats-the-difference-between-the-kingdom-of-heaven-and-the-kingdom-of-god

Excerpt:

There is no real difference between the Kingdom of God and the Kingdom of Heaven. The two phrases are simply two different ways to indicate the same thing: a kingdom or system of government that is ruled by God. This power and authority to rule has been given to Jesus Christ by the Father, who is enthroned in Heaven. Christ is currently seated at the right hand of the Father. At a designated future time, the time of His second coming, Christ will then bring this rule to earth from Heaven. In this way the power and authority behind the reign of Christ can be said to be both “of God” and “of heaven.”

Why would Scripture use two different terms to say the same thing?

The phrase “Kingdom of Heaven” is only found in the gospel of Matthew. The other gospel writers stuck with the phrase “Kingdom of God.” You can even compare parallel verses like Matthew 4:17 with Mark 1:15 or Matthew 5:3 with Luke 6:20, where Matthew uses the phrase “Kingdom of Heaven” while Mark and Luke use “Kingdom of God” in quoting Jesus during their individual accounts of the same events.

Is there a difference: Kingdom of God verses the Kingdom of Heaven?

http://helpmewithbiblestudy.org/1God/WorksKingdomOfGodDifferenceHeaven.aspx

Excerpt:

When comparing parallel passages within the gospels, the phrase "the kingdom of God" appears to be used interchangeably with "the kingdom of heaven."

Sermon on the Mount of Beatitudes: Matthew 5:3 (heaven) verses Luke 6:20 (God).

Reclining at the table: Matthew 8:11 (heaven) verses Luke 13:29 (God).

No one greater than John the Baptist: Matthew 11:11 (heaven) verses Luke 7:28 (God).

Parable of the Sower: Matthew 13:11 (heaven) verses Mark 4:11 (God).

Parable of the seed: Matthew 13:24 (heaven) verses Mark 4:26 (God).

Parable of the mustard seed: Matthew 13:31 (heaven) verses Mark 4:30 (God) and Luke 13:18 (God).

Parable of the leaven: Matthew 13:33 (heaven) verses Luke 13:20-21 (God).

Jesus blesses little children: Matthew 18:3 (heaven) verses Mark 10:14 (God) and Luke 18:16 (God).

In this example, Jesus mentions both kingdoms interchangeably: Matthew 19:23-25 (heaven and God).

Because the book of Mark is believed to be older than Matthew, Biblical scholars believe that the older form "kingdom of God" was likely used by Jesus Himself. This is seen in the parallel passages noted above and the fact that Matthew had four instances of "kingdom of God."

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Heaven vs The Kingdom of Heaven/God

https://haroldmillerjr.com/2019/06/04/heaven-vs-the-kingdom-of-heaven-god/

Excerpt:

The average Christian today does not seem to realize it, but there is a fundamental difference between the concept of Heaven preached today and the Kingdom of Heaven or the Kingdom of God that Jesus, the Apostles, and the Early Church preached! The concept of Heaven, as it is presented in most Gospel messages today, is primary about a glorious place where believers go after death. It is presented as the ultimate and eternal reward of the righteous. Now, while that is indeed 'good news,' IT IS NOT the good news or the gospel that Jesus preached!

When we preached about Heaven, we're talking about a place of reward in the future, but when Jesus preached about the Kingdom of Heaven or the Kingdom of God, he was primarily talking about a realm of existence or a way of life in the present! If we would carefully study the preaching and teachings of Jesus as they are related in the gospel accounts (Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John), we might be shocked to discover that Jesus really didn't say much about the 'Heaven' we preach so much about today! But rather, Jesus was obsessed and consumed with the message about the Kingdom of Heaven or the Kingdom of God!

Baker's Evangelical Dictionary of Biblical Theology - Kingdom of God

https://www.biblestudytools.com/dictionary/kingdom-of-god/

Excerpt:

The heart of Jesus' teachings centers around the theme of the kingdom of God. This expression is found in sixty-one separate sayings in the Synoptic Gospels. Counting parallels to these passages, the expression occurs over eighty-five times. It also occurs twice in John (3:3, 5). It is found in such key places as the preaching of John the Baptist, "Repent, for the kingdom of heaven is near" (Matt 3:2); Jesus' earliest announcement, "The time has come… The kingdom of God is near. Repent and believe the good news!" (Mark 1:15 ; cf. Matt 4:17 ; Luke 4:42-43);the prayer Jesus taught his disciples, "your kingdom come" (Matt 6:10); in the Beatitudes, "for theirs is the kingdom of heaven" (Matthew 5:3 Matthew 5:10); at the Last Supper, "I will not drink again of the fruit of the vine until that day when I drink it anew in the kingdom of God" (Mark 14:25); and in many of Jesus' parables (Matthew 13:24 Matthew 13:44 Matthew 13:45 Matthew 13:47 ; Mark 4:26 Mark 4:30 ; Luke19:11).

It was once popular in certain circles to argue that the expressions "kingdom of God" and "kingdom of heaven" referred to two different realities. It is now clear, however, that they are synonyms. This is evident for several reasons. For one, the two expressions are used in the same sayings of Jesus, but where Matthew uses "kingdom of heaven, " Mark or Luke or both use "kingdom of God. "Second, Matthew himself uses these two expressions interchangeably in 19:23-24, "itis hard for a rich man to enter the kingdom of heaven … for a rich man to enter the kingdom of God." Finally, we know that "heaven" was frequently used as a circumlocution for "God" by devout Jews. Due to respect for the third commandment ("You shall not misuse the name of the Lord your God" [Exod 20:7]), pious Jews used various circumlocutions for the sacred name of God (YHWH) in order to avoid the danger of breaking this commandment. One such circumlocution was the term "heaven." This is seen in the expression "kingdom of heaven" but also in such passages as Luke 15:18, 21 ("Father, I have sinned against heaven and against you") and Mark 11:30.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

What Is the Kingdom of God?

https://lifehopeandtruth.com/prophecy/kingdom-of-god/what-is-the-kingdom-of-god/

Excerpt:

What is the Kingdom of God? It is the central theme of Jesus' teaching and the foundational message of the Church founded by Him through His disciples. As Mark explains in his Gospel account, "Now after John was put in prison, Jesus came to Galilee, preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God, and saying, 'The time is fulfilled, and the kingdom of God is at hand. Repent, and believe in the gospel.'"

The gospel of the Kingdom of God

Matthew and Luke likewise record that Jesus' message was the "gospel" or "glad tidings" of the Kingdom (Matthew 4:23; Luke 8:1). Even though Matthew referred to it as "the kingdom of heaven" (Matthew 4:17; Matthew 5:3, 10, 19-20) and Paul once called it "the kingdom of Christ and God" (Ephesians 5:5), the predominant name in Scripture is "the kingdom of God."

Jesus consistently taught this same message of hope—"gospel" means good news—of the Kingdom throughout His ministry. His parables—stories with spiritual lessons—often dealt with this Kingdom, which God the Father and His Son had prepared prior to the existence of man at "the foundation of the world'" (Matthew 25:34). In the Kingdom parables, Jesus explained what we must do to enter the Kingdom and what conditions will be like in it. Many of the Old Testament prophets had written of this Kingdom while under the inspiration of the Holy Spirit (2 Peter 1:20-21).

After training His 12 disciples, Jesus sent them out "to preach the kingdom of God and to heal the sick" (Luke 9:2). After His crucifixion and resurrection, Jesus appeared before His disciples and continued "speaking of the things pertaining to the kingdom of God" (Acts 1:3).

Later, Paul likewise described his ministry as preaching "the kingdom of God" (Acts 14:22; Acts 19:8; Acts 20:25; Acts 28:31; 1 Corinthians 6:9-10; 1 Corinthians 15:24) and referred to his fellow ministers as "workers for the kingdom of God" (Colossians 4:11).

A literal or a figurative kingdom?

What is the real meaning of the Kingdom of God? Is it a literal or a figurative kingdom? While it is generally understood that the message Jesus preached was that of the Kingdom of God, the question as to whether this Kingdom is literal or figurative is more complicated. Since Jesus came preaching that the Kingdom was "at hand" (Mark 1:15), some think it is literally here on earth via the Church or figuratively in our hearts. Others, recognizing that "flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God" (1 Corinthians 15:50), say it is not yet here.

"And in the days of these kings the God of heaven will set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed; and the kingdom shall not be left to other people; it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand forever" (Daniel 2:44). The Kingdom of God will thus replace the governments of this earth. Acknowledging the difficulty in understanding this part of His message, Jesus termed it a "mystery." Speaking to His disciples, Jesus said, "To you it has been given to know the mystery of the kingdom of God; but to those who are outside, all things come in parables, so that 'Seeing they may see and not perceive, and hearing they may hear and not understand; lest they should turn, and their sins be forgiven them'" (Mark 4:11-12).

So what did the disciples understand? What did Jesus and the prophets foretell? A careful study of the Scriptures provides clarity about the real meaning of the Kingdom of God.

- The Kingdom of God is a literal kingdom. God gave King Nebuchadnezzar a dream of an image of a man with a head of gold, its chest and arms of silver, its belly and thighs of bronze, its legs of iron and its feet partly of iron and partly of clay. God revealed the meaning of the dream through

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Daniel, showing that there would be four world-ruling empires (Daniel 2:31-43). History has shown these to be the Babylonian, Medo-Persian, Greco-Macedonian and Roman empires. Concluding this explanation, Daniel wrote: “And in the days of these kings the God of heaven will set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed; and the kingdom shall not be left to other people; it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand forever” (verse 44). The Kingdom of God will thus replace the governments of this earth.

- The Kingdom of God will be established on earth when Jesus returns. The time that the Kingdom is established will be after Christ’s return to earth. Revelation 11:15 states: “Then the seventh angel sounded: And there were loud voices in heaven, saying, ‘The kingdoms of this world have become the kingdoms of our Lord and of His Christ, and He shall reign forever and ever!’” Jesus told His disciples that when the Kingdom was established, they would “sit on twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel” (Matthew 19:28, also compare Luke 22:30).
- We prepare for the Kingdom by living according to the rules of the Kingdom now. Explaining how one might enter the Kingdom of God, Jesus told Nicodemus that one must be “born again” (John 3:1-8). This process begins with baptism, which signifies the death of the former sinful man and the beginning of a new life dedicated to Christ (Romans 6:1-5). It culminates in a change from mortal flesh and blood to immortal spirit at Christ’s return (1 Corinthians 15:50-53; 1 Thessalonians 4:16-17). Once we embark on this process, we are symbolically “conveyed” into the Kingdom (Colossians 1:13) and our “citizenship” is now described as being in heaven (Philippians 3:20). At the completion of the process of being born again, we will be changed into immortal beings and become kings and priests serving in God’s Kingdom on earth (Revelation 1:6; Revelation 5:10).

“The Kingdom of God Is Within You”—What Did Christ Mean?

https://lifehopeandtruth.com/prophecy/kingdom-of-god/the-kingdom-of-god-is-within-you/

Excerpt:

In this passage [Luke 17:21], entos (the Greek word that is translated “within”) can also be translated “in the midst of” (Vine’s Complete Expository Dictionary of Old and New Testament Words). The New American Standard Bible, the New International Version, the Modern King James Version and Green’s Literal Translation translate this phrase “in your midst.” In this sense, Jesus, the King of the coming Kingdom of God, was standing in the midst of the Pharisees. These translations are clearly better, for the Kingdom of God was not in the hearts of these Pharisees.

What does it mean to seek the kingdom of God?

http://dawningrealm.org/kingdom/

Excerpt:

In Matthew, Mark, and Luke, the "kingdom of God" is usually God's active rule over his creation, especially in saving his people from their sins and the consequences of those sins. (Matthew often uses "kingdom of heaven" instead of "kingdom of God," but the two terms are synonymous (Matt 13:31a = Mark 4:30 = Luke 13:18), so "kingdom of heaven" does not refer to heaven as a place, but to God's reign as King, reflecting the Jewish avoidance of direct reference to God.) The kingdom of God is not only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

God's rule over his obedient subjects, but includes his victory over their spiritual enemies through Jesus, beginning in the present age (Matt 12:28; Luke 1:68-75; 11:20). The kingdom of God has been concisely defined as God's "acting in his sovereign power to deliver man from the destructive powers that enthrall him" (Beasley-Murray, 1989). The central thesis of Ladd (1974) is that the prophets' hope of the kingdom of God was inaugurated in the person of Jesus in this present age, before its consummation begins the age to come. God asserted His rule in history by defeating Satan and death through the work of Jesus, even though God will not complete his display of authority until Jesus returns in judgment, when he will start the new world order.

Kingdom of God in Matthew, Mark, and Luke ('seek first' the salvation of God's reign)		Definition of 'kingdom'
		Literal →	Figurative
		God's rule (incl. Satan's defeat)	Enjoyment of God's rule (seek eternal life)
Timing of the kingdom	Already ↓	Jesus healed people & cast out demons; He died & rose from the dead. →	True Christians have forgiveness & the presence of the Holy Spirit & holiness from God. ↓
	Not yet	↓ Jesus will return to judge men & angels. →	True Christians will see God & live forever on the new earth in resurrected bodies.

However, Ladd (1974, ch. 8, pp. 205-217) pointed out that the kingdom of God does not always literally mean the dynamic reign of God, but that it sometimes refers to the gift of life and salvation achieved by that reign. Jesus' disciples are to seek the kingdom as the most valuable of possessions and the Father gives the kingdom to them (Matt 6:33; 13:44-46; Luke 12:31-32). Those who receive the kingdom in the present age will enter the kingdom in the age to come (Mark 10:15; Luke 18:16-17). Those who are poor in spirit, who are persecuted for righteousness' sake, have the kingdom (Matt 5:3, 10). When the Son of Man comes (Matt 25:31), the righteous will inherit the kingdom (v. 34); kingdom here is the same as eternal life (v. 46). Inheriting eternal life, inheriting the kingdom, and receiving eternal life are equivalent (Mark 10:17, 23-24, 30) and are associated with being saved (v. 26). This salvation involves saving one's true life, as opposed to saving one's life in this age (Matt 10:39; Mark 8:35; Luke 17:33), and culminates in bodily resurrection (Luke 20:34-36) and restored communion with God in the age to come (Matt 5:8; 25:21, 23; Mark 14:25; Luke 14:16-24). Although the kingdom concept is primarily oriented to the future, Jesus also brought salvation and fellowship with God to the present age (Luke 19:10-11; Mark 2:15-19), though to a lesser, incomplete degree. Such salvation included other gifts enjoyed in this life, such as physical healing (Mark 5:34; 10:52), temporary resurrection (Matt 11:4-5), deliverance from demonic possession (Luke 8:36), forgiveness of sins (Mark 1:4; 2:10; Luke 7:48), and righteousness (Matt 6:33).

That the kingdom of God to be sought (Matt 6:33; Luke 12:31) is this gift of salvation brought by the rule of God, rather than the rule of God itself, will also be seen below. To seek the kingdom of God is to actively receive the eternal life that Jesus brought. Seeking salvation does not end at the time of conversion, but continues throughout the life of each disciple of Jesus. What this entails will become clear from looking at the kingdom-seeking passages in the context of Luke and its sequel (Acts) and in the context of Matthew. Matthew's version is treated second since it is complicated by the exhortation to seek God's righteousness as well as his kingdom.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

What is the difference between the Kingdom of God and the Kingdom of Heaven?

https://www.gotquestions.org/kingdom-heaven-God.html

Answer: While some believe that the Kingdom of God and Kingdom of Heaven are referring to different things, it is clear that both phrases are referring to the same thing. The phrase "kingdom of God" occurs 68 times in 10 different New Testament books, while "kingdom of heaven" occurs only 32 times, and only in the Gospel of Matthew. Based on Matthew's exclusive use of the phrase and the Jewish nature of his Gospel, some interpreters have concluded that Matthew was writing concerning the millennial kingdom while the other New Testament authors were referring to the universal kingdom. However, a closer study of the use of the phrase reveals that this interpretation is in error.

For example, speaking to the rich young ruler, Christ uses "kingdom of heaven" and "kingdom of God" interchangeably. "Then Jesus said to his disciples, 'I tell you the truth, it is hard for a rich man to enter the kingdom of heaven'" (Matthew 19:23). In the very next verse, Christ proclaims, "Again I tell you, it is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than for a rich man to enter the kingdom of God" (verse 24). Jesus makes no distinction between the two terms but seems to consider them synonymous.

Mark and Luke used "kingdom of God" where Matthew used "kingdom of heaven" frequently in parallel accounts of the same parable Compare Matthew 11:11-12 with Luke 7:28; Matthew 13:11with Mark 4:11 and Luke 8:10; Matthew 13:24 with Mark 4:26; Matthew 13:31 with Mark 4:30 and Luke 13:18; Matthew 13:33 with Luke 13:20; Matthew 18:3 with Mark 10:14 and Luke 18:16; and Matthew 22:2 with Luke 13:29. In each instance, Matthew used the phrase "kingdom of heaven" while Mark and/or Luke used "kingdom of God." Clearly, the two phrases refer to the same thing.

The Kingdom of Heaven vs the Kingdom of God

http://studiesinthebook.com/series/rightly_dividing/two_kingdoms.pdf [PDF]

Matthew 16:28	Mark 9:1	Luke 9:27
Verily I say unto you, There be some standing here, which shall not taste of death, till they see the Son of man coming in his kingdom.	And he said unto them, Verily I say unto you, That there be some of them that stand here, which shall not taste of death, till they have seen the kingdom of God come with power.	But I tell you of a truth, there be some standing here, which shall not taste of death, till they see the kingdom of God.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

What is the difference in the Kingdom of Heaven and the Kingdom of God? (Forum)

https://hermeneutics.stackexchange.com/questions/4251/what-is-the-difference-in-the-kingdom-of-heaven-and-the-kingdom-of-god

Excerpt:

The phrases “the kingdom of God” (ἡ βασιλεία τοῦ θεοῦ) and “the kingdom of Heaven” (ἡ βασιλεία τῶν οὐρανῶν) occur eighty-six (86) times in the Textus Receptus (1550) Greek manuscript of the gospels.

The phrase “kingdom of Heaven” occurs thirty-two (32) times and only in the Gospel of Matthew. The phrase “kingdom of God” occurs thirty-two (32) times in the Gospel of Luke, the most of any book in the Bible.

An examination of Synoptic parallels will demonstrate that the two phrases refer to the same idea.

Some say the "Kingdom of Heaven" refers to the a physical/political kingdom on earth while the "Kingdom of God" is the spiritual, coming reign of Christ.

Arguments against the two being the same often come down to hair splitting and misinterpretation of verses. For example, the site listed above relies on a single verse in an attempt to say they are different. In Luke 17:21, Jesus says "the kingdom of God is within you" (KJV). They then argue that since Matthew 11:12 says the Kingdom of Heaven suffers violence and is taken by force that the two cannot be the same (who can take the kingdom from within you?). The site only addresses where the terms are used interchangeably to blow them off by saying "they will be the same in the future."

However, it can be seen that Kingdom of Heaven and the Kingdom of God refer to the same thing. "Kingdom of Heaven" is found 31 times, only in the Gospel of Matthew. "Kingdom of God" is found 62 times in ten books of the New Testament (Matthew, Mark, Luke, John, Acts, Romans, 1 Corinthians, Galatians, Colossians, and 2 Thessalonians).

When the parallel accounts in the synoptic gospels are compared, whenever Matthew uses Kingdom of Heaven, the other will use Kingdom of God. Given the Jewish nature of Matthew's Gospel (Matthew never explains Jewish customs and traces the genealogy of Christ to Abraham where Luke, written for a gentile audience, continues back to Adam) and the Jewish habit of circumlocution in references to God*, "Kingdom of Heaven" would be preferable for the author and his intended audience.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Kingdom of heaven is found only in Matthew and it is normally said that Matthew used that phrase because he was writing to a Jewish audience. Two reasons are given why the nature of the audience is significant.

One is linguistic as George Eldon Ladd says:

> The difference between the two phrases is to be explained on linguistic grounds. The Kingdom of Heaven is the Semitic form and the Kingdom of God is the Greek form of the same phrase. Our Lord taught in Aramaic, a language very similar to Hebrew, whereas our New Testament is written in Greek. Jesus, teaching Jews, probably spoke of "the Kingdom of the Heavens"[1] which would be the natural Jewish form of expression. We have extensive evidence from Jewish rabbinic literature that this phrase was in common use. To the Greek ear, these words would be meaningless; and when the phrase was translated in our Greek Gospels for Greek readers, it was uniformly rendered "the Kingdom of God." In the Gospel of Matthew, which was probably written to Jewish believers, the original phrase "the Kingdom of the Heavens" was usually retained. The terminology in Matthew 19:23-24 makes it quite clear that the two phrases are interchangeable and that no difference of meaning is to be sought between them. [2]

Matthew 19:23-24 cited by Ladd states:

> And Jesus said to his disciples, "Truly, I say to you, only with difficulty will a rich person enter the kingdom of heaven. Again I tell you, it is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than for a rich person to enter the kingdom of God." [3]

While this passage indicates the two kingdoms are interchangeable, it is obvious either Matthew or Jesus chose to make a distinction and recorded them differently. In fact, the passage is purposeful to make the point there is something of significance which is different between the two.

A second reason offered is that Matthew substituted Heaven for God to avoid offending the Jewish people who do not use "God" or His Name. A thorough analysis of this reason is found in this answer: ["Heaven" as a Circumlocution or Substitute for "God"] This approach fails to explain why Matthew still uses "God" (frequently) and in some cases where "Heaven" should be used:

…

Other passages mark differences between the two Kingdoms:

For I tell you, unless your righteousness exceeds that of the scribes and Pharisees, you will never enter the kingdom of heaven. (5:20)
But seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and all these things will be added to you. (6:33)

Righteousness:
Kingdom of heaven - righteousness of the scribes and Pharisees.
Kingdom of God - the righteousness of God.

The consequence of righteousness:
Kingdom of heaven - enter the kingdom.
Kingdom of God - all things will be added to you.

Required response to each Kingdom:
Kingdom of heaven - have righteousness that exceeds that of the scribes and Pharisees.
Kingdom of God - Seek first...

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

In the fourth Gospel Jesus teaches:

Jesus answered, "Truly, truly, I say to you, unless one is born of water and the Spirit, he cannot enter the kingdom of God. (3:5)

The Gospel delineates two means of entrance into a kingdom:

Matthew: Kingdom of heaven - righteousness that exceeds that of the scribes and Pharisees.
John: Kingdom of God - be born of water and the Spirit.

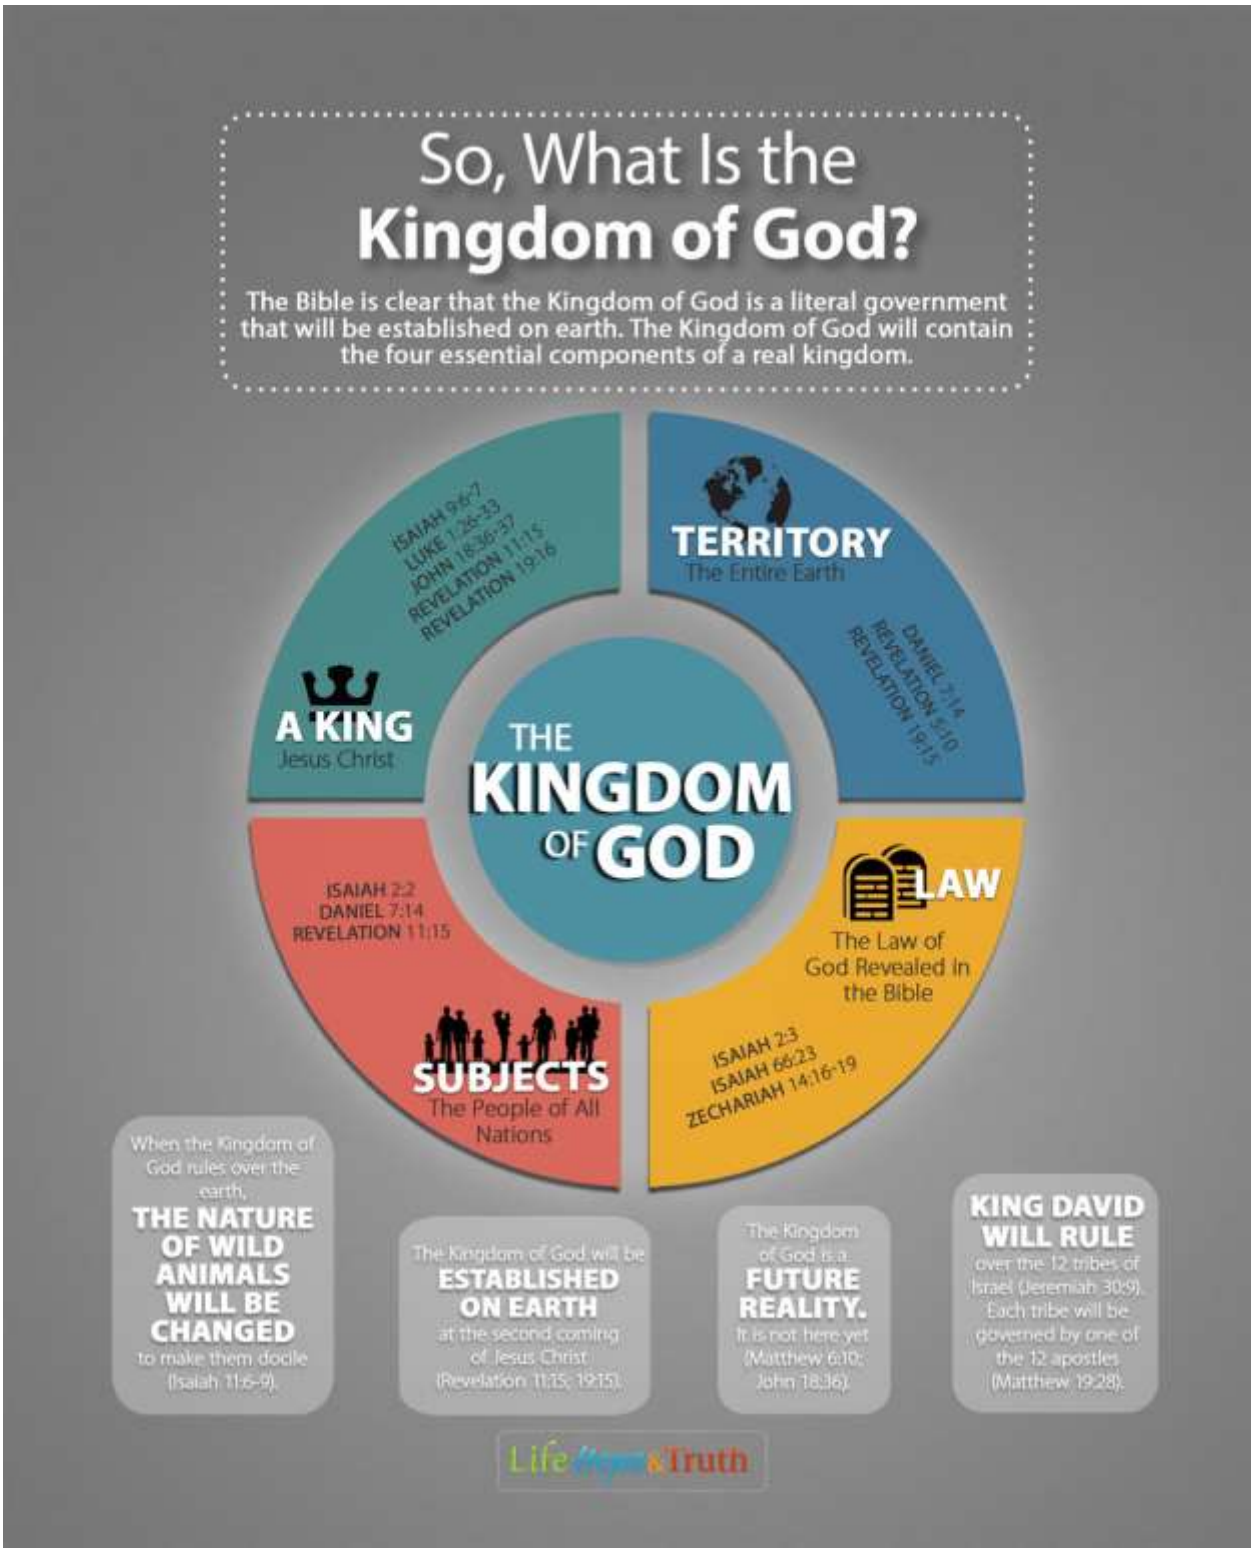
A good picture to understand the difference is that the Kingdom of God encompasses all creation, while the Kingdom of the Heavens encompasses less. That is, the Kingdom of the Heavens is a smaller kingdom within the Kingdom of God. As Genesis 1 states, man has some measure of authority over the earth and life on the earth (part of the Kingdom of God). The unchanging nature of God accounts for the similarities and man's rebellious nature with what God has given man dominion explains the differences.

Simply, the earth (at present) is outside the Kingdom of the Heavens but remains a part of the Kingdom of God. One day there will be a new heaven and a new earth on which the Father's will will be done. Essentially the Kingdom of the Heavens will cease to exist it that it will no longer be distinguishable from the Kingdom of God.

Are the Kingdom of God and Kingdom of Heaven the same? [Recommended]

https://www.neverthirsty.org/bible-qa/qa-archives/question/are-the-kingdom-of-god-and-kingdom-of-heaven-the-same/

Excerpt:



The solution to the question, is there a difference between the kingdom of Heaven and the kingdom of God is not that one expression has some unique meaning. Instead, the two kingdoms are identical and only those who believe in Jesus Christ will spend eternity with God. The kingdom of Heaven obviously emphasizes the future life of Christians in heaven and the kingdom of God emphasizes that God the Father owns the kingdom. Some believe that Matthew used the expression kingdom of Heaven due to Jewish sensitives about using the word God. That might be, but it is speculative and it should be noted that Matthew uses the expression kingdom of God four times. That reveals he used the phrase anyway.

God's kingdom already exists now, will physically exist on the earth for 1,000 years at some time in the future [if you are a millennialist], and will continue forever in the new heaven and new earth. It is eternal. There is no difference between the expressions kingdom of God and the kingdom of Heaven. The phrase Kingdom of Christ is used to refer to the same kingdom. Since the 1,000-year kingdom is initially given to Jesus, it can also be called the kingdom of Christ (Eph. 5:5). The kingdom belongs to both the Father and to Jesus Christ. Jesus told the Pharisees that the kingdom even existed in their presence because He, as the king of the kingdom, was present among them (Luke 17:20-21). May the desire of our hearts be to share Jesus with others so that they may enter into the kingdom of God too!

Return to the beginning of*: Kingdom of Heaven vs Kingdom of God

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

So, What Is the Kingdom of God?
https://lifehopeandtruth.com/prophecy/kingdom-of-god/a-message-christianity-ignores/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Kingdom of God

http://doctrine.org/the-kingdom-of-god

Excerpt:

Introduction

What the kingdom of God is, where it is located, and what is its future is greatly misunderstood by most in Christendom. The majority of Christians have been taught that the kingdom of God is in heaven, or in one's heart, or the Church is the kingdom, or it is social justice, or it is a conversion experience. The goal of this study is to reveal the nature of the kingdom of God.

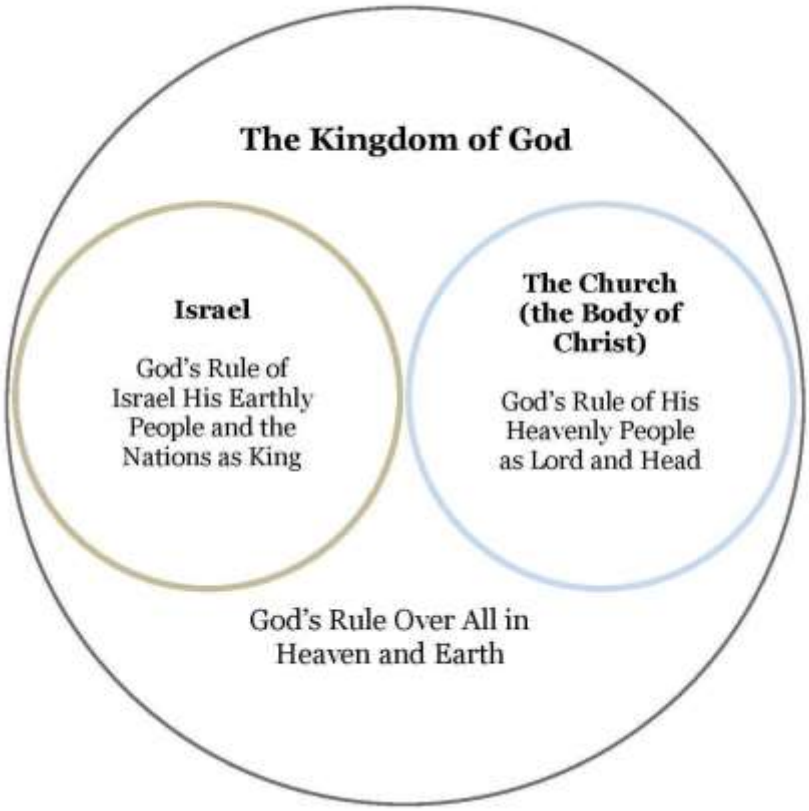
…

Concept of the Kingdom of God

The kingdom of God is a foundational theological doctrine in the Bible with two senses: general and particular. The general sense may be defined as God's rule over all creation, especially over creatures who are loyal or have responded to Him. The particular sense of the kingdom of God is God's rule over His covenant people, Israel. This rule will began after Israel responds to Him and He establishes His earthly kingdom (Zechariah 12.10; Matthew 23.39; Romans 11.26). The context of a passage will determine the sense.

Matthew's phrase "kingdom of heaven" is unique to him and is a technical phrase. It is used only in reference to God's rule over national Israel in which the Messiah will rule as Israel's King. It never is used to mean God's universal rule over His creation.

Senses of God's Kingship	God's Kingship Defined
Kingship Over All Creation	The Kingdom of God is a description of God's rule over all creation, specifically over those who have given Him their trust and allegiance (cf. Psalm 45.6, 47.7; Revelation 19.16).
Kingship Over Israel	The Kingdom of God and the Kingdom of Heaven describe God's rule over Israel. God's covenants define this rule, i.e., Abrahamic, Mosaic, Sabbatic, Palestinian, Davidic, and New covenants.[1] As David's "greater Son," the Lord Jesus Christ will rule as King over national Israel and the earth (Deuteronomy 28.12-13; Isaiah 9.6-7; Zechariah 14.9; Luke 1.31-33).



The Church (the Body of Christ)

The Bible declares the Church is the Body of Christ (Ephesians 1.22-23; Colossians 1.18, 24). The Church is not a kingdom. The Bible never states the Lord Jesus Christ is the King of the Church. His title over the Church is Lord or Head, not King. A king has subjects. Members of the Body of Christ are children of God, heirs and joint-heirs with Christ (Romans 8.16-17), not subjects. A joint-heir is one with equal legal access to everything belonging to the primary owner.

The below chart and diagram illustrate the components of God's rule:

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Kingdom of God: God's Rule Over All in Heaven and in Earth
Israel	The Church (the Body of Christ)
God's Rule of Israel His Earthly People and the Nations as King	God's Rule of His Heavenly People as Lord and Head

Clarifications: What the Kingdom is Not

As we consider what the Kingdom of God is, we should also consider what it is not. Thus:

1. The Kingdom is not the Church. As noted, the Church (the Body of Christ) is a not a kingdom. It is the Body of Christ. The believer's role as part of the Body of Christ is to look to Him as Lord and Head, not as King. Believers in Paul's gospel (1 Corinthians 15.1-4) have heavenly citizenship (Ephesians 1.3, 2.6; Philippians 3.20) and are children and joint-heirs of Christ (Romans 8.16-17). While the Church is not a kingdom per se, it resides within the overall realm of the Kingdom of God as its heavenly component.

2. The Kingdom is not a personal conversion experience. The Kingdom of God is a realm and a location, not an experience.

3. The Kingdom is not the gospel. The gospel is the means by which we have a relationship with God and the means by which we enter the Kingdom of God. The clearest definition of the gospel is found in 1 Corinthians 15.1-4. To have one's sins forgiven and receive eternal life one must place his trust in the fact of Christ's work on his behalf: that Christ died for him and rose from the grave. Salvation is wholly apart from works (Romans 4.1-5). Salvation is faith + 0.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

4. The Kingdom is not social justice. Social justice will reach its zenith in the Messianic Kingdom when Jesus the Messiah-King reigns from Jerusalem over the world (Zechariah 14.9) and will continue in the new heavens and new earth (Revelation 21). At the present time, Satan reigns as "the god of this world" and rules the world's governments (2 Corinthians 4.4). His rule will continue until he is defeated at the end of the Tribulation and finally, at the end of the Millennial Kingdom (Revelation 19.11-21, 20.2-3, 7-10). Little social justice is possible under Satan's dominion. The Lord Jesus Christ is presently seated at the right hand of the Father's throne awaiting His throne and kingdom (Psalm 110.1). After His return at the battle of Armageddon He will occupy the throne of David in Jerusalem and establish His earthly kingdom. This kingdom will be the prelude to His kingdom in eternity after God creates a new heaven and new earth.

A Problem Passage: Luke 17.20-21

The most misunderstood passage about the kingdom of God is Luke 17.20-21. Theologians and preachers have so abused this passage that restoring it to its Biblical sense is nearly an impossible task.

Throughout the pulpits and classrooms preachers and professors teach that the kingdom of God is not a visible kingdom but a spiritual one that resides in the hearts of men. Such an interpretation is remarkable since it is contrary to every other declaration on the kingdom in the Scriptures and directly contradicts what Jesus taught elsewhere about the kingdom of God. In other words, if this interpretation is correct, it contradicts the entire testimony of Scripture.

Examining the Text (Luke 17.20-21) [Including full text of v 20]

> 20 Now having been questioned by the Pharisees as to when the kingdom of God was coming, He answered them and said, "The kingdom of God is not coming with signs to be observed; 21 nor will they say, 'Look, here it is!' or, 'There it is!' For behold, the kingdom of God is in your midst."

An examination of Jesus' response requires that we keep one fact firmly in mind: He responded to people according to their attitude towards Him. Most of the professional theologians of Jesus' day approached Him with with a single purpose: to find a way to discredit or condemn Him. Jesus' response to those individuals was guarded, cryptic, and sometimes angry. Most of the theologians who approached Him had no interest in truth. As a result, Jesus did not trust them (John 2.23-25). It is interesting to note that religious professionals were the only group who moved Him to anger.

John the Baptist, Jesus, and the Twelve preached repentance because the kingdom of God was near (Matthew 3.1, 4.17, 10.7). Such a message was unpopular to the ruling religious establishment for they enjoyed their position and rule. The Pharisees asked Him, "when the kingdom of God was coming" (πότε ἔρχεται ἡ βασιλεία τοῦ θεοῦ). The word "questioned" used by Luke is the verb ἐπερωτάω which means "interrogate," "demand an answer." Such language indicated this encounter, as usual, was unfriendly. The Pharisees came with an agenda and their questions were designed to entrap and condemn Him. As such, Jesus responded to them according to their attitude.

The Pharisees knew Jesus (and John the Baptist before Him) preached that the kingdom of God was near (Matthew 3.1-2, 4.17). They most likely knew Jesus had declared John the Baptist could have fulfilled the prophetic role of Elijah if the nation would have believed him (Matthew 17.1-9, 11.7-19). So what kind of answer did Jesus give the Pharisees? In Luke 17.20-21 we read Jesus' response:

> 20 The kingdom of God is not coming with signs to be observed; 21 nor will they say, 'Look, here it is!' or, 'There it is!' For behold, the kingdom of God is in your midst."

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The text reads as follows:

> [20] Οὐκ ἔρχεται ἡ βασιλεία τοῦ θεοῦ μετὰ παρατηρήσεως,
> The kingdom of God is not coming with attentive watching,
>
> [21] οὐδὲ ἐροῦσιν, Ἰδοὺ ὧδε: ἤ, Ἐκεῖ: ἰδοὺ γὰρ ἡ βασιλεία τοῦ θεοῦ ἐντὸς ὑμῶν ἐστιν.
> Neither will they say, "Behold, here!, or there! For behold the kingdom of God is in your midst.

The phrase "with observation" is μετὰ παρατηρήσεως. The noun παρατήρησις is used only here in the New Testament and means to see something with the eyes. If we just had this verse and no other the idea that the kingdom of God is a spiritual kingdom would have merit. But that is not the case. Hundreds of verses in the Scriptures attest that the kingdom of God as it relates to Israel will be a visible, earthly kingdom (Matthew 6.10). We must conclude, therefore, that Jesus' reply meant something other than that the kingdom of God was spiritual (non-physical).

The Meaning of the Text

Jesus had preached the nearness of the kingdom of God for almost three years. This kingdom had been revealed by the prophets. In it, Israel will be preeminent among the nations (Deuteronomy 28.1, 13; cf. Romans 15.8). The Messiah will reign from Jerusalem as David's greater Son (Luke 1.32) and will be characterized by universal peace and righteousness (Isaiah 2.4, 11.1-9). The Old Testament contains hundreds of verses about the nature of this kingdom on earth.

By this time, Jesus had performed thousands of miracles or signs of which the gospels record but a small portion (John 21.25). When John the Baptist doubted (because he was imprisoned) that Jesus was the promised Messiah and wondered about the nearness of the coming of the kingdom, Jesus reassured John of the authenticating signs he had seen. These signs verified He was the Messiah (Luke 7.19-22). What did Jesus mean by His reply to the Pharisees that the kingdom did not come with signs or observation? Before answering this, let us finish the remainder of the verse.

Jesus' response to the Pharisees that "the kingdom of God is within you" did not mean the kingdom was in their hearts.[2] They hated Him and wanted to kill Him. The last place the kingdom existed was in their hearts. Jesus' reply to them was sarcastic and cryptic. He knew their hearts. He knew they did not want the truth. He responded to them according to their attitude. The meaning of Jesus' statement, "with observation," (παρατήρησις is a hapax legomenon) is helped by the cognate verb παρατηρέω which means "watch closely," "watch assiduously" (Mark 3.2; Luke 6.7, 14.1; Acts 9.24; Galatians 4.10). Thus, Jesus' sarcastic and cryptic reply had the following sense:

> "You don't get it. And you'll never get it since you don't want to get it. You've come trying to entrap Me. You won't believe Who I am even though I have performed thousands of miracles which validate I am the Messiah. You do not want the truth. Therefore, I tell you–to see the kingdom doesn't require signs that require παρατηρήσεως, i.e., eye strain (attentive watching). The "sign" of the kingdom is here. The King stands before you!"

A Verification Passage

Lest anyone doubt this interpretation, let us examine an earlier passage to confirm it. Luke wrote:

> [14] And He was casting out a demon, and it was mute; when the demon had gone out, the mute man spoke; and the crowds were amazed. [15] But some of them said, "He casts out demons by Beelzebul, the ruler of the demons." [16] Others, to test Him, were demanding of Him a sign from heaven. [17] But He knew their thoughts and said to them, "Any kingdom divided against itself is > laid waste; and a house divided against itself falls. [18] If Satan also is divided against himself, how will his kingdom stand? For you say that I cast out demons by Beelzebul. [19] And if I by Beelzebul cast out demons, by whom do your sons cast them out? So they will be your judges. [20] But if I cast out demons by the finger of God, then the kingdom of God has come upon you (Luke 11.14-20).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Jesus declared the sign of casting out of demons revealed the kingdom of God had "come upon" φθάνω them. Was His casting out demons visible? It was. If the coming of the kingdom was not "with observation," how could Jesus declare it had come with observation? The answer is, He couldn't and didn't. Therefore, His words in Luke 17 meant something different than what most are taught.

…

Kingdom of God vs Kingdom of Heaven

https://www.biblicalhub.com/kingdom-of-god-vs-kingdom-of-heaven

Excerpt:

After evaluating all the statements about the kingdom of God, one would have to conclude that the kingdom of God is both spiritual and physical. And the kingdom of heaven and kingdom of God is a physical place, which are the same. A different way of looking at this issue is to define the kingdom of God as everywhere, while the kingdom of heaven is in heaven, therefore the kingdom of God includes the kingdom of heaven. (LOL) They are the same.

The Kingdom of Christ (Discovery Magazine, 2007)

http://www.apologeticspress.org/apPubPage.aspx?pub=2&issue=984&article=1504

Excerpt:

Imagine an earthly kingdom with a king more powerful than any other ruler on Earth. He has more wealth, more land, more servants, and more military might than anyone in the world. He is wiser, stronger, and more influential than any king ever to live. What also sets this king apart from all others is his willingness to serve his subjects. In fact, he eventually dies while saving one of his poorest servants from a terrible accident. What would you think about such a king?

Did you know that the church of Christ is a kingdom? It is not an earthly kingdom that competes for wealth, prestige, and natural resources. The church is a spiritual kingdom. The apostle Paul mentioned how Christ's kingdom is not centered around outward, physical things like eating and drinking. Rather, the kingdom of Christ is about "righteousness and peace and joy in the Holy Spirit" (Romans 14:17).

The King of this spiritual kingdom is Christ. The Bible calls Him "the King of kings, and Lord of lords…to Whom be honor and everlasting power" (1 Timothy 6:15-16). As King, Jesus is "far above all principality and power and might and dominion, and every name that is named, not only in this age but also in that which is to come" (Ephesians 1:21). No one is greater than Christ.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Instead of using His greatness to lord over His servants (like so many worldly kings), Jesus served His servants, even to the point of death. He taught His followers: "Whoever desires to become great among you, let him be your servant. And whoever desires to be first among you, let him be your slave—just as the Son of Man did not come to be served, but to serve, and to give His life a ransom for many" (Matthew 20:26-27).

In truth, Christians who do not serve God and their fellow men are not faithful servants of Christ; they are servants in name only. Christians need to spend time worshiping God and working in His kingdom, visiting the sick, feeding the hungry, and teaching the lost. And thank God that He has "delivered us from the power of darkness and conveyed us into the kingdom of the Son of His love" (Colossians 1:13).

For information on the Kingdom as per Scot McKnight see:

Gospel of Jesus vs Paul (with Christianity Today Feature Articles regarding McNight)

N.T. Wright, Scot McKnight and the Gospel: Compared and Contrasted

Return to the beginning of*: Kingdom of Heaven vs Kingdom of God

Return to*: Ephesians Highlights (by Chapter, Main Menu)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Does Jesus' Kingdom Now Exist?

Or Will He Establish an Earthly Kingdom during the Millennium after He Comes Again?
https://www.gospelway.com/man/kingdom_exists.php

Excerpt:

The kingdom of Christ now exists. It fulfills the prophecies, so it must be the kingdom prophesied in the Old Testament and throughout Jesus' lifetime…

Preaching the kingdom is part of preaching the gospel. One who denies the kingdom now exists is preaching a different gospel (Galatians 1:8,9). People who want to follow Jesus' gospel must honor Him as King and become part of His kingdom by obedience to His gospel.

Is the Church Jesus' Kingdom or an Unplanned Substitute?

https://www.gospelway.com/man/kingdom-church.php

Excerpt:

In every area we have studied, whatever is true of the kingdom is also true of the church:

* The terms for them are used interchangeably.
* They began at the same time, place, and occasion.
* They have the same Head.
* They accomplish the same purpose.
* People in them partake of the Lord's table.
* They are entered at the same time by the same steps.
* They consist of the same people.

Clearly these are just different terms for the same relationship.

Warning: The above two links are geared to using the conclusions drawn to prove the invalidity of premillennialism… however, more precisely, it is focusing on dispensational premillennialism (i.e., rapture, etc.) and not classic premillennialism (although the author probably considers that invalid):

> "Premillennialism is mistaken when it teaches that the kingdom and the church are different relationships and that the church was unplanned and unprophesied."

Regardless, I'm including here because they draw together and present most (if not all) of the Bible verses relating to the "Kingdom of Christ".

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Definition of Kingdom (Kingdom of Christ, Kingdom of Heaven, Kingdome of Christ)
(Source: Elwell's Theological Dictionary)
http://www.biblestudy101.org/definitions/kingdom.html

Excerpt:

The kingdom of God is also the kingdom of Christ. Jesus speaks of the kingdom of the Son of man (Matt. 13:41; 16:28), "my kingdom" (Luke 22:30; John 18:36). See "His kingdom" (Luke 1:33; II Tim. 4:1); "thy kingdom" (Matt. 20:31; Luke 23:42; Heb. 1:8); "the kingdom of His beloved Son" (Col. 1:13); "His heavenly kingdom" (II Tim. 4:18); "the eternal kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ" (II Pet. 1:11).

The Father has given the kingdom to Christ (Luke 22:29), and when the Son has accomplished His rule, He will restore the kingdom to the Father (I Cor. 15:24). Therefore it is "the kingdom of the world is to become "the kingdom of our Lord and of His Christ" (Rev. 11:15). There is no tension between "the power and the kingdom of our God and the authority of His Christ" (Rev. 12:10).

The Secular Use. Basileia is first the authority to rule as a king and secondly the realm over which the reign is exercised.

The Abstract Meaning. In Luke 19:12, 15 a nobleman went into a far country to receive a "kingdom," i.e., authority to rule. Rev. 17:12 speaks of ten kings who have not yet received a "kingdom"; they are to "receive authority as kings" for one hour. These kings give over their "kingdom," their authority, to the Beast (Rev. 17:17). The harlot is the great city which has "kingdom," dominion over the kings of the earth (Rev. 17:18).

The Concrete Meaning. The kingdom is also a realm over which a reign is exercised. The idea of a realm is found in Matt. 4:8=Luke 4:5; Matt. 24:7; Mark 6:23; Rev. 16:10.

The Kingdom Is God's Reign. The "kingdom of God" means primarily the rule of God, the divine kingly authority.

OT Usage. The Hebrew word malekut, like basileia, carries primarily the abstract rather than the concrete meaning. A king's reign is frequently dated by the phrase "in the...year of this malekut," i.e., of His reign (I Chr. 26:31; Dan. 1:1). The establishment of Solomon's malekut (I Kings 2:12) meant the securing of His reign. The reception of Saul's malekut by David (I Chr. 12:23) is the authority to reign as king. The abstract idea is evident when the word is placed in parallelism with such abstract concepts as power, might, glory, dominion (Dan. 2:37; 4:34; 7:14).

When malekut is used of God, it almost always refers to His authority or His rule as the heavenly King. See Pss. 22:28; 103:19; 145:11, 13; Obad. 21; Dan. 6:26.

Return to the beginning of*: Kingdom of Heaven vs Kingdom of God

Return to*: Ephesians Highlights (by Chapter, Main Menu)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Comparison of The Kingdom of Heaven and The Kingdom of The God

By Dr. Fred Wittman

Mt. 13:18-30,36-43,47-50

https://happyheralds.org/Koh-KoG-CMP-Chart.htm

THE KINGDOM OF HEAVEN The rule of Heaven in the kingdoms on Earth	THE KINGDOM OF THE GOD The rule of The God in the realm of obedience
Described only in Matthew, no where else in the New Testament! Differences observed between kingdoms are important!	Described: only 4 vs. in Mt. (6:33; 12: 28; 21:31,43) and in all N.T. Books except 2 Cor., Phil.,1 Tim., Titus, 1 and 2 Peter, 1,2, and 3 John, and Jude.
1. Earthly realm: ultimate Messianic rule of Christ on Earth.	Heavenly and Spiritual realm. God's Heavenly rule throughout the ages.
2. Introduced by John the Baptizer (Mt. 3:1,2).	Introduced by Lord Jesus Christ (Mt. 6:33).
3. Sphere or realm of profession (real or false); professors - both true and false.	Sphere or realm of possession (only real, no false); only possessors of Eternal Life.
4. Entered by conversion (Mt. 18:3) - a new leaf.	Entered by regeneration (Jn. 3:3,5) - new life.
5. Reformation of the old creature.	A new creature (2 Cor. 5:17). /1:22; 5:23,27-29).
6. Christendom.	Christianity: the True Church (1 Cor. 12:12-28; Eph.^
7. Visible now.	Invisible (Lk. 17:20,21).
8. Tares and bad fish (Mt. 13:24-30; 38-42; 47-50).	No tares nor bad fish (Mk. 4:2-34; Lk. 8:4-18).
9. All kinds of birds in the branches (Mt. 13:32).	Birds under the shadow (Mk. 4:30-32).
10. Man's concept of The God's Will.	Truly know and do the Will of The God (1 Jn. 2:17; Heb. 10:36).
11. Make converts to a religion, 'only believe.'	Obey the Commission: make disciples (Mt. 28:19,20).
12. Lack the oil (anointing) of The Holy Spirit (Mt. 25:1-13).	Have the oil (anointing) of The Spirit (Mt. 25:4).
13. Do not wear a wedding garment (Mt. 22:11-13).	Are wearing a wedding garment (Mt. 22:2-13 cf. Rev. 19:8).
14. Devotion to a church or denomination.	Devotion to Christ.
15. Loyal to a church and denominational doctrine.	Loyal to the Church, the Bride of Christ (Rev. 21:2,9) and doctrine taught in God's Word.
16. Religion containing a Christ by unrighteous	Righteousness of Christ imputed (2 Cor. 5:18-21).
17. In Mystery: a mixed multitude, contains false and true believers, wheat & tares, good & bad fish (Mt. 13: 11,3-52; 25:1-13).	Mystical union with Christ: a pure body containing only the regenerated believers (Lk. 17:20,21; 1 Cor. 15:50; Eph. 5:29,30; 1:4; 5:27; Col. 1:22).
18. Things old and new (Mt. 13:52).	All things new (Mt. 13:52 cf. 2 Cor. 5:17).
19. Temporal and mediatorial - only from John til the end of the Millennium. (1 Cor. 15:24-28). Those still living will inhabit the new Earth (Is. 65:17; 66:22-24; 2 Pet. 3:13; Rev. 21:1).	Eternal - never ends (Dan. 4:3,27; 2 Pet. 1:11; Ps. 145:12,13). - Flesh and blood cannot inherit it (1 Cor. 15:51; Gal. 5:19-21; Eph. 5:5).
20. May teach to break the commandments of the law and remain in the kingdom of Heaven (Mt. 5:19).	His (Christ's) commandments are to be kept (1 Jn. 2:3; 5:2,3; Jn. 15:9,10).
21. The Self-righteous may enter (Mt. 5:20).	Only ones made righteous in Christ enter (Rom. 3: 22,23; 10:10; 2 Cor. 5:21).

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

22. Rule of the people or the crowd (Rev. 3:14-22).

23. The violent take it by force (Mt. 11:12).
24. Some Not forgiving (Mt. 18:23-35; 6:15; 18:34,35; Mk. 11:26).
25. Cling to an old rugged cross but are not crucified to sin, self, and the world.
26. Wear a cross as an emblem but do not demonstrate a cross experience in life.
27. Spend eternity in outer darkness and eternal torment (Mt. 8:11,12; 13:42; Rev. 20:14,15).
28. (Unrighteous) unjust ones (1 Cor. 6:9,10; Gal. 5:19-21; Eph. 5:5-13) and apostates within (1 Tim. 4:1,2; 2 Thes. 2:2b,3; Rev. 21:8).

Rule of the Person of Christ. Lord = absolute, unrestricted authority, full control (Lk. 6:47; Acts 10:36).
Cannot be entered by force though attempted (Lk. 16:16).
All have a forgiving spirit (Mt. 6:14 Mk.11:25,26; Lk. 6:37; Eph. 4:32).
Cling to the Christ of the cross with Whom they are crucified (Gal. 2:20; 5:24 APT; 6:14).
Their lives reflect a cross experience (Gal. 2:20; 5:24 APT; 6:14).
Spend eternity in Heaven with the Lord Jesus Christ (1 Thes. 4:16,17).
Only the regenerated shall inherit the Kingdom of God (1 Cor. 6:9,10; Gal. 5:19-21; Eph.5:6-13; Ps. 37:27,29; Mt. 19:27-29; Rev. 21:7).

There are similarities between these two Kingdoms. But the differences noted above make it very clear that there are distinct differences. It behooves each one of us to examine ourselves whether we truly be in the faith (2 Cor. 13:5) lest we become disapproved. Many labor under the misunderstanding that working for the furtherance of the kingdom is in reality furthering the kingdom of profession and thus the kingdom of Heaven and not the Kingdom of The One True God. 12/26/02

Kingdom of Heaven vs Kingdom of God Steven Anderson

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=cUf-Dn22iGw [Video] (5 min.)

(Warning: he is a staunch KJO advocate among other strong views. Points out there is no basic difference between “Kingdom of God” vs “Kingdom of Heaven”. Complains about KJO ‘cult leaders’ Gipp and Ruckman who promote other kingdom views.)

Return to the beginning of*: Kingdom of Heaven vs Kingdom of God

Return to*: Ephesians Highlights (by Chapter, Main Menu)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Kingdoms in Conflict: Examining the Use of "Kingdom of Heaven" in Matthew https://www.mbu.edu/seminary/journal/kingdoms-in-conflict-examining-the-use-of-kingdom-of-heaven-in-matthew/https://issuu.com/maranathaedu/docs/theological-journal-volume-3_2/57 (2013) [Recommended]

Excerpt:

Matthew is the only New Testament author to use the phrase "Kingdom of Heaven." While the other gospels frequently reference the Kingdom of God, Kingdom of Heaven is uniquely Matthean. His extensive use of this phrase (thirty-two times) invites the question, What does Matthew mean by this Kingdom of Heaven?

Two main answers have been given to this question in modern church history. The first answer, given by the early dispensationalists (Scofield, Walvoord, Darby, Larkin, Chafer, Feinberg, and early Ryrie), argued for a denotative difference between Kingdom of God (KG) and Kingdom of Heaven (KH).[2] They believed that the KH could be distinguished from the KG. The other answer, given by nearly every non-dispensationalist and almost all later dispensationalists (Saucy, Toussaint, McLain, and later Ryrie), argued for a connotative difference between the phrases. They believed that Matthew used KH, not to indicate a difference between the two kingdoms, but to avoid using the divine name.

The purpose of this article is to argue that both of these answers are mistaken. Instead, Matthew used KH for a theological purpose, which had important implications for Matthew's readers. To get to these implications, however, we will need to show why the two prevailing answers to why Matthew uses KH are fundamentally flawed. Next, we will develop Matthew's theological purpose in using KH. Having laid this groundwork, we will then be able to show how applicable Matthew's theme of the KH was to his audience.

Denotative Difference: Kingdom of God vs Kingdom of Heaven

While denotative distinctions between the KG and the KH have been proposed elsewhere,[3] the distinction became widely known through the popular Scofield Reference Bible. Scofield noted five ways to distinguish between the KH and the KG.[4] The essential differences, however, can be summarized in two points. First, the KG only contains beings who willingly subject themselves to the rule of God—whether human or angelic. The KH, however, contains only earthly creatures who profess to be subject to God. Thus, the KH contains both believers and unbelievers, while the KG contains true believers. Second, the KG is eternal and spiritual in nature, while the KH is temporal[5] and physical in nature.[6]

While early dispensationalists used this distinction as a way to argue for their dispensational, premillennial position,[7] it is widely understood that maintaining a distinction between the phrases is not essential to dispensationalism.[8] Walvoord, while arguing for the distinction, noted that maintaining the difference "does not affect premillennialism as a whole nor dispensationalism; and the system of theology of those who make the terms identical can be almost precisely the same as that of those who distinguish the terms."[9] In other words, one does not challenge dispensational theology when he denies that there is a denotative difference between the two phrases in the gospels. This is important to recognize, as some still maintain that this distinction is essential to dispensational thought.[10]

There are significant exegetical reasons to doubt the denotative distinction between KH and KG. While the limitation of space does not allow for an extended treatment,[11] I would like to indicate three central problems with the distinction. First, parallel passages show that Matthew's use of KH matches the use of KG in the other gospel writers. Out of Matthew's 32 uses of KH, 12 are within narratives which are also recorded in either Mark or Luke (and sometimes both).[12] In every parallel account, the other synoptic writer (Mark, Luke, or both) chose to use KG instead of KH. This would indicate that what Matthew called the KH, the other gospel writers identified as the KG. For example, in Jesus' famous Sermon in Matthew 5–7, Matthew records that the poor in spirit will inherit the KH. Luke, citing the same sermon, records Jesus as saying that the poor will inherit the KG.[13]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The second exegetical reason to doubt the distinction between the KH and KG is based on the synonymous parallelism evident in Matthew 19:23–24. In verse 23 Jesus declared that it is hard for a rich man to enter the kingdom of heaven, and in verse 24 he declared that the rich man could not enter the kingdom of God. Here Matthew mentions both the KH and the KG, connecting them with "again I say to you," signaling a repetition of the same idea.[14] If there is a distinction between the two kingdoms, it is difficult to imagine why Matthew does not explicitly express this distinction. Indeed, it appears that the proponent of the distinction has to bear the burden of proving that Matthew makes a clear distinction.[15]

The text just referenced provides the third textual reason to avoid making a distinction between the KH and the KG. Jesus argues that it is difficult for a rich man to enter into the KH. But if the KH is merely the realm of Christian profession (and not necessarily true possession), it does not appear that entrance into this kingdom would be as difficult as Jesus claims. Further, Jesus in Matthew 7:21 maintains that "Not everyone who says to Me, 'Lord, Lord,' will enter the kingdom of heaven, but he who does the will of My Father who is in heaven will enter," but saying "Lord, Lord" without a submissive heart attitude appears to be the very definition of mere profession! [16]

These three exegetical insights should cause great caution to those who would propose a denotative distinction between the KG and the KH.[17] Combining these insights with the following facts indicates that we should look elsewhere for an explanation of Matthew's use of KH: (1) no other author in Scripture argues for a distinct KG, (2) Matthew sometimes uses Kingdom without delineating to which (KG or KH) he is referring, and (3) Matthew never explicitly expresses a distinction between the two phrases even though he uses both KG and KH.

Connotative Difference: Kingdom of Heaven as Circumlocution

That Matthew used KH in order to avoid using the divine name is the nearly unanimous view of modern Matthean scholarship.[18] It is widely accepted that the Hebrews avoided using God's name to avoid breaking the third of the Ten Commandments. Rather than using God's name, the Jews would practice circumlocution, which derives from the Latin circum and locutio meaning "to speak around." In sum, the Jews would substitute another word or phrase for the divine name in order to avoid accidently breaking the divine law.

Circumlocution appears to be found in the Jewish intertestamental literature[19] and may also be evident in Scripture. For instance Mark 14:61 appears to use circumlocution for the divine name when the High priest asks Jesus, "Are you the Christ, the Son of the Blessed One?" Luke 15:18 comes closer to Matthew's use when the prodigal, in rehearsing his repentance speech, says, "I will arise and go to my father, and will say unto him, Father, I have sinned against heaven, and before thee." Daniel 4:26 likewise indicates that Daniel, in his speech to Nebuchadnezzar, refers to heaven when clearly referencing God. These latter two texts give evidence that, at least at times, Jewish custom allowed for heaven to be substituted for the divine name. If so, could Matthew's use of KH align with this reverence for the divine name?

Jonathan Pennington argues strongly against the circumlocution view: "The history of the reverential circumlocution idea [in Matthew] is an example of an unsubstantiated suggestion becoming an unquestioned assumption through the magic of publication, repetition, and elapsed time."[20] Nearly all literature related to the circumlocution view in Matthew traces back to the seminal work of Gustaf Dalman.[21] However, Pennington shows that there are substantial reasons to doubt the validity of Dalman's conclusions.[22] If so, the entire foundation of the circumlocution view is shaken and another explanation for Matthew's use of KH should be sought.[23] Regardless of whether the faulty view can be traced back to Dalman, there are two clear reasons within the Gospel of Matthew to reject the circumlocution view.

First, according to the circumlocution view Matthew avoided the use of the divine name for one of two reasons. He could have avoided the use so that he would not accidently break the third commandment, or he could have avoided the use in order to avoid offending the Jews for whom he was writing.[24] That Matthew wrote to avoid using the divine name for the sake of his own conscience appears indefensible in light of the teaching of his gospel. The avoidance of the divine name was an example of the multiplication of human traditions and rules Jesus argues against in the gospel of Matthew (15:1–8). Hagelberg concludes, "It is not conceivable that Matthew could have held to and been motivated by this false view of holiness."[25] For this reason, the nearly unanimous view of commentators has been that Matthew used heaven to avoid offending his audience.[26] But this proposal is likewise suspect. Matthew does not appear reticent to offend the Jewish brethren elsewhere within his gospel.[27] For instance, Matthew's background as a tax collector could potentially incense their Jewish sensibilities.[28] Further, the entire Sermon on the Mount (Matt 5–7) is an attack against the Jewish system of thought that was at the root of the circumlocution habit. If Matthew was using circumlocution to avoid offending the Jews, it appears strange that he was not reticent to offend them in other ways.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The second reason circumlocution is a poor explanation for Matthew's use of KH is Matthew's expansive use of God's name. If Matthew sought to substitute the divine name for another term, why does Matthew use the divine name 51 times in his gospel?[29] Further, if Matthew is seeking to avoid the formulaic KG, why does he fail to substitute KH for KG in four instances (12:28; 19:24; 21:31, 43)?[30] John Drane, who believes in the circumlocution proposal, argues that these four instances "can readily be understood if we suppose that Matthew overlooked these four occurrences of the word."[31] Not considering how this explanation could potentially affect one's understanding of inspiration, it is simply unbelievable that Matthew overlooked these four texts. For example, in the text already examined above, Matthew synonymously related the KG and the KH (19:23–24); it is hard to imagine that Matthew changed KG to KH in one sentence and forgot to do so in the very next sentence. Overall, Matthew shows little reluctance to use the divine name; therefore, while the circumlocution proposal has enjoyed nearly universal acclaim in Matthean studies, it does not hold under the weight of careful study.[32]

Metonymic Difference: Kingdom of Heaven vs Kingdoms of the Earth[33]

Sensing the failure of the circumlocution proposal, some scholars have attempted to propose alternate explanations. For instance, while D. A. Carson is not willing to completely overturn the circumlocution thesis, he argues that there seems to be more to Matthew's choice than merely avoiding the divine name. Perhaps Matthew intentionally avoided KG in order to leave open the possibility of Jesus also being King.[34] Leon Morris adds that Matthew may be stressing the comprehensiveness of the kingdom by using KH, denoting that the kingdom not only pertains to the earth, but is also expressed in the heavenly realm.[35] Margaret Pamment and James Gibbs suggest that KH pertains to the future kingdom while KG references the present kingdom expressed in the lives of Jesus' disciples.[36] Stanley Toussaint offers another perspective, arguing that KH references the fulfillment of Old Testament prophecies, while KG speaks of the character of God's kingdom.[37] A final proposal, given by J. Julius Scott, contends that Matthew avoided KG because of its military connotations among his Jewish audience.[38] While the present article will not be arguing for any of these positions, the multiplicity of suggested explanations for Matthew's use of KG shows that the classic explanation has been found wanting. The rest of this paper will give an alternative explanation that honors both the theology and text of Matthew's Gospel.

A careful study of the first Gospel will reveal that KH is not an isolated element of Matthew's gospel; instead, Matthew maintains a theme of heavenly language that orientates the reader to the distinction between the kingdom that will come from heaven and the kingdoms of this world.[39] Hagelberg summarizes,

"The Kingdom of Heaven" is used by Matthew because it supports and supplements Matthew's theology which is centered around the concept of the two kingdoms in conflict; this support and supplementation is by the natural pairing of the kingdom of heaven with the kingdom of earth and by the culture's stock of ideas, ie. [sic] when the kingdom of heaven was mentioned, its opposite, the kingdom of earth, came to mind.[40]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The distinction between heaven and earth is a primeval fact in Scripture (Gen 1:1). Later revelation would confirm that the heavens are the abode of God, while the earth is the abode of man (Ps 115:16). Further, the kings of the earth battle against the God of heaven (Psalm 2). Each of these Old Testament themes was evident to Matthew and his audience. Most important to Matthew, however, was Daniel 2:44, which reveals that the God of Heaven will one day establish a kingdom that will replace the kingdoms of this world.[41] The idea of this kingdom from the God of heaven quickly and pervasively caught the hearts of the Hebrew people, who longed for political freedom. This longing remained in their hearts from the time of Daniel through the intertestamental period all the way to the writing of Matthew's gospel.[42]

Matthew, writing to Jews who still embraced the hope of a future kingdom from the God of heaven, termed the KG as the KH to directly correlate the kingdom Jesus will establish with the long awaited hope established in Daniel 2–7.[43] While it is possible Matthew could have used the more general phrase KG to denote this kingdom, he chose to use KH to remind his readers of Daniel and to make a contrast with the kingdoms of this world. Just as Daniel's original audience took hope under the oppressive regimes in the exile, so Matthew's audience could take hope under the oppressive regime of the Romans in their present day.

While the preceding explanation is theologically possible, the reader may be wondering whether it is exegetically tenable. This article will seek to prove that it is exegetically sound by examining the language of Matthew's text. First, Matthew emphasizes the heavenly realm in his gospel. A simple comparison of the use of οὐρανός ("heaven") will show that Matthew (82 uses) speaks of heaven much more than Mark (18), Luke (35), or John (18).[44] In fact, Matthew speaks of heaven more than all the other gospels combined! Further, Matthew connects heaven with the Father more than twenty times (Heavenly Father or Father in Heaven), while the only other gospel to connect these terms is Mark, and he connects them only once.[45]

Second, it is clear that Matthew's gospel centers on the concept of Kingdom. Matthew, of all the gospel writers, references the kingdom the most (fifty-five times). In fact, Matthew references the kingdom more than all of the non-gospel NT books put together.[46] Whereas Luke traces Jesus' genealogy back to Adam, Matthew takes pains to show that while Jesus' lineage runs all the way back to Abraham (stressing Jewish heritage), it runs through David as well (stressing kingship). The careful reader of Matthew will not miss that the kingdom appears at the most central parts of Matthew's text: the genealogy of Jesus (1:1); the start of John the Baptist's ministry (3:2); the start of Jesus' ministry (4:17); the Sermon on the Mount (5:3, 10; 6:9–13); the kingdom parables (13:1–52; 20:1–16; 22:1–14; 25:1–46); the Passover meal (26:29); and the Great Commission (24:14; 28:18).

These two major themes in Matthew—Heaven and Kingdom—come together in Matthew's unique phrase KH. But it is not yet clear why Matthew connects these two ideas. The third point will fill the gap: Matthew frequently emphasizes the distinction between heaven and earth. This distinction is evident in each of the synoptic gospels but is particularly emphasized in Matthew. While Matthew connects language concerning heaven and earth in more than 20 instances, Mark does so twice and Luke only five times.[47] Further, as Pennington notes, "The language of 'heaven and earth' as contrasting realities is found at the most important theological points throughout the gospel such as in the Lord's Prayer (6:9–10), the ecclesiological passages (16:17–19; 18:18–19), and the Great Commission (28:18–20)."[48] Taking it all together, it is hard not to conclude with Pennington that "Matthew is consciously developing a heaven and earth theme."[49]

Putting all of Matthew's themes together presents the reader with God as the King of the heavenly realm, which stands in opposition to the earth. However, Matthew's emphasis on the earth also includes the idea of kingship. From the very beginning of his gospel (2:1–3), Matthew notes that Jesus is the king in opposition to Herod as the archetypal earthly king: "Now after Jesus was born in Bethlehem of Judea in the days of Herod the king, magi from the east arrived in Jerusalem, saying, 'Where is he who has been born King of the Jews? For we saw his star in the east and have come to worship him.' When Herod the king heard this, he was troubled, and all Jerusalem with him." Here Matthew sandwiches the Kingship of Jesus between the two proclamations of Herod's kingship.[50] Later Matthew brings into stark contrast the kingship promised to Jesus from the Father in heaven with the kingship offered from Satan, king of this world (4:8; cf. 12:26). In this passage, Matthew speaks of the kingdoms of the earth in both human and satanic terms, an analogy likely derived from Daniel 10:13.[51] This theme of heavenly kingship and earthly kingship runs throughout the text, crescendoing in the Great Commission when Jesus notes that the authority in heaven and earth has been given to him.[52]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The clearest text in Matthew that brings all of these themes together is the Lord's Prayer (6:9–10):

Our Father who is in heaven,
Hallowed be Your name.
Your kingdom come.
Your will be done,
On earth as it is in heaven.
Give us this day our daily bread.
And forgive us our debts, as we also have forgiven our debtors.
And do not lead us into temptation, but deliver us from evil.[53]

The prayer begins with a recognition that the Father is in the heavens, from which the Kingdom will come. Further, it presents a contrast between the things done on earth and those done in heaven. The implication is that God's will is accomplished in the heavens because that realm is presently subject to his kingly authority. The earth, by contrast, is not presently under the kingly authority of God, but one day, in God's timing, will be subject to him. The prayer further recognizes that though the earth is not in total subjection at the present moment, God has control over the physical (earth's resources) and spiritual (forgiveness) aspects of existence on earth.[54]

Implications for Matthew's Readers

On the basis of the findings above, KH in Matthew is not designed to show a denotative difference between the KH and the KG. Neither is it designed to avoid the divine name. Instead, KH functions to orientate the Jewish reader back to Daniel 2–7, where the Kingdom from the God of Heaven was promised to supplant the kingdoms of the earth. This understanding matches Matthew's themes perfectly, and it provides a rich understanding of Matthew's theological purposes.

First, it is clear from the intertestamental literature that the expectations for the coming Kingdom were not going to be fulfilled as many Jews expected. In fact, even the expectations of Jesus' followers were off mark. For example, John the Baptists' doubt appears to have been motivated by his lack of understanding how the future King's ministry could be almost entirely non-political (11:2–6).[55] For this reason, Matthew intentionally emphasized the prophetic language of Daniel by calling the kingdom the KH, affirming the kingdom Jesus promised was the same one Daniel predicted years before. While the kingdom was to progress in ways the Jews were not prepared for (13:31–33), it was the same kingdom, and it would one day usurp all the kingdoms of the earth.

Second, just as the Kingdom coming from the God of Heaven reassured Daniel's listeners that God's plan was still functioning despite their historical context in Babylon, so Matthew's KH reassured his readers that God's plan was still moving forward despite the historical context in Rome. In both situations, the Jews wanted to be free from the political reigns of a domineering captor. And in both situations, God, through his inspired writers, gave glimpses of the future fulfillment of that hope. Rome, the final beast, will be conquered, and the kingdom from heaven will be finally and fully established. Though many hoped it would be fully established at Jesus' first coming, the future is still secure—the statue will be toppled (Dan 2:35).

Third, Matthew's use of KH assured his readers that those who embraced Jesus were on the side of the God in heaven who would establish his kingdom in the future on the earth. Though the kingdoms of the earth presently persecute Jesus' followers (5:10; 23:34), believers will one day inherit the earth as members of God's kingdom from heaven (5:5, 10). Their treasures, likewise, are stored in heaven for them (6:19–21). Though they appear fatherless in this world (23:9), they have a devoted Father in heaven (5:16; 12:50). On the other hand, the religious leaders have Satan as their father (13:38–39). They joined with the rulers of this world (both spiritual and political) against the KH (27:1–2), and they will share in the fate of the spiritual ruler of this world (25:41). They are of the type who will mourn when the Son comes from the heavens to take his throne (24:30). The contrast could not be presented more sharply. In the popular religious thought, Jesus' followers were deceived and received persecution as a result of being found on the wrong "team." Matthew's gospel clearly displays that persecution is not proof that people are on the wrong team; rather it is proof they are on the right team (5:12)! They were not members of the kingdoms of this earth but had been granted access to a new family and kingdom through obedience to Christ (12:50). While it appeared they were missing the true Kingdom, Matthew assured his readers that they were the true recipients of God's coming kingdom.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Finally, Matthew used KH to stress the superiority of heaven over earth. Because Matthew's readers were sons of the Father in heaven, they should be confident in the future establishment of the Kingdom. That the King sitting in heaven has control over the earth is evident throughout Matthew's Gospel. First, Matthew masterfully weaves two Old Testament references together when he identifies heaven as the throne of God, the earth as God's footstool, and Jerusalem as the city of the Great King (Ps 48:1, 2; Isa 66:1; Matt 5:34, 35).[56] Hupopodion ("footstool") denotes subjection to a superior force.[57] This terminology is often used to describe a victor putting his foot upon the conquered enemy's neck.[58] Second, Matthew records Jesus describing the Father as "Lord of heaven and earth" (11:25), a clear indication of God's sovereignty over the earth. Third, Matthew describes God as having power over the earth through earthquakes. Matthew is the only gospel to record the earthquake at the crucifixion, noting that the "earth shook and the rocks broke in pieces" (27:51). Matthew is referring his readers back to the Old Testament's depictions of God's power and anger expressed through earthquakes.[59] Matthew is also the only Gospel writer to record that the angel who rolled the stone away caused an earthquake.[60] Clearly the weight of the stone itself did not cause the quake; instead, God was expressing his power over the earth through the resurrection of his Son. Though Jesus was three days in the heart of the earth (12:40), God's power is shown in conquering both the spiritual (Satan) and political (Roman and Jewish) kingdoms of the earth in the resurrection of his Son. The earthquake serves as a vivid expression of God's sovereignty over the world. Overall, Matthew's emphasis on God's power over the kingdoms of the earth served to give his readers confidence that though they were sometimes persecuted, reviled, and killed, God maintained ultimate control over the earth. Though the kings of the earth may appear to have power, they are unaware that even now their neck is under the foot of God, awaiting the day when God will bring his kingdom from the heavens to the earth.

Implications for Matthew's Readers

On the basis of the findings above, KH in Matthew is not designed to show a denotative difference between the KH and the KG. Neither is it designed to avoid the divine name. Instead, KH functions to orientate the Jewish reader back to Daniel 2–7, where the Kingdom from the God of Heaven was promised to supplant the kingdoms of the earth. This understanding matches Matthew's themes perfectly, and it provides a rich understanding of Matthew's theological purposes.

First, it is clear from the intertestamental literature that the expectations for the coming Kingdom were not going to be fulfilled as many Jews expected. In fact, even the expectations of Jesus' followers were off mark. For example, John the Baptists' doubt appears to have been motivated by his lack of understanding how the future King's ministry could be almost entirely non-political (11:2–6).[55] For this reason, Matthew intentionally emphasized the prophetic language of Daniel by calling the kingdom the KH, affirming the kingdom Jesus promised was the same one Daniel predicted years before. While the kingdom was to progress in ways the Jews were not prepared for (13:31–33), it was the same kingdom, and it would one day usurp all the kingdoms of the earth.

Second, just as the Kingdom coming from the God of Heaven reassured Daniel's listeners that God's plan was still functioning despite their historical context in Babylon, so Matthew's KH reassured his readers that God's plan was still moving forward despite the historical context in Rome. In both situations, the Jews wanted to be free from the political reigns of a domineering captor. And in both situations, God, through his inspired writers, gave glimpses of the future fulfillment of that hope. Rome, the final beast, will be conquered, and the kingdom from heaven will be finally and fully established. Though many hoped it would be fully established at Jesus' first coming, the future is still secure—the statue will be toppled (Dan 2:35).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Third, Matthew's use of KH assured his readers that those who embraced Jesus were on the side of the God in heaven who would establish his kingdom in the future on the earth. Though the kingdoms of the earth presently persecute Jesus' followers (5:10; 23:34), believers will one day inherit the earth as members of God's kingdom from heaven (5:5, 10). Their treasures, likewise, are stored in heaven for them (6:19–21). Though they appear fatherless in this world (23:9), they have a devoted Father in heaven (5:16; 12:50). On the other hand, the religious leaders have Satan as their father (13:38–39). They joined with the rulers of this world (both spiritual and political) against the KH (27:1–2), and they will share in the fate of the spiritual ruler of this world (25:41). They are of the type who will mourn when the Son comes from the heavens to take his throne (24:30). The contrast could not be presented more sharply. In the popular religious thought, Jesus' followers were deceived and received persecution as a result of being found on the wrong "team." Matthew's gospel clearly displays that persecution is not proof that people are on the wrong team; rather it is proof they are on the right team (5:12)! They were not members of the kingdoms of this earth but had been granted access to a new family and kingdom through obedience to Christ (12:50). While it appeared they were missing the true Kingdom, Matthew assured his readers that they were the true recipients of God's coming kingdom.

Finally, Matthew used KH to stress the superiority of heaven over earth. Because Matthew's readers were sons of the Father in heaven, they should be confident in the future establishment of the Kingdom. That the King sitting in heaven has control over the earth is evident throughout Matthew's Gospel. First, Matthew masterfully weaves two Old Testament references together when he identifies heaven as the throne of God, the earth as God's footstool, and Jerusalem as the city of the Great King (Ps 48:1, 2; Isa 66:1; Matt 5:34, 35).[56] Hupopodion ("footstool") denotes subjection to a superior force.[57] This terminology is often used to describe a victor putting his foot upon the conquered enemy's neck.[58] Second, Matthew records Jesus describing the Father as "Lord of heaven and earth" (11:25), a clear indication of God's sovereignty over the earth. Third, Matthew describes God as having power over the earth through earthquakes. Matthew is the only gospel to record the earthquake at the crucifixion, noting that the "earth shook and the rocks broke in pieces" (27:51). Matthew is referring his readers back to the Old Testament's depictions of God's power and anger expressed through earthquakes.[59] Matthew is also the only Gospel writer to record that the angel who rolled the stone away caused an earthquake.[60] Clearly the weight of the stone itself did not cause the quake; instead, God was expressing his power over the earth through the resurrection of his Son. Though Jesus was three days in the heart of the earth (12:40), God's power is shown in conquering both the spiritual (Satan) and political (Roman and Jewish) kingdoms of the earth in the resurrection of his Son. The earthquake serves as a vivid expression of God's sovereignty over the world. Overall, Matthew's emphasis on God's power over the kingdoms of the earth served to give his readers confidence that though they were sometimes persecuted, reviled, and killed, God maintained ultimate control over the earth. Though the kings of the earth may appear to have power, they are unaware that even now their neck is under the foot of God, awaiting the day when God will bring his kingdom from the heavens to the earth.

Conclusion

While this paper has emphasized the effect Matthew's KH language would have had on the original recipients, it has a significant impact on modern believers as well. In union with historic believers in Babylon and Rome, modern believers can also have hope that, while the world's kingdoms continue to rage against the King of Heaven (Ps 2), the KH will one day supplant all the unrighteousness of this earth. And while these kingdoms appear independent of the sovereignty of the Father, they are subject to his power. Though modern believers are often ostracized and rejected, they are ultimately members of the KH. Though presently strangers and exiles, they will be united to Jesus in his kingdom at his second coming. They share in common with both Daniel's and Matthew's readers the hope of the future earthly kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ. Matthew masterfully concludes his gospel with the promise of this kingdom, noting that though the kings of the earth hate the king of heaven, Jesus has been given all authority in heaven and earth (28:18). He will return on the clouds of heaven to take his royal throne (24:30; 26:64). The battle is already over, and those aligned with God's kingdom await the future victory march.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

---

[1] Mr. Miller is a Ph.D. candidate and an Assistant Professor in the Bible Department at Maranatha Baptist Bible College and Seminary.

[2] This position is not limited to early dispensationalists. See Michael Pearl, Eight Kingdoms: And Then There was ONE (Pleasantville, TN: No Greater Joy Ministries, 2006).

[3] For instance, see Matthew Henry, An Exposition of the Old and New Testament (New York: R. Carter & Brothers, 1856), 4: 158.

[4] C. I. Scofield, ed., The Scofield Reference Study Bible (1917) (New York: Oxford, 1996), 1003.

[5] It is temporal until it merges with the KG at the end of the Millennium.

[6] For more on the distinctions in Scofield and the early dispensationalists see Herbert W. Bateman, "Dispensationalism Yesterday and Today," in Three Central Issues in Contemporary Dispensationalism: A Comparison of Traditional and Progressive Views, Herbert W. Bateman, ed. (Grand Rapids: Kregel, 1999), 24–31.

[7] Charles L. Feinberg, Premillennialism or Amillennialism ? (New York: American Board of Missions to the Jews, 1961), 299–303.

[8] Charles Ryrie, Dispensationalism (Chicago: Moody, 2007), 154–57; Robert Saucy, The Case for Progressive Dispensationalism (Grand Rapids: Zondervan, 1993), 19; Stanley D. Toussaint, Behold the King: A Study of Matthew (Grand Rapids: Kregel, 2005), 65.

[9] John F. Walvoord, "Kingdom of Heaven," Bibliotheca Sacra 124.495 (1967): 205.

[10] See Pearl who says that the KH and the KG are not the same. He then notes that this distinction is important because, "It is the difference between being a dispensationalist or not." Pearl, Eight Kingdoms, 1.

[11] For extended critiques see, David Edward Hagelberg, "The Designation 'The Kingdom of Heaven'" (Masters Thesis, Dallas Theological Seminary, 1983), 11–24; George Eldon Ladd, Crucial Questions about the Kingdom of God (Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1952), 109–111; Toussaint, Behold the King, 65–67.

[12] C. C. Caragounis, "Kingdom of God/Heaven," in Dictionary of Jesus and the Gospels, Joel B. Green, Scot McKnight, and I. Howard Marshall, ed. (Grand Rapids: IVP Academic, 1997), 426.

[13] Walvoord and Feinberg defended their position by stating that the phrase "Kingdom of God" could be used to denote the KH because (1) the two kingdoms are quite similar, and (2) the KH is an aspect of the KG. They both use geographical illustrations, arguing that one could truthfully speak of being in Dallas, Texas to one friend and speak of being in the library at Dallas Theological Seminary to another. Since the library is within the geographical bounds of Dallas, Texas, it is not illegitimate to substitute the one for the other. The analogy breaks down, however, when we consider the specifics of the analogy. In the case of geography, the larger sphere contains 100% of the smaller sphere (i.e., all of Dallas Seminary's library is included in Dallas, Texas), but in the KH/KG analogy, the larger sphere (KG) does not contain 100% of the smaller sphere (KH). That is, there are members of the KH (unbelievers) that are not a part of the KG (only believers). Therefore, the analogy breaks down at its most crucial point. If there are two distinct kingdoms being spoken of at the time of Jesus, and if these kingdoms contain different members, then it does not appear that one could legitimately substitute the phrases without some form of duplicity. Feinberg, Premillennialism or Amillennialism?, 301–302; Walvoord, "Kingdom of Heaven," 199, 201. Earl Miller unwittingly establishes the failure of the analogy when he argues, "Topographically the Kingdom of Heaven is within the bounds of the Kingdom of God, but a great deal of what is considered in the Kingdom of Heaven is not generically in the Kingdom of God." Earl Miller, The Kingdom of God and The Kingdom of Heaven (Kansas City: Walterick, 1950), 60–61.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

[14] Matthew uses the same clause to connect two ideas in Matthew 18:18–19, reiterating the authority he has given to his church.

[15] Hagelberg not only argues that the proponent has to bear the burden of proof within the Matthean text, but he also notes that the burden is significantly more burdensome due to the lack of distinction in pre-Matthean literature. If Hagelberg's research is correct, there was some understanding of the kingdom of Heaven preceding Matthew's text. This literature makes no distinction between KG and KH. Therefore, Matthew is using two terms that have historically been synonyms. If he wants to make a distinction, he must be very clear how he differentiates them. If he fails to make a clear case for the differences, then his audience will automatically assume he is speaking of the same kingdom. Hagelberg, "The Designation," 1–10, 22.

[16] While it could be argued that these passages are referring to the future aspect of the KH when it merges with the KG, it is hard to understand why Matthew does not simply use KG, which he is not unafraid to use four other times in the gospel. For another text indicating difficulty entering the KH see Matthew 18:3–4.

[17] Foster provides another reason to doubt the distinction as formed in early dispensationalism; namely, KH is used only once (in thirty-two occurrences) in speeches to unbelievers, while KG is used only once in relation to disciples. Foster recognizes the initial implication of this raw data: "Initially, these statistics indicate that KG refers to God's rule over both the obedient and disobedient, while KH exclusively designates his reign over those who become his family through faith in Jesus." In other words, this data leads him in the exact opposite direction of early dispensational thought. See Robert Foster, "Why on Earth Use 'Kingdom of Heaven'?: Matthew's Terminology Revisited," New Testament Studies 48.4 (2002): 494.

[18] "The assumption of reverential circumlocution is so widespread that it functions as a consensus in Matthean studies." Jonathan T. Pennington, Heaven and Earth in the Gospel of Matthew (Grand Rapids: Baker, 2007), 32.

[19] Ladd, Crucial Questions, 123, fn 6.

[20] Pennington, Heaven and Earth, 36.

[21] Gustaf Dalman, The Words of Jesus, D. M. Kay, tr. (Edinburgh: T. & T. Clark, 1902), 91–94.

[22] Pennington, Heaven and Earth, 13–37.

[23] "It is often the case that the literary/rhetorical practice of circumlocution is used with no motive of avoidance of the divine name, but instead for other reasons: style, variety, literary allusions, word-play, or theological purpose." Ibid., 36.

[24] Hagelberg, "The Designation," 25.

[25] Ibid., 30.

[26] It is clear that Matthew's gospel is written to the Jewish people. The formulaic Old Testament references (Matt 1:22–23; 2:5–6; 2:15; 2:17–18; 2:23; 4:14–16; 8:17; 12:17–21; 13:35; 21:4–5; 27:9–10:2) and the fact that he traces his lineage back to Abraham and David (Matt 1:1) indicate that he was writing to the Hebrew people.

[27] Hagelberg, "The Designation," 30.

[28] This is dependent on the authorship of Matthew. The present author agrees with Leon Morris that there is more evidence for the apostle Matthew's authorship than present scholars generally give credit. See Leon Morris, The Gospel according to Matthew, Pillar New Testament Commentary (Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1992), 12–15.

[29] While Matthew does use theos less frequently than the other gospel writers, the difference is not as striking as one would suppose if Matthew were actively seeking to avoid using the divine name. For a statistical analysis of Matthew's and Luke's uses of theos see James M. Gibbs, "Matthew's use of 'Kingdom,' 'Kingdom of God' and 'Kingdom of Heaven,'" The Bangalore Theological Forum 8.1 (1976): 60–77.

[30] There is a textual problem in Matthew 6:33. It may be simply "Kingdom."

[31] John William Drane, Introducing the New Testament, Completely Rev. and Updated (Oxford: Lion, 2000), 115.

[32] Cremer offers another argument against the circumlocution view, suggesting that when heaven is a replacement for God it is always used in the singular. In Matthew, however, the phrase KH is always in the plural. See Herman Cremer, Biblico-Theological Lexicon of New Testament Greek, tr. William Urwick, 3rd ed. (Edinburgh: T & T Clark, n.d.), 662–63.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

[33] Pennington holds to a distinction between circumlocution and metonymy. He notes that they are certainly not hermetically sealed terms that never overlap. Instead, he argues that circumlocution has taken on such baggage that it is no longer useful to understanding Matthew's point. Matthew is not primarily using KH for the sake of avoiding the divine name, but for the sake of pointing out an aspect of God through the name he is ascribed. In this case, Matthew is using KH to make a theological point. Pennington, Heaven and Earth, 36.

[34] D. A. Carson, "Matthew," in Matthew, Mark, Luke, The Expositor's Bible Commentary 8 (Grand Rapids: Zondervan, 1984), 100. Schweizer offers a similar reading in Eduard Schweizer, The Good News According to Matthew (Westminster: John Knox, 1975), 47.

[35] Morris, The Gospel According to Matthew, 53.

[36] Margaret Pamment, "The Kingdom of Heaven According to the First Gospel," New Testament Studies 27.2 (1981): 211–232; Gibbs, "Matthew's use of 'Kingdom,'" 60–77.

[37] Toussaint, Behold the King, 68.

[38] J. Julius Scott Jr., "The Synoptic Gospels," in Introductory Articles, Expositor's Bible Commentary (Grand Rapids: Zondervan, 1984), 1: 508.

[39] Some scholars have suggested this or a very similar theme in the past. Especially take note of Jonathan Pennington's book length defense of essentially the same position the present author is arguing for. This essay is designed to build on and popularize the position offered by these authors. Cremer, Biblico-Theological Lexicon; Hagelberg, "The Designation"; Foster, "Why on Earth Use 'Kingdom of Heaven'?: Matthew's Terminology Revisited"; Pennington, Heaven and Earth.

[40] Hagelberg, "The Designation," 34.

[41] Daniel 2:31–45 speaks of the vision of Nebuchadnezzar in which a statue representing the kingdoms of the world is crushed by the stone from heaven, which grows and becomes a great mountain filling the whole earth. Daniel reveals that the stone is the kingdom, which will supplant all earthly kingdoms and which will be an eternal kingdom.

[42] See Pennington, Heaven and Earth, 268–272.

[43] Daniel 2 has been explained above. Daniel 7 adds to the context of the coming everlasting kingdom by noting that the earthly kingdoms will be usurped by the God of heaven, who will give the kingdom to the Son of Man.

[44] Foster, following the New International Dictionary of New Testament Theology, finds 34 uses in Luke, but a lemma search with the Logos Greek morphology tool indicates that there are 35 uses. See Foster, "Why on Earth, " 490; Logos Greek Morphology, Logos Bible Software (Bellingham, WA: Logos Bible Software, 2013).

[45] Jonathan T. Pennington, "The Kingdom of Heaven in the Gospel of Matthew," Southern Baptist Journal of Theology 12.1 (2008): 47.

[46] Ibid., 45.

[47] Ibid., 46.

[48] Ibid.

[49] Ibid.

[50] Hagelberg, "The Designation," 39.

[51] Hagelberg notes, "This combination of human and supernatural leadership over the kingdom of earth is reminiscent of Daniel 10:13 where the angel speaks of his battle with the 'Prince of the Persian kingdom,' the 'King of Persia.'" Ibid., 40.

[52] While Matthew does not explicitly mention the kingdom in Matthew 28, he does mention that the gospel of the kingdom will be preached to the whole world in Matthew 24, which seems to be fulfilled through the Great Commission. Further, the reader who has caught the constant repetition in Matthew between the kingdom of heaven and the kingdoms of earth will not miss the implication of Jesus' statement when he declares that all power has been given to him in heaven and earth. Perhaps Matthew is suggesting that all is in place so that Jesus can receive the authority promised to the Son of Man in Daniel 7:14. Daniel's text argues that the kingdom will embrace people from every tribe and tongue, and Matthew's text expresses the authority of Christ to those who are to take the gospel to the ends of the earth.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

[53] "For thine is the kingdom, power, and glory forever and ever amen," the latter portion of verse 13, is usually excluded on the grounds that the earliest MSS do not include this doxology. On these grounds, most scholars have concluded the phrase is not an original portion of the Gospel of Matthew. On the other hand, Leon Morris argues, "The case for the doxology is stronger than many students assume." On the basis of the present study, one can see that the doxology fits nicely with Matthew's central themes. Morris, The Gospel according to Matthew, 149.

[54] Matthew stresses God's provision over both of these in other places in his text. For instance, in Matthew 9:6 Jesus states that He has been given authority on earth to forgive sins. And in 6:33 he notes that seeking God's kingdom results in God's meeting the believer's physical needs.

[55] Nolland expresses this view when he says, "John needed to come to terms with the fact that the one of whom he had now been hearing such remarkable things was, despite the quite unexpected form of his ministry, the one whom he had heralded as eschatological judge and deliverer—'the one coming after' John (Mt. 3:11)." John Nolland, The Gospel of Matthew, New International Greek Testament Commentary (Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 2005), 450–451.

[56] Morris, The Gospel According to Matthew, 122.

[57] Philo notes that the idea of earth as footstool serves the "purpose of displaying that even the whole world has not a free and unrestrained spontaneous motion of its own, but God, the ruler of the universe, takes his stand upon it, regulating it and directing everything in a saving manner by the helm of his wisdom." Philo of Alexandria, "Confusion," The Works of Philo: Complete and Unabridged, Charles Duke Yonge, tr. (Peabody, MA: Hendrickson, 1995), 98.

[58] William Walter Arndt, Frederick W. Danker, and Walter Bauer, A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, 3rd ed. (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 2000), 1050.

[59] For instance, see 2 Sam 22:7–8, where God hears from the heavens and shakes the earth in his anger. Also see Nahum 1:6, where God's anger causes the rocks to break in pieces. Nolland, The Gospel of Matthew, 1213.

[60] Notably, Matthew emphasizes that the angel had come from heaven to execute God's will.

The Kingdom in Matthew https://bible.org/article/kingdom-matthew

Return to the beginning of*: Kingdom of Heaven vs Kingdom of God

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Return to: Ephesians Highlights (by Chapter, Main Menu)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

The Two Kingdoms

Kingdom of Heaven	Kingdom of God
• Is physical/visible	• Is spiritual/invisible
• Began with creation	• Existed before the earth
• Can be taken by force	• Cannot be taken
• It's doors were shut by the religious leaders	• Cannot be shut
• Will contain unbelievers	• Contains only believers
• Is a political institution	• Is an eternal relationship
• Cannot enter until the Mil.	• Can be entered into now
• Can be cast out of	• Is held in by Jesus
• Is corporate/localized	• Is personal/non-local
• No one is in it now	• Many are in it now
• Was offered to Abraham's physical seed: Isaac and Israel	• Is offered to Abraham's spiritual seed by faith – all who believe

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

THE KINGDOM OF HEAVEN The rule of Heaven in the kingdoms on Earth	THE KINGDOM OF THE GOD The rule of The God in the realm of obedience
Described only in Matthew, no where else in the New Testament! Differences observed between kingdoms are important!	Described: only 4 vs. in Mt. (6:33; 12: 28; 21:31,43) and in all N.T. Books except 2 Cor., Phil.,1 Tim., Titus, 1 and 2 Peter, 1,2, and 3 John, and Jude.
1. Earthly realm: ultimate Messianic rule of Christ on Earth.	Heavenly and Spiritual realm. God's Heavenly rule throughout the ages.
2. Introduced by John the Baptizer (Mt. 3:1,2).	Introduced by Lord Jesus Christ (Mt. 6:33).
3. Sphere or realm of profession (real or false); professors - both true and false.	Sphere or realm of possession (only real, no false); only possessors of Eternal Life.
4. Entered by conversion (Mt. 18:3) - a new leaf.	Entered by regeneration (Jn. 3:3,5) - new life.
5. Reformation of the old creature.	A new creature (2 Cor. 5:17). /1:22; 5:23,27-29).
6. Christendom.	Christianity: the True Church (1 Cor. 12:12-28; Eph.^
7. Visible now.	Invisible (Lk. 17:20,21).
8. Tares and bad fish (Mt. 13:24-30; 38-42; 47-50).	No tares nor bad fish (Mk. 4:2-34; Lk. 8:4-18).
9. All kinds of birds in the branches (Mt. 13:32).	Birds under the shadow (Mk. 4:30-32).
10. Man's concept of The God's Will.	Truly know and do the Will of The God (1 Jn. 2:17; Heb. 10:36).
11. Make converts to a religion, 'only believe.'	Obey the Commission: make disciples (Mt. 28:19,20).
12. Lack the oil (anointing) of The Holy Spirit (Mt. 25:1-13).	Have the oil (anointing) of The Spirit (Mt. 25:4).
13. Do not wear a wedding garment (Mt. 22:11-13).	Are wearing a wedding garment (Mt. 22:2-13 cf. Rev. 19:8).
14. Devotion to a church or denomination.	Devotion to Christ.
15. Loyal to a church and denominational doctrine.	Loyal to the Church, the Bride of Christ (Rev. 21:2,9) and doctrine taught in God's Word.
16. Religion containing a Christ by unrighteous	Righteousness of Christ imputed (2 Cor. 5:18-21).
17. In Mystery: a mixed multitude, contains false and true believers, wheat & tares, good & bad fish (Mt. 13: 11,3-52; 25:1-13).	Mystical union with Christ: a pure body containing only the regenerated believers (Lk. 17:20,21; 1 Cor. 15:50; Eph. 5:29,30; 1:4; 5:27; Col. 1:22).
18. Things old and new (Mt. 13:52).	All things new (Mt. 13:52 cf. 2 Cor. 5:17).
19. Temporal and mediatorial - only from John til the end of the Millennium. (1 Cor. 15:24-28). Those still living will inhabit the new Earth (Is. 65:17; 66:22-24; 2 Pet. 3:13; Rev. 21:1).	Eternal - never ends (Dan. 4:3,27; 2 Pet. 1:11; Ps. 145:12,13). - Flesh and blood cannot inherit it (1 Cor. 15:51; Gal. 5:19-21; Eph. 5:5).
20. May teach to break the commandments of the law and remain in the kingdom of Heaven (Mt. 5:19).	His (Christ's) commandments are to be kept (1 Jn. 2:3; 5:2,3; Jn. 15:9,10).
21. The Self-righteous may enter (Mt. 5:20).	Only ones made righteous in Christ enter (Rom. 3: 22,23; 10:10; 2 Cor. 5:21).
22. Rule of the people or the crowd (Rev. 3:14-22).	Rule of the Person of Christ. Lord = absolute, unrestricted authority, full control (Lk. 6:47; Acts 10:36).
23. The violent take it by force (Mt. 11:12).	Cannot be entered by force though attempted (Lk. 16:16).
24. Some Not forgiving (Mt. 18:23-35; 6:15; 18:34,35; Mk. 11:26).	All have a forgiving spirit (Mt. 6:14 Mk.11:25,26; Lk. 6:37; Eph. 4:32).
25. Cling to an old rugged cross but are not crucified to sin, self, and the world.	Cling to the Christ of the cross with Whom they are crucified (Gal. 2:20; 5:24 APT; 6:14).
26. Wear a cross as an emblem but do not demonstrate a cross experience in life.	Their lives reflect a cross experience (Gal. 2:20; 5:24 APT; 6:14).
27. Spend eternity in outer darkness and eternal torment (Mt. 8:11,12; 13:42; Rev. 20:14,15).	Spend eternity in Heaven with the Lord Jesus Christ (1 Thes. 4:16,17).
28. (Unrighteous) unjust ones (1 Cor. 6:9,10; Gal. 5:19-	Only the regenerated shall inherit the Kingdom of

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

21; Eph. 5:5-13) and apostates within (1 Tim. 4:1,2; 2 Thes. 2:2b,3; Rev. 21:8).	God (1 Cor. 6:9,10; Gal. 5:19-21; Eph.5:6-13; Ps. 37:27,29; Mt. 19:27-29; Rev. 21:7).

There are similarities between these two Kingdoms. But the differences noted above make it very clear that there are distinct differences. It behooves each one of us to examine ourselves whether we truly be in the faith (2 Cor. 13:5) lest we become disapproved. Many labor under the misunderstanding that working for the furtherance of the kingdom is in reality furthering the kingdom of profession and thus the kingdom of Heaven and not the Kingdom of The One True God. 12/26/02

Return to the beginning of*: Kingdom of Heaven vs Kingdom of God

Return to*: Ephesians Highlights (by Chapter, Main Menu)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Slides from Powerpoint re: Kingdom of Heaven / God
(Found via: http://slideplayer.com/slide/6438962/)

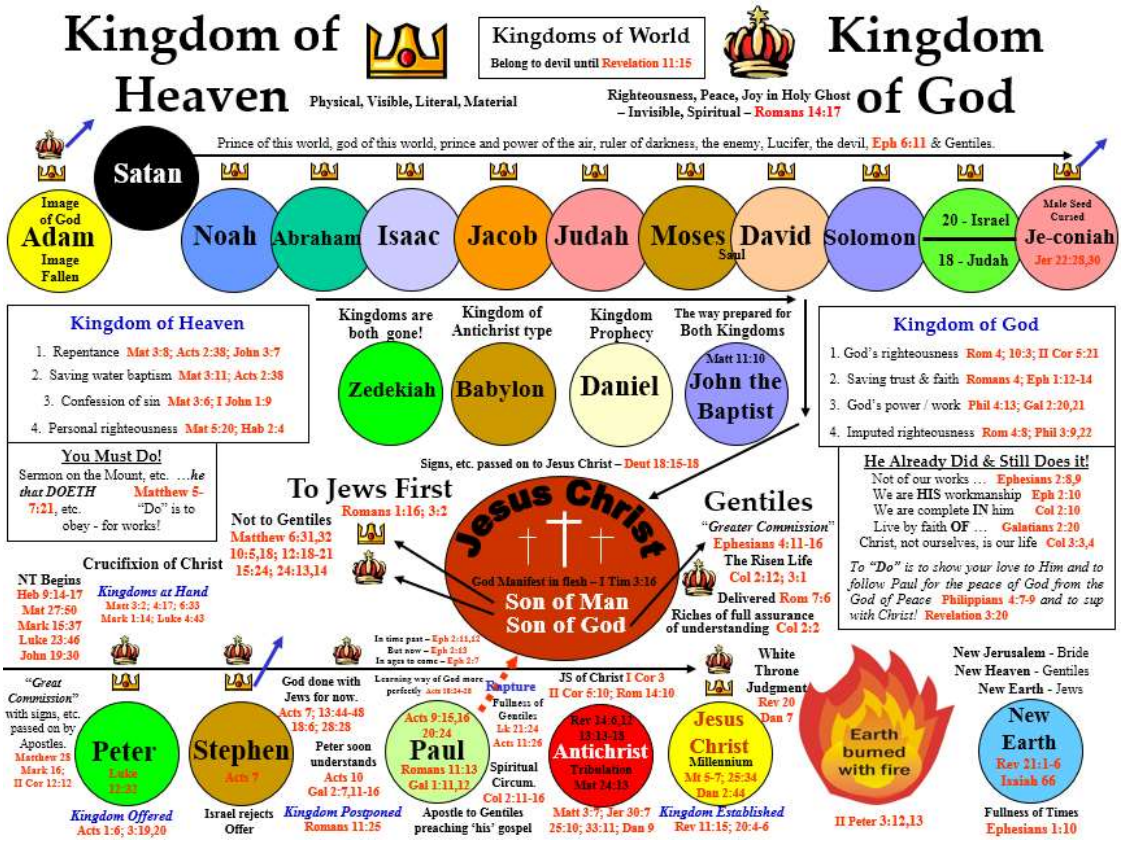
For now, the following chart is not shown in any presentation form – it is all of the chart with one click

Click the next 3 slides to illustrate the details as if the Jews had still accepted Christ as their Messiah after they crucified Him. There would have been no need for Paul nor would the Gentiles have received what they were given through him.

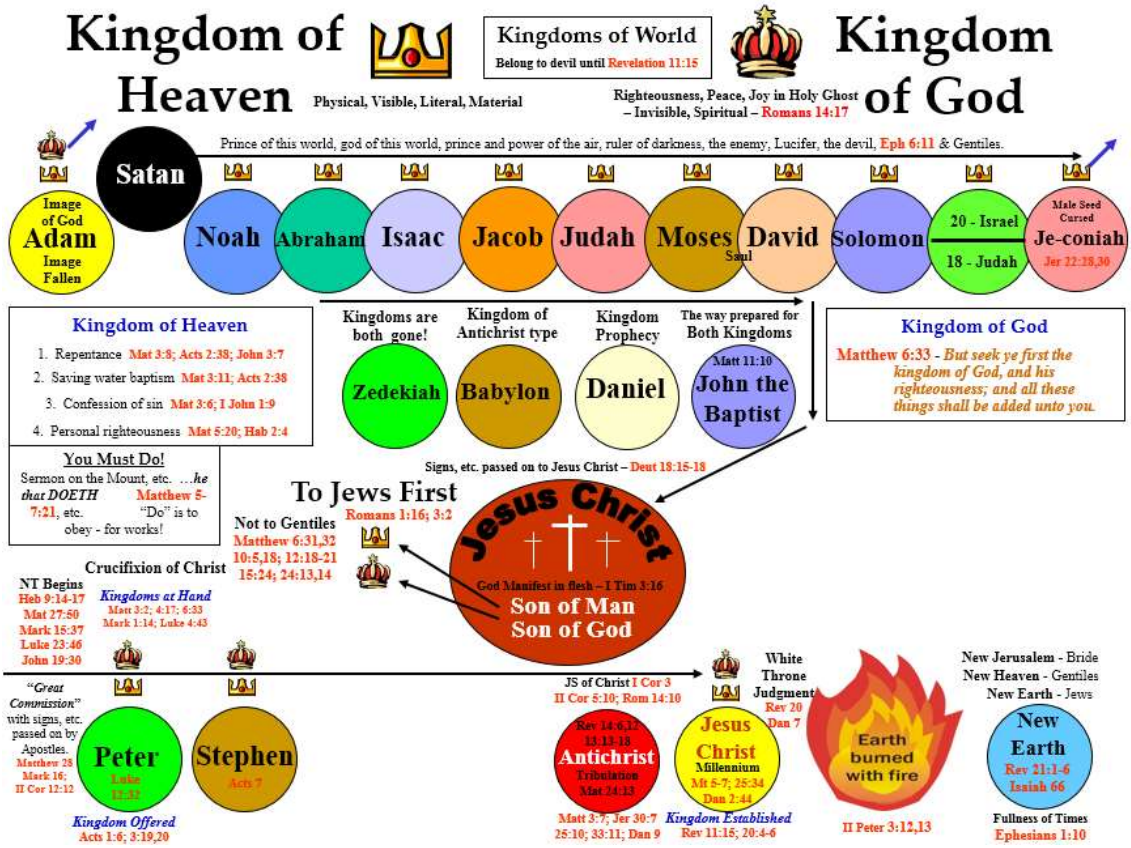
And salvation today would be first to and only through the Jews – see Romans 11

1st Click – All the Chart

2nd click – Without Gentiles (us)



3rd Click – Back to All the Chart – includes us today!



I say then, Have they stumbled that they should fall? God forbid: but rather through their fall salvation is come unto the Gentiles, for to provoke them to jealousy. Romans 11:11

For I would not, brethren, that ye should be ignorant of this mystery, lest ye should be wise in your own conceits; that blindness in part is happened to Israel, until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in. Romans 11:25

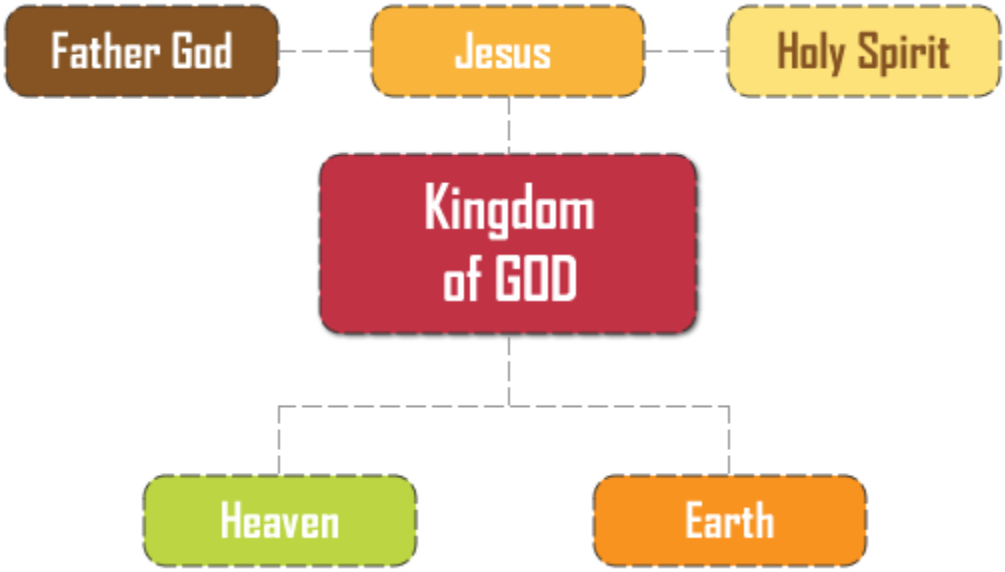
See corresponding images on next three (3) pages…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

See larger view on next page…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



Kingdom of Heaven/Israel – Kingdom of God

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Kingdom of God- An intro

http://goldenbridgeministries.com/kingdom-of-god-an-intro/

What is there in Heaven?

The bible talks about God's Household in Ephesians 2:19

Ephesians 2:19

In this scripture there are 2 categories- one is Saints (who are God's people) and the other is the household of God. Most of us are familiar with Saints, some of us know about Angels, who are members of God's household. There are others in the Household of God which will be discussed later.

You may wonder why you need to know about the things in the supernatural and how it will help you.

The ministry of Angels in the Kingdom of God is to impact the body of Christ in the end times. In these last days you need to work with these angels, as per the leading of the Holy Spirit, to accomplish and fulfill the plan of God for your life and for others.

Return to the beginning of*: Kingdom of Heaven vs Kingdom of God

Return to*: Ephesians Highlights (by Chapter, Main Menu)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Angels are powerful and God will send them to assist us in various circumstances.

Seraphims/Seraphs	•Num 21:6–8, Deut 8:15, Isa 6:2–6, 14:29, 30:6
Cherubims/Cherubs	•Gen 3:24, Exodus 25:17-22, 2 Chr 3:7-14, Eze 10:12–14, 28:14-16, 1 Kings 6:23–28 and Rev 4:6-8
Warrior Angels	•Dan 10:13, 12:1, Rev 12:7
Messenger Angels	•Daniel 8:15-17,Daniel 9:21-23, Luke 1:8-20, Luke 1:26-38
Guardian Angels	•Ps 91:11, Ps 34:7, Heb:1-14, 2 Ths 1:17
Healing Angels	•John 5:4
End Time Angels	•Rev 14:6,7
Angels that carry prayers	•Rev 8:3
Other Angels

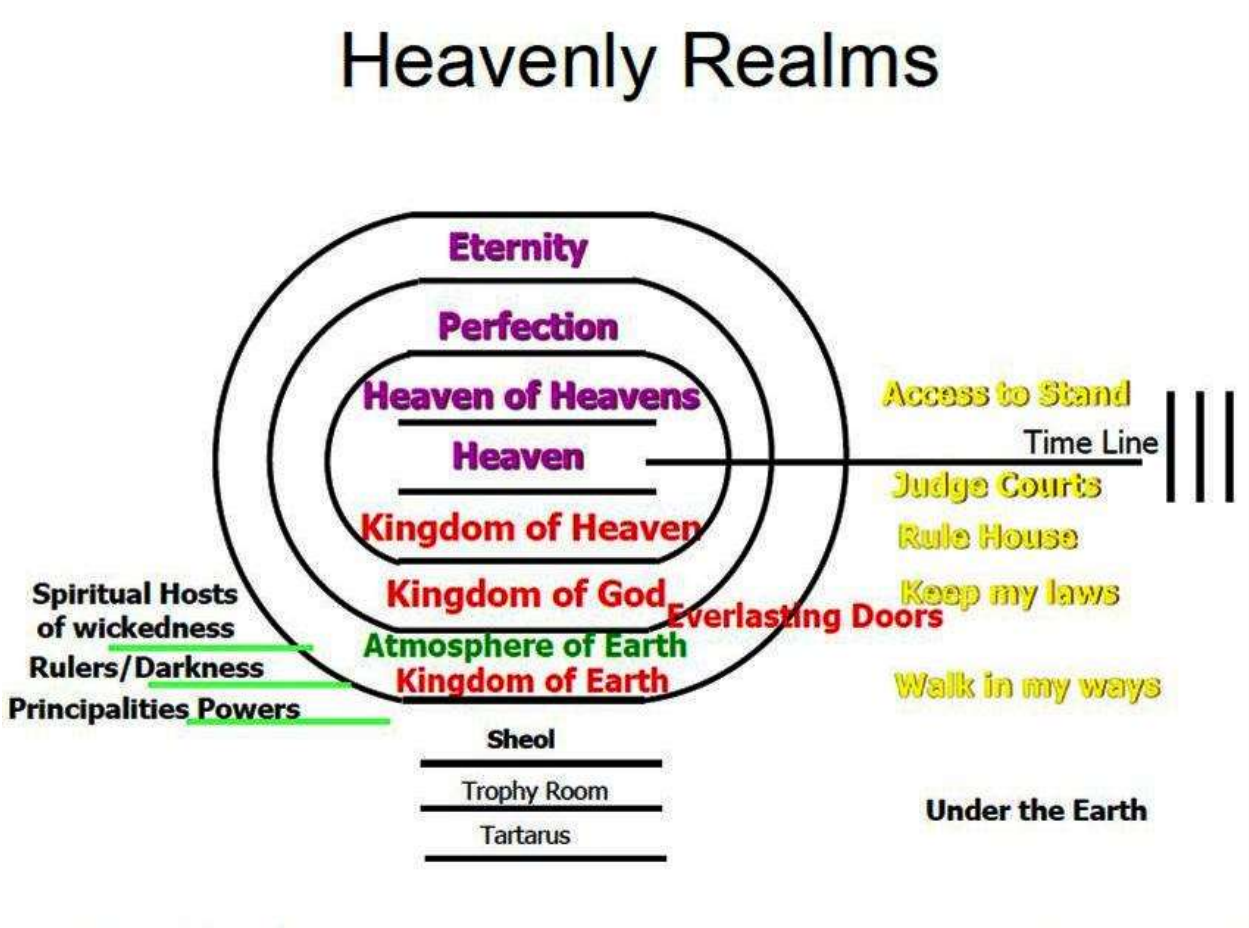
*Kingdom”

This term means "rule," "reign" or "authority" (not normally a king's people or land, as the English term could imply). Jewish people recognized that God rules the universe now, but they prayed for the day when he would rule the world unchallenged by idolatry and disobedience. The coming of this future aspect of God's reign was widely associated with the *Messiah and the *resurrection of the dead. Because Jesus came and will come again, Christians believe that the kingdom has been inaugurated but awaits consummation or completion. "Kingdom of heaven" is another way (Matthew's usual way) of saying "kingdom of God." Jewish people sometimes used "heaven" as a polite way of referring to "God" (as in Lk 15:21, the Prodigal Son: “Father, I have sinned against both heaven and you,…”).

Source: IVP Bible Background Commentary, 2nd Edition

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Two Spiritual Kingdoms
https://www.simplybible.com/f531.htm



Excerpt:

TWO KINGDOMS
KING (Colossians 1:13, Colossians 3:1-17)
Christ	Satan
REALM (John 14:30, John 18:36-37)
Heaven	Earth
CITIZENS (John 3:16-21)
Believers	Faithless
LAW (John 14:23-24, 1John 2:3-5)
Gospel	Lies
CUSTOM (John 1:4-5, Galatians 5:19-23)
Right	Evil
POWER (Ephesians 1:19-21 Ephesians 2:1-7)
Victory	Illusion
DESTINY (Matthew 25:31-34,41,46)
Heaven	Hell

"Choose you this day whom you will serve" (Joshua 24:15).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Heavens and the Earth [Note Vetted yet.]
https://freedomarc.blog/2013/02/22/the-heavens-and-the-earth/

Return to the beginning of*: Kingdom of Heaven vs Kingdom of God

Return to*: Ephesians Highlights (by Chapter, Main Menu)

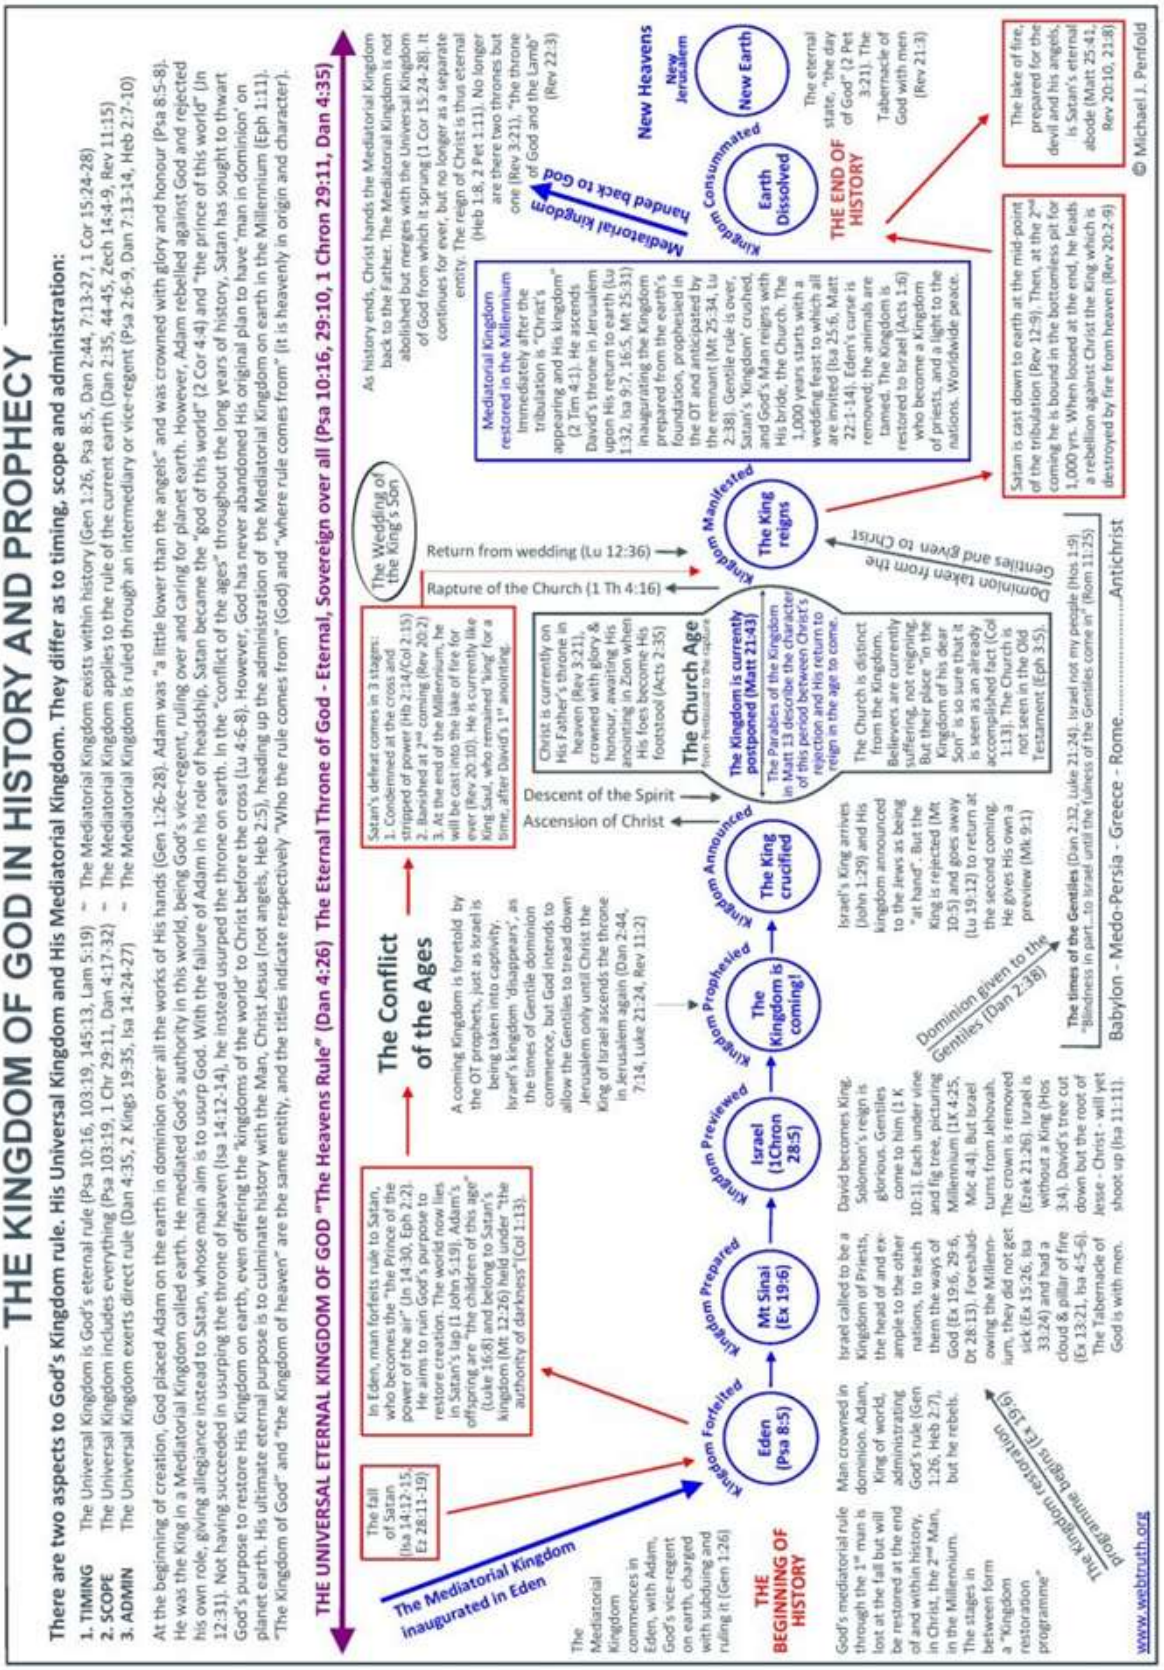
Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Kingdom of God in History and Prophecy

http://www.webtruth.org/wp-content/uploads/2018/06/CHART-The-Kingdom-of-God-MJP-2018-www.webtruth.org_-1024x724.jpg



See larger view on next page…

Return to the beginning of*: Kingdom of Heaven vs Kingdom of God

Return to*: Ephesians Highlights (by Chapter, Main Menu)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Religion vs Kingdom of God

http://www.neillandjennyjakins.org/Article/Documents/The_Kingdom_of_God_Comparison_with_religion.htm

Religion	Kingdom of God
Reaches up to God	Comes down to people
Seeks to take earth to heaven	Seeks to bring heaven to earth
Prepares people to leave earth	Empowers people to dominate, rule, impact and change things on earth
Pre-occupies people until	they see and enter the Kingdom of God
Focuses upward towards heaven	Focuses down upon earth
Seeks to improve life	Establishes new life
Attempts relationship by work	Knows relationship by the new birth from above
Produces servants	Produces sons and daughters. Out of assurance of sonship they serve
Views serving as an obligation	Views serving as a privilege
Serves out of necessity to hopefully win approval of the King	Sons and daughters serve willingly because they are royalty, sons and daughters of the King
Believes Jesus died to make us worthy	Knows Jesus died to prove they are worthy

Return to the beginning of*: Kingdom of Heaven vs Kingdom of God

Return to*: Ephesians Highlights (by Chapter, Main Menu)

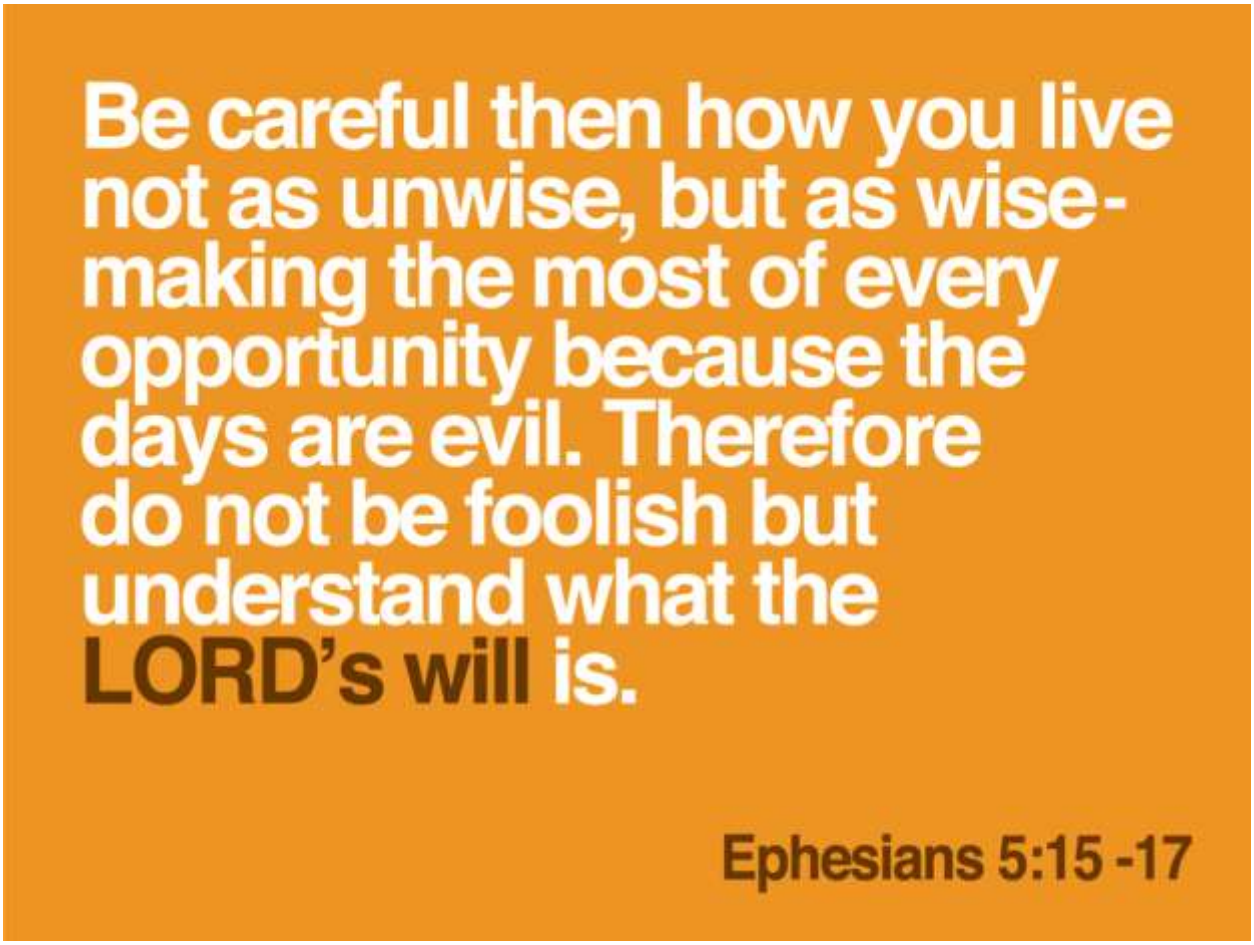
Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Ephesians 5:8

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



https://pastorbillholdridge.wordpress.com/category/ephesians-devotional/

Return to*: Ephesians Highlights (by Chapter, Main Menu)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Return to*: Ephesians Highlights (by Chapter, Main Menu)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Return to*: Ephesians Highlights (by Chapter, Main Menu)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Ephesians 5:21-6:9 New Relationships [NTWEPH Chp 10]

Families, like the marriage relationship, have often been seen in our culture as oppressive and enslaving. We all know of homes where this seems to be the case. But we shouldn't make the mistake of thinking that because some families get it horribly wrong, it isn't possible to get it right, at least some of the time. Just because the garden grows weeds, we shouldn't pave it over with concrete. Just because there are oppressive families, that's no reason to dismiss family life altogether.

On the contrary, marriage and the family were designed as the place of love, security, affirmation and new energy; but they can become a place of fear and bondage. The worst is the corruption of the best.

Read Ep 5:21. Paul addresses all these types of relationships when he writes to the Ephesians. He prefaces his instructions with a general, overriding one. What attitude are we to have toward others?

How does comparing a husband's love for his wife to how the Messiah loved the church remove any danger of the husband abusing the wife's submission?

Paul assumes, as do most cultures, that there are significant differences between men and women, differences that go far beyond mere biological and reproductive function. Their relations and roles must therefore be mutually complementary, rather than identical. Equality in voting rights, and in employment opportunities and remuneration, should not be taken to imply such identity. And, within marriage, the guideline is clear. The husband is to take the lead—though he is to do so fully mindful of the self-sacrificial model which the Messiah has provided. The church became the Messiah's bride, not by being dragged off unwillingly by force, but because he gave himself totally and utterly for her. As soon as "taking the lead" becomes bullying or arrogant, the whole thing collapses.

If this guideline still seems outrageous in today's culture, we should ask ourselves: do our modern societies, in which marriage is often a tragedy or a joke, really offer a better model of how to do it? Does the specter of broken homes littering modern Western culture indicate that we've got it right and can tell the rest of human history how we finally resolved the battle of the sexes? Or does it indicate that we still need to do some rethinking somewhere?

What are some practical ways husbands and wives can live out 5:33?

Paul could no more envisage a world without slavery than we can envisage a world without electricity. The way Paul's world worked was through slaves taking a vital place in most households except those of the very poor. If Paul were writing this letter today, he would address his instructions to employees and employers.

The remarkable thing about Ep 6:1-9, both the commands to children and parents and those to slaves and masters, is that the children and slaves evidently have, in Paul's eyes, what we would call "rights" as well as the parents and masters. When ancient philosophers drew up codes of behavior, as they did from time to time, the weight was always the other way round. Slaves and children were to be obedient, and that was the end of it. Now Paul insists on a mutual responsibility.

The final part of 6:9 says it all: God doesn't have favorites based on position or wealth or ethnic origin.

Choose one role from this study: husband, wife, parent, child, employer, employee. When is it hard for you to follow Paul's instructions for that role, and what would help you change?

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

(See also previous page)

Ephesians 5:24:25

See*: Chiasm: Ephesians 5:22-33

Return to*: Ephesians Highlights (by Chapter, Main Menu)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Marriage roles & responsibilities
https://wheelsms.wordpress.com/category/colossians/page/2/

Within marriage, husbands and wives have distinct roles and responsibilities

	Wives	Husbands
Role	Helper Genesis 2:18	Leader Ephesians 5:23
Responsibility	Submit & Respect Colossians 3:18 Ephesians 5:22-24, 33 1 Peter 3:1-6	Love & Honor Colossians 3:19 Ephesians 5:25-29, 33 1 Peter 3:7
Results	Effective Witness 1 Peter 3:1-2	Effective Prayer Life 1 Peter 3:7
	Demonstrate reality of the gospel to a watching world Ephesians 5:32; 1 Peter 2:11-12

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Ephesians Chapter 6

A Spiritual Warfare Study on Ephesians Chapter Six http://www.amazingbible.org/Documents/Spiritual_Warfare/Ephisians_Chapter_6.htm

Armor of God

Return to*: Ephesians Highlights (by Chapter, Main Menu)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Ephesians 6:10-24 Dressed for the Battle [NTWEPH Chp 11]

For some reason, almost whenever I write about passages dealing with spiritual warfare, I run into problems. One time a workman outside the house drove a nail through a main electricity cable, and I lost half an hour's writing on the word processor. Sometimes domestic crises suddenly arise and distract me. Today the computer jammed completely just when I was about to begin writing. I have come to accept this as normal—and to be grateful that this is all that has happened. So far.

I don't claim that this of itself makes my work anything special. But I have noticed, over the years, that the topic of spiritual warfare is itself the subject of spiritual warfare. It is as though certain hidden forces would much rather we didn't talk about it, or that we swept it under the carpet. As C. S. Lewis says in the introduction to his famous Screwtape Letters, the general public prefers either to ignore the forces of evil altogether or to take an unhealthy interest in everything demonic, which can be just as bad in the long run.

Read Ep 6:10-17. What we have in this passage, and what I believe is required again and again as Christians face the daily and yearly battle for the kingdom, is a sober, realistic assessment both of the struggle we are engaged in and of the weapons at our disposal. What strength do we have for this battle (v. 10)?

What kind of warfare are we engaged in (vv. 11-12)?

> Sometimes the attack will take the frontal form of actual authorities in towns and cities who try to prevent Christians from spreading the message. Sometimes it will take the more oblique form of persuading Christians to invest time and energy in irrelevant side issues, or to become fascinated by distorted teaching. Sometimes it will be simply the age-old temptations of money, sex and power. But in each case what individuals and the whole church must do is, first, to recognize that attacks are coming; second, to learn how to put on the complete armor which God offers; and, third, to stand firm and undismayed.

To win the battles, God has provided a set of armor for us (vv. 13-17). Identify the six pieces of armor and a specific way we might use each today.

In what way is the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God, an offensive weapon in contrast to the other defensive weapons?

The "word" in verse 17 is clearly the same as in 5:26, that is, the word of the gospel through which God accomplishes his powerful, cleansing work in people's hearts and lives.

Read Ep 6:18-20. The final weapon, if it is to be classed as one, is prayer.

What does Paul ask his readers to pray about for him (vv. 19-20)?

> The word Paul uses in verse 20 for "boldly" could almost mean "brazenly." He is settled in his mind that he will go on talking about King Jesus, his victory over death, and his present and future kingdom, no matter what happens. But he knows that unless people are praying for him he won't be able to do it, and it wouldn't mean anything if he did.
>
> So having begun the letter with an extended prayer, and then an extensive report of his own prayers for the young Christians in the area, he now finishes it with the urgent request that they join him in this ministry.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Why do you think Paul emphasizes peace in his closing greeting (vv. 23-24)?

> Peace, here as elsewhere, is bound up closely with love and faith. It comes from the one true God, the Father, and the Lord, King Jesus, and it comes as a sure blessing on those whose love for this same Jesus will outlast death itself. That, after all, is what being a Christian is all about: loving Jesus with an undying love, in response to his dying love for us.

See also*: Ephesians 5:21-6:9 New Relationships [NTWEPH Chp 10]

Return to*: Ephesians Highlights (by Chapter, Main Menu)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

https://reversingverses.com/2013/04/23/ephesians-610/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Return to*: Ephesians Highlights (by Chapter, Main Menu)

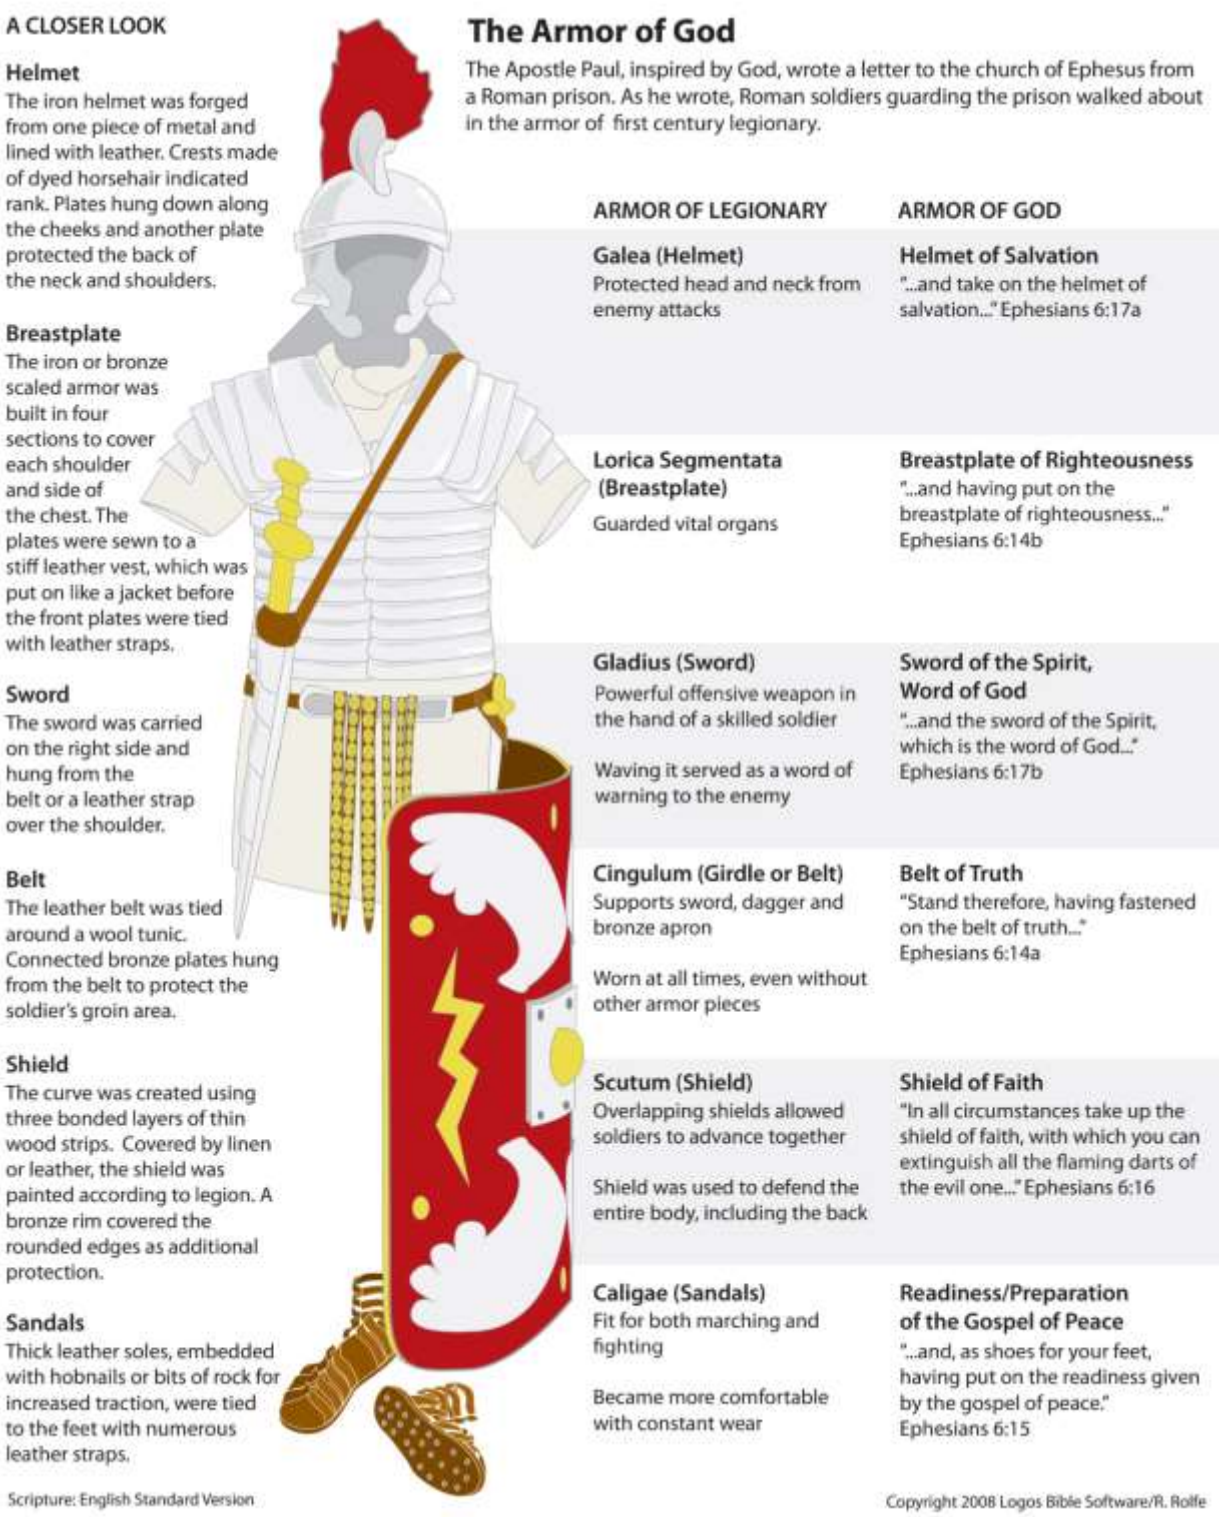
Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

THE ARMOR OF GOD

EPHESIANS 6:10-18

[10] Finally, be strong in the Lord and in his mighty power. [11] Put on the full armor of God, so that you can take your stand against the devil's schemes. [12] For our struggle is not against flesh and blood, but against the rulers, against the authorities, against the powers of this dark world and against the spiritual forces of evil in the heavenly realms. [13] Therefore put on the full armor of God, so that when the day of evil comes, you may be able to stand your ground, and after you have done everything, to stand.



© 2014 Mark Barry | visualunit.me | Please do not republish without permission, but feel free to copy for personal use.
Holy Bible, New International Version®, NIV® Copyright © 1973, 1978, 1984, 2011 by Biblica, Inc.® Used by permission. All rights reserved worldwide.

Armor of God

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Armor of God

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

More on "breastplate"…

Note: One bit of gear that may be useful to know about is the term that Paul uses in Ephesians 6 for "breastplate". Paul's term there is thorax. It is the object of the verb and so is thoraka.

Sometimes a church member or student will object to a picture showing a soldier with segmented armor or chain mail because the English says "breastplate". The term refers generally to armor covering the area from the neck to the waist.[36]

Ref: https://bible.org/article/roman-military-new-testament

Putting on the Breastplate
http://www.heraldmag.org/2009/09jf_2.htm

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Dressed For Battle - Purpose of A Soldier's Armor (Ephesians 6)

https://encouragementsthroughtheword.wordpress.com/2012/01/05/what-is-the-armor-of-god/

http://my.cbn.com/pg/blog/05f0a83d-7d09-4b36-8abb-a978770e3ec6/read/6018882/dressed-for-battle-purpose-of-a-soldiers-armor-ephesians-6

Excerpt:

The Breastplate Of Righteousness

"…with the breastplate of righteousness in place…" Ephesians 6:14
The typical breastplate used by the Roman legions fell into four categories. Some were made out of leather and some out of small interwoven brass rings. High ranking officers sometimes had breastplates produced from a single piece of molded bronze.

The design pictured here uses overlapping Bronze scales. The bronze scale armor was in two pieces and was sewn to a short leather vest. The two halves were tied together with short strips of leather in the back and in the front. Bronze, although not the strongest metal known in the first century, had the advantage of being lightweight.

ROMAN LEGIONARY

In this era, when hand–to–hand combat was almost always necessary, soldiers had to balance protection with ease of movement. The discomfort of the breastplate around the neck was usually softened by a woolen scarf.

Application for us: Jesus Is Our Righteousness
The function of the breastplate was simple which was to protect the soldier's vital organs. In close hand–to–hand combat the breastplate was essential for survival. No trained Roman soldier would venture into battle without it. If we start to believe that our own righteousness, effort, or good works can make us worthy of God's protection, the advantage quickly changes to benefit our enemy. Our righteousness is worthless in the battle. We need to get our eyes off of ourselves and back on the provision of the cross and the righteousness that is found in our relationship with Jesus.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

https://redeeminggod.com/sermons/ephesians/ephesians-6_10/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Ephesians 6:18

And pray in the Spirit on all occasions with all kinds of prayers and requests. With this in mind, be alert and always keep on praying * for all the saints. [NIV]

Return to*: Ephesians Highlights (by Chapter, Main Menu)

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

[END Ephesians Section]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

James (Apostle and the Book)

Why include James in a compendium that is mainly centered around the writings of Paul?

Book of James
https://www.gotquestions.org/Book-of-James.html

Book of James – Introduction
http://www.fbccs.org/resources/studyguides/james_sg00.htm

Excerpt:

"Don't study James!"

That's what they told me when I was a new Christian. "It's too hard, it's too confusing, there's not enough theology." Well, I know they had good intentions; they wanted me to get "grounded" in the basics. But I plunged in like a fool anyway. And I found out that, although it's got a few difficult spots, it's not that hard to understand. Mostly it's just too convicting!

James is one of those books we should make a steady diet of; we should probably read it once in between all the others books we read, Bible or otherwise. James, Jesus' younger brother, is the older brother we always wish we had, the mentor we all really want, the guy who's been through it. He's not afraid to smack us around and call us "dear brother" at the same time. "James", says Doug Webster in Finding Spiritual Direction (IVP), "is the kind of spiritual director we need."

I like the way Webster describes the changes that James wants to see in us: "from self-pity to humility, from performance to worship, from favoritism to friendship, from opinion to truth, from conflict to peace." James is a book for those who are serious about the Christian life. Those who just like to think about spiritual things, to have nice religious feelings, ought to steer clear. James writes like a man on borrowed time; he is impatient with anything short of total candor. But James is no pious finger-pointer. He has a pastor's heart, and his words are strong like those of a friend who cares. He is acquainted with suffering and hardship. He knows that life is difficult.

I hope you'll take some time out to meditate on the letter of James, to add some personal application to what you're doing... Maybe we'll all see some changes.

This was found during research of James, just left here as place holder to be vetted later:
https://theotherjournal.com/category/articles/praxis/page/3/

https://theotherjournal.com/category/articles/praxis/

(Not sure if "praxis" is used just to emphasis Christian action/application or also indicates Socialist enspired agenda.)

BTW, see "Christian Praxis"

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

References to Nature in the Book of James

1:6	"wave of the sea"
1:6	"tossed by the wind"
1:10	"wild flower"
1:11	"sun . . . with scorching heat"
1:11	"the plant . . . blossom falls"
1:17	"the heavenly lights"
1:17	"shifting shadows"
1:18	"firstfruits"
3:3	"bits into the mouths of horses"
3:4	"ships . . . driven by strong winds"
3:5	"a great forest is set on fire by a small spark"
3:6	"a fire"
3:7	"animals, birds, reptiles, and creatures of the sea"
3:8	"deadly poison"
3:11	"fresh water and salt water"
3:12	"can a fig tree bear olives, or a grapevine bear figs?"
3:18	"sow in peace [and] raise a harvest of righteousness"
4:14	"you are a mist"
5:2	"moths have eaten your clothes"
5:3	"gold and silver are corroded"
5:4	"workmen who mowed your fields"
5:4	"the cries of the harvesters"
5:5	"fattened yourselves in the day of slaughter"
5:7	"the farmer waits for the . . . crop"
5:7	"how patient he is for the fall and spring rains"
5:14	"anoint him with oil"
5:17	"prayed . . . that it would not rain"
5:17	"it did not rain on the land"
5:18	"the heavens gave rain"
5:18	"the earth produced its crops"

James' References to Jesus' Sermon on the Mount

James	Sermon on the Mount
1:2	Matthew 5:10-12
1:4	5:48
1:5; 5:15	7:7-12
1:9	5:3
1:20	5:22
2:13	5:7; 6:14-15
2:14-16	7:21-23
3:17-18	5:9
4:4	6:24
4:10	5:3-5
4:11	7:1-2
5:2	6:19
5:10	5:12
5:12	5:33-37

charts from The Bible Knowledge Commentary

James Summary

http://biblehub.com/summary/james/1.htm

Excerpt:

The book of James is a General Epistle (Apostolic Letter). James the half-brother of Jesus wrote it approximately 48-49 A.D. It was likely the first New Testament book (letter) to be written. The key personalities of this book are James and Persecuted Christians. James wrote this book to Jewish believers to encourage them to endure and live bold Christian lives. James is a book about practical Christian living that reflects a genuine faith that transforms lives. In many ways, it is similar to the OT book of Proverbs.

- In chapter 1, James teaches believers to test their faith and "prove yourselves doers of the word" (1:22). James encourages believers to put their faith into action, and to be servants of Jesus Christ.

- Chapters 2-3, James describes the relationship between faith and works. He teaches that a person of faith without works demonstrates useless faith. What good is a person's faith if they don't present it to the world? A believer's good works are evidence of their faith in Jesus Christ. He also teaches that everyone is a sinner and that if one of the 10 Commandments are broken, than that person is guilty of breaking every one of them, "For whoever keeps the whole law and yet stumbles in one point, he has become guilty of all" (2:10).

- In Chapters 4-5, James gives wise instruction to believers. He said, "Submit to God, resist the devil and he will flee from you" (4:7). A faithful believer will desire to follow hard after God in service, obedience, and prayer. In the last chapter James stresses the weight and magnitude of prayer for every believer. He uses the word "Prayer" 7 times, signifying its importance. In the final verse of his book James expresses the magnitude of living faith in action saying:

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

"My brethren, if any among you strays from the truth and one turns him back, let him know that he who turns a sinner from the error of his way will save his soul from death and will cover a multitude of sins." (5:19-20).

James
https://bible.org/book/James

(List of numerous Bible.org articles related to James)

Book of James Bible Study http://www.thoughts-about-god.com/biblestudies/nb_james.htm

See also*: James vs Paul

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

James (Insight for Living – Chuch Swindoll)

https://www.insight.org/resources/bible/the-general-epistles/james

JAMES

Faith	When stretched, it doesn't break.	When pressed, it doesn't fail.	When expressed, it doesn't explode.	When distressed, it doesn't panic.
Deeds	Authentic stability	Authentic love	Authentic control and humility	Authentic patience
	Greeting Trials Temptation Response to Scripture	Partiality and prejudice Indifference and mere intellectualism Obedience and action	The tongue The heart The will	Money matters Sickness Carnality and correction
	CHAPTER 1	CHAPTER 2	CHAPTERS 3–4	CHAPTER 5
Background	The difficulties of life caused the scattered saints to drift spiritually, leading to all forms of problems—unbridled speech, wrong attitudes, doubt, strife, carnality, shallow faith.
Characteristics	"The Proverbs of the New Testament," James contains many practical, straightforward exhortations. Emphasis is on importance of balancing right belief with right behavior. The book has many Old Testament word pictures and references.
Theme	Real faith produces authentic deeds.
Key Verse	2:17
Christ in James	Jesus is the glorious Lord, who inspires true faith and authentic works (2:1, 14–26).

Copyright © 1983, 1998, 2010 by Charles R. Swindoll, Inc. All rights reserved worldwide.

See also*: James vs Paul

For more details about the book of James in the NT and comparision of the messages in James to Jesus and to Paul, see my other separate references resource*:

The Complete Sayings of Jesus – NKJV with Appendix

(Note: NKJV is primary text to make reading easier, except when it varies significantly from the original KJV or a different translation text is clearer and/or deemed more accurate.)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Rome, Romans and the Roman Empire

The Roman Empire During the Time of Jesus (Background of Luke's Gospel)
https://theologycurator.com/roman-empire-during-time-jesus/ [Recommended]

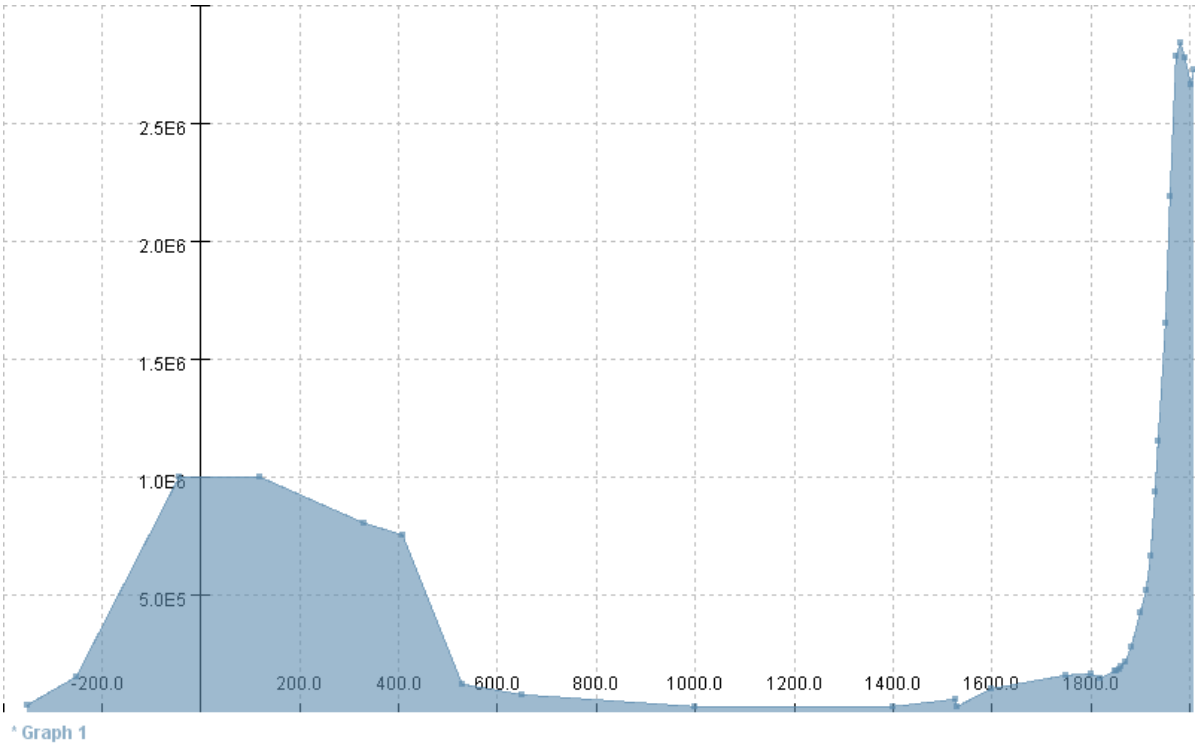
Roman Government During the Republic

Senate	Assembly of Centuries	Assembly of Tribes
330 men . Controlled public funds and determined foreign policy. Sometimes acted as a court. In times of emergency could declare a dictator.	Declared war and peace Elected the magistrates or public officials who oversaw the daily affairs of government	35 tribes 4 elected 10 officials called tribunes. Could veto any acts they felt were contrary to the public interest

Public Officials:

	Numbers	Duties
Consuls	2 elected for one year terms	Chief executives who ran the government. Also army commanders could veto acts of the other governed with the advice of the Senate
Praetors	many throughout the Republic	Served as military commanders and judges. made most of the laws.
Censors	many throughout the Republic	Registered people by their wealth – census [like an ancient Roman IRS]

Wikipedia: History of Rome
https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/History_of_Rome



Timeline of Roman Empire
http://www.scaruffi.com/politics/romans.html

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Demography of the Roman Empire
https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Demography_of_the_Roman_Empire

Graph of the Population of Rome Through History

Posted: October 22, 2009

Source: http://davidgalbraith.org/trivia/graph-of-the-population-of-rome-through-history/2189/

How was ancient Rome able to support a population of 1 million?
https://www.reddit.com/r/AskHistorians/comments/1z8xck/how_was_ancient_rome_able_to_support_a_population/

Maps, Charts, Graphs & Reconstructions of Roman History
https://www.pinterest.com/bh0008/maps-charts-graphs-reconstructions-of-roman-histor/

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Table of Roman and Greek Gods and Godesses

http://www.katehovey.com/chart.html (short) https://www.thoughtco.com/roman-equivalents-of-greek-gods-4067799 (longer)

https://www.thoughtco.com/roman-gods-and-goddesses-120647 (full, not in table)

The Roman Army

http://www.roman-empire.net/army/army.html

The Roman Military in the New Testament [Recommended]

https://bible.org/article/roman-military-new-testament

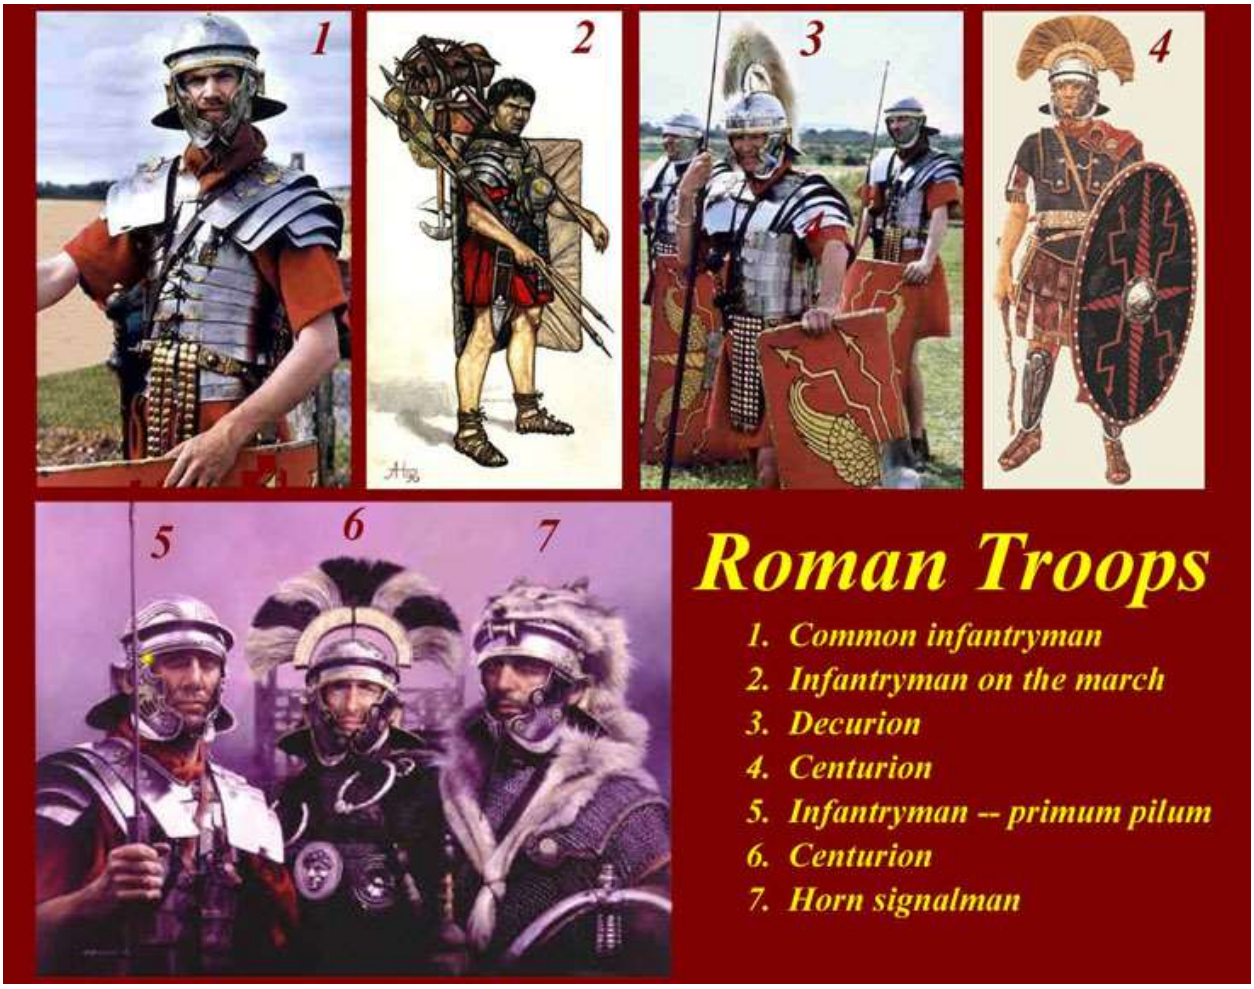
Excerpt:

Rome and her empire had a profound effect on New Testament. That effect was far more than most people realize. Much of the very nature of the society in which the events take place is because of the presence and governance of Rome. Paul and his ministry were profoundly affected by Rome and the Roman military.

…Paul made strong and detailed use of the Roman soldier in his Epistle to the Ephesians. We will have looked at much of what Paul will cite as example by the time we reach it.

We tend to view Rome and her military in a negative light, but the writers of the New Testament saw them in a surprisingly different light. The gospel writers report brutal and violent behavior on the part of the Romans (and others), but they do so in a matter of fact fashion.

They lived in a brutal time. Infant mortality was high. The frequency of mothers dying in childbirth was high. Both of these hard things had always been true. Since ancient times, some plants had been known for antibiotic qualities; but they were never much of a factor. World War I was fought essentially without antibiotics. Penicillin was not isolated until 1928. It would not be until the early days of World War II that Penicillin was available in practical quantities. Up until that time a significant cut or puncture into the body was likely to be fatal. In a world of bladed weapons, and agriculture with bladed tools, such wounds were commonplace. Life was cheap. Violent corporal and capital punishment had been a reality for the Jewish people for centuries before the arrival of Rome. It would be more centuries before prison, as a means of punishment, was introduced into society.



We tend to see past times, including New Testament times, through the lens of our own time. That is human nature. Similarly, the New Testament writers saw the New Testament world through the lens of their own time. The ultimate author of the New Testament was the Holy Spirit. Nevertheless, He chose to write through human agents. This works out well since His audience is human.

Roman Military Equipment

http://www.romancoins.info/MilitaryEquipment.html

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Roman Troops

Source: http://www.mmdtkw.org/09-01RomanTroops.jpg

Roman military ranks. A normal enlistment was for 20 years, but troops might be released and settled into military "colonies"after a successful war. Medical treatment for the military was second only to that available to gladiators. Military doctors were, as could be expected, Rome's most skilled surgeons.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Source: http://www.mmdtkw.org/ALRIAncRomUnit9Slides.html

Roman Empire in 100 AD: A map showing the Roman Empire at its largest. "Daily life", of course, varied by social class, location and time period. We do not live the way our ancestors lived in the 10th century, so we could not expect ancient Rome's lifestyle to be static over its over its history of more than 1000 years. But the Romans had a greater respect for the past than we do, so practices and institutions did last longer.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Roman Cult of Emporer Worship

The Roman Cult of Emperor Worship

https://readingacts.com/2010/04/02/the-roman-cult-of-emperor-worship/

Excerpt:

Many scholars see worship of the emperor as the background for the worship of the Beast in Revelation 13:4, 15-16; 14:9-11, 15:2, 16:2, 19:20, 20:4. If this is true, then we need to know when emperor worship became an empire-wide phenomenon. The standard view of Emperor worship found in many popular commentaries comes from William Ramsay, writing at the turn of the 20th century:

"…in no part of the world was there such fervent and sincere loyalty to the emperors as in Asia. Augustus had been a saviour to the Asian peoples, and they deified him as the Saviour of mankind, and worshiped him with the most whole-hearted devotion as the 'present deity'." W. Ramsay, The Letters to the Seven Churches (New York: Hodder & Stoughton, 1909) 115.

Julius Caesar allowed himself to be worshiped as a god, but his successor Augustus only allowed emperor worship outside of the city of Rome. Augustus is known in some inscriptions as CAESAR DIVI FILIUS, Son of God, that is, Son of eternal Caesar. Oaths were taken on the divine spirit of the emperor. His image was publicly adored. Worship of the image was a regular military duty. Caligula was the first emperor to demand to be worshiped, he demanded that citizens everywhere bow to his statue. Nero also claimed to be divine, although in neither case was there a requirement to worship the emperor. As Augustus had been Zeus incarnate, so Nero was Apollo incarnate. Even Seneca called him as the long-awaited savior of the world.

Domitian took the title "lord and god" and ordered people to confess he was "lord and god" as a test of loyalty (Suetonius, The Lives of the Caesars, Book 8: Domitian 13). Marital says the "beasts in the arena" hailed him as a god. While this is clearly legendary, it does reflect a contemporary writer implying divine honors for Domitian. Dio Cassius (Roman History 67.14)refers to Domition exiling a Flavius Clemens and his wife, Flavia Domitilla for "atheism." Atheism is the charge made against those who drifted into "things Jewish." Dio Chrysostom reported that Domitan liked to "be flattered" as "master and god." Those who refused to flatter him in this way risked trouble. (In Oratorio 45:1, see also First Discourse on Kingship, 1.14-15).

How prevalent was the imperial cult in Asia Minor? Of the seven cities mentioned in Revelation 2-3, five have imperial priests and altars (all but Philadelphia and Laodica) and six have imperial temples (all but Thyatira). At Pergamum an imperial temple was established as early as 28 B.C. The city was so central to the imperial cult that Revelation describes this city as having the "throne of Satan." In short, a Christian in Asia Minor could not avoid the Imperial Cult.

It was during the reign of Domitian when the imperial cult became a factor in unifying the empire in Asia Minor. The provincial cult allowed the Roman network of social obligations to be extended to virtually the whole population. If you lived within the empire, then you were a social client of the Emperor and owed him supreme allegiance. It is not hard to see, therefore, the struggle which Christians in the late first century would have showing allegiance to Rome – if that allegiance required worship of the Emperor, then the Christian must refuse or compromise their faith.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Wikipedia: Imperial Cult of Ancient Rome

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Imperial_cult_of_ancient_Rome

Excerpt:

The Imperial cult of ancient Rome identified emperors and some members of their families with the divinely sanctioned authority (auctoritas) of the Roman State. Its framework was formulated during the early Principate of Augustus, and was rapidly established throughout the Empire and its provinces, with marked local variations in its reception and expression.

The Maison Carrée in Nîmes, one of the best-preserved Roman temples. It is a mid-sized Augustan provincial temple of the Imperial cult.

Augustus's reforms transformed Rome's Republican system of government to a de facto monarchy, couched in traditional Roman practices and Republican values. The princeps (later known as Emperor) was expected to balance the interests of the Roman military, Senate and people, and to maintain peace, security and prosperity throughout an ethnically diverse empire. The official offer of cultus to a living emperor acknowledged his office and rule as divinely approved and constitutional: his Principate should therefore demonstrate pious respect for traditional Republican deities and mores.

A deceased emperor held worthy of the honor could be voted a state divinity (divus, plural divi) by the Senate and elevated as such in an act of apotheosis. The granting of apotheosis served religious, political and moral judgment on Imperial rulers and allowed living Emperors to associate themselves with a well-regarded lineage of Imperial divi from which unpopular or unworthy predecessors were excluded. This proved a useful instrument to Vespasian in his establishment of the Flavian Imperial Dynasty following the death of Nero and civil war, and to Septimius in his consolidation of the Severan dynasty after the assassination of Commodus. In the development of Imperial rule from Principate to Dominate, the role of the Senate was increasingly marginalised and military loyalty became the key to Imperial authority.

The Imperial cult was inseparable from that of Rome's official deities, whose cult was essential to Rome's survival and whose neglect was therefore treasonous. Traditional cult was a focus of Imperial revivalist legislation under Decius and Diocletian. Christian apologists and martyrologists saw the cult of the Emperor as a particularly offensive instrument of pagan impiety and persecution. It therefore became a focus of theological and political debate during the ascendancy of Christianity under Constantine I. The emperor Julian failed to reverse the declining support for Rome's official religious practices: Theodosius I adopted Christianity as Rome's state religion. Rome's traditional gods and Imperial cult were officially abandoned. However, many of the rites, practices and status distinctions that characterized the cult to emperors were perpetuated in the theology and politics of the Christianized Empire.

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Cult of Caesar

https://www.jesusfamilytomb.com/alternative_theories/cult_of_Caesar.html

Excerpt:

The Cult of Caesar

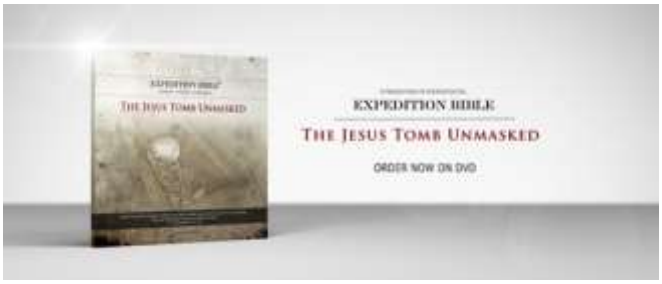
In ancient Rome, the phenomenon known as the cult of Caesar arose from the worship of Roman emperors. A cornerstone of ancient Roman culture, the emperors of ancient Rome were considered gods across the Empire. Julius Caesar represents the epitome of the deification of ancient Roman emperors.

Divus Iulius

Caesar was awarded the title of a god upon his return from the successful battle in Spain, during which the Pompeians were crushed. Upon this victory, Caesar was elected dictator for life and made Roman consul for a period of ten years; he was declared to be a sacred being.

This produced the culture of Divus Iulius, that is, the deified Caesar. The term Iulius refers to the month of July, which was named in honor of Caesar's birth upon his deification. Divus Iulius was made a god that was equivalent in power to the highest god Jupiter and he was decreed god of the Roman empire. Temples and statues were built in his honor throughout Rome.

In 44 BCE, Caesar declared himself dictator for life and allowed a statue of himself to be built with the inscription, Deo Invicto, meaning "to the unconquered god". The statue became a symbol of his authority.



Caesar's power increased after his death. He was named Dictator Perpetuo, giving the deceased emperor jurisdiction over the earthly world from the other realm. Pillars and statues were erected in his honor and the cult of Caesar diffused throughout the Empire, reaching cities such as Alexandria.

In 29 BCE, the temple of Julius Caesar (Aedes Divus Iulius was commissioned in honor of the late emperor. The temple was constructed in the Italian style and featured two Corinthian columns. The temple, of which only the front podium and circular altar remain today, also included a speaker's platform.

Some individuals associate the chevron with the cult of Caesar and in fact, the symbol was representative of emperor worship in ancient Rome. It has been linked to the temple of Augustus, specifically to the roofline and shield symbol. The same symbol appeared on coins bearing the image of Herod Philip II.

The cult of the emperor of ancient Rome only waned with the rule of the emperor Constantine, who rose to power in the year 324 CE. Constantine led to a rise in the popularity of Christianity among the Roman Empire, and also legalized Christianity in 313 CE with the Edict of Milan.

Regarding the above link….

'Jesus Family Tomb' debunked in this video.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The History of The Roman Imperial Cult

http://www.romanimperialcult.org/history.html

Excerpt:

Although the worship of divine rulers had been common in many lands, including Egypt and Persia, the Imperial Cult in Rome did not begin until the Deification of Julius Caesar after his death in 42 BC. Caesar had accomplished so much during his lifetime it was natural to see him as having the status of a divine Hero. The Emperor Augustus during his long and successful reign continued that tradition, to the point where future Emperors took the title of Caesar, and Augustus.

The success of Rome was understood as being mandated by the Gods, and the Emperor became the representative of the Gods on earth. It had long been the tradition to honor the heads of one's family at the household altar, and the reverence for the Emperor and literally became the extention of that practice. This "new" Roman religious practice had already been in place in most of the lands that were now part of the Empire, so reverence for the Emperor became a natural part of public religion.

Was the Emperor literally seen as a God? Only partially. The Imperial cult recognized that the Emperor was a mortal, subject to mortal faults and weakness, and not holding the same powers as the traditional Gods, the Dii Immortales. Instead the Emperor was seen to be ruling by the will of the Gods, and expected to manifest the Pax Deorum, or Peace of the Gods as much as possible in the Roman world.

Honor to the Emperor was not falsely saying a man was a God, instead it was honoring the divine in the person who ruled the world by the favor of the Gods. The Imperial Cult became the way for all Romans to honor, empower, and provide divine favor for the Emperor and the Empire itself. All Roman Emperors were considered to take part in divine essence upon taking the throne, but not all received the same level of worship. Caesar and Augustus continued to have their own individual priesthoods and temples throughout the Roman period. Later Emperors were honored alongside them and did not necessarily receive their own individual temples and priesthood.

The Romans believed that the Imperial Cult provided divine favor for the Emperor and his rule, and ensured that the Gods would bless all Rome. The Emperor was mentioned in most official rites and rituals in addition to receiving more direct worship in the Imperial temples. This ritual practice in essence provided "constant prayer for good rulership and the success of Roman civilization," which was a positive thing for all Romans!

The Imperial Cult continued into the Byzantine era; the last Emperor to receive divine honors was the Emperor Anastasius, in 518 AD. After this time this spiritual impulse was manifested through the concept of "divine right of kings" which if anything was a step backward. No longer could a person make offering for the leader of the State to follow the proper path of the Gods, but instead had to believe that what the ruler did was "God's will." This removal of active participation in the spirituality of Empire no doubt was a huge loss of positive power for what remained of the Roman legacy.

The last Roman Emperor recorded to have received ancient traditional offering was the Emperor Julian, who reigned as Caesar of the West from 353-361 AD, and as Augustus of all the Roman world from 361 - 363 AD. Julian was the last publicly Pagan Emperor, and upon his death the Philosopher Libanius wrote: "many have made prayers and offerings to the Divine Julian, and those prayers have not gone unanswered." The last Emperor to probably receive any traditional worship was the Western Emperor

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Anthemius, (462-467 AD) who was privately Pagan and who presided over a circle of traditionally minded nobles who hoped yet to reestablish the ancient faiths.

The final Emperor to receive Divine Apotheosis by the Roman Senate was the Emperor Anastasius I, who ruled the Eastern Roman Empire from 491 to 518 AD. Succeeding Byzantine Christian Emperors, were honored as part of ritual by the Orthodox church, but without the divine status of previous centuries.

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

N.T. Wright: Paul's Gospel and Caesar's Empire (1998)

http://ntwrightpage.com/1998/01/01/pauls-gospel-and-caesars-empire/

Excerpt:

If Paul's answer to Caesar is the empire of Jesus, what is an empire under the rule of this new lord? How does Paul's gospel line up with Caesar's empire?

Just over a year ago, a book was published which raised these questions in a fresh and stimulating way. The book is called Paul and Empire: Religion and Power in Roman Imperial Society. It is edited by Richard Horlsey and published by Trinity Press International 2 There is much that I could say about this book, but one thesis from it stands out starkly. The evidence now available, including that from epigraphy and archaeology, shows that the cult of Caesar was not simply one new religion among many in the Roman world. Already by Paul's time it had become the dominant cult in a large part of the Empire, certainly in the parts where Paul was active, and was the means whereby the Romans managed to control and govern such huge areas as came under their sway. Who needs armies when they have worship?

…

Five Concluding Reflections

First, Paul's critique of Caesar's empire was firmly grounded in his Jewish heritage. Discovering the pagan history-of-religions parallels to Paul does not mean suggesting that Paul did not remain a thoroughly Jewish thinker. What he does with the Caesar-cult stems directly from what Isaiah does with the Babylonian cult, which in turn looks back to Deuteronomy's rejection of all paganism in favour of the stern monotheism of the creator and covenant god. The rediscovery in our day of the pagan context and target of Paul's thinking should not mean for one minute a going back on the great gain of the last generation, the rediscovery that Paul was and remained a thoroughly Jewish thinker.

Second, the Jewish thinking that formed the centre and driving force of his rejection of Caesar's empire was expressed in Paul's very high Christology. Philippians 3.20f. is based firmly on 2.5-11, which poetically articulates a view of Jesus which claims for him nothing less than equality with, and identity with, the one God of Jewish monotheism. In this passage and several others, Paul marks the beginning of the process that led to what we know as trinitarian theology, which insists on Jewish-style monotheism against pagan polytheism but insists on a threefoldness within this one God. There has been a fashion in some circles for regarding later trinitarianism as one sign of the process whereby, so it is said, the church climbed down from its earlier political confrontation with the empire and arrived at a compromise, an accommodation. Whatever the truth of that, it is important to realise that, in Paul, opposition to Caesar and adherence to a very high, very Jewish Christology were part of the same thing. Jesus was Lord—Kyrios, with all its Septuagintal overtones—and Caesar was not.

Third, neither the recognition that Paul's main target was paganism, and the Caesar-cult in particular, nor the equal recognition that he remained a throughly Jewish thinker, should blind us for a moment to the fact that Paul still expressed a thorough critique of non-messianic Judaism. Paul remains at this point on the map of second-temple Judaism: believing that God had acted to remodel the covenant people necessarily entailed believing that those who refused to join this remodelled people were missing out on God's eschatological purpose. As post-holocaust thinkers we will of course be careful how we say all this. As historians of the first century, we will recognise that it must be said. As Pauline theologians we will recognise that it contains no shadow, no hint, of anything that can be called anti-Judaism, still less anti-semitism.

Fourth, the argument I have mounted indicates clearly enough that whatever Paul was heralding as he went around the Mediterranean world, our post-enlightenment category of "religion" is far too restricted to handle it. Since that category was designed to exclude politics, among other things, and since Paul's proclamation clearly carried a political message at its heart, not merely as one "implication" among many, we should refuse to allow the study of Paul to be confined within what is normally thought of as the history of religion. This has large-scale implications for the organisation of our disciplines. Perhaps Paul should be taught just as much in the politics departments of our universities as in the religion departments.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Fifth, and in conclusion: if Paul's answer to Caesar's empire is the empire of Jesus, what does that say about this new empire, living under the rule of its new lord? It implies a high and strong ecclesiology, in which the scattered and often muddled cells of women, men and children loyal to Jesus as Lord form colonial outposts of the empire that is to be: subversive little groups when seen from Caesar's point of view, but when seen Jewishly an advance foretaste of the time when the earth shall be filled with the glory of the God of Abraham and the nations will join Israel in singing God's praises. From this point of view, therefore, this counter-empire can never be merely critical, never merely subversive. It claims to be the reality of which Caesar's empire is the parody; it claims to be modelling the genuine humanness, not least the justice and peace, and the unity across traditional racial and cultural barriers, of which Caesar's empire boasted. If this claim is not to collapse once more into dualism, into a rejection of every human aspiration and value, it will be apparent that there will be a large degree of overlap. "Shun what is evil; cling to what is good." There will be affirmation as well as critique, collaboration as well as critique. To collaborate without compromise, to criticise without dualism—this is the delicate path that Jesus' counter-empire had to learn to tread. On the day I sat down to draft this paper, an editorial came to my eye which nicely summed up the first of these: what is desired is "a model for churches and theologians to contribute to the ordering of society, without being Christianly imperialistic". 23 Equally, we need a model for churches and theologians to contribute to the critique of society, without being Christianly dualistic. Paul points the way to this finely balanced agenda, and we who live with the legacy of two thousand years of the church getting it sometimes right and often wrong would do well to return to our roots to learn fresh wisdom.

The Imperial Cult and the Resurrection of the Lord Jesus

https://www.biblearchaeology.org/post/2009/03/23/The-Imperial-Cult-and-the-Resurrection-of-the-Lord-Jesus.aspx

Excerpt:

Introduction

In 1987, I was participating in the "Who is the Pharaoh of the Exodus?" conference in Memphis, TN. During one of our lunch breaks, a group of us, who were alumni of the Institute of Holy Land Studies in Jerusalem, went to a local eatery. Sitting opposite me was Bishop Mesrob Mutafyan, a bishop of the Armenian Church in Istanbul, Turkey. (He has since been elevated to one of five Patriarchs in the Armenian Church). During our conversation, the subject of liturgy and creeds came up. Since I was from a non-liturgical church I asked him why they repeated the liturgy and creeds over and over again. His answer was very helpful. He said that historically, many people in the churches had never learned to read. When they repeated the liturgy (which is mostly Scripture verses) over and over again, it helped them memorize the Word of God. By repeating the creeds, the participants became grounded in the doctrinal truths of their faith.

One creed that the Western Church recites is the so-called Apostle's Creed. While it was not composed by the early apostles, one church historian described it as "by far the best popular summary of the Christian faith ever made within so brief a space," and went on to say "It is not a word of God to men, but a word of men to God, in response to His revelation" (Schaff 1990:1:15, 16). It is solid theology in a concise creed. I believe that Romans 1:3-4 was one of the original creeds concerning the Person and Work of the Lord Jesus Christ.

Literary Structure

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The creed in Romans 1:3-4 is composed of two lines with three clauses in each line and a summary statement at the end. It was formulated by either the Apostolic Church in Jerusalem, or by the great Hebraic minds of the apostle's Peter (cf. Matt. 16:16) or Paul, based on the prophets in the Hebrew Scriptures (Romans 1:2).

"Concerning His Son:
A. Who was born
B. of the seed of David
C. according to the flesh,
A'. and declared
B'. to be the Son of God (with power)
C'. according to the Spirit of holiness, (by the resurrection from the dead),
Jesus Christ our Lord."

In the literary structure of this creed, the central thought of each line is the Person of the Lord Jesus in His role as the "Seed of David" (His humanity) and the "Son of God" (His deity). In order to appreciate these two roles, we must understand the world of the First Century church in Rome, the church that Paul addressed in this letter. They, more than any other church in the Roman Empire, would understand the imperial cult and emperor worship and the sharp contrast Paul was making in these verses between the Lord Jesus and all the Roman emperors.

The "son of God" in the First Century Roman World

On March 14, 44 BC the tyrannical dictator, Julius Caesar was assassinated by a group of men, lead by Brutus and Cassius, who identified themselves as the "liberators." Brutus commemorated this event by issuing a coin with a liberty cap, flanked by two daggers and the Latin words EID MAR ["Eids of March"] (Vagi 1999:2:198, coin 95). After Caesar's death, the Roman senate "voted to give Caesar divine honors" (Plutarch, Caesar 67:4; LCL 7:603; see also Suetonius, Deified Julius 88; LCL 1:119). In other words, they added him to the Roman pantheon as a god! This was the first time in Roman history that a mortal was deified. This Roman Senate decision would significantly affect the followers of the Lord Jesus Christ in the years to come.

Plutarch, a Greek writer who wrote a series of books about the lives of famous Greek and Roman personalities, recounted events of "divine ordering" (his words) surrounding the death of Julius Caesar. Among other things, he states there was a "great comet, which showed itself in great splendor for seven nights after Caesar's murder" (Caesar 69:3; LCL 7:605-607). This was interpreted as a sign that Julius Caesar was taken up to the heavens to join the Roman gods. His adopted son, Octavian, minted coins with the comet on it and the Latin words DIVVS IVLIVS ["divine Julius"]! (Kreitzer 1990:213; Vagi 1999:2:221, coin 278).

Octavian (reigned from 27 BC to AD 14), the grand-nephew and adopted son of Julius Caesar, and known to us from the New Testament as Caesar Augustus (Luke 2:1), minted coins with the title DIVI F ["son of God"] on them in Latin (Vagi 1999:2:217-231). He considered himself the son of the divine Julius Caesar. Some consider that Caesar Augustus was Satan's puppet and counterfeit "messiah" to distract people from the real Messiah, the Lord Jesus Christ.

Suetonius (AD 75-140), a Roman historian, reports that after Augustus died and was cremated, an ex-praetor took an oath that he had seen the form of the Emperor on his way to heaven (Deified Augustus 100:4; LCL 1:283-285).

The next emperor was Tiberius (reigned from AD 14-37). He was the son of Livia, the stepson, son-in-law and heir of Augustus. Thus began the Julian dynasty. People married so they were somehow related to by blood or adoption to Augustus and thus by adoption to Julius Caesar, and would consider themselves the "seed of Julius.' When Tiberius died, however, he was not deified by the Roman Senate.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Caligula (reigned from AD 37-41), the adopted grandson and heir of Tiberius, could not wait to die so he deified himself. He ordered statues of himself placed in temples, shrines and synagogues so people could worship him. After he was assassinated, the Roman Senate cursed him and had his name erased from all inscriptions and his statues smashed.

Claudius (reigned from AD 41-54) was the grandson of Livia (wife of Octavian), Mark Antony and Octavia (grand niece of Julius Caesar). He was the nephew of Tiberius and the granduncle and adoptive father of Nero. Claudius was also an uncle of Emperor Caligula and was made emperor by the Praetorian guards after Caligula was assassinated. He had physical disabilities, but was an effective administrator, however brutal at times. Suetonius states that after Claudius died, he was "buried with regal pomp and enrolled among the gods, an honor neglected and finally annulled by Nero, but later restored to him by Vespasian (Deified Claudius 45: LCL 2:81). Seneca (4 BC – AD 65), on the other hand, wrote a religio-political satire that dripped with sarcasm, entitled Pumpkinfication. (LCL 15:437-483). The title of this book was a slam on emperor worship. The word "pumpkinfication" was chosen instead of deification. In Seneca's satire, Claudius is considered a pumpkin instead of a god!

Permit me to use my sanctified imagination for a minute. I would like to think the book made the International Herald Tribune best seller list for AD 55 when it was published. Perhaps it was a hot item in the bookstores of the Roman colony of Corinth when the Apostle Paul was there in the winter of AD 57-58. Since he wanted to improve his Latin before he went to Rome, he bought a copy of the book and read it in order to get a sense of the imperial cult. When he penned the letter to the church in Rome, he began with the creed concerning God's Son: "Born of the Seed of David according to the flesh, declared to be the Son of God with power according to the Spirit of holiness, by the resurrection from the dead." What a contrast to the recently deified Emperor Claudius!

Nero (reigned from AD 54-68), the adopted son of Claudius, and some say his natural born son (Burns 1996: 6-11), was not deified by the Roman Senate when he died, but in fact, was cursed by them. Following his death there was civil war which saw three emperors in quick succession: Galba, Otho and Vitellius (from June AD 68 to December AD 69), until General Vespasian was hailed emperor by the Senate.

Emperor Vespasian (reigned from AD 69-79) was born a common man and not related by blood or adoption to the Julio-Claudian dynasty. In other words, he was not of the "seed of Julius"! He came to realize that emperor worship and the imperial cult was a scam. Suetonius reports that Vespasian "did not cease his jokes even when in apprehension of death and in extreme danger; for when among other portents … a comet appeared in the heavens, he declared that [the comet was an omen about] the king of the Parthians, who wore his hair long, whereas I am bald." When he finally realized his number was up, he said: "Woe's me. Me think I am turning into a god" (Vespasian 23:4; LCL 2:319; and also Dio Cassius, Roman History 66:3; LCL 8:295). If he was going to become a god, what did he have to worry about?!

After his death, he was cremated and his ashes put in an urn and the urn placed in the family mausoleum in Rome. A coin was minted by his son Titus with Vespasian's urn on the reverse side, flanked by two laurel branches (Mattingly and Sydenham 1926:123, coin 62; Vagi 1999:2:311, coin 958). This coin might have been Vespasian's last joke from the grave. Whereas there was a posthumous coin of Julius Caesar being taken to heaven on a comet to join the gods, Vespasian knew he would be relegated to ashes in an urn! The Roman Senate, however, did deify him.

Vespasian's two sons, Titus (reigned from AD 79-81) and Domitian (reigned from AD 81-96), were very much into the imperial cult. When Titus died, his brother Domitian constructed an arch in his brother's honor that commemorated the victory of the Romans over the Jewish people and the destruction of Herod's Temple. The tops of each side of the arch contained the inscription: F. DIVI ["the son of the god"]. In the center of the interior of the arch, Titus is on the back of an eagle being taken to heaven (Kreitzer 1990: 210). When Domitian became emperor, he, like Caligula, could not wait to die in order to become a god, so he deified himself in AD 86. And Domitian, like Caligula, was cursed by the Roman Senate after he died. The Emperor worship of Domitian is the background to the book of Revelation (Franz 2006:73-87).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

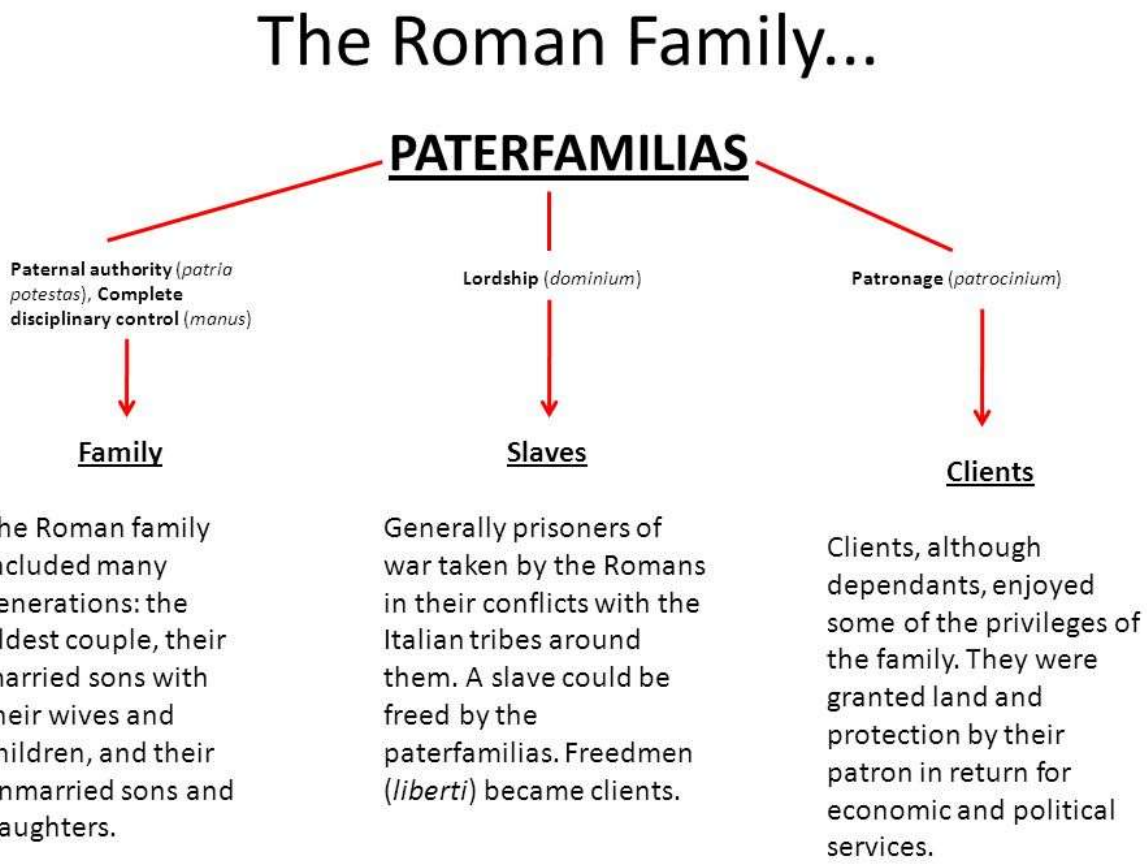
Conclusions



By sharp contrast, Paul writes that the Lord Jesus was "born of the Seed of David according to the flesh, and declared to be the Son of God with power according to the Spirit of holiness, by the resurrection from the dead." It was the covenant promise of God to David and the bodily resurrection that set Him apart from all the Roman emperors.

One other aspect of the Person of Christ that set Him apart from the Roman emperors is bringing peace with God to the individual. Some of the emperors could boast that they brought peace to the Roman world "on land and sea", but one thing they lacked was the ability to bring peace to the hearts of men and women. That, only God manifest in the flesh – the Lord Jesus, could do. Later in the epistle to the Romans, Paul wrote: "Therefore, having been justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ" (5:1).

The bodily resurrection of the Lord Jesus Christ demonstrated that the payment for sins on Calvary's cross had been paid in full and accepted by God the Father. It also demonstrated that Satan had been defeated and death vanquished. When people put their trust in the Lord Jesus Christ as their Savior, they are justified, or declared righteous, by a Holy God. Have you trusted the Lord Jesus as your Savior?

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Roman Family

Rome: From Kingdom to Republic

https://www.slideshare.net/unmce/the-romans-olli-at-unm-lecture-summer-2015 [slideshow]

See also*: Patria Potestas and Adoption

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Segregation of Classes

Ie: Marriage prohibited between plebeian/slave and patrician

- Senators – appointed by Consuls/Censors; Patricians
  - Elder Statesmen, Landowners… Togas w purple stripe
- Patricians
  - Educated Landowners, aristocrats (togas)
  - Could not engage in Commerce (that is for plebes); Could lead armies
- Equestrians
  - Cavalry in Army, Sons of Senators before qualified to enter Senate
  - Educated, Commercial Class
  - Later, Augustus would use them for his Civil Service
- Plebeians
  - Commoners: worked on farms, had own businesses, foot soldiers, eligible for Plebeian assemblies, Tribunes… gained more political rights and power as time passed.
- Freedmen – Their children would be Citizens
- Slaves
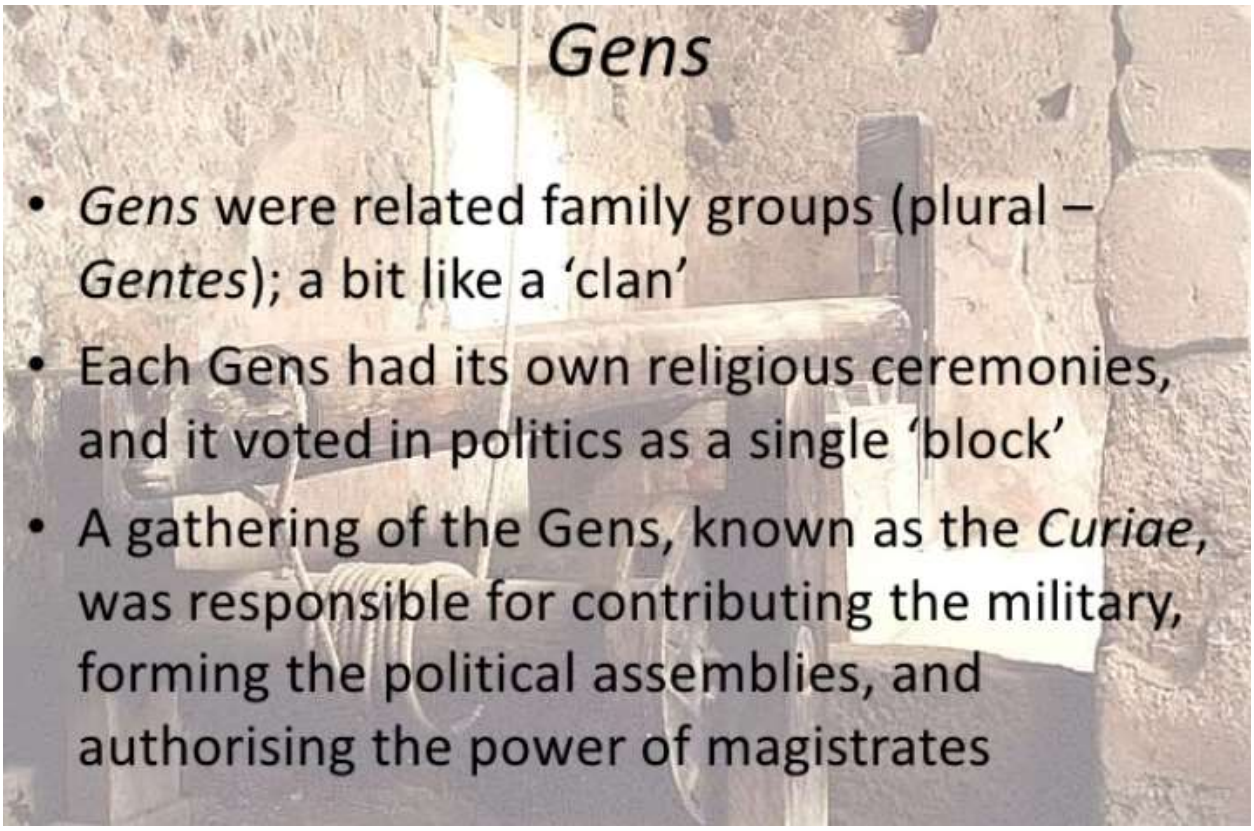
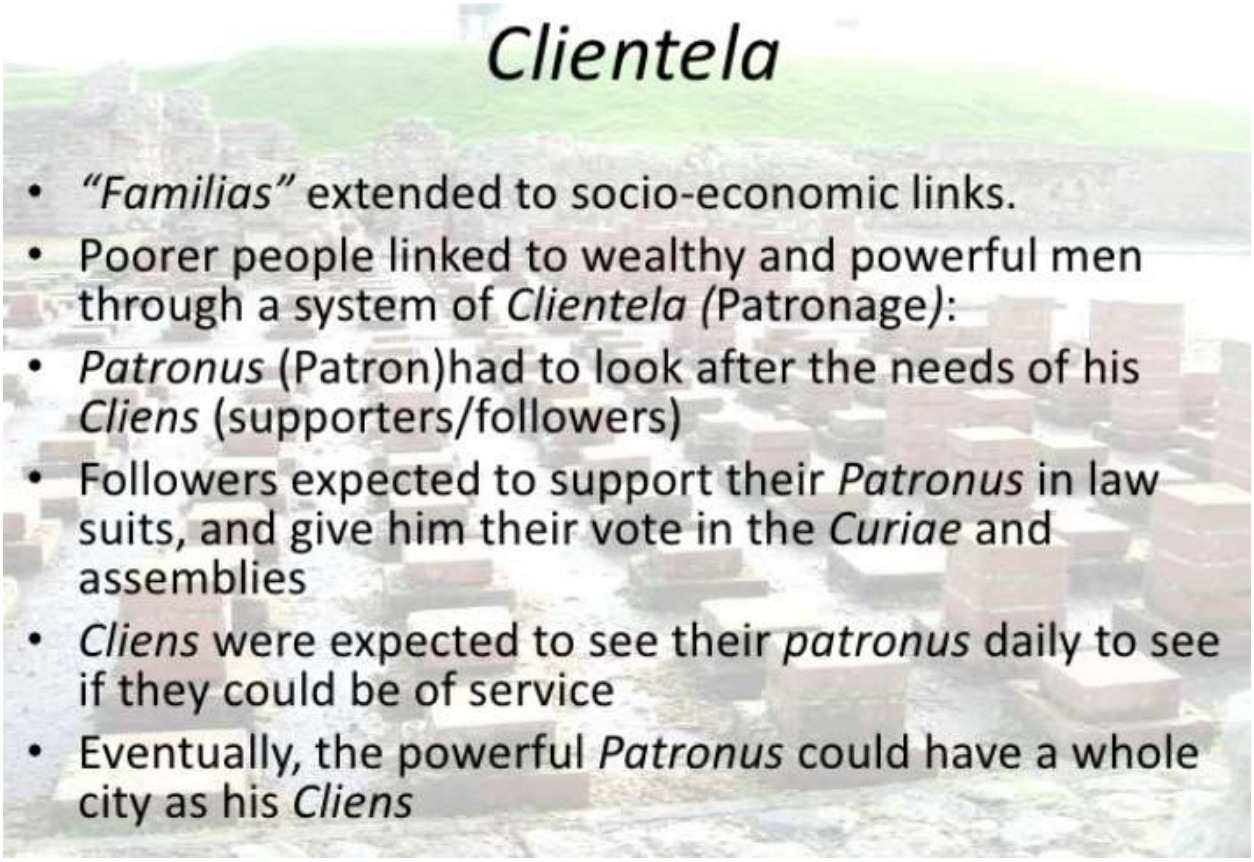
  - Manumission
  - Could not serve in the Army

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

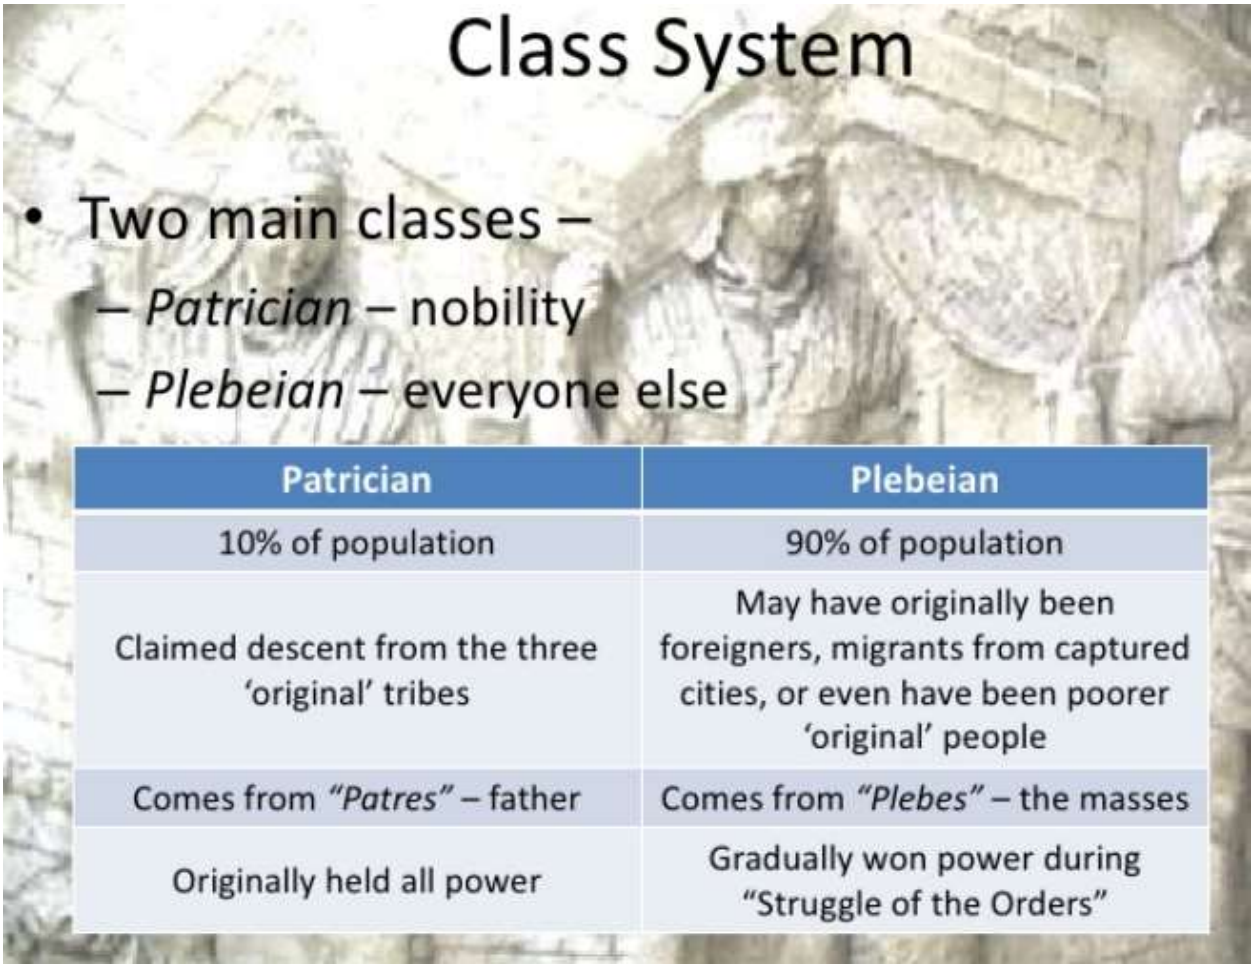
More Rights of Roman Citizens



- Could not be tortured, whipped, or receive death penalty (except for treason).
- Right to be tried in the City of Rome for any offense
- No Roman citizen could be sentenced to the Cross.



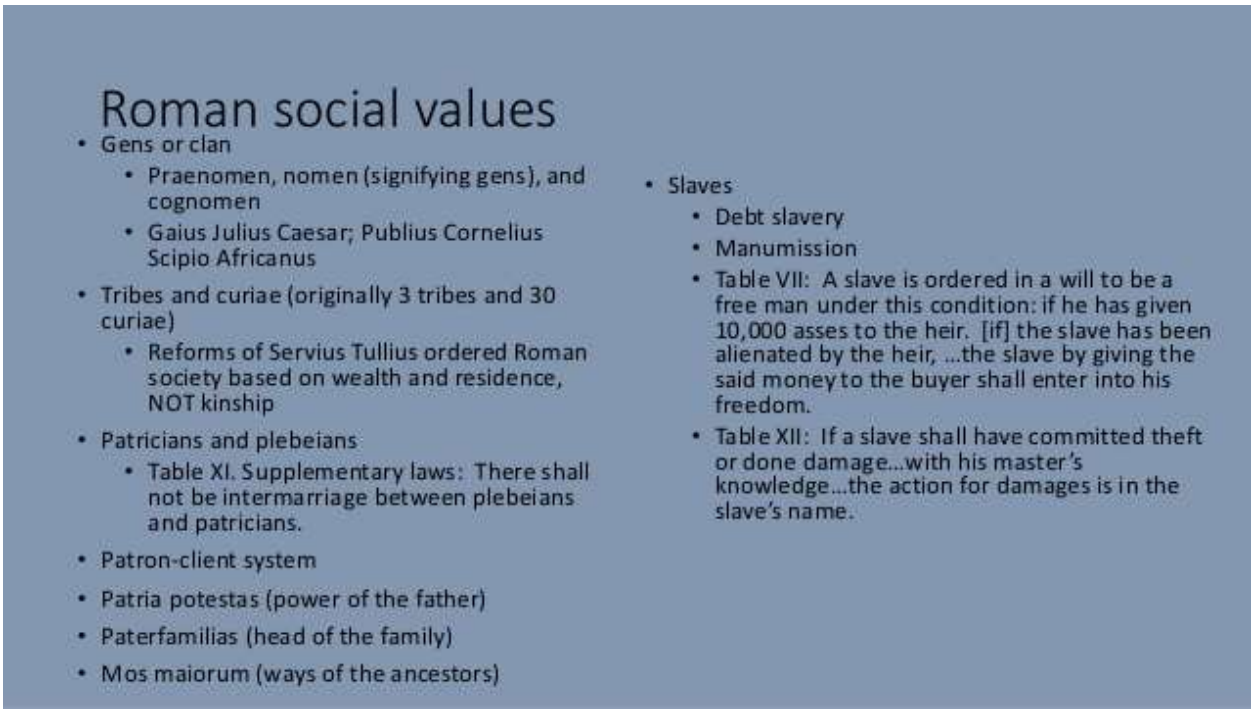
History of Rome Part 1
https://es.slideshare.net/janetpareja/history-of-rome-part-1 [slideshow]



Basis for Roman Society
https://www.slideshare.net/benpope/basis-for-roman-society [slideshow]

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



Patrician	Plebeian
10% of population	90% of population
Claimed descent from the three 'original' tribes	May have originally been foreigners, migrants from captured cities, or even have been poorer 'original' people
Comes from "Patres" – father	Comes from "Plebes" – the masses
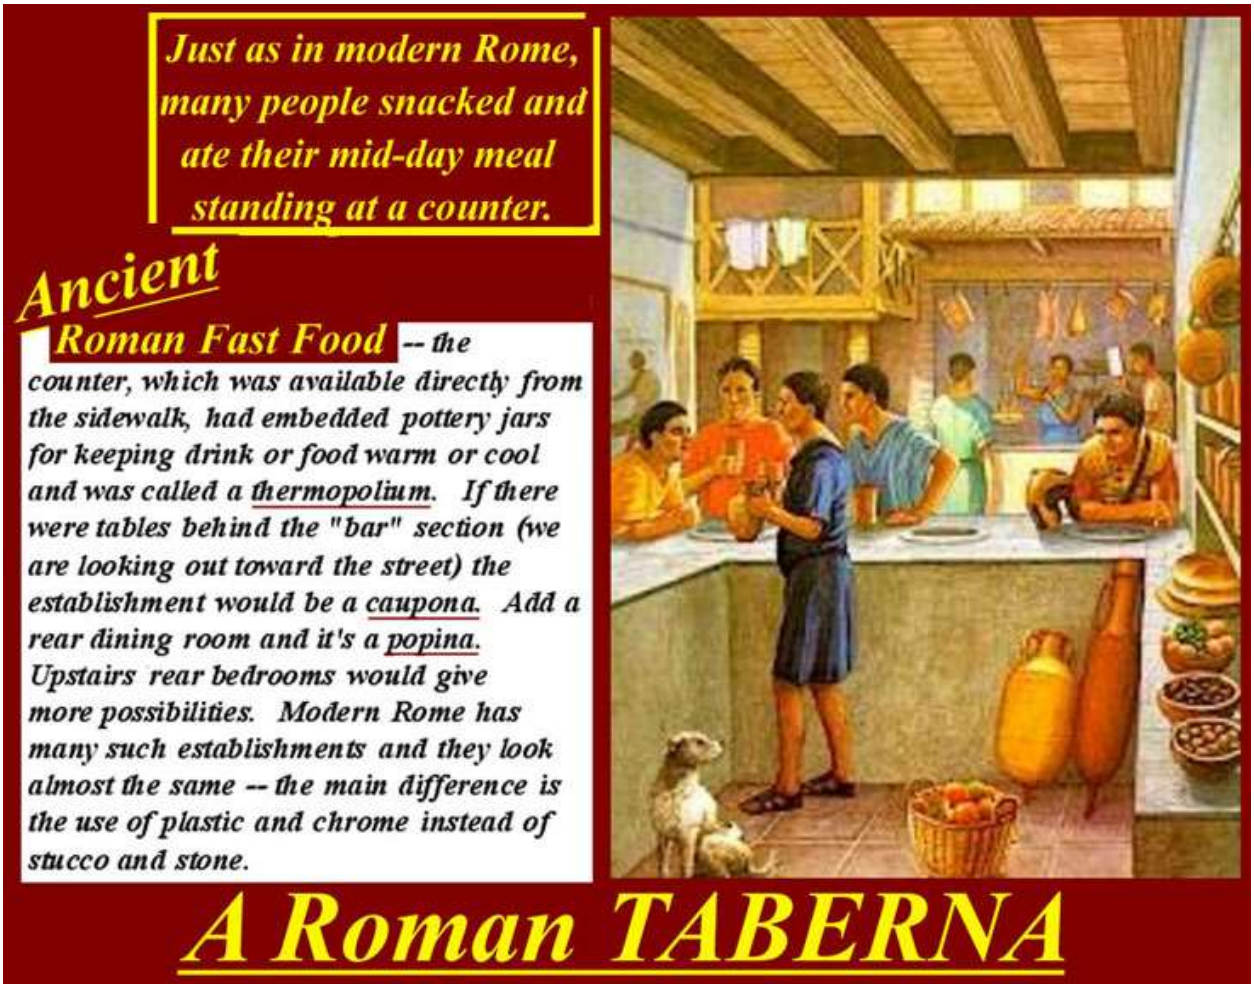
Originally held all power	Gradually won power during "Struggle of the Orders"

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Roman Social Values

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Source: http://www.mmdtkw.org/ALRIAncRomUnit9Slides.html



Almost everyone ate out or carried out all the time. Only a rich family in a domus would have its own kitchen, and even they would usually eat their main meal of the day, at about 11 AM, at some kind of fast food outlet -- they were out and about and wouldn't want to go home just to eat. Big evening meals might be served, especially for honored guests, in special rooms in houses called triclinia where three-person couches (also called triclinia) were grouped around small tables. But even those meals were likely to be catered.

Vast overindulgent banquets (sometimes referred to as "orgia") did occur, but onlt very seldom, and they were ridiculed as the pastime of the nouveau riche. "Trimalchio's Banquet" in the Satyricon of Petronius Arbiter was meant as a condemnation of the excess of the freedman, Trimalchio, and not as an example of how upper class Romans ate and lived. Overeating and over drinking, even being overweight, was declasse and contrary to Roman "virtus" (manliness, character). One of the propaganda devices used by Octavian against Mark Antony was revelation that he was overindulging in Alexandria -- something that no Roman with "virtus" should do.

Word History: The word orgy has become connected in our minds with unrestrained sexual activity, but its origins are much less licentious. the word can be traced as far back as the Indo-European root werg-*, meaning "to do," also the source of our word work. Greek <orgia>, "secret rites, worship," comes from

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

worg-*, one form of this root. The Greek word was used with reference to the rites practiced in the worship of various deities, such as Orpheus and Dionysus. The word in Greek did not denote sexual activity, although this was a part of some rites; the rites of Dionysus, for example, included only music, dancing, drinking, and the eating of animal sacrifices. Romans mockingly applied the word orgia to overindulgent eating and drinking. Having passed through Latin and Old French into English, the word orgy is first recorded in English with reference to the secret rites of the Greek and Roman religions in 1589. It is interesting to note that the word is first recorded with its modern sense in 18th-century English and perhaps in 17th-century French. Whether this speaks to a greater licentiousness in society or not must be left to the historian, but now the religious nature of the word has gone into eclipse.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Rome in Paul's Day

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Apostolic and Church Fathers – Writings / History

The Apostolic Fathers

http://readthefathers.org/2012/11/25/the-apostolic-fathers/

The Apostolic Fathers, [are] the traditional name for the authors of the oldest extant Christian literature outside the New Testament. This diverse group of writers—several of them anonymous—lived and wrote during or shortly after the time of the apostles themselves, and their writings reflect a concern for church authority after the passing of Christ's first disciples.

Places of origin and destinations of the Apostolic Fathers' writings (Rome excluded)

Wikipedia: Apostolic Fathers

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Apostolic_Fathers

The Apostolic Fathers were Christian theologians who lived in the 1st and 2nd centuries AD, who are believed to have personally known some of the Twelve Apostles, or to have been significantly influenced by them. Their writings, though popular in Early Christianity, were ultimately not included in the canon of the New Testament once it reached its final form. Many of the writings derive from the same time period and geographical location as other works of early Christian literature that did come to be part of the New Testament, and some of the writings found among the Apostolic Fathers' seem to have been just as highly regarded as some of the writings that became the New Testament.

Theopedia: Apostolic Fathers

http://www.theopedia.com/apostolic-fathers

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

CCEL: Early Church Fathers / Apostolic Fathers
http://www.ccel.org/fathers.html

http://www.ccel.org/ccel/lake/fathers2.html

J.B. Lightfoot: The Apostolic Fathers http://www.ccel.org/ccel/lightfoot/fathers.titlepage.html?highlight=apostolic,fathers#highlight http://www.ccel.org/ccel/lightfoot/fathers.i.html

Anti-Nicene Fathers, Vol.1, The Apostolic Fathers with Justin Martyr, Irenaeus http://www.ccel.org/ccel/schaff/anf01.titlepage.html

Tischendorf: When Were Our Gospels Written? Including Testimony of Apostolic Fathers http://www.ccel.org/ccel/tischendorf/gospels.i.html

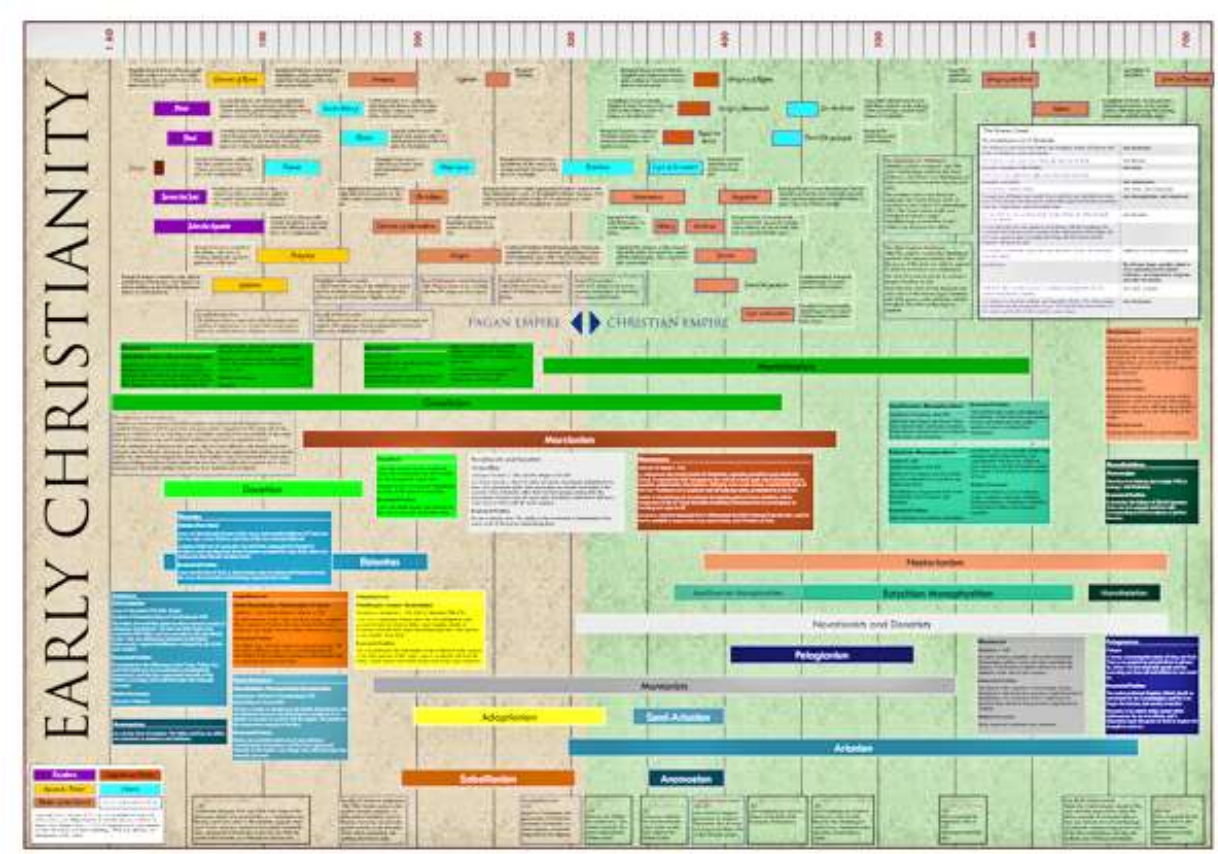
Early Christian Fathers
http://eaglemissions.org/wp-content/uploads/2012/05/fathers.pdf [PDF]

Orthodox Church Fathers – Christian Theology Classics Search Engine
http://orthodoxchurchfathers.com/fathers/anf01/anf0101.htm#P34_365

Catholic: Early Church Fathers
http://www.catholicfaithandreason.org/church-fathers.html



Christianity Today: Polycarp
http://www.christianitytoday.com/history/people/martyrs/polycarp.html

See also: Diversity in the New Testament ("Genealogical" Table – NT and Apostolic Fathers)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Timeline of Early Christianity (Chart) [Recommended]
http://www.garryscharts.com/early-christianity-timeline.html [Downloadable as a PDF]
(Shows all early church fathers and doctrines developed over the first 700 years.)

Example:

Wikipedia: Church Fathers
https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Church_Fathers

Apostolic Fathers are those before 200 A.D. and who were directly influenced or taught by the apostles. They include: Clement, Bishop of Rome (d. 97) and Catholics believe third successor to Peter as Pope; Ignatius (50-107), Polycarp (69-155), Justin Martyr (100-165), St. Irenaeus (130-202) and Cyprian (210-258).

The Early Church Fathers lived between 200 and 800 A.D.

Catholics generally regard the Patristic period to have closed with the death of John of Damascus, a Doctor of the Church, in 749.

Source: http://www.newadvent.org/cathen/06001a.htm

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Augustine of Hippo (354- 430)

Augustine of Hippo (354 – 430) by Janet Soskice
Part 1: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=IZHdjRqiHH4 [Video] (covers his Confessions, a prayer to God)

Part 2: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=QpJdPXnx7-A [Video] (cults, Manichaeism, dualism, neo-Platonism of Plotinus, Notice: audio turned off in most of later half)

Did Augustine Corrupt The Church With Gnostic Doctrine?
Beyond Augustine Documentary - Jesse Morrell
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=mhLF-llpFX0 [Video]

Augustine (354-430)

https://quizlet.com/118774840/church-history-lesson-6-the-late-latin-fathers-flash-cards/

-Philosopher and Theologian
--both the protestant and catholic church pay tribute to the contribution of Augustine to the cause of Christianity.
-able polemicist, good preacher, a fine episcopal administrator, and superb theologian, and the creator of a Christian philosophy of history that is still valid

Augustine (Life)

-born in 354 A.D. to a Roman official in the north African town of Tagaste.
-Mother Monica prayed for his conversion to the Christian Faith
-When he went to college he was a rebel having a illegitimate union with a concubine
-adopted Manicheanism and Neoplatonic teachings in his search for truth
-in 386 he moved to Milan searching for truth until one day he opened his bible to Romans 13: 13-14
-He returned to Carthage and was ordained as a priest in 391
-in 396 he became the consecrated bishop of hippo
-from that time until his death in 430, he gave his life to episcopal administration, studying, and writing.
-left over one hundred books, five hundred sermons, and two hundred letters

Augustine (works)

-most widely known work of Augustine is his 'Confessions' on of the greatest autobiographical works of all time
-All of Augustine's works came out of times of Crisis for either him or the church
-known for being humble and grateful for the grace of god on a sinner like him
-wrote another autobiographical work called 'Retractationes' = intellectual biography
-'De Doctrina Christiana = most important of his exegetical works -contained his views on hermeneutics
-'De Trinitate' = Theological treatise on the Trinity
-'De Haeresibus' = a history of heresies within the church
-Greatest apologetical work = THE CITY OF GOD -PROBABLY HIS SECOND IF NOT HIS GREATEST WORK- response to Romans blaming Christianity for the sack of Rome by Alaric in 410
-Augustines 'philosophy of history' = greatest and first real philosophy of history ever to be developed

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Augustine's other achievements (beliefs) (philosophy)

-Developed a Christian interpretation of history (one of the great contributions of this amazing scholar)
-Believed in the sovereignty of God over history and the plan of the world.
-Even before creation, God had a plan for his creations
-The end or goal of history, for Augustine, is beyond history, in the hands of an eternal God

Augustine's mark (good)

-his inspiring philosophy inspired the church to get through the dark half-millennium before 1000
-Looked upon by protestants as one who was a forerunner of Reformation ideas in his emphasis on salvation from original and actual sin as a result of the grace of a sovereign God who irresistibly saves those whom he has elected.
-Roman Catholic Church considers him the father of Roman ecclesiasticism
-his insistence on consideration of the whole tenor of scripture in interpreting a part of scripture has been a principle of lasting value for the church

Augustine's Errors

-he helped to develop the doctrine of purgatory
-He insisted on the two sacraments so much that it could be inferred that he believed they were required for salvation
-ideas of Postmillennialism

Spiritual Stature of Augustine

-Between Paul and Luther the church had no one of greater moral and spiritual stature than Augustine

The Age of Augustine
http://www3.nd.edu/Departments/Maritain/etext/hwp202.htm

Early Church Fathers - Additional Texts
http://tertullian.org/fathers/

Augustine's Influence on Calvin, Luther, and Zwingli
https://theglobalchurchproject.com/augustines-influence-calvin-luther-zwingli/

Did Augustine Corrupt The Church With Gnostic Doctrine? Beyond Augustine Documentary - Jesse Morrell
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=mhLF-llpFX0 [Video]

Beyond Augustine is a church history and theological documentary that examines the free will debate in light of the Early Church and the Gnostics. Did Augustine corrupt the church with Manichean or Gnostic doctrine? Is Calvinism or Reformed Theology really orthodox and historic Christianity, as Calvinists claim? Or are the Calvinists and Augustinians the spiritual descendants of the Gnostics and Manicheans? Were the Pelagians really the heretics in their free will debate with Augustine? These are the type of controversial questions Jesse Morrell examines in this documentary. www.OpenAirOutreach.com

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

See also: Diversity in the New Testament ("Genealogical" Table – NT and Apostolic Fathers)

Early Church Fathers and the Spread of Christianity

Early Church Fathers Relationships Charts

Apostolic and Church Fathers – Writings / History (Beginning)

Dating Books of the NT Bible

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Chart of the Church Fathers

This chart provides basic facts on the early church fathers, including the Apostolic Fathers, the Apologists, the Cappadocian Fathers, and other important early Greek and Latin fathers. Click hyperlinks in name(s) column in the chart for biographies and other information.

Name(s)	Birth	Death	Role(s)	Works	Overview
St. Athanasius	c. 296 Alexandria, Egypt	May 2/3, 373 Alexandria	Bishop of Alexandria	On the Incarnation; Life of St. Anthony	Opponent of Arianism, defender of Nicene Christology; supporter of monasticism.
St. Augustine of Hippo; Aurelius Augustine; "The Doctor of Grace"	354 Thagaste, N. Africa	430 Hippo, N. Africa	Bishop of Hippo, theologian	City of God; Confessions; On Free Will; On the Trinity; Handbook on Faith, Hope and Love	Developed orthodox doctrines of grace, original sin, soul, Trinity, the church.
Basil the Great	c.330 Cappadocia	c.379	Cappadocian father, monk, Bishop of Caesarea	Philocalia; On the Holy Spirit; Against Eunomius	Involved in Arian controversy.
c. 150	c. 215	theologian; professor	Exhortations; Teachings; Miscellanies	Interpreted Christian teachings in the context of Greek philosophy.
St. Clement of Rome; Clement I; Pope St. Clement	unknown	c. 101	Bishop of Rome	1 Clement	Considered fourth Pope by Catholics; might be mentioned in Php. 4:3. Probable author of 1 Clement, a letter once considered for the NT canon.
Gregory of Nazianzus	329/30 Nazianzus in Cappadocia	389/90	Cappadocian father, monk, preacher	Five Theological Orations	Studied at Athens. Influenced outcome of Council of

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

					Constantinople (381) by his eloquent preaching.
Gregory of Nyssa	c. 330 Cappadocia	c. 395 Constantinople?	Cappadocian father, Bishop of Nyssa, monk, preacher, theologian	Against Eunomius, Against Apollinarius, Catechetical Oration; On Virginity	Brother of St. Basil. Influenced by Platonism.
Ignatius of Antioch	unknown	c. 110 Rome, Italy	Bishop of Antioch	seven letters	Wrote letters on his way to be matryred; opposed Docetism.
Irenaeus of Lyons	c. 140	c. 200 France	Bishop of Lyons	Against Heresies	Disciple of Polycarp. Developed idea of "recapitulation." Writings were formative in the early development of Christian theology. Against Heresies is a detailed description and refutation of Gnosticism.
Jerome	c. 342 Slovenia	420 Bethlehem	scholar, theologian	Vulgate; Against Jovinian; Against Vigilantius; Commentaries	Translated Bible into Latin
Justin Martyr	c. 100 Flavia Neapolis, Palestine [now Nabulus]	c. 165 Rome, Italy (feast: June 1)	apologist, philosopher	Apology; Dialogue with Trypho the Jew	A convert from paganism and Greek philosopher, Justin represents the first positive encounter between

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

					Christianity and Greek philosophy.
Origen of Alexandria; Origenes Adamantius	c. 185 Alexandria	c. 254 Caeserea or Tyre	apologist, theologian, teacher	Against Celsus; Commentaries; Homilies	Taught universalism and preexistence of souls. Views condemned by Council in 533.
Tertullian	160 Carthage	220	theologian, apologist	Against Praxeas; Apology; On the Soul	Coined theological terms such as trinity, person, substance; argued that faith and reason do not mix. "Father of Latin Theology."

Church Fathers (List and details at Catholic Site)

http://www.newadvent.org/fathers/

Philo of Alexandria (c. 20 B.C.E.—40 C.E.)

http://www.iep.utm.edu/philo/

Excerpt:

> Philo of Alexandria, a Hellenized Jew also called Judaeus Philo, is a figure that spans two cultures, the Greek and the Hebrew. When Hebrew mythical thought met Greek philosophical thought in the first century B.C.E. it was only natural that someone would try to develop speculative and philosophical justification for Judaism in terms of Greek philosophy. Thus Philo produced a synthesis of both traditions developing concepts for future Hellenistic interpretation of messianic Hebrew thought, especially by Clement of Alexandria, Christian Apologists like Athenagoras, Theophilus, Justin Martyr, Tertullian, and by Origen. He may have influenced Paul, his contemporary, and perhaps the authors of the Gospel of John (C. H. Dodd) and the Epistle to the Hebrews (R. Williamson and H. W. Attridge). In the process, he laid the foundations for the development of Christianity in the West and in the East, as we know it today.
>
> Philo's primary importance is in the development of the philosophical and theological foundations of Christianity. The church preserved the Philonic writings because Eusebius of Caesarea labeled the monastic ascetic group of Therapeutae and Therapeutrides, described in Philo's The Contemplative Life, as Christians, which is highly unlikely. Eusebius also promoted the legend that Philo met Peter in Rome. Jerome (345-420 C.E.) even lists him as a church Father. Jewish tradition was uninterested in philosophical speculation and did not preserve Philo's thought.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

According to H. A. Wolfson, Philo was a founder of religious philosophy, a new habit of practicing philosophy. Philo was thoroughly educated in Greek philosophy and culture as can be seen from his superb knowledge of classical Greek literature. He had a deep reverence for Plato and referred to him as "the most holy Plato" (Prob. 13). Philo's philosophy represented contemporary Platonism which was its revised version incorporating Stoic doctrine and terminology via Antiochus of Ascalon (ca 90 B.C.E.) and Eudorus of Alexandria, as well as elements of Aristotelian logic and ethics and Pythagorean ideas. Clement of Alexandria even called Philo "the Pythagorean."

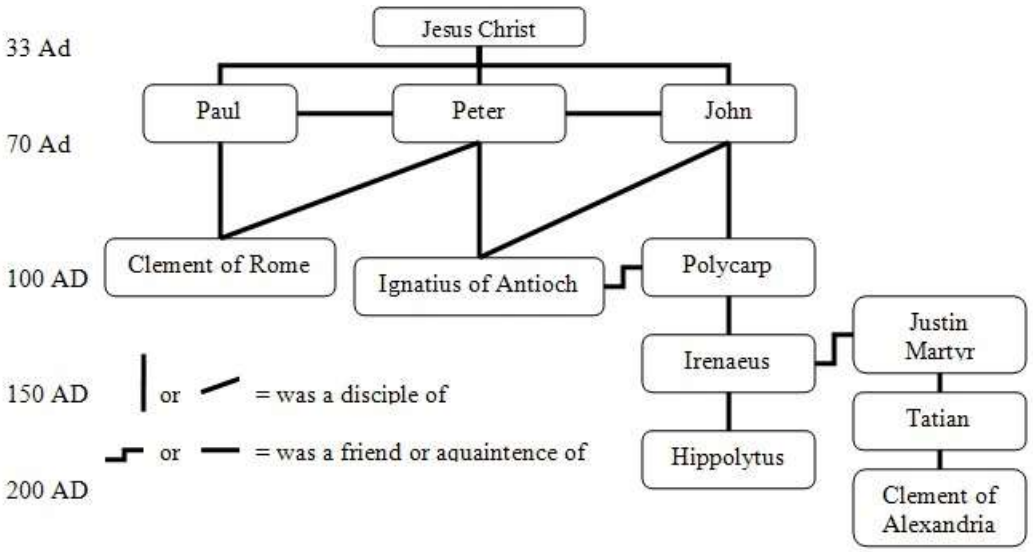
But it seems that Philo also picked up his ancestral tradition, though as an adult, and once having discovered it, he put forward the teachings of the Jewish prophet, Moses, as "the summit of philosophy" (Op. 8), and considered Moses the teacher of Pythagoras (b. ca 570 B.C.E.) and of all Greek philosophers and lawgivers (Hesiod, Heraclitus, Lycurgus, to mention a few). For Philo, Greek philosophy was a natural development of the revelatory teachings of Moses. He was no innovator in this matter because already before him Jewish scholars attempted the same. Artapanus in the second century B.C.E identified Moses with Musaeus and with Orpheus. According to Aristobulus of Paneas (first half of the second century B.C.E.), Homer and Hesiod drew from the books of Moses which were translated into Greek long before the Septuagint.

Condescension to Human Form Does Not Change God

Origen

But let us look at what Celsus next with ostentation announces in the following fashion: “And again,” he says, “let us resume the subject from the beginning, with a larger array of proofs. And I make no new proofs. And I make no new statement but say what has long been settled. God is good and beautiful and blessed, and that in the best and most beautiful degree. But if he comes down among humanity, he must undergo a change, and a change from good to evil, from virtue to vice, from happiness to misery, and from best to worst. Who, then, would make a choice of such a change? It is the nature of a mortal, indeed, to undergo change and remolding, but of an immortal to remain the same and unaltered. God, then, could not admit such a change.” Now it appears to me that the fitting answer has been returned to these objections when I have related what I called in Scripture the “condescension” of God to human affairs. For [this] purpose he did not need to undergo a transformation, as Celsus thinks we assert, nor a change from good to evil, nor from virtue to vice, nor from happiness to misery, nor from best to worst. For, continuing unchangeable in his essence, he condescends to human affairs by the economy of his providence. We show accordingly that the holy Scripture represents God as unchangeable, both by such words as “you are the same” * and “I change not.” Whereas the gods of Epicurus, being composed of atoms, and, so far as their structure is concerned, capable of dissolution, endeavor to throw off the atoms which contain the elements of destruction. Even the god of the Stoics, as being corporeal, at one time has his whole essence composed of the guiding principle when the conflagration [of the world] takes place; and at another, when a rearrangement of things occurs, he again becomes partly material. For even the Stoics were unable to comprehend distinctly the natural idea of God as a being altogether incorruptible and simple and uncompounded and indivisible.

Against Celsus 4.14. *[ANF 4:502–3.]



Early Christian Writings

http://www.earlychristianwritings.com/ (Note: Non-Conservative dating and perspective)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Early Church Fathers Relationships Chart

Here is a diagram showing the relationships between Jesus, His Apostles, Ignatius of Antioch and some of the other Early Church Fathers:

[Source: http://restlesspilgrim.net/blog/tag/polycarp/]

See also:

http://www.biblerays.com/chart-of-church-fathers.html

see also:

http://www.newworldencyclopedia.org/entry/Saint_Polycarp

http://www.earlychristianwritings.com/churchfathers.html

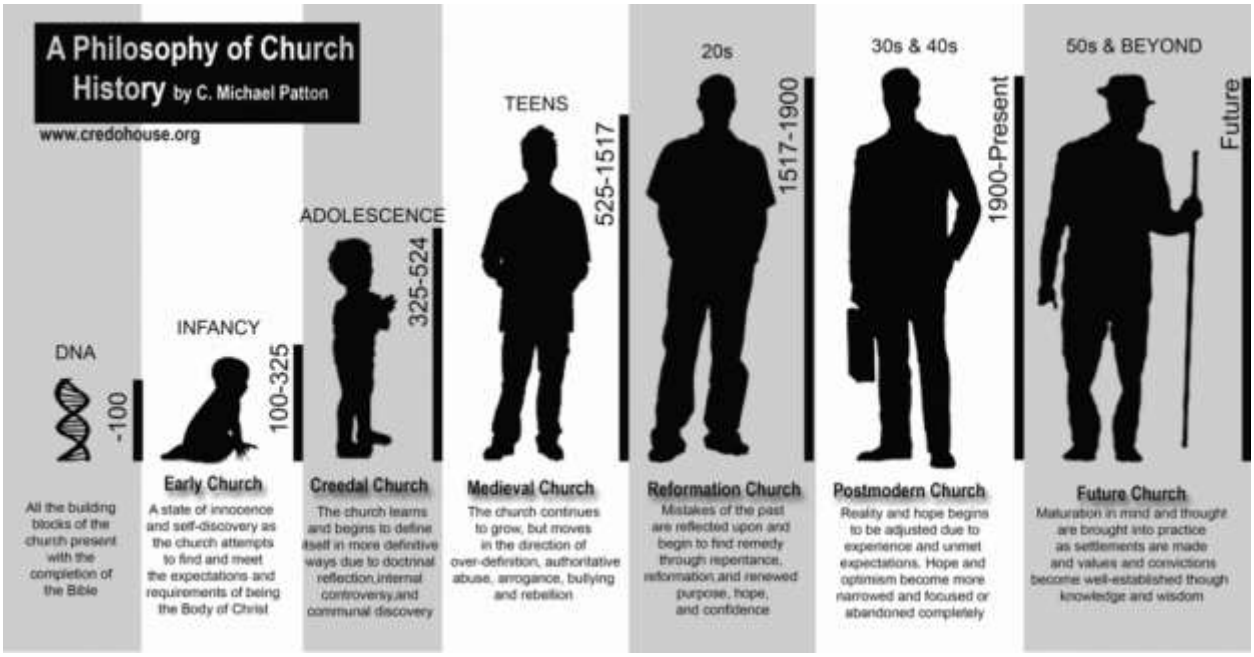
http://www.catholic.com/tracts/apostolic-succession

http://unsettledchristianity.com/eschatological-views-among-the-church-fathers/

http://www.insight.org/resources/articles/church-history/heros.html

http://www.unityinchrist.com/history2/print/EarlyChurchHistoryprt.htm

http://orthodoxchurchfathers.com/fathers/ (orthodox church list)



Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Early Church Fathers: Babies or Giants?

https://blogs.ancientfaith.com/orthodoxbridge/early-church-fathers-babies-giants/

Excerpt:

I recently received an inquiry from someone with a Reformed background. He brought to my attention that a certain Protestant pastor is said to have claimed that the early Church Fathers were "church babies." I have not been able to verify whether or not this pastor actually made that remark but I felt that the question deserved a good answer. This reader has also been in conversation with friends who are interested in Mercersburg Theology. One of them brought up the "fallacy of infallibility" objection against Orthodoxy. That is, "locally an Orthodox or Catholic bishop would have authority over his denomination but since the Church has been immature for the last 2000 years (being resurrected again in the 16th century) she is in no way infallible." What follows is an attempt to answer that particular conversation but also in a way others can benefit.

See also: Apostolic and Church Fathers – Writings / History (Beginning)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Relationships of the Early Church Fathers (Catholic)

https://satellitesaint.com/2015/09/04/relationship-of-the-early-church-fathers/

Excerpt:

There are some who want to believe that once the last Apostle died the church quickly went off the rails, fell into a kind of darkness, and did not begin to emerge again until the Reformation. This is silly bunk, and those who believe it tend to need it to be true so they can justify their own positions. This diagram points towards a more accurate, and "hermeneutic of continuity" understanding that sees the development of doctrine occurring right from the beginning as the Apostles handed down the Tradition of the Church to the next generation, which then did so for the next…

See also: Diversity in the New Testament ("Genealogical" Table – NT and Apostolic Fathers)

Apostolic and Church Fathers – Writings / History (Beginning)

Dating Books of the NT Bible

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Early Church Fathers and the Spread of Christianity

http://www.insight.org/resources/articles/church-history/heros.html

By around AD 90 — about sixty years after Christ's resurrection and the birth of the church — Christianity had grown significantly from its humble beginnings in Jerusalem and Judea. Churches planted by the apostles now thrived in cities of Judea, Egypt, Syria, Asia Minor, Macedonia, Greece, and Italy. From the larger cities, the churches continued to expand into smaller towns and then into other more remote regions. A century later, by the end of the second century, the church's geographical reach had doubled (see map).

During this time of great geographical expansion, the leadership of the churches founded by the apostles changed hands from the first generation of believers to the second and third. These earliest church leaders—some of whom knew and learned from the actual apostles themselves—were left not only with the responsibility of teaching their own generation of believers but also preserving and passing down the faith. In fact, they have passed on to us the books of our New Testament, the orthodox doctrine of Jesus Christ, and a pattern of Christian truth that has survived centuries of criticisms and attacks.

Who were these faithful pastors and teachers? The following selective list of early church leaders is provided to help you become more familiar with the faithful fathers entrusted with preserving the Christian faith and Scriptures through some of the toughest decades of church history. I've included a link to some of their writings available online. During the time of the church's infancy, these early leaders stood strong for Christ, Scripture, and the Christian tradition in the face of false messiahs, forged scriptures, and competing heresies.

•Clement of Rome (martyred c. AD 100).

This early pastor of Rome served at a time when the teachings of the apostles Peter and Paul were still ringing in the ears of the early Christians. In fact, some early church historians identify this Clement with the companion of Paul mentioned in Philippians 4:3. After writing a letter to the church in Corinth exhorting them to unity, Clement was martyred under the great persecution of Domitian.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

•Ignatius of Antioch (martyred c. AD 110).

While under arrest and on his way to martyrdom in Rome, Ignatius wrote letters to various churches, including Ephesus, Smyrna, and Rome. He challenged the false teachings of Judaizers and Docetists who denied the true incarnation of Christ. He called for unity within the church in regard to the true doctrine of Christ and the essentials of the gospel.

•Aristides of Athens (died c. AD 140).

One of the earliest Christian apologists or "defenders" of the Christian faith, Aristides wrote an argument defending Christianity as superior to all other philosophies and religions, which he addressed to the pagan Emperor Hadrian around AD 125. His apology was widely read and later used by apologists such as Justin Martyr.

•Polycarp of Smyrna (martyred c. AD 155).

A friend of Ignatius and personal student of the apostle John, Polycarp served most of his life as the pastor of the church at Smyrna. He battled heretics like Marcion and advanced the gospel of Christ greatly, eventually suffering a heroic martyrdom in his eighties. He wrote at least one letter to the church of Philippi encouraging them in the faith and sending on copies of the letters of Ignatius.

•Papias of Hierapolis (died c. AD 155).

A famous Christian who, as a young man, learned under the elderly apostle John and sought out the testimony of the other living disciples of Jesus, Papias also relayed information to later church fathers regarding the writing of the Gospels and other New Testament books. Although no complete writings of Papias have survived, we have several quotations of Papias in the writings of other early Christians.

•Justin Martyr (martyred c. AD 165).

After vainly seeking truth in Greek philosophy, Justin converted to Christianity. He wrote several treatises against paganism, Judaism, and false Christian teachers and ultimately gave his life for his faith while teaching in Rome.

•Melito of Sardis (died c. AD 190).

A famous pastor and apologist of Sardis in Asia Minor, Melito reportedly wrote multiple works expounding on the incarnation and passion of Jesus Christ as well as defending Christianity against the claims of paganism, Judaism, and Christian heresies.

•Athenagoras of Athens (died c. AD 190).

Originally a philosopher of Athens, Athenagoras probably became a Christian after reading the works of the apostles in an attempt to refute them. Athenagoras was among those great apologists of the early church who presented a written plea for toleration of Christians to the Emperors Marcus Aurelius and Commodus around AD 177.

•Theophilus of Antioch (died c. AD 190).

The pastor of Antioch several decades after Ignatius, Theophilus is known for three letters he wrote to an unbeliever defending the basics of the Christian faith against common philosophical and historical objections. Although the doctrine of the Trinity previously existed, Theophilus was the first to use the specific Greek word triad to refer to the Father, Son, and Holy Spirit.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

•Irenaeus of Lyons (martyred c. AD 200).

Originally from Asia Minor, Irenaeus was a disciple of Polycarp who served as the pastor for the church in Lyons (modern-day France). There he wrote a massive, five-volume work, Against All Heresies, in which he demonstrated the true Christian faith and refuted the errors of the heretical groups of his day, especially the Gnostics.

In the chaos of competing theories of the early church, criticisms against authentic Scripture, and attacks on the doctrine of Jesus Christ, Christians can rest assured that the essential truths of the faith were entrusted to faithful men who respected the teachings of Christ and the apostles. Not only did they live their lives for this faith, but they were also willing to die for it. They were imperfect in mind and speech, subject to the foibles of all sinful human vessels, and often in need of correction by God's perfect, inerrant Word. Yet because they took a stand for the truth, today we are able to read His written Word, the Bible, and worship His living Word, Jesus Christ, with confidence.

See also: Diversity in the New Testament ("Genealogical" Table – NT and Apostolic Fathers)

Early Church Fathers and the Spread of Christianity

Early Church Fathers Relationships Charts

Early Church Maps

Apostolic and Church Fathers – Writings / History (Beginning)

Dating Books of the NT Bible

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Nestorius

https://orthodoxwiki.org/Nestorius

Nestorius (386 – 451 AD) was a bishop who lived during the first half of the fifth century. He was Archbishop of Constantinople for three years and is most famous for his position during the Christological controversies in which he is considered the originator of the heresy known as Nestorianism. His chief antagonist during the Christological debates was Cyril of Alexandria, the Patriarch of Alexandria.

Life

Nestorius is believed to have been born in 386 Germanicia in Syria Euphoratenis. Little is known of his early life. He was educated in Antioch and is considered to be a disciple of Diodorus of Tarsus and Theodore of Mopsuestia, who were Cilician bishops and opponents of Arianism. Nestorius enjoyed a high reputation for eloquence in his orations and was zealous in his confrontations with heretics, principally the Arians. He was a hieromonk at the monastery of Euprepius when Emperor Theodosius II chose him to be Archbishop of Constantinople, being consecrated April 10, 428. Upon assuming the see of Constantinople he actively took action against the heretics.

About the end of 428, Nestorius began to preach in his sermons the Antiochian doctrine against the use of the title of Theotokos ("Mother of God" / god-bearer) in reference to the Virgin Mary, preferring the title Christotokos ("Mother of Christ"). This immediately brought an outcry from the Constantinoplian clergy and laity who had not been well disposed to this Antiochian stranger in the first place. The dispute spread beyond Constantinople when Cyril of Alexandria, representing the Alexandrian school, raised the issue within the imperial court. In an attempt to rid himself of Cyril, Nestorius recommended to Emperor Theodosius II the convening of a council. To Nestorius' chagrin Theodosius convened the 431 Council in Ephesus instead of Constantinople. Ephesus was a place more friendly to Cyril being that it was a special seat for the veneration of Mary and where the title Theotokos was popular. The council proceeded with much infighting and maneuvering, but in the end Nestorius was removed from office on June 22, 431 and labeled a heretic. In this dispute between the schools of Antioch and Alexandria, the Bishops of Rome, Celestine and Sixtus III, sided with Cyril.

Theodosius had favored Nestorius. But, under the influence of his sister Augusta Pulcheria he issued an imperial edict, on August 3, 435, condemning Nestorius and his writings. Nestorius initially retired to a monastery in Antioch but later was exiled to the monastery of the Great Oasis of Hibis in Thebaid, Egypt. He is believed to have died in Thebaid in 451.

Controversies

Christology controversies centered over the manner of union between Godhead and Manhood in Christ. The era of these controversies extended over the period from the fourth through sixth centuries and involved disputes between factions on defining, that is expressing in words, the manner of the union of the two conditions of Christ: the divine and the human. In the language of the day these arguments involved the expression of exact combinations of the semantic variables: ousia, physis, hypostasis, prosopon. The Cyril/Nestorius arguments were one of the battlegrounds during this interval of time. The dispute between Cyril and Nestorius was heightened by their use of same words differently. Nestorius used the words in a rigid manner, not recognizing recent changes in their meaning and usage, and failing to recognize the context that Cyril used. While Nestorious argued from a rigid semantical position and noted Cyril's inconsistent usage, Cyril felt Nestorious was advocating a two son definition as implied in Nestorius' adamant use of the title Mother of Christ. In the event, Cyril's arguments would prevail in the later councils, but Nestorious' banishment would also result in the split in the Church as a heretical group called Nestorians would form, centered in Persia.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Two natures of Jesus

http://www.theopedia.com/hypostatic-union

Nestorianism

Nestorianism insisted that there were two natures but that there were also two persons: one divine and the other human. Rather than unifying Jesus, this view separated the person of Jesus along with his two natures.

See also: Hypostatic Union.

Theopedia:

Nestorius is considered to be the originator of the Christological heresy known as Nestorianism, which emerged when he began preaching against the new title Theotokos or Mother of God, beginning to be used of the Virgin Mary. His immediate antagonist was Cyril, bishop of Alexandria. Although Nestorius did deny the Virgin birth of Jesus, he did not in fact maintain the heresy which bears his name.

Nestorianism is basically the doctrine that Jesus existed as two persons, the man Jesus and the divine Son of God, rather than as a unified person. This doctrine is identified with Nestorius (c.386-451), Patriarch of Constantinople, although he himself denied holding this belief. This view of Christ was condemned at the Council of Ephesus in 431, and the conflict over this view led to the Nestorian schism, separating the Assyrian Church of the East from the Byzantine Church.

The motivation for this view was an aversion to the idea that "God" suffered and died on the cross, be it the divinity itself, the Trinity, or one of the persons of the Trinity. Thus, they would say, Jesus the perfect man suffered and died, not the divine second person of the Trinity, for such is an impossible thought -- hence the inference that two "persons" essentially inhabited the one body of Jesus. Nestorius himself argued against calling Mary the "Mother of God" (Theotokos) as the church was beginning to do. He held that Mary was the mother of Christ only in respect to His humanity. The council at Ephesus (431) accused Nestorius of the heresy of teaching "two persons" in Christ and insisted that Theotokos was an appropriate title for Mary.

The problem with Nestorianism is that it threatens the atonement. If Jesus is two persons, then which one died on the cross? If it was the "human person" then the atonement is not of divine quality and thereby insufficient to cleanse us of our sins.

CARM: Nestorianism

https://carm.org/dictionary-nestorianism

Nestorianism is a theological error concerning the two natures of Christ which states that the divine and human natures of Christ were so separated from each other that they were "not in contact." The problem here is that worship of the human Jesus would then not be allowed. (See Hypostatic Union, which is the correct view of Christ's two natures, and Monophysitism (that the divine and human natures in Christ combined to form a new third nature) which are the incorrect views of Christ's two natures).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Early Church History

Church History Timeline
http://www.churchtimeline.com/Timeline/Index/120/220

Early Church History 101
http://www.churchhistory101.com/century2-p6.php

Early Church History [PDF]

Christological Controversies

See also: Apostolic and Church Fathers – Writings / History

The Post-Nicene Greek Fathers: The Alexandrian and Antiochian Schools (Jackson)
http://www.earlychristianwritings.com/jackson2/03_ale.html

The Post-Nicene Greek Fathers: Chronological Table
http://www.earlychristianwritings.com/jackson2/00_table.html

The Post-Nicene Greek Fathers: Full Text (MS Word Doc) (Jackson)
http://www.tomparnelle.com/College/The%20Faith/The%20Post%20Nicene%20Greek%20Fathers.doc

History of the Christian Church, Volume II: Nicene and Post-Nicen Christianity, AD 311-600 (Schaff)
https://en.wikisource.org/wiki/Nicene_and_Post-Nicene_Fathers:_Series_I/Volume_IX/Prolegomena/Part_13 [PDF]

History of the Christian Church, Volume III: Nicene and Post-Nicene Christianity. A.D. 311-600 – General View. Alexandrian and Antiochian Schools (Schaff)
https://www.ccel.org/ccel/schaff/hcc3.iii.xii.xix.html

Excerpt:

The Alexandrian school of theology, with its characteristic speculative and mystical turn, favored a connection of the divine and human in the act of the incarnation so close, that it was in danger of losing the human in the divine, or at least of mixing it with the divine;[1537] while, conversely, the Antiochian or Syrian school, in which the sober intellect and reflection prevailed, inclined to the opposite extreme of an abstract separation of the two natures.[1538] In both cases the mystery of the incarnation, the veritable and permanent union of the divine and human in the one person of Christ, which is essential to the idea of a Redeemer and Mediator, is more or less weakened or altered. In the former case the incarnation becomes a transmutation or mixture (σύγκρασις) of the divine and human; in the latter, a mere indwelling (ἐνοίκησις) of the Logos in the man, or a moral union (συνάφεια) of the two natures, or rather of the two persons.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Full Text: https://www.ccel.org/ccel/schaff/hcc3 (online and downloadable)

Theopedia: Church History

https://www.theopedia.com/church-history

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Early Church History related

Notes on Antiochene Theology

Antiochene Theology (also: here)

The Antiochene School

The Antiochene Tradition

How to pronounce Antiochene [Video]

Antiochene Christianity (Catholic Definition):

The dominant theology of the early Church in Antioch. It was generally in contrast with and sometimes opposed to the theology of Alexandria. Its underlying philosophy, favoring the historical rather than the speculative, was from Aristotle (384-322 B.C.). In Christology it stressed the humanity of Christ, sometimes to the extreme of denying the hypostatic union.

Wikipedia: School of Antioch

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/School_of_Antioch

Excerpt:

The School of Antioch was one of the two major centers of the study of biblical exegesis and theology during Late Antiquity; the other was the Catechetical School of Alexandria. This group was known by this name because the advocates of this tradition were based in the city of Antioch, one of the major cities of the ancient Roman Empire.

While the Christian intellectuals of Alexandria emphasized the allegorical interpretation of Scriptures and tended toward a Christology that emphasized the union of the human and the divine, those in Antioch held to a more literal and occasionally typological exegesis and a Christology that emphasized the distinction between the human and the divine in the person of Jesus Christ. The school in general tended to what might be called, in a rather loose sense, an Adoptionist Christology.[1] Nestorius, before becoming Patriarch of Constantinople, had been a monk at Antioch and had there become imbued with the principles of the Antiochene theological school.[2]

The school of Antioch is best divided into three periods:

- the early school (170-early fourth century)

The earliest author known of this period is Theophilus of Antioch. Then there is a gap of a century and in the first half of the fifth century there are three known antiochene authors: the best known is Eusebius of Emesa; other representatives are Acacius of Caesarea and Theodore bishop of Heraklea.

- the middle school (350-433)

This period includes at least three different generations: Diodorus of Tarsus, who directed an ἀσκητήριον (school) he may have founded. Among his disciples, the best known are John Chrysostom and Theodorus of Mopsuestia. The main figure of the third generation was Nestorius.

- the late school (after 433).

After the Council of Ephesus (431), the School of Antioch loses prestige. However, after the Council of Chalcedon (451), the Antiochian school becomes the sole theological school within Eastern and Western

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Christianity, where the Far-Eastern Churches adopted the Alexandrian School of Theology. Apparently only two later authors are known: Basil of Seleucia and Gennadius of Constantinople.

Notes on Alexandrian Theology

Alexandrian Theology (also: here)

Allegorical Interpretation of the Scriptures / The School of Alexandria

Wikipedia: Alexandrian School
https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Alexandrian_school

Excerpt:

The Alexandrian school is a collective designation for certain tendencies in literature, philosophy, medicine, and the sciences that developed in the Hellenistic cultural center of Alexandria, Egypt during the Hellenistic and Roman periods.

Alexandria was a remarkable center of learning due to the blending of Greek and Oriental influences, its favorable situation and commercial resources, and the enlightened energy of some of the Macedonian Dynasty of the Ptolemies ruling over Egypt, in the final centuries BC. Much scholarly work was collected in the great Library of Alexandria during this time. A lot of epic poetry, as well as works on geography, history, mathematics, astronomy and medicine were composed during this period.

The name of Alexandrian school is also used to describe the religious and philosophical developments in Alexandria after the 1st century. The mix of Jewish theology and Greek philosophy led to a syncretic mix and much mystical speculation. The Neoplatonists devoted themselves to examining the nature of the soul, and sought communion with God. The two great schools of biblical interpretation in the early Christian church incorporated Neoplatonism and philosophical beliefs from Plato's teachings into Christianity, and interpreted much of the Bible allegorically. The founders of the Alexandrian school of Christian theology Clement of Alexandria and Origen..

Catechetical School of Alexandria
https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Catechetical_School_of_Alexandria

Excerpt:

The Catechetical School of Alexandria was a school of Christian theologians and priests in Alexandria. The teachers and students of the school (also known as the Didascalium) were influential in many of the early theological controversies of the Christian church. It was one of the two major centers of the study of biblical exegesis and theology during Late Antiquity, the other being the School of Antioch.

According to Jerome the Alexandrian school was founded by Mark the Apostle. The earliest recorded dean was supposedly Athenagoras (176). He was succeeded by Pantaenus 181, who was succeeded as head of the school by his student Clement of Alexandria in 190.[2]

Other notable theologians with a connection to the school include Origen, Gregory Thaumaturgus, Heraclas, Dionysius "the Great", and Didymus the Blind. Others, including Jerome and Basil, made trips to the school to interact with the scholars there.

Continuity with the ancient school is claimed by the Coptic Theological Seminary, Cairo.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Alexandrian vs Antiochene:

The Alexandrian and Antiochian Christological Thoughts [PDF]

Hermeneutics: Alexandrian VS. Antiochene

Antioch and Alexandrea - Manuscript Evidence

Theological Traditions of Alexandria and Antioch

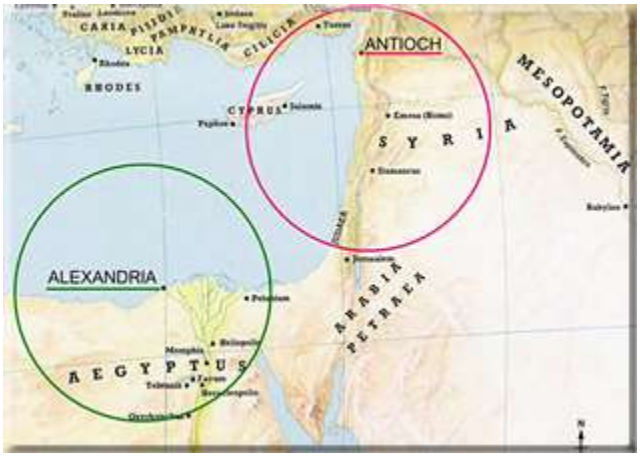
The Schools of Antioch and Alexandria

The Schools of Alexandria and Antioch

Antiochenes and Alexandrians

Alexandrian and Antiochian Schools

Classical Models for the Interpretation of Scripture [PPT]



The School of Antioch vs The School of Alexandria: Source of Christology Issues http://desertfathers.blogspot.com/2012/07/school-of-antioch-versus-school-of.html

Excerpt:

Different individuals emphasized either Christ's divinity or his humanity, just as they had done before.

- Those who emphasized his divinity tended to ignore his humanity: the theological School of Alexandria.
- Those who emphasized his humanity did not deny his divinity, they simply made a distinction between divinity and humanity: the School of Antioch.

Theologians of the School of Alexandria argued that one could not distinguish clearly between Christ's humanity and divinity because a) Christ was fully divine [council of Nicaea] and b) divinity was infinite and could not be limited and human in any way. (source: The Church of the East)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The School of Antioch was one of the two major centers of the study of biblical exegesis and theology during Late Antiquity; the other was the catechetical school of Alexandria. This group was known by this name because the advocates of this tradition were based in the city of Antioch, one of the major cities of the ancient Roman Empire.

While the Christian intellectuals of Alexandria emphasized the allegorical interpretation of Scriptures and tended toward a christology that emphasized the union of the human and the divine, those in Antioch held to a more literal and occasionally typological exegesis and a christology that emphasized the distinction between the human and the divine in the person of Jesus Christ. The school in general tended to what might be called, in a rather loose sense, an Adoptionist Christology.... Nestorius, before becoming Patriarch of Constantinople, had been a monk at Antioch and had there become imbued with the principles of the Antiochene theological school....

The School of Antioch is best divided into three periods:

- the early school (270-early fourth century)
- the middle school (350-433)
- the late school (after 433)

After the early School of Antioch came into decline, the presbyter Diodore of Tarsus re-founded it in the middle of the fourth century as a semi-monastic community. (source: School of Antioch (Wikipedia))

A Comparison of the Theological Schools of Alexandria and Antioch By Dcn. George Zgourides

Founded in about 180 CE by Pantaenus (a former Stoic philosopher), the theological School of Alexandria in Egypt was the first-known organized Christian institution of higher learning. It became a leading center of the allegorical method of Scripture interpretation, which was the same exegetical method practiced by Palestinian Rabbinical schools.

Allegorical exegesis involves, as St. Augustine noted, understanding one passage of Scripture by virtue of example, concept, or another passage. Allegory differs from the parable method in its statement of doctrinal truths rather than practical advice. It also differs from the literal method of Scripture interpretation, in which the surface meaning of a passage is the passageís meaning. An example of allegory in the Bible is that of "the vine," found in Psalm 80:8–16 and Isaiah 5:1–6.

Under such leaders as Clement (c. 150–215) and Origen (c. 185–254), the theological school of Alexandria endorsed a reestablishment of relations between Christian faith and Greek culture (including the Platonic philosophical tradition), and attempted to preserve Orthodox Christianity in the face of heterodox theologies during periods of doctrinal transition.

The Alexandrians typically found allegory in most every passage of Scripture. Moreover, in their accounts of the person of Christ, they tended to focus almost exclusively on His divinity. Some critics have noted that the Alexandrians, in trying to protect against an overemphasis on the humanity of Christ (which they felt led to such heresies as Nestorianism; see below), they sometimes leaned toward tritheism, into which Origen is said to have drifted.

Monophysitism (the view that virtually negates Christ's humanity by claiming Him to be divine only) is thought to have been an extreme form of Alexandrian Christological thinking.

Opposing the School of Alexandria was the School of Antioch, which emphasized the literal interpretation of the Bible. Founded circa 200, the theological school of Antioch in Syria stressed Scriptural literalism and the completeness of Christ's humanity. Flourishing in the 4th-6th centuries, the School of Antioch gave rise to several significant theologians, including Diodore of Tarsus, Theodore of Mopsuestia, Theodoret of Cyrrhus, and St. John Chrysostom. What is known of the school of Antioch's founder, the martyr-presbyter Lucian (d. 312), is minimal, with the exception of his having been a keen Biblical student who revised the Greek texts of the Septuagint and the New Testament.Evidently his strictly theological perspectives were heterodox, for Arius and Eusebius of Nicomedia claimed to be his students, even calling themselves "Lucianists."

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Concerning Arianism, it is important to remember that the Church in the 4th century was dominated by controversy over the propositions of an Alexandrian priest, Arius (c. 250–336), who held that the Son was not eternal but created by God as an instrument for creation of the earth. In other words, Christ, though higher than humanity, was inferior to God, non-eternal, and with a definite beginning. In 325 the Council of Nicaea condemned Arianism and affirmed to Nestorianism, the majority of his exegetical and theological writings were destroyed or lost.

Unlike Theodore, St. John Chrysostom was foremost a preacher, aptly earning the title Chrysostomos, or "Golden-Mouthed." The vast majority of Chrysostom's writings were expositions of the Bible, in which he demonstrated himself to be a rigid proponent of Antiochene literalism. His sermons are reflections of the ecclesiastical, cultural, and social status of Constantinople and Antioch in that day. Not hesitant to denounce and condemn heresy, Chrysostom's legacy to Orthodoxy is that of an outstanding rhetorician, writer, homilist, and liturgist.

The final renowned Antiochene bishop, Theodoret of Cyrrhus (c. 393–458), was also a prolific author. His writings were extensive in range, but the most noteworthy are his Ecclesiastical History, which continued Eusebius' work to 428, and his Remedy for Greek Maladies, which was a series of ancient apologies against paganism. Theodoret also zealously defended Antiochene Christology against Bishop Cyril of Alexandria's theology.

'Two Schools': Alexandria and Antioch [Recommended]

http://www.monachos.net/library/index.php/patristics/themes/244-two-schools-alexandria-and-antioch

Scholars love categories, and seem perennially enamored of well-defined classifications. Thus have we the homogenizing collective known as 'the Gnostics', despite the fact that only a miniscule group was ever known to designate itself thus, and those fathers referred to as 'anti-Gnostic' (e.g. Irenaeus of Lyons) make almost nothing of them. So too 'the Arians', despite the fact that the no one at all seems to have used this as a title of self-designation, though many used 'Lucianist', which scholars seem most often simply to ignore. Perhaps most poignant, of late, has been the title 'Nestorians', often used in collective reference to groups who explicitly and emphatically deny affiliation with the thought and doctrine of Nestorius.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

We ought not suggest that categorizations and general classifications are things necessarily of error and deception. Certainly there were and are groups who, while themselves claiming no direct inheritance from Arius of Alexandria, nonetheless thought and preached doctrines of the same essential substance as those for which Arius was known. To call their teaching 'Arian' needn't imply a direct dependence on such a namesake; it is a moniker devised to call to mind a general theological framework, a system of approach and interpretation, that resembles one more widely known. Similarly 'Nestorian'. One need never have heard of the fifth-century Constantinopolitan patriarch to engage in doctrinal reflection that presents the same essential tendencies and conclusions as his.

Yet when we apply categories and classifications to the progression of history, we are challenged to remember that classification and categorization always relies, to some extent, on generalization; and generalization is a dangerous game. When William Blake wrote that 'to generalize is to be an idiot', he was perhaps too harsh. George Bernard Shaw shared his pessimism, though in less alacritous terms: 'Crude classifications and false generalizations are the curse of organized life'. But life mandates, at times, precisely this curse. So Georg Hegel: 'An idea is always a generalization, and generalization is a property of thinking. To generalize means to think'.

This may well be so. As we look back on history, we find trends and tendencies and discover thereby currents of reflection that have influence in their confluence of approach as much as in any individual consideration. This is perhaps no more the case than in the scholastic assertion of two 'schools' of Christological thought prevalent in the fourth and fifth centuries: the 'Alexandrian' and the 'Antiochene'.

It behooves us first of all to recognize that such 'schools', as schools, never existed in a concrete sense. Unlike the famed Catechetical School at Alexandria (which itself may not have been an academy in a proper sense -- the question is much debated), the 'schools' of Alexandria and Antioch are wholly homogenized historical readings of convergent manners of reflection in the ancient world. We can speak of an 'Alexandrine school' only in the manner that we might speak of a 'British school of thought' on international relations, or a the 'German school' of biblical source criticism. Such terms are applied by the observer, the historian and thinker, to accommodate evident convergent themes and approaches across geographical locales; but they do not represent, in their classification, any organized body or coherent system of intentional uniformity.

With regard to the Christological discussions of our period (the later fourth and early fifth centuries), reference made in modern scholarship to the 'Alexandrian' and 'Antiochene' schools attempts to homogenize under two relatively coherent umbrellas two general approaches to Christological reflection centered round these great cities and sees. The Alexandrine 'school' is seen most often as the older, dating back at least to Arius, and including such notable figures as the sainted bishop Athanasius of that city, as well as the anathematized Apollinarius. The insistence of all three writers, as well as others of their converging tradition, upon the divinity of the Logos in the 'becoming' of the incarnation, and a tendency in each to see that incarnation as a 'taking on of flesh' by the Logos, has earned their 'school' the reputation of fostering another scholarly category: a 'Logos/sarx Christology'.

Those referred to as 'Antiochene'-for example Diodore of Tarsus, Theodore of Mopsuestia, Nestorius of Constantinople, John of Antioch-are often referred to as preferring a 'Logos/anthropos Christology'; namely, one in which the Logos is united to man, or even 'a man'. A dominant insistence upon the full humanity of the incarnate Christ characterizes all those shuffled under this umbrella.

The classification of these 'schools' is rather rough-and-ready. While some cases are clear-cut (e.g. Nestorius, who is evidently a theological descendent of Theodore), others are more difficult. St Cyril is a notable example. As bishop of Alexandria and strongly influenced by the theology of his predecessor, Athanasius, the temptation is certainly to call him a member of the Alexandrian 'school'. Yet one is hard-pressed to consider Cyril's Christology of hypostatic union conformable to any definition of the Logos/sarx 'model' by which that 'school' is so often characterized. And while such a figure as John of Antioch is almost universally considered a member of the Antiochene 'school', his later Christological dialogues with Cyril, most pointedly their joint 'formula of reunion', addresses the incarnational becoming in a manner that hardly fits within the broad categories of Theodore's reflection, taken by most as the standard for Antiochene Christology.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

So we must take care not to read these 'schools' not schools in any strict sense. Rather, they represent loci of converging approaches to Christological reflection centered around two great strongholds of theological activity in the fourth and fifth centuries. And despite the dangers of generalization, which in historical analysis leads too often to a false-homogenization, certain common characteristics of these converging traditions can be ascertained, and prove helpful in our reading of doctrinal reflection in its historical progression. In a general sense, these trends and tendencies are as follows:

Alexandrian 'school'	Antiochene 'school'
Tendency toward Platonic metaphysical approach; a desire to move beyond appearances to the 'truly real'.	Tendency toward Aristotelian stress on concrete realities, factual historicity and its analysis, and the discernable characteristics of concrete reality.
Favors an allegorical reading of scripture, first proffered in a notable way by Origen; driven here by a desire to 'get to the real meaning' of given biblical passages.	Favors an historical/factual, 'literal', reading of scripture.
With regard to Christ, a tendency to focus on inner, metaphysical composition and activity.	A tendency to focus upon the factual/historical aspects of the human life of Christ-what he did, said, accomplished, etc. Cf. Theodore's exegetical interest in the 'historical Jesus'.
Soteriological convictions driven most often by notions of sanctification/divinization, mystical relation, etc.	Soteriological convictions driven by corrective agency of divinity on humanity.
Generally: stress laid upon the ontological oneness of Christ-the divinity and humanity form one being-wrought most often by reference to the Logos/sarx framework (though not always; cf. Cyril of Alexandria).	Generally: stress laid upon the distinction between God and man in Christ-these not only distinct in discernable attributes, but in substantive reality. Preservation of full reality and integrity of both natures. Logos/anthropos model predominates.
Key weakness lies in the routine jeopardy into which the persistent distinction of natures is cast in the maintenance of the single ontological reality of the incarnate Christ.	Key weakness lies in the difficulty in expressing the genuine union of the two natures, and indeed the true oneness or singular subjectivity of the incarnate Christ.

Alexandrian and Antiochian approaches to hermeneutics http://www.clarion-journal.com/files/alison-whittall---the-beatitudes.pdf [PDF]

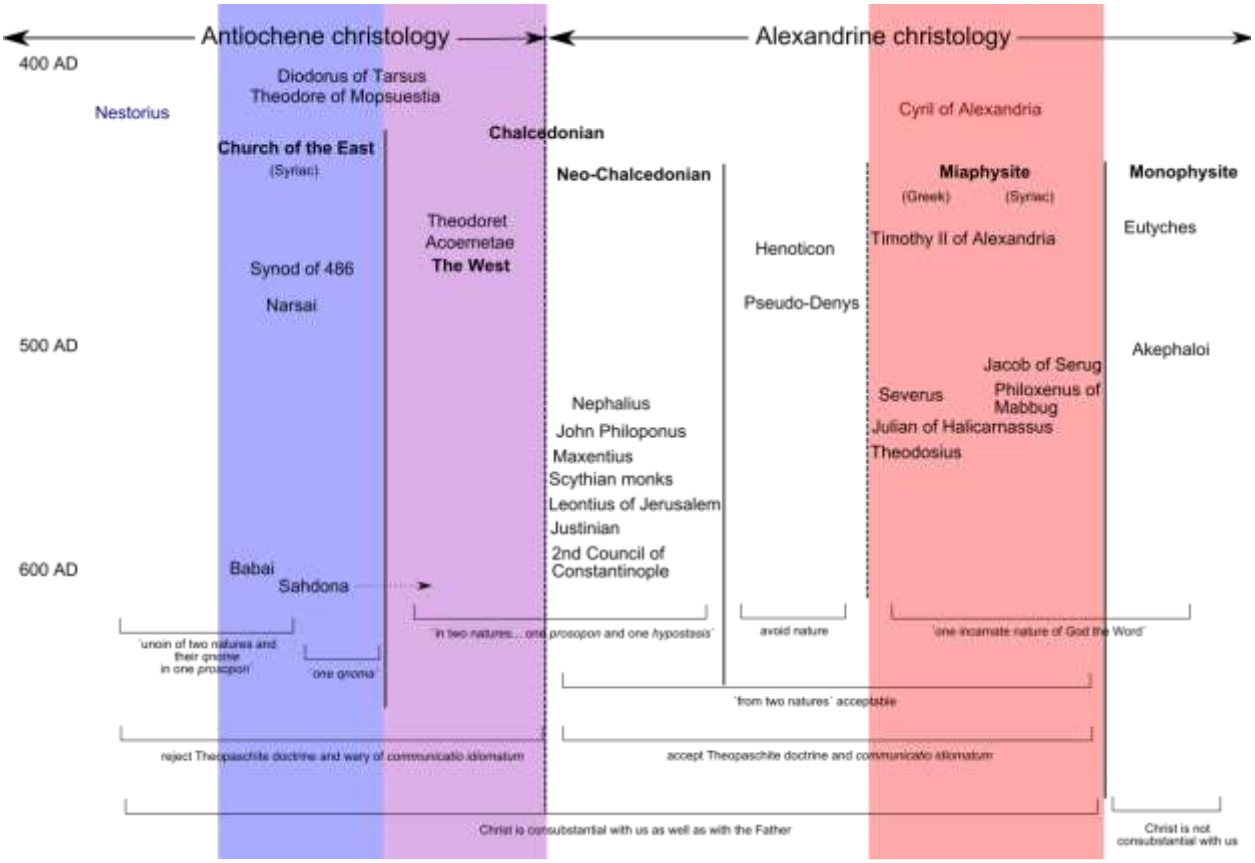
Excerpt:



Typically, the view of Alexandrian and Antiochian hermeneutics has been one of dichotomy: Alexandrians were allegorical, and Antiochians were literal-historical. However, Patristic scholars have been arguing for at least sixty years that this is far too simplistic and that, whilst there were some differences, the two schools had much in common, if indeed two schools existed at all…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Early Church History [PDF] Christological Controversies

From Wikipedia: Post-Apostolic controversies (re: Christology)

Christological spectrum during the 5th–7th centuries showing the views of the Church of the East (light "blue"), the Miaphysite Churches ("pink") and the Eastern Orthodox and Catholic Churches (light "purple").

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

https://www.slideshare.net/SammieGSmith/06-june-14-2015-1-john-1526-walking-in-the-light-49620566

Churches in the 1st Century

Philosophy of the 1st Century Mediterranean world

- God is a spirit, and spirit is good; matter (physical) is evil.
- "Dualism" – contrasting aspects that are equal
- Their Logic – If this is true, God cannot be fully God(spirit) and fully man(physical body) in Jesus.
- A Holy God cannot be in sinful matter

The "…isms" of false teachers

- Docetism – the heresy that denies the reality of Jesus' human nature
  - Do not believe that God (spirit) could take human (physical) form
- Gnosticism – special "knowledge" from God
  - I know the truth, and I am saved by what I know, therefore, it does not matter how I live
  - Believe they do not sin

The "…isms" of false teachers

- Antinomianism – "against the law"
  - There are no moral laws God expects Christians to obey, therefore I do not sin
  - Jesus fulfilled the OT law and commandments and they do not apply
- Asceticism – I am saved by what I don't do
  - The more self-denial, the more holy I am
  - I don't (smoke, drink or cuss)!

Definition of Deity according to John

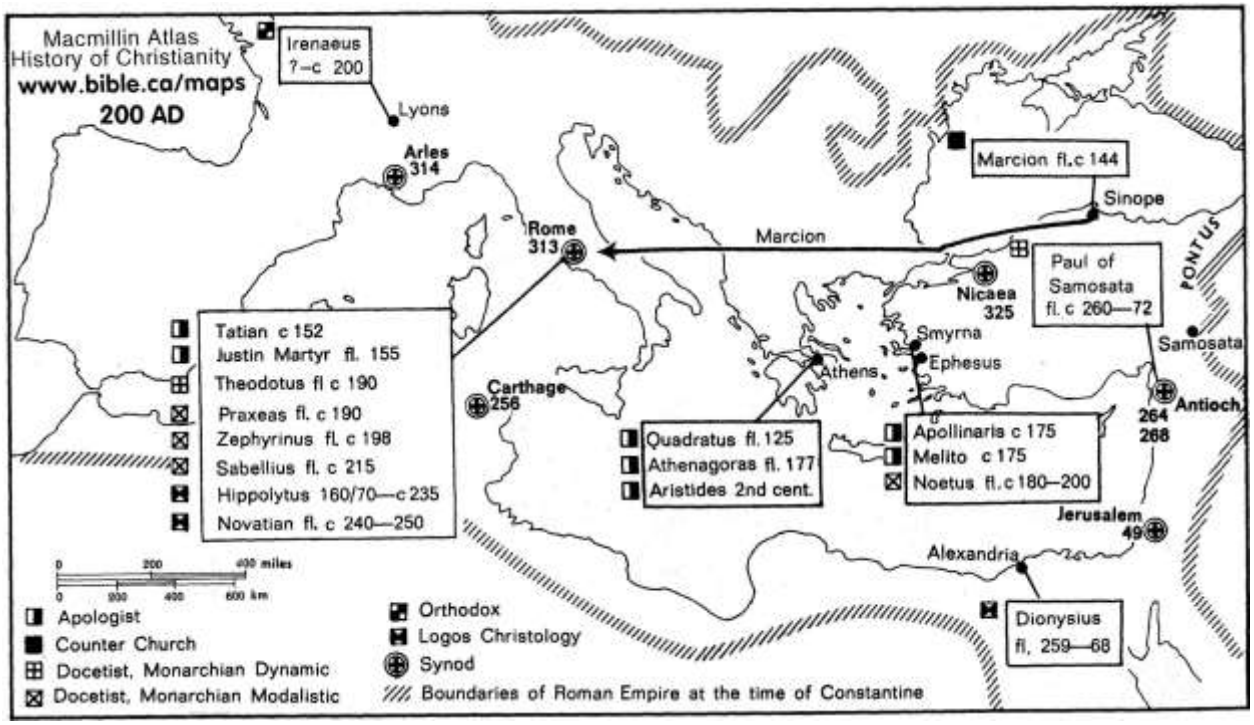
1. God is light.
   1 John 1:5
   5 This is the message we have heard from him and declare to you: God is light; in him there is no darkness at all.
2. God is love.
   1 John 4:8
   8 Whoever does not love does not know God, because God is love.
3. God is spirit.
   John 4:24
   24 God is spirit, and his worshipers must worship in the Spirit and in truth."

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Early Church History Maps

Source: http://www.bible.ca/maps/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



Growth of Christianity from 33AD - 1100AD.

Eastern and Western division of church between Rome and Constantinople

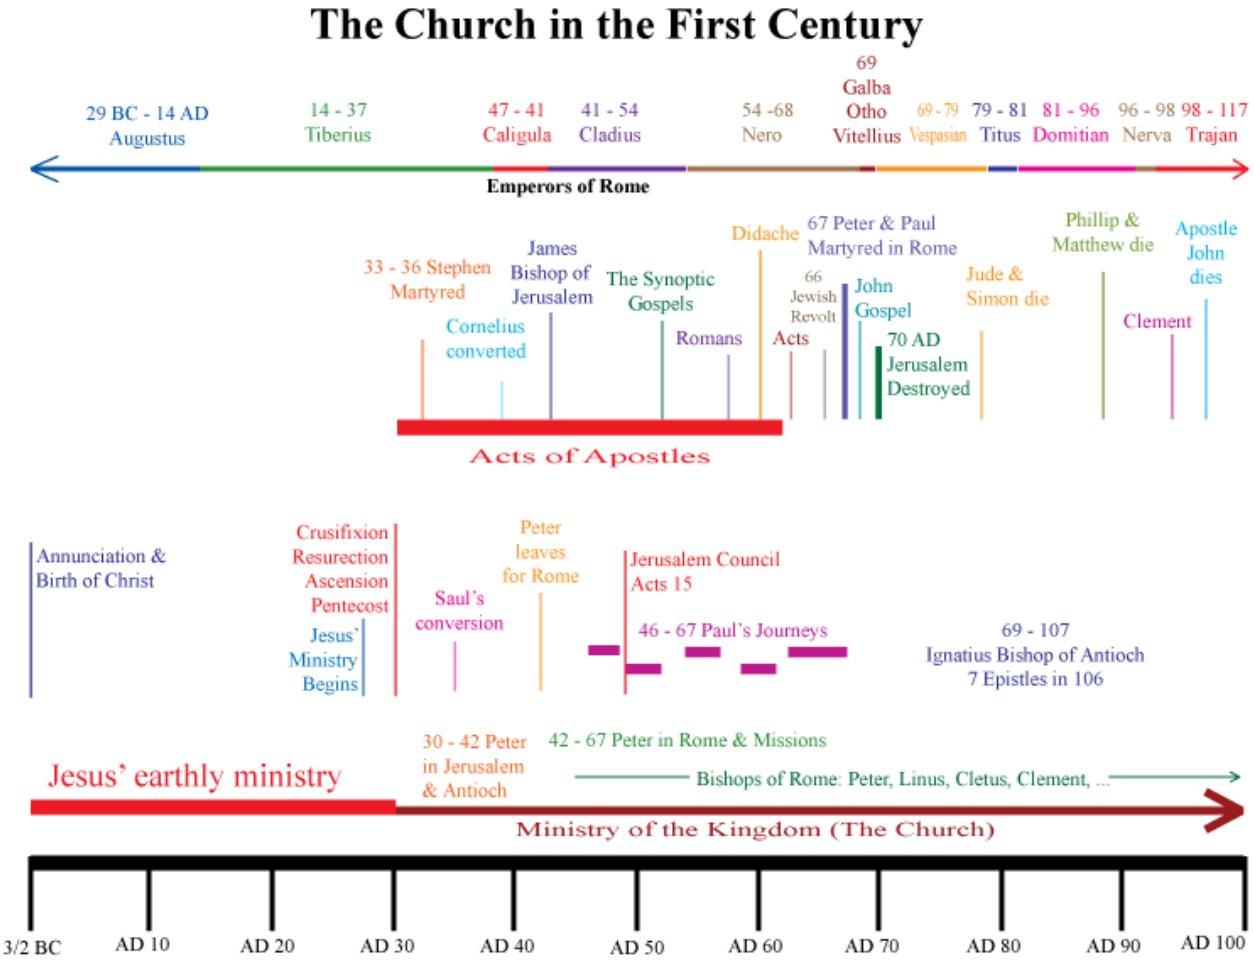
 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Index of early church fathers and apologists with their theological views. 200AD

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The three schools of theology 300AD

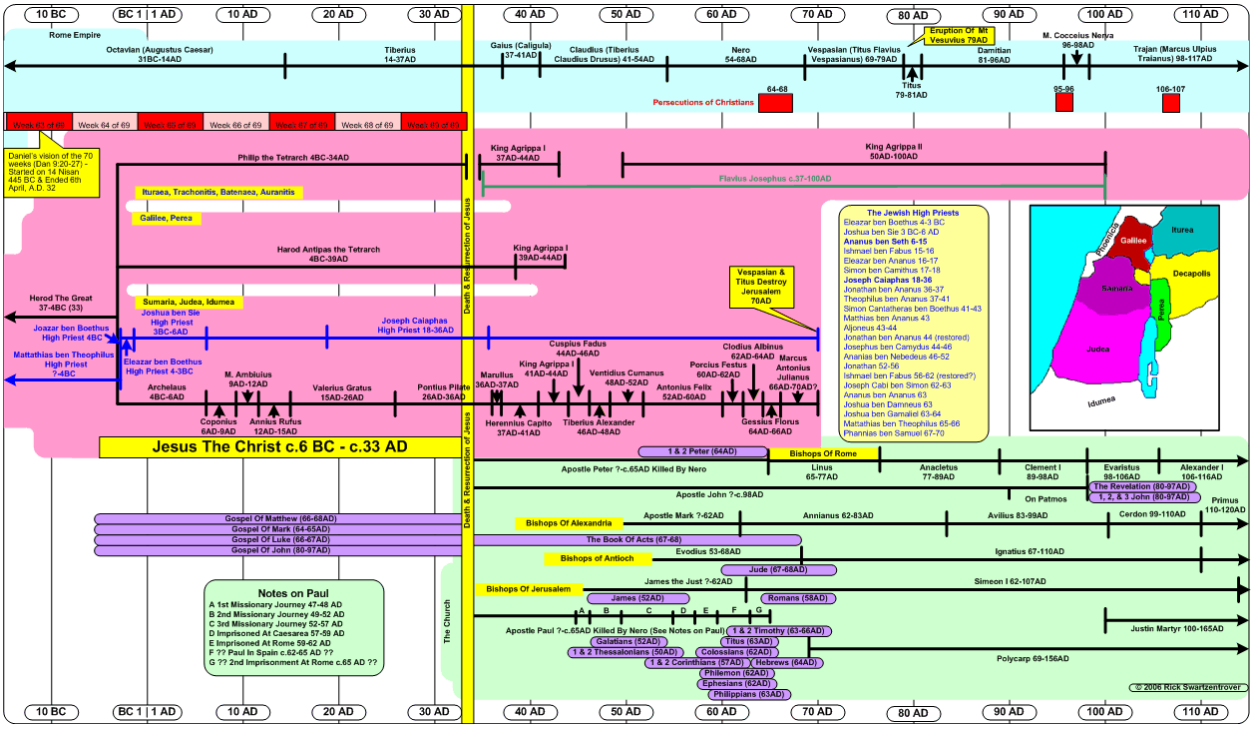
 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



Churches in 325 AD during Nicene era.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

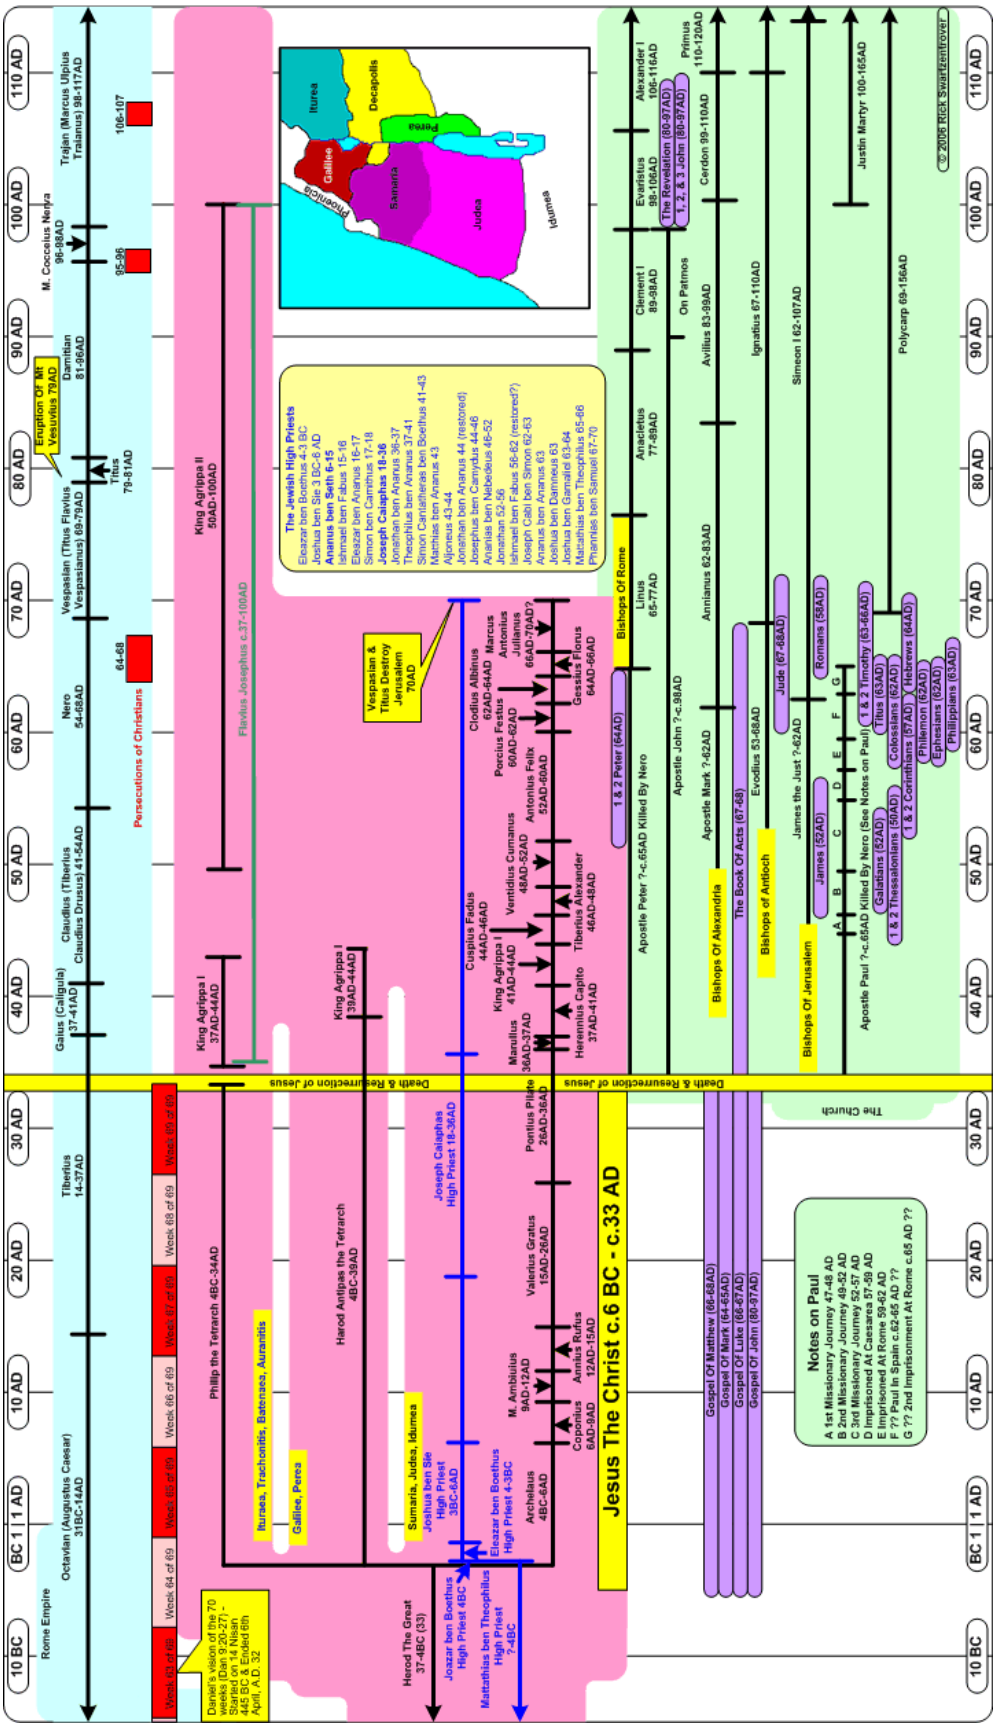
Early Church History Timelines



New Testament Summary Charts
http://kukis.org/Charts/NTSummaryChart.htm

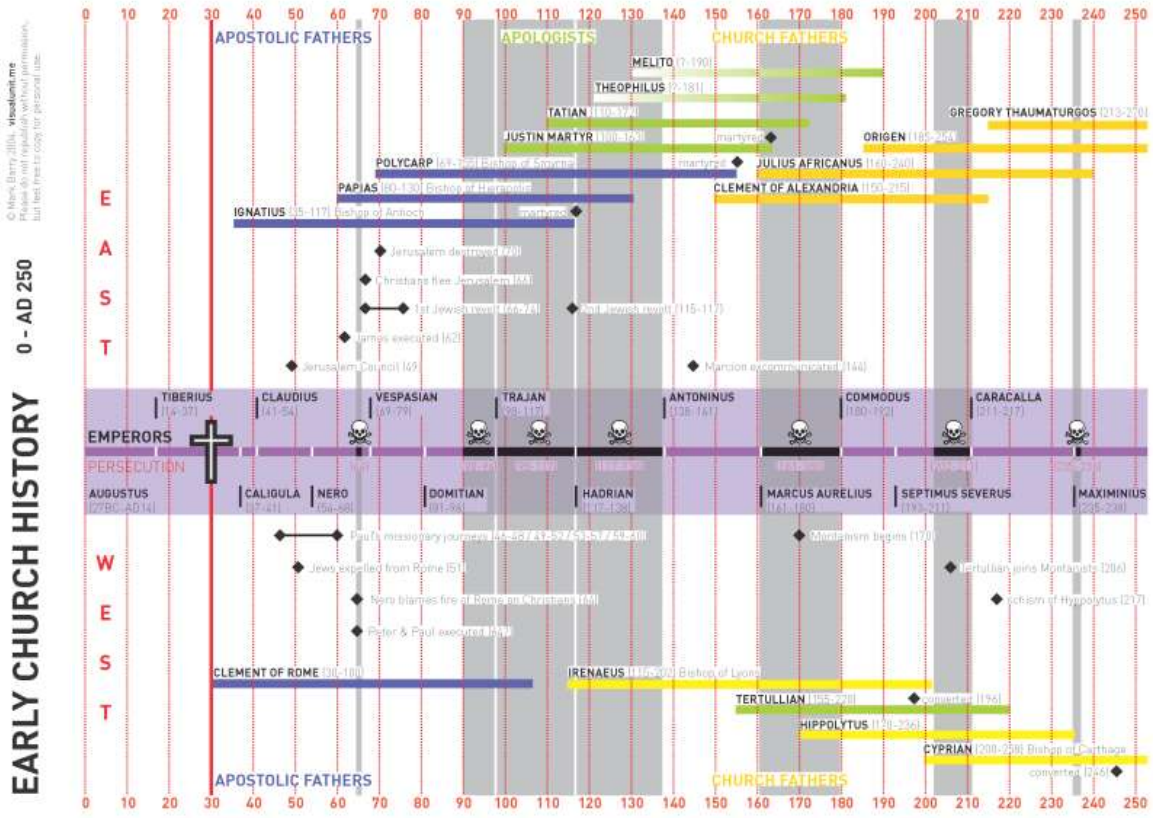
(Source: http://www.agapebiblestudy.com/charts/First%20Century%20of%20the%20Church%20Timeline.htm)

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



Timeline 10 BC - 110 AD (New Testament)

(Source: http://www.swartzentrover.com/cotor/Bible/Timelines/10%20BC-110%20AD.htm)

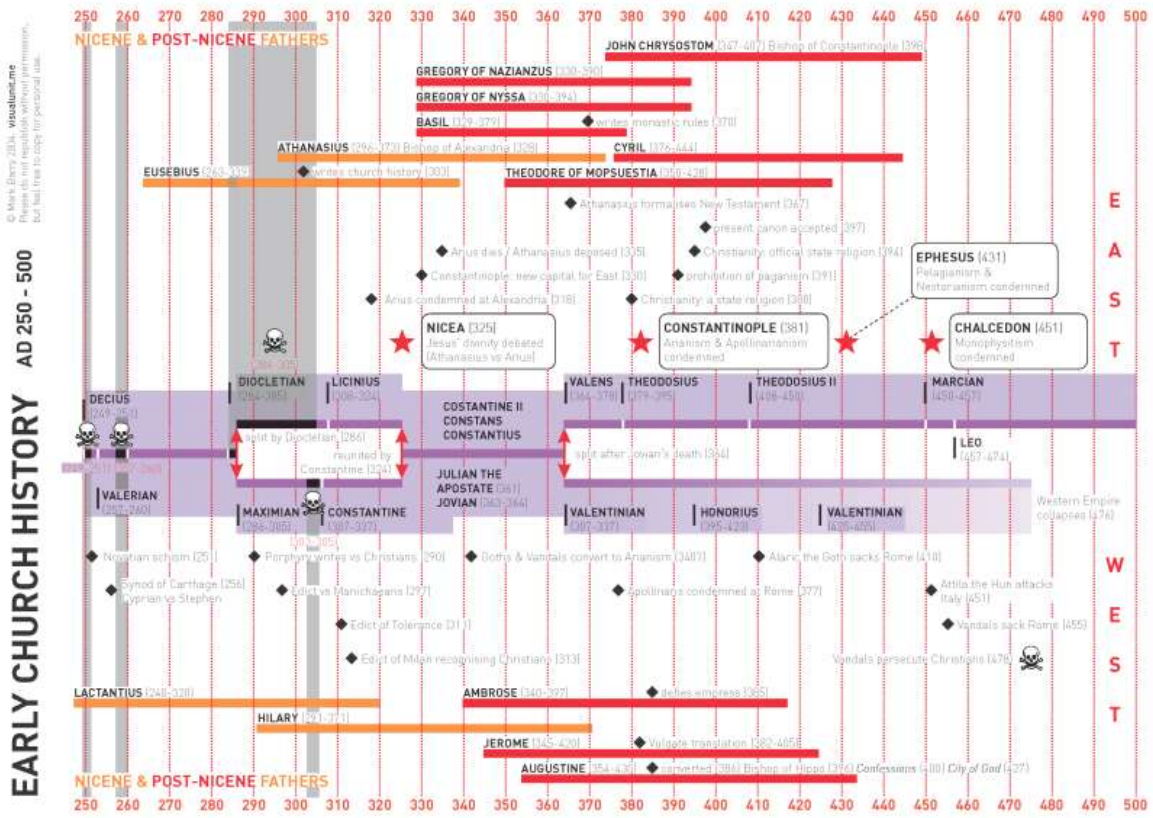


See next page for larger view…

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

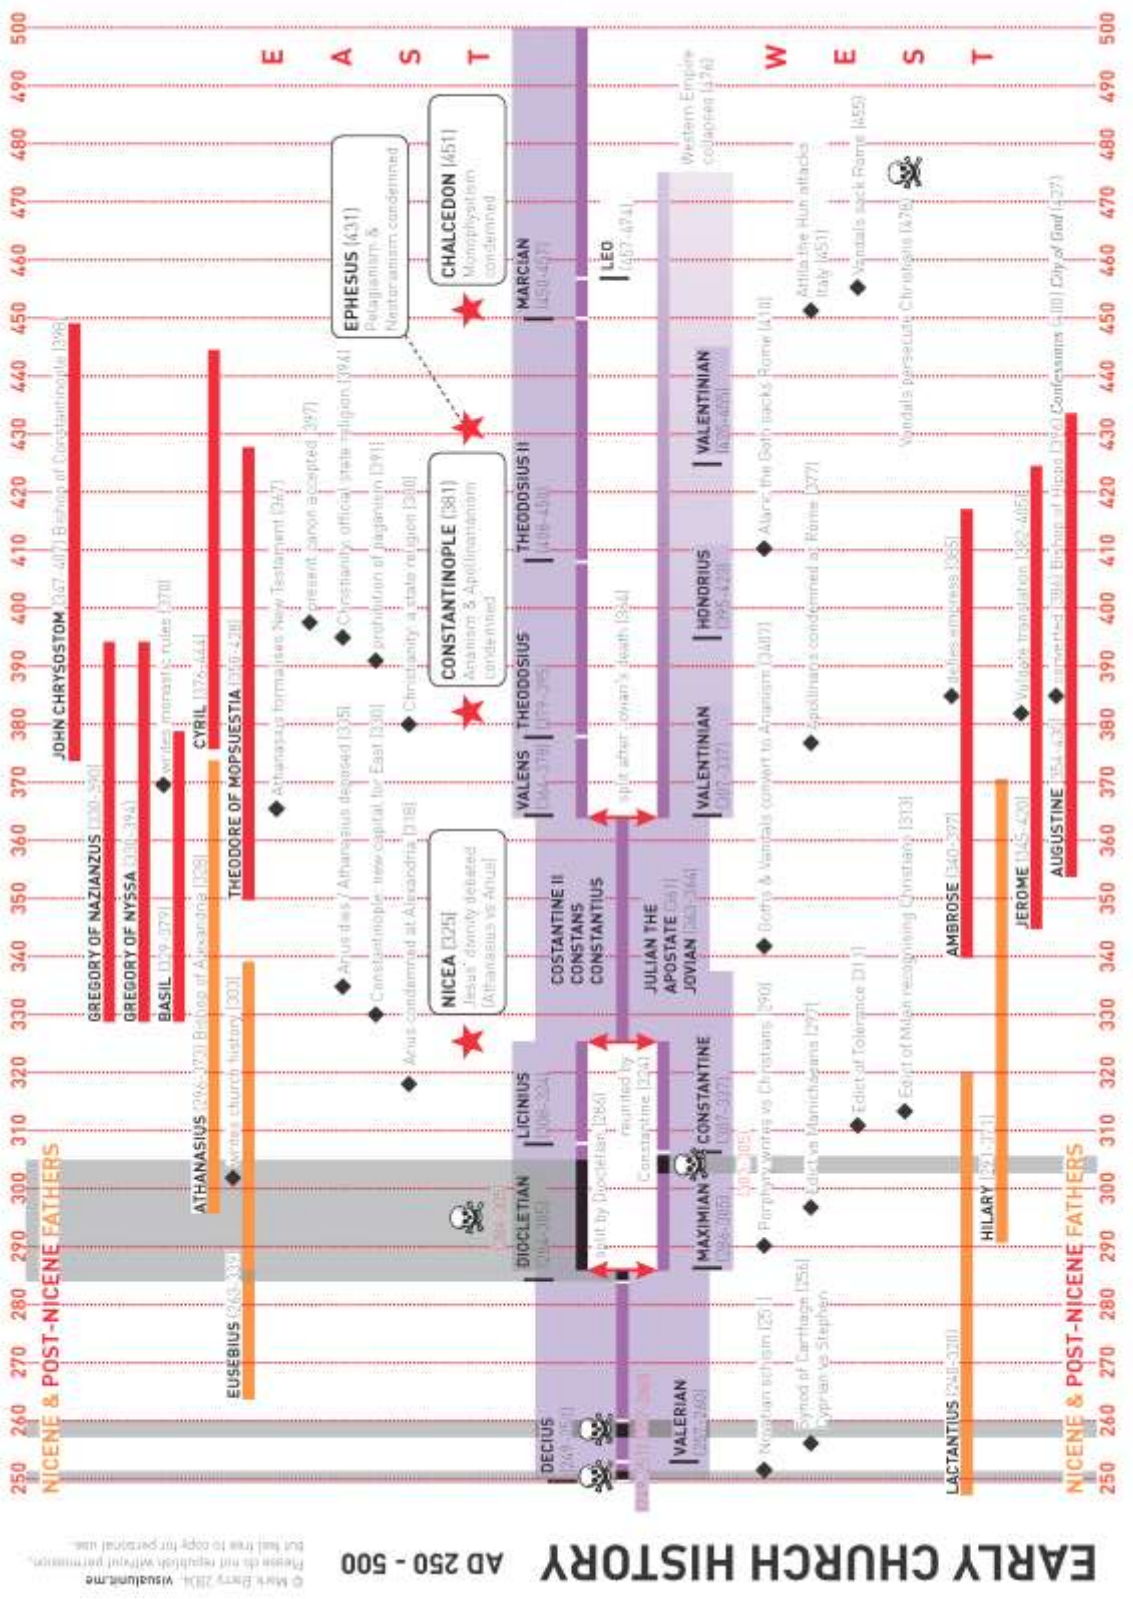
 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Early Chuch History 0 – 250 AD



See next page for larger view…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



EARLY CHURCH HISTORY
0 - AD 250
EMPERORS
PERSECUTION
APOSTOLIC FATHERS
APOLOGISTS CHURCH FATHERS
EAST
WEST
TIBERIUS
CLAUDIUS
NERO
VESPASIAN
TRAJAN
ANTONINUS
COMMODUS
CARACALLA
MAXIMINUS
AUGUSTUS
CALIGULA
DOMITIAN
HADRIAN
MARCUS AURELIUS
SEPTIMUS SEVERUS
CLEMENT OF ROME
IGNATIUS
POLYCARP
PAPIAS
JUSTIN MARTYR
TATIAN
THEOPHILUS
MELITO
JULIUS AFRICANUS
CLEMENT OF ALEXANDRIA
ORIGEN
GREGORY THAUMATURGOS
IRENAEUS
TERTULLIAN
HIPPOLYTUS
CYPRIAN

Early Chuch History 250 - 500 AD

See next page for larger view…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

A Brief History of Christian Mission

A BRIEF HISTORY OF CHRISTIAN MISSION

© Mark Barry 2008 (with Bruce Dipple & Greg Anderson) | visualunit.me | Please do not republish without permission, but feel free to copy for personal use.

AD 0-400 → JERUSALEM to ROME

28-30	Jesus' earthly life, death & resurrection
33	Pentecost & the birth of the Christian church
34	Persecution of the church – the gospel spreads from Jerusalem to Judea & Samaria
48-57	Paul's missionary journeys to Asia-minor, Macedonia & Greece
60	Paul reaches Rome
64-311	Despite severe persecution, Christianity spreads throughout the Roman Empire
313	Edict of Milan granting tolerance of Christianity
324	Christianity becomes the state religion of the Roman Empire
364	Mission to the Vandals (East German tribe)
380	Christianity becomes the only permitted religion in the Roman Empire

AD 400-1500 → ROME to EUROPE

432	Patrick sent to Ireland
589	Christianity reaches the Visigoths in Spain
596	Augustine sent to England
622-750	Palestine, Egypt, North Africa & Spain lost to Islam
675	Christianity reaches Belgium & the Netherlands
722	Boniface sent to the Germanic tribes
740	Irish monks reach Iceland
828	Missionaries sent to (modern-day) Slovakia & Czech republic
900-1000	Denmark, Norway, Sweden & Iceland accept Christianity
1095-1272	Crusades undertaken as 'mission' to the Saracens (Muslims)
1015	Russia & much of eastern Europe converted to Christianity
1382	Bible translated into English by John Wycliff
1462	Gutenberg produces the first printed Bible

AD 1500-1800 → EUROPE to the WORLD

1493	Columbus takes priests to the New World
1501	Pope Alexander VI enlists Spain to take Christianity to the Americas
1517	Luther's 95 theses ignite the Reformation & the 're-evangelisation' of Europe
1527	First protestant missionary conference in Augsburg
1600-1800	Roman Catholic mission explodes across the world
1620	The Puritans arrive in America
1698	The Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge (SPCK) founded
1644	John Eliot sent to North American indians
1731	The Moravians begin to send missionaries throughout the world
1792	William Carey forms Baptist Mission Society and takes the gospel to India

AD 1800-2000 → the WORLD to the WORLD

1800+	Protestant mission explodes across the world
1806	'Haystack' prayer meeting (for American mission)
1812	First American missionaries sent to India
1846	World Evangelical Alliance founded
1865	Hudson Taylor founds China Inland Mission
1886	Student Volunteer Movement launched
1890s	Penetration of African interior by European & American agencies
1910	World Mission Conference in Edinburgh
1946	First Inter-Varsity convention ("Urbana")
1950-60s	Non-western mission agencies & 'tent-maker' ministries commence & expand
1974	First Lausanne Congress on World Evangelisation
2000	Local alliances of mission agencies & sending churches active on every continent

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

A Brief History of the English Reformation

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

REIGN	1509-1547	1547-1553*	1553-1558	1558-1603
MONARCH	HENRY VIII 	EDWARD VI 	MARY I 	ELIZABETH I
STATE RELIGION	From Papal Catholicism → to Catholicism	From Catholicism → to Protestantism	From Protestantism → to Papal Catholicism	From Papal Catholicism → to Protestantism
LEGISLATION	• The Submission of the Clergy [1532] • The Act of Supremacy [1534] ▼ • The Dissolution of the Monastries [1536] 	• The Act of Uniformity [1549] • The 42 Articles of Religion [1553]	• The Act of Uniformity REPEALED [1553] X • The Act of Supremacy REPEALED [1554] X	• The Act of Supremacy REINSTATED [1559] ✓ • The Act of Uniformity REINSTATED [1559] ✓ • The 39 Articles of Religion [1563]
LITURGY	• The Ten Articles [1536] • The Bishops Book [1537] • The Six Articles [1539]	• The First Prayer Book [1549] • The Second Prayer Book [1552] ▼ 	• The Second Prayer Book REPEALED X	• The Second Prayer Book REINSTATED ✓
LITERATURE	• The Matthews Bible [1537]	• The First Book of Homilies [1547] ▼ 		• The Genevan Bible [1560] • Apology for the Church of England [1561] • The Bishops Bible [1568] • The Second Book of Homilies [1571] • Acts & Monuments (also known as Foxe's Book of Martyrs; 1563) ◀

© Mark Barry 2009 | visualunit.me | Please do not republish without permission, but feel free to copy for personal use.

Denominations / Branches of Christianity

Source: http://forums.waitingtillmarriage.org/topic/1664-what-exactly-are-denonimations/

See also: Denominations - Reformed

Weslyan Denominations

Return to: Denominations / Branches of Christianity

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

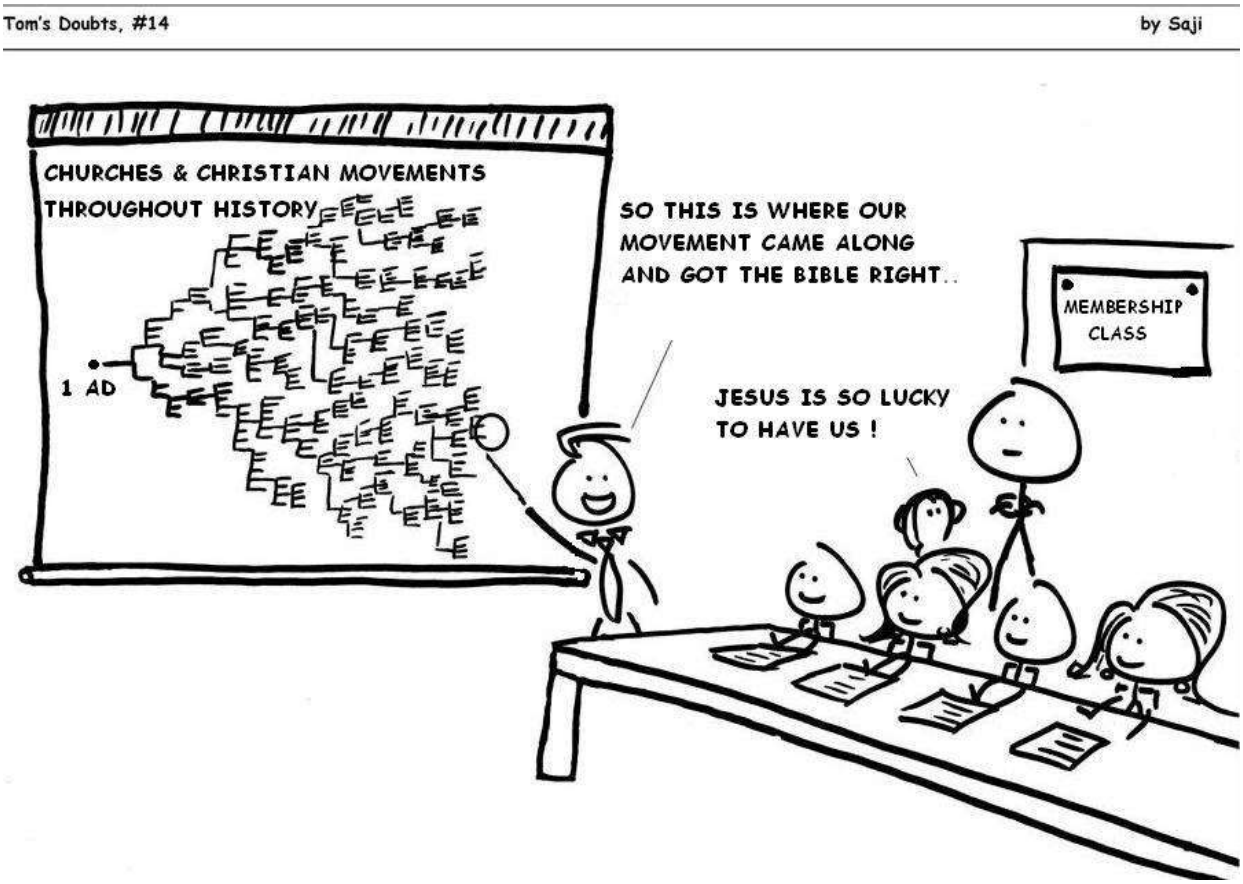
World Religion Tree
http://funki.com.ua/ru/portfolio/lab/world-religions-tree/



Church Denomination Chart – Gordon-Conwell Theological Seminary [MS Word Doc]
http://www.gordonconwell.edu/mentored-ministry/documents/1DENOMINATIONALCHART2014.doc

See also: Weslyan Denominations

Denominations - Reformed

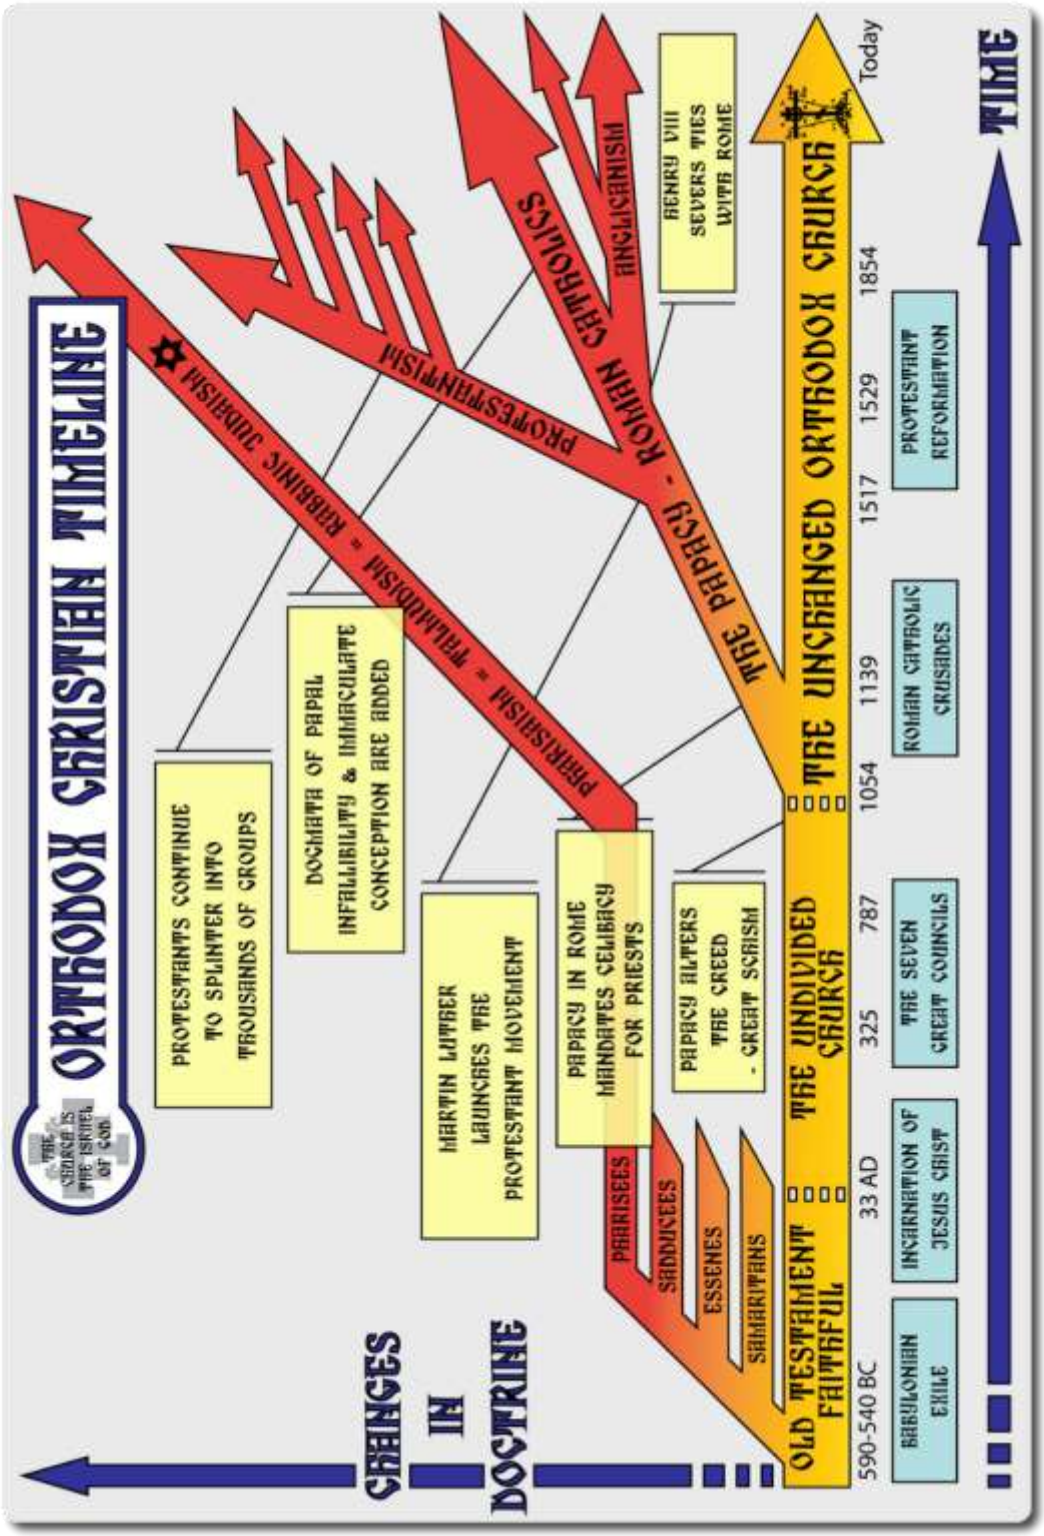
 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Source: http://www.oodegr.com/english/protestantism/protestantism.htm

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Orthodox Christian Church Timeline

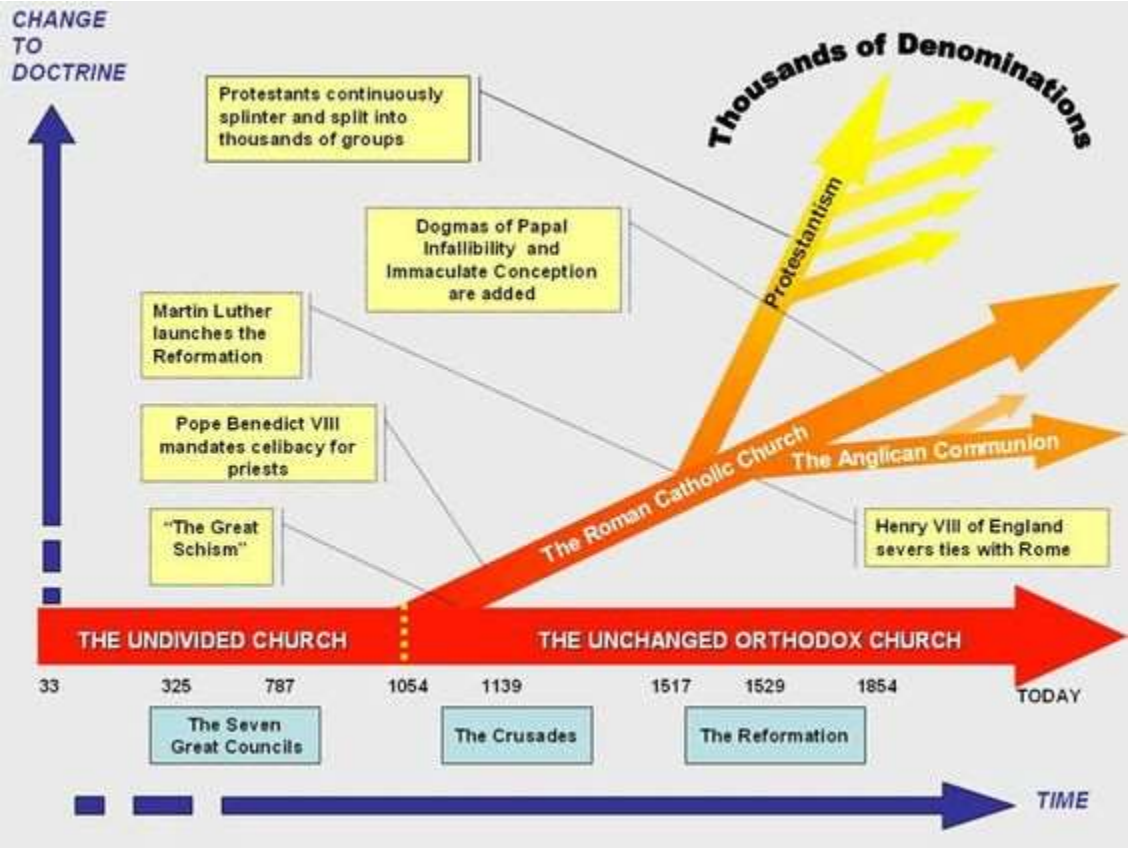
[Source: https://christconquers.wordpress.com/israel-as-the-people-of-god/the-orthodox-christian-church-is/]



(See larger view of above image on next page)

Orthodox Church Timeline
http://orthodoxfaith.co.uk/timeline

Church of the East Timeline
http://www.oxuscom.com/timeline.htm

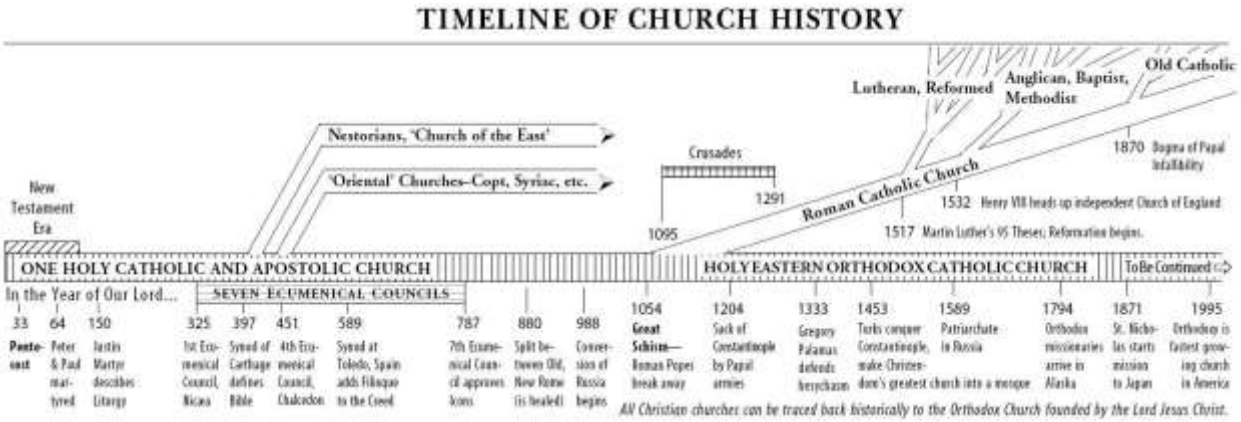


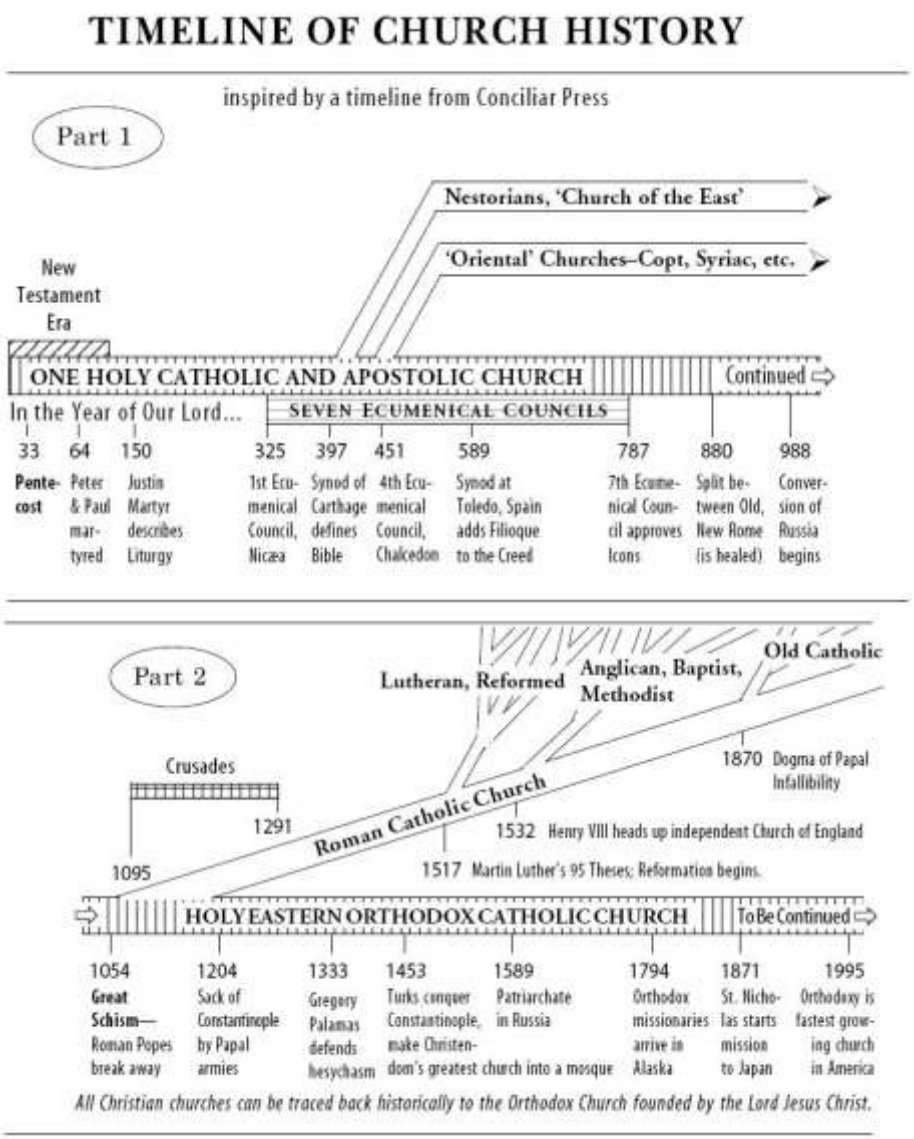
Timeline of Orthodoxy in Russia
https://orthodoxwiki.org/Timeline_of_Orthodoxy_in_Russia

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

From an Orthodox Church Perspective…





Return to: [Denominations / Branches of Christianity]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

More Orthodox

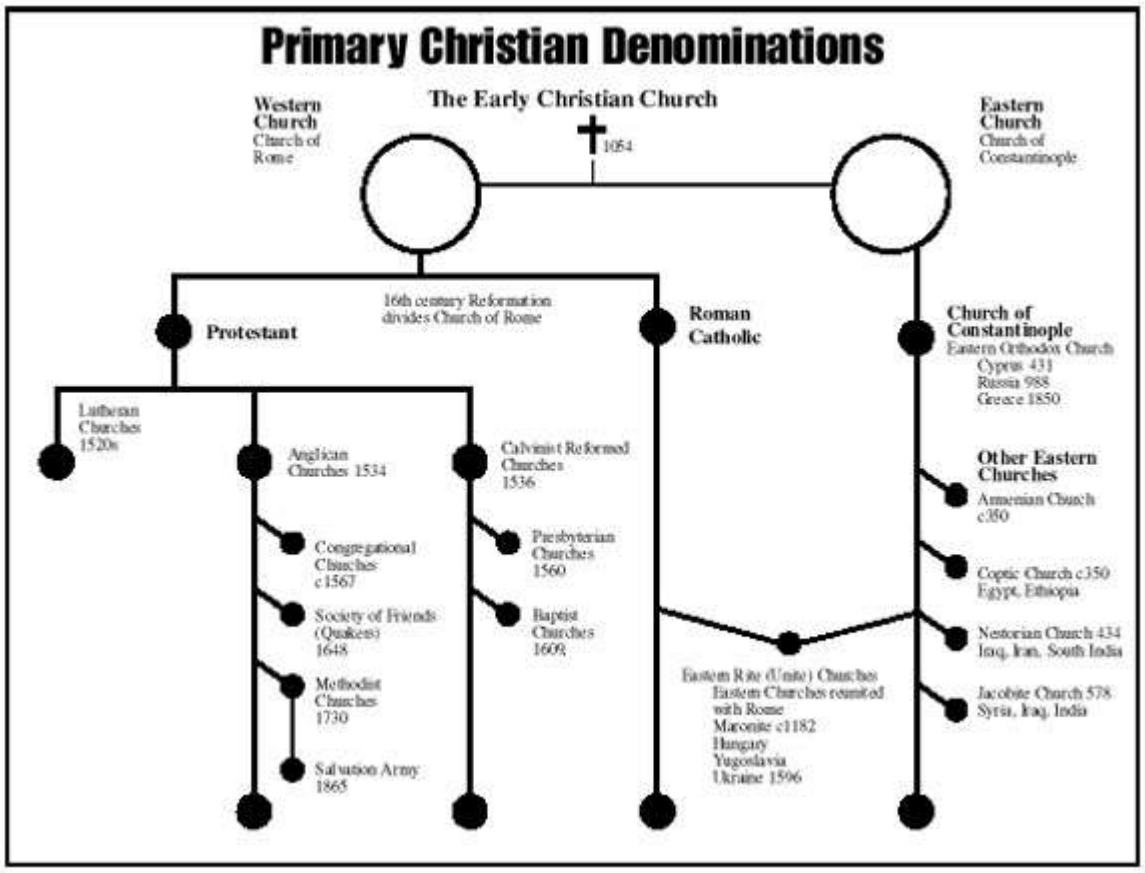
https://christconquers.wordpress.com/israel-as-the-people-of-god/the-orthodox-christian-church-is/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Orthodoxy Tree of Life

http://travelemissary.com/about-me/orthodox-links/

Differences Between Orthodox and Catholic

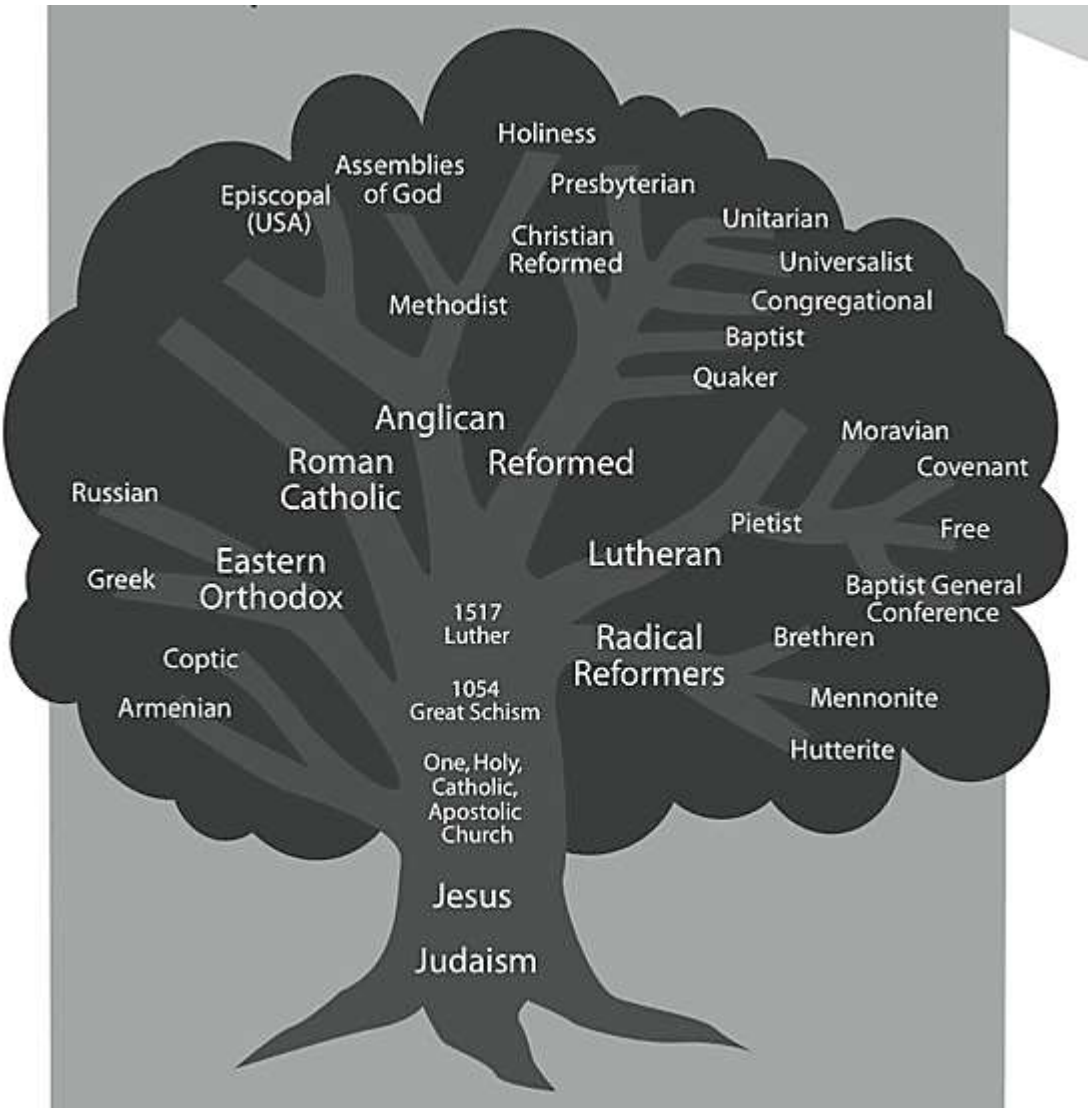


http://www.ocf.org/OrthodoxPage/reading/ortho_cath.html

http://slideplayer.com/slide/6182237/ [PPT]

http://keywordteam.net/gallery/204075.html

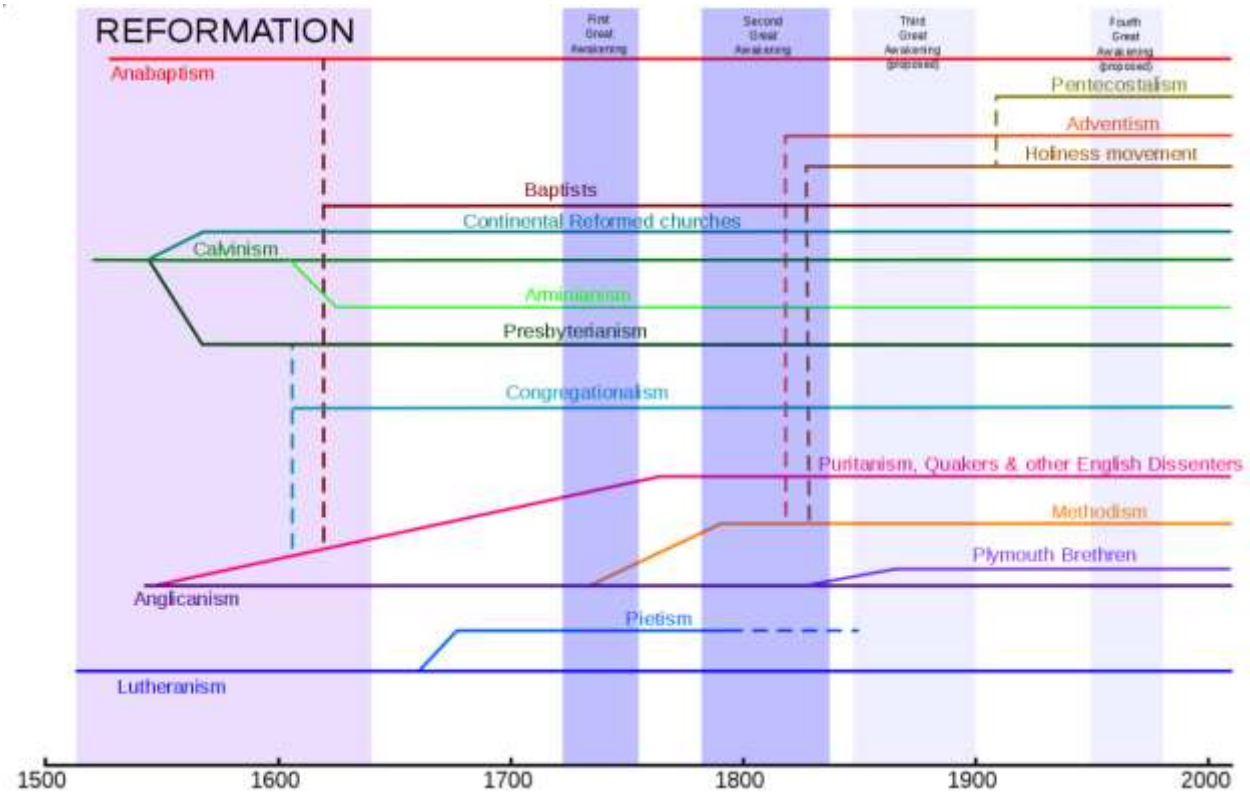
 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



http://www.waupun.k12.wi.us/Policy/other/dickhut/religions/20%20Branches%20of%20Christ.html

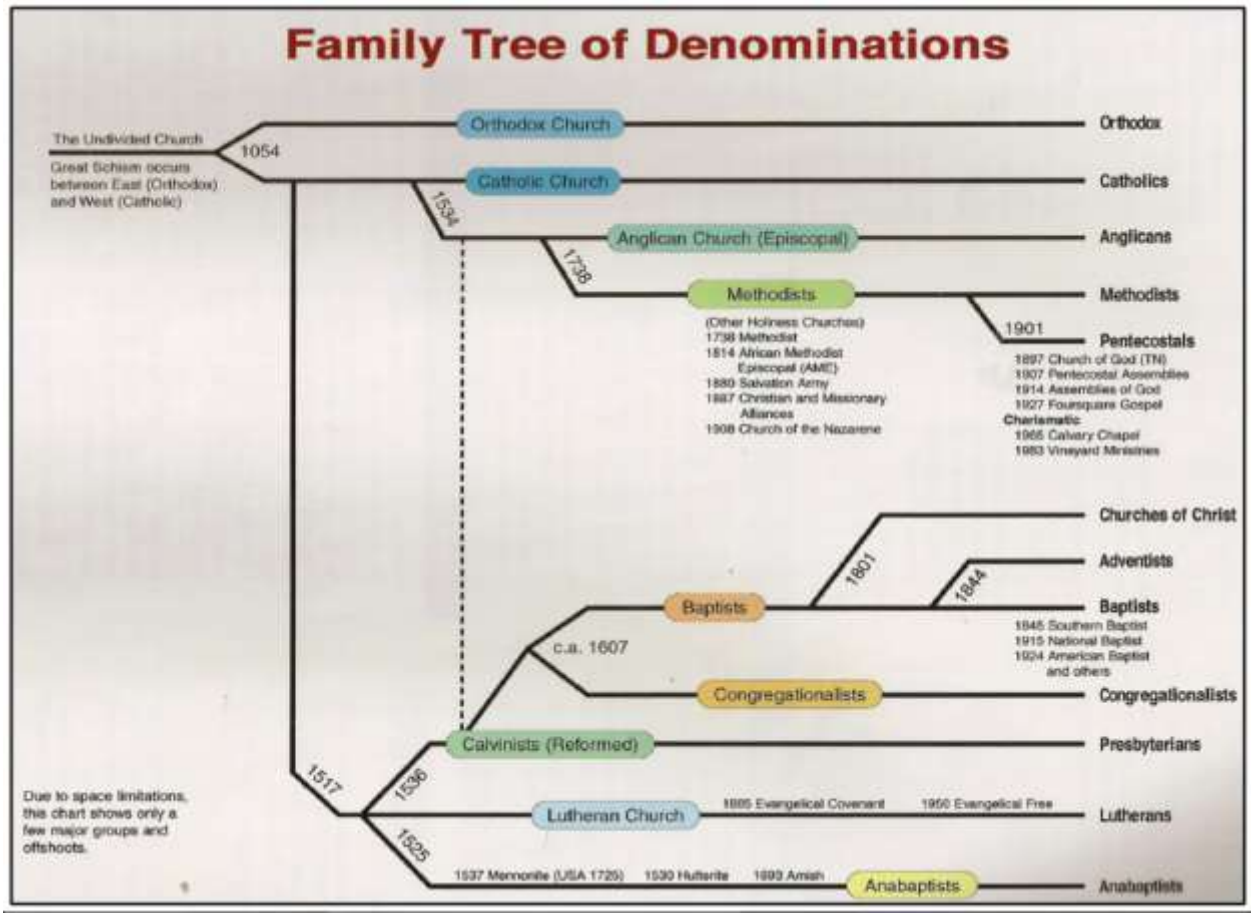
Return to: [Denominations / Branches of Christianity]

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



Denomination Tree

Return to: [Denominations / Branches of Christianity]



Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Protestant Timeline (from 1500 AD)

Return to: [Denominations / Branches of Christianity]

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

See also: Weslyan Denominations

Denominations - Reformed

Return to: Denominations / Branches of Christianity

See also my other separate reference resource for more denomination details*:

The Complete Sayings of Jesus – NKJV with Appendix

(Note: NKJV is primary text to make reading easier, except when it varies significantly from the original KJV or a different translation text is clearer and/or deemed more accurate.)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

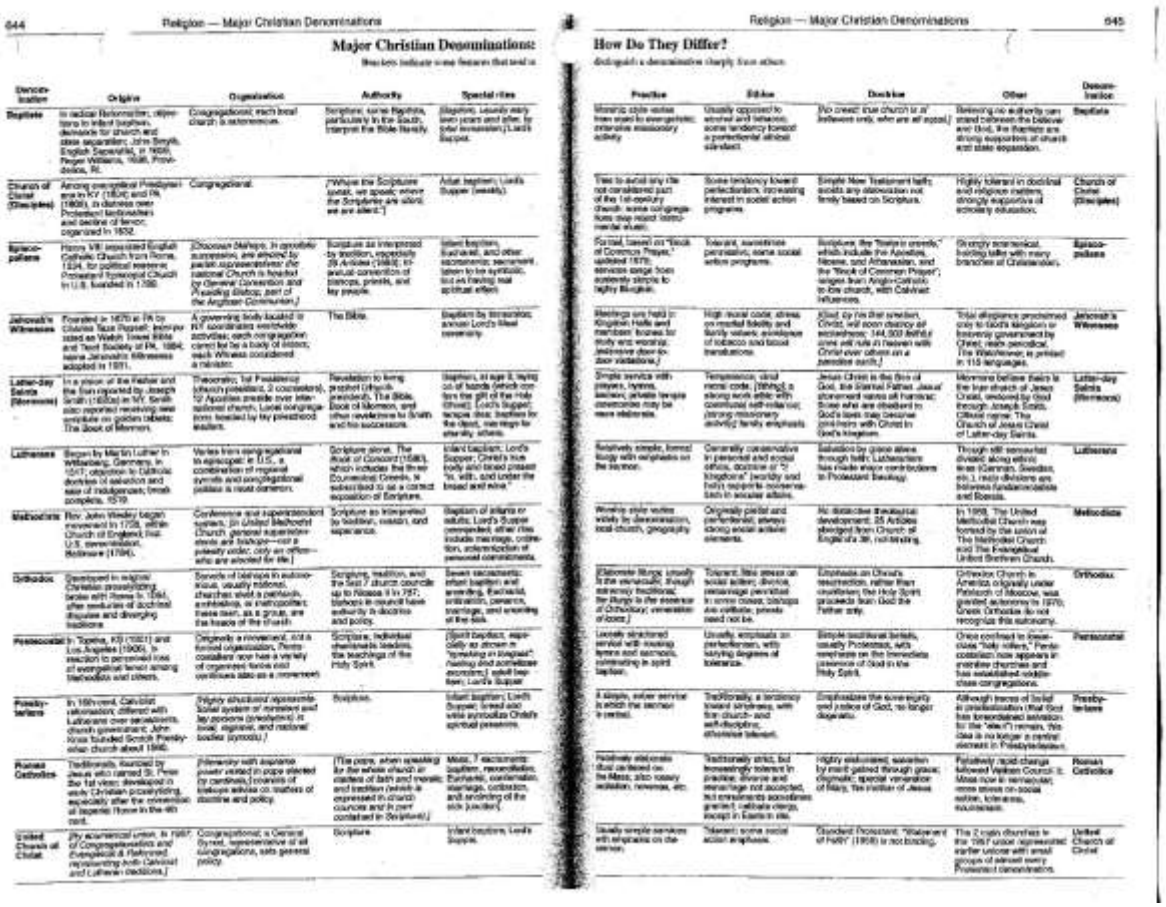
Origins of Denominations - Part 1

DENOMINATIONS	PLACE OF ORIGIN	YEAR	FOUNDER
Adventism	Massachusetts	1831	William Miller
American Baptist	Providence, Rhode Island	1639	Roger Williams
Apostolic Faith Mission	United States	1900	Group
Assembly of God	Hot Springs, Arkansas	1914	Group
Baptist Church	London, England	1607	John Smyth
Brethren (Dunkards)	Sewarzenau, Germany	1708	Hochmann & Mack
Brethren in Christ	United States	1820	Group
Catholic Apostolic Church	England	1830	Group
Christadelphians	United States	1844	John Thomas, MD
Christian Church	Midway, Kentucky	1859	Group
Christian Science	Boston, Massachusetts	1879	Mary Baker Eddy
Church of England	England	1535	King Henry VIII
Church of God	Monroe County, Tennessee	1886	Group
Church of God	United States	1880	D. S. Warner
Church of God Holiness	Atlanta, Georgia	1914	K. H. Burrus
Church of Living God	Wrightsville, Arkansas	1889	William Christian
Congregational Church	Massachusetts	1684	Group
Cumberland Presbyterian	Dickson County, Tennessee	1810	Group
Dutch Reformed Church	Holland	1560	Group
Evangelical Church	Pennsylvania	1803	Jacob Albright
Evangelical and Reformed	Cleveland, Ohio	1834	Group
Foursquare Gospel	Los Angeles, California	1917	Almee S. McPherson
Freewill Baptist	New Durham, North Carolina	1780	Benjamin Randall
Full Gospel Church	Goldsboro, North Carolina	1935	R. H. Askew
Greek Orthodox Church	Greece	1053	Group

Barnes Bible Charts

Origins of Denominations - Part 2



DENOMINATIONS	PLACE OF ORIGIN	YEAR	FOUNDER
Holiness Church	Chicago, Illinois	1907	Howard Hoopie
House of David	Michigan	1903	Group
Independent Witness	Van Alstyne, Texas	1900	C. B. Jernigan
Jehovah s Witnesses	Pennsylvania	1874	Charles T. Russell
Lutheran Church	Augsburg, Germany	1530	Martin Luther
Mennonite Church	Zurich, Switzerland	1525	Group
Methodist Church	London, England	1729	John Wesley
Methodist Episcopal	Baltimore, Maryland	1874	Group
Mormon Church	Seneca, New York	1830	Joseph Smith
Mormons Reorganized	Wisconsin	1852	Joseph Smith II
Moravian Church	Kunwald Bohemia	1457	Group
Nazarene Church	Los Angeles, California	1895	P. E. Bresee
New Apostolic Church	Hamburg, Germany	1862	Pruess
Pentecostal Holiness	Anderson, South Carolina	1898	Group
Pilgrim Holiness Church	Cincinnati, Ohio	1897	Group
Plymouth Brethren	Dublin, Ireland	1829	Group
Presbyterian Church	Switzerland	1535	John Calvin
Primitive Baptist	North Carolina	1765	Group
Quakers	England	1650	George Fox
Roman Catholic	Rome, Italy	696	Boniface III (1st Pope)
Salvation Army	London, England	1865	William Booth
Seventh-Day Adventism	Massachusetts	1846	Ellen G. White
Spiritualist Church	United States	1848	Andrew J. Davis
Unitarians	Poland	1500s	Faustus, Socinus, et. al.
Universalist Church	New Jersey	1770	John Murray

Barnes Bible Charts

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

US Document – Major Christian Denominations – How Do They Differ?

http://inside.sfuhs.org/dept/history/US_History_reader/Chapter1/majorchristiandenom.htm

644 Religion — Major Christian Denominations

Major Christian Denominations

Denomination	Origins	Organization	Authority	Special rites
Baptists	In radical Reformation; objecting to infant baptism, advocate for church and state separation; John Smyth, English Separatist, in Holland; Roger Williams, Wales, Providence, RI.	Congregational; each local church is autonomous.	Scripture; some Baptists, particularly in the South, interpret the Bible literally.	Baptism, usually early teen years and after, by total immersion; Lord's Supper.
Church of Christ (Disciples)	Among pre-radical Presbyterians in KY (1804) and PA (1809), in distress over Protestant factionalism and decline of fervor; organized in 1832.	Congregational.	["Where the Scripture speaks, we speak; where the Scriptures are silent, we are silent."]	Adult baptism; Lord's Supper (weekly).
Episcopalians	Henry VIII separated English Catholic Church from Rome, 1534, for political reasons; Protestant Episcopal Church in U.S. founded in 1789.	[Diocesan bishops, in apostolic succession, are elected by parish representatives; the national Church is headed by General Convention and Presiding Bishop; part of the Anglican Communion.]	Scripture as interpreted by tradition, especially 39 Articles (1563); bi-annual convention of bishops, priests, and lay people.	Infant baptism, confirmed, and other sacraments; sacrament taken to be symbolic, but as having real spiritual effect.
Jehovah's Witnesses	Founded in 1870 in PA by Charles Taze Russell; name assumed as Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society of PA, 1884; name Jehovah's Witnesses adopted in 1931.	A governing body located in NY coordinates worldwide activities; each congregation cannot be by a body of elders; each Witness considered a minister.	The Bible.	Baptism by immersion; annual Lord's Meal ceremony.
Latter-day Saints (Mormons)	In a vision of the Father and the Son reported by Joseph Smith (1820s) in NY. Smith also reported receiving new scripture on golden tablets: The Book of Mormon.	Theocratic; 1st Presidency (church president, 2 counselors), 12 Apostles preside over international church; Local congregations headed by lay priesthood leaders.	Revelation to living prophet (church president). The Bible, Book of Mormon, and other revelations to Smith and his successors.	Baptism, at age 8, laying on of hands (which confers the gift of the Holy Ghost); Lord's Supper; temple rites; baptism for the dead, men reign for eternity, others.
Lutherans	Began by Martin Luther in Wittenberg, Germany, in 1517, objection to Catholic doctrines of salvation and sale of indulgences; break complete, 1519.	Varies from congregational to episcopal; in U.S., a combination of regional synods and congregational polities is most common.	Scripture alone. The Book of Concord (1580), which includes the three Ecumenical Creeds, is subscribed to as a correct exposition of Scripture.	Infant baptism; Lord's Supper; Christ's real body and blood present "in, with, and under the bread and wine."
Methodists	Rev. John Wesley began movement in 1729, while Church of England; first U.S. conference, Baltimore (1784).	Conference and superintendent system. [In United Methodist Church, general superintendents are bishops—not a priestly order, only an officer—who are elected for life.]	Scripture as interpreted by tradition, reason, and experience.	Baptism of infants or adults; Lord's Supper unreserved; other rites include marriage, confirmation, solemnization of personal commitments.
Orthodox	Developed in eastern Christian proselytizing; broke with Rome in 1054, after centuries of doctrinal disputes and diverging traditions.	Synods of bishops in autocephalous, usually national, churches; each a patriarch, archbishop, or metropolitan; these men, as a group, are the heads of the church.	Scripture, tradition, and the first 7 church councils up to Nicaea II in 787; bishops in council have authority in doctrine and policy.	Seven sacraments; infant baptism and anointing, Eucharist, ordination, penance, marriage, and anointing of the sick.
Pentecostals	In Topeka, KS (1901) and Los Angeles (1906), in reaction to perceived loss of evangelical fervor among Methodists and others.	Originally a movement, not a formal organization. Pentecostalism now has a variety of organized forms exist (or continues also as a movement).	Scripture. Individual charismatic leaders, the teachings of the Holy Spirit.	[Spirit baptism, especially as shown in "speaking in tongues", healing, and sometimes exorcism.] adult baptism; Lord's Supper.
Presbyterians	In 16th cent. Calvinist reformation; differed with Lutherans over secularism, church government; John Knox founded Scotch Presbyterian church about 1560.	Highly structured representative system of ministers and lay persons (presbyters) in local, regional, and national bodies (synods).	Scripture.	Infant baptism; Lord's Supper; bread and wine symbolize Christ's spiritual presence.
Roman Catholics	Traditionally, founded by Jesus who named St. Peter the 1st vicar; developed in early Christian proselytizing, especially after the conversion of Imperial Rome in the 4th cent.	Hierarchy with supreme power vested in pope elected by cardinals; [consists of bishops who are in charge of doctrine and policy.	[The pope, when speaking for the whole church in matters of faith and morals, and tradition (which is expressed in church councils and in pronouncements contained in Scripture).]	Mass; 7 sacraments: baptism, reconciliation, Eucharist, confirmation, marriage, ordination, and anointing of the sick [unction].
United Church of Christ	[An ecumenical union, in 1957, of Congregationalists and Evangelical & Reformed, representing both Calvinist and Lutheran traditions.]	Congregational; a General Synod, representative of all congregations, sets general policy.	Scripture.	Infant baptism; Lord's Supper.

645 Religion — Major Christian Denominations

How Do They Differ?

Practice	Ethics	Doctrine	Other	Denomination
Missionary-style worker from world to evangelistic; extensive missionary activity.	Usually opposed to alcohol and tobacco; some tendency toward a perfectionist ethical standard.	[No creed; true church is all believers only, who are all saved.]	Believing no authority can stand between the believer and God, the Baptists are strong supporters of church and state separation.	Baptists
Tries to avoid only the not constitutional part of the 1st-century church; some congregations stay reject denominational ideas.	Some tendency toward perfectionism; increasing interest in social action programs.	Simple New Testament faith; avoids any elaboration not firmly based on Scripture.	Highly tolerant in doctrinal and religious matters; strongly supportive of scholarly education.	Church of Christ (Disciples)
Formal, based on "Book of Common Prayer," updated 1979; services range from extremely simple to highly liturgical.	Tolerant, sometimes permissive; some social action programs.	Scripture, the Trinity is creeds," which include the Apostles, Nicene, and Athanasian, and the "Book of Common Prayer"; largely from Anglo-Catholic to low church, with Calvinist influences.	Strongly ecumenical, having talks with many branches of Christendom.	Episcopalians
Meetings are held in Kingdom Halls and members' homes for study and worship; extensive door-to-door visitations.]	High moral code; stress on marital fidelity and family values; avoidance of tobacco and blood transfusions.	[God, by his first creation, Christ, will soon destroy all existing governments; 144,000 faithful ones will rule in heaven with Christ over others on a paradise earth.]	Total allegiance proclaimed only to God's kingdom or heavenly government by Christ; reject periodical, The Watchtower, is printed in 115 languages.	Jehovah's Witnesses
Simple service with prayers, hymns, sermon, private temple ceremonies may be more elaborate.	Temperance; strict moral code; [tithing] is a strong work ethic with coordinated self-reliance; strong missionary activity; family emphasis.	Jesus Christ is the Son of God, the Eternal Father. Jesus' atonement saves all humans; those who are obedient to God's laws may become joint heirs with Christ in God's kingdom.	Mormons believe theirs is the true church of Jesus Christ, restored by God through Joseph Smith, Official name: The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.	Latter-day Saints (Mormons)
Relatively simple, formal liturgy with emphasis on the sermon.	Generally conservative in personal and social ethics, doctrine of "2 kingdoms" (worldly and holy) supports conservatism in secular affairs.	Salvation by grace alone through faith; Lutheranism has made major contributions to Protestant theology.	Though still somewhat divided along ethnic lines (German, Swedish, etc.), many divisions are between fundamentalists and liberals.	Lutherans
Worship style varies widely by denomination, local church, geography.	Originally partial and perfectionist; always strong social action elements.	No distinctive theological development; 25 Articles abridged from Church of England's 39, not binding.	In 1968, The United Methodist Church was formed by the union of The Methodist Church and The Evangelical United Brethren Church.	Methodists
[Extreme liturgy, usually to the iconoclastic; though extremely traditional, the liturgy is the essence of Orthodoxy; veneration of icons.]	Tolerant; little stress on social action; doctrine, ceremonial permitted in some cases; bishops are celibate; priests need not be.	Emphasis on Christ's resurrection, rather than crucifixion; the Holy Spirit proceeds from God the Father only.	Orthodox Church in America, originally under Patriarch of Moscow, was granted autonomy in 1970; Greek Orthodox do not recognize this autonomy.	Orthodox
Loosely structured service with rousing hymns and sermons, culminating in spirit baptism.	Usually emphasis on perfectionism, with varying degrees of tolerance.	Simple southwest beliefs, usually Protestant, with emphasis on the immediate presence of God in the Holy Spirit.	Once confined to lower-class "holy rollers," Pentecostalism now appears in mainline churches and has established middle-class congregations.	Pentecostal
A simple, solemn service in which the sermon is central.	Traditionally, a tendency toward strictness, with firm church- and self-discipline; otherwise tolerant.	Emphasizes the sovereignty and justice of God; no longer dogmatic.	Although traces of belief in predestination (that God has foreordained salvation for the "elect") remain, this idea is no longer a central element in Presbyterianism.	Presbyterians
Traditionally elaborate ritual centered on the Mass; also rosary, adoration, novenas, etc.	Traditionally strict, but increasingly tolerant in practice; divorce and remarriage not accepted, but annulments sometimes granted; celibate clergy, except in Eastern rite.	Highly elaborated, based on creeds gained through grace; dogmatic; special veneration of Mary, the mother of Jesus.	Relatively rapid change followed Vatican Council II. Mass now in vernacular; more stress on social action, tolerance, ecumenism.	Roman Catholics
Usually simple services with emphasis on the sermon.	Tolerant; some social action emphasis.	[Standard Protestant. "Statement of Faith" (1958) is not binding.]	The 2 main churches in the 1957 union represented earlier unions with small groups of almost every Protestant denomination.	United Church of Christ

See larger view on next page…

Return to: [Denominations / Branches of Christianity]

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

[Go to Index]

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

[Go to Top - TOC]

Major Christian Denominations:

Brackets indicate some features that tend to

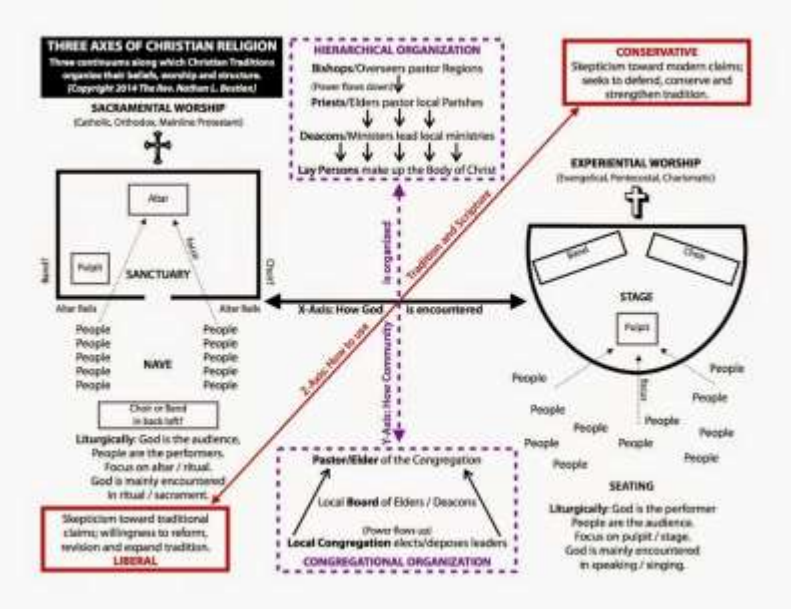
Denomination	Origins	Organization	Authority	Special rites
Baptists	In radical Reformation, objections to infant baptism, demands for church and state separation; John Smyth, English Separatist, in 1609; Roger Williams, 1638, Providence, RI.	Congregational: each local church is autonomous.	Scripture; some Baptists, particularly in the South, interpret the Bible literally.	[Baptism, usually early teen years and after, by total immersion;] Lord's Supper.
Church of Christ (Disciples)	Among evangelical Presbyterians in KY (1804) and PA (1809), in distress over Protestant factionalism and decline of fervor; organized in 1832.	Congregational.	["Where the Scriptures speak, we speak; where the Scriptures are silent, we are silent."]	Adult baptism; Lord's Supper (weekly).
Episcopalians	Henry VIII separated English Catholic Church from Rome, 1534, for political reasons; Protestant Episcopal Church in U.S. founded in 1789.	[Diocesan bishops, in apostolic succession, are elected by parish representatives; the national Church is headed by General Convention and Presiding Bishop, part of the Anglican Communion.]	Scripture as interpreted by tradition, especially 39 Articles (1563); tri-annual convention of bishops, priests, and lay people.	Infant baptism, Eucharist, and other sacraments; sacrament taken to be symbolic, but as having real spiritual effect.
Jehovah's Witnesses	Founded in 1870 in PA by Charles Taze Russell; incorporated as Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society of PA, 1884; name Jehovah's Witnesses adopted in 1931.	A governing body located in NY coordinates worldwide activities; each congregation cared for by a body of elders; each Witness considered a minister.	The Bible.	Baptism by immersion; annual Lord's Meal ceremony.
Latter-day Saints (Mormons)	In a vision of the Father and the Son reported by Joseph Smith (1820s) in NY, Smith also reported receiving new scripture on golden tablets: The Book of Mormon.	Theocratic; 1st Presidency (church president, 2 counselors), 12 Apostles preside over international church. Local congregations headed by lay priesthood leaders.	Revelation to living prophet (church president). The Bible, Book of Mormon, and other revelations to Smith and his successors.	Baptism, at age 8; laying on of hands (which confers the gift of the Holy Ghost); Lord's Supper; temple rites: baptism for the dead, marriage for eternity, others.
Lutherans	Begun by Martin Luther in Wittenberg, Germany, in 1517; objection to Catholic doctrine of salvation and sale of indulgences; break complete, 1519.	Varies from congregational to episcopal; in U.S., a combination of regional synods and congregational politics is most common.	Scripture alone. The Book of Concord (1580), which includes the three Ecumenical Creeds, is subscribed to as a correct exposition of Scripture.	Infant baptism; Lord's Supper: Christ's true body and blood present "in, with, and under the bread and wine."
Methodists	Rev. John Wesley began movement in 1739, within Church of England; first U.S. denomination, Baltimore (1784).	Conference and superintendent system; [in United Methodist Church, general superintendents are bishops—not a priestly order; only an office—who are elected for life.]	Scripture as interpreted by tradition, reason, and experience.	Baptism of infants or adults; Lord's Supper commanded; other rites include marriage, ordination, solemnization of personal commitments.
Orthodox	Developed in original Christian proselytizing; broke with Rome in 1054, after centuries of doctrinal disputes and diverging traditions.	Synods of bishops in autonomous, usually national, churches elect a patriarch, archbishop, or metropolitan; these men, as a group, are the heads of the church.	Scripture, tradition, and the first 7 church councils up to Nicaea II in 787; bishops in council have authority in doctrine and policy.	Seven sacraments: infant baptism and anointing, Eucharist, ordination, penance, marriage, and anointing of the sick.
Pentecostal	In Topeka, KS (1901) and Los Angeles (1906), in reaction to perceived loss of evangelical fervor among Methodists and others.	Originally a movement, not a formal organization. Pentecostalism now has a variety of organized forms and continues also as a movement.	Scripture; individual charismatic leaders, the teachings of the Holy Spirit.	[Spirit baptism, especially as shown in "speaking in tongues"; healing and sometimes exorcism;] adult baptism; Lord's Supper.
Presbyterians	In 16th-cent. Calvinist reformation; differed with Lutherans over sacraments, church government; John Knox founded Scotch Presbyterian church about 1560.	[Highly structured representational system of ministers and lay persons (presbyters) in local, regional, and national bodies (synods).]	Scripture.	Infant baptism; Lord's Supper; bread and wine symbolize Christ's spiritual presence.
Roman Catholics	Traditionally, founded by Jesus who named St. Peter the 1st vicar; developed in early Christian proselytizing, especially after the conversion of Imperial Rome in the 4th cent.	[Hierarchy with supreme power vested in pope elected by cardinals;] councils of bishops active on matters of doctrine and policy.	[The pope, when speaking for the whole church in matters of faith and morals, and tradition (which is expressed in church councils and in part contained in Scripture).]	Mass; 7 sacraments: baptism, reconciliation, Eucharist, confirmation, marriage, ordination, and anointing of the sick (unction).
United Church of Christ	[By ecumenical union, in 1957, of Congregationalists and Evangelical & Reformed, representing both Calvinist and Lutheran traditions.]	Congregational; a General Synod, representative of all congregations, sets general policy.	Scripture.	Infant baptism; Lord's Supper.

How Do They Differ?

distinguish a denomination sharply from others.

Practice	Ethics	Doctrine	Other	Denomination
Worship style varies from staid to evangelistic; extensive missionary activity.	Usually opposed to alcohol and tobacco; some tendency toward a perfectionist ethical standard.	[No creed; true church is of believers only; who are all equal.]	Believing no authority can stand between the believer and God, the Baptists are strong supporters of church and state separation.	Baptists
Tries to avoid any rite not considered part of the 1st-century church; some congregations may reject instrumental music.	Some tendency toward perfectionism; increasing interest in social action programs.	Simple New Testament faith; avoids any elaboration not firmly based on Scripture.	Highly tolerant in doctrinal and religious matters; strongly supportive of scholarly education.	Church of Christ (Disciples)
Formal, based on "Book of Common Prayer," updated 1979; services range from austerely simple to highly liturgical.	Tolerant, sometimes permissive; some social action programs.	Scripture; the "historic creeds," which include the Apostles, Nicene, and Athanasian, and the "Book of Common Prayer"; ranges from Anglo-Catholic to low church, with Calvinist influences.	Strongly ecumenical, holding talks with many branches of Christendom.	Episcopalians
Meetings are held in Kingdom Halls and members' homes for study and worship; [extensive door-to-door visitations.]	High moral code; stress on marital fidelity and family values; avoidance of tobacco and blood transfusions.	[God, by his first creation, Christ, will soon destroy all wickedness; 144,000 faithful ones will rule in heaven with Christ over others on a paradise earth.]	Total allegiance proclaimed only to God's kingdom or heavenly government by Christ; main periodical, The Watchtower, is printed in 115 languages.	Jehovah's Witnesses
Simple service with prayers, hymns, sermon; private temple ceremonies may be more elaborate.	Temperance; strict moral code; [tithing;] a strong work ethic with communal self-reliance; [strong missionary activity;] family emphasis.	Jesus Christ is the Son of God, the Eternal Father. Jesus' atonement saves all humans; those who are obedient to God's laws may become joint-heirs with Christ in God's kingdom.	Mormons believe theirs is the true church of Jesus Christ, restored by God through Joseph Smith. Official name: The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.	Latter-day Saints (Mormons)
Relatively simple, formal liturgy with emphasis on the sermon.	Generally conservative in personal and social ethics; doctrine of "2 kingdoms" (worldly and holy) supports conservatism in secular affairs.	Salvation by grace alone through faith; Lutheranism has made major contributions to Protestant theology.	Though still somewhat divided along ethnic lines (German, Swedish, etc.), main divisions are between fundamentalists and liberals.	Lutherans
Worship style varies widely by denomination, local church, geography.	Originally pietist and perfectionist; always strong social activist elements.	No distinctive theological development; 25 Articles abridged from Church of England's 39, not binding.	In 1968, The United Methodist Church was formed by the union of The Methodist Church and The Evangelical United Brethren Church.	Methodists
[Elaborate liturgy, usually in the vernacular, though extremely traditional; the liturgy is the essence of Orthodoxy; veneration of icons.]	Tolerant; little stress on social action; divorce, remarriage permitted in some cases; bishops are celibate; priests need not be.	Emphasis on Christ's resurrection, rather than crucifixion; the Holy Spirit proceeds from God the Father only.	Orthodox Church in America originally under Patriarch of Moscow, was granted autonomy in 1970; Greek Orthodox do not recognize this autonomy.	Orthodox
Loosely structured service with rousing hymns and sermons, culminating in spirit baptism.	Usually, emphasis on perfectionism, with varying degrees of tolerance.	Simple traditional beliefs, usually Protestant, with emphasis on the immediate presence of God in the Holy Spirit.	Once confined to lower-class "holy rollers," Pentecostalism now appears in mainline churches and has established middle-class congregations.	Pentecostal
A simple, sober service in which the sermon is central.	Traditionally, a tendency toward strictness, with firm church- and self-discipline; otherwise tolerant.	Emphasizes the sovereignty and justice of God; no longer dogmatic.	Although traces of belief in predestination (that God has foreordained salvation for the "elect") remain, this idea is no longer a central element in Presbyterianism.	Presbyterians
Relatively elaborate ritual centered on the Mass; also rosary recitation, novenas, etc.	Traditionally strict, but increasingly tolerant in practice; divorce and remarriage not accepted, but annulments sometimes granted; celibate clergy, except in Eastern rite.	Highly elaborated; salvation by merit gained through grace; dogmatic; special veneration of Mary, the mother of Jesus.	Relatively rapid change followed Vatican Council II; Mass now in vernacular; more stress on social action, tolerance, ecumenism.	Roman Catholics
Usually simple services with emphasis on the sermon.	Tolerant; some social action emphasis.	Standard Protestant; "Statement of Faith" (1959) is not binding.	The 2 main churches in the 1957 union represented earlier unions with small groups of almost every Protestant denomination.	United Church of Christ

Christianity in 2 Hours or Less (Anglican Perspective)



http://natebostian.blogspot.com/2014/12/christianity-in-two-hours-or-less.html

https://drive.google.com/file/d/0B9uX1KQ33IUuWEhiMUtaYXBPOGs/view?usp=sharing [PDF]

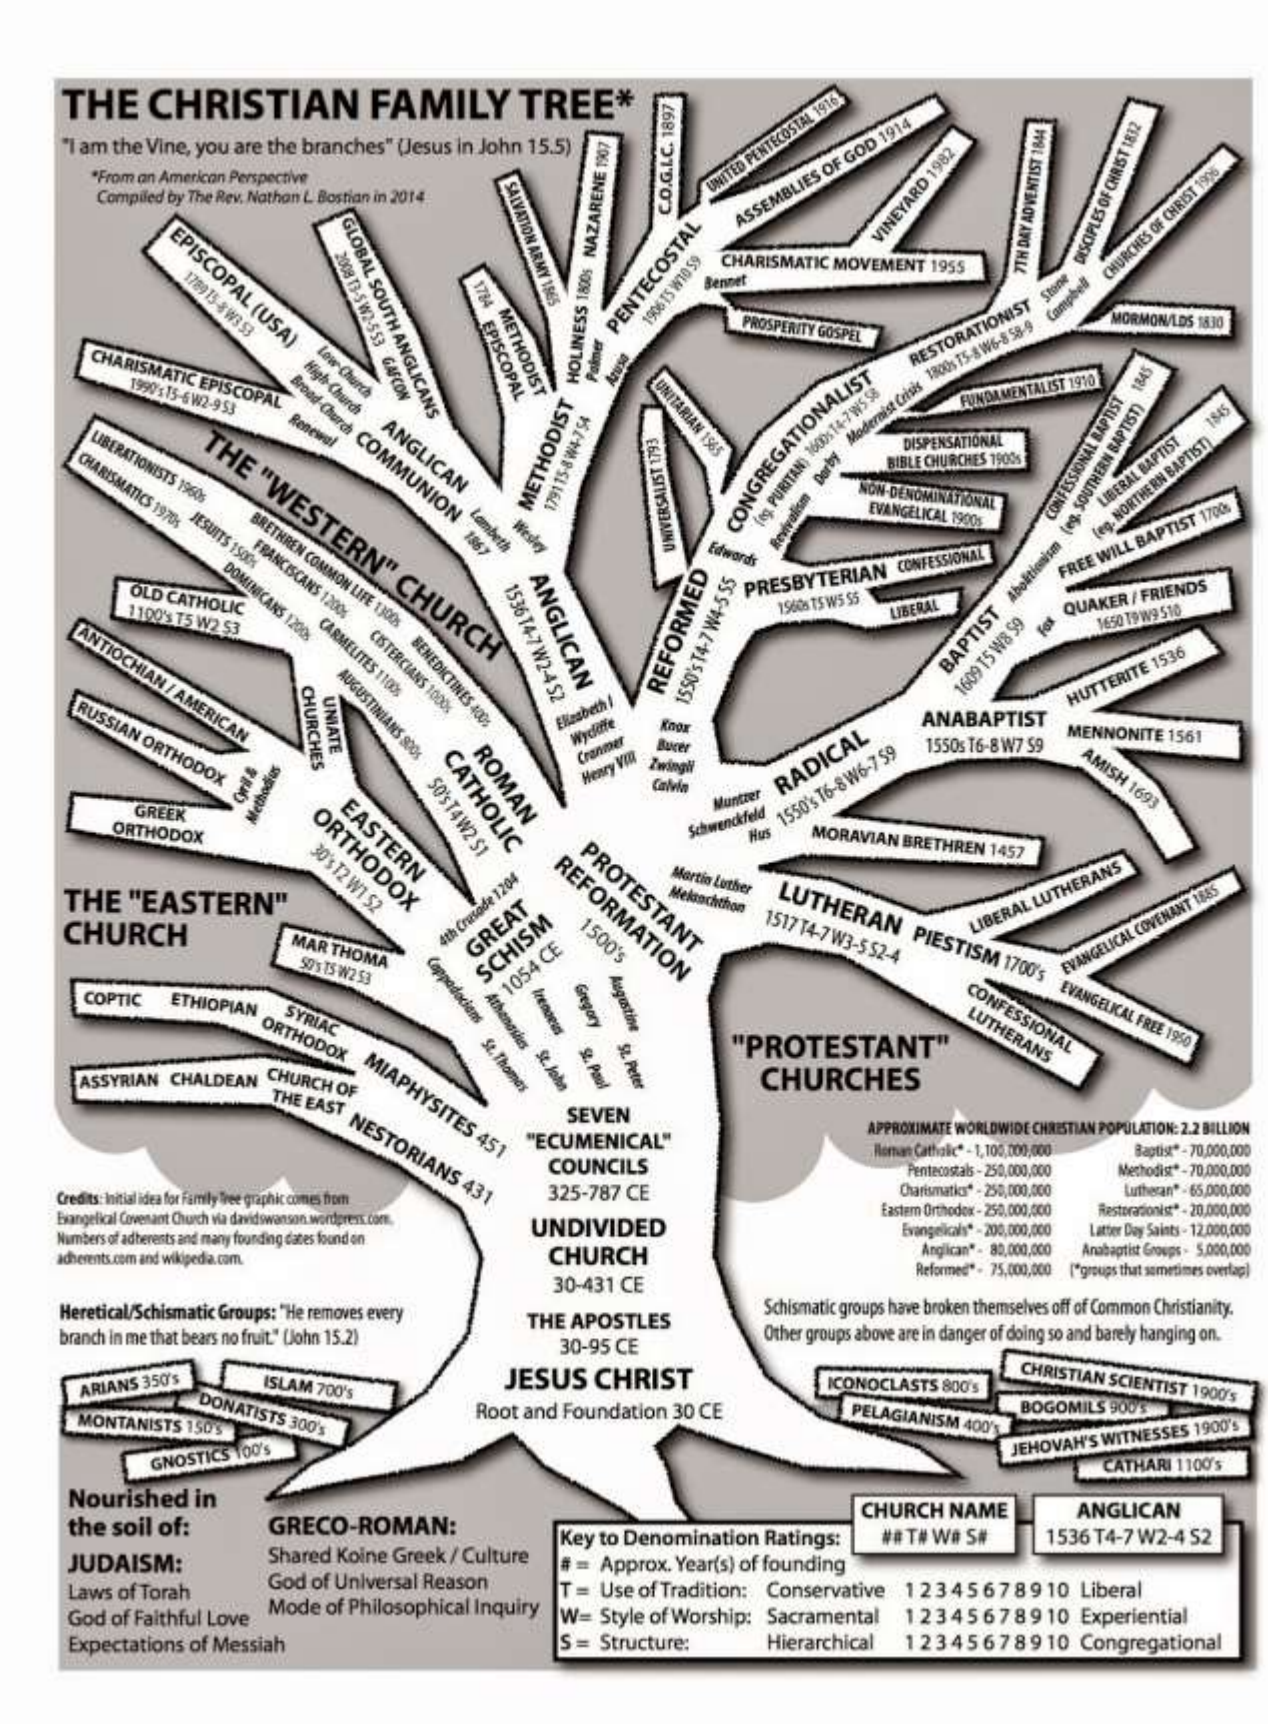
Excerpt:

This information packet [both the web page, with images, text and vidos, and the downloadable PDF packet] is not aimed at a comprehensive understanding of different Christian beliefs or history. Rather it is aimed at giving students a basic set of categories and vocabulary to make sense of the situation when they encounter a Christian or a Church different from their own tradition. For instance, many of my [Anglican] students will be exposed to Catholic worship or Charismatic worship at some point, and I want them to have enough information to orient themselves when they do.

Videos included (to go with charts and terminology):

Comparison of Catholic and Orthodox Liturgical Practices
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=dApWNfJgGC4

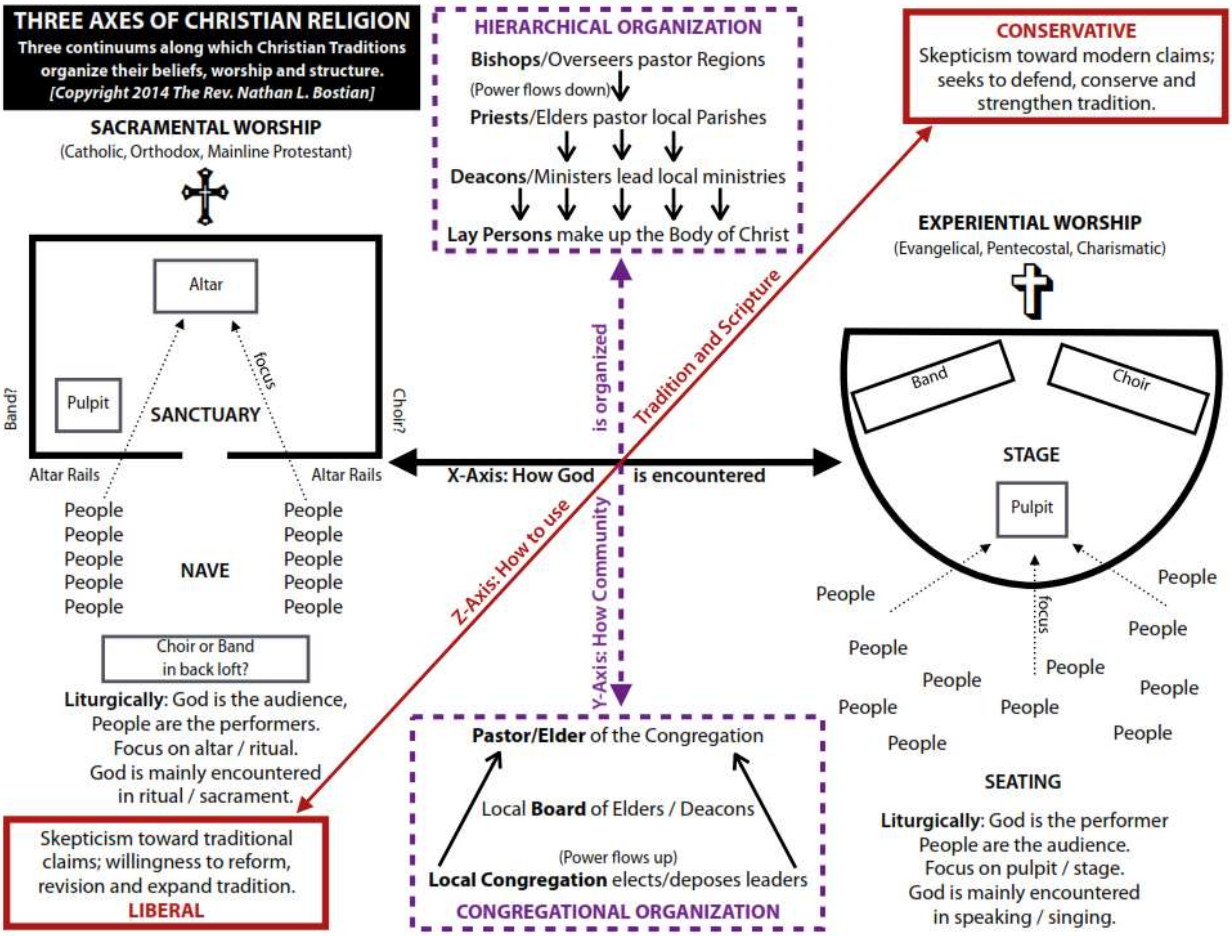
Botafumeiro
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=2QFd_55El1I



Luther and the Protestant Reformation: Crash Course World History #218
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=1o8oIELbNxE

Billy Graham - Is your heart right?
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=dKHL3UttNeA

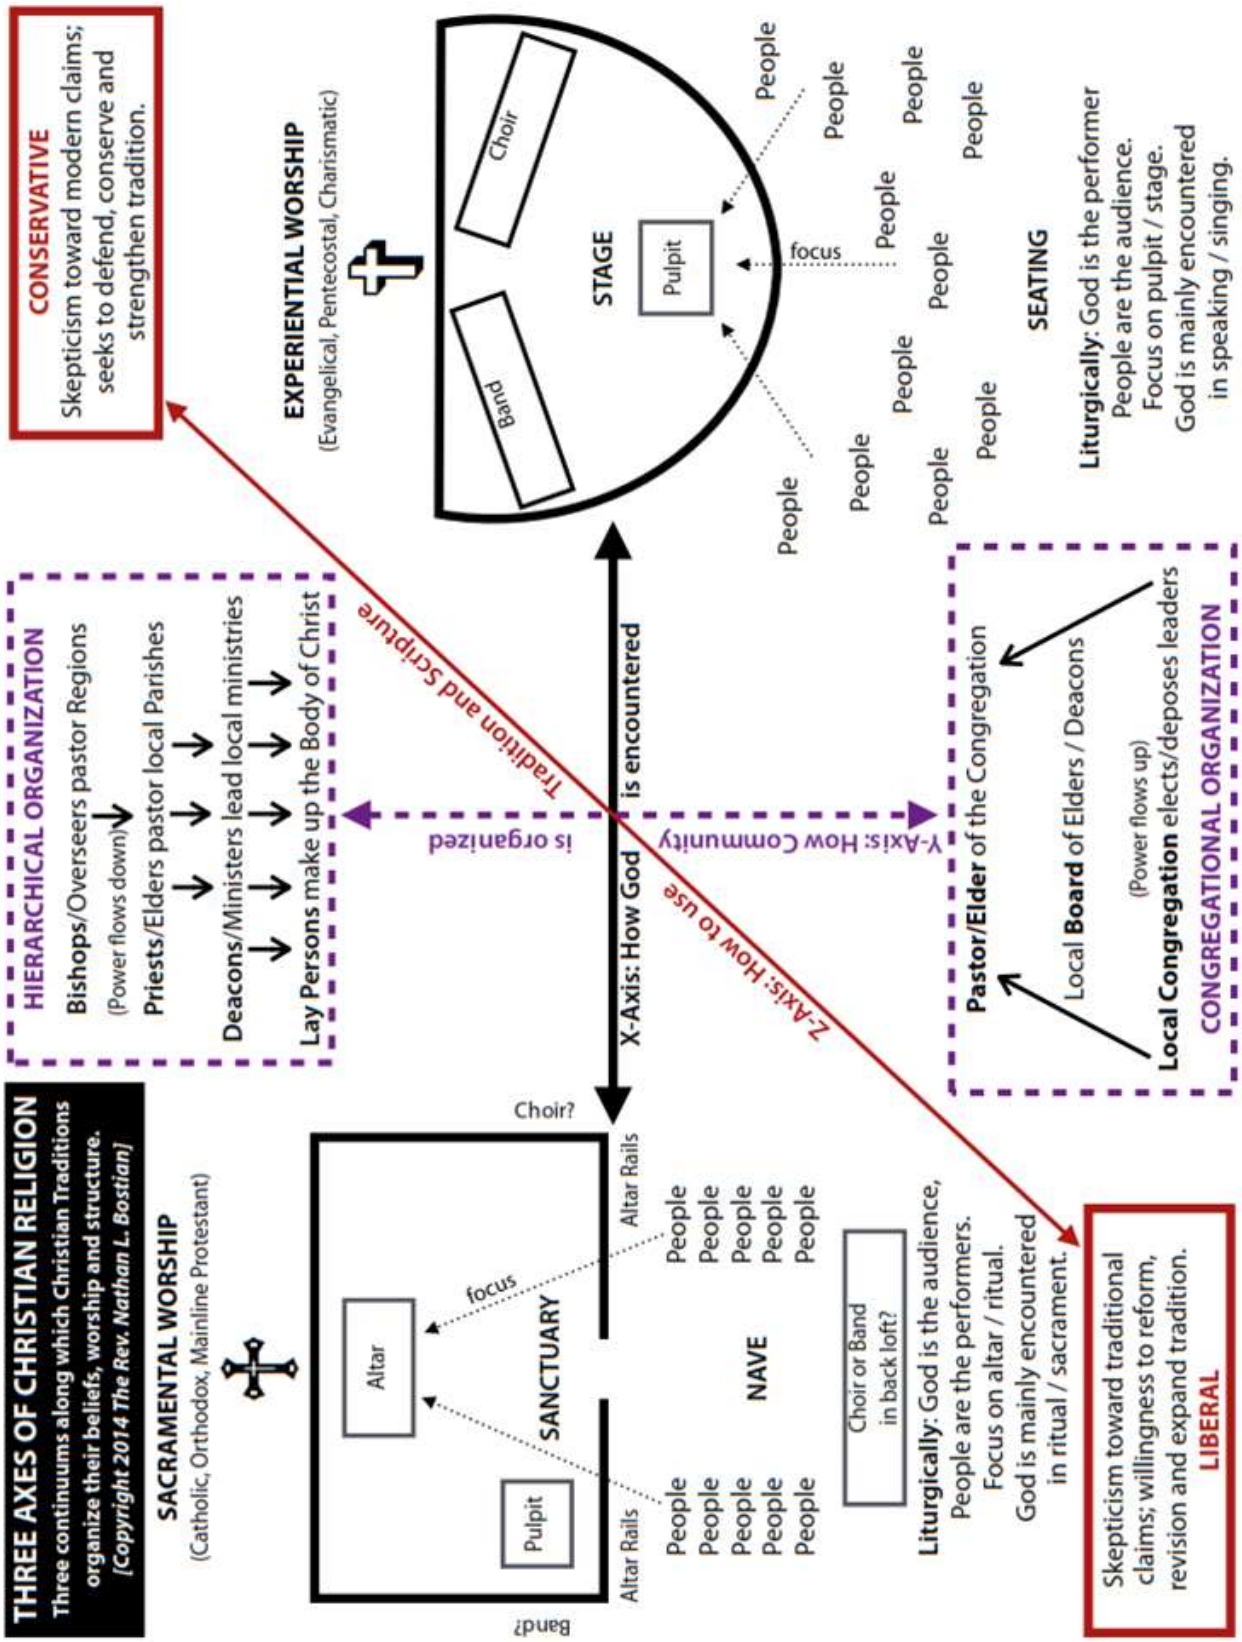
Speaking in Tongues Medical Study proves Holy Spirit praying
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=vsDYBSQWdoo



Christianity from Judaism to Constantine: Crash Course World History #11
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=TG55ErfdaeY

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



Three Axes of Christian Religion (note: "Axes" is plural for "Axis)

(See below for [Common Christian Terminology] related to above chart)

See larger view on next page…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

COMMON CHRISTIAN TERMINOLOGY

1. THREE AXES TO UNDERSTAND CHRISTIAN TRADITIONS: One way to understand Christian traditions is by looking at where they fall on three axes of: (i) How they use Scripture and Tradition in building their beliefs (more conservative or liberal?); (ii) How they worship (more sacramental or experiential?); and (iii) How they structure their community (more hierarchical or congregational?)

1a. CONSERVATIVE - A broad movement across Christian traditions that is skeptical toward modern claims and change. They seek to defend, conserve and strengthen tradition. A group may be conservative in one area (such as doctrine), while being liberal in another (such as worship).

1b. LIBERAL - A broad movement across Christian traditions that is skeptical of traditional, conservative and exclusivist interpretations of Christianity. It stresses the "broad" commonalities across traditions, and seeks to integrate faith with reason and science.

1c. SACRAMENTAL - A form of Christian spirituality in which God's presence is primarily mediated by certain rituals, especially the sacrament of the Mass or Eucharist. Sacraments are "outward and visible signs of God's inward and spiritual grace" working through our rituals. Worship is focused on the altar and God is the audience while the people are the performers of the liturgy.

1d. EXPERIENTIAL - A form of Christian worship in which God's presence is primarily mediated by human experience, especially by encountering God's Word in preaching, singing and prayer. Worship is focused on the preacher and musicians, God is the performer, and people are the audience.

1e. HIERARCHICAL - A Church structure in which power flows from the top leadership down. Typically, there is a well-organized system of leadership with the "three fold" ministry of regional bishops/overseers, local priests/pastors, who are helped by deacons/ministers.

1f. CONGREGATIONAL - A Church structure in which power flows up from the people. Typically, local congregations elect or depose their leadership, and leaders only serve at the pleasure of the people.

2. EASTERN ORTHODOXY - A Church Tradition rooted in the first New Testament Churches around the near East and Greece. They tend to be extremely conservative. Their worship is highly sacramental with layers of icons, vestments, candles and incense. Their structure is also extremely hierarchical, with national churches led by archbishops that are called Patriarchs or Metropolitans.

2a. LITURGY - Comes from a Greek word for "work of the people". It refers to how the work of the people is organized in worship. Every Christian group has this either written down or implicitly, because every group has organized patterns for their worship.

2b. ECUMENICAL COUNCILS - Worldwide meetings of bishops from 325-787 which defined boundaries about who God and Christ are, and how we approach God. God is Trinity: Three persons in one Being. Christ is Divine and Human united in one Person. Icons and sacraments are used to approach God. Nestorians and Miaphysites disagreed with exact wording, while agreeing on substance.

3. ROMAN CATHOLIC - A Church Tradition rooted in the Church planted by Peter and Paul. They are relatively conservative, with very sacramental worship focused on the Mass (and six other sacraments). They are the most hierarchical Church with all power flowing from the Bishop of Rome.

3a. POPE - This is the bishop of the Church of Rome. While many traditions such as Orthodoxy and Anglicanism accept him as the rightful Bishop of Rome, Catholics say that he is the chief pastor of the entire Church across with whole world, and "infallible" when he officially defines doctrines.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

3b. APOSTOLIC SUCCESSION - The hierarchical idea that, in order for a bishop to be legitimate, he must be in the line of an historic succession of ordinations that stretches back to the Apostles and Christ.

3c. MASS - This is the Roman Catholic name for the sacrament of Eucharist or Holy Communion. It is the principal act of worship in Orthodoxy, Catholicism, Anglicanism and Lutheranism.

3d. ADORATION - This is a Roman Catholic meditative and worship practice in which the worshipper spends time viewing and praying in the presence of the consecrated bread of Eucharist. The presence of Christ in the sacrament is supposed to be a tangible way to draw closer to God.

4. MAINLINE - This refers to the older, established denominations that largely came over from Europe. This usually refers to Protestant denominations such as Episcopalians, Lutherans, and Presbyterians, but can include Catholics as well. They trend more liberal on belief systems.

4a. ANGLICANISM - A worldwide tradition rooted in the Church of England, but including national churches such as the Episcopal Church, united around "Common Prayer" using liturgies from a Book of Common Prayer. They are usually conservative in keeping the Creeds, hierarchy, apostolic succession, and sacramental worship, while often liberal in gender roles, women's ordination and sexual norms.

4b. REFORMED - A worldwide tradition rooted in the theology of thinkers like John Calvin. Their worship tends to be structured, but not sacramental. They are often led by elders or presbyters. They tend to stress God's sovereign control, our inability to do good, and God's sheer grace in saving us.

4c. ORDINANCES - A view held by many Protestants that rituals are mere symbols which do not share God's presence. Usually only two rituals are "ordered" by Christ: Baptism and the Lord's Supper.

4d. BELIEVER'S BAPTISM - A view of many congregationalist protestants rejecting baptism of young children. In this, baptism must be part of a conscious adult choice to have faith in Christ.

4e. FUNDAMENTALISM - A very conservative movement that rejects Liberalism and much of Modern culture. It stresses what it views as traditional elements of religion, especially: Biblical inerrancy, Virgin Birth, Literal resurrection, Christ's immanent return, and traditional sexual, gender and racial norms.

5. EVANGELICAL - A broad movement across Protestantism that stresses a personal relationship with Jesus as Lord and Savior, an emotional conversion experience, and a conservative view of the Bible.

5a. BORN AGAIN - An Evangelical term that refers to a personally-felt conversion to Christ as Lord and Savior. This happens at a specific time, when we consciously choose to accept Christ.

5b. SINNER'S PRAYER - The prayer someone prays when "born again", which emphasizes personal sinfulness, God's forgiveness through Christ, and acceptance of Jesus as personal Savior and Lord.

5c. DISPENSATIONALISM - A type of Evangelical theology that teaches God works differently in different eras of history. They often deny God does miracles or causes people to speak in tongues in our era. They affirm Christ will return unexpectedly and "rapture" his followers to heaven with him.

5d. NON-DENOMINATIONAL - A version of Evangelical Christianity (and many charismatic groups) in which the local congregation refuses to join membership with a larger, established denomination.

6. PENTECOSTALISM - This is a movement that started in 1906 in Azusa CA. It is characterized by miracles, prophecy, and glossolalia. They insist that glossolalia is THE evidence that someone has been "baptized in the Spirit", and as a result were often kicked out to form new denominations.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

6a. CHARISMATIC - This is a movement within Christianity that started in the 1955 with an Episcopal priest, Fr. Dennis Bennett. It is similar to Pentecostals, but does not insist that everyone has the gift of glossolalia. Mostly, these people stayed in their own denominations.

6b. SPIRITUAL GIFTS - Empowerments given by the Holy Spirit so that followers of Jesus may live like Jesus did and do ministry like Jesus did. Includes "miraculous" gifts and natural "talents".

6c. BAPTISM IN THE HOLY GHOST - A pentecostal/charismatic term for the first time someone is "filled" with the Holy Spirit. It is a person's "immersion" into the life and experience of the Spirit.

6d. FILLED WITH THE SPIRIT - A pentecostal/charismatic term for the experience of being overwhelmed with, and controlled by, the Holy Spirit. As the Spirit is "released" through a person, they manifest positive experiences (such as joy and peace) and spiritual gifts.

6e. GLOSSOLALIA - This Greek word means "to speak in tongues". It refers to the Spiritual gift given to early Christians which enabled them to speak human languages they did not know, or to be able to speak in "heavenly" languages.

6f. SLAIN IN THE SPIRIT - A pentecostal/charismatic term for the overpowering of the Spirit's presence, in which someone falls down or even passes out because of the experience.

6g. PROSPERITY GOSPEL - A charismatic movement that stresses how God not only wants to heal our body and spirit, but also give us riches and power too. Usually we must plant a "seed" of money given to preachers (said to represent God) in order to reap a harvest of wealth. Often taught by TV preachers.

Christianity in 2 Hours or Less (Anglican Perspective) continues…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Mainly for students and/or parishioners who are familiar with Mainline sacramental worship, but may not be familiar with Orthodoxy, Catholicism, Evangelicalism, Pentecostals or Charismatics…

Crash Course on Christian History (12m)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=TG55ErfdaeY

Orthodox Vespers Service
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=EYDV7a0yzUg

Orthodox Divine Liturgy Gospel Procession
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Q7WMuf9xaoA

Comparison of Catholic and Orthodox Liturgical Practices
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=dApWNfJgGC4

Pope Benedict celebrates Mass in St. Peter's Basilica https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Gazna4HcU18

The Botafumeiro at the Cathedral of Santiago de Compostela
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=2QFd_55El1I

Crash Course on the Reformation (15m)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=1o8oIELbNxE

Billy Graham preaches 1957 New York City Crusade (start at 11:30)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=5oeMUf7R6Z8

MLK Jr. "I have a dream" 1963 (start at 12:00)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=smEqnnklfYs

Hillsong United leading worship
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=HcnfT4arZtI

Billy Graham Altar Call
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=dKHL3UttNeA

TD Jakes Altar Call at Potter's House
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=d_owBQjCg0U

ABC Report on Tongues: Interviews (8m)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=s9Ep0WHAsIY

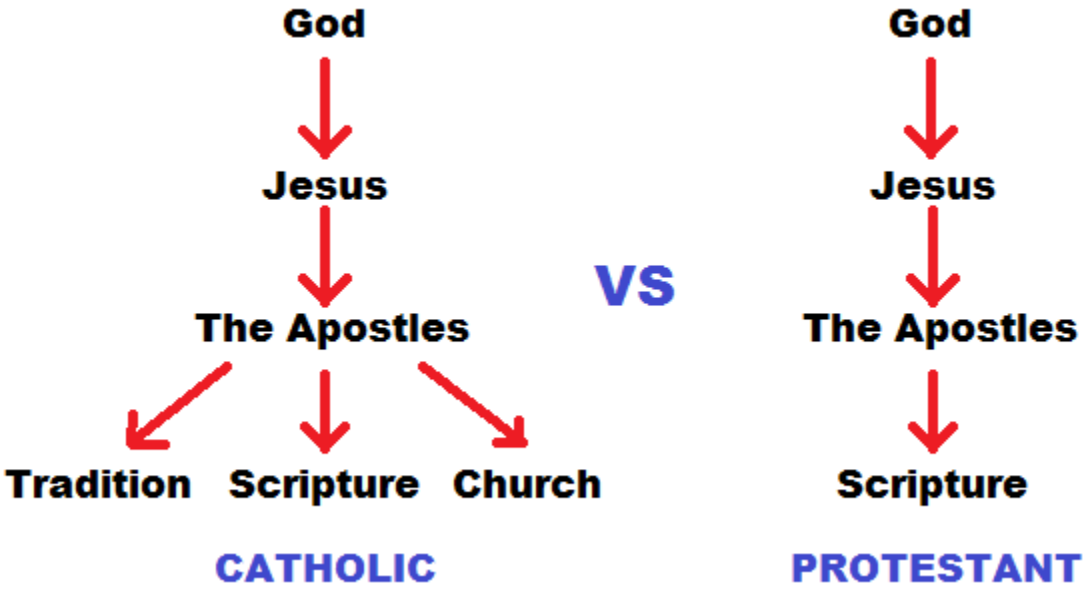
ABC Report on Tongues: Research (8m)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=NZbQBajYnEc

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Benny Hinn: Slain in the Spirit / Healing
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=MLHShyZrOKE

Robert Tilton on Prosperity (and a funny rant)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=XVjSui1Kuck

Joel Osteen: "Take Control Of Your Happiness"
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=czskiZDiuc8



Joel Olsteen "Step out of the boat" (poor video/audio quality)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Uc0z-kSjKPQ

END: Christianity in 2 Hours or Less

Return to: Denominations / Branches of Christianity

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Church Religious Authority: Catholic vs Protestant

See also my other separate reference resources*:

Christian Scholarship: Biblical – Theological – Philosophical

The Complete Sayings of Jesus – NKJV with Appendix

(Note: NKJV is primary text to make reading easier, except when it varies significantly from the original KJV or a different translation text is clearer and/or deemed more accurate.)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Denomination Expressions Compared

DIFFERENT SYSTEMS OF THEOLOGY
"I am on Paul, I of Apollos, I of Cephas, and I of Christ"

http://www.apttoteach.org/Theology/Introduction/pdf/103_Different_expressions.pdf [PDF]

Protestant vs Catholic Doctrinal Positions

Area	Issue	Protestant position	Catholic Position
Scripture	Sufficiency	Scripture alone	church tradition plus Scripture
	Apocrypha	rejected	accepted
Man	Original sin	total depravity and guilt inherited from Adam	corruption and predisposition to evil inherited from Adam
	Human will	in bondage to sin	free to do spiritual good
Salvation	Predestination	rooted in God's decrees	rooted in God's foreknowledge
	Atonement	Christ's death a substitutionary penal sacrifice	Christ's death the merit for blessings of salvation – blessings passed on to sinners through sacraments
	Grace of God	common grace given to all; saving grace given to elect	prevenient grace, given at baptism, enabling one to believe; efficacious grace cooperating with the will, enabling one to obey
	Good works	produced by the grace of God, unworthy of merit of any kind	meritorious
Salvation	Regeneration	work of the Holy Spirit in the elect	grace infused at baptism
	Justification	objective, final, judicial act of God	forgiveness of sins received at baptism, may be lost by committing mortal sin, regained by penance
The church	Church and Salvation	distinction between visible and invisible church	outside the (visible) church there is no salvation
	Sacraments	means of grace only as received by faith	convey justifying and sanctifying grace
	Priesthood	all believers priests	mediators between God and man
	Transubstant-iation	rejected	affirmed
After life	Purgatory	denied	affirmed

Continued next page…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

…Continued from previous page

Lutherans vs Reformed Protestants Differences

Issue	Lutheran position	Reformed position
Order of decrees	calling, illumination, conversion, regeneration, justification, sanctification, glorification	election, predestination, union with Christ, calling, regeneration, faith, repentance, justification, sanctification, glorification
Grace of God	grace received through baptism or preaching, enabling one to avoid resisting the regeneration grace of God	irresistible
Repentance	leads to faith	flows from faith
Baptism	works regeneration, removing guilt and power of sin	Incorporation into the Covenant of Grace
Lord's supper	Christ present in the sacraments objectively	Sign and seal of the Covenant of Grace to believers; Christ present by faith
Church and state	state church to tutor in the faith the rulers who support Protestantism	holy commonwealth, in which church and state, both Christian, perform their separate functions
Regulative principle	whatever is not forbidden in Scripture is permissible	whatever is not commanded in Scripture is forbidden

This material is modified from Robert C. Walton's Chronological and Background Charts of Church History published by Zondervan

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Those theologies that have a strong emphasis upon

What God has done FOR us.

1. Natural Theology (Deism)

Natural theology is the attempt to attain an understanding of God and his relationship to the universe by means of rational reflection, without appealing to special revelation such as the self-revelation of God in Christ and in Scripture.

2. Lutheran Theology

Lutheran Theology builds around the three fundamental doctrines of sola scriptura (Scripture alone), sola gratia (grace alone), and sola fide (faith alone).

3. Reformed Theology (Presbyterian)

Reformed theology builds around the central theme of the sovereignty of God. The whole of reality falls under the supreme rule of God.

4. Fundamentalist Theology (Many ultra conservative denominations and independent congregations)

(religiousmovements.lib.virginia.edu/nrms/fund.html)

Fundamentalist theology is evangelical theology with an attitude.

5. Evangelical Theology (Most conservative denominations)

Evangelical theology embraces the major tenants of the reformed faith as expressed in the following characteristics:

a. It looks to the Bible as the supreme norm of truth for Christian belief and practice - the biblical message enshrined in its narratives and its interpretations of those narratives.

b. It holds a supernatural world-view that is centered in a transcendent, personal God who interacts with, and intervenes in, creation.

c. It focuses on the forgiving and transforming grace of God through Jesus Christ in the experience called conversion as the center of authentic Christian experience.

d. It believes that the primary task of Christian theology is to serve the church's mission of bringing God's grace to the whole world through proclamation and service.

See also: Deism, Lutheran Theology, Reformed Theology

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Those theologies that have a strong emphasis upon

What God has done IN us.

1. Anabaptist Theology (Baptist)

Anabaptists did not stress systematic theological studies. Rather, doctrine was forged as it applied to life. Anabaptists were characterized by missionary zeal, separation of life, and an emphasis on ecclesiology.

2. Arminian Theology (Methodist)

Arminian theology is concerned to preserve the justice (fairness) of God. How could a just God hold individuals responsible for obedience to commands they are powerless to obey. Arminian Theology emphasizes divine foreknowledge, human responsibility and free will, and universal (common) enabling grace.

3. Wesleyan Theology (Methodist)

Wesleyan theology is essentially Arminian but has a stronger sense of the reality of sin and of dependence on divine grace.

4. Pentecostal Theology (many denominations)

Pentecostal theology is usually Arminian in its leaning with a strong emphasis on a "second blessing" or experience with the Holy Spirit that gives the Christian power to minister in the supernatural and a love for emotional praise and worship.

5. Existential Theology (Elements in many mainline denominations)

Existential theologians claim that we have to "demythologize" Scripture. "To demythologize Scripture is to reject not Scripture or the Christian message, but the world-view of a past epoch." That means to explain everything supernatural as myth. The important part of Christian faith consequently becomes a subjective experience, rather than an objective truth) see Salvation). The Bible, when demythologized, does not talk about God, but about man.

6. Neo-orthodox Theology (Conservative wing of many mainline denominations)

Neo-orthodoxy is more a hermeneutic than it is a complete systematic theology. It reacted against late-nineteenth-century liberalism and strove to retain the essence of Reformation theology while still adapting to contemporary issues. It is a theology of encounter between God and man.

See also: Arminianism, Existential Theology, Neo-Orthodox Theology

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Those theologies that have a strong emphasis upon

What God has done THROUGH us.

1. Traditional Roman Catholic Theology

Theology is constantly evolving in its understanding of the Christian faith. The Ignatian principle of accommodation and J.H. Newman's principle of development reflect the changing nature of Roman Catholic theology. Catholicism's trait of change is due mainly to the authoritative position given to church teaching.

2. Liberal Theology (Elements in many mainline denominations)

Liberal theologians seek to articulate Christianity in terms of contemporary culture and thinking. They attempt to maintain the essence of Christianity in modern terms and images.

3. Liberation Theology (Politically activistic liberalism in many mainline seminaries)

Theology is not seen as a system of dogmas but rather as a way to initiate social change. This view has been called the "liberation of theology" (H. Segundo). This theology grew out of Vatican II and the liberal theologians' attempts to wrestle with social, political, and economic inequities in the face of a Christianity no longer based on a biblical world view. Much of the setting for liberation theology has been Latin America, and this theology has become an answer to the political oppression of the poor. The proponents often have different views; there is really no "unified" liberation theology. Rather, it is a number of closely related "alternatives" springing from common roots. Rather than a classical theology concerned with such theological matters as the nature of God, man, or the future, liberation theology is concerned with this world and how changes may occur through political action. In Latin America, especially, Roman Catholic theologians have sought to combine Christianity and Marxism.

4. Black Theology (Some African American churches)

Black theology is a form of liberation theology that has its center in the theme of oppression of blacks by whites. It came out of the "need for black people to define the scope and meaning of black existence in a white racist society" (Cone). It emerged in the last two decades in the wave of liberation movements as an expression of black consciousness and seems to speak to the issues that blacks must contend with on a daily basis.

5. Contemporary Feminist Theological Models (Elements in some mainline denominations and seminaries)

1. Rejectionist (Post-Christian) Sees the Bible as promoting an oppressive patriarchal structure and rejects it as nonauthoritative. This is sometimes termed "gender feminism."
2. Loyalist (Evangelical) Sees no radically oppressive sexism in the biblical record.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

What can we learn from each of these theologies?

1. Roman Catholicism's emphasis on the whole (church) being more than the sum of its parts (individual believers) is a strength.
2. Natural Theology's respect for common sense is its strength.
3. Lutheran's distinction between law and grace is a needed emphasis.
4. Anabaptist's separation of church and state is helpful.
5. Reformed Theology's attention to systematics and objective truth is a strength.
6. Arminian Theology's emphasis on human responsibility is important.
7. Pentecostal Theology's openness to emotional praise and the supernatural manifestation of the Spirit in the present.
8. Weslyan Theology's emphasis on holistic conversion is important.
9. Liberal Theology's openness to all truth is admirable.
10. Existential Theology's emphasis on personal integrity of faith is vital.
11. Neo-orthodox Theology's emphasis on personal subjective encounter with Christ is admirable.
12. Liberation Theology's application of the gospel to social structures is important.
13. Black Theology's attention to the WASP influences on theology is helpful.
14. Feminist Theology's sensitivity to the abusive treatment of women by the church over the years is helpful.
15. Fundamentalist Theology's sensitivity to separation from worldliness and tenacity for the authority of the Bible is its strength.

Additional resources

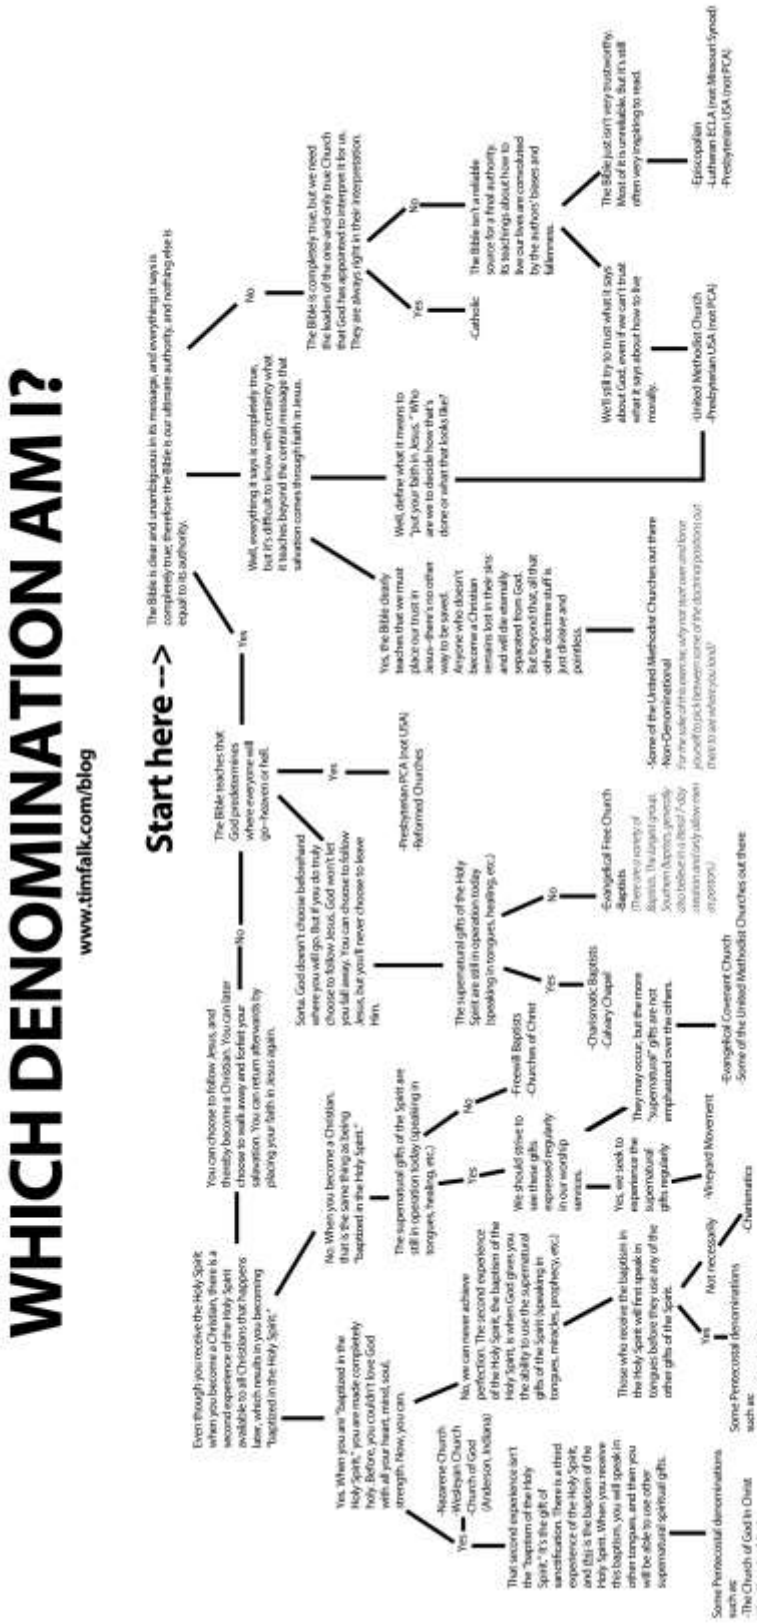
http://www.docscrewbanks.com/pdf/different-types-of-theology

http://www.docscrewbanks.com/pdf/christian-denominations-chart

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Where Do We Belong?

Where Do We Belong?



Evangelical • Word-based • Personal Conversion • Human Freedom • Revivalism • Pietism • Personal holiness and Discipline • Church "invisible" • Congregational • Religion of the Heart	Roman Catholic • Sacrament-based • Rational Theology • Holy Orders • Unity of Apostolic Teaching • Liturgical • Social Action • Authority through centralization • Church visible and invisible inseparable
Reformed • Word-based • God's Sovereignty • God's Covenants • Personal holiness and Discipline • "Work-Ethic" • "Church invisible" but organized • Elder-based • Community of the Elect	Eastern Orthodox • Sacrament Based • Mystical Theology • Holy Orders • Unity of Apostolic Teaching • Liturgical • Social Action • Authority through collegiality (councils, consensus) • Church infallible as body of Christ

----Adapted from "The Disciplined Center" by Scott McLaughlin, and "Classic Christianity" by Thomas Oden.

[Source: http://keywordteam.net/gallery/204075.html]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Which Denomination Am I?

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Comparison between Orthodoxy, Protestantism and Roman Catholicism

http://www.padfield.com/acrobat/taylor/denominations.pdf [PDF]

Topic	Orthodox	Protestant	Roman Catholic
Apostolic Succession	This is an important part of Orthodox belief and ensures continuity with the church that Christ founded.	With the exception of the Anglicans and some Lutherans, this idea is rejected. Rather it is important to emphasise continuity of teaching with that of the apostles, rather than a direct line of succession.	As in Orthodoxy, this is of vital importance to the church. There is also some degree of mutual recognition of the validity of Orthodox ordinations.
Bible - Composition of	Accept the 39 Old Testament and 27 New Testament books, but also a collection of books not found in the original Hebrew Bible. These are known as Deuterocanonicals i.e. a second canon of scripture.	Protestants reject the deuterocanonicals as not being inspired scripture and term them Apocrypha (Greek: 'Hidden Things').	Agrees with Orthodoxy as to the validity of these books.
Clergy - Qualification for	Priests and Bishops must be male, but deaconesses are permitted, though the order is dormant. Priests and deacons may marry before ordination but not after. Bishops, on the other hand, must be celibate.	The majority of Protestants do not require celibacy as a condition of election to the clergy. Many churches practice female ordination, including those within the Anglican communion, where the issue of female episcopacy is currently being discussed.	All clergy are required to be male. Priests and Bishops must also be celibate, with the exception of Eastern Rite Catholics and Anglican married clergy who subsequently convert to Catholicism. These groups are allowed to have married priests.
Eucharist - Significance of	Commonly termed the 'Mystic Supper' or 'Divine Liturgy' - This makes present Christ's sacrifice and therefore forgiveness of sins is obtained through it. It is also an encounter with the Risen Christ.	The Eucharist, like Baptism is only a symbol of grace. The sacrificial nature of the Eucharist is also rejected.	The position is similar to the Orthodox. The Eucharist is also known as the 'Holy sacrifice of the Mass'.
Eucharist - Presence of Christ in	During the Eucharist, the Priest calls down the Holy Spirit (in Greek: epiklesis) upon the gifts (the bread and the wine). They then change into the actual body and blood of Christ. The precise way in which this happens is a divine mystery.	The bread and wine, being symbols, do not change substance. There are however, a wide variety of views held within Protestantism on this subject (e.g. some Anglicans accept the Catholic view, whereas Baptists deny it).	As in Orthodoxy, the Priest invokes the Holy Spirit during the Mass. However, the consecration becomes effective through the Priest, who acts in the person of Christ. The gifts change completely into Christ's body and blood and this change is termed 'Transubstantiation' i.e. the outward appearance remains the same, but the substance changes.
Eucharist - Distribution of	The consecrated elements can only be received by members. Orthodox policy is to have communion in both kinds (i.e. both the bread and wine are given to those present).	The elements are usually offered to all Christians who feel able to partake of them. The vast majority of Protestant churches have communion in both kinds.	As with Orthodoxy, only members of the church may receive. In some Catholic Churches, the bread alone is given to the congregation, the Priest receiving the wine. However, it is becoming common for churches to have communion in both kinds.

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Holy Spirit	The third person of the Trinity, proceeding from the Father alone as in the original Nicene Creed. The Father sends the Spirit at the intercession of the Son. The Son is therefore an agent only in the procession of the Spirit.	The Holy Spirit proceeds from both the Father and the Son. The Nicene creed includes the filioque (Latin: 'and the son').	Agrees with the Protestant view. Ambrose of Milan (340-397) wrote: 'When the Holy Spirit proceeds from the Father and the Son, He is not separated from the Father, He is not separated from the Son'.
Marriage and Divorce	Marriage is a mystical union between a man and a woman. Divorce is generally only allowed in cases of adultery, though there are exceptions.	Marriage is a contract, but is not unbreakable. Divorce is discouraged, but permitted as evidence of human weakness. Some denominations permit remarriage in church.	Marriage is seen as an unbreakable contract & a type of Christ and the church. Remarriage after divorce is not permitted unless there is some canonical impediment to the marriage. In this situation, an annulment may be granted.
Mary - Assumption and Immaculate conception of	The Assumption is accepted and it is agreed that Mary experienced physical death, but the Immaculate conception is rejected. Orthodox belief is that the guilt of original sin is not transmitted from one generation to the next, thus obviating the need for Mary to be sinless.	Both are denied. The claim that Mary was sinless is rejected - only Christ was sinless.	Both are dogmas of the church. The church has not as yet decided whether Mary actually experienced Physical death. The dogma of the Immaculate Conception states that Mary, was at conception 'preserved immaculate from all stain of original sin' and should not be confused with the virgin birth.
Mary - Position of	Mary is venerated as Theotokos (Greek: 'God-bearer'). By this is meant that the son she bore was God in human form. She is first amongst the saints and 'ever-virgin'.	Mary was a holy woman who was chosen to bear the Son of God. Her perpetual virginity and intercession are denied.	The view is similar to the Orthodox church - the title 'Mother of God' being used more commonly than Theotokos. This title forms one of the 'Marian Dogmas' of the Church. The others are Mary's perpetual virginity, assumption and immaculate conception.
Pope - Authority of	As the Bishop of Rome, he has a primacy of honour when Orthodox, not of jurisdiction. At present, his primacy is not effective as the papacy needs to be reformed in accordance with Orthodoxy. His authority is thus no greater or lesser than any of his fellow Bishops in the church.	The Pope is the leader of the Catholic church, having no authority to speak for the church as a whole.	The Pope is the 'Vicar of Christ' i.e. the visible head of the church on earth and spiritual successor of St. Peter. He has supreme authority (including that over church councils) within Christendom (The Power of the keys).
Pope - Infallibility of	Papal Infallibility is rejected. The Holy Spirit acts to guide the church into truth through (for example) ecumenical councils. This Orthodoxy recognises the first seven ecumenical councils (325-787) as being infallible.	Protestants also reject Papal infallibility. The only source of infallible teaching is that found in the Bible.	The Pope is infallible when, through the Holy Spirit, he defines a doctrine on faith and morals that is to be held by the whole church. This is a dogma and is therefore a required belief within Catholicism.
Purgatory	An intermediate state between earth and heaven is recognised, but cleansing and purification occur in this life, not the next.	Purgatory is rejected - Christ's death on the cross is sufficient to remove the penalty for all our sins.	A state of cleansing and preparation for heaven. Also a state where the punishment due to unremitted venial sins may be expiated.

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Sacraments	There are at least seven Sacraments (known as 'Mysteries' in Orthodoxy): Baptism, Chrismation, Eucharist, Holy Orders, Holy Unction, Marriage (Holy Matrimony) and Penance (Confession). The list is not fixed.	Generally, only two sacraments (also known as Ordinances) are recognised: Baptism and the Eucharist (often called 'Holy Communion' or the 'Lord's Supper').	The number of Sacraments is fixed at seven and is the same list as that in Orthodoxy, with the exception of Chrismation, which is generally known as 'Confirmation'.
Sacraments - Effect of	The Mysteries convey grace to those who participate in them worthily.	There is a diverse range of opinions, but many Protestants regard the Sacraments as symbols or reminders of Grace already given.	Agrees with the Orthodox position. The Sacraments are signs that effect that which they signify.
Saints	A special group of holy people, who are venerated. They may act as intercessors between God and Man and may be invoked in prayer.	All Christians are saints, called to imitate Christ. Only Christ may mediate between God and Man.	The position is very similar to Orthodoxy. For sainthood, it is also required that at least two verifiable miracles have occured as a result of the intercession of that person.
Salvation	Salvation is "faith working through love" and should be seen as a life long process. The Ultimate aim of every Orthodox Christian is to obtain Theosis or union with God. This is done through living a holy life and seeking to draw closer to God.	Salvation is the free and unmerited gift of God to man. It is obtained by grace through faith in Christ alone. Through Christ's atoning sacrifice, we are rendered acceptable to God and judged righteous (justified) in his sight.	Salvation is by grace, specifically sanctifying grace, which is given initially through Baptismal regeneration and then maintained through the Sacraments, which are 'channels of grace'.
Scripture - Importance of	There is one source of divine revelation: Tradition. Scripture forms the oral part, and the writings of saints, decisions of ecumenical councils etc. are also part of it.	Scripture alone is the only infallible guide and the final authority on matters of Christian faith and practice (One of the foundational principles of Protestantism).	Alongside Sacred Scripture, Sacred Tradition (i.e. teachings handed down from Christ and the apostles to the present) are to be considered sources of divine revelation. Tradition and scripture are interpreted by the magisterium or teaching authority of the church.
Worship and Liturgy	The 'Divine Liturgy' is the centre of Orthodox spirituality. Worship is usually in the vernacular, though Greek is also used.	There are a wide variety of worship styles. Examples include the spontaneity of the Pentecostal churches, and the more traditional worship of the Anglican churches in the Catholic tradition.	Worship is centred around the Mass. Following the Vatican II council (1962-5), greater emphasis was placed on worship in the vernacular, though the traditional Latin ('Tridentine') Mass is also used.
Topic	Orthodox	Protestant	Roman Catholic

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

A Chart of Competing Dogmas

by Shane Rosenthal

Classical Protestant	Catholic	Evangelical	Liberal Protestant	Naturalism
View of God? God is personal (Trinitarian). Immanence and transcendence affirmed (Jer. 23:23). Only faith in Christ gives access to God (Rom 5:1-2)	View of God? God is personal (Trinitarian). Transcendence is emphasized such that Christ himself is seen as inaccessible, hence: "To Jesus through Mary"	View of God? God is personal (Trinitarian). Strong emphasis on God's immanence, hence a relationship with God as one's best friend is stressed	View of God? God is impersonal (often this goes in pantheistic directions). More emphasis is placed on transcendence	View of God? God does not exist. Since this world is all there is, nothing transcends. There is only entertainment here and now
How do you know God? God has revealed himself in nature, in history, and the pages of Scripture (General & Special Revelation)	How do you know God? Through Scripture & Authoritative Tradition. Medieval mysticism: the sense of the divine / the beatific vision	How do you know God? Through my experience and relationship with him. It just works (pragmatism). "I just choose to believe" (fideism)	How do you know God? The sense of the divine. Faith as a blind leap. Feeling of absolute dependence. "I know God in community."	Why don't you believe in God? Science has settled the question. Faith is an irrational leap. All religion is superstition. Matter is all there is (materialism)
Who is Jesus? Jesus is the Messiah: God in human flesh. He proved his identity by his resurrection from the dead, and will come again	Who is Jesus? Similar to the Protestant position. More emphasis placed on his divine transcendence.	Who is Jesus? Jesus is God in human flesh. Practical emphasis is on his role as a teacher, helper, therapist, life-coach and friend	Who was Jesus? Jesus was an enlightened teacher. He was not divine, but shows us all the way to God	Who was Jesus? Jesus, if he existed, was a Gandhi-like teacher who focused on peace, love and sharing our toys. Political messiahs fill a void
Creeds, Dogma, Theology? Facts + meaning = doctrine. Creeds are expressions the church's timeless convictions. We should know what we believe and why we believe it	Creeds, Dogma, Theology? Creeds are expressions the church's timeless convictions, but these are equal in authority with Scripture, since the Spirit inspired both	Creeds, Dogma, Theology? "I don't want to know about god" Knowledge puffs up, we should focus on practical matters. "Deeds not Creeds" / No creed but Christ	Creeds, Dogma, Theology? Doctrine divides; service unites. Church creeds are "outdated expressions of the superstition of earlier generations" (Fosdick). Social activism preferred	Creeds, Dogma, Theology? Dogma / competing religions keep us from our utopian dream. "Imagine there's no heaven, it's easy if you try. No hell below us above us only sky..."
Heaven & Hell? Heaven & Hell really exist, and history is moving in this direction	Heaven & Hell? Heaven & Hell really exist, and history is moving in this direction	Heaven & Hell? Heaven & Hell really exist, and history is moving in this direction	Heaven & Hell? Heaven and Hell as classically understood do not exist. We should strive to make heaven a reality here on earth	Heaven & Hell? This world is all there is. Thus, heaven & hell are states of mind. Hence the phrases, "I'm in heaven," or "war is hell"
Essence of Christianity? Christ died and was raised for our justification. Focus is on what God did 2000 years ago, proclaimed through word & sacrament	Essence of Christianity? God has made salvation possible through the work of Christ, mediated through the church and a person's cooperation w/grace.	Essence of Christianity? Christianity is not a religion but a relationship. Focus is on what God is doing in my life now. "Practical Christian Living," "The Worship experience."	Essence of Christianity? Christianity is primarily a vehicle primarily for communal and social transformation. Focus is on what we are doing for God in the world right now	Essence of Christianity? At its root it's superstition. But functionally it's about community providing a sense of meaning, values, and comfort (like all other religions)
Classical Protestant	Catholic	Evangelical	Liberal Protestant	Naturalism
What is the Bible? A collection of ancient texts (history, poetry, wisdom, etc), all telling one story of God's self revelation unfolding through time. The story of redemptive history	What is the Bible? Similar to the Protestant view. Scripture however is of equal weight with tradition	What is the Bible? The Bible is primarily viewed as the owner's manual for life, or God's little instruction book. The focus is on practical and therapeutic utility	What is the Bible? A collection of morality tales similar to Aesop's Fables. The point isn't redemptive history, but timeless eternal principles	What is the Bible? Primarily viewed as a work of fiction and superstition that encourages bigotry & narrow mindedness
How is one Justified? By grace alone through faith alone, rooted in the finished work of Christ alone	How is one Justified? By faith working through love	How is one Justified? We're justified by the one act of faith; by making a decision to follow Jesus	How is one Justified? Justification implies God is an angry authoritarian deity. He, she, it accepts us as we are	How is one Justified? No God, no need for justification All guilt is psychological
How Should We Then Live? We live lives of thankfulness and gratitude. We worship God in church (corporately), and in the context of our callings (serving others with our gifts)	How Should We Then Live? Good works / indulgences reduce one's time in purgatory. Worship is almost exclusively formal (taking place within the walls of the church)	How Should We Then Live? Emphasis on private / individual spirituality. My personal prayer life, devotion, and religious experiences	How Should We Then Live? Emphasis on social responsibility Social activism / equality for all, "participating with God in the redemption of the world." Liberation theology	How Should We Then Live? Since there are no authorities, life is about personal comfort and pleasure. Socially, the highest good amounts to sharing the world's goods and resources
How do you persuade others? Catechize children. Share the good news with outsiders. Be patient, respectful and winsome. As in Acts, share what you believe & why. Pray for God's regenerating grace	How do you persuade others? Though there are some exceptions, modern Catholics have not emphasized private personal evangelism. Strong emphasis on the catechism of the young. Still, biblical ignorance / moralistic therapeutic deism are significant problems	How do you persuade others? Share with others what God has done in your life. Be a friend. Let your life be a testimony to others. Youth are not well instructed in the faith, biblical ignorance / moralistic therapeutic deism are significant problems	How do you persuade others? Actions speak louder than words. "Preach the gospel at all times, when necessary, use words." Social gospel / soup kitchen evangelism. The gospel is the soup. Youth often grow up wondering "Why go to church?"	How do you persuade others? Through elites in positions in power, who control the conversation in education and media. Today's youth do not have to study naturalism or pluralism, it's the default position
What is Faith? Faith is knowledge, assent & trust. It's the empty hand that receives	What is Faith? Faith is one of the cardinal virtues	What is Faith? Faith is blind, but proved by experience. It's an act of the will	What is Faith? Faith is possibility thinking, feeling of dependence, having hope for the future, a blind leap	What is Faith? Faith is blind superstition. Faith is opposed to reason
What is the Church? Invisible: The communion of saints throughout history. Visible: the institution in which word and sacrament are rightly preached / administered. Predominantly linked with folk culture	What is the Church? The church is a divine institution consisting of a strictly ordered hierarchy (Pope, Cardinals, Bishops, Priests, Deacons, Laypersons, etc.). Linked with high culture	What is the Church? Sometimes it means all Christians throughout the world. But mostly it refers to the place Christians go on Sunday for a worship experience, fellowship, and a moral pep-talk. Linked with low / pop culture	What is the Church? The church is a social institution on par with the Rotary Club. Importance of tradition and community. Linked with elite / high culture	What is the Church? The church is either associated with the building itself or the social institution (which provides a sense of community).

White Horse Inn • www.whitehorseinn.org • 1725 Bear Valley Parkway, Escondido, CA 92027 • Last revision 7.25.13

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Salvation Today: Some Reflections on the Christian Doctrine of Salvation

http://www.biblicalstudies.org.uk/pdf/ijt/37-1_082.pdf [PDF]

Looks at contemporary approaches: Existential Theology, Liberation Theology, Process Theology, Evangelical Theology and calls for a "biblically justifiable and contextually relevant understanding of salvation."

Concepts of Salvation

https://quizlet.com/86820998/introducing-christian-doctrine-chapter-31-conceptions-of-salvation-flash-cards/

Sacramentalist concept of salvation

View that salvation or grace is obtained by means of a rite involving use of a physical object. For example, in traditional Roman Catholicism, grace is believed to be actually transmitted and received by taking the bread of the Eucharist into one's body.

Social gospel movement

Since the basic human problem lies not in a perverted human nature but in an evil social environment, instead of attempting to cure individuals we must alter the conditions leading to their illness.

Liberation theologies

A cluster of theologies that includes black, feminist, and Third World theologies. Since the basic problem of society is the oppression and exploitation of the powerless classes by the powerful, salvation consists in deliverance (or liberation) from such oppression.

Existential theology

Since human selfishness and autonomous action constitutes a rejection of all that the human is intended to be, salvation consists of responding to God's call to live authentically and abandon self and illusory security.

Secular theology

The true meaning of salvation is realizing one's capability and utilizing it, becoming independent of God, coming of age, affirming oneself, and getting involved in the world.

Religionless Christianity

View developed by Dietrich Bonhoeffer that God has educated his highest creature to be independent of him. In secularization God has been striving to bring the human race to a point of self-sufficiency. http://www.followingjesus.org/religionless-christianity/ (Contradicts above statement) [Recommended]

Evangelical theology

Sin is a broken relationship with God and spoilage of the very nature of the person. Thus, salvation requires that the individual's legal status be changed from guilty to not guilty and the condition of the heart be changed through new birth.

See also: Gospel of Jesus the Messiah (Christ)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Return to:

Denomination Theological Expressions Compared

Denominations / Branches of Christianity

Christianity in 2 Hours or Less

See also my other separate reference resources*:

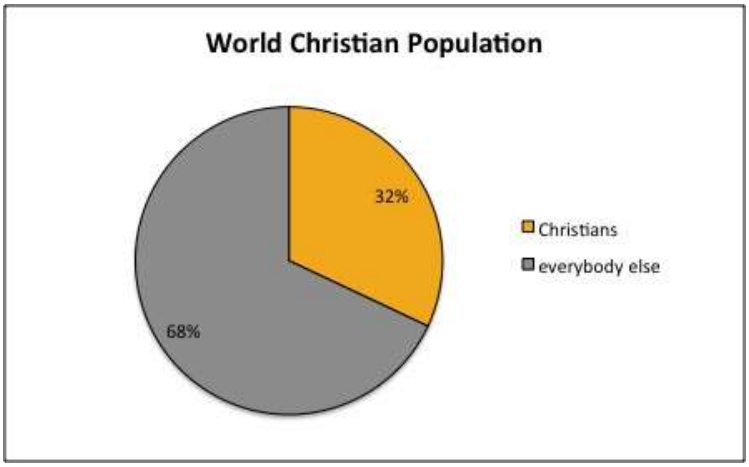
Christian Scholarship: Biblical – Theological – Philosophical

The Complete Sayings of Jesus – NKJV with Appendix

(Note: NKJV is primary text to make reading easier, except when it varies significantly from the original KJV or a different translation text is clearer and/or deemed more accurate.)

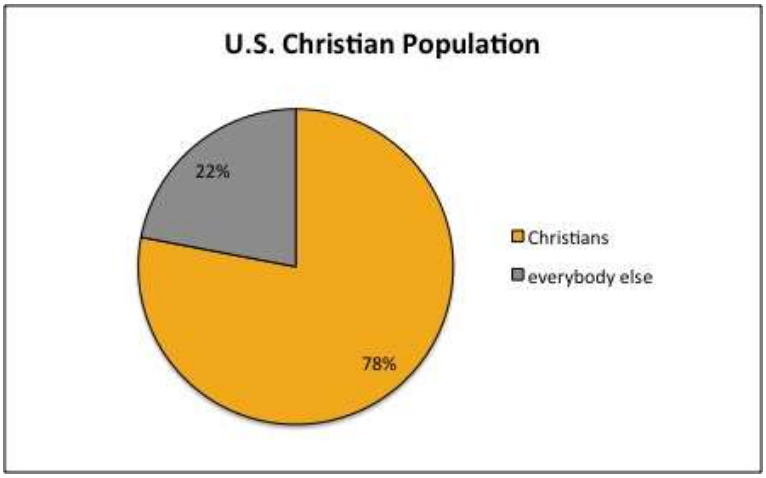


Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Denomination and Religious Demographics

Christian Demographics & Denominations

http://www.beliefnet.com/columnists/religion101/2012/11/christian-demographics-denominations-part-one.html
http://www.beliefnet.com/columnists/religion101/2012/11/christian-demographics-denominations-part-two.html



While Christianity may be the religion with the greatest number of adherents in the world, it nevertheless remains a minority when compared to the total human population of the world:

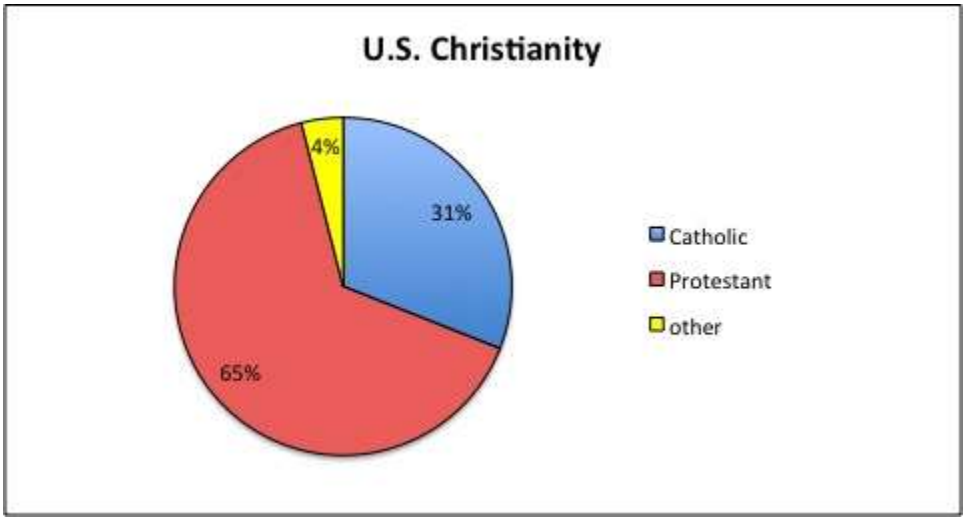
As the above chart amply illustrates, Christianity in all of its forms (Catholic, Orthodox, Protestant, etc.) together only amounts to roughly one-third of the total global population. It may indeed be the largest of the world's religions; but even so, more than two-thirds of the global populace is non-Christian.

That's the size of Christianity's worldwide footprint. Moving from this global perspective to a national one, however, presents us with a very different picture.

The United States is often said to be a "Christian" nation. And while this would be incorrect if one is talking about its government (the U.S. is a secular republic, not a Christian theocracy), it is correct if instead one is talking about its demographics. Just how correct such an assessment is can be seen by viewing the following chart:

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The United States is clearly an overwhelmingly Christian nation, in the strictly limited demographic sense that nearly 80% of its population self-identifies as "Christian" of one sort or another. (Bear in mind that Christianity is vastly more diverse than many people seem to realize).

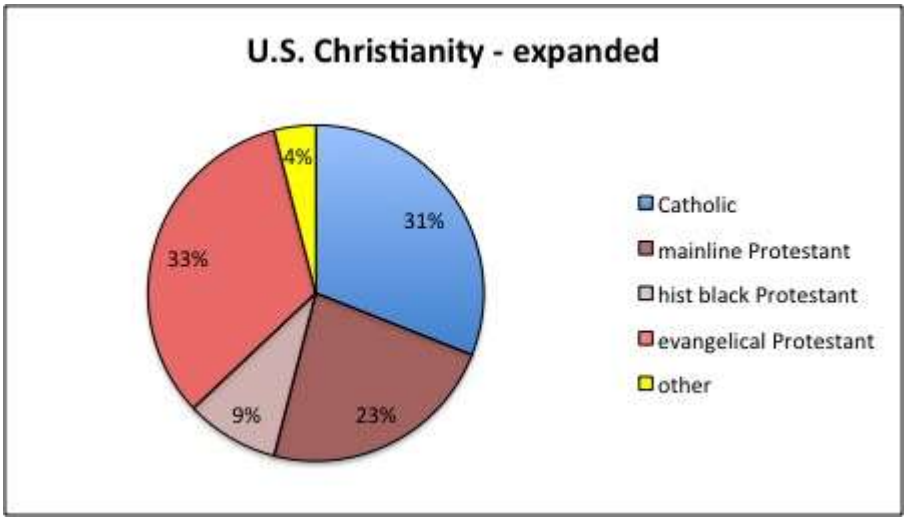


Christians therefore constitute a large majority (78%) of the domestic U.S. population, whereas on the wider world stage Christians constitute only a minority (32%) of the total global population.

Now, how does all of this break down, in terms of Christianity's major wings, branches, denominations, and other internal subdivisions (all of that "vast diversity" I mentioned)?

Christianity worldwide breaks down, in terms of its various branches, wings, and internal subdivisions:

Now, moving from a broadly global perspective to a narrowly national one, we can see at once that a similar breakdown of American Christianity presents us with a very different picture:



Clearly, the U.S. is not only an overwhelmingly Christian nation; it is also a very Protestant nation. Whereas Catholics outnumber Protestants on the world stage (50% vs. 37% of Christians globally), here at home it is the other way around: American Catholics are outnumbered by American Protestants by more than two to one (31% vs. 65% of U.S. Christians).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

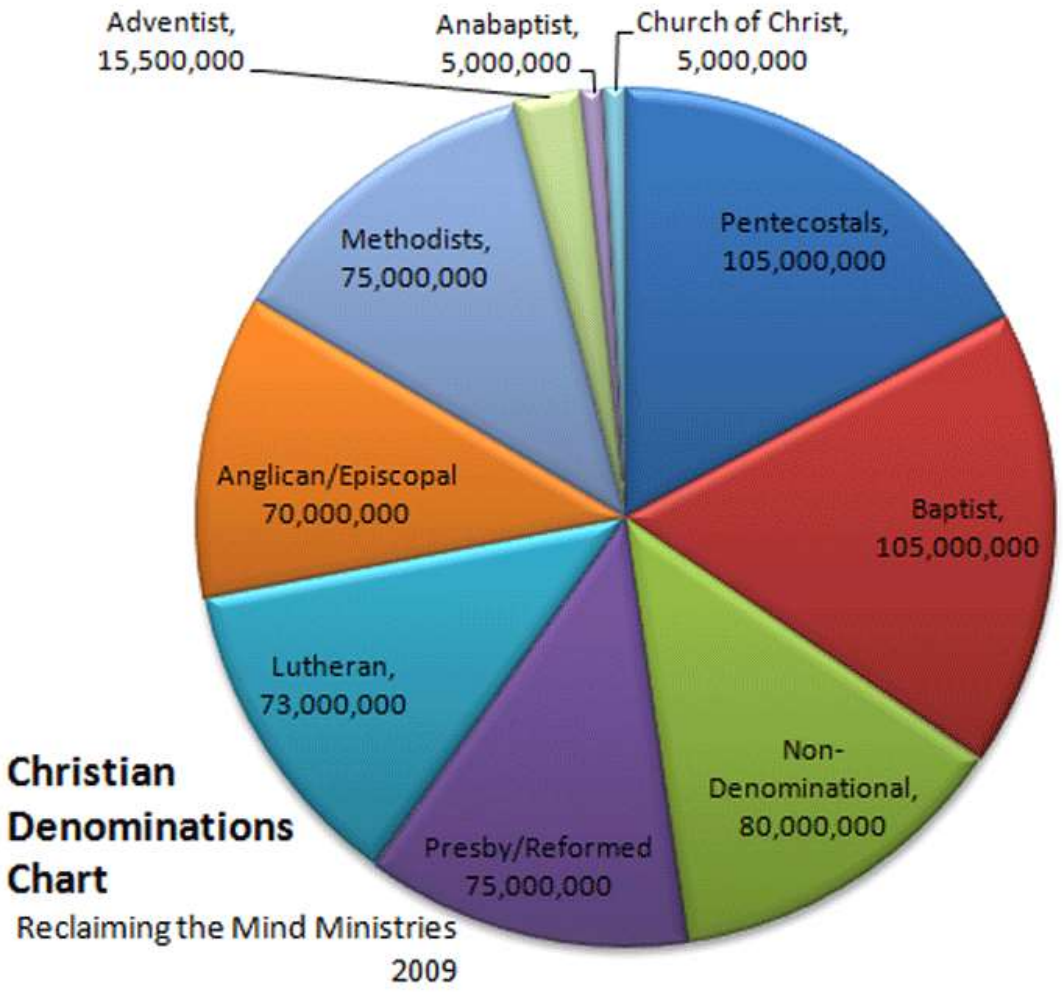
The remaining 4% of U.S. Christians is composed of various Orthodox Christians, Mormons, Jehovah's Witnesses, and miscellaneous others.

As mentioned in my previous post, Protestantism is not one thing, but many; American Protestantism is accordingly highly fragmented and quite diverse. Thousands of individual Protestant denominations, sects, and independent churches exist within the U.S. However, we may at least group all of them into a very few major Protestant subcategories.

Doing so makes the world of American Christianity look like this:

Most American Protestants can be placed into one of three broad categories: mainline (23%), evangelical (33%), and historically black (9%) churches and congregations.

The mainline or "mainstream" churches are the older, long-established, usually (but not always) theologically moderate to liberal Protestant denominations: Baptists, Methodists, Lutherans, Presbyterians, Episcopalians, and so forth. In recent decades they have not been growing; their populations are aging, and their numbers are somewhat in decline.



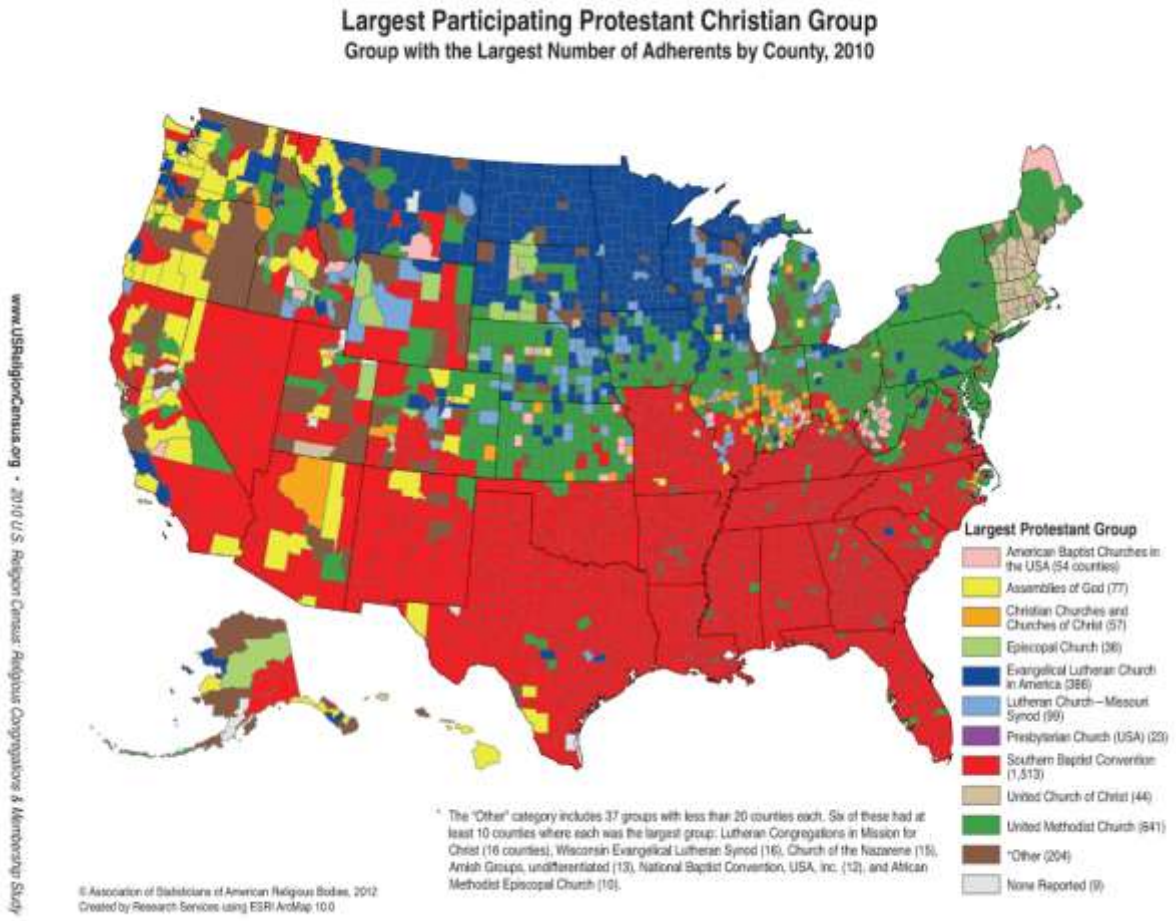
By contrast, in recent decades, evangelical Christianity seems to be increasing in popularity (and in numbers). Ranging from theologically moderate to conservative, evangelical Protestantism is associated with a number of conservative denominations — Southern Baptists, Church of Christ, Assemblies of God, Church of the Nazarene — as well as with a growing number of independent non-denominational churches, some of which are currently among the largest and fastest-growing in the U.S. There are now about as many American evangelicals as there are American Catholics, and about as many evangelicals as both mainline Protestants and historically black church members combined.

Historically black churches are just what the term implies: American Protestant church communities that have traditionally served primarily African-American congregations. Among the largest and best-known are the African Methodist Episcopal (AME) Church, and the Church of God in Christ (COGIC). Such historically black denominations account for about 9% of American Christians.

As all of this amply illustrates, Christianity today is far more diverse and fragmented than it might first appear to the casual onlooker. Diversity certainly seems to be its watchword.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Major Protestant Christian Denomination Percentages
http://www.theinformedservant.com/christian-denominations-pt-1-dividers-of-the-house/



Return to: Denominations / Branches of Christianity

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Where the Protestants Roam: Map of Protestant Denominations in the US

http://www.patheos.com/blogs/blackwhiteandgray/2012/10/where-the-protestants-roam-map-of-protestant-denominations-in-the-us/

Seemed like a good time to show a map of the distribution of Protestant denominations throughout the country. This map is from the always interesting Association of Statisticians of American Religious Bodies, and it highlights the strong regional flavor of Protestantism.

Return to: Denominations / Branches of Christianity

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Largest Religions by County

https://www.washingtonpost.com/blogs/govbeat/wp/2014/06/04/the-second-largest-religion-in-each-state/?utm_term=.c52ef6eac243

Return to: Denominations / Branches of Christianity

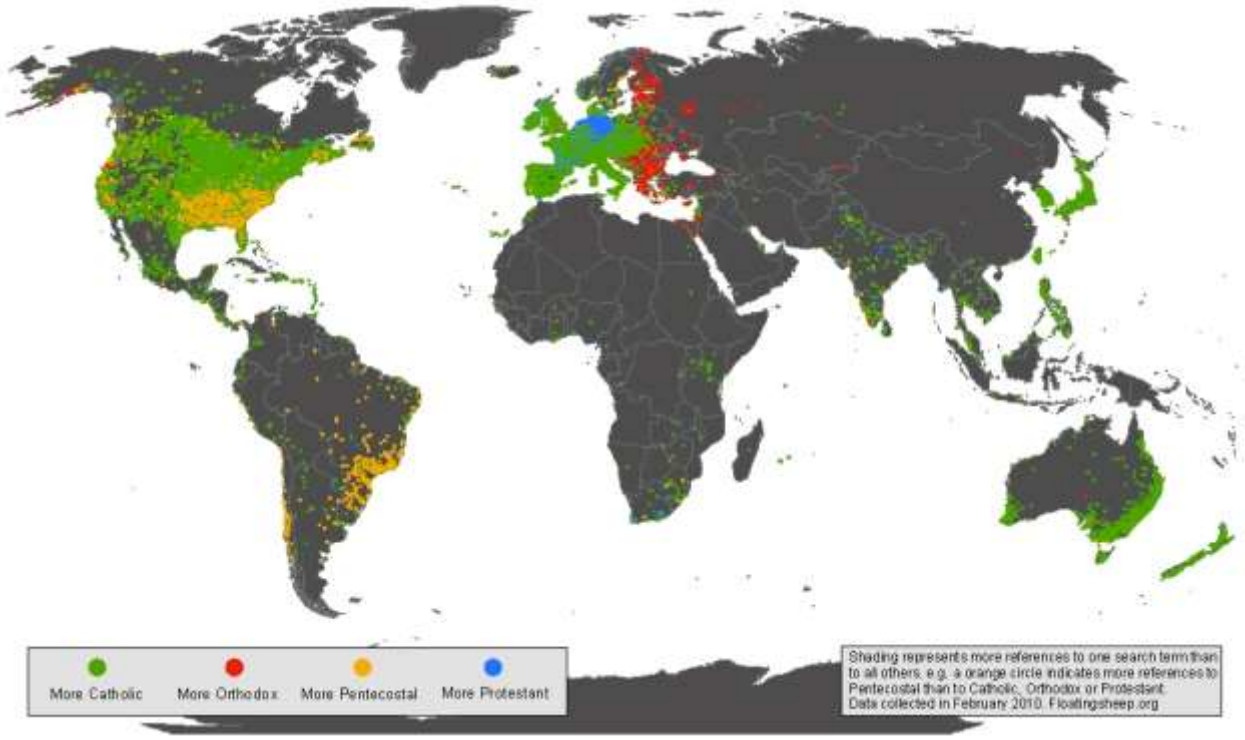
 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Second Largest Religion after Christianity by State



https://www.washingtonpost.com/blogs/govbeat/wp/2014/06/04/the-second-largest-religion-in-each-state/?utm_term=.c52ef6eac243

Return to: Denominations / Branches of Christianity

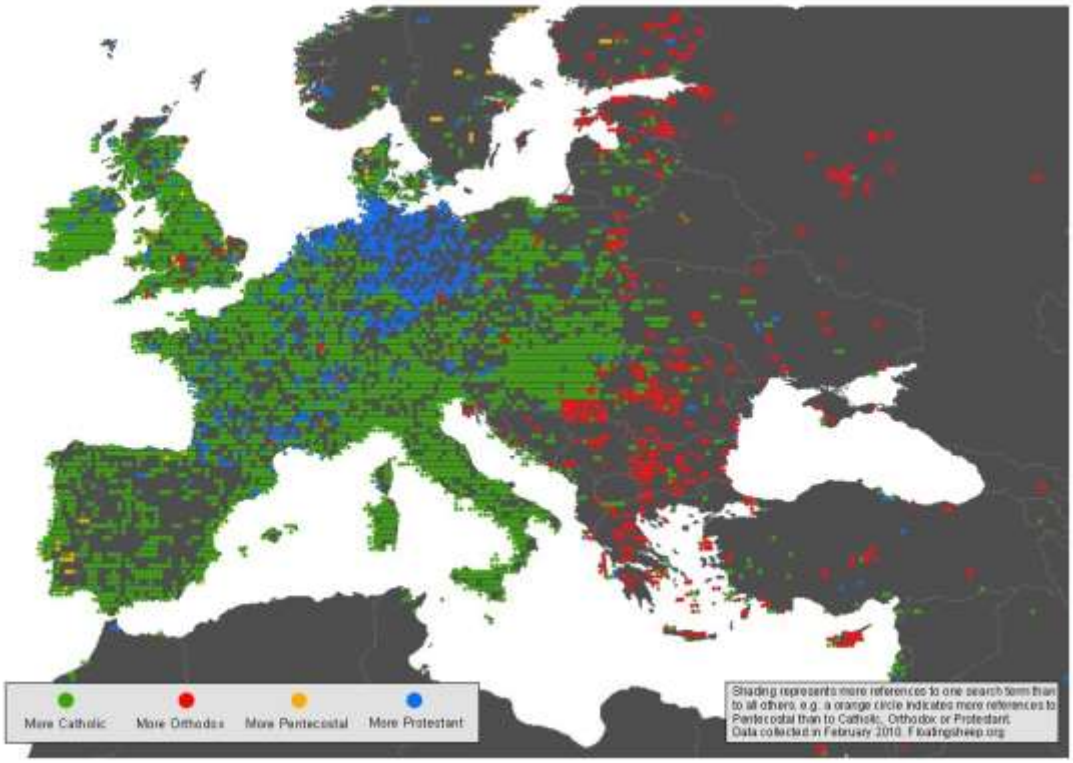
Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



https://christianity.stackexchange.com/questions/14517/is-there-a-good-overview-of-christian-denominations-churches-and-their-mapping-b

Continued next page…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

FYI: World Religions Population Breakdown

https://seekingourgod.wordpress.com/2015/04/10/

This chart was published in April of 2014 in an effort to show the world population and the breakdown of different religions around the world.

(Please note, there appears to be an error [or it's just not easy to read] in the Islam number with where the comma is placed. The correct way should be (at least) 1,66*0* million, or in other words 1.6 billion)

Return to: Denominations / Branches of Christianity

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Religious Affiliation and Attitudes Demographics

- Adherents.com – find out how many Methodists (or other religious adherents) are in your state. Compilation of data from several different sources.
- American Religion Data Archive Create maps and charts of religious affiliation by state and county. Access to other surveys on religious affiliation and opinion. Funded by the Lilly Endowment through the Pennsylvania State University.
- American Religious Identification Survey conducted by the City University of New York. Key findings and statistics for the Unites States can be found on this web site.
- Barna Research conducts public opinion surveys of Christians and provides analysis of Christian Churches.
- Hartford Institute for Religion Research a source for various studies on culture and religion. Includes links to other research centers and denominational statistical offices.
- North American Jewish Databank statistics are not available online, but information on research conducted nationwide and in various communities can be found here. Contact information for data sources is provided.
- Religious Congregations and Membership: 2000is a report from the Glenmary Research Center. This Catholic group conducts a census of religious bodies every decade at the same time as the U.S. Census. Highlights and summary information can be found at the web site along with information on how to purchase the full report.
- Yearbook of American and Canadian Churches is a book published yearly by the National Council of Churches in the USA. Includes statistical information on religious congregations as well as contact information for denominational offices. Includes most religious bodies found in Canada and the United States. The web site includes current statistics for Christian denominations who are members of the NCCUSA.

From: http://www.sbdcnet.org/industry-links/demographics-links

Return to:

Denominations / Branches of Christianity (Denomimation Demographics)

Denomination Theological Expressions Compared

Christianity in 2 Hours or Less

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Paul

Early life (Wikipedia)

[See also: Bible Maps, Charts, Timelines]

Geography relevant to Paul's life, stretching from Jerusalem to Rome

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The two main sources of information by which we have access to the earliest segments of Paul's career are the Bible's Book of Acts and the autobiographical elements of Paul's letters to the early church communities. Paul was likely born between the years of 5 BC and 5 AD. The Book of Acts indicates that Paul was a Roman citizen by birth, more affirmatively describing his father as such, (but Helmut Koester takes issue with the evidence presented by the text). [Acts 16:37, Acts 22:25–29]

He was from a devout Jewish family in the city of Tarsus (of Cilicia) [1] – one of the largest trade centers on the Mediterranean coast. It had been in existence several hundred years prior to his birth. It was renowned for its university. During the time of Alexander the Great, who died in 323 BC, Tarsus was the most influential city in Asia Minor.

Paul referred to himself as being "of the stock of Israel, of the tribe of Benjamin, a Hebrew of the Hebrews; as touching the law, a Pharisee".[Phil. 3:5]

The Bible reveals very little about Paul's family. Paul's nephew, his sister's son, is mentioned in Acts 23:16. Acts also quotes Paul referring to his father by saying he, Paul, was "a Pharisee, the son of a Pharisee" (Acts 23:6). In Romans 16:7 he states that his relatives, Andronicus and Junia, were Christians before he was and were prominent among the apostles.

The family had a history of religious piety (2 Timothy 1:3) Apparently the family lineage had been very attached to Pharisaic traditions and observances for generations.[Philippians 3:5–6] Acts says that he was in the tent-making profession.[Acts 18:1–3] This was to become an initial connection with Priscilla and Aquila with whom he would partner in tentmaking[Acts 18:3] and later become very important teammates as fellow missionaries.[Rom. 16:4]

While he was still fairly young, he was sent to Jerusalem to receive his education at the school of Gamaliel,[Acts 22:3] one of the most noted rabbis in history. The Hillel school was noted for giving its students a balanced education, likely giving Paul broad exposure to classical literature, philosophy, and ethics. Some of his family may have resided in Jerusalem since later the son of one of his sisters saved his life there.[Acts 23:16] Nothing more is known of his background until he takes an active part in the martyrdom of Stephen.[Acts 7:58–60; 22:20] Paul confesses that "beyond measure" he persecuted the church of God prior to his conversion.[Gal. 1:13–14] [Phil. 3:6] [Acts 8:1–3] Although we know from his biography and from Acts that Paul could speak Hebrew, modern scholarship suggests that Koine Greek was his first language.

In his letters, Paul drew heavily on his knowledge of Stoic philosophy, using Stoic terms and metaphors to assist his new Gentile converts in their understanding of the revealed word of God.

He also owed much to his training in the law and the prophets, utilizing this knowledge to convince his Jewish countrymen of the unity of past Old Testament prophecy and covenants with the fulfilling of these in Jesus Christ. His wide spectrum of experiences and education gave the "Apostle to the Gentiles"[Rom. 1:5] [11:13] [Gal. 2:8] the tools which he later would use to effectively spread the Gospel and to establish the church in the Roman Empire.

See also: The Use of Greek Philosophy by Paul in the Bible

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

[1] Notes: Tarsus of Cilicia:

http://www.keyway.ca/htm2001/20011125.htm

Tarsus was the capital city of the Roman province of Cilicia from 72 A.D. (see Ancient Empires - Rome). Before then it was a major linen and lumbering center during the time of the Greeks (see Ancient Empires - Greece and The Seleucids), and before that it was the seat of the provincial governor during the time of the Persians (Ancient Empires - Persia). Tarsus was known for its wealth and for its great schools which are said to have rivalled Athens and Alexandria. Located in what is today southern Turkey, it was situated adjacent to the Cydnus River, about 10 miles north of The Mediterranean Sea.

Tarsus is mentioned by name only 5 times in The Bible, all in relation to the apostle Paul who was born there.

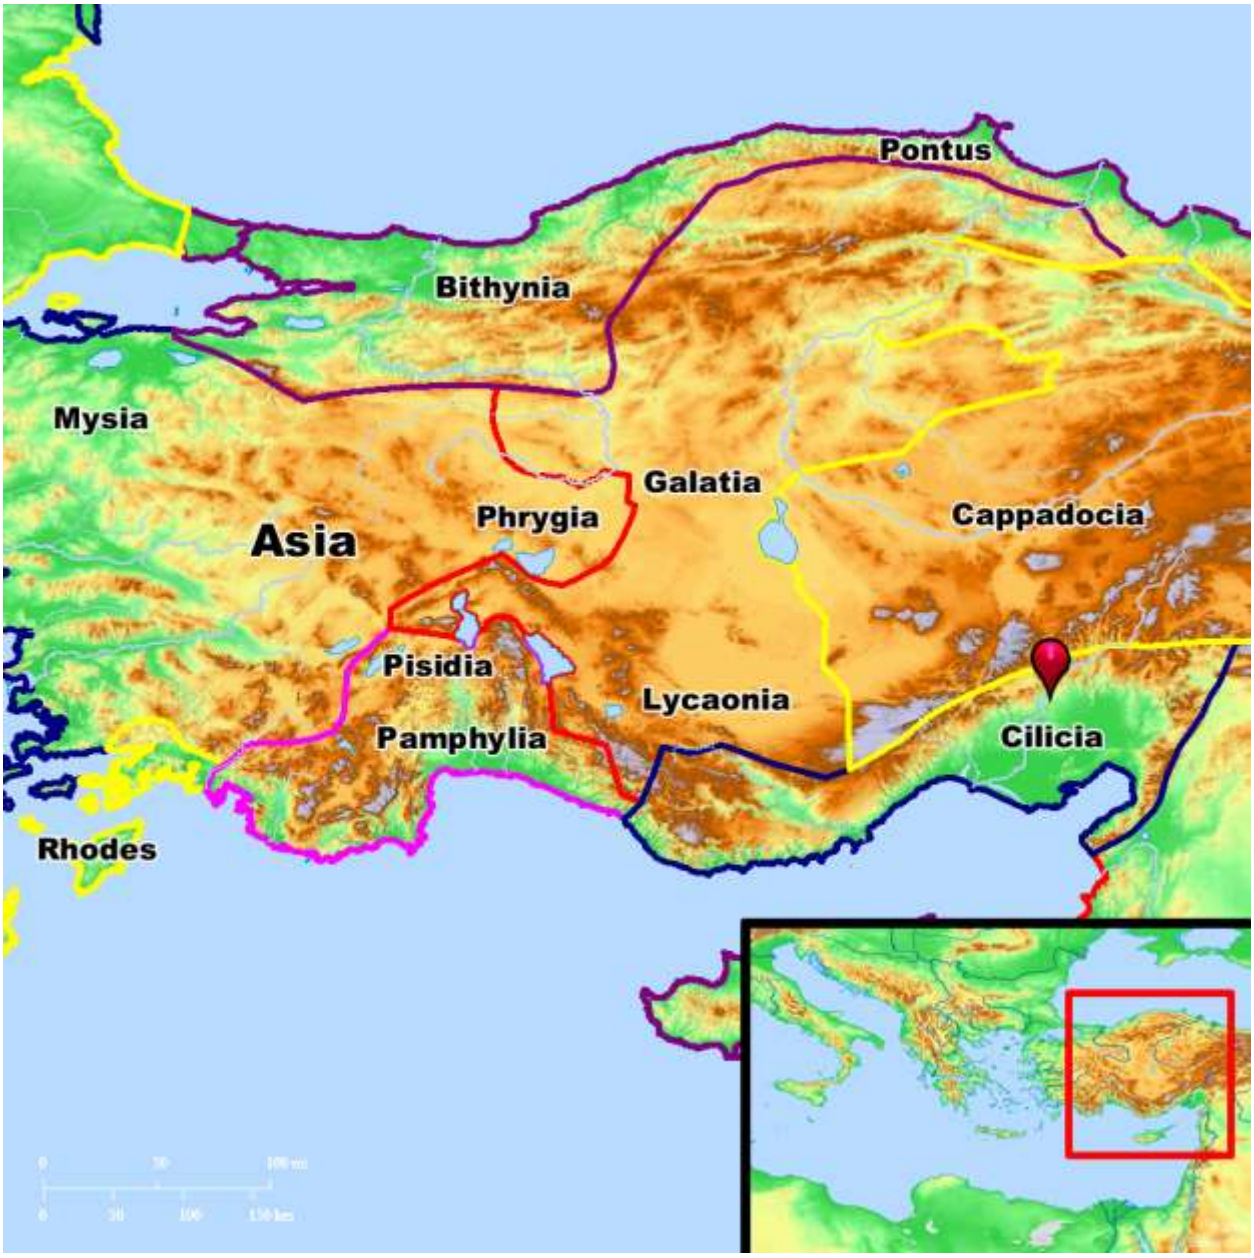
See also:

https://www.bibleplaces.com/tarsus/

History

During this time of Pompey (67 BC), Tarsus was made capital over the Roman province of Cilicia, and Jews began to receive Roman citizenship. Antony, who controlled the eastern provinces, declared the city free in 42 BC. Tarsus continued to receive special privileges under Augustus, who exempted the city from imperial taxation because Athenodorus, his teacher and friend, was a Tarsian. Tarsus grew into a cultural and intellectual center. Stoic philosophers like Athenodorus, Zeno, Antipater, and Nestor lived in the city in the first century AD.

http://bibleatlas.org/full/cilicia.htm



The foremost citizen of the province was Saul of Tarsus (Acts 21:39; Acts 22:3; Acts 23:34). Students or pilgrims from Cilicia like himself disputed with Stephen (Acts 6:9). Some of the earliest labors of the great apostle were near his home, in Syria and Cilicia (Galatians 1:21 Acts 15:23, 11). On his voyage to Rome he sailed across the sea which is off Cilicia (Acts 27:5). Constantinople and Antioch may be regarded as the front and back door of Asia Minor, and as the former was not founded till the 4th century, Asia Minor may be regarded as fronting during apostolic days on Antioch. Cilicia was intimately connected with its neighbor province on the South. The first Christian apostles and evangelists followed the great highways, through the famous mountain passes, and carried the religion of Jesus to Asia Minor from Antioch as a base.

https://www.ancient.eu/Cilicia/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

http://bibleatlas.org/full/cilicia.htm

The foremost citizen of the province was Saul of Tarsus (Acts 21:39; Acts 22:3; Acts 23:34). Students or pilgrims from Cilicia like himself disputed with Stephen (Acts 6:9). Some of the earliest labors of the great apostle were near his home, in Syria and Cilicia (Galatians 1:21 Acts 15:23, 11). On his voyage to Rome he sailed across the sea which is off Cilicia (Acts 27:5). Constantinople and Antioch may be regarded as the front and back door of Asia Minor, and as the former was not founded till the 4th century, Asia Minor may be regarded as fronting during apostolic days on Antioch. Cilicia was intimately connected with its neighbor province on the South. The first Christian apostles and evangelists followed the great highways, through the famous mountain passes, and carried the religion of Jesus to Asia Minor from Antioch as a base.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Cilicia (Encyclopedia of the Bible)
https://www.biblegateway.com/resources/encyclopedia-of-the-bible/Cilicia

Cilicia related Maps
http://imgarcade.com/tarsus-cilicia-map.html

Roman Provinces in the NT: Cappadocia - Cilicia – Lycia http://www.biblestudy.org/roman-empire/roman-provinces-in-new-testament/cilicia-lycia-cappadocia.html

Cilica (Jewish Encyclopedia)
http://jewishencyclopedia.com/articles/4387-cilicia

See*: More about Paul (following pages)

More maps in*: Galatians, Romans, Ephesians

Maps of Bible (and Charts, Illustrations, Timelines)

See also:
Galatians
Romans
Ephesians

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

More about Paul…

Chronology of St. Paul (Outline)
http://www.st-jerome-cinci.org/images/Chronology_of_St_Paul.pdf [PDF]

Paul of Tarsus – LinkedIn Profile
https://www.linkedin.com/in/pauloftarsus

N.T. Wright: Historical Paul and 'Systematic Theology' (2014) [Recommended] http://ntwrightpage.com/2017/02/24/historical-paul-and-systematic-theology/

Seminar - Paul - N.T. Wright (2014)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=hP56P1DQMOY [Video]

This panel discussion was part of a Lanier Theological Library Seminar Series held on Friday March 21, 2014. Dr. N.T. Wright, Dr. Bruce Corley, and Dr. Ross Wagner participate in a panel discussion on the Apostle Paul with a considerable concentration on Paul"s intended meaning in Romans chapters 9-11 as well as other issues.

Panel Members are:

> Dr. N.T. Wright (Professor. University of St. Andrews)
>
> Dr. Bruce Corley (Former President, Now Professor of New Testament and Greek. B.H. Carroll Theological Institute)
>
> Dr. Ross Wagner (Associate Professor, Duke Divinity School)
>
> Mark Lanier, Moderator

NT Wright: Why and How Paul Invented "Christian Theology"
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Y4CY73psVFQ

An Evening with Tom NT Wright on "Paul: A Biography" https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=6Dv2vewlFyI

Jesus vs Paul
http://doctrine.org/jesus-vs-paul

The messages of Jesus and Paul were fundamentally different. Reconciliation of their messages cannot be done by harmonization… The purpose of this brief study is to answer the question about how Jesus and Paul can be reconciled (what that means) and end the confusion.

See also: Gospel of Jesus vs Paul

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

NT Wright: QandA's (Sept. 2004) -- re: Paul's Understanding of Timing of Jesus' 2nd Coming http://ntwrightpage.com/2016/04/25/wrightsaid-qa-september-2004/

Excerpt:

Question:
IN NTPG (New Testament and the People of God), p. 461, the last paragraph, you said:

> The forth and final aspect of Christian hope is the expectation of the return of Jesus. It is vital to stress both that most of the texts normally drawn on in this connection have nothing to do with the case, and that there are several others which still bear on it directly. Following our exposition in chapter 10, it should be clear that texts which speak of the "coming of the son of man on a cloud" have as their obvious first-century meaning the prediction of vindication for the true Israel.

According to what you wrote in other places, 1 Thess 4:15 – 17 and 1 Cor 15:51-52 are among "several others which still bear on it directly".

Paul uses "we" in 1 Thess 4:15-17. The obvious referent of this pronoun in this context seems to be his readers and himself. When Paul said "we who are alive, who are left until the coming of the Lord", it seems that he did not think of the possibility that none of his readers and himself would be alive until THN PAROUSIA TOU KYRIOU.

So, how does Paul's "we" language does not suggest that "the Lord's return itself must happen within a generation" (p. 463, NTPG)? Similarly Paul said in 1 Cor 15:51-52, "We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed". The obvious referent of this "we" here is also his readers and himself. So, how can "we shall not all sleep… at the last trumpet" not imply that some of his readers and himself would not sleep at the last trumpet?

Answer:
From Paul's point of view, of course the return of Jesus might have occurred at any time, therefore it could be tomorrow — or today — and he and his readers might still be alive. But by Philippians [e.g., Phil. 1:20-26] he has faced the possibility that he may well die first (though he still thinks he may not), and by 2 Corinthians he has concluded that he probably will die first. Certainly from his perspective it remains a clear possibility that some of them will still be alive. But nothing in his theology hinges on that as a prediction which would then be falsified by subsequent generations of church history.

See also: The Use of Greek Philosophy by Paul in the Bible

See also*:

Paul vs James

The Pauline Concept of Law and Sin

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Paul Receives the Gospel Resurrection Creed within Five Years of the Crucifixion…

How every Christian can learn to explain the resurrection of Jesus to others
https://winteryknight.com/2009/03/06/how-every-christian-can-learn-to-explain-the-resurrection-of-jesus-to-others/

The Resurrection Argument That Changed a Generation of Scholars - Gary Habermas at UCSB (2002): https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=ay_Db4RwZ_M [Video] [Recommended]

Gary Habermas explains the earliest source of resurrection facts https://winteryknight.com/2009/04/03/gary-habermas-explains-the-earliest-source-of-resurrection-facts/

Excerpt:

> Timeline of New Testament sources [Minimal Facts Argument] [Also]
>
> You can only use the data that pass these criteria when you are constructing historical hypotheses in a debate setting. But the passage of 1 Corinthians 15:3-7 is special, because it has the markings [of] an ancient creed. As Habermas explains, Paul received this creed within five years of the crucifixion. Paul verified this creed twice with eyewitnesses, Peter, John and James, in Galatians 1:11-24 and Galatians 2:1-10.
>
> So, let's set the date of Jesus' death as being 30 AD. Then ask the question: what sources are closest to the event? We need to have multiple early sources in order to be able to surface minimal facts that can be used when debating skeptics and atheists. Here's the timeline, using the absolute latest possible dates for the sources:
>
> - 30 A.D.: Jesus is crucified. (+0)
> - 31 A.D.: The early creed originates around this time
> - 35 A.D.: Paul receives the early creed from Peter, John and James in Jerusalem
> - 55 A.D.: 1 Corinthians (+25)
> - 70 A.D. Mark (+40)
> - 80 A.D. Matthew (+50)
> - 85 A.D. Luke (+55)
> - 95 A.D. John (+65)
>
> My preferred dates on the gospels are at least 5 years earlier than the skeptical dates. So, your earliest source for minimal facts about the resurrection is 1 Corinthians 15:3-7. I explained before how to leverage the facts in 1 Cor 15, and other minimal facts, into a case for the resurrection.

See also: Resurrection of Jesus the Messiah (Christ)

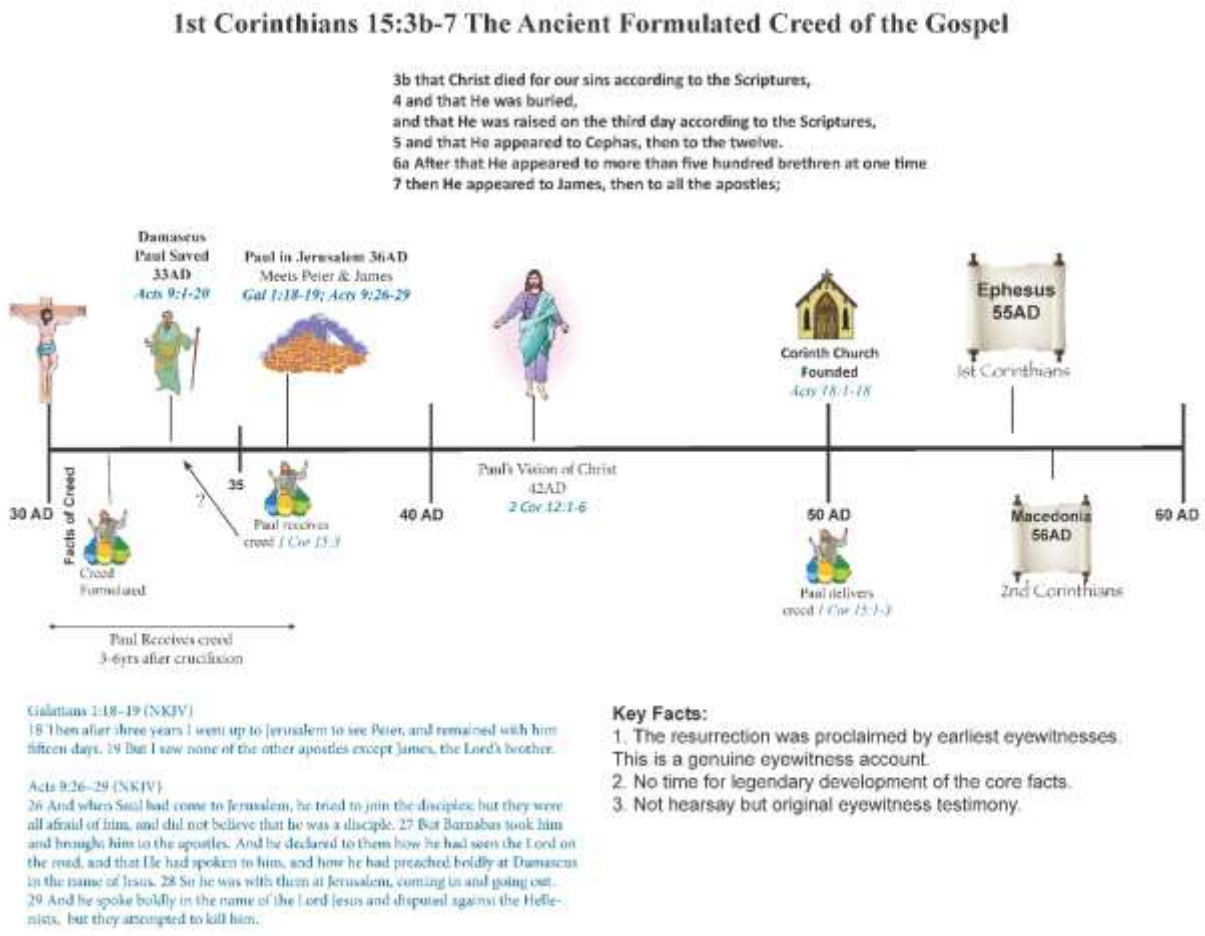
See Paul's chronology/timelines on the following pages….

See also:



Galatians

Romans

The Gospel

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Ancient Forumulated Creed of the Gospel / 1st Corinthians 15:3b-7

[Source: https://www.everlastingstrength.org/resources/new-testament-timelines/]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Chronology of Apostle Paul's Journeys and Epistles

http://matthewmcgee.org/paultime.html

See also:

Galatians

Romans

Ephesians

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Sequence of Paul's Activities – Dr. Contable's Notes on Romans: Appendix

http://www.soniclight.com/constable/notes/htm/NT/Romans/Romans.htm

SEQUENCE OF PAUL'S ACTIVITIES
Date	Event	Reference
	Birth in Tarsus	Acts 22:3
	Early life and theological education in Jerusalem under Gamaliel	Acts 22:3
34	Participation in Stephen's stoning outside Jerusalem	Acts 7:57—8:1
34	Leadership in the persecution of Christians in Jerusalem	Acts 9:1
34	Leadership in the persecution of Christians beyond Jerusalem to Damascus	Acts 9:2
34	Conversion on the road to Damascus	Acts 9:3-17
34	Baptism in Damascus	Acts 9:18
34	Preaching in Damascus	Acts 9:19-22
34	Trip to Arabia	Gal. 1:17
34	Return to Damascus	Gal. 1:17
37	Trip to Jerusalem	Acts 9:26; Gal. 1:18
37	Meeting with Peter and James and preaching in Jerusalem	Acts 9:27-29; Gal. 1:18-19
37	Trip to Tarsus via Caesarea	Acts 9:30; Gal. 1:21
37-43	Ministry in and around Tarsus	Acts 11:25
37-43	Caught up to the third heaven	2 Cor. 12:2-4
43	Move to Antioch of Syria on Barnabas' invitation	Acts 11:26
43	Ministry in Antioch of Syria	Acts 11:26
47	Trip to Jerusalem with Barnabas and Titus to deliver a famine relief gift	Acts 11:30; Gal. 2:1-10
47	Return to Antioch	Acts 12:25
47-48	Continued ministry in Antioch	Acts 13:1-3
48-49	First missionary journey with Barnabas and John Mark	Acts 13:4—14:27
48	Ministry in Cyprus	Acts 13:4-12
48	Voyage to Asia Minor	Acts 13:13

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

48	Separation from John Mark who departed at Perga	Acts 13:13
48	Ministry at Pisidian Antioch	Acts 13:14-52
48-49	Ministry at Iconium	Acts 14:1-5
49	Ministry at Lystra	Acts 14:8-19
49	Ministry at Derbe	Acts 14:20-23
49	Return to Attalia	Acts 14:24-25
49	Return to Syrian Antioch	Acts 14:26
49	Ministry in Syrian Antioch	Acts 14:27-15:2
49	Rebuke of Peter	Gal. 2:11-14
49	Writing of Galatians
49	Trip to Jerusalem with Barnabas via Phoenicia and Samaria	Acts 15:3
49	Jerusalem Council	Acts 15:4-29
49	Return to Syrian Antioch with Barnabas, Silas, and Judas	Acts 15:22, 30
49	Separation from Silas and Judas who returned to Jerusalem	Acts 15:31-33
49-50	Ministry in Syrian Antioch	Acts 15:35
50	Division of opinion with Barnabas over John Mark	Acts 15:36-39
50	Separation from Barnabas and John Mark who returned to Cyprus	Acts 15:39
50-52	Second missionary journey with Silas and others	Acts 15:40—18:22
50	Ministry in Syria and Cilicia	Acts 15:41
50	Ministry in Derbe and Lystra	Acts 16:1a
50	Partnership with Timothy who joined Paul and Silas	Acts 16:1b-3
50	Ministry in other Galatian churches	Acts 16:4-6
50	Exclusion from Asia and Bithynia	Acts 16:7-8
50	Macedonian vision at Troas	Acts 16:9-10
50	Voyage from Troas to Samothrace to Neapolis with Luke	Acts 16:11
50	Ministry in Philippi	Acts 16:12-40
50	Separation from Luke who remained at Philippi	Cf. "we" in Acts 16:12 with "they" in Acts 17:1
50-51	Ministry in Thessalonica	Acts 17:1-9
51	Ministry in Berea	Acts 17:10-15
51	Separation from Silas and Timothy who remained in Berea	Acts 17:14
51	Ministry in Athens	Acts 17:16-34

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

51	Ministry in Corinth	Acts 18:1-17
51	Association with Aquilla and Priscilla	Acts 18:2-3
51	Reunion with Silas and Timothy	Acts 18:5
51	Writing of 1 and 2 Thessalonians
52	Trip to Ephesus with Aquilla and Priscilla	Acts 18:18
52	Separation from Aquilla and Priscilla who proceeded to Syria	Acts 18:18-19
52	Ministry in Ephesus	Acts 18:19-21
52	Return to Syrian Antioch via Caesarea and Jerusalem	Acts 18:21-22
52-53	Layover in Syrian Antioch	Acts 18:23a
53-57	Third missionary journey	Acts 18:23b—21:19
53	Ministry in Galatia	Acts 18:23b; 19:1
53	Apollos' ministry in Ephesus	Acts 18:24
53	Aquilla and Priscilla's ministry to Apollos	Acts 18:26
53	Apollos' ministry in Achaia	Acts 18:27-28
53-56	Ministry in Ephesus and Asia	Acts 19:1—20:1
53-56	Writing of the "former letter" to Corinth	1 Cor. 5:9
56	Writing of 1 Corinthians
56	The "painful visit' to Corinth and return	2 Cor. 2:1; 12:14; 13:1-2
56	Writing of the "severe letter" to Corinth	2 Cor. 2:3-4; 7:8-12; 12:17-19
56	Sending of Timothy and Erastus to Macedonia	Acts 19:22
56	Trip to Troas from Ephesus
56	Wait for Titus
56	Trip to Macedonia from Troas	Acts 20:1
56	Reunion with Titus in Macedonia
56	Writing of 2 Corinthians
56	Ministry in Macedonia	Acts 20:2
56	Ministry in Greece (Achaia and Corinth)	Acts 20:2-3
56-57	Writing of Romans
57	Return to Macedonia and Philippi with Sopater, Aristarchus, Secundus, Gaius, Timothy, Tychicus, Trophimus, and Luke	Acts 20:3-4

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

57	Trip of his companions except Luke to Troas	Acts 20:5
57	Trip to Troas with Luke	Acts 20:6
57	Ministry at Troas	Acts 20:7-12
57	Trip to Assos by land while Luke and another brother travel by ship	Acts 20:13
57	Trip to Miletus by ship with Luke and the other brother	Acts 20:14-16
57	Ministry at Miletus	Acts 20:17-38
57	Trip from Miletus to Caesarea with Luke and the other brother via Tyre	Acts 21:1-7
57	Ministry at Caesarea	Acts 21:8-14
57	Trip to Jerusalem	Acts 21:15-16
57	Ministry at Jerusalem	Acts 21:17—23:30
57	Report to the church	Acts 21:17-26
57	Arrest in the temple	Acts 21:27-40
57	Speech in the temple courtyard	Acts 22:1-21
57	Imprisonment in Jerusalem	Acts 22:22—23:30
57	Trip to Caesarea	Acts 23:31-35
57-59	Ministry in Caesarea	Acts 24:1—26:32
57	Defense before Felix	Acts 24:1-27
59	Defense before Festus	Acts 25:1-12
59	Defense before Agrippa and Festus	Acts 26:1-32
59-60	Journey to Rome with Luke and Aristarchus	Acts 27:1—28:16
59	Trip to Crete	Acts 27:1-13
59	Shipwreck	Acts 27:14-44
59-60	Ministry on Malta	Acts 28:1-10
60	Trip from Malta to Rome	Acts 28:11-16
60-62	Ministry in Rome	Acts 28:16-31
60-62	Writing of the Prison Epistles
62	Release from Rome
62	Return to the Aegean area
62-66	Writing of 1 Timothy and Titus
67	Arrest
67-68	Imprisonment in Rome
67	Writing of 2 Timothy
68	Martyrdom in Rome

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Interesting Time Frames in Pauls Life

- The Church had been established about three years before Paul became a Christian.
- Paul persecuted the Church for about the first 3 years of its existence.
- Paul became a Christian about 4 to 5 years prior to Cornelius, the first Gentile convert.
- Paul's 1st missionary journey began approximately 10 years after his conversion.
- Paul lived about 32 years after his conversion.
- Of Paul's 32 years of Christian service, about 9 years were spent in his three misionary journeys
  - 1 st missionary journey - 2 years
  - 2nd missionary journey - 3 years
  - 3rd missionary journey - 4 years
- The Church was available to the Gentiles during the last 28 years of Paul's ministry.
- Paul's 1st Roman imprisonment occurred some 25 years after his conversion and about 7 years prior to his death.

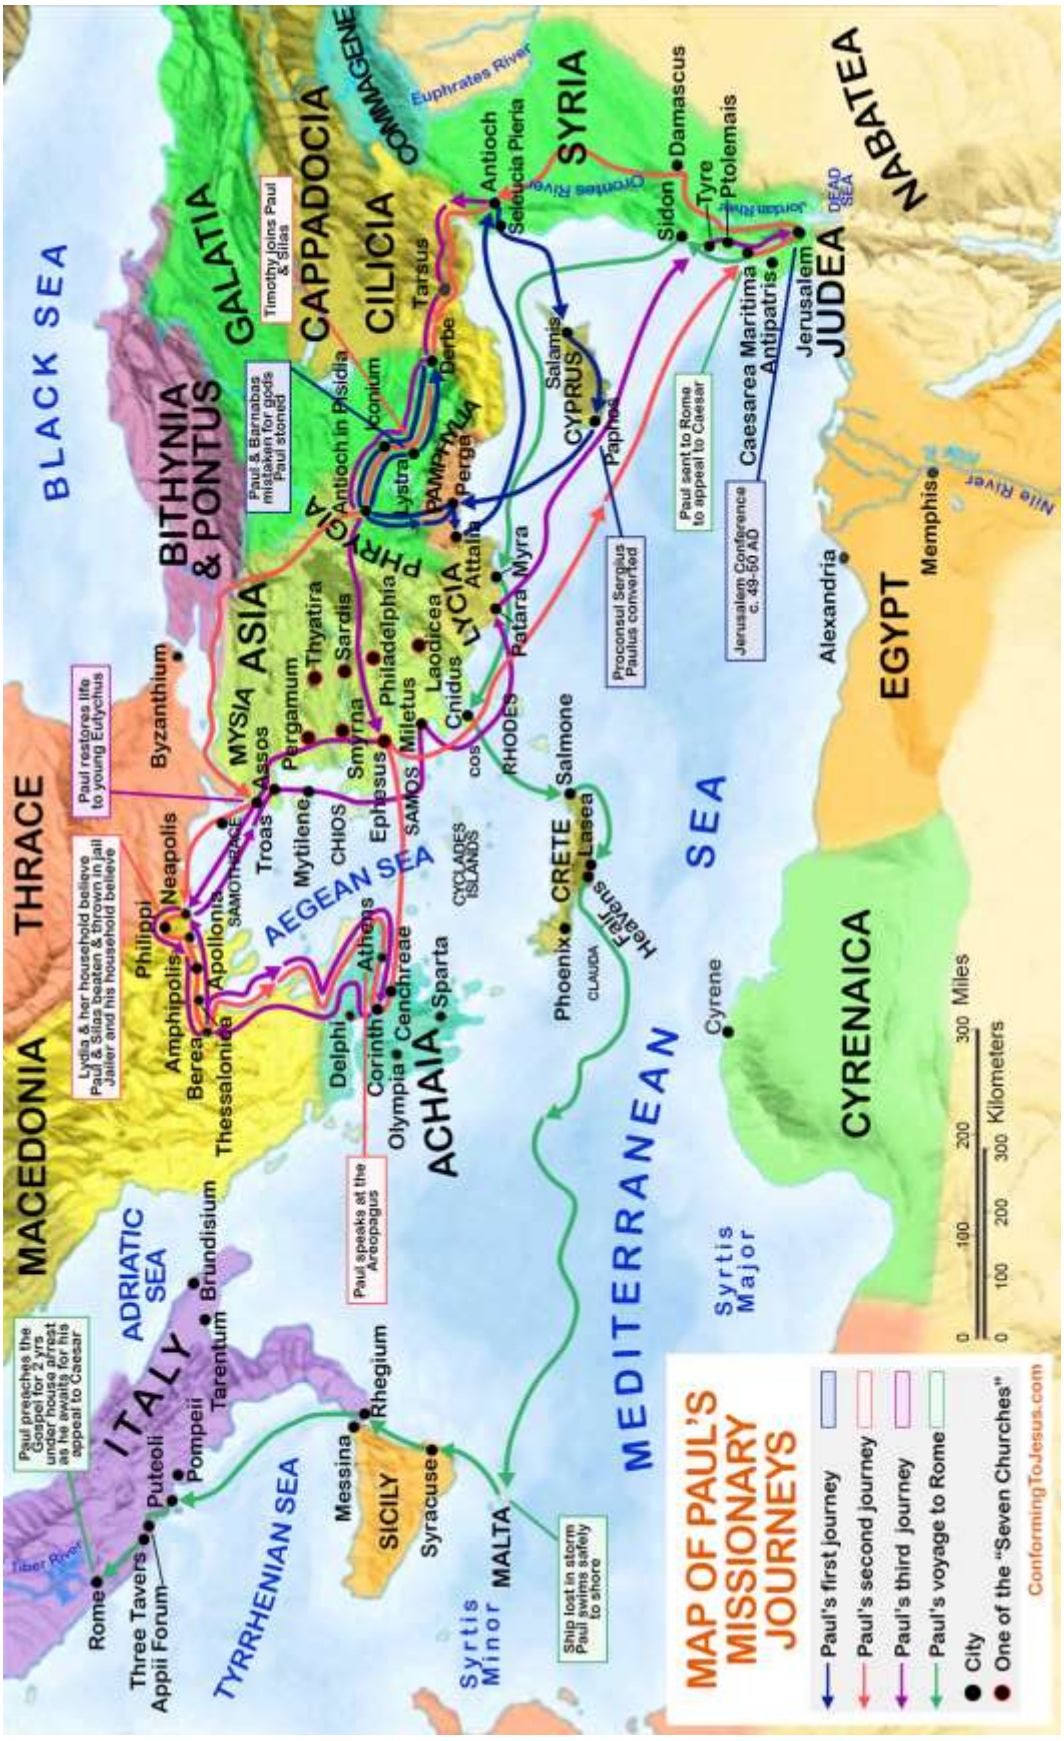
[Source: http://www.biblecharts.org/paulahebrewofthehebrews.html]

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Four Major Journeys of Paul

[Source: http://www.biblecharts.org/thenewtestament.html]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



Map of Paul's Missionary Journeys

[Source: https://www.conformingtojesus.com/charts-maps/en/paul's_journeys_map.htm]

See next page for larger view…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Itinerary of Paul's Journeys

Itinerary of Paul's First Journey

City	Province/Region	Reference
Antioch	Syria	13:1-3
Seleucia	Syria	13:4
Salamis	Cyprus	13:5
Paphos	Cyprus	13:6-12
Perga	Lycia (region of Pamphylia)	13:13
Antioch	Galatia (region of Pisidia)	13:14-52
Iconium	Galatia	14:1-6
Lystra	Galatia (region of Lycaonia)	14:6 , 8-19
Derbe	Galatia (region of Lycaonia)	14:6 , 20-21
Lystra	Galatia (region of Lycaonia)	14:21-23
Iconium	Galatia	14:21-23
Antioch	Galatia (region of Pisidia)	14:24
Perga	Lycia (region of Pamphylia)	14:24-25
Attalia	Lycia	14:25
Antioch	Syria	14:26-28

Itinerary of Paul's Second Journey

City	Province/Region	Reference
Antioch	Syria	15:35
	Cilicia	15:41
Derbe	Galatia (region of Lycaonia)	16:1
Lystra	Galatia (region of Lycaonia)	16:1-5
	Asia (region of Phrygia)	16:6
	Galatia	16:6
Troas	Asia (region of Mysia)	16:7-10
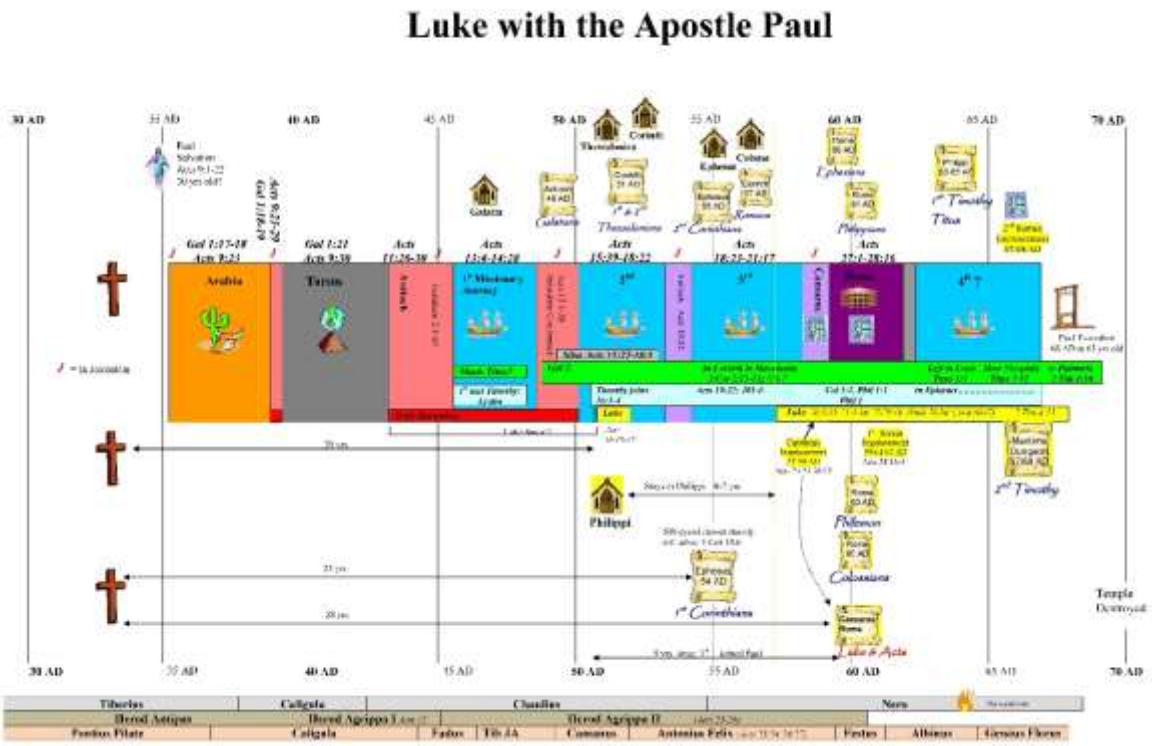
Samothrace	Thrace	16:11
Neapolis	Macedonia	16:11
Philippi	Macedonia	16:12-40
Amphipolis	Macedonia	17:1
Apollonia	Macedonia	17:1
Thessalonica	Macedonia	17:1-9
Berea	Macedonia	17:10-14
Athens	Achaia	17:15-32

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Corinth	Achaia	18:1-17
Cenchreae	Achaia	18:18
Ephesus	Asia	18:19-21
Caesarea	Palestine	18:22
Jerusalem?	Palestine	18:22
Antioch	Syria	18:22



Itinerary of Paul's Third Journey

City/Island	Province/Region	Reference
Antioch	Syria	18:22
	Galatia	18:23
	Asia (region of Phrygia)	18:23
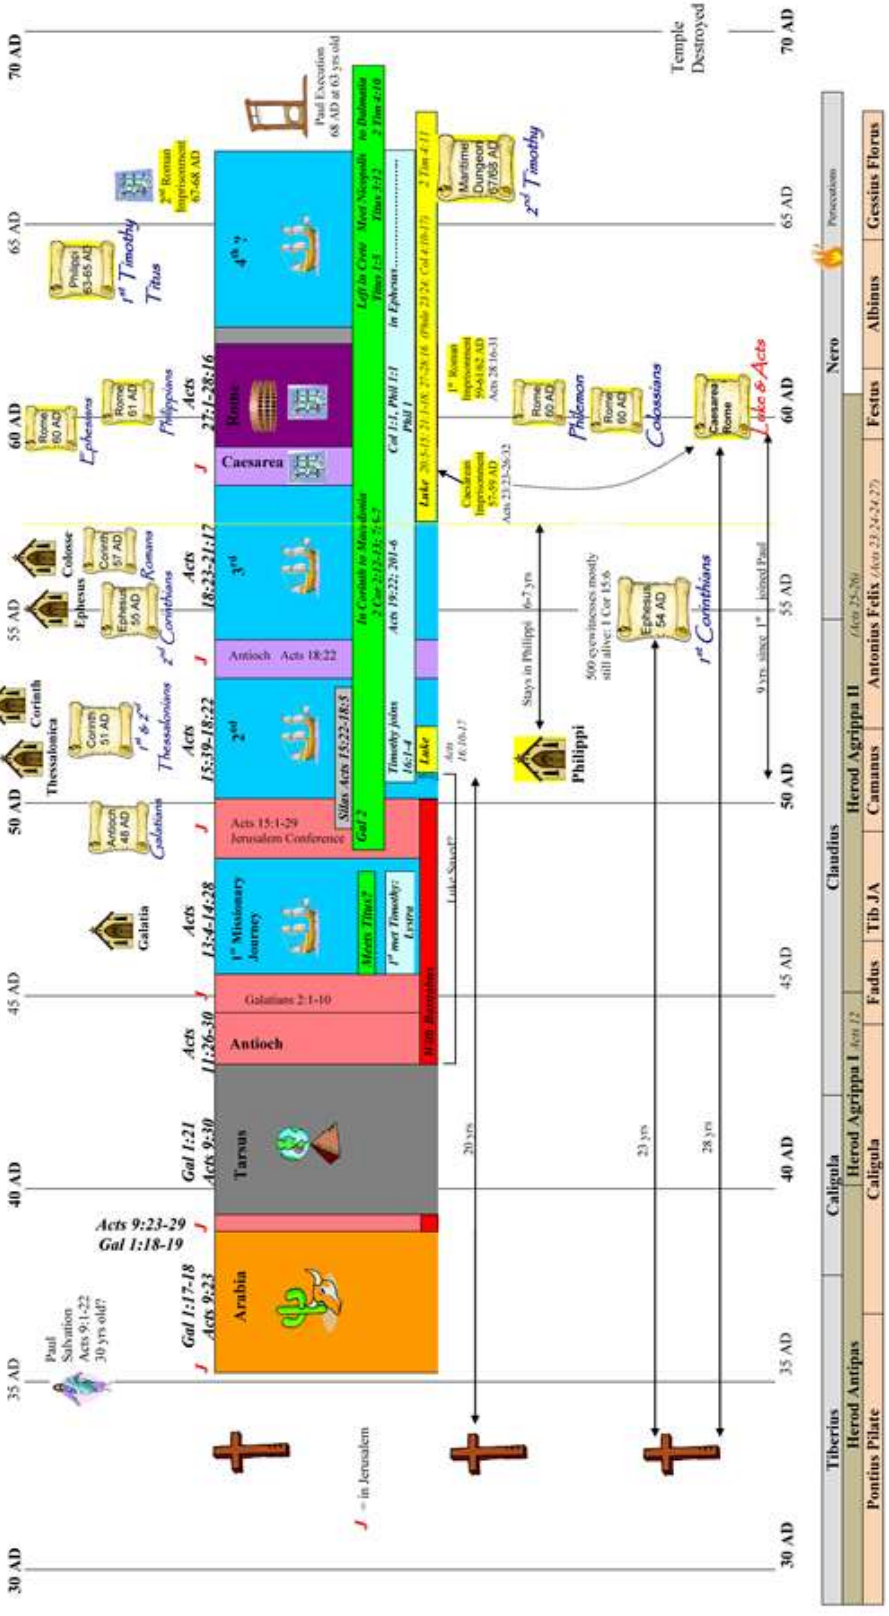
Ephesus	Asia	19:1-40
	Macedonia	20:1-2
Corinth?	Achaia	20:2-3
	Macedonia	20:3
Philippi	Macedonia	20:6
Troas	Asia	20:6-12
Assos	Asia	20:13-14
Mitylene	Asia	20:14
Chios/Samos	Asia	20:15
Miletus	Asia	20:15-38
Cos	Asia	21:1
Rhodes	Rhodes	21:1
Patara	Lycia	21:1
Tyre	Syria	21:3-6
Ptolemais	Syria	21:7
Caesarea	Palestine	21:8-14
Jerusalem	Palestine	21:15-17

[Source: ESV Study Bible note]

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Luke with the Apostle Paul



[Source: https://www.everlastingstrength.org/resources/new-testament-timelines/]

See next page for larger view…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Luke with the Apostle Paul

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Pauline Cycle of Missions
https://kettlemorainebiblechurch.weebly.com/charts.html

Adapted from original chart by Don Summers, Things to Come Mission

Berean Bible Institute
P.O. Box 587, Slinger, WI 53086

Graphic design by Christine Mulholland

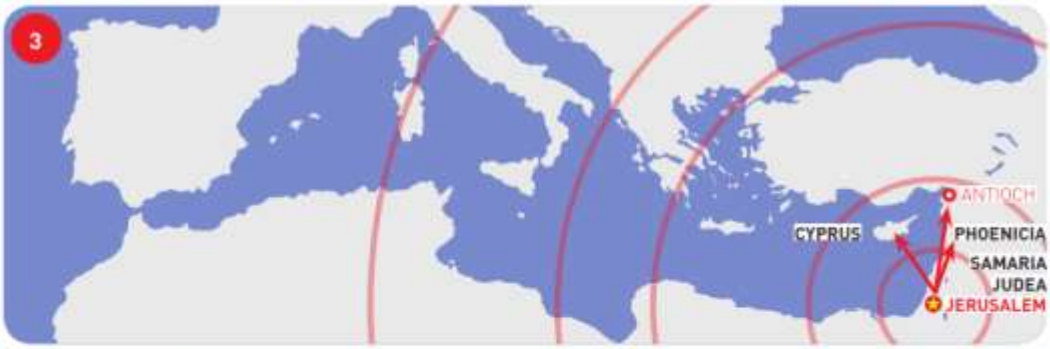
 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Gospel Progress in the Book of Acts

https://visualunit.files.wordpress.com/2011/03/acts_progress2.pdf [PDF]

GOSPEL PROGRESS IN ACTS

© Mark Barry 2008 | visualunit.me | Please do not republish without permission, but feel free to copy for personal use.



1:1 - 6:7	THE GOSPEL STARTS IN JERUSALEM
1:1-26	The risen Lord Jesus promises his gathered disciples that they will receive power when the Holy Spirit comes on them and they will be his 'witnesses in Jerusalem, and in all Judea and Samaria, and to the ends of the earth' (1:8).
2:1-47	Many Jewish people, gathered from 'every nation under heaven' to celebrate Pentecost in Jerusalem, hear the gospel of Jesus. More than 3000 people receive the good news and are baptised as believers (2:41, 47).
3:1 - 4:31	Many of the Jews who heard Peter and John preach the gospel in the temple believe, in total about 5000 men (4:4).
4:32 – 6:7	Despite much persecution, the word of the Lord continues to increase, with multitudes of both men and women in Jerusalem being added to the Lord, including a great number of the priests (5:14-15; 6:7).

6:8 - 9:31	THE GOSPEL SPREADS TO JUDEA & SAMARIA
6:8 – 7:60	The gospel continues to be powerfully preached by Stephen, until he is executed by the Jewish leaders.
8:1-40	In God's sovereignty, the terrible persecution of the church leads to the spread of the gospel throughout Judea and Samaria (8:1), fulfilling the first stage of Jesus' mission (1:8). Philip preaches in Samaria, with many locals joyfully embracing the gospel, including Simon the Magician (8:6, 12-13, 25). Lastly, Philip sees an Ethiopian eunuch come to faith in Jesus (8:35-38).
9:1-31	Saul, the great persecutor of the Christian church, comes to faith after being confronted by the risen Lord Jesus (9:17-22) and is commissioned to evangelise 'the Gentiles and kings and the children of Israel' (9:15). To the shock of the Jews, Saul (now Paul) immediately proclaims Jesus in the synagogues of Damascus (9:20) and the church multiplies, with newfound peace throughout Judea, Galilee and Samaria (9:31).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

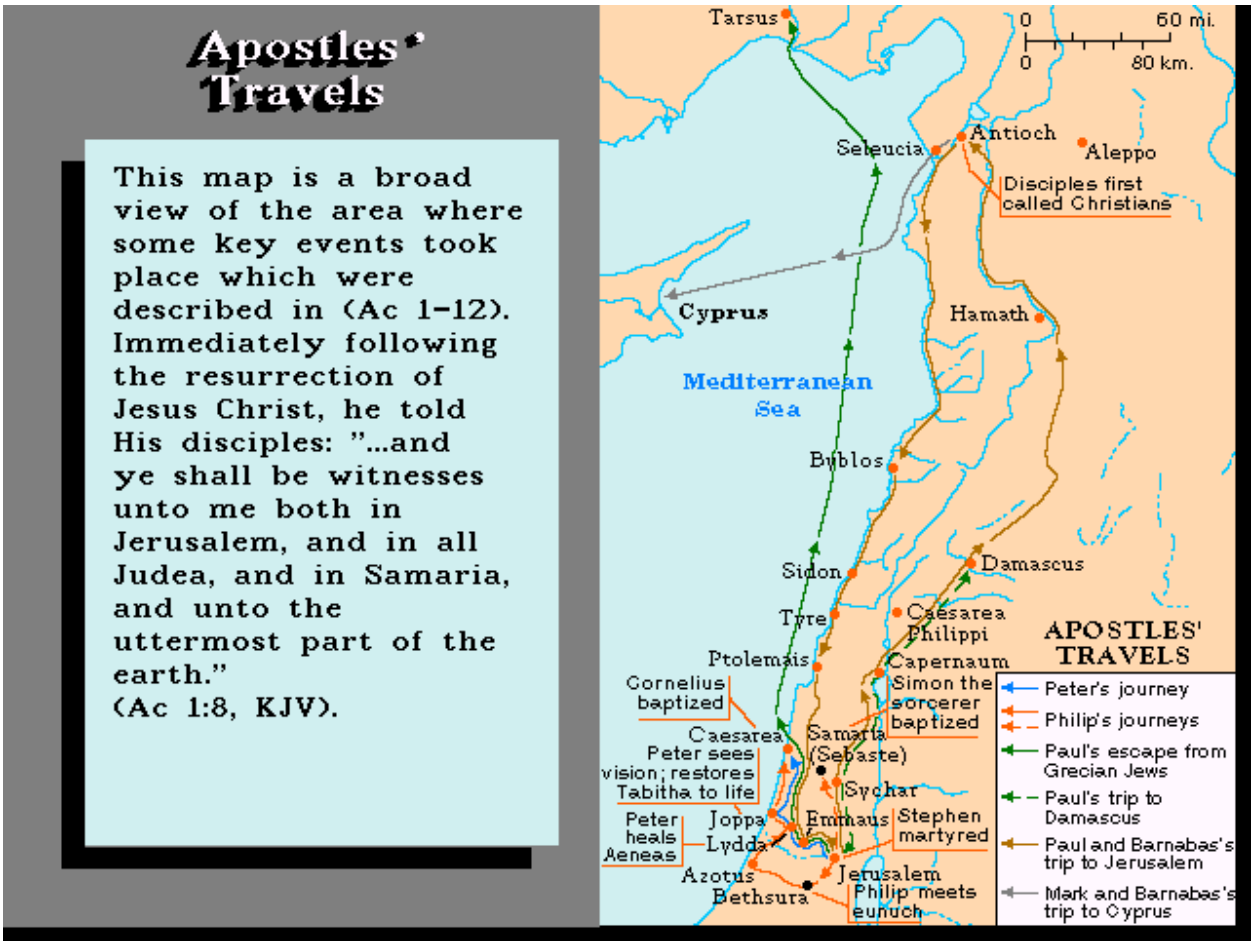
9:32 - 12:24 THE GOSPEL SPREADS TO THE GENTILES

9:32 – 11:18	After Aeneas is healed, residents of Lydda and Sharon turn to the Lord (9:35). Likewise, after Tabitha is raised, many in Joppa trusted in Jesus (9:42). Finally, to the shock of the Jewish believers, the Holy Spirit converts the Gentile Cornelius and all his household to the gospel (10:44). The doors are now open for the Gentile mission to begin!
11:19 – 12:24	On account of the persecution, the gospel spreads to the Jews as far as Phoenicia, Cyprus and Antioch. Uniquely, the gospel is preached to the Gentiles as well in Antioch, with many coming to faith in Jesus (11:21 24). The church is fully established through the preaching ministry of Barnabas and Saul (11:26), and Antioch becomes the new base for Paul's three missionary journeys into Asia-minor, Macedonia and Greece. Back in Jerusalem, the word of God increases and multiplies, despite the imprisonment of Peter and execution of James (12:24).

12:25 - 16:5 THE GOSPEL SPREADS TO ASIA-MINOR

12:25 – 14:28	After being commissioned for gospel mission (13:2-3), Paul and Barnabas sail from Antioch (in Syria) to Cyprus and then onto Pisidia and Galatia, visiting the cities of Antioch, Iconium, Lystra and Derbe. Along the way they face much opposition to their preaching from both Jews and Gentiles, culminating in Paul almost stoned to death (14:19). Nevertheless, by God's grace, a Roman leader (13:9), and many Gentiles believe and the gospel spreads through the whole region (13:48-49; 14:1, 21, 27).
15:1 – 16:5	Despite the call for Gentile believers to be circumcised, the Jerusalem Council sends delegates to the largely Gentile church in Antioch to encourage them in their faith (though urging them to not be a stumbling block to the Jewish believers). Furthermore, though Paul and Barnabas part company, the apostles revisit and strengthen the churches planted on their previous mission together (15:39-40; 16:1), and the number of believers continue to grow (16:5).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



16:6 - 21:16	THE GOSPEL SPREADS TO EUROPE
16:6 – 17:15	Guided and empowered by the Spirit, Paul and Silas bring the gospel to Macedonia, namely in the cities of Philippi, Thessalonica and Berea. Despite them being imprisoned, beaten and lynched, many come to faith in Jesus: Lydia and her household (16:14-15), the Philippian jailer and his family (16:30-34), a few Jews, many devout Greeks and several leading women (17:4-5, 12).
17:16 - 18:22	Despite Paul being mocked for his belief in the resurrection in Athens, some men and women join him and trust in Jesus (17:34). Likewise in Corinth, despite strong opposition from the Jews, Crispus the ruler of the Synagogue, his whole household and many Corinthians believe the gospel and are baptised (18:8).
18:23 – 19:41	Paul speaks for two years in Ephesus 'so that all the residents of Asia heard the word of the Lord, both Jews and Greeks' (19:10). After Paul performs extraordinary healings and exorcisms in the name of Jesus, fear falls on the residents, who praise the name of Jesus and many repent of their evil practices. 'So the word of the Lord continued to increase and prevail mightily.' (19:20)
20:1 – 21:16	Paul travels throughout Macedonia and Greece, encouraging, instructing and farewelling the churches of these regions, as well as the Ephesian elders, on his way to Jersualem.

21:17 - 28:31	THE GOSPEL ON THE WAY TO ROME
21:17 – 23:35	In the face of hostility, arrest, imprisonment and an assassination plot, Paul still manages to speak the gospel to all the gathered Jews in Jerusalem, to the Jewish council and to his Roman captors.
24:1 – 26:32	Again during his self-defence, Paul explains the gospel to the Roman Governors, Felix and Festus, and Agrippa, King of Judea in fulfilment of Jesus' promises to him (Acts 9:15-16).
27:1 – 28:31	Despite being bound on a ship, shipwrecked on Malta and imprisoned in Rome, Paul witnesses to the sailors and soldiers, the Maltese people, and the Jews and Gentiles in Rome. The book of Acts concludes with Paul 'proclaiming the kingdom of God and teaching about the Lord Jesus Christ with all boldness and without hindrance.' (28:31). From Rome, over many centuries, the gospel continues to spread to 'the ends of the earth'.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Map: Paul and Other Apostles' Travels

Source: http://www.biblecities.com/cites__maps_apostles.htm

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Map: Journeys of Paul and the Apostles

Source: http://www.biblecities.com/cites__maps_apostles.htm

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Romans – Summary

http://www.fbccs.org/resources/studyguides/romans_sg99.htm

Excerpt:

A Chronological Table of the Apostolic Age	Harold W. Hoehner, 1972
Crucifixion	Friday, April 3, 33
Pentecost (Acts 2)	Sunday, May 24, 33
Peter's second sermon and brought before the Sanhedrin	summer 33
	33 - 34
Death of Ananias and Sapphira (Acts 4:32-5:11)	34-35
Peter brought before Sanhedrin (Acts 5:12-42)	late 34 - early 35
Deacons selected (Acts 6:1-7)	April 35
Stephen martyred (Acts 6:8-7:60)	summer 35
Paul's conversion (Acts 9:1-7)	summer 35 - early summer 37
Paul in Damascus and Arabia (Acts 9:8-25; Gal. 1:16-17)	summer 37
	autumn 37
Paul in Jerusalem, first visit (Acts 9:26-29; Gal. 1:18-20)	40-41
Paul went to Tarsus and Syria-Cilicia area (Acts 9:30; Gal. 1:21)	41 spring 43
Peter ministers to Gentiles (Acts 10:1 - 11:18)	spring 44
Barnabas sent to Antioch (Acts 11:19-24)	spring 44
Paul went to Antioch (Acts 11:25-26)	autumn 47
Agabus predicts a famine (Acts 11:27-28)
Agrippa's persecution, James martyred (Acts 12:1-23)	autumn 47 - spring 48
Relief visit, Paul's second visit to Jerusalem (Acts 11:30; Gal. 2:1-10)
Paul in Antioch (Acts 12:25-13:1)

First Missionary Journey (Acts 13-14)	April 48-September 49
Departure from Antioch	April 48
Cyprus	April - June 48
Pamphylia	first of July - middle of July 48
Pisidian Antioch	middle of July - middle of September 48
Iconium	October 48 - last of February 49
Lystra-Derbe	March - middle of June 49
Return visit to churches	middle of June - August 49
Return to Antioch of Syria	September 49
Peter at Antioch (Gal. 2:11-16)	autumn 49
• Galatians written from Antioch	autumn 49
Jerusalem council, Paul's third visit (Acts 15)	autumn 49
Paul in Antioch (Acts 12:25-13:1)	winter 49/50

Second Missionary Journey (Acts 15:38-18:22)	April 50-September 52
Departure from Antioch	April 50
Syria-Cilicia	April 50
Lystra-Derbe	May 50
Iconium Pisidian	last of May - middle of June 50

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Antioch	middle of June-first of July 50
Antioch of Troas	July 50
Phillipi	August-October 50
Thessalonica	November 50 - January 51
Berea	February 51
Athens	last of February - middle of March 51
Arrival at Corinth	middle of March 51
Silas and Timothy arrive from Berea	April/May 51
• 1 Thessalonians written	early summer 51
• 2 Thessalonians written	summer 51
Departure from Corinth	first of September 52
Ephesus	middle of September 52
Jerusalem, Paul's fourth visit	last of September 52
Return to Antioch	first/middle of November 52
Paul's stay at Antioch	winter 52/53

Third Missionary Journey (Acts 18:23-21:16)	spring 53-May 57
Departure from Antioch	spring 53
Visiting Galatian churches	spring - summer 53
Arrival at Ephesus	September 53
• 1 Corinthians written	early spring 56
Departure from Ephesus (riot)	first of May 56
Troas	May 56
Arrival in Macedonia	first of June 56
• 2 Corinthians written	September/October 56
Departure from Macedonia	middle of November 56
Arrival in Corinth	last of November 56
• Romans written	winter 56/57
Departure from Corinth	last of February 57
Philippi	April 6 - 14, 57
Troas	April 19 - 25, 57
Troas to Assos	Monday, April 25, 57
Assos to Mitylene	April 26, 57
Mitylene to Chios	April 27, 57
Chios to Trogyllium	April 28, 57
Trogyllium to Hiletus	April 29, 57
Ephesian elders see Paul	April 30 - May 2, 57
Miletus to Patara	May 2 - 4, 57
Patara to Tyre	May 5 - 9, 57
Stay at Trye	May 10 - 16, 57
Trye to Caesarea	May 17 - 19, 57
Stay at Caesarea	May 19 - 25, 57
Caesarea to Jerusalem	May 25 - 27, 57
Jerusalem, Paul's fifth visit, eve of Pentecost	May 27, 57
Meeting with James (Acts 21:13-23)	May 28, 57
Paul's arrest and trial before Felix (Acts 21:26-24:22)	May 29 - June 9, 57
Five days of purification	Sunday, May 29 - June 2, 57
Paul before the Sanhedrin	June 3, 57
Appearance of the Lord (night)	June 4, 57
Conspiracy (day)	June 4, 57
Journey to Antipatris (night)	June 5, 57

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Journey to Caesarea (day)	June 5, 57
Waiting in Caesarea for trial	June 5 - 9, 57
Trial before Felix	Thursday, June 9, 57
Paul before Felix and Drusilla (Acts 24:24-26)	June 57
Caesarean imprisonment (Acts 24:24-26)	June 57 - August 59
Trial before Festus (Acts 25:7-12)	July 59
Trial before Agrippa (Acts 26)	first of August 59
Voyage to Rome (Acts 27:1-28:29)	August 59 - February 60
Departure from Caesarea	middle of August 59
Myra	middle of September 59
Fair Havens	October 5 - 10, 59
Shipwreck at Malta	last of October 59
Departure from Malta	first of February 60
Arrival from Rome	last of February 60
First Roman Imprisonment (Acts 28:30)	February 60 - March 62
• Ephesians written	autumn 60
• Colossians and Philemon written	autumn 61
• Philippians written	early spring 62
James, Lord's brother, martyred	spring 62
Paul in Ephesus and Colossae	spring - autumn 62
Peter went to Rome	62
Paul in Macedonia	late summer 62 - winter 62/63
• 1 Timothy written	autumn 62
Paul in Asia Minor	spring 63 - spring 64
Paul in Spain	spring 64 - spring 66
Christians persecuted, Peter martyred	summer 64
Paul in Crete	early summer 66
Paul in Asia minor	summer - autumn 66
• Titus written	summer 66
Paul in Nicopolis	winter 66/67
Paul in Macedonia and Greece	spring - autumn 67
Paul arrested and brought to Rome	autumn 67
• 2 Timothy written	autumn 67
Paul's death	spring 68
Destruction of Jerusalem	September 2, 70

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Map: Geography relevant to Paul's life, stretching from Jerusalem to Rome

Source: http://imgarcade.com/tarsus-cilicia-map.html

See also: Paul's Letters and the New Testament
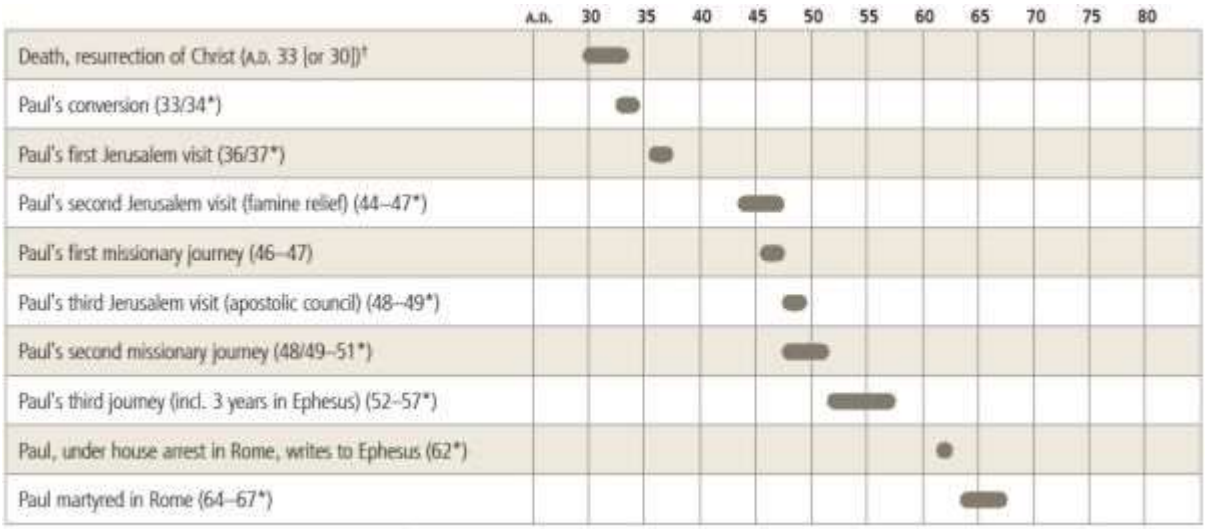
(For more about timelines, journeys, dating of letters, NT, study guides, etc.)

See also:



Galatians

Romans

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Paul's Lifetime Timeline

http://kukis.org/Charts/NTSummaryChart.htm

 denotes approximate date; / signifies either/or; † see The Date of Jesus' Crucifixion, pp. 1809–1810*

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Engaging the Bible in Mission Theology: Scholarship, James M. Scott

REVIEW: James M. Scott, Paul and the Nations: The Old Testament and Jewish Background of Paul's Mission to the Nations with Special Reference to the Destination of Galatians

https://bibleandmission.blogspot.com/2013/05/engaging-bible-in-mission-theology_17.html

Excerpt:

Engaging the Bible in Mission Theology Scholarship: Scholarship, James M. Scott

REVIEW: James M. Scott, Paul and the Nations: The Old Testament and Jewish Background of Paul's Mission to the Nations with Special Reference to the Destination of Galatians, Wissenschaftliche Untersuchungen qum Neuen Testament 84 (Tübingen: Mohr-Siebeck, 1995. 276 pages, with selected bibliography, index of ancient writings, index of modern authors,

This book proposes that a uniquely Jewish understanding of geography, based on the Table of Nations in Genesis and variously explicated in subsequent Jewish literature, provides understanding for Paul's missionary strategy as seen in Paul and Acts.

Conclusion on Hellenistic-Jewish literature: 3 senses of ἔθνη [ethnē, 'people, nation, Gentile'], in LXX:

> nations of the world, including Israel;
> all the nations, distinct from Israel;
> individual Gentiles over against the Jews (120).

Three contexts for a salvation-historical framework appear in this literature, as in the OT:

> Table of Nations;
> Abrahamic Promise;
> Covenant with Israel.

Israel occupies a central position among the nations (Gen. 10 and 1 Chr. 1.1-2.2). The Abrahamic promise 'sets in motion a trajectory whose ultimate fulfillment takes place in the time of Israel's Restoration, when Israel will again become a great nation, and all nations (i.e., those listed in the Table of Nations) will be blessed in Abraham and his seed' (121). Israel 'languishes in protracted exile among the nations, anticipating that day when God will restore her fortunes and gather all nations to himself' (121). This latter is well developed in Qumranic literature (4Q385-389 4-6.2-10. Qumran saw itself as the remnant returned from Exile (4QdibHam 5.1-14).

Paul:

Usage: ἔθνη [ethnē] is used of nations, including Israel (Gal. 3.8, citing Gen. 12.3). Israel is frequently called a λαός [laos, 'people']. Paul uses ev,qnh [ethnē] of the Gentile nations, but he never uses the singular for a 'Gentile'—instead he uses Ἕλλην [Hellēn, 'Greek'] (123).

Paul's use of the OT/Jewish Concept of Ἔθνη [ethnē]: 'all Israel' means all 12 tribes in Rom. 11.26, since Paul identifies himself in Rom. 11.1 as from Benjamin and is arguing that a remnant of Israel has already come to faith (p. 127, n. 472). 'the full number of the nations' (Rom. 11.25) means the 70 or 72 nations of the world (Dt. 32.8 in the Table of Nations tradition—Dt. 32 is 'crucial to Paul's argument in Romans 9-11') (127).

Abrahamic Promise in Paul:

Rom. 4.16—Abraham is the father of many nations (includes Jews and Gentiles) (128). Rom. 4.13 includes the traditional expectation that Abraham and his seed will be 'heir of the world'.

Gal. 3.8—Blessing for all nations in Abraham and his seed. Paul modifies Gen. 12.3 with Gen. 18.18. Over against those arguing that here Paul excludes the Jews (D.-A. Koch), Scott argues that Paul refers to both Gentiles and Jews. Scott has a good argument here. Note one of his points: Gen. 12.3 (+ 18.18) 'is filtered through Ps. 71.17 LXX, where panta ta eqnh [panta ta ethnē] clearly means 'all nations' (129).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Covenant with Israel:

1. The sin of Israel. Gal. 2.15 'Jews by birth, not Gentile sinners' goes against the OT view of Israel as sinful—it is irony on Paul's part, due to Peter separating from Gentiles at table in the previous verses (131). Gal. 3.10 sees Israel as under a curse and in protracted exile (v. 10b) (131).

2. The exile of Israel. Rom .2.24 cites Is. 52.5, and this assumes that Israel is in exile. Israel's lack of response to the message (Rom. 10.18) is seen as jealousy of the Gentile mission (v.19), and Paul 'cites in this regard Deut 32.21, referring to the exilic situation of Israel: 'I will make you jealous of those who are not a nation….' (132).

3. The Restoration of Israel: 'If we read Rom. 13.1-7 in the context of Paul's imminent expectation of the Parousia (13.11-12) and the Final Judgment (12.19), then the exhortation to the Roman addressees to be subject to the divinely ordained government presupposes that Rome is the Fourth Empire of Daniel, the final empire before the Kingdom of God is established and the saints of the Most High rule the world' (132). Paul's mission to the Gentiles is ultimately for the salvation of Israel, since either some Jews will become jealous (Rom. 11.11, 13-14) or the full number of nations will come in and then the Deliverer will save 'all Israel' (11.25f). 'Paul's concept of the coming in of the nations derives from the OT expectation of the eschatological pilgrimage of the nations to Zion (cf. Isa. 2.2-4 = Mic. 4.1-3)' (132f). 'In Rom. 9.24, Paul argues that God has called 'us' not only [from the Jews] but also [from the Gentiles]. In support of this statement, the Apostle cites Hos 2.25 and 2.1, both of which contain the word ['to call']….' (133). In Rom. 15.10, Paul quotes Dt. 32.43 about the joint worship of the nations, including quotations from the Psalms and Is. 11.10 in the surrounding verses.

Chapter 3

In ch. 3 of this book, Scott looks at the Table of Nations notion and Romans 15.

1. Why 'from Jerusalem and in a circle'? Paul's mission was not from Jerusalem. He does go and preach there, though. 'In a circle' in the OT means the surrounding areas, frequently in ref. to Jerusalem (Ps. 78.3; 124.2; Jer. 39.44; 40.13; Ezek. 34.26) (138). This puts Jerusalem at the centre of the world with the nations surrounding it, as in the Table of Nations tradition (138).

2. To Illyricum and Beyond. Paul's mission and the tripartite division of the world. The Table of Nations sees Jerusalem at the centre and the rest of the world as divided between Shem, Ham and Japheth. Following this, '…Paul conceives of his missionary activity as focused on the sphere of the Japhethites, for the swath of territory thereby described includes all of Asia Minor (with Galatia!) and Europe as far as the Adraitic Sea, which amounts to approximately half of the territory traditionally ascribed to Japheth and his sons' (141). Paul's plan to go to Rome and on to Spain would complete the evangelisation of Japheth's territory. 'Both Jubilees (8.23, 26; 9.12) and Josephus (Ant. 1.122) mention Gadir/Gadeira near the Straights of Gibraltar in southern Spain in their respective expositions of the Table of Nations' (142). 1 Chr. 1 lists the nations of the world in a circle, going counterclockwise from the north (142). Paul's references to Roman provinces instead of Japhethite names concurs with other Jews updating the list with Roman provinces (cf. ch. 1 of this book). Paul's mission to the 'Greeks' (Rom. 1.16) may reflect Jewish tradition that this was the language of Japheth (p. 144, n. 46 and ch. 2). R. Riesner, Früzeit, pp. 216-225, says Rom. 15.19 should be seen in light of Is. 66.19 (pp. 145f). Also, as Hays notes (Echoes, p. 162), Isaiah is the most important source for Paul because it is the clearest vision of the restoration of Israel involving a universalistic ingathering of Gentiles to worship the Lord (146f). But Riesner tries to fit every detail of Is. 66.19 into Rom. 15, and this is a strain—it doesn't fit (147). Paul's mission was to Jews and Gentiles in a geographical region, not to the Gentiles alone (152f), and this may go back to the Table of Nations (154). This also tallies with Acts 15's decision about abstention laws for the Gentiles based on Gen. 9.1-7 (cf. Lev. 17-18)—Noah is tied to the territorial mission division here too. Qumran (4Q252 2.6-7) interpreted Gen. 9.27 in light of Gen. 12.3—a promise to Noah's 3 sons in the Table of Nations, and this may be what was going on in Acts 15 (155). Scott pushes his argument further, as he needs to (!): Peter's jurisdiction may have been Shem (1 Pt. 5.13's Asia Minor, a letter written from 'Babylon'); and we don't know about Africa (Ham) (156f).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

2 Cor. 10 also shows Paul has a conception of 'his' territory in mission (159ff). Scott suggests that the overlap of territory between Paul and Peter might be due to a difference between the Table of Nations in Gen. and that in Jubilees 8-9, the latter including all Asia Minor. [This does not explain Peter in Corinth or Rome.] (161f).

Acts 'confirms' Paul's approach to mission strategy based on the Table of Nations tradition. Luke has 12 sent out (Israel, 9.1-6) and then 70/72 sent out in mission (the number of the nations, Lk. 10). Lk. 24.46-47 has the disciples sent out to all nations. (162f) Acts 1.8 seems to set up a structure for Acts, and yet the expansion of the mission in concentric circles from Jerusalem and in a northwesterly direction fits with 1 Chr. 1's list of the nations in a circle going counterclockwise (164). Acts 2.5-11 has people 'from every nation under heaven' coming to Jerusalem. Scott maintains that the partial list of nations relates to the Table of Nations tradition (165). Another partial list is found in Is. 66.19, and again in Sib. Or. 3.512-519. Philo Legat. 281-283 is closest to Acts 2.9-11's list (165). Ant. 1.122-147 has an updated list of nations. P. S. Alexander, 'Geography and the Bible (Early Jewish),' ABD, 2 (1992) 977-988 (here p. 983) suggests Acts 2 is a reversal of Gen. 11.7's confusion of the tongues after the Flood, which also brings Acts 2 together with the Table of Nations in Genesis. The structure of Acts may relate to mission to Shem (Acts 2.1-8.25), Ham (8.26-40), and Japheth (9.1-28.31) (167). [The connection to Genesis might be there, but one does not have to see this as a structure to Acts, which is, as Scott admits, disproportional.] Paul's missionary journeys appear to retrace the steps of the Japhethites (as Scott argues on pp. 174f—but, as he admits, this leaves one without a reason why Paul was not to enter Bithynia, Acts 16.7). Acts 17.26 (Areopagus) mentions that God made from one man every nation, 'having determined allotted periods and the boundaries of their habitation' (176). This also is an allusion to Dt. 32.8 (set the bounds of the nations according to the number of angels of God) (177). (cf. the role of Dt. 32 in Rom. 9-11).

Chapter 4

In Ch. 4, Scott examines 'The Table of Nations and the Destination of Galatians' (181ff). His conclusion (215ff): If one examines this question from Greco-Roman ethnography and geography, one can only conclude that the northern part of the Roman province is meant. But from Jewish topography based on the Table of Nations: Josephus identifies Gomer as Japheth's first son (Ant. 1.123), and he sees this region as what was now Galatia for the Romans, divided into 3 parts for his 3 sons (215). All the inhabitants of this region for Jews were Gomerites/Galatians—the ethnic division in the traditional debate of north or south Galatia is not relevant (215). This removes one of the main obstacles for the south Galatia theory, which argues that these people were not 'Galatians', as Paul calls them. If so, 'then Paul is most likely sending his letter to the churches of Ashkenaz, the firstborn son of Gomer, the first son of Japheth'—the region of Phrygia-Galatica, where Paul preached on his 1st missionary journey (215).

The book concludes after ch. 4 with a conclusion chapter.

Here We Are, Slaves to This Day:
A Review of "Exile: A Conversation with N.T. Wright" Edited by James M. Scott https://tabletalktheology.com/2017/10/11/here-we-are-slaves-to-this-day-a-review-of-exile-a-conversation-with-n-t-wright-edited-by-james-m-scott/ [Read…]

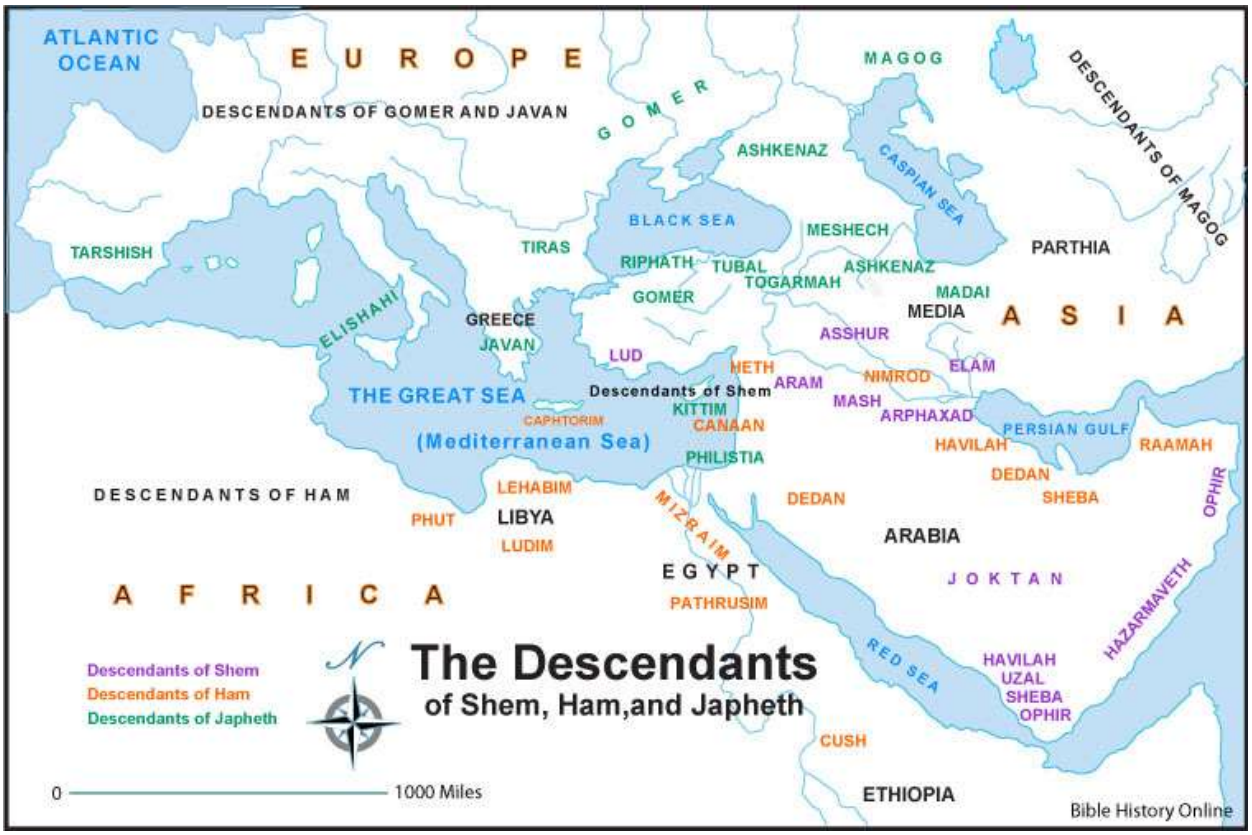
 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



The Table of Nations

The Table of Nations and the Origins of the Races [Recommended]
http://soundchristian.com/man/

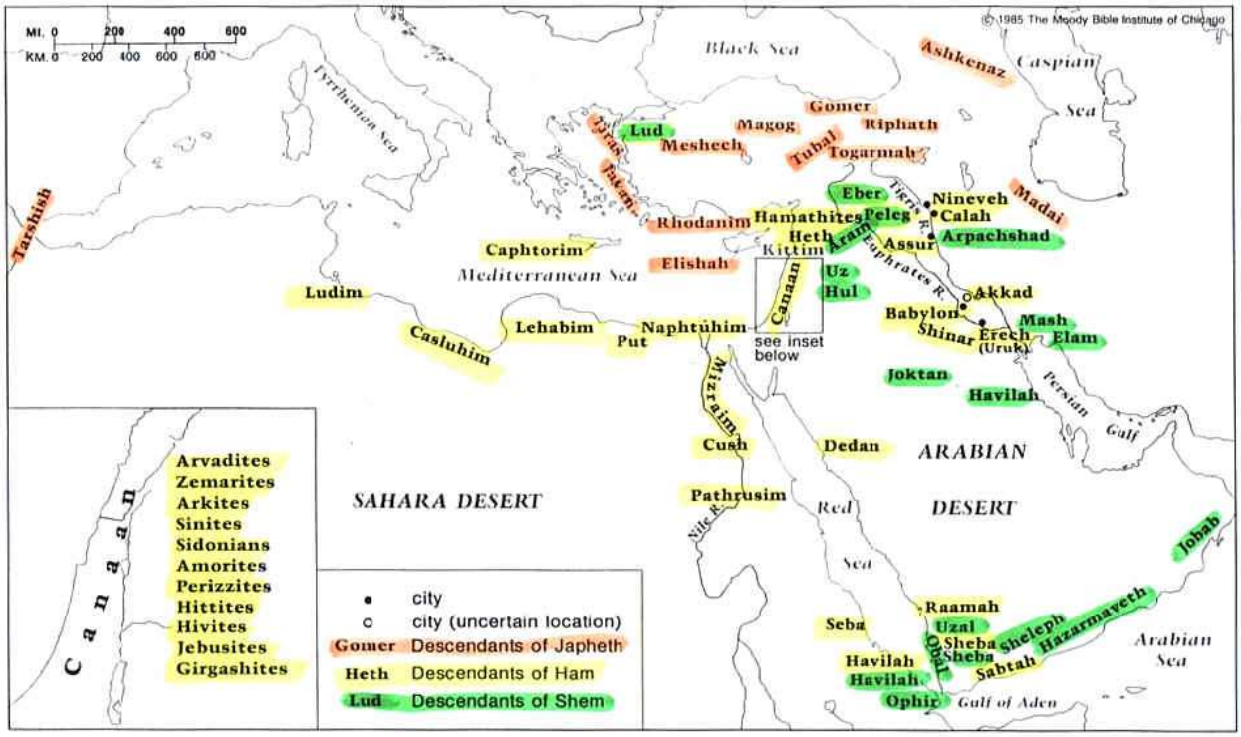
Josephus and Genesis Chapter 10
https://answersingenesis.org/genesis/josephus-and-genesis-chapter-ten/

The Table of Nations in Genesis 10
http://www.bible-history.com/old-testament/table-of-nations-genesis-10.html

According to the Bible the sons of Noah were Shem, Ham, and Japheth... these three sons of Noah represented the three great races of mankind. The map below (see link for corresponding table [list]) shows God's dispersion of the nation's after they migrated from the Tower at Babel.

Wikipedia: Table of Nations
https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Generations_of_Noah

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



Tables of Nations

http://www.bible-history.com/maps/2-table-of-nations.html

https://www.bibliotecapleyades.net/sitchin/sitchinbooks03_03a.htm

Table of Nations – Ham, Shem & Japheth

http://www.freemaninstitute.com/RTGham.htm

Map with slightly different placements of named nations than prior map.

The Settlement Of The World, (The Table Of Nations)

https://bible.org/seriespage/4-settlement-world-table-nations

Excerpt:

Space does not permit an extensive discussion of the table of nations presented in Genesis 10 beyond a general identification of the peoples. Custance (The Three Sons of Noah), an anthropologist, posits an interesting theory on the dispersal of man. The eight point summary of his thesis is as follows:

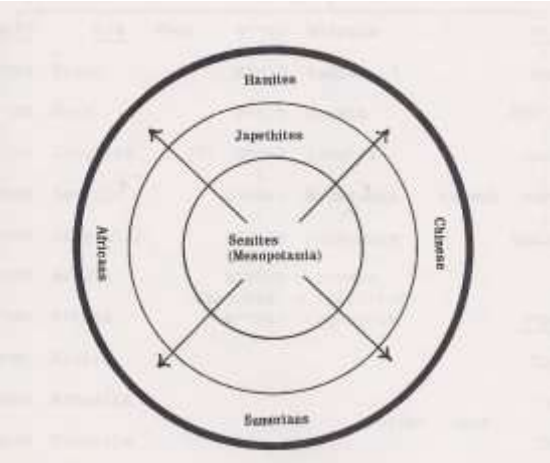
The geographical distribution of fossil remains is such that they are most logically explained by treating them as marginal representatives of a widespread and in part forced dispersion of people from a single multiplying population established at a point more or less central to them all, and sending forth successive waves of migrants, each wave driving the previous one further toward the periphery.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The most degraded specimens are those representatives of this general movement who were driven into the least hospital areas, where they suffered physical degeneration as a consequence of the circumstances in which they were forced to live [such as the Neanderthal man in Europe].

The extraordinary physical variability of fossil remains results from the fact that the movements took place in small, isolated, strongly inbred bands; but the cultural similarities which link together even the most widely dispersed of them indicate a common origin for them all.

What I have said to be true of fossil man is equally true of living primitive societies as well as those which are now extinct.



All the initially dispersed populations are of one basic stock: Hamitic, the family of Genesis 10.

The initial Hamitic settlers were subsequently displaced or overwhelmed by Indo-Europeans (i.e., Japethites), who nevertheless inherited, or adopted, and extensively built upon Hamitic technology and so gained an advantage in each geographical area where they spread.

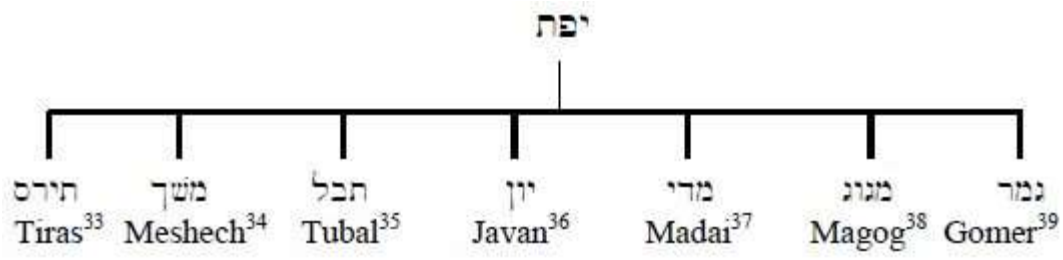
Throughout the great movements of people, both in prehistoric and historic times, there were never any human beings who did not belong within the family of Noah and his descendants.

Finally, this thesis is strengthened by the evidence of history which shows that migration has always tended to follow this pattern, has frequently been accompanied by instances of degeneration both of individuals or whole tribes, usually resulting in the establishment of a general pattern of cultural relationships which parallel those archaeology has revealed.[1]

In Graph form, Custance's theory looks this way:

The Genealogical List

Generally speaking, the Hamites are the most dispersed and diverse people, both ethnically and linguistically. They will be found, according to Genesis, in Asia Minor, Canaan, Egypt (North Africa), South Africa, and Mesopotamia.



Likewise, the Japethites represent the Indo-European peoples, that is, from Europe to India. This classification is usually referring to linguistic similarities rather than ethnic, although the latter is also a consideration. Looking at a relief map of the world, one can see that these people are often mountain people.

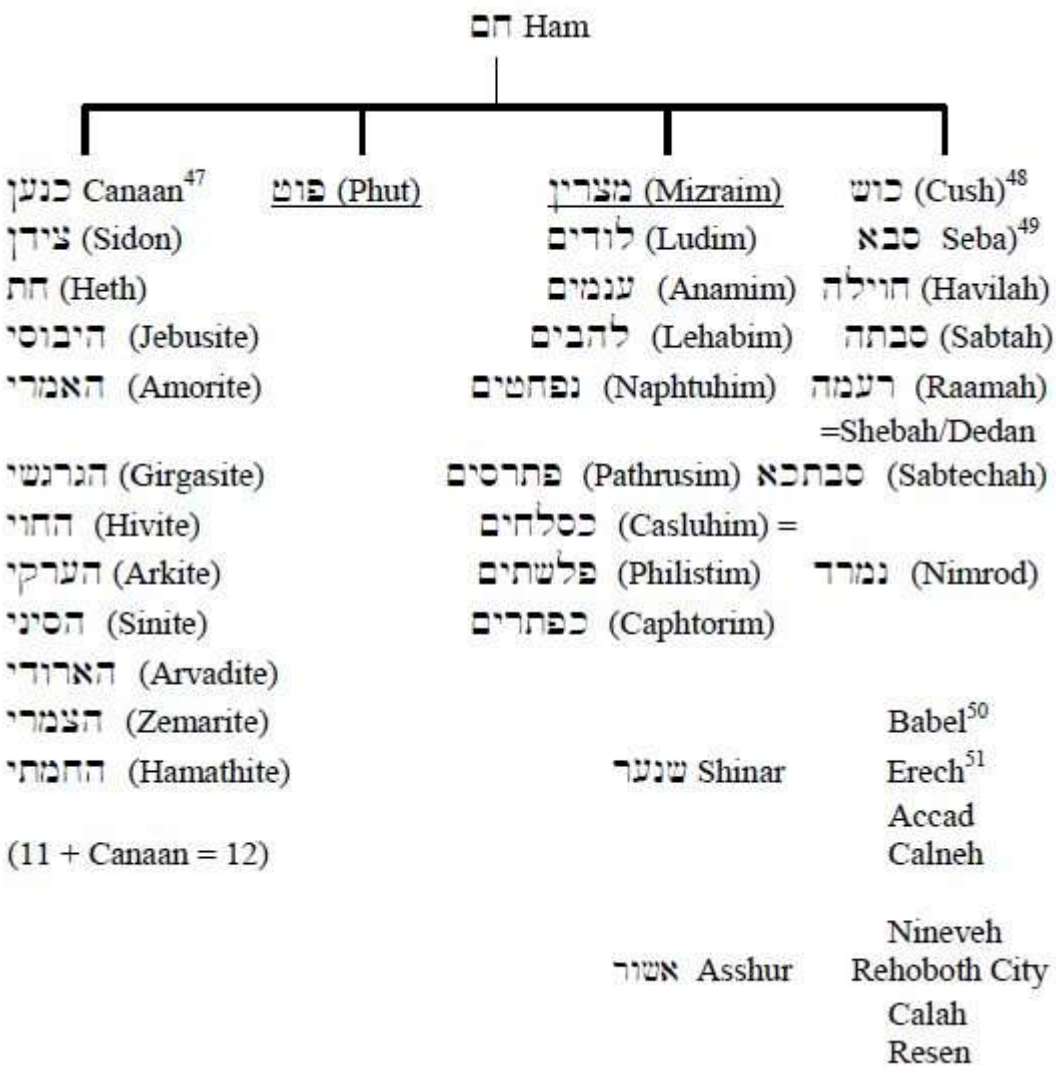
Finally, from a biblical point of view, the Semites are the center of God's work. Semitic people come out of the desert. They are Assyrian, Babylonian, old South Arabians, and, of course, the descendants of

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Abraham. It is no coincidence that the three great monotheistic religions had their origin among Semitic people.

There is ongoing debate about the identification of all the names listed in the genealogies. Some are quite clear, others are not. Below is a list of all the biblical names in Hebrew and English with notes as to the assumptions about their identity.

(Tiras33[2], Meshech34[3], Tubal35[4], Javan36[5], Madai37[6], Magog38[7], Gomer39[8])



אלישה
Elishah[40]
תרשיש
Tarshish[42] (4)
כתין Kittim[44]
דודנין
Dodanim[46]

אשכנז Ashkenaz[41]
ריפת
Riphath[43] (3)
תגרמה Togarmah[45]

(Elishah40[9], Ashkenaz41[10], Tarshish42[11] (4), Riphath43[12] (3), Kittim44[13], Togarmah45[14], Dodanim46[15])

continued next page…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

(Canaan47[16], Cush48[17], Seba49[18], Babel50[19], Erech51[20])

continued next page…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

(Elam52[21], Joktan53[22])

Some General Observations

As with many genealogical lists, this one is selective and oriented toward a certain position--namely, the history of Abraham.[23] Also in characteristic fashion, the most remote person (Japheth) is dispensed with and the family in the center of interest is taken up last and amplified (Shem and in ch. 11 Terah).

There are numerical considerations. Japheth has seven sons but descendants are listed for only Javan (four descendants) and Gomer (three descendants). The sons and grandsons of Cush total seven (Nimrod is dealt with as a separate entity). Mizraim has seven descendants. There are fourteen members of Yaktan's family and ten of Shem's consummating in Abraham (both numbers are favorites in genealogies). There are seven from Heber to Abraham. Canaan and his descendants total twelve which might be used to counterbalance the twelve tribes of Israel.

The descendants of Canaan and Mizraim are treated as peoples rather than individuals, but this is not to deny that an individual headed up the group originally.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

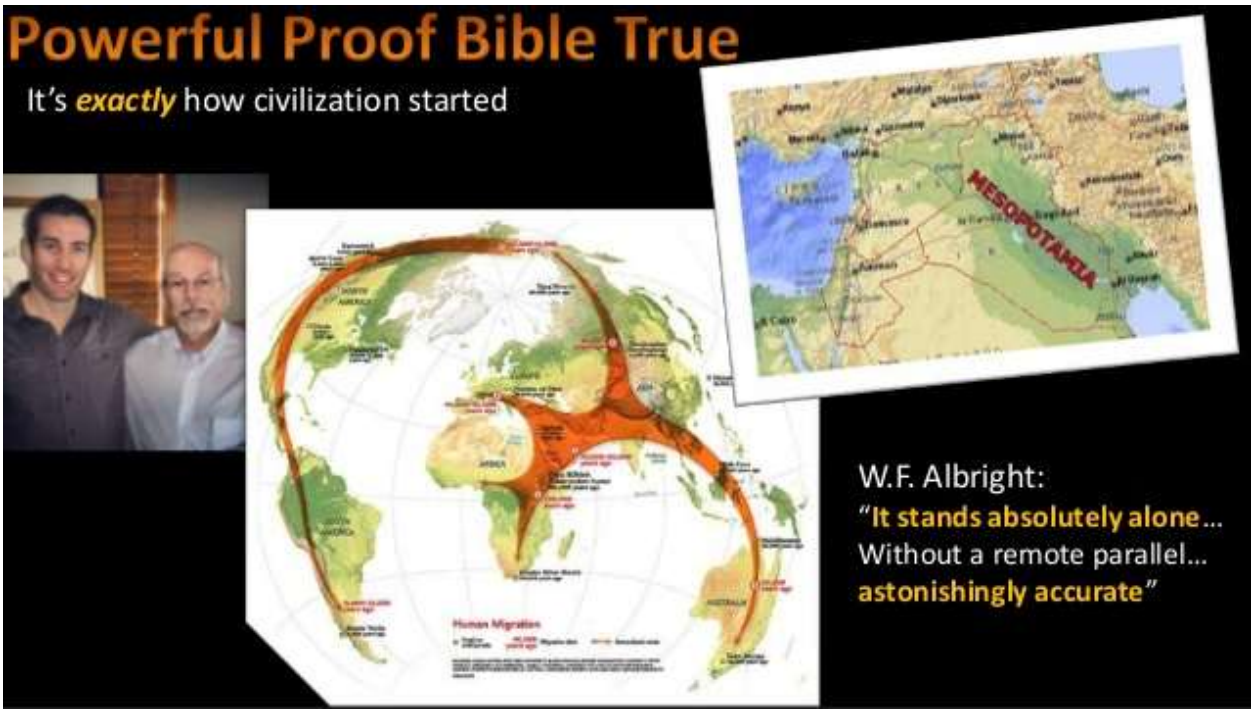
The Israelites are linked with Heber (Gen. 10:21) apparently associating the names Heber and Hebrew.

The fact that Cushites (Hamites) are mentioned as the founders of the Mesopotamian cities shows that they must have been pushed out later by Semites (Custance argues that the Sumerians were Hamitic).

The division of the earth into languages probably took place during the time of Peleg (in his days the earth was divided) or four generations after the flood.

Excursus on Nimrod: This text presents a very tantalizing situation. A descendant of Cush became so famous his name was a household word. His very name means "rebellion" and the LXX is an early witness to an interpretation of "before the Lord" (לִפְנֵי יהוה) as "against the Lord" (ἐναντίον). All the cities mentioned are of great antiquity and are referenced in the earliest writing (cf. the Gilgamesh Epic). There is a problem of whether Asshur went out and built cities or Nimrod (or his descendants) went to Asshur and built. The latter is grammatically feasible (although a little unusual) and since Shinar has four cities, then Asshur would be given four to balance it. This would mean Semitic people in Asshur who were influenced by Nimrod.

The Roots of the Nations (Genesis 10:1-32)



https://bible.org/seriespage/lesson-22-roots-nations-genesis-101-32

The Confusion of Languages at Babel (Genesis 10:1-11:25)

https://bible.org/seriespage/4-confusion-languages-babel-genesis-101-1125

It's exactly how civilization started.

W.F. Albright: "It stands absolutely alone… Without a remote parallel… astonishingly accurate"

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

For more details, charts and maps regarding the Table of Nations, see the Appendix of my separate references resource*:

The Complete Sayings of Jesus – NKJV with Appendix

(Note: NKJV is primary text to make reading easier, except when it varies significantly from the original KJV or a different translation text is clearer and/or deemed more accurate.)

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Paul's Three Conversion Accounts in Acts

Why are the three accounts of Paul's conversion on the road to Damascus different?

https://hermeneutics.stackexchange.com/questions/15532/why-are-the-three-accounts-of-pauls-conversion-on-the-road-to-damascus-differen

Paul himself makes no mention of a conversion on the road to Damascus, whereas Acts of the Apostles has not one, but three accounts:

- At Acts 9:3-8, Paul was blinded by a light and fell down, then heard Jesus, who told Paul that he would be told what to do when he was in the city. His men did not see the light, but heard the voice. They remained standing.
- At Acts 22:6-11, Paul told the people he was blinded by a light and fell down, then heard Jesus, who again told Paul that he would be told what to do when he was in Damascus. This time, his men saw the light but, unlike Paul, were not blinded, and did not hear the voice.
- At Acts 26.13-19, Paul told Agrippa that he saw a brilliant light and heard Jesus, who gave him his mission, but did not command him to go to Damascus. He fell down, but there is no mention of blindness, nor is there any mention of the men seeing or hearing anything, although for some reason they also fell down. He told those at Damascus and Jerusalem about his conversion experience.

Misgivings about the Christian Faith
Do Paul's conversion stories contradict each other in the book of Acts?

How Greek Grammar Resolves this Issue

Defining and understanding the word, "contradiction"

http://harvardhouse.com/sauloftarsus_contradiction_acts.htm

Excerpt:

Is the book of Acts contradictory in regards to the Apostle Paul's conversion story?

The contradiction charge relates only to the men traveling with Saul of Tarsus. Acts 9:7 states that the men heard a voice. In contrast, Acts 22:9 states that the men did not hear or understand the voice.

Various "English" translations of the original Greek reveal a potential contradiction. People opposed to the Bible choose to believe there is a contradiction. Can this contradiction be explained?

To begin, it is important to understand that the belief that the book of Acts has a contradiction is not related to the Apostle Paul's personal conversion story. This is an important point based on the fact that Luke, the author of the book of Acts, traveled with the Apostle Paul. Luke and Paul probably discussed the conversion story in depth. And Luke has been verified to be an accurate historican based on archaeological evidence with a correlation at the 99.9% confidence level (less than 1 chance in 1000 that we are being misled).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

External evidence with large numbers of ancient artifacts verifies that the book of Acts is accurate. To explain what non-believers refer to as a contradiction requires an understanding of Greek grammar for the word, "to hear".

"Do you always understand the words spoken by other people?"

Everyday conversations and interactions support that people do not always accurately hear what others are saying. Sometimes, we only hear a voice, not the words. It should not be a surprise that Greek grammar permits this type of translation for the men that traveled with Saul of Tarsus.

The scholar, Gleason L. Archer, uses this distinction to explain the text.

Greek makes a distinction between hearing a sound as a noise (in which case the verb "to hear" takes the genitive case) in contrast with hearing a voice as a thought-conveying message (in which the verb "to hear" takes the accusative case).[1]

Dr. Archer makes reference to a Greek grammar[2] text book to support this technical distinction in Greek. Below is a scanned portion of this Greek grammar text book, which validates that a verb can affect the object in part.

GENITIVE EXPRESSING A PART

1097. a. Any verb may take a partitive genitive if its action affects the object only in part. E.g.

Moreover, the Greek grammar[3] reference below supports that the verb to hear is one of the many verbs that can be used with the partitive genitive case.

1103. The partitive genitive is used with verbs signifying to taste, to smell, to hear, to perceive, to comprehend, to remember, to forget, to desire, to care for, to spare, to neglect, to wonder at, to admire, to despise. E.g.

Therefore, the men traveling with Saul of Tarsus heard a voice, but did not understand the words spoken. Only Saul of Tarsus heard and understood the words spoken based on the way that Luke reported the conversion story. There is no contradiction based on accepted use of Greek grammar.

In support of this conclusion, Strong's Concordance reference for Greek word #191 "to hear" can be translated into English from Greek as the word, "understand" (click here for Strong's Word #191).

Bible translators have used the English word "understand" for the Greek word "to hear" in 1 Corinthians 14:2 (the genitive case for the Greek word to hear).

"For one who speaks in a tongue does not speak to men but to God; for no one understands, but in his spirit he speaks mysteries" (1 Corinthians. 14:2).

Non-believers may insist that there is a contradiction between Acts 9:7 and Acts 22:9. However, Greek grammar explains the two passages showing no contradiction. Moreover, archaeological evidence supports at the 99.9% confidence level that there is no contradiction in the texts as written by Luke.

It is important to understand that physical evidence (data) validates the book of Acts. People who insist there is a contradiction base their belief on circular reasoning since they have no data to support their accusation.

Contradiction #2
Did the men traveling with Saul of Tarsus see a bright light?

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Because skeptics like to use the word “contradiction” in their attempts to demean the Bible, it is important to understand the definition. This approach will ensure that we are all in agreement about using this word. Below are two wikipedia definitions.

1. “Contradiction” asserts its own opposite.
2. In logic, a “Contradiction” consists of a logical incompatibility between two or more propositions. It occurs when the propositions, taken together, yield two conclusions which form the logical inversions of each other.

Just as important, I will make use of the words, “supplements” or “augments”. In reality, the stories written in the book of Acts provide supplementary information to describe what actually occurred when Saul of Tarsus was confronted by the resurrected Jesus on the road to Damascus. Consider wikipedia definitions for the words supplement or augment.

1. “Supplement” is something added, especially to make up for a deficiency.
2. “Augment” To increase, make larger or supplement.

Using the definitions above, let's consider the skeptic accusation that the book of Acts contains contradictions.

"...there is a contradiction in the book of Acts 9:7 compared to Acts 22:9. The skeptic then quotes from various English translations in his attempt to support this viewpoint.

The men with Paul didn't see anything [Acts 9:7]
The men with Paul saw the light [Acts 22:9]

Do these verses actually make contradictory statements?

Again, I quote from the Interlinear Study Bible, which is a close to perfect translation into English from the original ancient Greek. (you can click on the link to verify the translation)

- "The men who traveled with him stood speechless, hearing the voice but seeing no one" [Acts 9:7].
- "And those who were with me saw the light, to be sure, but did not understand the voice of the One who was speaking to me" [Acts 22:9].

In Acts 9:7, the original Greek is silent about the men seeing a bright light. However Acts 9:7 verifies that the companions could not see the person that was speaking, which requires us to ask "WHY?" Acts 22:9 augments Acts 9:7 by stating that the companions of Saul of Tarsus saw the bright light from which a Voice came.

The scholar, Dr. Gleason Archer comments on these verses. Consider the words of a scholar that knows Ancient Greek literature.

There is an instructive parallel here between the inability to hear the voice as an articulated message and their inability to see the glory of the risen Lord as anything but a blaze of light. Acts 22:9 says that they saw the light, but Acts 9:7 makes it clear that they did not see the Person who displayed Himself in the light. There is a clear analogy between these differing levels of perception in each case.[4]

The skeptic's accusation that there is a contradiction is based on the desire to find a contradiction in the story. Skeptics show that they do not understand or use the word “contradiction” correctly.

At this time, let me illustrate what an actual contradiction would have to be like to make the book of Acts contradictory.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

- Acts 9:7 would have to state that "The men who traveled with Saul of Tarsus did NOT see a bright light.
- Acts 9:7 would have to state that "The men who traveled with Saul of Tarsus DID see a bright light."

These contradictory statements are not written into the book of Acts. Therefore, the accusation that the book of Acts is contradictory is baseless.

Finally, when the more accurate translation from Ancient Greek into English is used for the book of Acts, we find that there is absolutely no contradiction. In fact, the correct word that describes the difference between all these verses would be the word, “supplements” or “augments”. In other words, each verse supplies more details about what actually happened. Intellectually honest people will conclude based on biblical literature and logic that there are absolutely no contradictions in the book of Acts in regards to the conversion story of Saul of Tarsus.

I also think it is important to gain insight into what this story reveals about the spiritual reality. For example, "What is the spiritual world like based on the Saul of Tarsus conversion story?"

At the end of this discussion, I will compare the conversion story of Saul of Tarsus to the revelations that Muhammad received as reported by his favorite wife, Ayesha. What a contrast we will find.

Contradiction #3
Who fell to the ground?

A skeptic writes "...there is a contradiction in the book of Acts 22:7 compared to Acts 26:14. The skeptic then quotes from various English translations in his attempt to support this viewpoint.

Paul alone fell to the ground [Acts 22:7]
Every body fell on the ground [Acts 26:14]

Do these verses actually make contradictory statements?

Again, I quote from the Interlinear Study Bible, which is a close to perfect translation into English from the original ancient Greek. (you can click on the link to verify the translation)

- "and I fell to the ground and heard a voice saying to me, 'Saul, Saul, why are you persecuting Me?'" [Acts 22:7].
- "And when we had all fallen to the ground, I heard a voice saying to me in the Hebrew dialect, 'Saul, Saul, why are you persecuting Me? It is hard for you to kick against the goads.'" [Acts 26:14].

There are two issues with the skeptic's accusation. First, the information given between Acts 22 and Acts 26 is supplementary, not contradictory. Second, the skeptic's accusation is based on taking the text in the book of Acts out of context.

What would be required for the text to be contradictory?

- Acts 22:7 would have to state that "The men who traveled with Saul of Tarsus did NOT fall to the ground." (Acts 22:7 is silent, not contradictory)
- Acts 26:14 would have to state that "The men who traveled with Saul of Tarsus DID fall to the ground."

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

These contradictory statements are not written into the book of Acts. Therefore, the accusation that the book of Acts is contradictory is baseless.

Finally, it is important to understand that skeptics are attempting to demean the book of Acts by taking the words out of context. In Acts chapter 22, Paul is addressing a large crowd near the temple as he was being arrested. In Acts 22, Paul tells the story about himself because they are arresting only the Apostle Paul. The story line does not include the companions of the Apostle Paul up to the point that Paul has been blinded by the bright light and needs help to be led into Damascus. The text differences between Acts 22 (click on each link to read and contrast the entire chapter in the book of Acts) and Acts 26 are written from different perspectives. The differences are supplemental, not contradictory.

The context of the story told in Acts 26 includes the entire entourage of people. The differences between the two chapters reveal supplementary information about what actually happened. There is really no contradiction in these texts except in the biased mind of skepticism.

In conclusion, the correct word to use in comparing these two verses is “supplements” or “augments”. Using the word “contradiction” again shows flawed logic.

Conclusion

Book of Acts is Credible

Therefore, we can conclude that the conversion story for Saul of Tarsus does not contain any contradictions. The story line written into the book of Acts is credible at the 99.9% confidence level because the texts are verified by archaeological and other physical evidence. Support for this conclusion is based on the research of the classic scholar, Dr. Colin Hemer, author of The Book of Acts in the Setting of Hellenistic History[5].

Based on evidence and scholarly analysis, we know that the mission trips of the Apostle Paul actually happened as written. Therefore, to believe and accept the spiritual stories written into Acts requires only a small amount of faith.

Finally, because the conversion of story of Saul of Tarsus (supreme skeptic of Jesus Christ), who became the Apostle Paul is credible, we can compare the Christian faith to the Islamic faith using mathematical tools.

Comparing the Qur'an and the Bible

Mathematical Requirements

To realistically compare Christian faith to Islamic faith requires the following items:

- Both the Qur’an and the Bible must discuss the same subject (i.e.: Jesus dying on the cross)
- The Qur’an and the Bible must present diametrically opposite viewpoints on that specific subject (i.e.: Jesus dying on the cross)
- There must be physical evidence (i.e.: archaeological evidence, analyzed by scholars, such as Dr. Colin Hemer, author of The Book of Acts in the Setting of Hellenistic History[6]) that can be used to make valid calculations.

Since the conditions above are all satisfied, we can logically arrive at a valid conclusion that reveals the Bible is valid and that the Qur'an is false. That is why it is credible to state Jesus’ death on the cross is credible at the 99.9999998% confidence level.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Archaeological evidence supports the book of Acts is accurate. The evidence supports that the supreme skeptic of all, Saul of Tarsus, a terrorist of Christians, repented when he was confronted by the real Jesus, who died and rose again as foretold by the Old Testament Prophets.

The bottom line is that the book of Acts is a set of words written by Luke. Archaeological evidence supports that the travels of the Apostle Paul actually took place due to 162 items out of 165 being verified. A fanatical skeptic became a Christian when confronted by Jesus Christ, the Son of God, who died on the cross and rose again. The Apostle Paul reported that Jesus died and rose again, only after his experience on the road to Damascus.

In contrast, only the Qur'an, recorded on paper more than 600 years later claims that Jesus did NOT die on the cross. To date, not even ONE archaeological item has been uncovered to support the Islamic viewpoint as written in the Qur'an. Due to no external archaeological evidence, the Qur'an resembles the book of Mormon. There is truly no reason to place any faith in the Qur'an or the book of Mormon as coming from God except by blind faith, which leads to self-deception.

In fact, since the Qur'an contains a diametrically opposite message in respect to the message found in the entire Bible, intellectually honest people conclude that the source of the Qur'an is also diametrically opposite of the Bible.

Muhammad claimed that he received the Qur'an from the Archangel Gabriel. However, the message in the Qur'an is diametrically opposite the words recorded by Daniel the prophet, who also claims to have received words from the Archangel Gabriel. Based on diametrically opposing messages, intellectually honest people will conclude that the Gabriel who spoke to Muhammad is NOT the Archangel Gabriel that spoke to Daniel the Prophet. The diametrical messages found in the Qur'an and the book of Daniel (using archaeological evidence uncovered to date, analyzed by true scholars such as Dr. Colin Hemer, author of The Book of Acts in the Setting of Hellenistic History[7]) supports that there is a spiritual battle between God fearing holy angels and fallen angels. (Not a large assumption based on the fact that war has pervaded the human race for millennia).

Consider the evidence that the Qur'an does not come from God.

1. Archaeological evidence supports that Muhammad's view of Jesus NOT dying on the cross is false at the at the 99.9999998% confidence level
2. Muhammad could not foretell the future since his spiritual source was not from the Creator, who exists outside time-space.
3. Logic supports that the false Gabriel would also present a message diametrically opposite of the one true God, which is evident based on the opposing views of Jesus dying on the cross.
4. Based on accurately and consistently foretelling the future. Daniel heard from the true Archangel Gabriel.
5. Muslim reports by the companions and wives of Muhammad support that Muhammad experienced temporary possession when he received the Qur'an

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Paul's conversion: Contradictory accounts?

http://www.tektonics.org/lp/paulthree.php

Excerpt:

In the book of Acts we have not one, not two, but three accounts of Saul's conversion. Here's a sample from the major focus points:

Acts 9:7 And the men which journeyed with him stood speechless, hearing a voice, but seeing no man.

Acts 22:9 And they that were with me saw indeed the light, and were afraid; but they heard not the voice of him that spake to me.

A standard solution in this regard says either that:

- In the second verse, the word means "understood," not "heard."

or,

- In the first verse, the word "voice" should be translated "sound."

However, there are obvious and simple solutions that have nothing to do with language.

The first way to look at the solution is that Paul, when retelling his story in Chapter 22 (and 26), is incorrect when he says that his companions didn't hear the voice (and perhaps on other matters of difference), and Luke is merely quoting him.

Does this mean that Paul was lying or unreliable? No, it means that he was misinformed at the time of his speeches in Chapters 22/26. We cannot simply assume that Paul had the correct information, and the possibility exists, for example, that his companions did not tell him that they had heard the voice. Indeed, they may have DENIED hearing it, both to Paul and in his presence, for fear of the implications of what they had heard. We might expect this is they were the sort of "travelling goon squad" implied - I know from working experience in the prisons that this type of person will tell any lie, no matter how outrageous and obvious, in order to evade an issue.

It is interesting that:

- After dropping Paul off in Damascus, these "companions" drop out of the picture;

- In Paul's account of the event in Ch. 26, he does not say one way or the other whether his companions heard ANYTHING - perhaps reflecting further information given to him by Luke (who was spurred on by Paul's miscue in Ch. 22?) that the men did hear something.

However, another way to look at this is as an intentional contradiction designed to magnify Paul and put down the importance of his companions. This aspect would find parallels in Greco-Roman rhetorical methods; see on this matter Ronald Witherup, "Functional Redundancy in the Acts of the Apostles" from Journal for the Study of the New Testament 48, 1992, pp. 67-86.

This is in line with the suggestion from E. P. Sanders, in his book The Historical Figure of Jesus, that Luke may have intentionally made the stories different, and Wright's comment in The Resurrection of the Son of God that the differences are "best explained by Luke's following a hellenistic convention of style according to which variation in a narrative lends interest." [388]

Consider what Sanders says:

The author of Luke/Acts was not stupid; he doubtless knew that his stories varied. He could have told the same story the same way, but that would not have been as good a narrative. Like many other authors, both ancient and modern, he disliked repetition; like other ancient authors, he would change events in order to avoid it.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

We may not choose to agree with Sanders totally, but we may agree on this much: Luke was not stupid. It strains credulity to suggest that he made an "error" such as is suggested and didn't even realize that it was there.

Tekton reader Dennis Hou has made a very pertinent observation giving a good reason for at least one important functional difference -- an allusion by Luke to an OT passage. Here is what he says:

> Deuteronomy iv, 12: "And the LORD spake unto you out of the midst of the fire: ye heard the voice of the words, but saw no similitude; only ye heard a voice."
>
> Acts ix, 7: "And the men which journeyed with him stood speechless, hearing a voice, but seeing no man."

It may worthwhile to consider a possible allusion (or even a typological connection) here.

For starters: Stephen stated, "Behold, I see the heavens opened, and the Son of man standing on the right hand of God," (Acts vii, 56.) Among other things, the standing up includes Psalms lxxxii, 6: "Arise, O God, judge the earth: for thou shalt inherit all nations, [i.e. Gentiles.]" We see the beginnings of this "inheritance" (elsewhere, His people, Israel, are described as the inheritance) with the Ethiopian eunuch.

The Deuteronomy passage refers to the revelation of the Mosaic law. Seeing that the new exodus (A.D. 30-70) of the new Israel (the church) out of the new Egypt (national Israel, e.g. Revelation xi, 8) is about to commence, Paul here takes the role of the new Moses (cf. Romans ix, 3, which alludes to Exodus xxxii, 32) preparing to declare the new law and the new covenant.

In that case, there seems to be good reason for Acts ix, 7 to hint at Deuteronomy iv, 12.

Dr. Thomas Constable's Notes on Acts

http://www.soniclight.com/constable/notes/htm/NT/Acts/Acts.htm [also available: PDF]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Paul's Conversion

http://www.biblecharts.org/apostlepaulcharts/3%20-%20Pauls%20Conversion.pdf [PDF]

Excerpt:

C. Paul's Conversion as Referred to in the Epistles

1. 1 Corinthians 1:1 – "Paul, called to be an apostle of Jesus Christ through the will of God . . ."

2. 1 Corinthians 9:1 – "Am I not an apostle? Am I not free? Have I not seen Jesus Christ our Lord? . . ."

3. 1 Corinthians 15:7-9 – "After that He was seen by James, then by all the apostles. Then last of all He was seen by me also, as by one born out of due time. For I am the least of the apostles, who am not worthy to be called an apostle, because I persecuted the church of God. "

4. Galatians 1:1 – ", an apostle (not from men nor through man, but through Jesus Christ and God the Father who raised Him from the dead)."

5. Galatians 1:11-12 – "But I make known to you, brethren, that the gospel which was preached by me is not according to man. For I neither received it from man, nor was I taught it, but it came through the revelation of Jesus Christ."

6. Romans 1:1 – "Paul, a bondservant of Jesus Christ, called to be an apostle, separated to the gospel of God."

7. 1 Timothy 1:12-16 – "And I thank Christ Jesus our Lord who has enabled me, because He counted me faithful, putting me into the ministry, although I was formerly a blasphemer, a persecutor, and an insolent man; but I obtained mercy because I did it ignorantly in unbelief. And the grace of our Lord was exceedingly abundant, with faith and love which are in Christ Jesus. 15 This is a faithful saying and worthy of all acceptance, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners, of whom I am chief. However, for this reason I obtained mercy, that in me first Jesus Christ might show all longsuffering, as a pattern to those who are going to believe on Him for everlasting life."

D. Paul was Baptized into Christ

1. Acts 9:6 – " . . . And the Lord said to him, "Arise and go into the city, and you will be told what you must do."
   - Jesus said that in Damascus Saul would be told what he MUST do.

2. Acts 22:16 – "And now why are you waiting? Arise and be baptized, and wash away your sins, calling on the name of the Lord."
   - Ananias told him to arise and be baptized in order to wash away his sins.
   - This is the "MUST" of Acts 9:6
   - How do we know that Saul was indeed baptized? Acts 9:18 tell us us that he did.

3. Acts 9:18 – "Immediately there fell from his eyes something like scales, and he received his sight at once; and he arose and was baptized. "
   - Saul was not saved on the road to Damascus.
   - He was still in his sins when Ananias came to him.
   - Ananias told him what he "MUST" do.
   - Saul obeyed the gospel in the same manner we are to obey the gospel today.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Was Paul a rabbi, married, a member of the Sanhedrin?

It seems Paul was neither a rabbi nor a member of the Sanhedrin

http://bibleserralta.com/PaulSanhedrin.html

In biblical times the patriarchal hierarchy was very influencial. Through all the Bible we realize the elders ruled the society. In the book of Job we see that Elihu didn't dare speak while others who were older than him were speaking.

"4 Now Elihu had waited till Job had spoken, because they were elder than he. 5 When Elihu saw that there was no answer in the mouth of these three men, then his wrath was kindled. 6 And Elihu the son of Barachel the Buzite answered and said: I am young, and ye are very old; wherefore I was afraid, and durst not shew you mine opinion." (Job 32: 4-6)

When God sent Moses to deliver the children of Israel from the Egyptian slavery (Ex 3: 16), He sent him to speak with the elders of the people, which is an indication that the elders ruled over the people. The same pattern is observed in Nm 11: 16 where God decides to give Moses some men for helping him manage the people.

"Go, and gather the elders of Israel together*, and say unto them: The LORD God of your fathers, the God of Abraham, of Isaac, and of Jacob, appeared unto me, saying, I have surely visited you, and seen that which is done to you in Egypt*." (Ex 3: 16)

"And the LORD said unto Moses: Gather unto me seventy men of the elders of Israel*, whom thou knowest to* be the elders of the people, and officers over them*; and bring them unto the tabernacle of the congregation, that they may stand there with thee*." (Nm 11: 16)

In Dt 19: 12 we see again that the elders have authority to bring back a criminal who escaped to another city, and execute him.

"Then the elders of his city shall send and fetch him thence*, and deliver him into the hand of the avenger of blood that he may die*." (Dt 19: 12)

When our Lord Jesus Christ wanted to warn his disciples that he was going to be crucified and killed, he told them that it was going to be done by the elders, a powerful indication that the elders ruled society. The same idea is shown when the soldiers were bribed into saying that they fell asleep while watching Jesus' tomb. All of the above reveal that the elders were the ones who determined what had to be done.

"From that time forth began Jesus to shew unto his disciples, how that he must go unto Jerusalem, and suffer many things of the elders and chief priests and scribes, and be killed, and be raised again the third day." (Matt 16: 21)

"And when they were assembled with the elders*, and had taken counsel, they gave large money unto the soldiers, saying: Say ye, His disciples came by night, and stole him away while we slept.*" (Matt 28: 12-13)

Furthermore, when a group of Jews plotted to murder Saint Paul, they consulted with the elders to use their influence over the Roman authorities, and convince them to bring Paul to them for questioning, while in the meantime they were setting a trap to murder him en route.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

"And they came to the chief priests and elders, and said: We have bound ourselves under a great curse, that we will eat nothing until we have slain Paul." (Acts 23: 14)

Through out the Scriptures it is clearly evident that the elders were governing society. At a national level, the group of elders called the Sanhedrin ruled over all. Young men didn't have a voice or vote on issues and decisions affecting that society.

Even today, that the patriarchal system is obsolete, there are some governmental positions that cannot be held by younger persons. For example, in the United States, to be a Senator, one must have not less than 30 years, and to be President one must be 35 or older.

Back in the times of Stephen's martyrdom, Paul, whose name at that time was Saul, was reputed as a young fellow. We come to know this in Acts 7: 58, where he is called a young fellow.

There are those who mistakenly think that Paul was a rabbi and a member of the Sanhedrin. All the above deeply contradicts both assumptions.

"*And cast him out of the city, and stoned him, and the witnesses laid down their clothes at a young man's feet, whose name was Saul." (Acts 7: 58)

The Sanhedrin was composed by elders, mature, aged men. It is not logical to think that a youngster, as was Paul at that time, could belong to such a high level governing body. In an epoch of patriarchal dominance, an era when the young individuals kept quiet when an older one was talking, it is not reasonable to think that Paul belonged to the Sanhedrin.

The same reasoning may be followed to get to the conclusion that he was not a rabbi. Perhaps he was studying to become one, but he was not a 30 years old, a requirement for rabbis at the time, as I understand. Even Jesus didn't start his ministry until he was thirty years old.

After Stephen's death, being Paul a youngster at the time, he asked permission from the elders of the Sanhedrin to persecute Christians. After this episode, came his conversion in Damascus. Therefore there was no time for Paul to become an elder, get into the Sanhedrin or become a rabbi.

What has misled some brethren into thinking as such is Acts 8: 1, where Paul consented in the death of Stephen. To consent in Stephen's death he didn't have to belong to the Sanhedrin, because the crowd that was stoning him to death didn't belong to such a high governing body, yet were consenting in Stephen's death.

Q: I have heard that to be member of the Sanhedrin you had to be married and therefore, Paul was a married man. Is this true?

http://www.ariel.org/qna/qpaul.htm?iframe=true&width=800&height=500

A: It is true that to be member of the Sanhedrin one had to be married. The problem is that people merely assume that Paul was a member of the Sanhedrin, but the Bible never makes that statement. He was certainly an apprentice for one of the members of the Sanhedrin and therefore had the clothing at the time of the stoning of Stephen (Acts 7:58), but he himself is never said to be a member of the Sanhedrin. Of all the various claims Paul made about his Jewish identity, he never once said he was a full member of the Sanhedrin. That is why this cannot be used as evidence that Paul was married. In I Corinthians 7 he makes it clear that he was not married and there is no implication that he ever formally married. It is best to take Paul at his word that he was a single man and he remained single for his whole life.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Paul Married? Member of the Sanhedrin?
http://www.lavistachurchofchrist.org/LVanswers/2008/07-30.html

Was the Apostle Paul [Ever] Married?
http://www.dennyburk.com/was-the-apostle-paul-married/

https://www.baptistboard.com/threads/was-the-apostle-paul-ever-married.39813/

What evidence is there that the Apostle Paul had been a member of the Sanhedrin? [Forum]
https://christianity.stackexchange.com/questions/11453/what-evidence-is-there-that-the-apostle-paul-had-been-a-member-of-the-sanhedrin

Was Paul a member of the Sanhedrin?
https://thingspaulandluke.wordpress.com/2011/03/06/was-paul-a-member-of-the-sanhedrin/

http://libertygospeltracts.com/new-testament-misc-questions/was-paul-a-member-of-the-sanhedrin/

Rabbinic Credentials of Jesus and St. Paul http://www.patheos.com/blogs/davearmstrong/2017/03/rabbinic-credentials-jesus-apostle-paul-vs-ari-g.html

Was the apostle Paul a Pharisee?
http://opc.org/qa.html?question_id=473

Excerpt:

… Paul himself says that he was a Pharisee in Acts 23:6; 26:5 and Philippians 3:5. The Bible, as God's Word, trumps the internet and any scholar who relies upon human authority that does not submit itself to the Word of God. Thus, you have the proof: Paul was a Pharisee.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

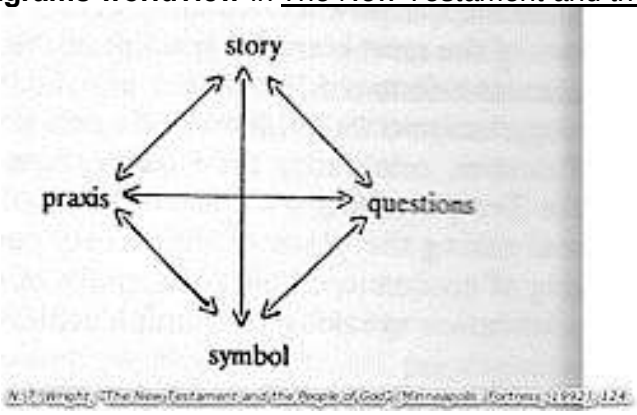
Paul's Worldview

N.T. Wright and the Faithfulness of Paul: Part 3: Paul's Worldview

https://derekvreeland.com/2014/09/n-t-wright-faithfulness-paul-part-3-pauls-worldview/

Excerpt:

I. The Convergence of Three Worlds
"So what happens with the owl, the (rooster) and the eagle are met by the bird that hovers over Israel?" (351) Review: Owl: Greek philosophy; Rooster: pagan culture and religion; Eagle: Roman politics; Hovering bird: Jewish religion



Paul remained a Jewish thinker whose worldview was shaped by Greek philosophy, Pagan religion, and Roman politics. These three were the "mental furniture" decorating Paul's primarily Jewish worldview. Reconstructing Paul's worldview is a necessary first step to understanding Paul's theology. Worldviews "give flavor to culture on the one hand and worship on the other" (351).

Worldview is comprised of praxis, symbol, story, and question. N.T. Wright joins together praxis (practices) and symbols in order to provide a "thick description" of Paul and his mindset…

H. Summing up Paul's symbolic praxis
These symbols-in-action are mental navigation points in Paul's worldview, shaping how he see's God, God's actions, God's world, and God's future. These symbols shape how Paul does theology as seen in his letters to the churches. Paul was not a detached observer of these things, he was personally involved as a pastor. He was not a stoic (everything is god) or an epicurean (the gods are far away and in concerned). He was an active member of the Messiah-family.

See also*: The Use of Greek Philosophy by Paul in the Bible

Here's how Wright diagrams worldview in The New Testament and the People of God.

He then goes on to say that the part we refer to as culture runs between symbol and praxis.

Source: https://nickmelazzo.wordpress.com/page/48/

See also*: Worldviews

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

N.T. Wright and the Faithfulness of Paul: Part 1 (of 9-part series): Charting the Course
A summarization by Derek Vreeland [Recommended]
https://derekvreeland.com/2014/09/n-t-wright-faithfulness-paul-part-1/

Excerpt:

2. Methods to understanding Paul's theology
   a. History: Paul in the setting of second temple Judaism (Jewish, Roman, Greek influences)
   b. Exegesis: Interpreting Paul's writings in the light of Paul's historical context
   c. Application/relevance: How Paul was understood by his contemporaries?

3. Methods to understanding Paul's worldview
   a. Praxis: What were the common practices in Paul's world?
   b. Symbol: What key symbols filled Paul's world?
   c. Story: What narratives shaped Paul's imagination?
   d. Question: What were the BIG questions people were asking in Paul's world?

4. The contrast

Theology is our core beliefs about God, his world, and the people he has created.	Worldview is the way we look at the world, how we assign value to things (or people), how we prioritize and categorize thoughts.
Theology [is] the constructed evaluations we have made or accepted based on our worldview. Theology is conscious.	Worldview is subconscious.
Theology is the evaluation of what we are looking at.	Worldview is what we are looking through.

Note: Part of a 9-Part series summarizing Wright's book, N.T. Wright and the Faithfulness of Paul. Part 9 has links to the prior 8 articles, here is the link:
https://derekvreeland.com/2014/11/paul-in-history/

FYI: N.T. Wright | On Worldview (2017)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=2u-f2qmYr1s [Video]

N.T. Wright: The Letter to the Ephesians (2013)
https://ojs.st-andrews.ac.uk/index.php/TIS/article/view/1215 [Downloadable as a PDF]

Main Journal Page: https://ojs.st-andrews.ac.uk/index.php/TIS/issue/view/124

Excerpt:

Those who have read some of my longer books may know that I use the category of worldview as something distinct from theology. Theology proper is, of course, discourse about God – in a Christian context, discourse about God, the Trinity, the Father, the Son, the Spirit; about the Church, the calling of God to the Church and so on. But worldview is about spectacles, not what you look at, but what you look through. You only stop to examine your worldview, like your spectacles, if suddenly things have gone fuzzy and you can't see straight – so I analyse worldview in terms of the stories that people habitually tell, the narratives by which they live without thinking until somebody suddenly says: 'Why do you do that?' and the answer is: 'Well that's just what we do.'

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Symbols have a key place in this. Today they include obvious things like mobile phones and credit cards, which indicate how we go about things and what our society is about. Now, let's ask about symbols in Paul's worldview because when he's teaching young Christians, he is getting them to put on a new pair of spectacles, helping them to think about what he as a Christian takes for granted, but they don't – not yet. As a Second Temple Jew, Paul's worldview symbols were clear – the things that mark you out from your pagan neighbour are circumcision, the keeping of the Sabbath, the keeping of the food laws, the centrality of Torah and Temple, particularly. In your world, if you are a Jew with other Jews, you don't often talk about those things: you take them for granted. But if somebody who is not Jewish meets you, they will perhaps say, 'Why do you do those things?', or perhaps go off and whisper, 'Do you know what those Jews do? They take a day off once a week. Can't think why they do that. And they refuse to eat pork. Is that because they think they are better than the rest of us?' (because most people ate pork as the cheapest meat going) – and so on.

But for Paul it is quite clear that the Church is not defined in terms of the Sabbath, circumcision, food laws, the Temple in Jerusalem, or even the Torah given by God to Moses. What are the symbols of Paul's worldview? You could say the cross – but the cross is not actually there on the street as a visible, tangible thing. I have come to the preliminary conclusion that the central symbol of Paul's worldview is the Church itself, precisely in its unity and in its holiness. On the street, what the onlooker is supposed to see is a community that is united and a community that dances to a different drummer, that does stuff differently. Unity and holiness is what chapters 4–6 are all about, but the groundwork is laid in 1–3. Pastors will know that it is easy to have either unity or holiness in the Church, but hard to get both of them at the same time! Paul insists on both with claims of apostolic authority, but this is an authority which comes not so much from the office but from his testimony (which comes up in chapter 3).

…

The story of creation has not been finished! The story of Exodus has not been finished! The people went into exile, and in Daniel chapter 9 the angel said the exile would not last seventy years but for seventy times seven years, and in Paul's day people were still trying to calculate when this 490-year period would be up. There were several things that would indicate this. For many Jews (not all), the Messiah would come and would liberate God's people, defeat whichever pagan empire happened to be in power at the time and establish a reign of justice and peace. But the great hope (see the end of Ezekiel) was that the God of Israel who had abandoned the Temple at the time of the Babylonian exile because of the people's wickedness, this God would come back. The post-exilic prophet Malachi said, 'the Lord whom you seek will suddenly come to his Temple' (Mal 3:1) – but the priests are fed up because he hasn't done so yet. A great deal of New Testament theology is predicated on the belief that this promise has come true, shockingly, in the person of Jesus of Nazareth. Much of New Testament Christology comes from seeing Jesus as the one in whom the prophecies of Isaiah 40–45, of Malachi, of Zechariah are now being fulfilled.

If this is so, then we have a New Temple theology. The Temple in Jerusalem was not just a big church building at one corner of the city; in Jewish cosmology it was the place where heaven and earth actually overlapped and interlocked. Today, if you ask someone on the street if they believe in God, they will likely think of an Epicurean far distant God. But in the Jewish worldview, heaven and earth, God's sphere and our sphere, overlap and interlock and the Temple was the place where that happened. So if God was going to come back, God was going to come back to the Temple. But what would that look like? And who will get to see it? Everyone – or just some really wise visionaries? So a genre of wisdom literature and apocalyptic vision emerges, and many New Testament books make use of this idea of the unveiling of what is secret.

…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

In Ephesians 1:15–23 we have Paul's prayer. He prays that the revelation in the Messiah will be what transforms the Church individually and collectively so that (v. 18) 'the eyes of their hearts' will be enlightened – not just by some outward knowledge, but by a knowledge that goes deep and transforms your worldview. Everything looks different once you get this new pair of spectacles. So in verses 17–19 we see this emphasis on wisdom and revelation, the divine unveiling of God's plan and the method by which that plan is being worked out. So many Western Christians have been robbed of that because they think platonically of a disembodied heaven and then wonder how the word 'resurrection' could possibly fit into it. The answer is, it can't. So we lose sight of our hope, and God's power (v. 19) in us who believe. Compare Philippians 3 where Paul says, 'My desire is to know Christ and the power of His resurrection'. Paul uses four different words for power in the space of a verse. And then we see what this is going to mean in verses 19, 20 and right through to 23: that power is the power with which God raised the Messiah from the dead and made Him sit at His right hand far above rulers, authority, power and dominion, above every name that is named not only in the present but in the future. God has placed all things under His feet, an allusion, of course, to Psalm 8, which is actually the role for humanity in the purpose of God…

See also: Worldviews

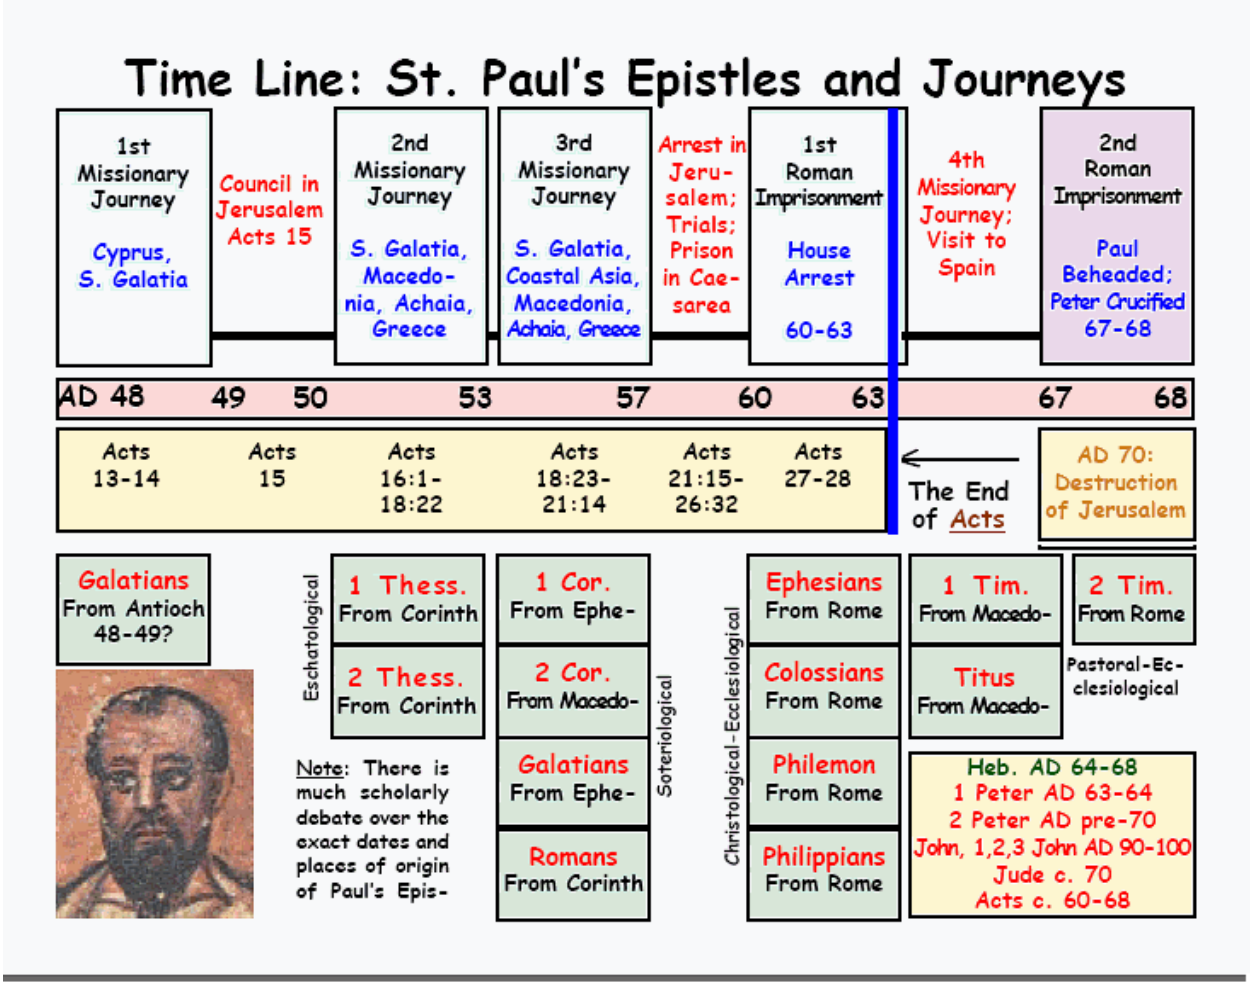
The Use of Greek Philosophy by Paul in the Bible

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Paul's Letters and the New Testament

Dating the Books of the NT

Estimated Dates with Correspondence to Acts

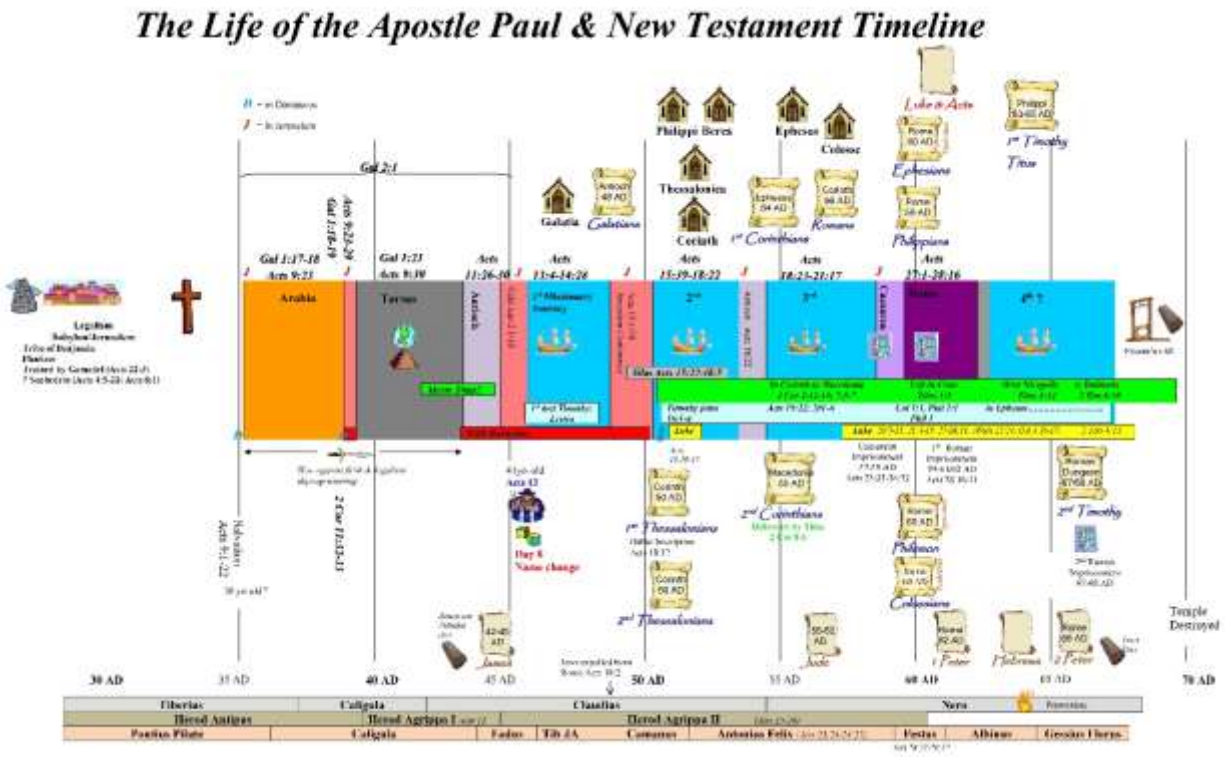


(Source: http://nazaroo.blogspot.com/2011/06/hard-look-at-book-of-acts.html)

Dating the New Testment Books - When Was Each Book of the New Testament Written?
http://www.evidenceforjesuschrist.org/Pages/bible/dates-nt-books.htm
Dates of composition for each of the New Testament books based on the opinions of several hundred New Testament scholars . Note, instead of a single date for each book, we are now focusing on an average range of dates for each book. The average date is still shown.

A Comprehensive Listing of Dates the New Testament Books were Penned, based on the Opinions of Several Hundred New Testament Scholars is an additional chart at this link:
http://www.evidenceforjesuschrist.org/Pages/bible/dating-nt-chronological_order.htm

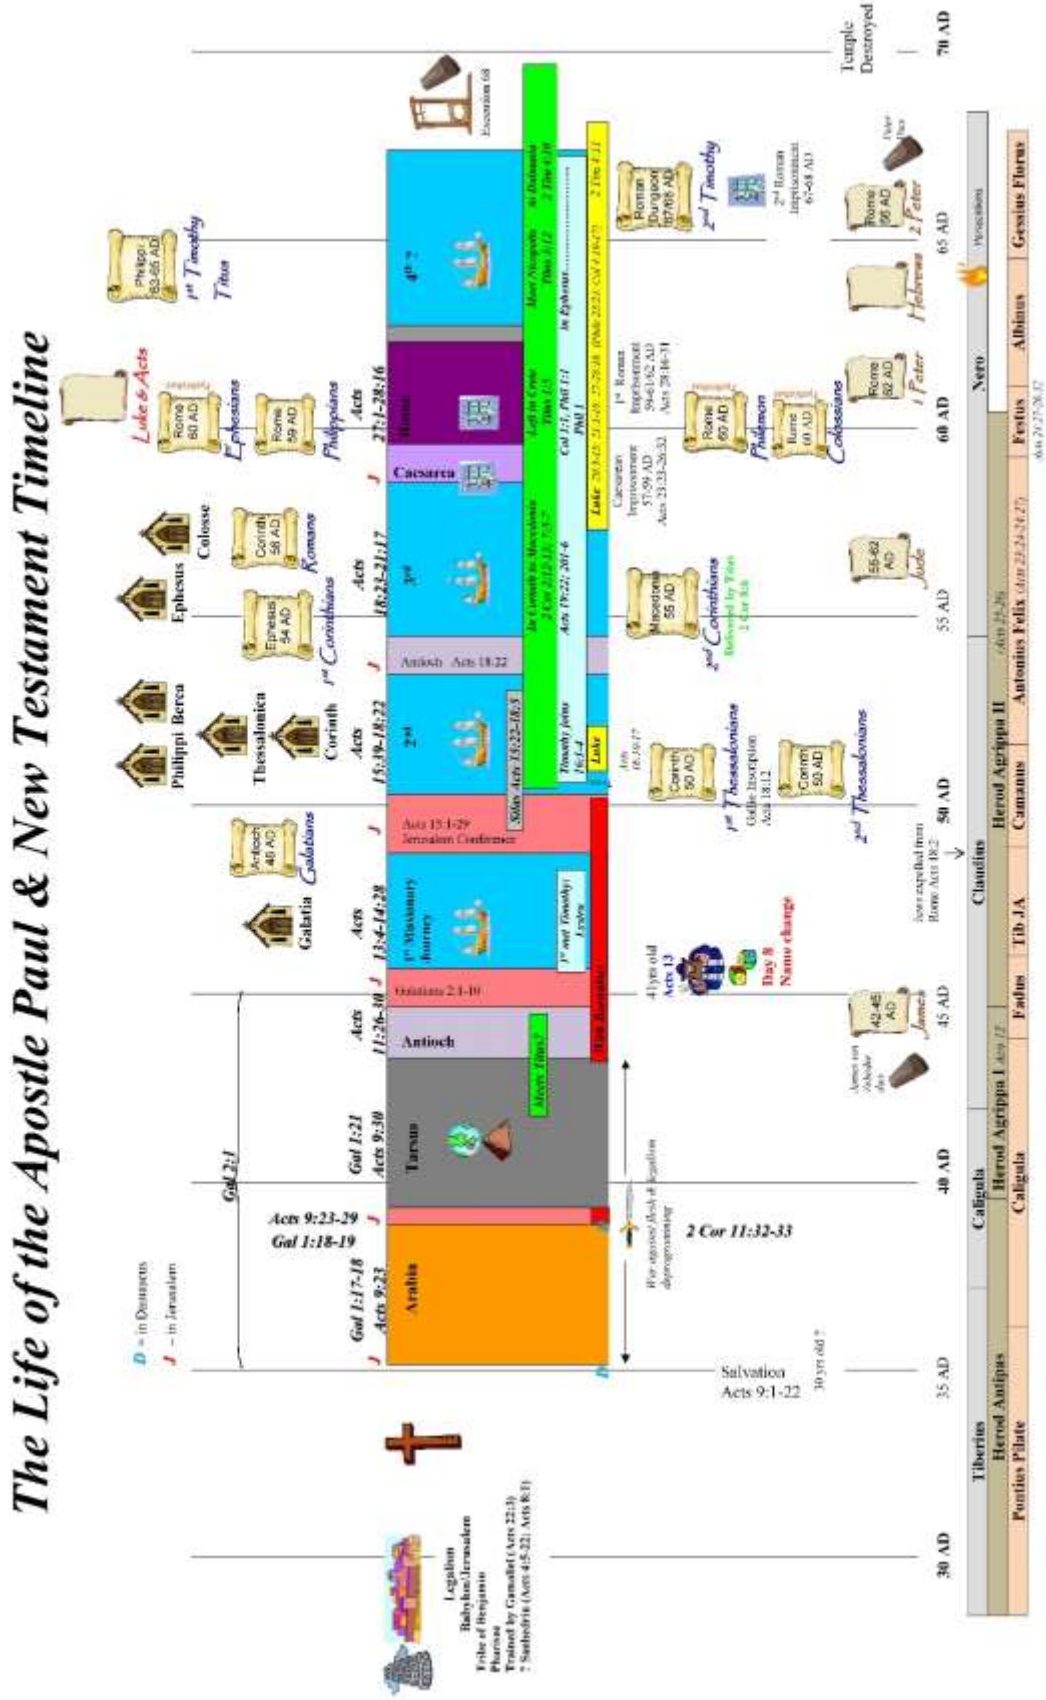
 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



Time Line: St. Paul's Epistles and Journeys

[Source: https://relevancy22.blogspot.com/2014/02/pauls-missionary-journeys-maps-and.html]

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



The Life of the Apostle Paul and New Testament Timeline

[Source: https://www.everlastingstrength.org/resources/new-testament-timelines/]

See next page for larger view…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

When was each Book of the New Testament written?

Dating the New Testament, based on the opinions of several hundred New Testament scholars.

In a court of law the testimony of one expert is considered evidence, however it is frequently offset by another expert with a differing opinion. The same thing happens in the academic community as to when the New Testament books were written. However, in the court of public opinion the testimony of several hundred New Testament scholars is strong evidence and far outweighs the opinions of radical scholars, skeptics and nonbelievers. The latter groups seek to discredit the Gospel accounts, and create another Jesus they claim was produced by legends over a long time frame. We have provided the opinions of several hundred conservative and liberal scholars in the links below to establish the weight of scholarly evidence against all such radical views. Many eyewitnesses to the Gospel accounts were still alive, when the books of the New Testament were penned.

Grace and peace, Gary Butner, Th.D. and R.A. Sickler, Ph.D.

This chart [next page] and information was previously on the Errant Skeptics Research Institute website. (errantskeptics.org)

Updated 1/1/2014 Click on the name of a book to see the scholars listed.

The data for this list will always be a work in progress and is constantly changing as it is being updated. I do grant permission for a link to this page if proper credit is given. Permission to copy this data for written publications or classes can be obtained by writing Gary Butner at DrGary777@aol.com. Copyright 2014, EvidenceforJesusChrist.org.

Data content collected and input by Gary Butner, Th.D. Original spreadsheet designed by R.A.Sickler, Ph.D.

Notes for Chart (see next page):

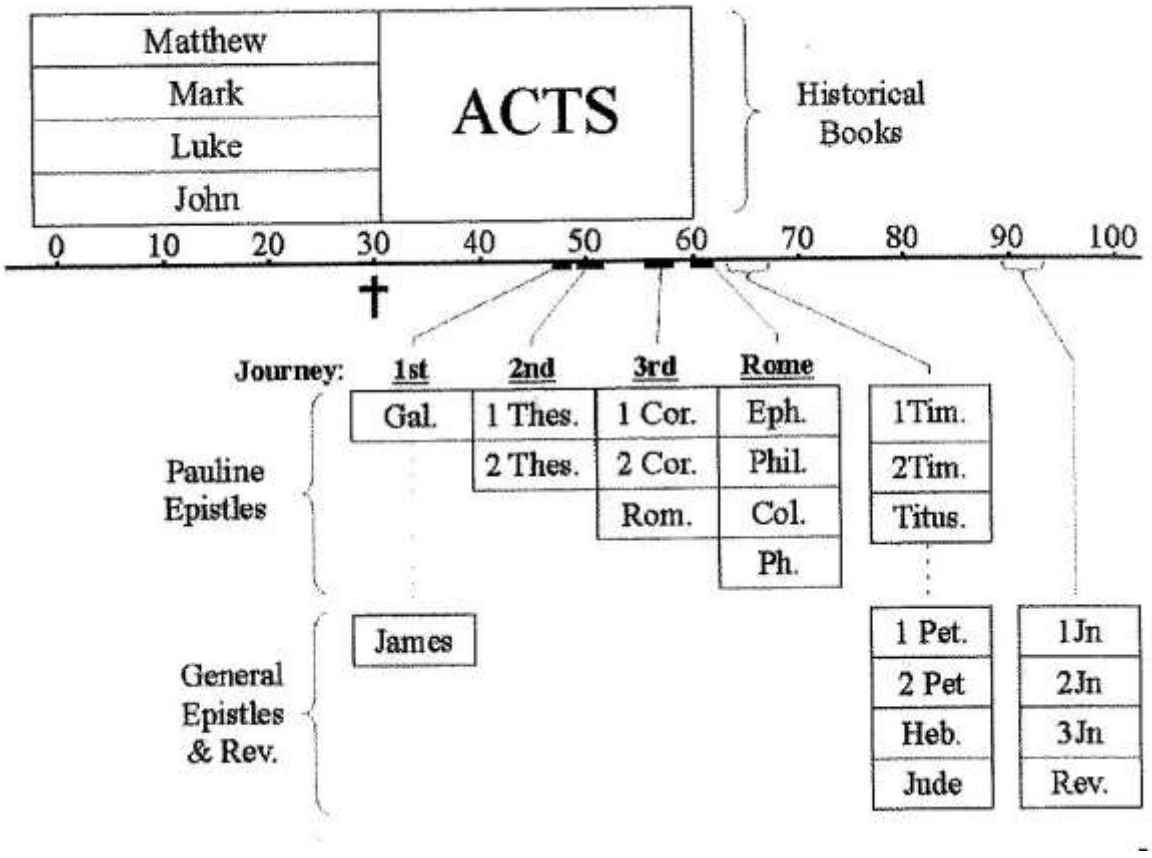
(1) John Mark - John was his Hebrew name and Mark his Latin name.
(2) Author unknown. Opinions include Luke, Paul, Barnabas, Apollos, Priscilla and Aquila.
(3) John the Apostle or John the Elder. The evidence is strongest for the apostle.
(4) There is a pronounced difference between scholars for the book of James, and so we have excluded the scholars with higher dates from Modified James.

See Chart on following page…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

…Continued from preceeding page… (See previous pages for chart notes.)

N.T. ORDER	CHRONOLOGICAL ORDER	DOCUMENT Jesus Christ's Death and Resurrection	NUMBER SCHOLARS	RANGE OF DATES EARLY	LATE		YEAR AD 33	AUTHOR
13	1	1 Thessalonians	41	50.8	51.4	A.D.	51.1	Paul
14	3	2 Thessalonians	33	51.2	51.9	A.D.	51.5	Paul
9	2	Galatians	40	50.8	52.4	A.D.	51.4	Paul
7	4	1 Corinthians	43	55.0	55.5	A.D.	55.2	Paul
8	5	2 Corinthians	39	55.7	56.2	A.D.	56.0	Paul
6	6	Romans	43	56.7	57.2	A.D.	56.9	Paul
11	8	Philippians	41	60.1	61.0	A.D.	60.6	Paul
18	7	Philemon	37	59.9	61.1	A.D.	60.5	Paul
12	10	Colossians	39	60.2	61.3	A.D.	60.7	Paul
10	11	Ephesians	38	60.8	62.2	A.D.	61.5	Paul
2	12	Date for the Gospel of Mark	72	58.9	64.3	A.D.	61.6	John Mark (1)
20	9	James	70	51.9	69.0	A.D.	60.4	James
	N/A	James (Modified)	51	47.0	54.6	A.D.	50.8	James (4)
15	13	1 Timothy	36	62.9	64.6	A.D.	63.8	Paul
17	14	Titus	32	63.2	65.0	A.D.	64.1	Paul
16	17	2 Timothy	35	65.2	66.4	A.D.	65.8	Paul
1	16	Date for the Gospel of Matthew	71	62.1	69.0	A.D.	65.5	Matthew
21	15	1 Peter	32	63.1	65.9	A.D.	64.5	Peter
3	18	Date for the Gospel of Luke	70	64.1	68.4	A.D.	66.3	Luke
19	20	Hebrews	39	64.6	70.3	A.D.	67.4	Unknown (2)
5	19	Acts	62	66.6	68.1	A.D.	67.4	Luke
22	21	2 Peter	33	67.1	69.5	A.D.	68.3	Peter
23	22	Jude	30	68.0	75.4	A.D.	71.7	Jude
4	23	Date for the Gospel of John	60	83.5	89.4	A.D.	86.5	John the Apostle
24	24	1 John	33	85.8	93.3	A.D.	89.5	John (3)
25	26	2 John	33	86.8	93.8	A.D.	90.3	John the Apostle
26	25	3 John	33	86.3	92.8	A.D.	89.6	John the Apostle
27	27	Revelation	39	90.1	94.4	A.D.	92.2	John the Apostle



See also:

Galatians

Romans

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

NT: Alternate estimated dates

(Source: http://garrettkell.com/a-biblical-timeline-for-the-old-and-new-testaments/)

More estimated dates…

Dating of the New Testament Books - In order By Most Likely Date http://www.freebeginning.com/new_testament_dates/

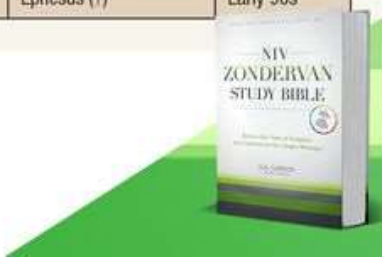
Wikipedia: Dating the Bible
https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Dating_the_Bible



The Dating of the New Testament - Norman Geisler https://www.bethinking.org/bible/the-dating-of-the-new-testament

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Summary of the New Testaement Letters (with estimated dates)

SUMMARY OF THE NEW TESTAMENT LETTERS

	LETTER	AUTHOR	RECIPIENTS	PLACE OF WRITING	DATE
	James	James, brother of the Lord	Jewish believers living outside of Israel	Jerusalem	AD 45–48 (or 60s)
First Missionary Journey of Paul	Galatians	Paul	Believers in the Roman province of Galatia or believers in the ethnic region of Galatia	Antioch or Ephesus (?)	48 (or 51–52 or 54–55)
Second Missionary Journey of Paul	1 Thessalonians	Paul	Believers in Thessalonica	Corinth	50–51
	2 Thessalonians	Paul	Believers in Thessalonica	Corinth	50–51
Third Missionary Journey of Paul	1 Corinthians	Paul	Believers in Corinth	Ephesus	54
	2 Corinthians	Paul	Believers in Corinth	Macedonia	55–56
	Romans	Paul	Believers in Rome	Corinth	57
	Ephesians	Paul	Believers in Ephesus (and in nearby cities)	Rome	60–61
	Colossians	Paul	Believers in Colossae	Rome	60–61
	Philemon	Paul	Philemon, a ministry co-worker in Colossae, and the church that met in his home	Rome	60–62
	Philippians	Paul	Believers in Philippi	Rome (or Ephesus?)	60–62 (or 54–55)
	1 Timothy	Paul	Timothy, a ministry associate working in Ephesus	Macedonia (?)	ca. 60–63
	Titus	Paul	Titus, a ministry associate working in Crete	Unknown	62–63
	2 Timothy	Paul	Timothy, a ministry associate	Rome	64–65 (or 67)
	Hebrews	Unknown	Believers in Rome (?)	Unknown	60s
	1 Peter	The apostle Peter	Believers in northern Asia Minor	Rome (?)	ca. 60–63
	2 Peter	The apostle Peter	Believers in northern Asia Minor	Unknown	63–65
	Jude	Jude, a brother of James	Unknown	Unknown	Late 50s to late 60s
	1 John	The apostle John	Believers in Ephesus and surrounding regions (?)	Ephesus (?)	Early 90s
	2 John	The apostle John	A church in the region of Ephesus	Ephesus (?)	Early 90s
	3 John	The apostle John	Gaius, a ministry co-worker	Ephesus (?)	Early 90s

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Chronological Order of Books of the New Testament.

http://www.biblestudytools.com/resources/guide-to-bible-study/order-books-new-testament.html

While no arrangement of these books can be made with absolute confidence, the following dates are sufficiently reliable to serve the purpose of the Bible student.

James - 50 A.D.
First Thessalonians - 52-53.
Second Thessalonians - 52-53.
Galatians - 55.
First Corinthians - 57.
Second Corinthians - 57.
Romans - 57-58.
Philippians - 62-63.
Colossians - 62-63.
Philemon - 62-63.
Ephesians - 62-63.
Luke - 63.
Acts - 64.
First Timothy - 65.
Titus - 65.
Second Timothy - 66.
Mark - 66.
Matthew - 67.
Hebrews - 67.
First Peter - 67-68.
Second Peter - 68.
Jude - 68.
Apocalypse - 68.
John - c. 85.
Epistles of John - 90-95.

See also:

Galatians

Romans

Dating the Books of the Bible (Catholic)

http://www.scborromeo.org/papers/dating.pdf [PDF]

See also: Diversity in the New Testament ("Genealogical" Table – NT and Apostolic Fathers)

Apostolic and Church Fathers – Writings / History

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

When was the New Testament written?

http://www.biblestudy.org/beginner/when-was-new-testament-written.html

New Testament Book Dates

Date Written (A.D.)	Book	Author
35	Matthew	Matthew
40 to 41	James	James
42	Mark	Mark
42	John	John
50	1Thessalonians	Apostle Paul
51	2Thessalonians	same as above
53 (Spring)	Galatians	same as above
56 (Late Winter)	1Corinthians	same as above
57 (Late Summer)	2Corinthians	same as above
57 (Winter)	Romans	same as above
59	Luke	Luke
61 to 63	Ephesians, Philippians, Colossians, Philemon, Hebrews	Apostle Paul
63	Acts 	Luke
63	1Timothy, Titus	Apostle Paul
63 to 64	1John, 2John, 3John	John
64 to 65	1Peter	Peter
65 to 66	2Peter	Peter
66 to 67	Jude	Jude
67	2Timothy	Apostle Paul
95	Revelation	John

Notes

 Year and Year ranges (e.g. 63 to 64 A.D.) denote when books are completed but not necessarily the year they were first recorded.

 Acts 1 to 13 was written by Luke when Paul was in a Caesarea prison (58 - 60 A.D.). Luke also penned Acts 13 to 28 when he traveled on Paul's journeys.

The opinions and hypotheses of scholars vary widely regarding when the New Testament was written or first recorded. Some view it as a collection of fables and myths verbally passed on by storytellers for generations before being recorded. Other scholars believe that [most of the N.T. books were] written before the fall of Jerusalem and the destruction of the temple in 70 A.D.

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

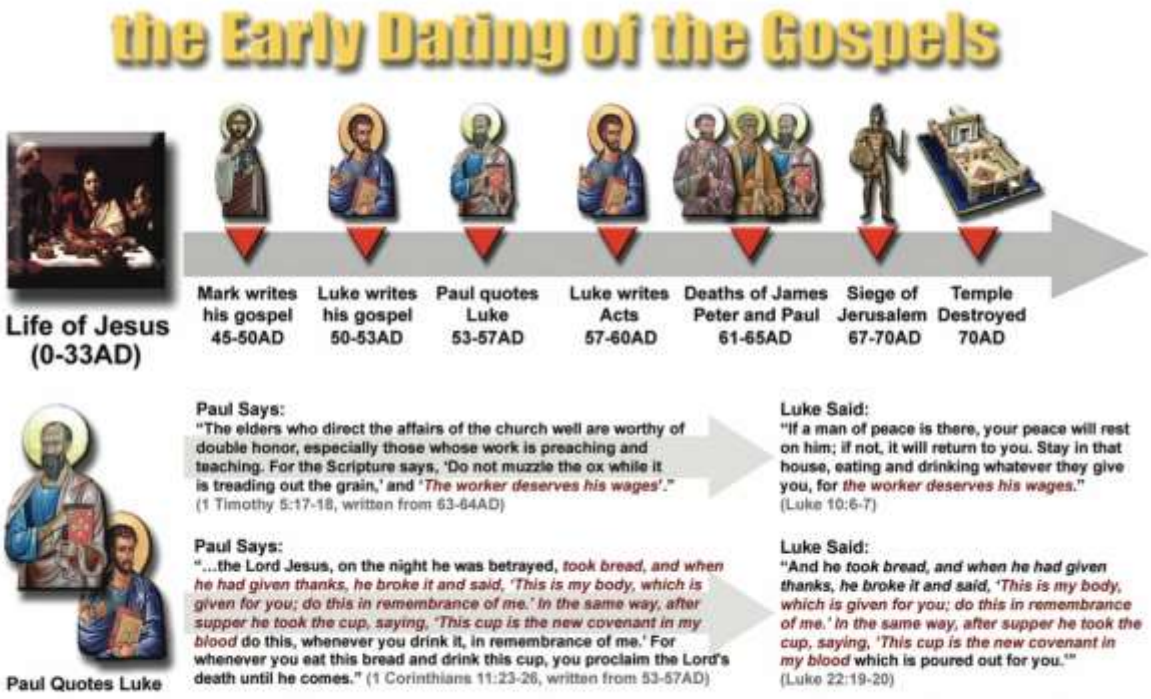
In his book named "Redating the New Testament" John A. T. Robinson demonstrates that the N.T. books were written relatively EARLY. In spite of the late dates assigned by some scholars, it is possible to determine the date of each one of the books. God and Jesus Christ specially selected several faithful, mature men to compose the most critical book man needed, and to make it available to all people, through the power of his spirit.

Amazing as it sounds, the entire New Testament was written down through the efforts of only EIGHT men! Six of these were selected apostles of Christ. Three were eyewitnesses of his life and ministry (Matthew, Peter and John). Two were the physical brothers of Jesus (James and Jude). One, the apostle Paul, was specially called to serve the Gentiles and for three years was personally taught by Christ in Arabia. The last two were Mark (who penned his Gospel under Peter's supervision), and Luke (who authored his Gospel and the book of Acts under the Apostle Paul's supervision). John the apostle had the distinguished role of collecting all the books extant and completing the canonization of the New Testament, somewhere between 96 to 99 A.D.

The New Testament was written by, or its writing was supervised by, the chosen disciples of Jesus Christ. John, who near the end of the first century A.D. was the last living apostle, was uniquely qualified to canonize the Scriptures as he was of the Aaronic (Levitical priest) blood line. We can therefore have full faith and confidence that the original Greek text, as preserved in the Byzantine text, is the very Word of God.

Dates of origin for each book of the Bible.

http://provethebible.net/T2-Integ/B-0401.htm



As a culmination of modern scholarship, the link below is a chart listing each book and letter of the Bible with the approximate date, or date range, for each work's completion (not beginning). This chart is a compilation of research by the aforementioned scholars Archer, Harrison, and Bruce. [11] It is intended to represent the general consensus of many eminent scholars' lifetime studies and, therefore, is not intended to represent any single scholar's point of view.

Authorship dates for the New Testament (all dates AD):

Matthew	50-60's	2 Thessalonians	48-62
Mark	60's	1 Timothy	62-63
Luke	50-60's	2 Timothy	67
John	60's-100	Titus	63
Acts	50-60's	Philemon	60-61
Romans	50-57	Hebrews	64-68
1 Corinthians	50-57	James	mid 40's
2 Corinthians	50-62	1 Peter	60-64
Galatians	48-62	2 Peter	64-66
Ephesians	48-62	1, 2, 3 John	60-95
Philippians	48-62	Jude	66-80
Colossians	48-62	Revelation	60's-90's
1 Thessalonians	50-57

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Timeline for the Early Dating of the Gospels

The Cumulative Case for Peter's Influence on Mark's Gospel

Taken from Cold-Case Christianity: A Homicide Detectve Investigates the Claims of the Gospels

www.ColdCaseChristianity.com

J. Warner Wallace

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Case for the Reliability of the New Testament

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The New Testament Chain of Custody

From J. Warner Wallace's book, Cold-Case Christianity: A Homicide Detective Investigates the Claims of the Gospels

The Importance of the New Testament Chain of Custody (Video)
http://coldcasechristianity.com/2015/the-importance-of-the-new-testament-chain-of-custody/

Testing the Gospels From John to Hippolytus
http://coldcasechristianity.com/2013/testing-the-gospels-from-john-to-hippolytus/

Did the New Testament Change Over Time?
https://www.appreasons.org/new-testament-change-over-time/

See also: Diversity in the New Testament ("Genealogical" Table – NT and Apostolic Fathers)

Apostolic and Church Fathers – Writings / History

Reliability of the Bible

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Paul's Journeys and Letters

Chronological chart of Paul's Journeys and Letters

Chronology of Paul's Journey and Letters

Timeline of the Apostle Paul [PDF]

Paul in Acts and the Letters (FF Bruce) [PDF]

Timeline of Paul's Life and Journeys

Annottated Chronology of Paul

Sequence of Paul's 14 Epistles

Pauline Chronology (Felix Just, Catholic)

Paul and Romans Reference Notes

1 Timothy and Authenticity (Wallace)

2 Timothy and Authenticity (Wallace)

New Testament Authenticity (Wallace)

Who Authored 1 & 2 Timothy?

Discussion of Authorship (forum)

Pseudonymous Writing #2 #3

Pauls Pastoral Letters - including looking at Authorship

Overview of 1 Timothy - including Authorship

Letters to Timothy (Spring Hill College [Jesuit] Theology Library of related Timothy resource links: first Catholic, then non-Catholic)

The Quest for the Historical Paul (Bible History Daily - Biblical Archeological Society)

The 13 "Pauline" Epistles (including, Conservative vs Liberal chart; and a summary of liberal perspectives on Pauline authorship)

Did Paul Change His Mind?

NT Letter Structure (Felix Just, Catholic)

Ephesus (which means "desirable")

See also:

Galatians

Romans

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Ephesus of the Bible

Ancient Ephesus and the New Testament

Ephesus in the Bible (including persons and verses)

Bible Verses with "Ephesus"

Bible History: Ephesus (including verses)

See also:

Galatians

Romans

1 & 2 Thessalonians
Summary & Analysis (CliffsNotes)
Relating to Work (The Theology of Work)
Theology of (BibleStudyTools)
Paul's Letters - Comparison (Felix Just, Catholic)

1 & 2 Timothy
Intro to Timothy (IVP webpage)
Intro to 1 and 2 Timothy (JesusWalk)

Study Guides

Colossians (Copeland)
Colossians (Padfield)
1 & 2 Thessalonians (Padfield)
1 Thessalonians (Copeland)
1 Thessalonians (Taylor)
Thessalonians (Stedman)

1 & 2 Timothy (Padfield)
1 Timothy (Copeland)
2 Timothy (Copeland)

1 John M-C Reference Notes

1 Peter M-C Reference Notes

Philippians M-C Reference Notes

Religious Affections: A Study of Paul's 2 Corinthian Correspondence (including Why Bad things happen to God's people; Sufficiency of God Through the Holy Spirit; etc.)

See also: The Use of Greek Philosophy by Paul in the Bible

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Commentaries

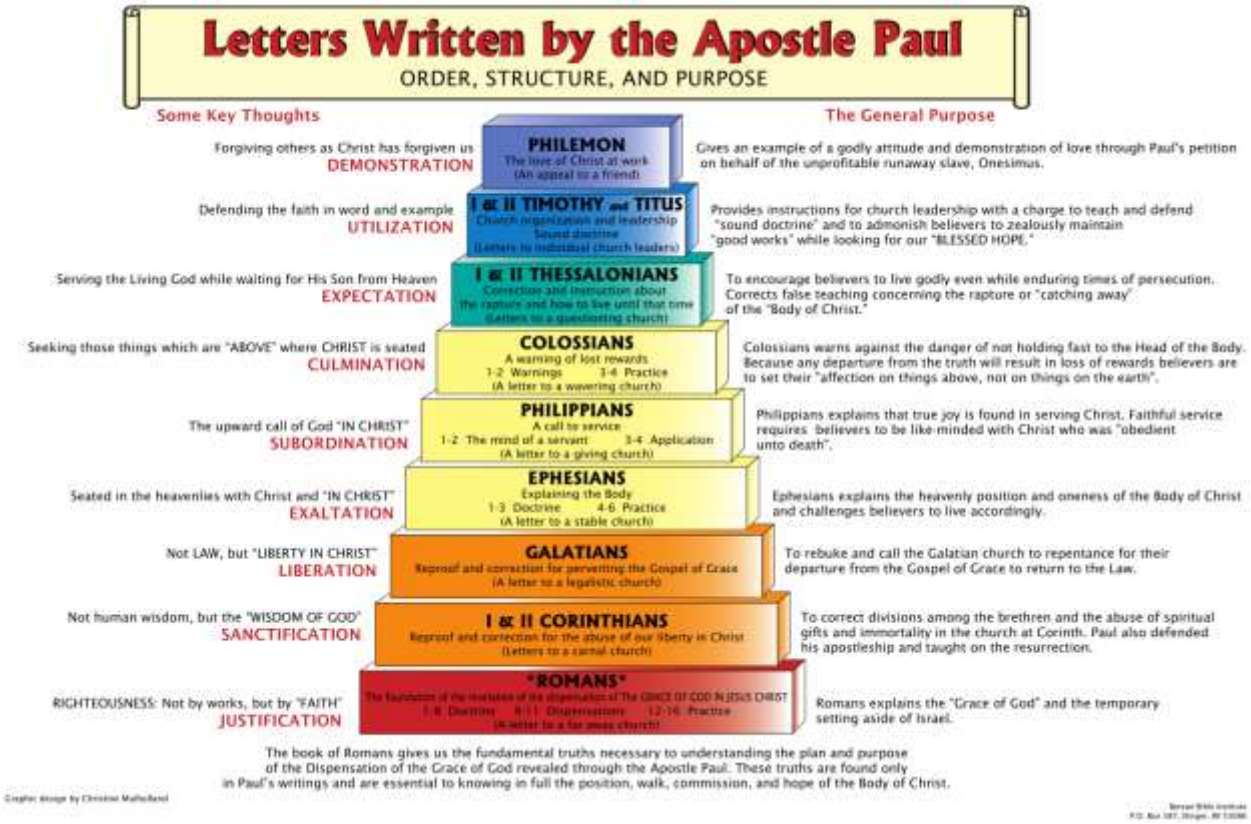
See also:
Galatians
Romans

Philippians (Constable)
Colossians (McGee)
Colossians (Constable)
1 Thessalonians (McGee)
1 Thessalonians (Constable)
1 Thessalonians (Cereghin)
1 Thessalonians, 2 Thessalonians (Constable)
Commentaries - compiled links - 1 Thessalonians, 2 Thessalonians (Precept-Austin)
1 Thessalonians, 2 Thessalonians (Early Christian Writings)
1 Timothy, 2 Timothy (Constable)
1 Timothy (Cereghin)
1 Timothy (Barnett)
1 Timothy (Stedman)
1 & 2 Timothy, Titus (De Welt)
1 & 2 Timothy+Titus (McGee)
1 & 2 Timothy; Hebrews (Cornerstone)

Free Bible Commentary, Dr. Bob Utley [About Dr. Utley: http://www.biblelessonsintl.com/founder.htm]

available at: http://www.freebiblecommentary.org/
Software: http://www.freebiblecommentary.org/CBSL_info.html
(also includes downloadable: PDFs, audio and video sermons and free verse-by-verse Bible Study Software)

Paulcast: Theology Nerd Guide - 2016



https://static1.squarespace.com/static/56f0cf8e59827e39fce79a4b/t/5851b5d4ebbd1a4bfb25831d/1481749973327/Paulcast%2C+Last+Minute+Holiday+Christmas+gift+guide%2C+2016.pdf [PDF]

See also: The Genre of New Testament Letters and Epistles

Continue on next with "Letters Written by the Apostle Paul – Order, Structure and Purpose"…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Letters Written by the Apostle Paul – Order, Structure and Purpose

[Source: http://www.bereanbibleinstitute.org/resources.html]

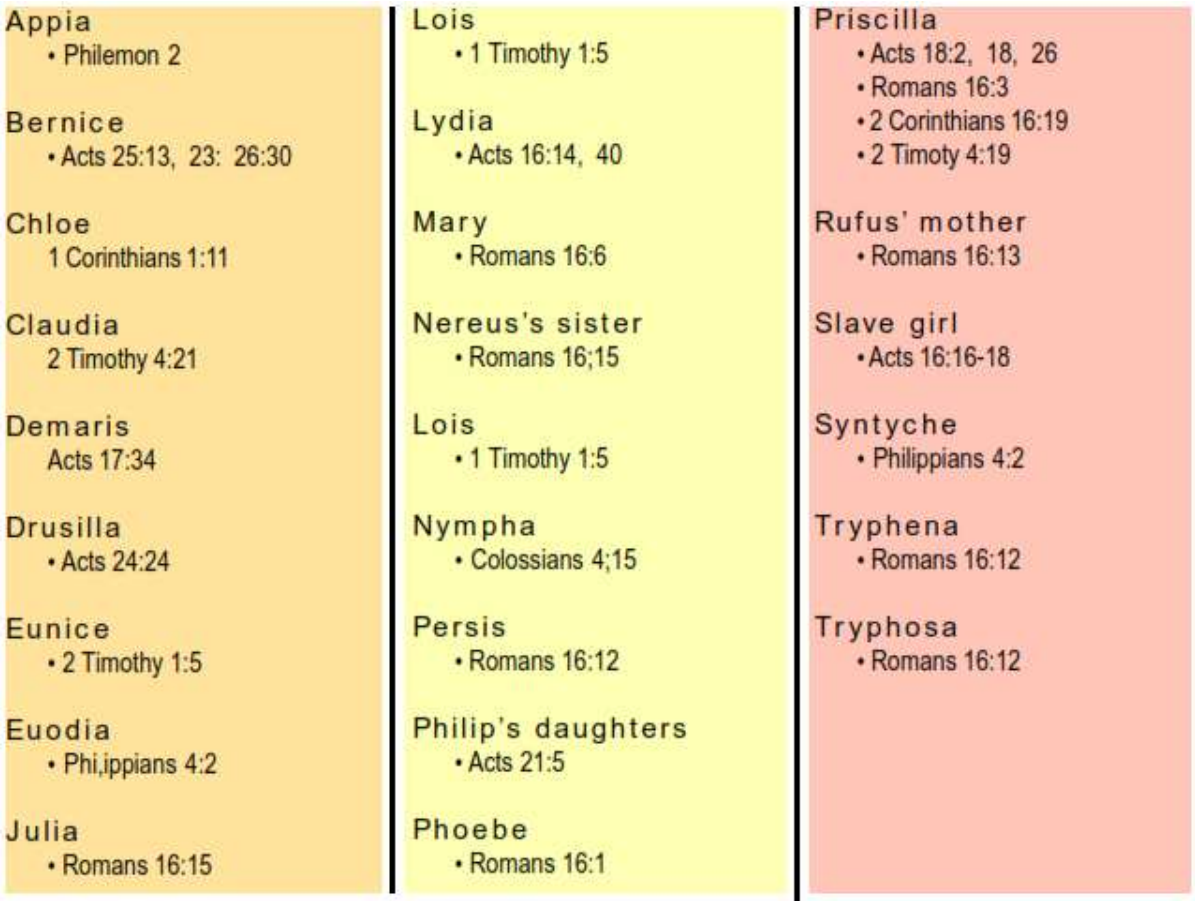
See next page for a larger view…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Letters Written by the Apostle Paul

ORDER, STRUCTURE, AND PURPOSE

Some Key Thoughts		The General Purpose
Forgiving others as Christ has forgiven us	PHILEMON The love of Christ at work (An appeal to a friend)	Gives an example of a godly attitude and demonstration of love through Paul's petition on behalf of the unprofitable runaway slave, Onesimus.
DEMONSTRATION
Defending the faith in word and example	I & II TIMOTHY and TITUS Church organization and leadership Sound doctrine (Letters to individual church leaders)	Provides instructions for church leadership with a charge to teach and defend "sound doctrine" and to admonish believers to zealously maintain "good works" while looking for our "BLESSED HOPE."
UTILIZATION
Serving the Living God while waiting for His Son from Heaven	I & II THESSALONIANS Correction and instruction about the rapture and how to live until that time (Letters to a questioning church)	To encourage believers to live godly even while enduring times of persecution. Corrects false teaching concerning the rapture or "catching away" of the "Body of Christ."
EXPECTATION
Seeking those things which are "ABOVE" where CHRIST is seated	COLOSSIANS A warning of lost rewards 1-2 Warnings 3-4 Practice (A letter to a wavering church)	Colossians warns against the danger of not holding fast to the Head of the Body. Because any departure from the truth will result in loss of rewards believers are to set their "affection on things above, not on things on the earth".
CULMINATION
The upward call of God "IN CHRIST"	PHILIPPIANS A call to service 1-2 The mind of a servant 3-4 Application (A letter to a giving church)	Philippians explains that true joy is found in serving Christ. Faithful service requires believers to be like-minded with Christ who was "obedient unto death".
SUBORDINATION
Seated in the heavenlies with Christ and "IN CHRIST"	EPHESIANS Explaining the Body 1-3 Doctrine 4-6 Practice (A letter to a stable church)	Ephesians explains the heavenly position and oneness of the Body of Christ and challenges believers to live accordingly.
EXALTATION
Not LAW, but "LIBERTY IN CHRIST"	GALATIANS Reproof and correction for perverting the Gospel of Grace (A letter to a legalistic church)	To rebuke and call the Galatian church to repentance for their departure from the Gospel of Grace to return to the Law.
LIBERATION
Not human wisdom, but the "WISDOM OF GOD"	I & II CORINTHIANS Reproof and correction for the abuse of our liberty in Christ (Letters to a carnal church)	To correct divisions among the brethren and the abuse of spiritual gifts and immortality in the church at Corinth. Paul also defended his apostleship and taught on the resurrection.
SANCTIFICATION
RIGHTEOUSNESS: Not by works, but by "FAITH"	ROMANS The foundation of the revelation of the dispensation of The GRACE OF GOD IN JESUS CHRIST 1-8 Doctrine 9-11 Dispensations 12-16 Practice (A letter to a far away church)	Romans explains the "Grace of God" and the temporary setting aside of Israel.
JUSTIFICATION



The book of Romans gives us the fundamental truths necessary to understanding the plan and purpose of the Dispensation of the Grace of God revealed through the Apostle Paul. These truths are found only in Paul's writings and are essential to knowing in full the position, walk, commission, and hope of the Body of Christ.

Graphic design by Christine Mulholland

Berean Bible Institute
P.O. Box 587, Slinger, WI 53086

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Women Associated with Paul's Life

[Source: http://www.biblecharts.org/paulahebrewofthehebrews.html]

See more resources for Paul and the NT, see my separate resource:

The Complete Sayings of Jesus (NKJV) with Appendix

(Note: NKJV is primary text to make reading easier, except when it varies significantly from the original KJV or a different translation text is clearer and/or deemed more accurate.)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Paul Collects Offerings for Judea

Activity	Text	Date
The church in Antioch sends Barnabas and Paul to Judea with relief funds.	Acts 11:29-30 ; 12:25	c. A.D. 44-47
James, Cephas, and John encourage Paul to remember the poor, which he is eager to do.	Gal 2:10	c. 44-47
Paul raises support for the Christians in Jerusalem while in Ephesus.	1 Cor 16:1-4 (cf. note on Acts 20:4)	c. 53-55
Paul raises support for the Christians in Jerusalem while in Macedonia.	2 Corinthians 8-9	c. 55-56
Paul raises support for the Christians in Jerusalem while in Achaia.	Rom 15:25-33 (cf. note on Acts 20:3)	Spring of 57
Paul is arrested when he arrives in Jerusalem to deliver the gift.	Acts 24:17 (cf. Acts 21:17-33)	Pentecost, 57

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Paul's Comfort and Conflict in Corinth

https://www.olivetree.com/blog/paul-comfort-conflict-corinth/

Paul and the church in Corinth are at odds. What does he do? Paul comforts them! Go in-depth with the introduction to 2 Corinthians with this excerpt from the New American Commentary.

2 Corinthians 1:3-7

"Praise be to the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of compassion and the God of all comfort, who comforts us in all our troubles, so that we can comfort those in any trouble with the comfort we ourselves have received from God. For just as the sufferings of Christ flow over into our lives, so also through Christ our comfort overflows. If we are distressed, it is for your comfort and salvation; if we are comforted, it is for your comfort, which produces in you patient endurance of the same sufferings we suffer. And our hope for you is firm, because we know that just as you share in our sufferings, so also you share in our comfort."

An Excerpt from the New American Commentary

Praise to the God of Comfort

Second Corinthians differs from all of Paul's other letters by opening with a blessing. "Blessed be [eulogetos] the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ". Comparing this exordium with those in Paul's other letters offers some clues about the chief concern of this letter.

Three differences emerge.

Difference One: Paul Comforts Instead of Giving Thanks

Paul usually begins his letters with a congratulatory thanksgiving that allows him to tell his readers how he is pleased with them and to identify issues for their spiritual growth. In 2 Corinthians he uses the language of blessing, encouragement, and comfort instead of thanksgiving. Although blessing and thanksgiving are comparable ideas, Paul's switch to a blessing should not go unnoticed. It offers a clue to Paul's purposes in this letter.

Difference Two: Through God Instead of Through the Church

Paul normally gives thanks for his readers because of what God has accomplished for and through them.

For example, he begins 1 Corinthians by writing, "I always thank God for you because of his grace given you in Christ Jesus" (1 Cor 1:4).

In these opening thanksgiving segments Paul usually focuses on the particular situation of the church, their faithfulness to the gospel, and their fruitfulness. His thanksgiving to God normally reminds his readers that whatever is praiseworthy about their faith and life comes entirely from God, not from their own feeble efforts.

In 2 Corinthians, however, Paul does not give thanks for what God has accomplished for and through the church. Instead, he offers praise to God for what God has accomplished for and through him. He focuses on himself, not his addressees. At the conclusion of this blessing period he asks them to join in giving prayers and thanks on his behalf for the blessing granted to him (1:11). Instead of giving thanks for the Corinthians, he hopes they will be giving thanks for him.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Difference Three: Prayer Requests at the Beginning Instead of the End

Paul regularly mentions his prayers for the church at the beginning of the letter (see Rom 1:8-15; 1 Cor 4-9; Phil 1:3-11; Col 1:3-8; 1 Thess 1:2-10; 2 Thess 1:3-12; 2 Tim 1:3-7; Phlm 4-7), and a request for prayers for himself usually occurs toward the end (see Rom 15:30-32; Col 4:3-4; 1 Thess 5:25; Phlm 22; see Phil 1:19). Here his request for their prayers for him occurs at the start of the letter.

Why the change in a pattern?

Several explanations are possible and not mutually exclusive. Paul may rejoice because God has so recently delivered him from a grave peril in Asia. This recent trauma brought him to the edge of despair as he felt unbearably crushed with all hope for life draining away (1:8). A break in the clouds of this unrelenting suffering and the ray of hope afforded by the comforting news from Titus about the Corinthians' response to his "severe letter" (7:5-11) evokes his praise for God's unexpected grace. Although this explanation for Paul's use of blessing and comfort language instead of a thanksgiving language makes good sense, the variation may be attributed instead to the letter's rhetorical purpose.

Mending Relationships: Comforting and Apologetic Tones

He begins this letter differently because of its apologetic nature. The switch from his normal thanksgiving pattern hints that the rift between Paul and everyone in the church has not yet been completely mended. He recognizes that healing after a bitter altercation takes time, and the signs of reconciliation must be expressed in concrete ways. Not until they can offer up prayers and thanksgiving to God for their apostle who experiences abundant sufferings for Christ and abundant comfort will his unshakable hope for them be fulfilled.

Consequently, Paul will not express his thanksgiving for the church until the quarrel has been fully resolved after his next visit (see 12:20-21). Just as the circumstances in Galatia did not warrant a thanksgiving (see Gal 1:6-10), so the current situation in Corinth did not warrant one either.

Mending Relationships: Paul Comforts while Defending Himself

Paul is encouraged by the Corinthians' genuine repentance after receiving the "severe letter" (7:5-12), but all is still not well. Interlopers continue to lurk in the wings, endangering Paul's relationship with the church. An opposing faction, perhaps a recalcitrant house church, still exists within the community. Paul therefore continues to defend his integrity and authority in this letter, and he focuses the blessing period on himself as part of his tactics to win back their full confidence and support. How one interprets this blessing period therefore has an impact on the view of the letter's integrity.

Mending Relationships: Paul Comforts, Paul Confronts

Although Paul lambasted the Galatians for abandoning the truth of the gospel, the situation with the Corinthians is far more ticklish. He writes to the Galatians as an aggrieved parent who feels that he has to give birth to them again (Gal 4:19). He did not believe that his good relationship with them would be irretrievably broken simply by telling the truth. The Galatians, he says, would have been willing to pluck out their eyes for him (4:16).

He therefore could be more forthright with the Galatians; not so with the Corinthians. The Corinthian correspondence reveals that some have not accepted his rebukes well. Some have questioned his motives and put the worst possible spin on his actions. Consequently, he begins this letter more gingerly. Although the relationship is on the mend, Paul saves the rebuke and warning for the end after he has established his case.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The quarrel-filled visit that ended when Paul beat a hasty retreat had not helped matters, but the bitter scolding he fired off in the "letter of tears" did bring a change of heart.

Paul's Use of Authority in the Letter to the Corinthians

Paul implies in this letter that he could resort to force and domination to exercise his rightful authority (2 Cor 10:6; see 1 Cor 4:20-21), but he prefers that the Corinthians respond willingly. His rhetorical strategy seeks first to win the readers' sympathy and support before shifting into the attack mode against those outsiders who have sabotaged his relationship with the church and those few who continue in their defiance.

Paul's Opponents in Corinth

At one time, this church may have appreciated their father in the faith, but they have now "shifted their affections, love offerings, and devotion to traveling missionaries instead." When they began to compare him unfavorably with the visiting superapostles (12:11, 16-17), it led some to question a range of issues concerning Paul. Those disgruntled with Paul belittled his apostolic gifts, claiming that "his letters are weighty and strong, but his bodily presence is weak, and his speech is of no account" (10:10). They also distrusted his motives (11:7-11) and accused him of unreliability, duplicity, and cowardice. They even began to call into question his gospel.

Roetzel summarizes the situation well:

"Suspicious and contemptuous of Paul, the Corinthians followed instead the more glamorous gospel of the new apostles and preferred their spirituality and radiant personalities to Paul."

The Best Way to Defend Yourself: Praising God

Paul's need to defend himself and commend himself best explains the shift from his usual pattern of opening with a thanksgiving for the church to whom he is writing. Rather than giving thanks for what God is doing through this church, Paul needs them to give thanks for him and what God is doing in and through him. He anticipates that thanksgiving will follow if they are reconciled enough to him to pray for him (1:11). When that happens, they will also recognize how God works in mighty ways through the affliction of God's servants.

Paul refuses to surrender this church to unscrupulous interlopers or allow the disaffection of some in the church to force him to relinquish his connection to them as their apostle. He therefore begins the letter with an indirectly self-congratulatory benediction. He is grateful for them and proud of them (6:11; 7:4, 14, 16; 9:2) and wants them to be grateful and proud of him in return. His joy will be overflowing when they understand him more completely and give thanks for what God has done and will continue to do through him.

See also*: Paul's Prayers for the Churches (and for examples of how to pray)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Paul's Prayers for the Churches

Paul's Prayers for the Churches

An Outline from The Pauline Epistles

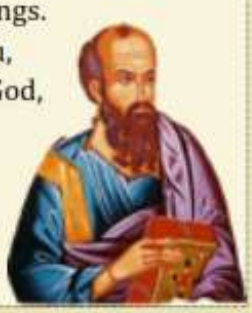
Paul's prayers can be broken down into two basic categories: thanksgivings and requests. In the thanksgivings Paul is expressing gratitude to God for His work in the lives of others while in the requests he is asking for God's continued working in those believer's lives.

Thanksgivings

Faith - The energetic work produced by faith	Col. 1:4; 1 Thes. 1:3
Love - The hard labor produced by love	Col. 1:4; 1 Thes. 1:3
Hope - The endurance produced by hope	Col. 1:5; 1 Thes. 1:3
The presence and use of "grace" gifts	1 Cor. 1:3-8
Our partnership with God and others in the gospel	Phil. 1:3-5
The testimony of their faith	Rom. 1:8

Requests

My own use of gifts to produce growth in others	Rom. 1:11-12
Mutual encouragement from each others gifts	Rom. 1:12
Fullness of joy and peace which comes from faith resulting in abounding hope through the power of the Holy Spirit	Rom. 15:13
Realization of the working of God's grace	1 Cor. 1:4
Peace within as the result of God's grace	1 Cor. 1:4
Reception of the spirit of wisdom and revelation in order to have an intimate knowledge of God	Eph. 1:17
Specific knowledge of: The hope of His calling The glory of His inheritance The greatness of His power	Eph. 1:18-23
Strengthened by the power of the Spirit in the inner man so that Christ will dwell (be at home) in our hearts and that as we are rooted and grounded in love we may comprehend the wisdom of God the love of Christ and thus be filled with the fullness of God	Eph. 3:14-19



Pray continually!
1 Thessalonians 5:17

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Requests (con't)

Increasing love
in knowledge and depth of understanding	Phil 1:9
A discernment of what is best	Phil. 1:10
Purity and blamelessness until Christ returns	Phil 1:10
Fullness of the fruit of righteousness	Phil. 1:11 Fullness of the knowledge of His will in order to walk worthy through spiritual wisdom and understanding which results in •Bearing Fruit
•Increasing in the knowledge of God •Strength in God's power resulting in steadfastness patience
joyous thanksgiving	Col. 1:9-12
Opportunity for Evangelism	Col. 4:3
Stand firm
Mature
Fully assured	Col. 4:12
Increasing love for other Christians and all men	1 Thes. 3:12
Heart established in blameless holiness	1 Thes. 3:13
Life will result in God's approval	2 Thes. 1:11
Acts of service will be effective	2 Thes. 1:11
God glorified through life and service	2 Thes. 1:12
Comfort and strength from God	2 Thes. 2:16-17
Guidance in God's Love
Christ's steadfastness	2 Thes. 3:5
Peace from God	2 Thes. 3:16

Epaphras, who is one of you and a servant of Christ Jesus, sends greetings.
He is always wrestling in prayer for you, that you may stand firm in all the will of God,
mature and fully assured.
Colossians 4:12

The Apostle Paul
Theologian & Pastor

[Source: http://www.fellowshipconway.org/pauls-prayers-handout/]

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Paul's Four Life-Changing Prayers

I. Ephesians 1:17-19a

I pray that the God of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of glory, may give you spiritual wisdom and revelation in your growing knowledge of him--since the eyes of your heart have been enlightened--so that you may know what is the hope of his calling, what is the wealth of his glorious inheritance in the saints, and what is the incomparable greatness of his power toward us who believe ….

II. Ephesians 3:16-19

I pray that according to the wealth of his glory [the Father] may grant you to be strengthened with power through his Spirit in the inner person, that Christ may dwell in your hearts through faith, so that, because you have been rooted and grounded in love, you may be able to comprehend with all the saints what is the breadth and length and height and depth, and thus to know the love of Christ that surpasses knowledge, so that you may be filled up to all the fullness of God.

III. Philippians 1:9-11

And I pray this, that your love may abound even more and more in knowledge and every kind of insight so that you can decide what is best, and thus be sincere and blameless for the day of Christ, filled with the fruit of righteousness that comes through Jesus Christ to the glory and praise of God.

IV. Colossians 1:9b-12

[I ask] God to fill you with the knowledge of his will in all spiritual wisdom and understanding, so that you may live worthily of the Lord and please him in all respects--bearing fruit in every good deed, growing in the knowledge of God, being strengthened with all power according to his glorious might for the display of all patience and steadfastness, joyfully giving thanks to the Father who has qualified you to share in the saints' inheritance in the light.

Paul's Prayers (All)

http://www.scripturezealot.com/2009/08/10/pauls-prayers/

https://www.talkjesus.com/threads/all-the-prayers-of-paul.47102/

Prayers of Paul, Topically Arranged

https://www.regent.edu/lib/research/divinity/divinity-paul.pdf [PDF]

10 Powerful Prayers the Apostle Paul Prayed Over God's People

https://churchleaders.com/daily-buzz/277022-10-powerful-prayers-the-apostle-paul-prayed-over-gods-people.html

Praying with the Apostle Paul

http://www.leadedge.org/docs/ACT_Pray_Paul.pdf [PDF]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

A Complete List of the Apostle Paul's Prayers in the Bible

http://www.kevinhalloran.net/the-apostle-pauls-prayers-in-the-bible/

http://www.kevinhalloran.net/wp-content/uploads/2016/08/A-Complete-List-of-the-Apostle-Paul%E2%80%99s-Prayers-in-the-Bible.pdf [PDF]

https://www.monergism.com/topics/mp3-audio-multimedia/all-north-american-speakers-messages/donald-carson/call-spiritual [Audio]

6 Observations from the Prayer Requests of the Apostle Paul https://www.leadershipresources.org/blog/prayer-requests-of-paul/

Paul a Pattern of Prayer

https://www.biblestudytools.com/classics/murray-ministry-intercession/paul-a-pattern-of-prayer.html

The Prayer of Apostle Paul

http://earlychristianwritings.com/prayerpaul.html

7 Prayers of Paul

https://www.guideposts.org/7-prayers-of-paul

Wonder what to say in a prayer for someone else? Wonder if you should even tell them you're praying for them? Here are seven examples of prayers that the apostle Paul sent in his letters. Most of them are to groups of people, small Christian congregations scattered throughout the Roman Empire, but the last is to one person, Philemon.

What I love about all of Paul's prayers is his affection for those he is writing to. His words are full of love and that seems a good model for any prayer.

> I don't stop giving thanks to God for you when I remember you in my prayers. (Ephesians 1:16)
>
> I'm thankful for all of you every time I pray, and it's always a prayer full of joy. (Philippians 1:4)
>
> This is my prayer: that your love might become even more and more rich with knowledge and all kinds of insight. (Philippians 1:9)
>
> May the God of hope fill you with all joy and peace in faith so that you overflow with hope by the power of the Holy Spirit. (Romans 15:13)
>
> We pray for you that you don't do anything wrong ... (2Corinthians 13:7)
>
> Night and day, we pray more than ever to see all of you in person and to complete whatever you still need for your faith. (1Thessalonians 3:10)
>
> Philemon, I thank my God every time I mention you in my prayers because I've heard of your love and faithfulness ... (Philemon 1:4)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Paul's Prayers for the Ephesian Believers (Ephesians 1:15-20; 3:14-21)

http://www.jesuswalk.com/greatprayers/11_paul_ephesians.htm [includes links to audio]

Excerpt:

Paul offers two intercessory prayers for the Ephesian believers in this amazing letter, though he was accustomed to ask God for extravagant blessings in other letters (Philippians 1:9; 4:19; Colossians 1:9-14; 1 Thessalonians 3:12; 2 Thessalonians 1:3; cf. 1 Corinthians 1:5). As you read Ephesians, he seems like he goes from prayer to praise and back again. He begins a prayer in chapter 1, then leaves it in praise of Christ. He concludes the prayer at the end of chapter 3 and caps it off with a wonderful doxology.

As I was trying to prepare a list of the great prayers of the Bible, first one then the other of these prayers was on the list, so I've decided to include them both in a two-part lesson.

These prayers are a bit intimidating. Paul uses such enthusiastic theological and spiritual language, you're almost overwhelmed. We can't pray like that ourselves -- except by imitation of the Apostle's prayer. But his marvelous prayer teaches us how we are to pray for one another. No puny sentence prayer, but a grand, visionary, far reaching prayer for our brothers and sisters that begins in their spirit and ends at the right hand of Christ and with the glory of God. Dear friends, we need -- I need -- to pray appropriate, thoughtful, meaningful prayers for other Christians. These prayers of Paul help me do that and I trust they'll help you, too.

These prayers are complex and glorious in their descriptive detail. But because of the abundance of detail, it's hard to see the forest for the trees. So before we consider these prayers in detail, let's step back and look at the big picture. I've created a bare-bones outline of Paul's prayers -- four petitions, four purposes and a doxology (at least that's one way to understand it). I realize that there are other ways to understand these prayers -- and Paul certainly isn't laying out a logical sequence -- he's praying his heart out.[1]But this will help you get a gist of it.

Petition		Purpose
Part 1 (1:17-19)
1. May he may give you the Spirit of wisdom and revelation (1:17a)		so that (en) you may know him better. (1:17b)
2. May you may receive insight (1:18a)		so that (eis) you will comprehend and appreciate your hope, your inheritance, and God's power (1:18b-19)
Part 2 (3:16-21)
3. May he strengthen your inner person by his Spirit (3:16) that is, may Christ dwell in your hearts through faith. (3:17a)		so that (hina) you can comprehend and experience Christ's love. (3:18-19a)
4. May you yourself be anchored in love (3:17b)		and so that (hina) you may be filled with God's fullness. (3:19b)
Doxology		That (dative) God may receive glory (3:20-21)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

This tells you where Paul is going in his prayer. Notice that he prays for insight, inner strength, and love for the believers, for the purpose that they will comprehend/understand truth, know God better, and be filled to overflowing with God.

Paul is praying that they will finally "get it!" -- have a breakthrough in their comprehension and understanding of what it's all about. Paul prays that their lives will be filled with God -- which is another way to say "know him" and have "Christ dwell in your hearts."

These are the ultimate prayers that shepherds pray for the flock in their care, whether it is a small group, or a class, or a congregation. These are also the kinds of prayers that one Christian prays for another…

The Prayers of St. Paul by W.H. Griffith Thomas (1914) [Recommended]
http://preparetopray.com/ptpdl237/The_Prayers_of_St_Paul.pdf [PDF]

https://archive.org/details/prayersofstpaul00thom [Online and Downloadable]

http://www.gutenberg.org/ebooks/30389 [Online and Downloadable]

http://onlinebooks.library.upenn.edu/webbin/gutbook/lookup?num=30389 [Online and Downloadable]

http://www.baptistbiblebelievers.com/LibrarybyTopics/MethodsofBibleStudybyWHGriffithThomas.aspx

The Importance of Prayer in Ephesians
http://www.tms.edu/m/tmsj6c.pdf [PDF]

Return to beginning of*: Paul's Prayers (See also: Prayer)

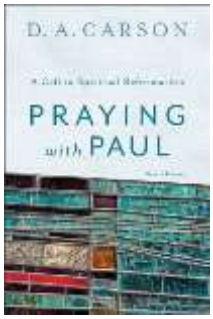
 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



Praying with Paul: A Call to Spiritual Reformation (Study Guide) (2nd Edition, 2015) (The Gospel Coalition) [Sampler]

http://s7d9.scene7.com/is/content/LifeWayChristianResources/PrayingwithPaul-Samplepdf.pdf [PDF]

8 Lessons from the School of Prayer

https://www.thegospelcoalition.org/article/8-lessons-from-the-school-of-prayer/

Editors' note: The following is an excerpt from Praying with Paul: A Call to Spiritual Reformation (2nd ed.) by D. A. Carson (Baker). In addition, The Gospel Coalition, in partnership with LifeWay, recently published a new group study curriculum for Praying with Paul, co-written by Carson and Brian Tabb.

Throughout my spiritual pilgrimage, two sources have largely shaped, and continue to shape, my own prayer life: the Scriptures and more mature Christians.

The less authoritative of these two has been the advice, wisdom, and example of senior saints. I confess I am not a very good student in the school of prayer. Still, devoting [space] to their advice and values may be worthwhile before I turn to the more important and more authoritative of the two sources that have taught me to pray.

Among the lessons more mature Christians have taught me, then, are these.

1. Much praying is not done because we do not plan to pray.

We do not drift into spiritual life; we do not drift into disciplined prayer. We will not grow in prayer unless we plan to pray. That means we must self-consciously set aside time to do nothing but pray. What we actually do reflects our highest priorities. That means we can proclaim our commitment to prayer until the cows come home, but unless we actually pray, our actions disown our words.

2. Adopt practical ways to impede mental drift.

Anyone who has been on the Christian way for a while knows there are times when our private prayers run something like this: "Dear Lord, I thank you for the opportunity of coming into your presence by the merits of Jesus. It is a wonderful blessing to call you Father. . . . I wonder where I left my car keys? [No, no! Back to business.] Heavenly Father, I began by asking that you will watch over my family—not just in the physical sphere, but in the moral and spiritual dimensions of our lives. . . . Boy, last Sunday's sermon was sure bad. I wonder if I'll get that report written on time? [No, no!] Father, give real fruitfulness to that missionary couple we support, whatever their name is. . . . Oh, my! I had almost forgotten to fix my son's bike today." Or am I the only Christian who has ever had problems with mental drift? But you can do many things to stamp out daydreaming, to stifle reveries. One of the most useful things is to vocalize your prayers. . . . Another thing you can do is pray over the Scriptures. . . . It is entirely appropriate to tie your praying to your Bible reading.

3. At various periods in your life, develop, if possible, a prayer-partner relationship.

If you know how to pray, consider seeking out someone else and teaching him or her how to pray. By teaching I do not mean set lessons so much as personal example communicated in a prayer-partner relationship.

4. Choose models—but choose them well.

Most of us can improve our praying by carefully, thoughtfully listening to others pray. This does not mean copying everything we hear. . . . Not every good model provides us with exactly the same prescription for good praying, exactly the same balance. All of them pray with great seriousness; all of them use arguments and seek goals that are already portrayed in Scripture. Some of the seem to carry you with them into the very throne room of the Almighty; others are particularly faithful in intercession, despite the most difficult circumstances in life and ministry; still others are noteworthy because of the breadth of their vision. All are characterized by a wonderful mixture of contrition and boldness in prayer.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

5. Develop a system for your prayer lists.

It is difficult to pray faithfully for a large spread of people and concerns without developing prayer lists that help you remember them. These lists come in a variety of forms. Many denominations and mission agencies and even some large local churches publish their own prayer lists. . . . Many Christians who give themselves to prayer find that, in addition to such published information, it is wise and fruitful to prepare their own lists. . . . Whatever the system, however, use prayer lists. All of us would be wiser if we would resolve never to put people down, except on our prayer lists.

6. Mingle praise, confession, and intercession, but when you intercede, try to tie as many requests as possible to Scripture.

Both theoretical and practical considerations underlie this advice. The theoretical considerations can best be set out by mentally conjuring up two extremes. The first judges it inappropriate to ask God for things. Surely he is sovereign; he does not need our counsel. If he is the one "who works out everything in conformity with the purpose of his will" (Eph. 1:11), surely it is a bit cheeky to badger him for things. He does not change the course of the universe because some finite, ignorant, and sinful human being asks him. The appropriate response to him is surely worship. . . . The second extreme begins with the slogan, "Prayer changes things." Petitionary prayer is everything. This means that if people die and go to hell, it is because you or I or someone has neglected to pray. . . . On the face of it, neither of these extremes captures the balance of biblical prayers, and both of them are reductionistic in their treatment of God. . . . Even a little reflective acquaintance with the God of the Bible acknowledges that he is not less than utterly sovereign, and not less than personal and responsive. . . . Of the various models that usefully capture both of these poles, the model of personal relationship with a father is as helpful as any.

7. If you are in any form of spiritual leadership, work at your public prayers.

Public praying is a pedagogical opportunity. It provides the one who is praying with an opportunity to instruct or encourage or edify all who hear the prayer. . . . Many facets of Christian discipleship, not least prayer, are rather more effectively passed on by modeling than by formal teaching. Good praying is more easily taught than caught.

8. Pray until you pray.

This is Puritan advice. It does not simply mean that persistence should mark much of our praying—though admittedly that is a point the Scriptures repeatedly make. Even though he was praying in line with God's promises, Elijah prayed for rain seven times before the first cloud appeared in the heavens. . . . That is not quite what the Puritans mean when they exhorted one another to "pray until you pray." What they mean is that Christians should pray long enough and honestly enough, at a single session, to get past the feeling of formalism and unreality that attends not a little praying. We are especially prone to such feelings when we pray for only a few minutes, rushing to be done with a mere duty. To enter the spirit of prayer, we must stick to it for a while. If we "pray until we pray," eventually we come to delight in God's presence, to rest in his love, to cherish his will. Even in dark or agonized praying, we somehow know we are doing business with God. In short, we discover a little of what Jude means when he exhorts his readers to pray "in the Holy Spirit" (Jude 20)—which presumably means it is treacherously possible to pray not in the Spirit.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Prayer of Paul (Personalized)

http://www.lightfromtheword.org/upload/Personalized%20Prayer%20of%20Paul.pdf [PDF]

(Father), grant me a spirit of wisdom and revelation in the knowledge of You, by having the eyes of my heart flooded with light, so that I can know and understand the hope to which You have called me, how rich is Your glorious inheritance in the saints, and what is the immeasurable and unlimited and surpassing greatness of Your power in and for me, as demonstrated in the working of Your mighty strength, which You exerted in Christ when You raised Him from the dead and seated Him at Your right hand in the heavenly, and You raised me up together with Him and made me sit down together in the heavenly sphere in Christ Jesus.

Grant me (Father), out of the rich treasury of Your glory, strength reinforced with mighty power in my inner man by the Holy Spirit; may Christ through my faith dwell in my heart! May I be rooted deep in love and founded securely on love, that I may have the power and be strong to apprehend and grasp what is the breadth, length, height, and depth of it, that I may come to know the love of Christ, which far surpasses mere knowledge; that I may be filled unto all the fullness of God.

Father, may I be filled with the full knowledge of Your will in all spiritual wisdom, and in understanding and discernment of spiritual things, that I may walk in a manner worthy of You, fully pleasing to You, desiring to please You in all things, bearing fruit in every good work and steadily growing and increasing in and by the knowledge of You. I pray that I may be invigorated and strengthened with all power according to the might of Your glory, (with) every kind of endurance and patience with joy, giving thanks to You, Father, Who has qualified and made me fit to share the portion which is the inheritance of the saints in the Light. I pray that my love will keep on growing in knowledge and every kind of discernment, so that I can determine what really matters and be pure and blameless in the day of Christ, filled with the fruit of righteousness that comes through Jesus Christ, to the glory and praise (of You, Father). Now to You, Who by the power that is at work within me, is able to do superabundantly, far over and above all that I dare ask or think, to You be glory in the church and in Christ Jesus throughout all generations forever and ever Amen!

(Ephesians 1:17-20; 2:6; 3:16-21; Phil. 1:9-11; Col. 1:9-12)

Intercessary Prayers of Paul [Some set up to be personalized] http://www.nadprayerministries.org/wp-content/uploads/2010/12/Intercessory_Prayers_of_Paul.pdf [PDF]

See also*: Prayer

Return to beginning of*: Paul's Prayers

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Paul's Prayers - An Example for Us to Follow

http://www.journal33.org/lovegod/html/p-pray.html (Main TOC)

Paul's Prayer Requests for Himself (Part 3)

http://www.journal33.org/lovegod/html/p-pray3.html

Excerpt:

There are several instances in which Paul mentions prayer requests for himself and (when applicable) for those who were with him. These requests are listed below. Note that, as far as his own life was concerned, Paul's focus wasn't that he would "have a nice day." As you examine these prayer requests, pay attention not only to the requests themselves, but also to the motives or reasons he gives, for having such prayer requests. (Example: Who did he focus his attention on?)

1. Prayer for God's help, when he (and those with him) proclaimed the good news about Jesus Christ.
    - That God would provide the opportunity for him (and those with him) to speak and be heard - Colossians 4:3.
    - That he would know what to say - Ephesians 6:19+.
    - That he would proclaim the message clearly - Colossians 4:4.
    - That he would be bold, not afraid, as he proclaimed the message - Ephesians 6:19-20.
    - That the message would be accepted by many (that it would spread and be honored) - 2 Thessalonians 3:1.
2. Prayer that what he did would be accepted by the other believers - Romans 15:31.
    - NOTE: He was bringing a gift to the poverty-stricken Jewish Christians. This gift was from the non-Jewish Christians, and was an expression of their love for the Jewish Christians. Yet because of rumors spread by false teachers and others, there was always the potential of this gift being misunderstood and not accepted in the right spirit.
3. Prayer for deliverance from people who opposed him.
    - Deliverance from those who did not trust God - 2 Thessalonians 3:2. [These people had rejected the message Paul preached and wanted to keep it from spreading to others.]
    - For deliverance from unbelieving Jews in Judea - Romans 15:30. [Along with this, he asked them to pray that his "service" (mentioned above, in Section 2 of this outline) would be acceptable to the Jewish Christians. Why? So that he would be able to visit the people he was writing to, and could do so with joy.]
4. Prayer for deliverance from difficult circumstances and imprisonment.
    - NOTE: In these three verses, Paul is not commanding them to pray this way; rather he is acknowledging that they were already doing so.
    - For deliverance from severe hardships - 2 Corinthians 1:11. Because of their prayers, God would deliver Paul (and his friends). And when this happened, many others would then be able to express gratitude to God for that deliverance. [Note: This need for deliverance from deadly hardships was an ongoing need. What Paul (and his friends) suffered went far beyond what they would naturally be able to endure. Their deliverance would be possible only because they would be relying on God, not their own strength.]
    - For deliverance from chains & death - Philippians 1:19. Paul expected that, because of their prayers, the Spirit of Jesus Christ would use the things that had happened, for his deliverance. However, his primary desire was to exalt Christ under any circumstances, whether that meant life or death (v. 20). [If it were up to him, he'd rather die & see Jesus, but for the sake of the people, he was willing to remain alive (1:21-26).]
    - For his release from prison - Philemon 1:22. He expected God to grant what they prayed, so he told them to get ready for his return.
5. Prayer that he would be able to visit the people he was writing to.
    - So that he could be a blessing to them (that they might become spiritually stronger), and that he and they could be encouraged by each other's faith - Romans 1:10-12 (see also

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

15:32). [Their growing faith/trust was well known throughout the world. This fact brought great joy to Paul - Romans 1:8.]
- So that he could help them grow even further in their faith - 1 Thessalonians 3:10. [They were already a source of joy and encouragement to him, because of their growing faith and love - 1:6-9. This desire to help them grow further was an expression of his own gratefulness and love for them.]
- NOTE 1: This encouragement worked both ways. Paul and the people he wrote to were a source of encouragement and blessing to each other.
- NOTE 2: The author of the book of Hebrews is unknown, but some believe that Paul wrote it. If we include the book of Hebrews in our list, we would have one additional request for prayer that the author might soon be able return to his friends - Hebrews 13:19.

If we look at the general context of these prayers for Paul, there are some principles we can learn. These things are briefly mentioned here. (A more in-depth look at them can be found at the end of this study - see "Appendix 2.")

1. Paul was willing to do the types of things he asked others to do. Every time Paul asked the people to pray for him, he also prayed for them. [In the passages we have examined, he expressed his desires (prayers) for them before he asked them to pray for him. In some instances, he also asked them to pray for other Christians, before giving any specific requests for himself.]
2. Every time Paul mentions a request that they were already praying for him, he focuses on God as the one who would answer their prayers. He also mentioned his prayers for them, somewhere in the letter.
3. When Paul made general comments, such as asking the people to pray "constantly" (that is, to make it an ongoing characteristic of their lives), he wasn't asking them to do anything he didn't already do. He showed them, by his own example, how they should pray: Praying for them was an ongoing part of his life (Romans 1:9, Ephesians 1:16; Colossians 1:9; 1 Thessalonians 3:10; 2 Thessalonians 1:11).

When it comes to prayer requests for Paul, it may be interesting to compare Paul's prayer focus to the people's prayer focus. The people focused on what would benefit Paul - his deliverance from enemies or his restoration to them. Paul's focus, however, was on what would benefit the people. His desire was that whatever happened to him would be for their good. They focused on Paul, as an expression of their love for him; Paul focused on the people, as an expression of his love for them. Each fulfilled the command, "Love your neighbor as yourself" (Matthew 22:39)! [Of course, when they were willing to yield their own wills (and prayer requests) to the will of their Father in heaven (who does all things for the good of those who love him - Romans 8:28), they would also be expressing love for God (Matthew 22:37).]

We should make it our desire to pray for others who are being used by God. When we do so, we are, in a sense, right there with them. As Paul told the Roman Christians, when they prayed for him, they were joining him in his "struggle" (Romans 15:30), in his work for the kingdom of God.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Paul's Prayer Request for Himself (Part 3 – a more in-depth look)

http://www.journal33.org/lovegod/html/p-pray6.html

Excerpt:

This is a more in-depth look at some of the interesting patterns we can find, when we look at the general context of the prayer requests that are made (or requested) for Paul:

1. Every time Paul asked people to pray for him, he first prayed for them. Also, in two of these passages, he first asked them to make prayer a part of their lifestyle and to pray for Christians everywhere, before he asked them to pray specifically for him. When he finally did ask them to pray for him, his primary focus was on what would result in the most good for others, rather than on what would be the most pleasant for himself.

- Romans 15:30-32 - Paul first prayed for them (1:9-12) and mentioned his prayer for the unsaved (10:1). When he asks them to pray for him, he mentions requests for things that would benefit others.
- Ephesians 6:18-20 - Paul first prayed for them (1:15-19 and 3:14-19); then he asked them to pray for Christians everywhere. Finally he asks them to pray for him, with a specific emphasis on his proclamation of the good news - something that would be of benefit to others.
- Colossians 4:2-4 - Paul first prayed for them (1:9-12); then he told them to make prayer a characteristic of their lives. Finally he asks them to pray for him, with a specific emphasis on his proclamation of the good news - something that would be of benefit to others.
- 2 Thessalonians 3:1-2 - Paul first prayed for them (1:11-12). Then he asked them to pray for him (and those with him), with a focus on his proclamation of the good news about Jesus, and people's acceptance of it. He also asks for prayer that he (and those with him) might be delivered from those who did not accept the good news.
- We do not know for certain who the human author was, for the book of Hebrews. Some people believe that Paul wrote it. If this were so, this would be the only passage in which there is no record of him first praying for the readers. But even in this passage, the author first asks them to pray for "us" - him and others - as a group, before he gives a specific request for himself. As with Paul's requests, this request is an expression of the author's love for those who were to receive his letter, for it expresses a desire that he (the author) might be able to be with them.

2. Every time Paul acknowledged the prayers of others for him, he focused on God as the one who would answer their prayers. Also, somewhere in each letter, he told them the things he prayed for them.

- 2 Corinthians 1:10-11 - Paul expected God to deliver him (and those with him) from their trials, because of the Corinthian's prayers. He tells them that many people would be filled with thanks, because of what God would do, in answer to their prayers. [He mentions his prayers for them, in 13:7, 9.]
- Philippians 1:19-21 - He expected that, because of their prayers and the help given by the Spirit of Jesus Christ, the things that were happening to him would result in his deliverance. However, his main desire was to boldly exalt Christ, no matter what came his way - life or death. [He mentions his prayers for them in 1:9-11.]
- Philemon 1:22 - He expected to be restored to them soon, as a result of their prayers. His main focus was on the need for them to be ready for him! [He mentions his prayer for them, in 1:6.]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Praying the Bible

http://davemiers.com/wp-content/uploads/2009/12/pauls_prayers.pdf [PDF]

Dave's summary based on D.A. Carson's A Call to Spiritual Reformation: Priorities from Paul and His Prayers - [Leicester: IVP, 1992 (1st Edition)]

Lessons from the school of prayer [ch1]

(1) Plan to pray; (2) Adopt practical ways to impede mental drift; (3) Develop prayer -partner relationships; (4) Choose models, but choose them well; (5) Develop a system for your prayer lists; (6) Mingle praise, confession & intercession, & tie as many requests as possible to Scripture; (7) Work at your public prayers; (8) Pray until you pray

2 Thess. 1:1–12 > The framework of prayer [ch2]

1:3-4 ESV > We ought always to give thanks to God for you, brothers, as is right, because your faith is growing abundantly, and the love of every one of you for one another is increasing. 4 Therefore we ourselves boast about you in the churches of God for your steadfastness & faith in all your persecutions & in the afflictions that you are enduring.

Look for signs of God's grace in the lives of Christians, and thank God! ... thank God that the faith of Christians is growing, that their love is increasing (Jn 13:34-35), and that they are persevering under trial.

2 Thess. 1:1–12 > Worthy requests [ch3]

1:11-12 ESV > To this end we always pray for you, that our God may make you worthy of his calling and may fulfill every resolve for good and every work of faith by his power, 12 so that the name of our Lord Jesus may be glorified in you, and you in him, according to the grace of our God and the Lord Jesus Christ.

Ask that God would count Christians worthy of their calling (ie: to become what we are not) and pray for people from eternity's perspective (eg: what do we want for people in 40 bn years)

> Pray that God would bring to fruition each Christian's good-prompted, faith-prompted purposes ... so that glory would be brought to (1) Jesus, and (2) Believers. Remember the ground of this prayer is grace.

> Pray for the revival of people, not an abstract blessing called revival.

1 Thess. 3:9–13 > A Passion for people [ch5]

3:12-13 ESV > and may the Lord make you increase and abound in love for one another and for all, as we do for you, 13 so that he may establish your hearts blameless in holiness before our God and Father, at the coming of our Lord Jesus with all his saints.

The grounds of Paul's prayer are: intense longing to be with believers, passionate affection that seeks the good of others, and delight at the report of believers' faith.

> Pray that we might be able to strength other believers, Pray for an overflowing of love among believers, Pray that believers will be strengthened in heart so they're blameless & holy at the end.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Colossians 1:9–14 > A challenging prayer! [ch6]

1:9-12 ESV > And so, from the day we heard, we have not ceased to pray for you, asking that you may be filled with the knowledge of his will in all spiritual wisdom and understanding, 10 so as to walk in a manner worthy of the Lord, fully pleasing to him, bearing fruit in every good work and increasing in the knowledge of God. 11 May you be strengthened with all power, according to his glorious might, for all endurance and patience with j oy, 12 giving thanks to the Father, who has qualified you to share in the inheritance of the saints in light.

Pray unceasingly! ... and try to link prayers of thanksgiving to prayers of petition

> Pray that God would fill believers with the knowledge of his will.

> Pray this so that believers might be utterly pleasing to the Lord Jesus. That is, that they (1) Bear fruit in every good work, (2) Grow in knowledge of God, (3) Strengthened so as to display great endurance and patience, and (4) Joyfully giving thanks to the Father.

Excuses for not praying [ch7]

Too busy; too spiritually dry; no need to pray; too bitter; too ashamed; content with mediocrity

Phil. 1:9–11 > Overcoming the hurdles [ch8]

1:9-10 ESV > And it is my prayer that your love may abound more and more, with knowledge and all discernment, 10 so that you may approve what is excellent, and so be pure and blameless for the day of Christ

Pray for excellence – that believers' love would increase, so they can discern what is best

> Pray for a pursuit of excellence, that turns on delicate choices that reflect God's values & purposes.

> For this to happen: love must increase; must perceive the difference then choose what is best; there must be positive improvement in discipleship (not mere maintenance.)

> Pray for the long view. And praise God.

Eph. 1:3–23 > Praying to the sovereign God [ch10]

1:16-18 ESV > I do not cease to give thanks for you, remembering you in my prayers, 17 that the God of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of glory, may give you a spirit of wisdom and of revelation in the knowledge of him, 18 having the eyes of your hearts enlightened, that you may know what is the hope to which he has called you, what are th e riches of his glorious inheritance in the saints, 19 and what is the immeasurable greatness of his power toward us who believe

Thank God for his intervening sovereign grace in the lives of believers.

> Pray that God's sovereign holy purposes in the salvation of his people may be accomplished. That is, that believers would know God better, and have insight to grasp certain crucial truths.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Eph. 3:14–21 > Praying for power [ch11]

1:16-19 ESV > that according to the riches of his glory he may grant you to be strengthened with power through his Spirit in your inner being, 17 so that Christ may dwell in your hearts through faith- that you, being rooted and grounded in love, 18 may have strength to comprehend with all the saints what is the breadth & length & height & depth, 19 and to know the love of Christ that surpasses knowledge, that you may be filled with all the fullness of God.

Pray for power, that through God's Spirit, in our inner being, Christ might dwell in our hearts through faith (Carson: it's true that Christ dwells in every believer from day one, but Paul prays here that we would so grow to maturity that Christ would be 'at home' in our lives).

> Ask for God's strengthening to live in the knowledge of Christ's amazing love (that is beyond knowing!)

> Remember: God is able to do immeasurably more than all we can ask or imagine!

Romans 15:14–33 > Prayer for ministry [ch12]

15:31 NIV > Pray that I may be rescued from the unbelievers in Judea and that my service in Jerusalem may be acceptable to the saints there

Pray with earnestness, urgency & persistence

> Pray for ministers of the word, that: (1) They'd be rescued from the opposition of outsiders who want to destroy their ministry, and (2) Christian leaders would find their service acceptable to those they lead.

> Praying for ministry envisions further ministry.

> Remember: Some of Paul's prayers were not answered how he would have liked.

And some other passages to guide our prayers

The Psalms (lots of them!); The Lord's Prayer (Matt 6:9–13); Prayer for more workers for the harvest (Matt 9:38); Prayer that God's word would speed ahead (2 Thess. 3:1); Prayer for bold proclamation (Eph 6:19–20)

Praying with Paul
https://www.thegospelcoalition.org/blogs/justin-taylor/praying-with-paul/

Links to a series of talks from D.A. Carson (given in 1990 in Cambridge, I believe) that led to his book, A Call to Spiritual Reformation: Priorities from Paul and His Prayers:

A Call to Spiritual Reformation: Priorities from Paul and His Prayers – Sampler (1st Edition) – (1992) [Recommended] (NOTE: There is now a 2015 2nd Edition*, Praying with Paul*) https://www.wtsbooks.com/common/pdf_links/9780801025693.pdf [PDF]

Return to beginning of*: Paul's Prayers (See also: Prayer)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

New Bible Dictionary (NBD): Paul

PAUL

I. Life

a. Background

From Paul's birth until his appearance in Jerusalem as a persecutor of Christians there is little information concerning his life. Although of the tribe of Benjamin and a zealous member of the Pharisee party (Ro 11:1; Phl 3:5; Ac 23:6), he was born in Tarsus a Roman citizen (Ac 16:37; 21:39; 22:25ff.). Jerome cites a tradition that Paul's forbears were from Galilee. It is not certain whether they misted to Tarsus for commercial reasons or were settled there as colonists by a Syrian ruler. That they were citizens suggests that they had resided there for some time.

Sir William Ramsay and others have shown that Tarsus truly was ‘no mean city’. It was a centre of learning, and scholars generally have assumed that Paul became acquainted with various Gk. philosophies and religious cults during his youth there. Van Unnik has challenged this assumption. He argues that the relevant texts (Ac 22:3; 26:4f.) place Paul in Jerusalem as a very small child; Ac 22:3 is to be read in sequence: (i) born in Tarsus; (ii) brought up at my mother's knee (anatethrammneos*)* in this city; (iii) educated at the feet of Rabban GAMALIEL the elder. As a ‘young man’ (Ac 7:58; Ga 1:13f.; 1Co 15:9) Paul was given official authority to direct the persecution of Christians and as a member of a synagogue or Sanhedrin council ‘cast my vote against them’ (Ac 26:10). In the light of Paul's education and early prominence we may presume that his family was of some means and of prominent status; his nephew's access to the Jerusalem leaders accords with this impression (Ac 23:16,20).

Of Paul's personal appearance the canonical account suggests only that it was not impressive (1Co 2:3f.; 2Co 10:10). A more vivid picture, which Deissmann (p. 58) and Ramsay (CRE , pp. 31f.) incline to credit, occurs in the apocryphal Acts of Paul and Thecla : ‘And he saw Paul coming, a man little of stature, thin-haired upon the head, crooked in the legs, of good state of body, with eyebrows joining, and nose somewhat hooked, full of grace: for sometimes he appeared like a man, and sometimes he had the face of an angel.’

b. Conversion and early ministry

While there is no evidence that Paul was acquainted with Jesus during his earthly ministry (2Co 5:16 means only to ‘regard from a human point of view’), his Christian kinsmen (cf. Ro 16:7) and his experience of the martyrdom of Stephen (Ac 8:1) must have made an impact upon him. The glorified Jesus' question in Ac 26:14 implies as much. The result of Paul's encounter with the risen Christ gives ample assurance that it was an experience of a healthy mind; and it can be adequately interpreted, as indeed Luke does interpret it, only as a miraculous act, which transformed Christ's enemy into his apostle. The three accounts in Acts (chs. 9, 22, 26) attest not only the significance of Paul's conversion for Luke's theme (cf. CBQ 15, 1953, pp. 315-338), but also, as J. Dupont and M. E. Thrall have suggested in the Bruce Festschrift , its essential importance for Paul's Christology and his interpretation of his ministry to the Gentiles. Cf. Kim, pp. 135-138, 170ff., 338.

Apart from an interval in the Transjordan desert, Paul spent the 3 years following his baptism preaching in Damascus (Ga 1:17; Ac 9:19ff.). Under pressure from the Jews he fled to Jerusalem, where Barnabas ventured to introduce him to leaders of the understandably suspicious Christians. His ministry in Jerusalem lasted scarcely 2 weeks, for again certain Hellenistic Jews sought to kill him. To avoid them, Paul returned to the city of his birth, spending there a ‘silent period’ of some 10 years. No doubt it is silent only to us. Barnabas, hearing of his work and remembering their first meeting, requested Paul to come to

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Antioch to help in a flourishing Gentile mission (Ga 1:17ff.; Ac 9:26ff.; 11:20ff.). These newly named 'Christians' soon began their own missionary work. After a year of notable blessing Paul and Barnabas were sent on a 'famine visit' to help stricken colleagues in Judaea.

c. Mission to Galatia—The Council of Jerusalem—Mission to Greece

Upon their return from Jerusalem—about AD 46—Paul and Barnabas, commissioned by the church in Antioch, embarked on an evangelistic tour. It took them across the island of Cyprus and through 'S Galatia' (Ac 13-14). Their strategy, which became a pattern for the Pauline missions, was to preach first in the synagogue. Some Jews and Gentile 'Godfearers' accepted the message and became the nucleus for a local assembly. When the mass of Jews rejected the gospel, sometimes with violence, the focus of the preaching shifted to the Gentiles (cf. Ac 13:46f.). Despite these perils and the defection at Perga of their helper, John Mark, the mission succeeded in establishing a Christian witness in Pisidian Antioch, Iconium, Lystra, Derbe and possibly Perga.

Meanwhile the influx of Gentiles into the church raised serious questions concerning their relations to Jewish laws and customs. A number of Jewish Christians were insisting that Gentiles must be circumcised and observe the Mosaic law if they were to be received 'at par' in the Christian community. Upon his return to Antioch (c. AD 49), Paul, seeing in this Judaizing movement a threat to the very nature of the gospel, expressed his opposition in no uncertain terms. First, he rebuked Peter publicly (Ga 2:14), after the latter, to avoid a breach with certain Judaizers, had separated himself from Gentile Christians. Secondly, hearing that the Judaizing heresy was infecting his recently established churches, Paul wrote a stinging letter of warning to the Galatians in which the Pauline credo, 'Salvation by grace through faith', was forcefully presented.

These events in Antioch gave rise to the first great theological crisis in the church. To resolve the problems which it raised, the church in Antioch sent Paul and Barnabas to confer with the 'apostles and elders' in Jerusalem (c. AD 50, Ac 15). The ensuing council gave the judgment that Gentiles should have 'no greater burden' than to abstain from food offered to idols, bloodmeat, meat from strangled animals and unchastity (or incest marriage). The effect of this decision was to sustain Paul's contention that Gentiles were under no obligation to keep the Mosaic law. The restrictions mentioned seem to have been principally for local application (cf. 1Co 8) and as an aid to Jewish-Gentile relations.

Because of differences with Barnabas (over taking John Mark with them again) Paul took a new companion, Silas, on his 2nd missionary tour (Ac 15:40-18:22). From Antioch they travelled overland to the churches of 'S Galatia' and at Lystra added young Timothy to the party. Forbidden by the Holy Spirit to evangelize W, they journeyed N through 'N Galatia', where some converts may have been made (cf. Ac 16:6; 18:23). At Troas Paul in a vision saw a 'man of Macedonia' beckoning to him. Thus his evangelization of Greece began. In Macedonia missions were established in Philippi, Thessalonica and Beroea; in Achaia, or S Greece, Athens and Corinth were visited. In the latter city Paul remained almost 2 years founding a Christian fellowship that was to be the source of both joy and trial in the future. Through his co-workers (Luke the physician joined the party in Troas) and by correspondence (the Epistles to the Thessalonians) he kept in touch also with the struggling young churches in Macedonia. The Holy Spirit now moved Paul to turn his eyes once more upon the earlier forbidden province of Asia. Departing from Corinth, he stopped briefly at Ephesus, the commercial metropolis of Asia, and left as an advance party his Corinthian colleagues Priscilla and Aquila. In a quick trip back to Antioch— via Jerusalem—Paul completed his 'second missionary journey' and, after a final sojourn in Antioch, prepared to move his base of operation W to Ephesus.

d. The Aegean ministry

In many ways the Aegean period (c. AD 53-58; Ac 18:23-20:38) was the most important of Paul's life. The province of Asia, so important for the later church, was evangelized; and the Christian outposts in Greece secured. During these years he wrote the Corinthian letters, Rom. and perhaps one or more of the Prison

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Epistles (Eph., Phil., Col., Phm.), which in the providence of God were to constitute a holy and authoritative Scripture for all generations. For the apostle this was a time of triumph and defeat, of gospel proclamation and threatening heresies, of joy and frustration, of activity and prison meditation. The risen Christ used all these things to mould Paul into his image and to speak through Paul his word to the church.

From Antioch Paul travelled overland through the familiar Galatian region to Ephesus. There he met certain 'disciples', including Apollos, who had known John the Baptist and, presumably, Jesus (Ac 18:24ff.). On this foundation the church grew, and God performed such extraordinary miracles that certain Jewish exorcists began, without success, to use the name of 'Jesus whom Paul preaches'. Opposition from devotees of the city's patron goddess, Artemis (Diana), was soon aroused; and Demetrius, a prosperous idol-maker, succeeded (from motives other than piety) in inciting the people to riot. Paul doubtless had made a number of short trips from Ephesus; he took this occasion, some 3 years after his arrival, to make a final visit to the churches in the Aegean area. Through Troas he came to Macedonia, where he wrote 2 Cor. and, after a time, travelled S to Corinth. There he spent the winter and wrote a letter to the 'Romans' before retracing his steps to Miletus, a port near Ephesus. After a touching farewell Paul, 'bound in the Spirit' and under threatening clouds, sailed towards Jerusalem and almost certain arrest. This did not deter him, for Asia had been conquered and he had visions of Rome.

e. The Caesarean and Roman imprisonment—Paul's death

Paul disembarked at Caesarea and, with a collection for the poor, arrived at Jerusalem at Pentecost (Ac 21:23f.; cf. 1Co 16:3f.; 2Co 9; Ro 15:25ff.). Although he was careful to observe the Temple rituals, Jewish pilgrims from Ephesus, remembering 'the apostle to the Gentiles', accused him of violating the Temple and incited the crowds to riot. He was placed under arrest but was permitted to address the crowd and later the Sanhedrin.

To prevent his being lynched, Paul was removed to Caesarea, where FELIX , the Roman governor, imprisoned him for 2 years (c. AD 58-60, Ac 23-26). At that time Festus, Felix's successor, indicated that he might give Paul to the Jews for trial. Knowing the outcome of such a 'trial', Paul, as a Roman citizen, appealed to Caesar. After a moving interview before the governor and his guests, King Agrippa and Bernice, he was sent under guard to Rome. Thus, under circumstances hardly anticipated, the risen Christ fulfilled the apostle's dream and his own word to Paul: 'You must bear witness also at Rome' (Ac 23:11). Paul had a stormy sea-voyage and, after being wrecked, spent the winter on Malta (c. AD 61). He reached Rome in the spring and spent the next 2 years under house-arrest 'teaching about the Lord Jesus Christ quite openly' (Ac 28:31). Here the story of Acts ends, and the rest of Paul's life must be pieced together from other sources. (A helpful survey of the apostolic age, and Paul's place in it, is F. F. Bruce, New Testament History , 1969.)

Most probably Paul was released in AD 63 and visited Spain and the Aegean area before his rearrest and death at the hands of Nero (c. AD 67). 1 Clement (5. 5-7;? AD 95), the Muratorian Canon (c. AD 170), and the apocryphal (Vercelli) Acts of Peter (1. 3; c. AD 200) witness to a journey to Spain; and the Pastoral Epistles appear to involve a post-Acts ministry in the East. To the end Paul fought the good fight, finished the course and kept the faith. His crown awaits him (cf. 2Ti 4:7f.).

II. Chronology

a. General reconstruction

The book of Acts, augmented with data from the Epistles and from Jewish and secular sources, continues to serve as the chronological framework of most scholars. Its essential compatibility with the sequence of Paul's mission, detectable (in part) in his letters, is evident (cf. T. H. Campbell, JBL 74, 1955, pp. 80-87). However, its sketchiness and chronological vagueness, even in those periods treated, is increasingly conceded; and there is a growing willingness to interpolate (e.g. an Ephesian imprisonment) into the framework from other data or reconstructions. Fixed dates with secular history are not numerous. The most certain is the proconsulship of Gallio (cf. Ac 18:12), which may be fixed in AD 51-2 (Deissmann) or AD 52-3 (Jackson and Lake; cf. K. Haacker, BZ 16, 1972, pp. 252-255). If in Ac 18:12 Gallio had only recently assumed office (Deissmann), Paul's sojourn in Corinth may be dated between the end of AD 50 and the autumn AD 52. This accords with the 'recent' expulsion of Priscilla and Aquila from Rome (Ac 18:2), which may be dated c. AD 50 (Ramsay, SPT , p. 254). The accession of Festus (Ac 24:27) is often placed in AD 59 or 60. But the lack of any clear evidence leaves the matter uncertain (cf. C. E. B. Cranfield, Romans , ICC , 1975, pp. 14f.; Robinson, pp. 43-46).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Besides the three dates above, the mention of King Aretas of Nabatea (2Co 11:32), the famine in Judaea (Ac 11:28) and Paul's trip to Spain and martyrdom in Rome under Nero (Ro 15:28; 1 Clement 5; Eus., EH 2. 25-3. 1) provide some less specific chronological data as follows. First, Damascus coins showing Roman occupation are present until AD 33, but from AD 34 to 62 they are lacking; this places a terminus a quo for Paul's conversion at AD 31 (i.e. AD 34 minus 3; cf. Ga 1:18; ICC on 2Co 11:32). (But the Nabateans apparently took control at the accession of Caligula in AD 37; cf. A. H. M. Jones, The Cities of the Eastern Roman Provinces 2, 1971.) Secondly, Josephus (Ant. 20.101) notes a severe famine c. AD 44-48, probably to be located in AD 46. Thirdly, from tradition Paul's death may be dated with some probability in the latter years of Nero, c. AD 67.

b. The relation of Acts and Galatians

The only fully satisfying chronology is one in which there is a consensus of Acts, the Epistles and extra-biblical sources. One continuing problem for such a synthesis has been the relation between Acts and Galatians. The identification of Paul's visit to Jerusalem in Ga 1:18 with Ac 9:26ff. is seldom questioned: the second visit in Ga 2:1ff. poses the basic problem. Three views are current: Ga 2 equals Ac 15, or Ac 11:27-30, or Ac 11 and 15. In the past the first view has commanded the largest advocacy (cf. E. de W. Burton, The Epistle to the Galatians , 1921, pp. 115ff.), and it continues to attract some commentators (cf. H. Schlier, An die Galater , 1951, Pp. 66ff.; H. Ridderbos, Galatians , 1953, pp. 34f.). The following objections, among others, have combined to undermine it: Ga 2 pictures a second visit and a private meeting without reference to any document; Ac 15 is a third visit involving a public council and culminating in an official decree. Many scholars regard it as incredible that Gal. would, in a highly relevant context, omit mention of the Apostolic Council and decree.

The second view, often associated with the S Galatian theory, revives an interpretation of Calvin and removes a number of these objections. Ac 11 is a second visit, by revelation, and concerned with the poor (cf. Ga 2:1-2,10); the Apostolic Council in Ac 15 occurs after the writing of Gal. and, therefore, is not germane to the problem. Advanced in modern times by Ramsay (SPT , pp. 54ff.) and recently advocated by Bruce (BJRL 51, 1968-9, pp. 305ff.; 54, 1971-2, pp. 266f.), it is probably the prevailing view among British scholars (cf. C. S. C. Williams, The Acts of the Apostles , 1957, pp. 22ff.).

Dissatisfied with both alternatives, most Continental writers (e.g. Goguel, Jeremias), followed by a number in Britain and America (e.g. K. Lake, A. D. Nock), regard Ac 11 and Ac 15 as duplicate accounts of Ga 2, which Luke, using both sources, failed to merge (cf. Haenchen, pp. 64f., 377). Against Ramsay, Lake urges that if the Judaizing problem is settled in Ac 11 (= Ga 2), Ac 15 is superfluous. Ga 2:9, however, pictures not a settlement but only a private, tacit approval of Paul's gospel and is incidental to the purpose of the visit which, as Lake admits, is the 'care of the poor' (BC , 5, pp. 201f.). Haenchen (p. 377) rejects Ramsay's 'crucial' application of Ga 2:10 to the famine visit. He may be correct in identifying the 'poor' with the Gentile mission (Ga 2:9), but it scarcely has the vital significance which he attributes to it. Ramsay's reconstruction, even with some exegetical gnats, remains the more probable alternative. Basically the view identifying Ac 11 and Ac 15 arises from the traditional equation of Ga 2 and Ac 15, and also from an excessively negative estimate of Luke's acquaintance with and interpretation of the primary sources. Since Ga 2 and Ac 11 provides 'a perfectly clear historical development' (W. L. Knox, The Acts of the Apostles , 1948, p. 49), the other is unnecessarily complex. Other views of the problem are expressed by T. W. Manson (BJRL 24, 1940, pp. 58-80), who identifies Ga 2 with a visit prior to Ac 11, and M. Dibelius (Studies in Acts , 1956, p. 100), whose excessive tendenz criticism denies to both Ac 11 and Ac 15 any claim to historicity.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

c. A new reconstruction

Convinced that the Acts framework is unreliable, John Knox (Chapters in a Life of Paul , 1950, pp. 74-88) offers an imaginative chronological reconstruction from the evidence of the letters. A 14-year 'silent period' (AD 33-47) is impossible; therefore, the apostle's missionary activities and some letters are largely to be placed between his first (AD 38; Ga 1:18) and second (AD 51; Ga 2 = Ac 15) visits to Jerusalem. The final tour ends with his 'collection visit' and arrest (AD 51-3; Ro 15:25; 1Co 16:3f.). Why a silent period (which means simply that it yields no extant letters and did not fit Luke's theme) is so impossible is not readily apparent; and the traditional equation of Ac 15 and Ga 2 also is open to question. Knox's fertile mind has found here more admirers than followers, for 'it is difficult to exchange tradition with imagination (as we find it in Acts) for imagination (however reasonable) without tradition' (Davies, TCERK , p. 854). Nevertheless, further attempts have been solely from the letters. Cf. Kümmel, INT , pp. 253f.; G. Lüdemann, Paulus der Heidenapostel , 1979.

III. History of criticism

a. Early developments

In a brilliant historical survey Albert Schweitzer (Paul and his Interpreters; cf. also Feine, Paulus , pp. 11-206; Ridderbos, Paul , 1976, pp. 13-43) traces the development of critical studies in Germany following the Reformation. For the orthodox, Scripture sometimes was little more than a mine of credal proof texts; exegesis became the servant of dogma. The 18th century witnessed a reaction by pietists and rationalists, who, each for his own purpose, sought to distinguish exegesis from credal conclusions. Philological exegesis and the interpretation of Scripture by Scripture became normative for scientific interpretation.

This development perhaps finds its most important expression in J. S. Semler, who, with J. D. Michaelis, pioneered the development of literary-historical criticism. His 'Prolegomena' to theological hermeneutics, 'Paraphrases' of Rom. and Cor., and other writings emphasize that the NT is a temporally conditioned document in which the purely cultural references are to be distinguished and/or eliminated. Philology exists to serve historical criticism. Our copies of Paul's letters have a 'church liturgy' format and we must, then, face the possibility that they originally had a different form. Specifically, Semler suggests that Ro 15 and 16; 2Co 9; 12:14-13:14 were separate documents, later incorporated into the larger Epistles. Foreshadowing the conclusions of F. C. Baur, Semler contrasts Paul's non-Jewish ideas with the Jewish-Christian party whom the apostle opposed; the General Epistles reflect an effort to mediate in this conflict. On questions of authorship a trend appeared in J. E. C. Schmidt (1805), who, on literary grounds, doubted the authenticity of 1 Tim. and 2 Thes. Schleiermacher (1807), Eichhorn (1812), and De Wette (1826) brought 2 Tim., Tit. and Eph. under question.

b. The Tübingen School

In 19th-century Germany exegesis was fully transformed from the 'servant of dogma' to the 'servant of scientific philosophy' (cf. Kümmel, Problems , pp. 130-143; S. Neill, The Interpretation of the New Testament, 1861-1961 , 1964, pp. 10-28). Most significant in this regard for Pauline studies was F. C. Baur of Tübingen. He was not content merely to test the authenticity of ancient documents, a popular practice since the Renaissance. His was a 'positive criticism' which sought to find the documents' true historical setting and meaning. In Symbolik und Mythologie , the book which brought about his faculty appointment, he revealed the set of his mind and of his future work with the declaration that 'without philosophy history seems to me for ever dead and mute' (1. xi). In this matter Baur found in Hegelian dialectic—which viewed all historical movement as a series of theses (advance), antitheses (reaction) and syntheses (= a new thesis)—an appropriate key to interpret the history of the apostolic age (cf. Ellis,

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Prophecy , pp. 86-89; Haenchen, pp. 15-24). He had argued earlier (1831) that 1Co 1:12 depicted a conflict between Pauline-Gentile and Petrine-Jewish Christianity. He later saw in Acts and the smaller Pauline Epistles and in the 'Gnostic' opponents of 'the so-called Pastoral letters' (1835) a more developed stage of the conflict in which, in the fight against Gnosticism, the original Pauline 'thesis' and Petrine 'antithesis' were finally resolved by the late 2nd century into an early Catholic 'synthesis'. In this 'tendency criticism' all NT writings which 'tended' towards compromise between Paul and the original apostles were viewed as later attempts to read back a subsequent unity into the apostolic period. After Baur's thoroughgoing scything only five NT documents remained uncontested witnesses from the apostolic period. Apart from Rev. all were Paul's: Rom., Cor. and Gal. The then current literary analysis of Paul's letters favoured Baur's reconstruction and, in turn, the latter accentuated and confirmed the suspicions of the more extreme literary critics. The Tübingen school rapidly became the dominant factor in NT criticism.

Using Baur's logic and sparked by Bruno Bauer's commentary on Acts (1850), an ultraradical school questioned the genuineness of all Pauline literature. First, Acts knows no Pauline letters, and its simple picture of the apostle may be more primitive than the letters; disagreements even within Rom. and Gal. suggest several hands and a later time. Secondly, if Pauline thought (Paulinism) is the Hellenization of Christianity, as Baur thought, is it possible that this was accomplished so quickly and by one man? Could anti-Jewish feeling or Paul's high Christology have developed in a Palestinian-based church so soon after Jesus' death? No; the conflict itself is the climax of a long development, and Paulinism is to be identified with a 2nd-century Gnostic party who used the apostle's 'letters' as an authoritative vehicle for their own ideas. Why letters? Because apostolic letters already had a position of authority. Why Paul? This is impossible to say.

For all their logic the radicals succeeded only in convincing themselves. The citation of Paul in 1 Clement (? AD 95) and Ignatius (AD 110), and the neglect of Paulinism and lack of any anti-Jewish conflict in the post-apostolic literature were fatal to their argument. The omission in Acts of Pauline literary activity was a (not very strong) argument from silence. The net result of the 'ultra-Tübingen school' was to undermine Tubingen itself. For, within their common assumption that Paul was the Hellenizer of Christianity and that Hegel supplied the key to history, the radicals had the better argument.

Baur's views came under attack from the conservatives (e.g. J. C. K. von Hofmann) and the followers of Schleiermacher (e.g. Ewald); perhaps the cruellest and most telling blow was from A. Ritschl, a former disciple. Both Ritschl and Von Hofmann rejected the alleged hostility between Paul and the original disciples. The latter's emphasis upon the unity of apostolic teaching was in the next century to find renewed expression in the writings of P. Feine and A. Schlatter and in the kerygmatic theology of C. H. Dodd. A moderating literary criticism, even among Baur's disciples (e.g. Pfleiderer), revised the estimate of genuine Pauline Epistles sharply upward. Apart from the Pastorals, the majority excluded only 2 Thes. and Eph., and their acceptance (e.g. by Harnack, Jülicher) was no longer a mark of conservatism.

With its literary and philosophical presuppositions undermined, the influence of Tübingen waned. Nevertheless, by tying literary analysis to an imaginative philosophical synthesis Baur, whom Godet called Semler redivivus , dominated NT criticism (as Semler never did) for half a century. Again, although his own exegesis proved to have a philosophical bias unacceptable to later historians (and to all committed to a theistic interpretation of history), Baur brought into prominence an inductive historical approach to earliest Christianity and freed research from a tradition which came to much of the data with its conclusions already assumed. For this, all students can appreciate his labours. Finally, because Baur's reconstruction placed in bold relief the problems facing historians of the apostolic age, he largely set the course of future studies. What was the relationship between Paul and Jesus? What was the influence of Jewish and Hellenistic thought in the apostolic church? What are the proper philosophical presuppositions for a study of Christian origins? The Tübingen school died, and there is no apparent sign of an early resurrection. (Its airing in S. G. F. Brandon's The Fall of Jerusalem and the Christian Church , 1951, does not appear to have imparted life.) But the forces which gave it birth continued fecund and, for a corpse, Tübingen retained a remarkable familiarity with the following generations.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

c. British contributions in the 19th century

British (and American) scholars interacted with the Tübingen reconstruction; but, with one or two exceptions (e.g. S. Davidson), they did not find it persuasive. Likewise, the Pauline Corpus (minus Heb.) continued to find acceptance. In America some rejected the Pastorals (e.g. B. W. Bacon, A. C. McGiffert); Britain following J. B. Lightfoot (Biblical Essays , 1904, pp. 397-410), generally accepted them in a post-Acts setting. Nevertheless, with characteristic caution, British scholars influenced future criticism more than is generally realized by solid historical exegesis (e.g. Lightfoot, Ramsay) and by relating Paul to contemporary Jewish thought (e.g. F. W. Farrar, H. St J. Thackeray). W. M. Ramsay's espousal of the Lucan authorship of Acts after thoroughgoing archaeological and historical research was particularly influential for the critical reconstruction of Paul's life (cf.SPT , pp. 20ff.; W. K. Hobart's conclusions regarding The Medical Language of St Luke , 1882, also remain, with qualifications, a valid contribution in this area). With the advocacy of the German scholars Harnack and Deissmann this conclusion has been strengthened, although some recent students, as Haenchen, have argued anew against the tradition.

d. Trends in the 20th century

Literary criticism in the present century has focused upon: (i) a continuing effort towards a general historical reconstruction (cf. IV , below); (ii) the publication of the Pauline corpus; (iii) the provenance and date of the Prison Epistles; (iv) authorship; and (v) other questions concerning individual Epistles.

(i) Historical reconstructions . In spite of the demise of the Tübingen school its historical reconstruction, and some of its literary foibles, have continued to be assumed in much contemporary critical study. Johannes Munck (pp. 70-77) has rightly objected that when the literary conjectures failed, the dependent historical conjectures ought to have been revised (‘It was not enough merely to transfer the problem from the two centuries to the three decades’; p. 70). Munck himself proposes such a revision. (1) The Jerusalem church, i.e. the original disciples, even as Paul, had no interest in excluding or ‘Judaizing’ Gentiles. (2) It was Paul's conviction, and his sole difference with the Jerusalem church, that Gentiles must first be won. Thus, as the apostle to the Gentiles (Ga 2:7) he restrains antichrist (2Th 2:7), by evangelism brings in (representatively) the ‘fullness of the Gentiles’ (Ro 11:25; 15:19) and, as a decisive eschatological act, initiates Israel's redemption by making her jealous (Ro 11:11) in taking the ‘Gentile’ collection to Jerusalem (Ac 20:4; 1Co 16:3). Israel's ‘No’ issues in Paul's arrest and death, but Paul dies, as did Jesus, knowing God will yet save ‘all Israel’ in the fullness of time. In interpreting Paul's ministry within the framework of his initial call and of his eschatology, Munck gives due heed to critical emphases; on balance, his work marks a constructive advance.

Like F. C. Baur and W. Schmithals, E. E. Ellis (Prophecy , pp. 69ff., 78f., 104-128) also interprets Paul's mission in terms of his conflict with opponents: (1) Because the Hebraists (= ‘the circumcision party’, Ac 11:2f.; Ga 2:12) and the Hellenists of Ac 6:1 had respectively a strict and a loose attitude towards the ritual law, they pursued somewhat separate missions in the Diaspora. (2) There a faction of the Hebraists, the Judaizers, sought to impose circumcision on Gentile believers. After the Council of Jerusalem they apparently subordinated their judaizing interests to a boastful triumphalism, licentious tendencies and a claim to mediate divine gnōsis through visions of angels. (3) Seeking to maintain the unity of the church, Paul counselled with Hebraist leaders (Ga 2), worked with Hebraist colleagues (Col 4:11) and took offerings to the Hebraist church of Jerusalem. (4) Against the opponents and their sympathizers he emphasized justification apart from works together with judgment according to one's works (Gal., Rom., Pastorals), the cruciform model of Christian ministry (Cor., Phil.), the Christocentric character of divine gnōsis and of all the charisms (Cor., Col.) and, at length, a church order that would protect the congregations from the false teachers (Pastorals).

(ii) The Pauline corpus . E. J. Goodspeed, departing from Harnack and earlier authorities, drew fresh attention to the formation of the Pauline corpus. He conjectured that about AD 90 an admirer of Paul in Ephesus published the apostle's letters (excepting the Pastorals) and wrote Eph. himself as an ‘Introduction’. J. Knox (Philemon , pp. 98ff.) took the hypothesis a step further and identified that admirer with Onesimus the slave, and later bishop of Ephesus. While receiving considerable acceptance (cf. C. L.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Mitton, The Formation of the Pauline Corpus of Letters , 1955), the theory has been unpersuasive to many. (1) The text demands some addressee, and the primitive omission of such points to a circular letter, hardly suitable for a corpus introduction. (2) Eph. never introduces or ends the Pauline corpus in any ancient MS. (3) It is very doubtful that the content of Eph. can be properly described as a non-Pauline summation of Pauline thought. (4) G. Zuntz (pp. 14ff., 276-279), while recognizing the possibility of an earlier pre-corpus collection in Ephesus, finds that the textual and other evidence points to c. AD 100 and to 'the scholarly Alexandrian methods of editorship'. C. F. D. Moule suggests that Luke may be the collector of Paul's letters (BJRL 47, 1964-5, pp. 451f.).

(iii) The provenance and date of the Prison Epistles . The provenance of Paul's prison letters (Eph., Phil., Col., Phm.), traditionally assigned to Rome, has been a matter of increasing interest since G. S. Duncan, following Lisco and Deissmann, located them in St Paul's Ephesian Ministry (1929). Although Acts mentions no Ephesian imprisonment, Paul's letters imply it (e.g. 1Co 15:32; 2Co 1:8; 6:5; 11:23); also the setting, journeys and personages of the prison letters fit Ephesus better than distant Rome (cf. Phlm 22; Phl 2:24 with Ro 15:24ff.; NTS 3, 1956-7, pp. 211-218). J. Knox (Philemon , p. 33), Michaelis (pp. 205ff., 220), and as to Phil., Bruce (Acts , English text, p. 341) and T. W. Manson (BJRL 22, 1939, pp. 182ff.) are sympathetic to Duncan. C. H. Dodd (Studies , pp. 85-108) and Percy (pp. 473f.) object. (1) The tradition apart from Marcion's Prologue is unanimous for Rome, and such probably (though not certainly) is the meaning of Phl 4:22. (2) Such references as 1Co 15:32 are to be taken metaphorically. (3) The 'developed theology' of the captivity Epistles suggests the later Roman date. On balance, the Ephesian provenance is inviting and, at least in the case of Phil., may prove to be a permanent advance. However, a Caesarean provenance is advocated by Reicke (in the Bruce Festschrift) and by J. A. T. Robinson (Redating the New Testament , 1976, pp. 60f.).

(iv) The authorship of Paul's letters has been regarded traditionally as the individual enterprise of the apostle. On this assumption it is thought that the 'authentic' letters can be identified in terms of vocabulary, style, idiom and subject-matter and, on the same basis, that they can be divided into Pauline and 'interpolated' sections (cf. Schweitzer, pp. 141-150; Schmithals, Gnosticism , pp. 302-325; J. C. O'Neill, Galatians , 1972; Romans , 1975).

However, the effort to determine authorship on the basis of literary criteria has now been brought into question by several factors. (1) As Otto Roller showed, the role of the amanuensis in ancient letter-writing included an influence on the vocabulary and style of the letter. The hand of such secretaries is clearly present in the Pauline letters—even in the brief note to Philemon (Ro 16:22; Ga 6:11; 2Th 3:17; Phlm 19). (2) The 9 of some letters is not entirely clear but, as H. Conzelmann (NTS 12, 1965-6, p. 234n.; cf. Roller, pp. 153-187) has observed, it probably involved some influence on their composition. (3) Paul worked within a circle of prophets and teachers (cf. Ac 13:1; Ro 16:21f.; Col 4:10-14), and the work of these colleagues is sometimes incorporated into his letters (cf. Ellis, Prophecy , pp. 25f., 213). It is reflected in the 9 that are used by the apostle—hymns (e.g. Phl 2:5-11; 1Ti 3:16), expositions (e.g. 1Co 2:6-16; 2Co 6:14-7:1) and creeds (e.g. Ro 1:3f.; 1Co 15:3-7)—a phenomenon widely recognized today, and shows that even the undisputed Pauline letters are not a literary unity. Paul is the author of the letters under his name in the sense that they were written under his supervision and in part by his hand or dictation, and they were sent out under his authority. But they are not, as a whole, solely his de novo compositions. Consequently, the literary criteria traditionally used to determine Pauline authorship can be given little weight in their present form, for they were devised under mistaken assumptions about the Pauline mission praxis and about the process by which the letters were composed.

(v) Individual Epistles . Critical emphases within the individual letters have shifted, except in the case of Eph. and the Pastorals, from authorship to other matters. (See separate articles on the various Epistles.) Many British and American scholars favour an early date for Galatians (c. AD 49 from Antioch) and a S Galatia destination, i.e. to the churches founded on Paul's first mission tour. On the Continent, N Galatia, i.e. the ethnic region (Ac 16:6; 18:23), and a post- Ac 15 chronology remain popular. The order of 1 and 2 Thessalonians is reversed by T. W. Manson. Differences of style and subject-matter caused Harnack to suppose that 2 Thes. was written to the Jewish Christians but, more likely, it was directed to Paul's

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Thessalonian co-workers (Ellis, Prophecy , pp. 19ff.). Munck (pp. 36ff.; contrast NIC), following Cullmann, identifies the restraining power in 2Th 2:6f. with Paul himself.

The Corinthians correspondence includes, in addition to the canonical Epistles, a letter prior to 1 Cor. (5:9) and a 'painful letter' (cf. 2Co 2:4; 7:8) which are identified by some scholars with 2Co 6:14-7:1 and 2Co 10-13 respectively. C. K. Barrett (Second… Corinthians , 1973) and R. V. G. Tasker (TNTC) argue for the unity of our second Epistle. A more plausible case for the combination of two letters occurs in Romans , where the concluding doxology occurs after 14:23 and 15:33 in a number of MSS, and the addressees in Ro 1:7,15 are missing in a few. Of several explanations the one given by T. W. Manson (pp. 225-241), among others, is quite attractive: Ro 1-15 was a circular letter to which ch. 16, an introduction of Phoebe to the Ephesians, was attached in the Ephesus copy. Nevertheless, the traditional view continues to find wide support (e.g. C. E. B. Cranfield, ICC , 1975; K. P. Donfried, The Romans Debate , 1977).

A 'circular letter' appears to be indicated in the case of Ephesians by: (1) the currency of the practice in the 1st century (cf. Zuntz, p. 228), and (2) the necessity for, and yet manuscript omission of, an addressee. Such a view would militate against Goodspeed's corpus introduction theory, but it would leave open Sanders' view (cf. F. L. Cross, below) that Ephesians is not an Epistle but Paul's 'spiritual testament'. It might also explain the title 'to the Laodiceans', which, according to Tertullian, Marcion gave the letter (cf. Col 4:16). E. Percy, M. Barth and A. Van Roon have given the most recent arguments for Pauline authorship; C. L. Mitton in Epistle to the Ephesians (1951) argues against it. A more popular 'pro and con' is found in F. L. Cross's symposium, Studies in Ephesians (1956). 'Which is more likely,' asks H. J. Cadbury (NTS 5, 1958-9, p. 101), 'that an imitator of Paul in the 1st century composed a writing 90 or 95% in accordance with Paul's style or that Paul himself wrote a letter diverging 5 or 10% from his usual style?' With the increased tendency to allow for variation in Pauline literary and theological expression and a different perception of the nature of authorship (above) the arguments against genuineness become less convincing; they are weakened even further by the Dead Sea Scrolls parallels (cf. Flusser, p. 263; Murphy-O'Connor, pp. 115-131, 159-178).

Outside Germany most students consider the 19th-century 'non-Pauline' verdicts valid only for the Pastorals. (In recent years Pauline authorship of the Epistle to the Hebrews has been seriously argued only by the Roman Catholic scholar William Leonard.) Anglo-American opinion (and also Schmithals, Gnostics) has tended to agree with P. N. Harrison's 'fragment hypothesis', i.e. Pauline fragments supplemented and edited; most Continentals who reject the Pastorals favour, with Kümmel (INT*)*, a later Paulinist author. The case for genuineness has found support in Roller's 'secretary hypothesis', i.e. that stylistic variations stem from Paul's amanuensis, whom some suggest to be Luke (e.g. C. F. D. Moule, BJRL 47, 1965, pp. 430-452); the traditional view has been argued anew by Spicq and Michaelis. The growing dissatisfaction with Harrison's hypothesis expressed, e.g. , in Guthrie (TNTC), Kelly and Metzger (ExpT 70, 1958-9, pp. 91ff.) may represent a general reappraisal of the prevailing view (cf.EQ 32, pp. 151-161). But see M. Dibelius and H. Conzelmann, The Pastoral Epistles , 1972. See also TIMOTHY AND TITUS, EPISTLES TO (IV).

IV. Pauline thought

a. Background

The Reformation emphasis upon righteousness or justification by faith (Ro 1:17) continued in the following centuries to be the controlling factor in the interpretation of Paul's doctrine. With the rise of literary criticism the absence of this motif became sufficient reason to suspect or even reject a 'Pauline' letter; and in the incipient development of Paulinism, i.e. the system of Pauline thought, 'righteousness' was regarded as the key to the apostle's mind. (In the following sketch compare especially Schweitzer, Interpreters.)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

(i) Paul's doctrine of redemption . L. Usteri (1824) and A. F. Daehne (1835) sought to explain the whole of Pauline thought in terms of the imputed righteousness of Romans (e.g. 3:21 ff.). In contrast, the rationalist H. E. G. Paulus, starting from texts stressing the 'new creation' and sanctification (e.g. 2Co 5:17; Ro 8:29), insisted that Pauline righteousness was an ethical, moral concept; faith in Jesus meant ultimately the faith of Jesus. These two ideas and their relationship had a continuing significance through the 19th century.

F. C. Baur, within the framework of Hegelian idealism, sought at first (1845) to explain Paul in terms of the Spirit given through union with Christ by faith. Later, however, Baur reverted to the Reformation pattern, a compartmentalized presentation of the various Pauline doctrines without any attempt to view them from a unified concept. This loci approach was followed by succeeding writers who gave minute descriptions of Pauline doctrine, innocently supposing 'that in the description they possessed at the same time an explanation' (Schweitzer, Interpreters , p. 36).

Nevertheless, some writers pressed towards the discovery of a unifying concept for Pauline thought. R. A. Lipsius (1853) had recognized two views of redemption in Paul, the juridical (justification) and the ethical ('new creation'). Hermann Luedemann, in his book The Anthropology of the Apostle Paul (1872), concluded that the two views of redemption actually rested on two views of the nature of man. In Paul's earlier 'Jewish' view (Gal.; Ro 1-4) redemption was a juridical verdict of acquittal; for the mature Paul (Ro 5-8) it was an ethical-physical transformation from 'flesh' to 'spirit' through communion with the Holy Spirit. The source of the first idea was Christ's death; the second, his resurrection. On the other hand, Richard Kabisch concluded that Pauline redemption essentially meant deliverance from coming judgment, and its significance, therefore, was to be found in the eschatology of the apostle. The Christian must walk in newness of life to show that he actually shared Christ's resurrection. 'Spiritual' life and death in the modern religious sense are unknown to Paul; both concepts are, e.g. in Ro 6, always physical; and the new life is a mystical union with Christ. Thus, future deliverance from satanic powers is anticipated by the possession of the Holy Spirit, who manifests the new age in the present and inseminates our corporal being with a super-earthly substance.

For both Luedemann and Kabisch: (1) Paul's doctrine of redemption emanates from one fundamental concept. (2) It is a physical redemption to be understood in terms of Pauline anthropology. (3) To be redeemed means to share Christ's death and resurrection, which involves union with Christ and the abolition of the 'flesh'. (4) Although future, this redemption is mediated in the present by the Holy Spirit.

But questions remained. In what sense can Christ's death and resurrection be repeated in the believer? In what sense can the Christian be 'a new creation' and yet outwardly appear unchanged? Albert Schweitzer, building upon the interpretations of Luedemann and Kabisch, sought an answer in the following synthesis. (1) Paul, as did Jesus, interpreted Jesus' death and resurrection to be eschatological, i.e. an end of the world event, bringing the kingdom of God and the resurrection life to all the elect. (2) But the world did not end, and believers did not in fact enter into resurrection life; in time the temporal separation between Christ's resurrection and the (anticipated) resurrection of believers became the chief problem for Paul's teaching. (3) To answer it Paul posits a 'physical mysticism': through the sacraments the Holy Spirit mediates in the present time Christ's resurrection to the 'last generation' believers. (4) This present union with Christ in the Spirit ensures to the believer a share in the 'Messianic resurrection' at the parousia.

(ii) Pauline eschatology. Thus, Schweitzer set the stage for 20th-century discussions of Pauline eschatology. It was his great merit that he sought to understand Paul's thought in terms of one fundamental concept, that he recognized the central importance of eschatology and (Jewish) anthropology in the apostle's doctrine of redemption, and that he recognized the Holy Spirit and the en Christō union as the realization of the new age in the present. But Schweitzer's interpretation of Paul's eschatology as a makeshift expedient (and as a sacramental mysticism) is questionable, to say the least. For, as Hamilton's critique has pointed out (pp. 50ff.), the exalted Christ, not the 'delay' in the parousia, determines Paul's eschatology. Also, if Paul's thought patterns are Jewish (as Schweitzer rightly recognized), sacramental mysticism is a rather awkward explanation of the realism of the ‘new creation’ in Christ.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

(iii) Paul's thought patterns . In addition to eschatology as the key to Paulinism, a closely related question important for the future also had its rise in the 19th century. Are Paul's thought patterns Jewish or Hellenistic? Kabisch and Schweitzer insisted that Pauline thought was Jewish to the core. Others, following F. C. Baur's reconstruction of Paul as the ‘Hellenizer of Christianity’, interpreted Pauline anthropology and eschatology from the standpoint of a modified Platonic dualism. The antithesis between ‘flesh’ and ‘spirit’ in Ro 6-8 was an ethical dualism, and ‘dying’ and ‘rising’ a spiritual transformation. This has its roots in an anthropological dualism; thus, in the future, redemption involves the deliverance of the ‘soul’ from its house of clay. But Paul also speaks of the resurrection of the whole man from death (1Th 4; 1Co 15). Otto Pfleiderer (Paulinism , 1877, I, p. 264) concluded that Paul held Jewish and Gk. views simultaneously, ‘side by side, without any thought of their essential inconsistency’. In interpreting Pauline eschatology elsewhere (cf. Schweitzer, Interpreters , p. 70) he posits a development from 1Th 4 through 1Co 15 to 2Co 5. The first is simply Jewish resurrection eschatology; in 2Co 5 the believer goes to the heavenly realms at death.

b. The origin of Paul's religion: Hellenism

20th-century studies of Pauline thought have devoted themselves primarily to three questions. What is the relation between Paul and Jesus? What are the sources for Pauline thought? What is the role of eschatology in the mind of Paul?

(i) Paul's relation to Jesus . The distinction raised a half century earlier between ‘juridical’ (Ro 1-4) and ‘ethical’ (Ro 5-8) righteousness had borne much fruit, and the latter came to be regarded as the more central and decisive Pauline concept. A. Deissmann (pp. 148ff.) viewed ‘in Christ’ as an intimate spiritual communion with Christ, a Christ mysticism; more often the ‘mysticism’ was interpreted as a sacramental reality based upon Jewish eschatology (Schweitzer) or the pagan mysteries (J. Weiss, Earliest Christianity , 1959 [1937], 2, pp. 463f.). Somewhat later J. S. Stewart (A Man in Christ , 1935, pp. 150ff.) reflected this trend in British scholarship, regarding union with Christ as the central element in Paul's thought. This emphasis had important consequences for the course of Pauline studies in the 20th century.

The contrast between the ‘liberal Jesus’ and Paul's indwelling and yet transcendent Christ called forth at the turn of the century a spate of books on the relationship of Jesus and Paul (cf. P. Feine, Paulus , pp. 158ff.). W. Wrede's influential Paulus (1905) put the matter in the starkest terms: Paul was not truly a disciple of Jesus; he was actually the second founder of Christianity. The individual piety and future salvation of the Rabbi Jesus had been transformed by the theologian Paul into a present redemption through the death and resurrection of a christ-god. Paul's ideas could not, of course, be accepted at face value. To do so would, as Weinel (St Paul , 1906, p. 11) remarked, ‘stifle the claims of reason for the sake of Christianity, for reason is ever-repeating… that the modern conception of the world is the right one’. Nevertheless, the historian's task remained. If Paul's doctrines did not arise from and build upon Jesus' mind, what was their origin?

(ii) Sources of Pauline thought . F. C. Baur sought to explain the mind of Paul in the context of church controversy: Paul was the champion of Gentile freedom. For Schweitzer the origin of Paul's thought was his peculiar eschatological problem forged in the mental cauldron of late Judaism. However, the rising ‘History of Religion’ (Religionsgeschichte*)* school found no evidence to ground Paul's sacramental mysticism in Judaism. While recognizing the eschatological problem, it built upon Baur's ‘Gentile’ Paul and developed still another elaborate reconstruction of the apostolic age. Represented most notably by R. Reitzenstein and W. Bousset, it interpreted Paulinism in the framework of Oriental-Hellenistic mystery religions. The Mysteries spoke, as did Paul, of a dying-rising god, of ‘Lord’, of sacramental redemption, of ‘mysteries’, gnōsis and ‘spirit’. As a boy in Tarsus and later as a missionary the apostle came under the influence of these ideas, and they exerted a profound influence on his theology. Schweitzer (Interpreters , pp. 179-236), H. A. A. Kennedy, G. Wagner and J. G. Machen (pp. 255-290) subjected this reconstruction to a thorough critique, pointing out that, in ignoring the OT-Judaism background of the parallels (which Kennedy showed to be quite plausible) and the late date of its sources, the theory reflected a weakness in method. (Cf. also R. E. Brown, The Semitic Background of the Term 'Mystery' , 1968). The principal contribution of the History of Religion school was to raise the important question of Paul's theological relation to the Gentile religious world. The 'mystery religion' reconstruction did not win general approval, but in a more recent gnostic dress its general outlines continue to be strongly advocated.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The mystery religion parallels paled; nevertheless, the conviction remained strong that Paul's thought was substantially influenced by the Greek world of ideas. R. Bultmann (1910) had shown the affinity of Paul's literary style with the Stoic diatribe. Others regarded Paul's doctrine of the 'corporate body' (cf. W. L. Knox, Gentiles , pp. 160ff.), his natural theology in Ro 1 (cf. Ac 17) and his concept of conscience (E. Norden, Agnostso Theos , 1913) as rooted in Stoicism. The inadequacy of these conclusions was pointed out, respectively, by E. Best (pp. 83ff.), B. Gaertner (pp. 133-169) and C. A. Pierce (pp. 16ff.). Gaertner argues that Paul's 'natural theology' is thoroughly OT-Jewish; however, Pierce (pp. 22ff., 57ff.) concludes that the NT adopts in the case of 'conscience' a general usage of popular Gk. thought.

To determine the relationship of Paul to pagan religious thought, the area currently receiving most attention is Gnosticism. This religious-philosophical movement stressed a metaphysical dualism, deliverance from 'matter' through a divine gift and power of gnōsis , i.e. a special knowledge of God, and mediating angels to assist one to salvation. Long ago J. B. Lightfoot (Colossians and Philemon , 1886, pp. 71-11 1) detected elements of Gnosticism in the Colossian heresy.

Early in the 20th century Bousset and J. Weiss (op.cit. , 2, pp. 650f.) urged that aspects of Paul's own thought lay in this direction. R. Bultmann and his pupil W. Schmithals became the chief representatives and developers of Bousset's reconstruction today. From existentialist considerations Bultmann again made 'justification' a central Pauline motif, although it was far from a return to Baur or to the Reformers; for the same reasons Paul's anthropology was given a thorough exposition (Theology 1, pp. 190-227). But the real clue to Bultmann's understanding of Paulinism is his grounding of Pauline thought in a syncretistic Judaism and Christianity. From this background Paul obtained a number of concepts, e.g. sacramental redemption and ethical dualism, which were Gnostic or gnosticized in some degree (Theology 1, pp. 63ff., 124ff., 151-188). While Paul opposed the Gnostics, e.g. at Colossae, in the process he modified not only his terminology but also his concepts, particularly his Christology (Messiah Jesus becomes a heavenly Lord; cf. Bousset) and cosmogony (the demon-controlled world is redeemed by a heavenly man; cf. W. L. Knox, Gentiles , pp. 220ff.; but see G. B. Caird, Principalities and Powers , 1956; W. Foerster, TDNT 2, pp. 566-574).

Schweitzer (Interpreters , p. 231) predicted that a 'Hellenized' Paulinism was a half-way house which must carry its conclusions even to the genesis of Christianity. His prediction was more than fulfilled by the discovery in 1947 of the Dead Sea Scrolls with their ethical dualism and emphasis on 'knowledge'. The Scrolls were an embarrassment for Bultmann's reconstruction, for 'pre-Gnostic' was about the closest identification most scholars cared to make for them. Also, there is little reason to believe that Paul reflects, e.g. , 'an earlier Gnostic doctrine about the descent of a redeemer, especially since there is no evidence that such a doctrine existed' (R. M. Grant, Gnosticism , p. 69; cf. pp. 39-69; R. McL. Wilson, pp. 27f., 57f.). Almost all else Bultmann chose to refer to Gnostic influences likewise suffered from the same chronological strictures. Grant, looking back to Schweitzer, interprets Gnosticism as arising from a failure of the apocalyptic hope; unlike Schweitzer, Grant views Paul as a man whose spiritual world lies somewhere between Jewish apocalyptic and the fully developed Gnosticism of the 2nd century (p. 158). Grant sees the latter tendency in Paul's interpretation of Christ's resurrection as a realized (eschatological) victory over the cosmic powers. More cautiously R. McL. Wilson, in a valuable assessment (The Gnostic Problem , 1958, pp. 75-80, 108, 261), concludes that Paul adopts a contemporary cosmogony and terminology only to oppose Gnosticism and to interpret Jesus' authority over the (Gnostic) 'powers'; the apostle rejects the gnosticizing interpretation. However, J. Dupont (Gnosis*: La Connaissance Religieuse dans les Epîtres de Saint Paul* 2, 1960) and Ellis (Prophecy , pp. 45-62) argue that Pauline gnosis is strictly OT-Jewish.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

All the ‘Greek’ reconstructions of Paul have their root in Baur's interpretation of Paul as the exponent of Gentile Christianity. When W. Wrede and others recognized the redemptive-eschatological character of Pauline thought, the apostle was set in opposition not only to Jewish Christianity but to the ‘liberal’ Jesus himself. But, as Schweitzer had shown, the ‘liberal’ Jesus was not the Jesus of the Gospels. Bultmann (Theology 1, pp. 23, 30ff.) accepted Schweitzer's ‘apocalyptic’ Jesus but insisted that God's demand for man's decision, not the apocalyptic window-dressing, was the essence of Jesus' eschatology. The suffering, resurrected and returning Son of man was a ‘mythologized’ picture of the later ‘Hellenized’ Christology. The mind of Paul remained far distant from the mind of the earthly Jesus or of his earliest disciples. One's estimate of Paulinism is closely tied, therefore, to one's estimate of the Gospels' picture of Jesus.

A number of mediating scholars, taking their cue from B. Weiss, see ‘development’ as the key to Paul's thought. In view of fading parousia hopes Paul's anthropology and eschatology move towards a Platonic dualism (Dodd) and his cosmogony towards Gnosticism (R. M. Grant).

In its present religionsgeschichtliche format the interpretation of Paul in terms of pagan religious ideas is subject to a number of criticisms. There is a tendency to convert parallels into influences and influences into sources. Some of its ‘sources’ for Pauline thought come from a period considerably later than the apostle's lifetime. (Bultmann's Paul may have more than a casual relation to the Gnostic ‘Paul’ of the ultra-Tübingen school.) Also, its historical inquiry has sometimes been compromised by an inadequate world-view. For example, Bultmann, like Weinel, views the natural world as a ‘self-subsistent unity immune from the interference of supernatural powers’ (Kerygma and Myth , ed. H. W. Bartsch, 1953, p. 7; cf. pp. 5-8, 216, 222).

Perhaps the most basic questions are these: Is Paulinism best understood as an amalgam, gathered here and there, or as the expansion and application of a central tradition rooted in the mind of Jesus Christ and the earliest church? Is Paul's mind most adequately explained within a religious syncretism or within the context of apocalyptic Judaism and the primitive church? Does the ‘gnosticizing’ of Christian thought begin in Paul and pre-Pauline Christianity (Bultmann) or in Paul's opponents and wayward converts; and does it arise from a failure of the primitive eschatology in Paul (Grant) or from a misunderstanding of it (and of Paul) in his churches? Cf. Ellis, Prophecy , pp. 45-62, 101-115.

c. The origin of Paul's religion: Judaism

(i) Paul's link with the earliest church . Both Ritschl and Von Hofmann had argued, contra Baur, for the unity of Paul's teaching with that of the earliest church. A. Resch, in the ‘Jesus or Paul’ debate, upheld this view. His thorough investigation of Der Paulinismus und die Logia Jesu (1904) concluded that the words of Jesus were a primary source of Pauline thought. But could not rather Paul be the source of the Synoptic Jesus? The research of several writers (e.g. Dungan; F. F. Bruce, BJRL 56, 1973-4, pp. 317-335) has substantiated the priority argued by Resch.

C. H. Dodd (Preaching , p. 56) established that a kerygma, i.e. a gospel-core proclamation, underlay both the Gospels and Paul, ‘a tradition coeval with the Church itself’. The same writer (According to the Scriptures , 1952, pp. 108ff.), building upon Rendel Harris' Testimonies (1916, 1920), found a ‘substructure of NT theology’ to which Paul was indebted and whose origin pointed to Christ himself. E. E. Ellis, examining the hermeneutical principles of Paul's Use of the Old Testament (pp. 97f., 107-112; idem , Prophecy, passim), suggested that some common (pre-Pauline) exegetical tradition originated with ‘prophets’ of the earliest church. E. Lohmeyer (Kyrios Jesus , 1928) interprets Phl 2:5ff. as a primitive Christian hymn probably arising in Aram. circles (cf. L. Cerfaux, pp. 283ff.; R. P. Martin, Carmen Christi , 1967; E. G. Selwyn, First Epistle of St Peter , 1946, pp. 365-369, 458-466). Similarly, the pre-Pauline character of the Primitive Christian Catechism (1940) was demonstrated by P. Carrington.

O. Cullmann (‘Tradition’, pp. 69-99), K. H. Rengstorf (TDNT 1, pp. 413-443), H. Riesenfeld (The Gospel Tradition , 1969, pp. 1-29) and B. Gerhardsson point to a rationale for this understanding of Christian origins. The NT concept of apostle has a similar origin to that of the rabbinic šāliaḥ , an authorized agent equivalent to the sender himself. The apostles witnessed to a tradition or paradosis , given to them by Christ. 'But since everything has not been revealed to each individual apostle, each one must first pass on his testimony to another (Ga 1:18; 1Co 15:11), and only the entire paradosis , to which all the apostles contribute, constitutes the paradosis of Christ' (Cullmann, 'Tradition', p. 73). Thus, as an 'apostle' Paul's message is defined in terms of what he has received: his catechesis, kerygma, and the wider 'tradition' should be, and critical study finds them to be, rooted in the earliest church and ultimately in the teaching of Jesus. This teaching of Jesus seems to have included not merely moral instruction or apocalyptic warning, but also biblical exposition (Ellis, Prophecy , pp. 240-253) and a creative, theological synthesis which envisaged a post-resurrection ministry by his disciples (cf. J. Jeremias, Jesus' Promise to the Nations , 1958). If these writers are correct, the dichotomy between Paul and the primitive Jewish church, which has been urged from Baur to Bultmann, is an assumption which must be abandoned.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

(ii) Paul's background . To understand a writer it would seem to be proper to give priority to that milieu to which he appeals and to which he presumably belongs. In interpreting Pauline concepts it is not the categories of a 2nd-century Gnosticism (however easily they may be 'read back') but the categories of 1st-century rabbinic/apocalyptic Judaism which demand first claim upon the critical historian's mind.

The nature of 1st-century Judaism is complex, and it is easy to overdraw or wrongly define the contrast between the 'syncretistic' and 'orthodox', terms not to be equated with 'Hellenist' and 'Hebraist' or with 'diaspora' and 'Palestinian' (cf. Ac 6:1; Ellis, Prophecy , pp. 106f., 125f., 245ff.,; Davies, pp. 1-8). Nevertheless, considerable research relates the thought of Paul, the Pharisee and 'Hebrew of the Hebrews' (Phl 3:5), with Palestinian rabbinism and apocalypticism rather than with a syncretistic Judaism. Van Unnik has raised at least the probability that Paul's early youth was passed not in Tarsus but in Jerusalem. Certainly Paul used the Septuagint, but this translation has now been found among the DSS. He preached among the diaspora , and he may have been acquainted with the syncretistic Judaism exemplified by Philo. But with the doubtful exception of the Wisdom of Solomon, his relationship to the diaspora literature is not direct and probably reflects only traditions which both had in common. His more significant relationships lie in another direction. W. D. Davies and others have shown that Qumran and Rabbinic Judaism form the background of many Pauline concepts formerly labelled 'Hellenistic'. Likewise, the literary form of Paul's biblical exposition agrees with rabbinic models. The Dead Sea Scrolls have confirmed in remarkable fashion the Jewishness of Pauline and NT backgrounds. (Cf. Bruce, Qumran Texts , pp. 66-77; Flusser; M. Black, The Scrolls and Christian Origins , 1961; Ellis, Prophecy , pp. 35, 57ff., 213-220; Murphy-O'Connor.)

(iii) Specific Pauline concepts . Passing to specific Pauline concepts, anthropology and the nature of the 'in Christ' relationship have had a central importance since the days of F. C. Baur. It is widely recognized today that Paul views man in an OT-Jewish framework and not in the Platonic dualism of the Hellenistic world (cf. LIFE ; Bultmann, Theology 1, pp. 209f.; Cullmann, Immortality , pp. 28-39; J. A. T. Robinson, The Body , 1952). The corporate 'body of Christ' also is best understood not in terms of a Gnostic mythology (Käsemann) nor a Stoic metaphor (W. L. Knox) but as the OT-Jewish concept of corporate solidarity. Davies (Judaism , pp. 53ff.) has related Paul's thought here to the rabbinic speculations on the body of Adam. R. P. Shedd's Man in Community (1958) correctly finds Paul's ultimate rationale in the realism of Semitic thought patterns, as they are applied to Messiah and his people (cf. J. A. T. Robinson, The Body , 1953, pp. 56ff.; Kümmel, Man ; J. deFraine, Adam and the Family of Man , 1965, pp. 245-270; Ellis, Prophecy , pp. 170ff.). R. Gundry (pp. 228-241) falls short of this realism in viewing the concept metaphorically. D. R. G. Owen, in Body and Soul (1956), offers an illuminating comparison of biblical anthropology with the modern scientific view of man. The study of D. Cox (Jung and St Paul , 1959) seeks to define in other areas the relevance of Paul for current faith and practice.

Whether Paul's eschatology is rooted in Jewish or Greek concepts is a matter of continuing debate. The importance of this question for Paulinism requires that some detailed attention now be given to it.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

d. The eschatological essence of Pauline thought

C. A. A. Scott's well-written Christianity according to Saint Paul (1927), over against Albert Schweitzer's eschatological interpretation, identifies salvation as the fundamental concept of Paulinism. But what is the factor determining the character of Paul's 'already but not yet' redemption theology? Not grasping Schweitzer's real question, Scott did not really pose an alternative: he found a motif to describe Paul, not a key to explain him. (Cf. also Christological approaches, e.g. L. Cerfaux, Christ in the Theology of St Paul , 1959.) Schweitzer may not have stated the problem, or the solution, satisfactorily; but his identification of the key concept remains valid.

(i) The views of Schweitzer and Dodd . Until recently discussion of NT eschatology has revolved about the views of Schweitzer and C. H. Dodd. (For Bultmann, eschatology has nothing to do with the future or with history; it is the realm of existential living. Like F. C. Baur, Bultmann uses NT language to clothe an imposing philosophy of religion; exegesis becomes the servant of existentialism. Cf. N. Q. Hamilton's The Holy Spirit and Eschatology in Paul , 1957, pp. 41-90, for a lucid summation and critique of the eschatology of Schweitzer, Dodd and Bultmann.) Schweitzer argued that Paul's 'en Christō' concept arose from the failure of the kingdom of God, i.e. the end of the world, to arrive at Christ's death and resurrection. Against Schweitzer, Dodd contended that in Christ's death the 'age to come' did arrive; eschatology was 'realized' as much as it ever would be in history. The believer already participates in the kingdom (e.g. Col 1:13), and at death he fully enters the eternal, i.e. eschatological, realm. Eschatology, therefore, does not refer to an end-of-the-world event; in Platonic fashion it is to be understood 'spatially' rather than temporally, eternity over against time. How, then, is Paul's anticipation of a future parousia to be accounted for? Believing it to be a hangover from apocalyptic Judaism (and quite alien to the central message of Jesus), Dodd goes back to Pfleiderer for an answer: in 1Th 4 Paul has a strictly Jewish eschatology but in 1Co 15 modifies it with the concept of a 'spiritual' body; 2Co 5, which then places the believer in heaven at death, expresses the view of the mature (and 'Greek') Paul. J. A. T. Robinson's Jesus and His Coming (1958, pp. 160ff.) is essentially an elaboration of Dodd's thesis.

It is Dodd's great merit that he saw, as Schweitzer did not, the essential meaning for NT thought (and for the relevance of the gospel in the present world) of the realized aspect of the kingdom of God. But in adopting an unbiblical Platonic view of time Dodd failed to do justice to the futurist and temporal character of eschatological redemption. Also, his development of Pauline eschatology involved an un-Pauline anthropological dualism and, in part, reflected a misunderstanding of the texts. Both Schweitzer and Dodd made admirable attempts to achieve a comprehensive interpretation of NT eschatology. Although 'futurist or realized' has now been recognized as an improper either/or, the contributions of Schweitzer and Dodd remain fundamental landmarks in the progress of the research.

The important monographs of W. G. Kümmel (Promise and Fulfilment , 1957, pp. 141-155; and NTS 5, 1958-9, pp. 113-126) argued convincingly that both 'present' and 'future' eschatology are equally and permanently rooted in the teaching of Jesus and of Paul. Oscar Cullmann's most significant publications, Christ and Time (1951) and Salvation in History (1967), contrasted the Platonic idea of redemption, i.e. to escape the time 'circle' at death, with the biblical concept that redemption is tied to resurrection in future 'linear' time, i.e. at the parousia. These works, plus a proper appreciation of Paul's OT-Jewish anthropology and of the Semitic concept of corporate solidarity, form a proper foundation for understanding Paul's eschatology—and thus his total doctrine of redemption.

(ii) Historical research since the Reformation has recognized that Pauline theology is above all theology of redemption. The 19th century witnessed a growing emphasis upon the present 'union with Christ' (rather than imputed righteousness as the central aspect of this redemption.) Since Albert Schweitzer two eschatological foci, Christ's death and resurrection and the parousia, have been recognized as the key to the meaning of 'union with Christ'.

Jesus Christ in his death and resurrection defeated for all time the 'powers' of the old aeon—sin, death and the demonic 'rulers of this darkness' (Ep 6:12; Col 2:15). Now Christians were crucified, resurrected, glorified and placed at God's right hand with Christ (Ga 2:20; Ep 2:5f.). 'In Christ' Christians have entered the resurrection age; the solidarity with the first Adam in sin and death has been replaced by the solidarity with the eschatological Adam in righteousness and immortal life. (LIFE.)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

This corporate redemption in and with Jesus Christ, this 'new age' reality, which the believer enters at conversion (cf. Ro 6), finds an individual actualization in the present and the future (cf. Ellis, NTS 6, 1959-60, pp. 21 1-216). In the present life it means a transformation through the indwelling Spirit, the firstfruits of the new resurrection life (Ro 8:23; 2Co 5:5), of one's ethic (Col 2:20; 3:1,9f., 12) and of one's total world view (Ro 12:1ff.). However, in the midst of moral-psychological renewal the Christian remains, in his mortality, under the death claims of the old age. But this too is to be understood no longer in terms of 'in Adam', but as a part of the 'in Christ' reality; for 'the sufferings of Christ abound to us' (2Co 1:5; cf. Phl 3:10; Col 1:24), and the Christian dead have fallen asleep 'in Jesus' (1Th 4:14; cf. Phl 2:17; 2Ti 4:6) the individual actualization of Christ's sufferings is, of course, in no way a self-redemption process; rather, it means to be identified with Christ 'in the likeness of his death' (Ro 6:5). The 'likeness of his resurrection' awaits its actualization at the parousia, when the individual Christian, raised to immortal life, shall be 'conformed to the image of his Son, that he might be the firstborn among many brethren' (Ro 8:29; cf. 1Co 15:53ff.).

Thus, Pauline redemption is not a 'spiritual' deliverance culminating in the escape of the 'soul' at death (Dodd); it is a physical redemption culminating in the deliverance of the whole man at the parousia (Cullmann). It is to be understood not in terms of a Platonic dualism but in the framework of an OT-Jewish view of man as a unified being and as one who lives not only as an individual but in 'corporate solidarities'. The future that has become present in the resurrection of Jesus Christ is a future which the Christian realizes now only corporately, as the 'body of Christ'. However, at the parousia faith shall become sight, 'away' shall become 'at home', and the solidarities of the new age shall become individually actualized in all their glory, both in man and in the whole created order (Ro 8:19-21). This is the living hope of Paul's heart; it is also the meaning of his theology.

Bibliography

M. Barth, Ephesians , 2 vols., 1974; E. Best, One Body in Christ , 1955; G. Bornkamm, Early Christian Experience , 1969; idem , Paul , 1971; W. Bousset, Kurios Christos , 1913, E.T. 1970; F.F. Bruce, The Acts of the Apostles ,1951 (NLC , 1954); idem , Biblical Exegesis in the Qumran Texts , 1959; idem , Paul and Jesus , 1974; idem , Paul , 1978; R. Bultmann, Theology of the New Testament , 2 vols., 1952; H. C. C. Cavallin, Life after Death… in 1Co 15, 1974; O. Cullmann, Immortality of the Soul or Resurrection of the Dead? , 1958; idem , 'The Tradition', The Early Church , 1956, pp. 57-99; N. A. Dahl, Studies in Paul , 1977; W. D. Davies, Paul and Rabbinic Judaism , 1955; A. Deissmann, Paul , 1927; C. H. Dodd, New Testament Studies , 1953; idem , The Apostolic Preaching and its Development , 1936; K. P. Donfried (ed.), The Romans Debate , 1977; J. W. Drane, Paul, Libertine or Legalist ?, 1976; D. L. Dungan, The Sayings of Jesus in the Churches of Paul , 1971; E. E. Ellis, Paul's Use of the Old Testament , 1957; idem , Prophecy and Hermeneutic , 1978; D. Flusser, 'The Dead Sea Scrolls and Pre-Pauline Christianity', Aspects of the Dead Sea Scrolls , ed. C. Rabin and Y. Yadin, 1958, pp. 215-266; F. J. Foakes-Jackson and K. Lake, BC , 5 vols., 1933; J. Friedrich (ed.), Rechtfertigung , 1976; V. P. Furnish, Theology and Ethics in Paul , 1968; B. Gaertner, The Areopagus Speech and Natural Revelation , 1955; W. W. Gasque and R. P. Martin, Apostolic History and the Gospel (F. F. Bruce Festschrift), 1970; B. Gerhardsson, Die Anfänge der Evangelien Tradition , 1977; E. J. Goodspeed, The Meaning of Ephesians , 1933; R. M. Grant, Gnosticism and Early Christianity , 1959; R. H. Gundry, Soma , 1974; E. Haenchen, Acts , 1971; A. T. Hanson, Studies in Paul's… Theology , 1974; P. N. Harrison, The Problem of the Pastoral Epistles , 1921; H. Hübner, Das Besetz bei Paulus , 1978; E. Käsemann, Perspectives on Paul , 1971; J. N. D. Kelly, The Pastoral Epistles , 1963; H. A. A. Kennedy, Saint Paul and the Mystery Religions , 1913; S. Kim, An Exposition of Paul's Gospel (Diss., Manchester), 1977; J. Knox, Philemon among the Letters of Paul , 1959 (1935); W. L. Knox, Saint Paul and the Church of the Gentiles , 1939; W. G. Kümmel, INT , 1975; idem , Man in the New Testament , 1963; idem , The New Testament… Problems , 1972; idem , The Theology of the New Testament , 1973; U. Luz, Das Geschichtsverständnis bei Paulus , 1968; G. Machen, The Origin of Paul's Religion , 1947 (1925); T. W. Manson, Studies in the Gospels and Epistles , 1962; I. H. Marshall, The Origins of New Testament Christology , 1976; B. M.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Metzger, Index to Periodical Literature on the Apostle Paul , 1960; W. Michaelis, Einleitung in das Neue Testament , 1954; C. F. D. Moule, The Origin of Christology , 1977; J. Munck, Paul and the Salvation of Mankind , 1960; J. M. Murphy-O'Connor, Paul and Qumran , 1968; E. Pagels, The Gnostic Paul , 1975; E. Percy, 5, 1946; C. A. Pierce, Conscience in the New Testament , 1955; W. M. Ramsay, CRE , 1893; idem , SPT , 1895; R. Reitzenstein, Die hellenistischen Mysterienreligionen , 1927 (E.T. 1977); K. H. Rengstorf (ed.), Das Paulusbild in der neueren deutschen Forschung , 1969; H. Ridderbos, Paul and Jesus , 1958; idem , Paul , 1976; B. Rigaux, S Paul et ses lettres , 1962 (E.T. 1968); O. Roller, Das Formular der Paulinischen Briefe , 1933; E. P. Sanders, Paul and Palestinian Judaism , 1977; W. Schmithals, Gnosticism in Corinth , 1971; idem , Paul and the Gnostics , 1972; idem , Paul and James , 1965; H. J. Schoeps, Paul , 1961; A. Schweitzer, The Mysticism of Paul the Apostle , 1931; idem , Paul and his Interpreters , 1912; H. M. Shires, The Eschatology of Paul , 1966; K. Stendahl (ed.), The Scrolls and the New Testament , 1957; W. C. van Unnik, Tarsus or Jerusalem? , 1962; G. Wahner, Pauline Baptism and the Pagan Mysteries , 1967; D. E. H. Whiteley, The Theology of St Paul , 1964; R. McL. Wilson, Gnosis and the New Testament , 1968; G. Zuntz, The Text of the Epistles , 1953.

E.E.E.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

New Dictionary of Theology (NDT): Paul (by N.T. Wright)

Paul

This article presents an overview of Paul's life and work, his theology, place in early Christianity, and significance for today.

1. Life and work

The apostle Paul, a Jew from the tribe of Benjamin, was born a Roman citizen, in Tarsus of Cilicia, with the Heb. name Saul. Paul was most probably one of his Roman names. Brought up as a Pharisee, he became highly skilled in Jewish law and tradition (Ga 1:14). While engaged in a violent persecution of the church, he was confronted, on the road to Damascus, with a blinding vision of the risen Jesus. He continued to Damascus, and there regained his sight and was baptized c. AD 34 (Ac 9:3-19). In obedience to his new Lord he began at once to preach Jesus as Messiah in the synagogues, and became in his turn the object of Jewish persecution (Ac 9:19-25; cf. 1Th 2:14-16).

At this point he apparently spent some time in Arabia (Ga 1:17), returning to Damascus for three years before going to Jerusalem (Ac 9:26-29). Persecution again followed, and Paul went to his home town, Tarsus, until brought by Barnabas to help in the growing multi-racial church in Antioch (Ac 11:19-26). From there the two made a further trip to Jerusalem (Ac 11:30) in order to provide famine relief (c. 46). It is fairly likely that this is the same trip as that described in Ga 2:1-10, though some have identified the latter with the visit of Ac 15.

Back in Antioch, Barnabas and Paul were called by the Spirit to an itinerant preaching ministry (Ac 13-14), whose very success led to controversy over the terms of admission of non-Jews into the people of God (Gal; Phl 3:2-11; see Ac 15). Paul made two subsequent journeys with Silas and others, spending considerable time in Corinth on the first journey and Ephesus on the second (Ac 16-19). On his return to Jerusalem he was arrested and tried before the Sanhedrin and two successive Roman governors, a process which ended only when Paul used his right as a Roman citizen to appeal to Caesar. He was thereupon taken to Rome by boat, being shipwrecked en route off Malta (Ac 20-28). The narrative of Acts ends with Paul preaching openly in Rome, mentioning neither trial nor execution. Later church accounts fill in the gap, telling of Paul's martyrdom under Nero, c. 64.

The surviving letters formed a vital part of Paul's ministry, being the principal means by which he could, even when absent, exercise pastoral authority over the churches he had founded. These letters raise three major questions: a. How is his theology to be understood? b. What role did he play in the development of early Christian thought? and c. How is he to be appropriated in the contemporary church?

2. Paul's theology

Some have put justification at the centre of Paul's thought: others, his doctrine of ‘being in Christ' (see Union with Christ). Neither solution solves all the problems. A better way forward is to see Paul as having rethought his pharisaic theology in the light of Jesus Christ, as follows.

a. Paul's Background

The basic affirmations of Jewish theology are monotheism (there is one God, the creator of the world) and election (this God has chosen Israel to be his people). This double doctrine finds classic expression in the covenant, whose focal point was the law (Torah). Israel's task was to be faithful to God by keeping the Torah, and God for his part would be faithful to the covenant (‘righteous') by delivering Israel from her enemies. As a Pharisee, Paul believed that this deliverance would take the form of a new age breaking in to the present (evil) age: Israel would then be vindicated (‘justified', i.e. declared to be truly within the covenant) and those who had died faithful to the covenant would be raised from the dead to share in the new world order. In the meantime, Israel's one hope lay in fidelity to Torah, and in consequent exclusiveness and separation from defilement, particularly through contact with Gentiles. It was the apparent loosening of these covenant obligations by the early Christians that led Paul to persecute them. His vision of the risen Jesus caused a total upheaval not only in his personal life, through his acknowledgment of Jesus as Lord, but also in his thinking. If God had raised Jesus from the dead, that meant that Jesus was the Messiah, Israel's representative. This realization led at once to the reassessment of Paul's whole theological scheme and practical vocation.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

b. God and Jesus

Paul's view of Jesus caused, and shaped, the revolution in his view of God. If God had vindicated the crucified Jesus as Messiah, then in him—in his suffering and vindication—God's action to save his people had already occurred. Since the OT saw that action as essentially God's own, Paul concluded that Jesus himself was God in action: 'God was in Christ reconciling the world to himself' (2Co 5:19, RSV). What Jesus did on the cross is something only God can do: so Jesus, who before becoming human was 'in the form of God', did not regard that equality with God as something to take advantage of, but revealed the true character of God by his self-abnegation, incarnation and death (Phl 2:6-8). The resurrection is God's affirmation that this self-giving love is indeed the revelation of his own life and character (Phl 2:9-11; cf. Ro 1:4). The God who would not share his glory with another has shared it with Jesus (Isa 45:22-25; cf. Phl 2:9-11). Monotheism is thereby redefined, not abandoned: Paul draws on the Jewish metaphor about the 'wisdom of God' by which God made the world, to ascribe that agency in creation, as well as in new creation, to Jesus (1Co 8:6; Col 1:15-20), placing Jesus alongside 'the Father' in formulations which are themselves restatements of Jewish monotheism over against pagan polytheism. This striking new vision of God, highlighting especially the divine love, is filled out further by Paul's view of the Spirit at work in men and women to accomplish that which God intends, the giving of true life (Ro 8:1-11; 2Co 3:3,6,17-18). Finally, Paul recognizes that monotheism cannot remain content with dividing the world into two halves. If there is one God, and one Lord, there must be one people (Ro 3:27-30; 10:12; Ga 3:19-20). His new view of God thus points to a new view of God's people (cf. Church).

c. The new covenant

In recognizing Jesus as Messiah ('Christ' in Gk.), i.e. as the one in whom God's purposes for Israel had been summed up, Paul was compelled to rethink the place of Israel, and of her law, in God's over-all purposes. Unless God had changed his plans (which was unthinkable), that which had happened in Christ must have been God's intention all along. The cross and resurrection gave Paul the clue: since the Messiah represents Israel, Israel herself must 'die' and be 'raised' (Ga 2:15-21). Reading the Scriptures again with this in mind, Paul discovered that, in the very passage where the covenant promises were first made (Ge 15), two themes stood out: God's desire that 'all nations' should share in the blessing of Abraham, and the faith of Abraham as the sign that he was indeed God's covenant partner (Ro 4; Ga 3). But this meant that Israel's understanding of her role in God's plan had been wrong. She had mistaken a temporary stage in the plan (her land, her law and her ethnic privileges) for the final purpose itself. The law, however, although coming from God and reflecting his holiness, could not be the means of life, because of sin. But now Christ, not Israel, took centre stage: and in Christ, God's plan for a worldwide family was being enacted. Israel's political enemies were merely a metaphor or symbol for the real enemies of God, namely sin and death (1Co 15:26,56), which held sway over not merely Israel but the whole world.

These ultimate enemies had been overcome in the cross and resurrection. As the innocent representative of Israel, and hence of the human race, the Messiah had allowed sin and death to do their worst to him, and had emerged victorious. Sin's power had exhausted itself by bringing to his death the one human being who, himself without sin, could properly be vindicated by God after death (2Co 5:21). The cross thus stands at the heart of Paul's theology, as the basis of his mission (2Co 5:14-21), and of his redefinition of the people of God. The fact of universal sin (Ro 1:18-3:20) demonstrates the necessity for a saving act of pure grace (3:21-26): the divine wrath (1:18-2:16) is turned aside, as at the exodus, by the blood of sacrifice (3:24-26). Had Israel herself not been captive to sin, covenant membership would have been definable in terms of law and circumcision: but in that case Christ would not have needed to die (Ga 2:11-21).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The resurrection provides the basis for the true definition of God's people. God has vindicated Jesus as Messiah, and has thereby declared that those who belong to him, who in the Heb. idiom are 'in Christ' (cf. 2Sa 19:43-20:2), are the true Israel. The marks of new covenant membership are the signs of the Spirit's work, i.e. faith in Jesus as Lord, belief in his resurrection, and baptism as the mark of entry into the historical people of God (Ro 10:9-10; Col 2:11-12). 'Justification' is thus God's declaration in the present that someone is within the covenant, a declaration made not on the basis of the attempt to keep the Jewish law but on the basis of faith: because faith in Jesus is the evidence that God has, by his Spirit, begun a new work in a human life which he will surely bring to completion (Ro 5:1-5; 8:31-39; Phl 1:6; 1Th 1:4-10). The present divine verdict therefore correctly anticipates that which will be issued on the last day on the basis of the entire life of the Christian (Ro 2:5-11; 14:10-12; 2Co 5:10). This double verdict is thus based on two things—the death and resurrection of Jesus and the work of the Spirit: Christ and the Spirit together achieve 'that which the law could not do' (Ro 8:1-4). 'Justification' thus redefines the people of God, and opens that people to all who believe, whatever their racial or moral background.

The whole world is thus the sphere of God's redeeming action in Christ, and men and women without distinction are summoned by the gospel to submit to Jesus' lordship and so to enjoy the blessings of life in the covenant community, both in the present world and in that to come. God's people form, in Christ, that true humanity which Israel was called to be but by herself could not be. Paul expresses this appropriately by referring to the church, the people of the Messiah, as 'the body of Christ' (Ro 12; 1Co 12). This membership in Christ must be lived out by individual Christians allowing the Spirit to direct their actions, enabling them to live in the present as appropriate for the heirs of God's future kingdom (Ro 8:12-25; Ga 5:16-26; Col 3:1-11). Since they are already thus participating in the new age, the final return of Christ may be soon or late, but should find them 'awake', not asleep in sin (1Th 5:1-11; cf. Phl 3:17-21). And when that day comes, not only human beings, but the whole creation, will share in the renewal which the one God has planned for his world (Ro 8:18-25).

d. The righteousness of God

This picture of the renewal of all creation through the work of Christ and the Spirit completes Paul's picture of God himself. In the letter to Rome, Paul takes the standard Jewish question concerning God's righteousness (If Israel is the people of God, why is she suffering?), intensifies it in the light of universal sin (If all, Israel included, are sinful, how can God be true to the covenant?), and answers it in the light of the gospel. The cross and resurrection, he declares, demonstrate that God is in the right: he has been true to the covenant with Abraham, he has been impartial in his dealings with Jew and Gentile alike, he has dealt with sin on the cross, and he now saves those who cast themselves on his mercy. The further question, whether God is righteous in thus apparently allowing the original covenant people to miss the messianic salvation, is answered in Ro 9-11. God has been true to his promise, which always spoke of a worldwide family: Israel's present casting away is a necessary part of the over-all divine purpose, since only so can Gentiles be welcomed in and Jews themselves saved, as they will continue to be, by grace alone. Paul explains the apparent oddities of the divine plan as the outworking of God's love and mercy in the face of human, including Jewish, sin.

Paul's theology thus effects a redefinition of monotheism and election, based on the death and resurrection of Jesus and the work of the Spirit. This theology is at every point characterized by love: the love of God for his world and his human creatures; the love of Jesus in his atoning death; and the love for God and for one another with which, by his Spirit, God is transforming the corporate and individual lives of his new covenant people, so that they become the fully human beings God intends, reflecting his own image, which is Jesus himself (2Co 3:18; Col 3:10).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

3. Paul in early Christianity

It thus becomes clear that Paul was not responsible for the ‘Hellenization' of early Christianity, i.e. the transformation some have postulated from a pure Jewish faith into a philosophical construct. Nor, on the other hand, was he simply using rabbinic methods to perpetuate a Jewish system of thought. He was putting into effect that Jewish redefinition of Judaism which came about through Jesus, allowing the cross and resurrection constantly to inform the Jewish message of worldwide salvation which he preached. He came to be mistrusted by those Christians who felt bound to uphold the special status of Jews even within the new covenant. Conversely, his ideas were misused by others (e.g. Marcion) to denigrate the Torah and portray the church as a purely Gentile entity. His work and writing nevertheless formed a key part of the foundation for the life and thought of the second, and subsequent, generations of the church.

4. Paul for today

Since the Reformation, it has been customary to read Paul as the enemy of ‘legalism' in religion (see Law and Gospel). Though important in its own way, this issue does not represent Paul's central thrust. Instead, the contemporary church would do well to learn from Paul the true significance of Christshaped monotheism and of the new covenant in the Spirit, which together provide the basis, rationale, content and pattern for the church's life and, particularly, its responsibility for world-wide mission.

Bibliography

F. F. Bruce, Paul, Apostle of the Free Spirit (Exeter, 1977); W. D. Davies, Paul and Rabbinic Judaism (Philadelphia, 1980); E. Käsemann, Perspectives on Paul (London, 1969); S. Kim, The Origin of Paul's Gospel (Grand Rapids, MI, 1982); W. A. Meeks, The First Urban Christians: The Social World of the Apostle Paul (New Haven, CT , 1983); H. N. Ridderbos, Paul: An Outline of His Theology (Grand Rapids, MI, 1975); E. P. Sanders, Paul and Palestinian Judaism (London, 1977).

N.T.W.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Zion / Mount Zion

Question: "What is Zion? What is Mount Zion? What is the biblical meaning of Zion?"

https://www.gotquestions.org/Zion.html

Answer: Psalm 87:2–3 says, "The Lord loves the gates of Zion / more than all the other dwellings of Jacob. / Glorious things are said of you, / city of God." According to this verse, Zion is synonymous with city of God, and it is a place that God loves. Zion is Jerusalem. Mount Zion is the high hill on which David built a citadel. It is on the southeast side of the city.

The word Zion occurs over 150 times in the Bible. It essentially means "fortification" and has the idea of being "raised up" as a "monument." Zion is described both as the city of David and the city of God. As the Bible progresses, the word Zion expands in scope and takes on an additional, spiritual meaning.

The first mention of Zion in the Bible is 2 Samuel 5:7: "David captured the fortress of Zion—which is the City of David." Zion was originally an ancient Jebusite fortress in the city of Jerusalem. After David's conquest of the fortress, Jerusalem became a possession of Israel. The royal palace was built there, and Zion/Jerusalem became the seat of power in Israel's kingdom..

When Solomon built the temple in Jerusalem, the meaning of Zion expanded further to include the temple area (Psalm 2:6; 48:2, 11–12; 132:13). This is the meaning found in the prophecy of Jeremiah 31:6, "Come, let us go up to Zion, to the LORD our God." In the Old Testament Zion is used as a name for the city of Jerusalem (Isaiah 40:9), the land of Judah (Jeremiah 31:12), and the nation of Israel as a whole (Zechariah 9:13).

The word Zion is also used in a theological or spiritual sense in Scripture. In the Old Testament Zion refers figuratively to Israel as the people of God (Isaiah 60:14). In the New Testament, Zion refers to God's spiritual kingdom. We have not come to Mount Sinai, says the apostle, but "to Mount Zion and to the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem" (Hebrews 12:22). Peter, quoting Isaiah 28:16, refers to Christ as the Cornerstone of Zion: "See, I lay a stone in Zion, a chosen and precious cornerstone, and the one who trusts in him will never be put to shame" (1 Peter 2:6).

Mount Zion as a geographical area is currently the center of much dispute. The Bible is clear that, one day, Zion will be the sole possession of the Lord Jesus, and Zion—the nation and the city—will be restored. "Awake, awake, / Clothe yourself in your strength, O Zion; / Clothe yourself in your beautiful garments, / O Jerusalem, the holy city; / For the uncircumcised and the unclean / Will no longer come into you" (Isaiah 52:1). And "the children of your oppressors will come bowing before you; / all who despise you will bow down at your feet / and will call you the City of the LORD, / Zion of the Holy One of Israel" (Isaiah 60:14).

Wikipedia: Mount Zion

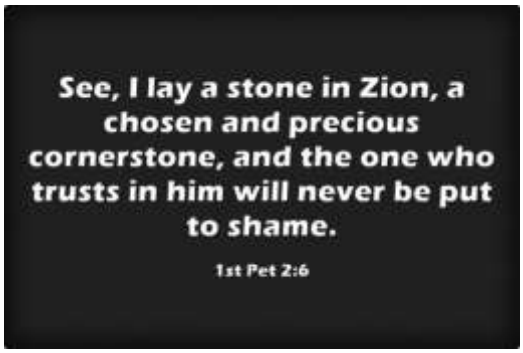
https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Mount_Zion

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

What Is Zion and The Biblical Meaning? What Is Mount Zion In The Bible?

http://www.patheos.com/blogs/christiancrier/2015/06/17/what-is-zion-and-the-biblical-meaning-what-is-mount-zion-in-the-bible/

Excerpt:



What does the word Zion mean according to the Bible? What is “Mount Zion” in particular talking about?

The Word Zion

The “Zion” itself simple means “fortification” like a citadel but it’s also another name that is used for Jerusalem or the City of David and is associated with God and is sometimes referred to as “the City of God.” The word Zion has a broad spectrum of meaning that is greater than any one single entity or identity because Zion was also known as the seat of power for the kingdom of Israel but also for the Kingdom of God. We know that it is a place that God loves and cares deeply about because the city is also associated with God’s chosen people, Israel. Zion is used interchangeably with Jerusalem in many Scriptures like in Isaiah 52:1-2 so any time you see the word Zion used it is referring to Jerusalem, the City of God, the City of David, the people or nation of Israel or the people of God and sometimes typifies God’s place of rule or where His presence resides like in Jeremiah 31:6 where he writes “Arise, and let us go up to Zion, to the Lord our God.”

Mount Zion’s Meaning

The word “mount” is simply a shortened meaning of mountain and mountains often refer to governments or nations but often is referred to in Scripture as “the mountain of the Lord, to the Rock of Israel” (Isaiah 30:29b). In the case of Mount Zion it is representative of the Kingdom of God where we read in Hebrews 12:22 that “you have come to Mount Zion and to the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem, and to innumerable angels in festal gathering.” That is where it is said “the assembly of the firstborn who are enrolled in heaven, and to God, the judge of all” (Heb 12:23) will be at and it looks ahead to the New Jerusalem that will descend out of heaven (Rev 21:10-26).

The Chief Cornerstone

When Jesus came to do His earthly ministry it was said “Behold, I am laying in Zion a stone of stumbling, and a rock of offense; and whoever believes in him will not be put to shame” (Rom 9:33) and that “The Deliverer will come from Zion, he will banish ungodliness from Jacob” (Rom 11:26) and “the cornerstone is Christ Jesus himself” (Eph 2:20). The word Deliverer is capitalized and as such, is a proper noun; another name for Jesus Christ Who was a cause of many to stumble and offended many (“a rock of offense”) but for others who “believe in him [they] will not be put to shame” because they have trusted in the only name by which they must be saved (Acts 4:12) for He is “a precious cornerstone for a sure foundation; the one who relies on it will never be stricken with panic” (Isaiah 28:16). As was prophesied hundreds of years ago this Cornerstone came “From Judah” (Zech 10:4). Unfortunately, “The stone the builders rejected has become the cornerstone” (Psalm 118:22; 20:17) and they didn’t recognize Him.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Peter did recognize Him and wrote "See, I lay a stone in Zion, a chosen and precious cornerstone, and the one who trusts in him will never be put to shame" (1st Pet 2:6).

The Seat of the Universal Kingdom

If you read much of Revelation 21 you'll discover that the New Jerusalem will descend out of heaven and that is the central place where God will rule out of. It's not so much that we go to heaven but heaven comes down to earth and besides, heaven is any place where the presence of God is. Heaven is not so much a place as it is a Person and that Person is Jesus Christ. In the Apostle John's vision in Revelation 14:1 he writes "Then I looked, and behold, on Mount Zion stood the Lamb, and with him 144,000 who had his name and his Father's name written on their foreheads." By Jesus standing on Mount Zion we understand that He stands above and rules over Mount Zion, the Kingdom of God and that is where John "saw no temple in the city, for its temple is the Lord God the Almighty and the Lamb. And the city has no need of sun or moon to shine on it, for the glory of God gives it light, and its lamp is the Lamb. By its light will the nations walk, and the kings of the earth will bring their glory into it, and its gates will never be shut by day—and there will be no night there. They will bring into it the glory and the honor of the nations" (Rev 21:22-26)

Conclusion

If you've had a time where you have repented of your sins; that is if you've forsaken them and turned away from them, and then placed your trust in Christ, you will be in the New Jerusalem and have a part in Mount Zion's Kingdom of God, but if not, know this, "nothing unclean will ever enter it, nor anyone who does what is detestable or false, but only those who are written in the Lamb's book of life" (Rev 21:27).

NOTE: For issues and details related to Heaven and life after death, as well as covering related topics and including different perspectives (including N.T. Wright) - see "Reference Notes on Heaven" (based in part on the book, Heaven, by Randy Alcorn).

Mounts of the Bible

http://lawofliberty.com/sermons/Resources/mountsofthebible.pdf [PDF]

VII. Zion -- The Mount Of Blessings

A. Zion was an ancient Jebusite fortress situated on the southeast hill of Jerusalem at the junction of the Kidron and the Tyropean valleys. The name came to stand not only for the fortress but also for the hill on which the fortress stood. After David captured the fortress, he called Zion the "City of David" (2 Samuel 5:7).

B. After Solomon built the temple, the name "Zion" was extended to include the temple area. Eventually, Zion was used as a name for Jerusalem, the land of Judah and the people of Israel as a whole. After Zion came to figuratively represent Israel, it was carried into the New Testament and attached to God's spiritual kingdom, the church.

C. This mount is different. It is not a physical mount like Sinai, but rather a spiritual one (Hebrews 12:22-24). It symbolizes the light and glory of the New Covenant. It was prophesied that Jesus would come out of Zion (Romans 9:33; 11:26).

D. Notice the glory and triumph associated with this mountain. In Revelation 14:1-3, the 144,000 were with the Lamb singing a new song. This symbolized the security and victorious spirit of rejoicing enjoyed by the church because the Lord is in their midst.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Why is Zion so Important?

http://bobsorge.com/2013/12/why-zion-was-so-important/

Beautiful in elevation, the joy of the whole earth, is Mount Zion on the sides of the north, the city of the great King (Psalm 48:2).

When David set his sights on Jerusalem, he was tapping into a spiritual stream of prophetic significance that was centuries old. Jerusalem had been on God's mind for a long time. It's a city whose profound spiritual history reached back a thousand years before David to the time of Abraham.

The first mention of Jerusalem in the Bible occurs in Genesis 14, at a time when Lot had been carried captive by invading forces. In a stunning military victory, Abraham delivered Lot from his captors and brought him safely home. Upon his return, Melchizedek went out to meet Abraham and bless him. Melchizedek was the king of Jerusalem (Salem) and also the priest of God Most High (see Genesis 14:14-24). Since Zion was Jerusalem's safest neighborhood and thus its most ancient neighborhood—the "old city" if you will—it is reasonable to conclude that Melchizedek's throne was in Zion proper (even though it wasn't called Zion at the time). We could say, therefore, that Melchizedek came out of Zion in order to bless Abraham.

There was a second time when Abraham quietly brushed with Zion—when Abraham led his son, Isaac, to Mount Moriah, bound him, and placed him on a makeshift altar (see Genesis 22). Abraham intended to obey God's voice and sacrifice his only son. A voice from heaven stopped him, and instead God provided a ram for the burnt offering. This all happened on Moriah.

Moriah is a hill within the city limits of contemporary Jerusalem. Moriah was the place where Solomon built his temple, and today it is the site of the Mosque of Omar (the Dome of the Rock). So when Abraham was on Moriah, he would have been within eyeshot of Zion and Melchizedek's governmental seat. There is no biblical hint that he popped in on Melchizedek at that time, but the proximity would have made it very easy to do.

Melchizedek was the first priest of God to appear in Scripture, and it was no coincidence that his throne was in Zion (called Salem at the time). Jesus Christ was later declared to be a Priest in the order of Melchizedek (Psalm 110:4). As such, Jesus is the rightful heir to the throne of Zion.

The Bible draws a great line of prophetic purpose between Melchizedek and Jesus Christ (see Hebrews 5-7). David stepped into the matrix of that divine purpose when he chose, under Holy Spirit direction, to conquer Zion.

And like Melchizedek before him, David was called of God to function in both a kingly and priestly capacity. This is why we see David putting on a linen ephod—which was a garment for priests to wear—at the procession of the ark to Zion (1 Chronicles 15:27). As a king, David was claiming also to be a priest. We know, however, that David was not pretending to be a Levitical priest since he was not of the tribe of Levi. Of what priesthood was he, then? There is only one remaining possibility. Clearly, David saw himself serving the Lord as a priest in the order of Melchizedek—a priesthood that is both priestly and kingly. David had no right to serve as a priest in the Aaronic order, but as a priest in the order of Melchizedek he was given divine permission to place the ark in open view, sit before it, and minister to the Lord.

While serving in this priestly capacity, David was shown that Messiah would serve before God in the same priesthood. This is why David wrote, "The LORD has sworn and will not relent, 'You are a priest forever according to the order of Melchizedek'" (Psalm 110:4). David's zeal for Zion was rooted in his understanding that one day Messiah would rule in Jerusalem as a Priest/King, just like Melchizedek did centuries before.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Jerusalem is a city like none other! It holds the distinction of being the only place on earth God chose as His eternal home (see Psalm 132:13-14). This is why history revolves around this city and God's agenda for it. There are said to be 685 cities in the earth with a population larger than Jerusalem, and yet Jerusalem makes international headlines consistently more than most of them. What is the deal with Jerusalem, anyway? Why is it the most important city on earth? What makes it so different from other cities?

The answer is that God's eyes and interests are riveted upon Jerusalem and, consequently, so are Satan's. No location on earth matches Jerusalem for intensity of heavenly attention and spiritual warfare.

Zion and Jerusalem

The name Zion was used initially in Scripture for the small citadel inside Jerusalem where David placed his throne. Over time, however, the Holy Spirit began to broaden the concept of Zion in Scripture until it sometimes referred to all of Jerusalem (e.g., Psalm 76:2), or even the entire nation of Israel (e.g., Isaiah 3:16). When Zion is mentioned in the Bible, therefore, the precise meaning of the term can vary a bit depending on the context.

I find the following definition helpful. Zion is Jerusalem, particularly in regard to her Davidic inheritance. By "her Davidic inheritance," I mean the promise of God to establish the Son of David upon the throne of Zion forever (Psalm 89:3-4, 29, 35-37; 132:11-18).

God had this to say about Zion: "For Zion's sake I will not hold My peace, and for Jerusalem's sake I will not rest, until her righteousness goes forth as brightness, and her salvation as a lamp that burns" (Isaiah 62:1). No wonder Jerusalem is in the news almost every day! God Himself is resolved to labor without rest until Jerusalem's righteousness and salvation shines brightly in the earth.

Jerusalem's salvation is not even remotely seen right now. Men look at her today and see reproach, strife, stubbornness, and religious wars. What will it take to transform Jerusalem from its current condition to a city that shines brightly before the whole earth? Only one thing can effect that kind of transformation—the physical return of Jesus Christ. Only when Jesus establishes His throne in Zion will Jerusalem become a praise in all the earth (see Isaiah 62:7).

Zion: Political and Worship Capital

God chose the most impenetrable fortress in the entire land of Canaan as the geographical seat of Christ's throne and authority. Zion's reputation as unconquerable reflected the enduring nature of Christ's Kingdom. "His kingdom is the one which shall not be destroyed, and His dominion shall endure to the end" (Daniel 6:26).

David established his throne in Zion as a prophetic declaration that eventually his Son, the Messiah, would reign in that exact place. In David's time, Zion's primary identity was the governmental seat for David's throne. Using an American term, Zion was David's "White House."

Once he established his political capital in Zion, David then used his authority to establish Zion as a seat for 24/7 worship to the Lord (1 Chronicles 25). David understood the pattern of worship in the heavenlies (Psalm 119:96). He observed that wherever God's throne is established there is incessant worship arising before Him. To fulfill that divine pattern, David inaugurated 24/7 worship and prayer in the stronghold of Zion. That 24/7 house of prayer represented the worship and praise that will arise incessantly to Jesus when He returns to earth and places His throne in Zion. Davidic-style worship will continue in Zion forever.

Zion, therefore, represents two things. Zion is:

•The seat of governmental authority, and

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

•The seat of incessant worship.

When David conquered Zion, it was so that he might establish both realities in Zion in their proper order.

We are watching an unprecedented phenomenon taking place in the earth right now. 24/7 houses of prayer are arising throughout the earth. As incessant worship is established before the Lord of God, it provides an atmosphere where the governmental authority of Christ in the earth can be exercised. And the inverse is also true: Whenever the kingdom of God is established with authority in a region, it makes a way for 24/7 houses of prayer to be raised up in that region.

David's First Order of Business

David was promised by Samuel that he would be king of Israel, but it did not happen all at once. First he went through approximately ten years of refining in the wilderness. The latter part of that season was spent in exile in the land of the Philistines. Once his preparation was complete, he was given the kingdom of Israel in two stages.

In the first stage, David was crowned king only of the tribe of Judah. Being of the tribe of Judah himself, his relatives were first to crown him. He reigned over Judah for seven years from the capital city of Hebron, while Ishbosheth, Saul's son, reigned over the other eleven tribes. During this time Jerusalem lay within the boundaries of the tribe of Benjamin and was, therefore, outside David's jurisdiction.

Seven years later Ishbosheth died. Then the eleven tribes of Israel gathered together and asked David to reign over all twelve tribes of Israel. For the next thirty-three years, David was king over the entire nation.

Once David was crowned king of the twelve tribes, Jerusalem came under his jurisdiction. David had been waiting for this moment and immediately sprang to action regarding Zion.

As you read the biblical passages below, notice how one event followed the other. First came David's coronation as king.

Then all the tribes of Israel came to David at Hebron and spoke, saying, "Indeed we are your bone and your flesh. Also, in time past, when Saul was king over us, you were the one who led Israel out and brought them in; and the LORD said to you, 'You shall shepherd My people Israel, and be ruler over Israel.'" Therefore all the elders of Israel came to the king at Hebron, and King David made a covenant with them at Hebron before the LORD. And they anointed David king over Israel. David was thirty years old when he began to reign, and he reigned forty years. In Hebron he reigned over Judah seven years and six months, and in Jerusalem he reigned thirty-three years over all Israel and Judah (2 Samuel 5:1-5).

I want you to notice, now, the next verse in the Bible. What was David's very first act as king of Israel? Look at it.

And the king and his men went to Jerusalem against the Jebusites, the inhabitants of the land, who spoke to David, saying, "You shall not come in here; but the blind and the lame will repel you," thinking, "David cannot come in here." Nevertheless David took the stronghold of Zion (that is, the City of David) (2 Samuel 5:6-7).

First came the coronation over the twelve tribes; then came the conquest of Zion.

David's very first order of business as king of the entire land was to target the stronghold of Zion. Clearly, Zion was in his crosshairs all along, but he could not engage the stronghold as long as it lay outside his political jurisdiction. Once he had the authority to do something about it, he did not pause for the slightest moment but headed straight for Zion.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

What is the biblical significance of Zion? What is Zion? What is Mount Zion?

https://www.compellingtruth.org/Zion.html

The first instance of the word Zion in the Bible is in 2 Samuel, and says, "David took the stronghold of Zion, that is, the city of David" (2 Samuel 5:7). We can gather from this and other similar verses (1 Kings 8:1; 1 Chronicles 11:5; 2 Chronicles 5:2) that Zion and the City of David are meant to be synonymous. The Davidic Covenant, which prophesies the greatness of Solomon's rule, also prophesies that an Eternal Kingdom will come from David's line (2 Samuel 7:12-16). When Zion is mentioned in subsequent passages, it carries a spiritual, eternal meaning—just as King David was a temporal version of the eternal King, Jesus Christ, the "city of David" was a temporal shadow of the eternal and spiritual city, Zion, where Christ will reign.

Zion is described in the Psalms as "the City of our God" and a place that belongs to Him. Situated on a high mountain, it is called "the joy of all the earth" and "the perfection of beauty" (Psalm 48; 50:2). It is the city that God will "establish forever" and from which the kings of other nations will flee in panic (Psalm 48:4-8). Because of these descriptions, it is rational to assume that Zion is the location of Christ's rule on earth during the millennial kingdom (Revelation 12:5; Revelation 20:4-6; Psalm 69:35). Repeatedly, when the nation of Israel is favored or promised future glory, Zion is mentioned (Psalm 102:16; Psalm 99:2; Psalm 126:1; Psalm 128:5). Zion is the place from which "the Lord has commanded the blessing, life forevermore" (Psalm 133:3). Zion can be thought of as the spiritual and future eternal Jerusalem (Isaiah 28:16; Isaiah 33:20). "And the ransomed of the Lord shall return and come to Zion with singing; everlasting joy shall be upon their heads; they shall obtain gladness and joy, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away" (Isaiah 35:10).

Zion is contrasted with Babylon, the place of exile (Psalm 137:1) where their captors taunted them, saying "sing us one of the songs of Zion!" (Psalm 137:3). Just as Zion is both a real and a spiritual place, Babylon is its opposite: a real place that has a symbolic, spiritual counterpart as the persecutor of God's people and a city of evil (Revelation 18:1-24). Mount Zion, the physical place, is on a hill just outside of Jerusalem's wall. It has been associated with the Temple Mount, but also with the western hill. The entire land of Israel has also been referred to as Mount Zion.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Zion

http://classic.net.bible.org/dictionary.php?word=zion

Zion: NET NIV NRSV NASB TEV

one of the hills on which Jerusalem was built; the temple area; the city of Jerusalem; God's people a town and citadel; an ancient part of Jerusalem

---

monument; raised up; sepulcher

Google Maps: Zion (31° 46´, 35° 14´)

Arts:

Arts Topics: 102: Hope for Zion; 132: Zion and the Seed of David; 1: Zion Mourning; Everlasting Salvation for Zion; The Ark Brought to Zion; The Coming of Zion's King; The Glory of Zion; The Lord Does Not Forget Zion; Woe to Zion's Complacent

Hebrew

Strongs #06726: Nwyu Tsiyown

Zion = "parched place"

1) another name for Jerusalem especially in the prophetic books

6726 Tsiyown tsee-yone'

the same (regularly) as 6725; Tsijon (as a permanent capital), a mountain of Jerusalem:-Zion.
see HEBREW for 06725

Zion [EBD]

sunny; height, one of the eminences on which Jerusalem was built. It was surrounded on all sides, except the north, by deep valleys, that of the Tyropoeon (q.v.) separating it from Moriah (q.v.), which it surpasses in height by 105 feet. It was the south-eastern hill of Jerusalem.

When David took it from the Jebusites (Josh. 15:63; 2 Sam. 5:7) he built on it a citadel and a palace, and it became "the city of David" (1 Kings 8:1; 2 Kings 19:21, 31; 1 Chr. 11:5). In the later books of the Old Testament this name was sometimes used (Ps. 87:2; 149:2; Isa. 33:14; Joel 2:1) to denote Jerusalem in general, and sometimes God's chosen Israel (Ps. 51:18; 87:5).

In the New Testament (see SION Ã‚Â»3448) it is used sometimes to denote the Church of God (Heb. 12:22), and sometimes the heavenly city (Rev. 14:1).

Zion [NAVE]

ZION, called also Sion, stronghold of Jerusalem. Taken from the Jebusites by David, 2 Sam. 5:6-9; 1 Chr. 11:5-7.
Called thereafter "the city of David," 2 Sam. 5:7, 9; 6:12, 16; 1 Kin. 8:1; 1 Chr. 11:5, 7; 15:1, 29; 2 Chr. 5:2.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Ark of the covenant placed in, 2 Sam. 6:12, 16; 1 Kin. 8:1; 1 Chr. 15:1, 29; 2 Chr. 5:2; removed from, to Solomon's temple on Mount Moriah, 1 Kin. 8:1; 2 Chr. 5:2, with 2 Chr. 3:1.
Collectively, the place, the forms, and the assemblies of Israel's worship, 2 Kin. 19:21, 31; Psa. 9:11; 48:2, 11, 12; 74:2; 132:13; 137:1; Isa. 35:10; 40:9; 49:14; 51:16; 52:1, 2, 7, 8; 60:14; 62:1, 11; Jer. 31:6; 50:5; Lam. 1:4; Joel 2:1, 15; Matt. 21:5; John 12:15; Rom. 9:33; 11:26; 1 Pet. 2:6.
Name of, applied to Jerusalem, Psa. 87:2, 5; 149:2; Song 3:11; Isa. 33:14, 20; Jer. 9:19; 30:17; Zech. 9:13.
Called the city of God, Psa. 87:2, 3; Isa. 60:14.
Restoration of, promised, Isa. 51:3, 11, 16; 52:1, 2, 7, 8; 59:20; 60:14; Obad. 17, 21; Zeph. 3:14, 16; Zech. 1:14, 17; 2:7, 10; 8:2, 3; 9:9, 13.
Name of, applied to the city of the redeemed, Heb. 12:22; Rev. 14:1.
See: Church; Jerusalem.

ZION [SMITH]

[JERUSALEM]

ZION [ISBE]

ZION - zi'-on (tsiyon; Sion):

1. Meaning of the Word

2. The Zion of the Jebusites

3. Zion of the Prophets

4. Zion in Later Poetical Writings and Apocrypha

5. Omission of Name by Some Writers

6. The Name "Zion" in Christian Times

LITERATURE

1. Meaning of the Word:

A name applied to Jerusalem, or to certain parts of it, at least since the time of David. Nothing certain is known of the meaning. Gesenius and others have derived it from a Hebrew root tsahah, "to be dry"; Delitzsch from tsiwwah, "to set up" and Wetzstein from tsin, "to protect." Gesenius finds a more hopeful suggestion in the Arabic equivalent cihw, the Arabic cahwat signifying "ridge of a mountain" or "citadel," which at any rate suitably applies to what we know to have been the original Zion (compare Smith, HGHL, under the word).

Considerable confusion has been caused in the past by the want of clear understanding regarding the different sites which have respectively been called "Zion" during the centuries. It will make matters clearer if we take the application of the name: in David's time; in the early Prophets, etc.; in late poetical writings and in the Apocrypha; and in Christian times.

2. The Zion of the Jebusites:

Jerus (in the form Uru-sa-lim) is the oldest name we know for this city; it goes back at least 400 years before David. In 2 Sam 5:6-9, "The king and his men went to Jerusalem against the Jebusites. .... Nevertheless David took the stronghold of Zion; the same is the city of David .... And David dwelt in the stronghold, and called it the city of David." It is evident that Zion was the name of the citadel of the Jebusite city of Jerusalem. That this citadel and incidentally then city of Jerusalem around it were on the long ridge running South of the Temple (called the southeastern hill in the article JERUSALEM, III, (3) (which see)) is now accepted by almost all modern scholars, mainly on the following grounds:

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

(1) The near proximity of the site to the only known spring, now the "Virgin's Fount," once called GIHON (which see). From our knowledge of other ancient sites all over Palestine, as well as on grounds of common-sense, it is hardly possible to believe that the early inhabitants of this site with such an abundant source at their very doors could have made any other spot their headquarters.

(2) The suitability of the site for defense.--The sites suited for settlement in early Canaanite times were all, if we may judge from a number of them now known, of this nature--a rocky spur isolated on three sides by steep valleys, and, in many sites, protected at the end where they join the main mountain ridge by either a valley or a rocky spur.

(3) The size of the ridge, though very small to our modern ideas, is far more in keeping with what we know of fortified towns of that period than such an area as presented by the southwestern hill--the traditional site of Zion. Mr. Macalister found by actual excavation that the great walls of Gezer, which must have been contemporaneous with the Jebusite Jerusalem, measured approximately 4,500 feet in circumference. G. A. Smith has calculated that a line of wall carried along the known and inferred scarps around the edge of this southeastern hill would have an approximate circumference of 4,250 feet. The suitability of the site to a fortified city like Gezer, Megiddo, Soco, and other sites which have been excavated, strikes anyone familiar with these places.

(4) The archaeological remains on these hills found by Warren and Professor Guthe, and more particularly in the recent excavations of Captain Parker (see JERUSALEM), show without doubt that this was the earliest settlement in pre-Israelite times. Extensive curves and rock-cuttings, cave-dwellings and tombs, and enormous quantities of early "Amorite" (what may be popularly called "Jebusite") pottery show that the spot must have been inhabited many centuries before the time of David. The reverse is equally true; on no other part of the Jerusalem site has any quantity of such early pottery been found.

(5) The Bible evidence that Zion originally occupied this site is clear. It will be found more in detail under the heading "City of David" in the article JERUSALEM, IV, (5), but three points may be mentioned here: (a) The Ark of the Covenant was brought up out of the city of David to the Temple (1 Ki 8:1; 2 Ch 5:2), and Pharaoh's daughter "came up out of the city of David unto her house which Solomon had built for her"--adjacent to the Temple (1 Ki 9:24). This expression "up" could not be used of any other hill than of the lower-lying eastern ridge; to go from the southwestern hill (traditional Zion) to the Temple is to go down. (b) Hezekiah constructed the well-known Siloam tunnel from Gihon to the Pool of Siloam. He is described (2 Ch 32:30) as bringing the waters of Gihon "straight down on the west side of the city of David." (c) Manasseh (2 Ch 33:14) built "an outer wall to the city of David, on the west side of Gihon, in the valley" (i.e. nachal--the name of the Kedron valley).

3. Zion of the Prophets:

Zion, renamed the City of David, then originally was on this eastern ridge. But the name did not stay there. It would almost seem as if the name was extended to the Temple site when the ark was carried there, for in the pre-exilic Prophets the references to Zion all appear to have referred to the Temple Hill. To quote a few examples: "And Yahweh will create over the whole habitation of mount Zion, and over her assemblies, a cloud and smoke by day, and the shining of a flaming fire by night" (Isa 4:5); "Yahweh of hosts, who dwelleth in mount Zion" (Isa 8:18); "Let us go up to Zion unto Yahweh our God" (Jer 31:6); "Yahweh will reign over them in mount Zion" (Mic 4:7). All these, and numbers more, clearly show that at that time Zion was the Temple Hill.

4. Zion in Later Poetical Writings and Apocrypha:

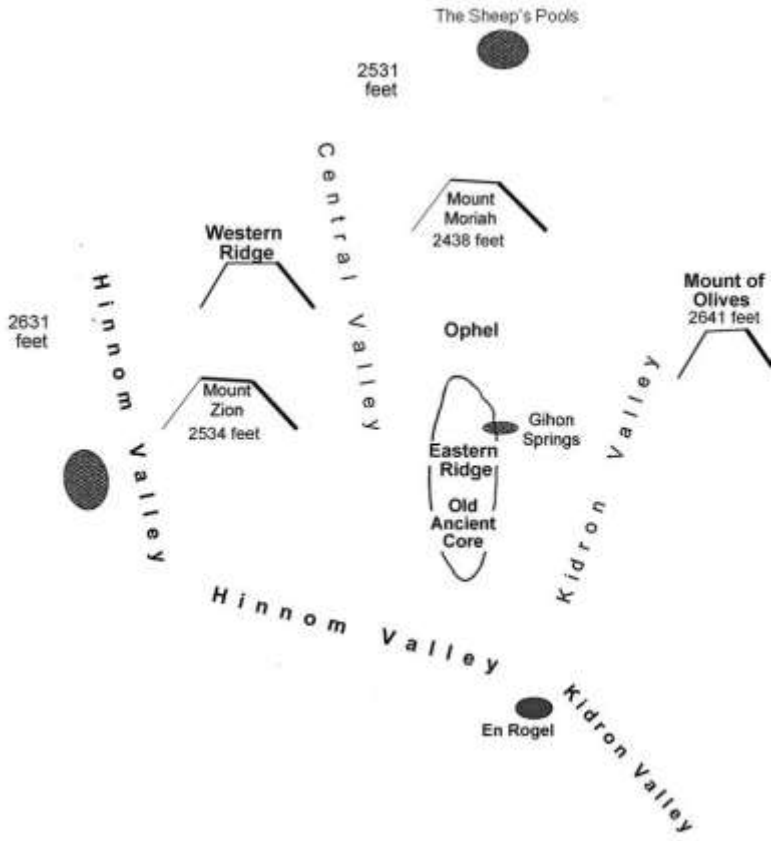
In many of the later writings, particularly poetical references, Zion appears to be the equivalent of Jerusalem; either in parallelism (Ps 102:21; Am 1:2; Mic 3:10,12; Zec 1:14,17; 8:3; Zeph 3:16) or alone

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

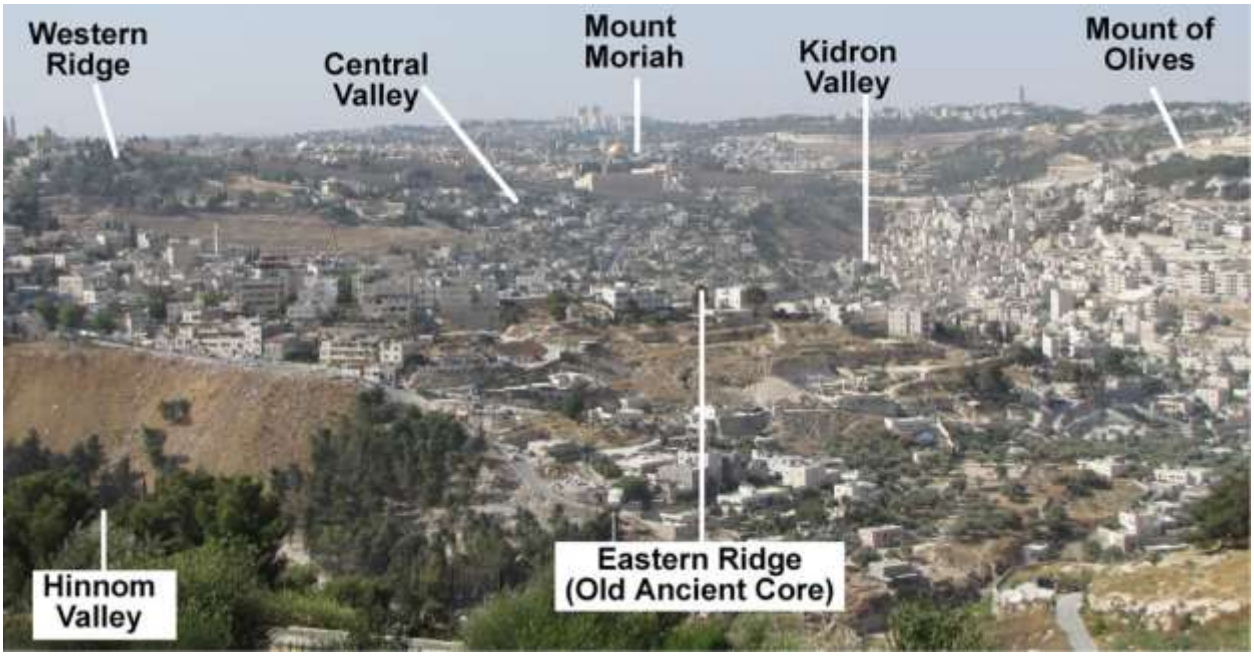
(Jer 3:14; Lam 5:11); even here many of the references will do equally well for the Temple Hill. The term "Daughter of zion" is applied to the captive Jews (Lam 4:22), but in other references to the people of Jerusalem (Isa 1:8; 52:2; Jer 4:31, etc.). When we come to the Apocrypha, in 2 Esdras there are several references in which Zion is used for the captive people of Judah (2:40; 3:2,31; 10:20,39,44), but "Mount Zion" in this and other books (e.g. 1 Macc 4:37,60; 5:54; 6:48,62, etc.) is always the Temple Hill.

5. Omission of Name by Some Writers:

It has been pointed out as a curious and unaccountable exception that in Ezekiel as well as in Chronicles, Ezra and Nehemiah, there is no mention of Zion, except the incidental reference to David's capture of the Jebusite fort. The references in the other Prophets and the Psalms are so copious that there must be some religious reason for this. The Chronicler (2 Ch 3:1), too, alone refers to the Temple as on Mount Moriah. It is also noticeable that only in these books (2 Ch 27:3; 33:14; Neh 3:26 f; 11:21) does the name "Ophel" appear as a designation of a part of the southeastern hill, which apparently might equally fitly have been termed Zion. See OPHEL. Josephus never uses the name "Zion" nor does it occur in the New Testament, except in two quotations (Heb 12:22; Rev 14:1).



6. The Name "Zion" in Christian Times:



Among the earlier Christian writers who mention "Zion," Origen used it as equivalent to the Temple Hill, but in the 4th century writers commence to localize it up the southern part of the western hill. It was a period when Biblical topography was settled in a very arbitrary manner, without any scientific or critical examination of the evidence, and this tradition once established remained, like many such traditions, undisputed until very recent years. To W. F. Birch belongs much of the credit for the promulgation of the newer views which now receive the adherence of almost every living authority on the topography of Jerusalem.

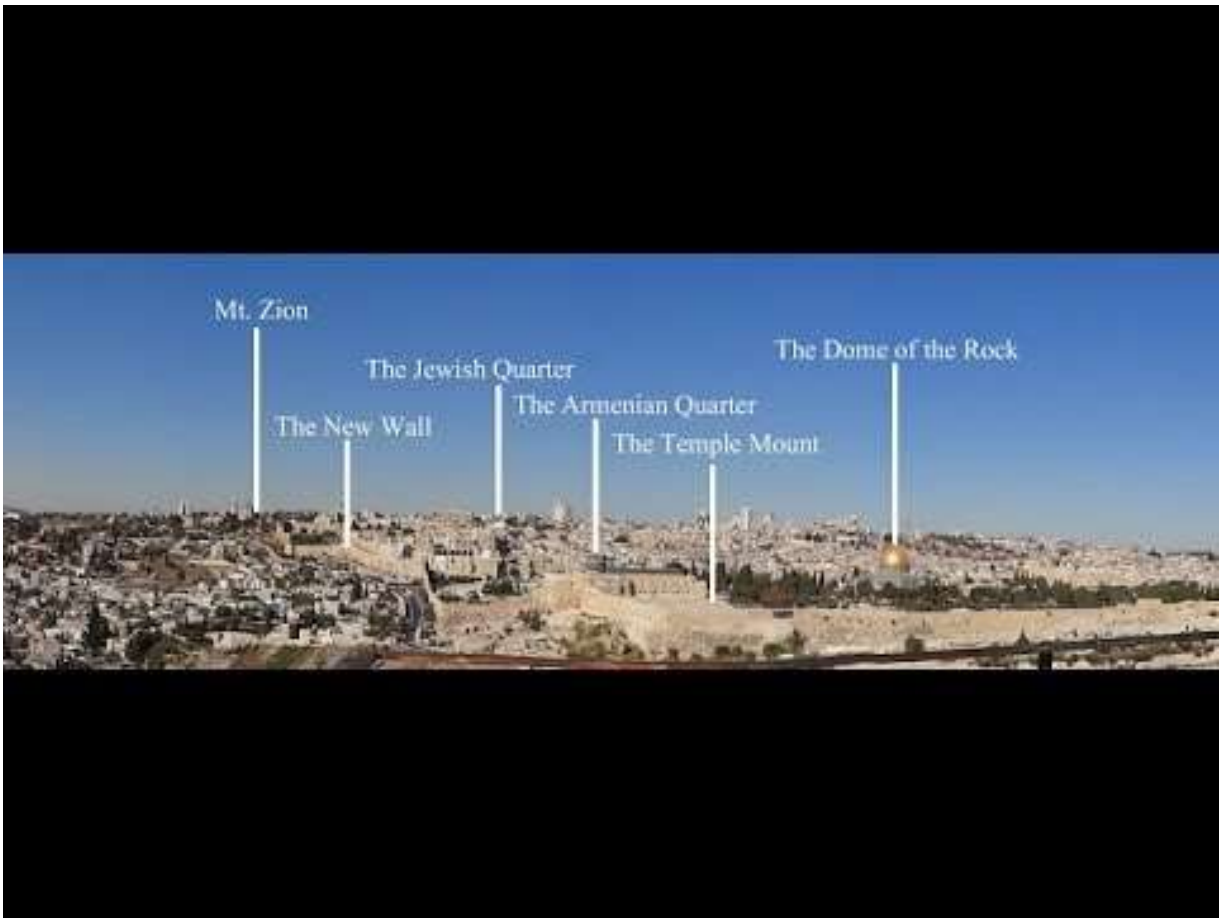
 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

14- Western Hill (or, Mount Zion)

http://www.generationword.com/jerusalem101/14-western-hill-mount-zion.html

http://www.generationword.com/jerusalem101-photos/2010/topography-photo-id.jpg

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



This is a view from the southwest end of the Temple Mount wall looking up at the Western Ridge from the general area where the Central Valley is buried.
(Notice the Herodian street and curb beginning in the bottom right corner of photo in front of the rubble that fell from the Temple Mount in the bottom left corner)

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

A view of the Old City of Jerusalem extending from Mount Zion at the left edge of the frame to the corner of the Temple Mount near the right edge.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Mount Zion (Modern)
Credit: www.holylandphotos.org

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

HEBREW WORD! – ZION

http://gifkg.org/hebrewword/zion.html

The original Hebrew written text was a picture language--much like the Egyptian hieroglyphics. When Moses wrote the Torah (the first five books of the Bible), he used this picture language.

Each letter of the Hebrew alphabet is a picture with meaning. When we put these letters together, they form a word, but they also form a story within the word! Proverbs 25:2 tells us, "The honour of God is to hide a thing, And the honour of kings to search out a matter." (Young's Literal Translation) This is exactly what God has done with His language!

Today's Hebrew Word is "Zion." We know this as the City of David, or Jerusalem. But within the name of the city, the picture language shows us something interesting: the first letter is a "fish hook", and the last letter represents a fish darting through water--so we have the "fish hook" to catch the “fish".

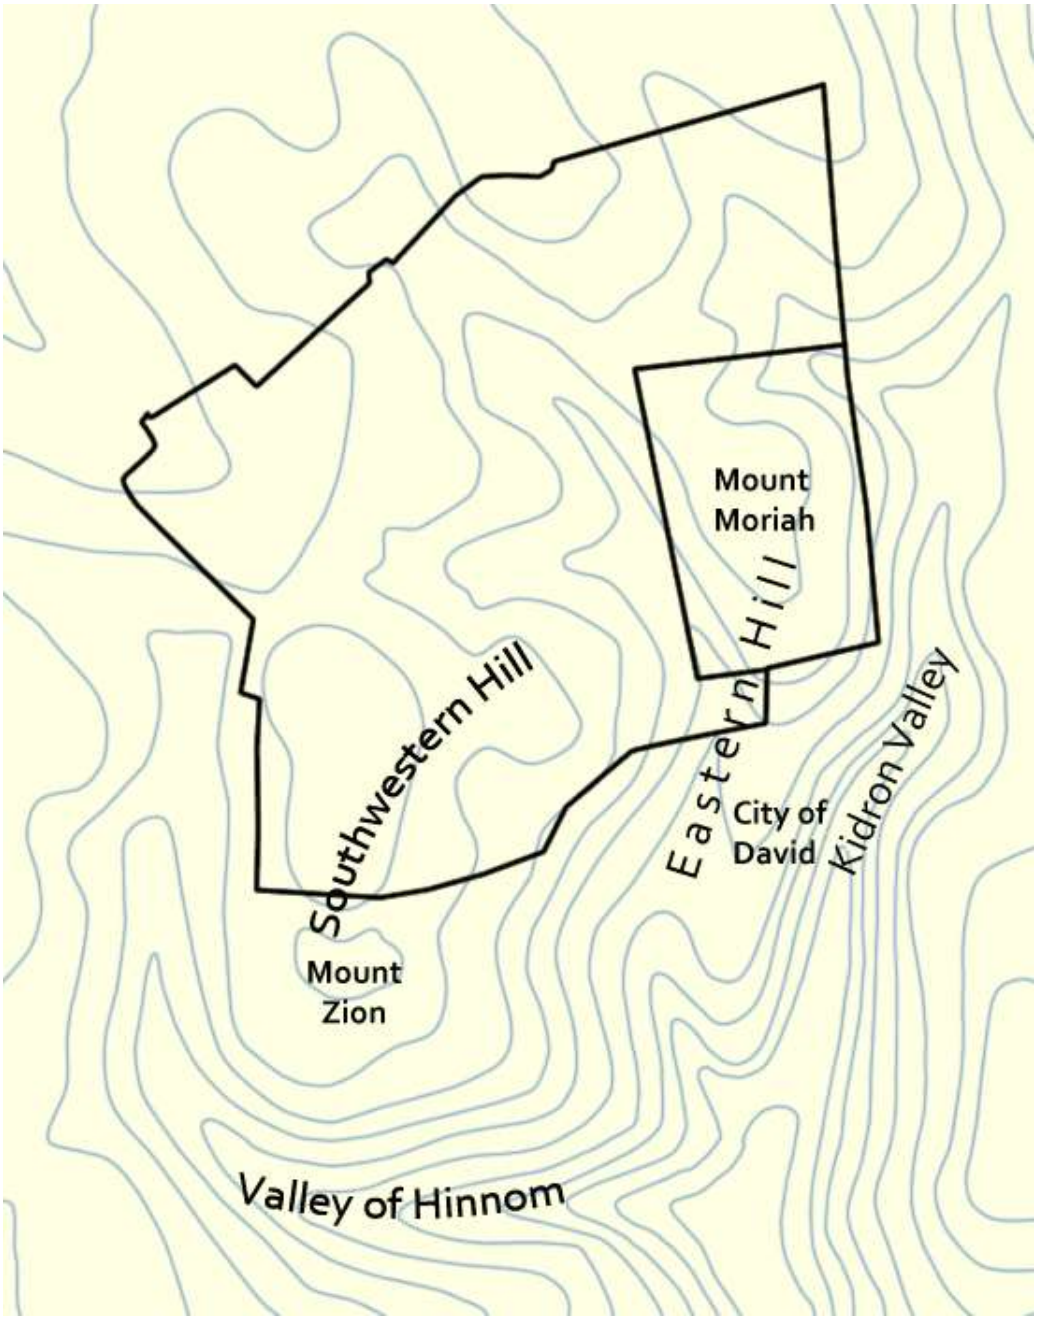
Remember, in Matthew 4:19, Yeshua said he would make us "fishers of men."

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

But what is the bait for the hook?

The middle two letters tell us the bait is the "hand" that is "nailed"!

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



Mt. Zion, a view from Abu Tor

View of Mount Zion from Mount of Olives

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Natural topography of the old city of Jerusalem and its surroundings.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Derekh Ha'Apifyor (Pope's Way) leading up to Mount Zion, so named by the Israeli government in honor of Pope Paul VI's historic visit to Israel in 1964

The three different locations

The name Mount Zion referred successively to three locations, as Jerusalemites preserved the time-honoured name, but shifted the location they venerated as the focal point of biblical Jerusalem to the site considered most appropriate in their own time.

Lower Eastern Hill (City of David)

At first, Mount Zion was the name given to the Jebusite fortified city on the lower part of ancient Jerusalem's Eastern Hill, also known as the City of David.

According to the Book of Samuel, Mount Zion was the site of the Jebusite fortress called the "stronghold of Zion" that was conquered by King David, then renamed and partially rebuilt by him as the "City of David", where he erected his palace.

Upper Eastern Hill (Temple Mount)

Once the First Temple was erected at the top of the Eastern Hill, the name "Mount Zion" migrated there too.

After the conquest of the Jebusite city, its build-up area expanded northward towards the uppermost part of the same, Eastern Hill. This highest part became the site of Solomon's Temple.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The identification of the pre-Israelite (Jebusite) and Israelite towns on the Eastern Hill is based on the existence of only one perennial water source in the area, the Gihon Spring, and on archaeological excavations revealing sections of the Bronze Age and Iron Age city walls and water systems.

The "Mount Zion" mentioned in the later parts of the Book of Isaiah (Isaiah 60:14), in the Book of Psalms, and the First Book of Maccabees (c. 2nd century BCE) seems to refer to the top of the hill, generally known as the Temple Mount.

Western Hill (today's Mount Zion)

The last shift of the name Mount Zion was to the Western Hill, which is more dominant than the Eastern Hill and seemed to first-century CE Jerusalemites the worthier location for the by-then lost palace of King David. The Western Hill is what today is called Mount Zion.

In the second half of the First Temple period, the city expanded westward and its defensive walls were extended to include the entire Western Hill behind them. Nebuchadnezzar II destroyed the city almost completely around 586 BCE, severing the continuity of historical memory. A long period of rebuilding followed, ending with Jerusalem's second total destruction at the hands of the Romans in 70 CE. Josephus, the first-century CE historian who knew the city as it was before this second catastrophic event, identified Mount Zion as being the Western Hill, separated from the lower, Eastern Hill, by what he calls the "Tyropoeon Valley". It must however be said that Josephus never used the name "Mount Zion" in any of his writings, but described the "Citadel" of King David as being situated on the higher and longer hill, thus pointing at the Western Hill as what the Bible calls Mount Zion

Biblical references

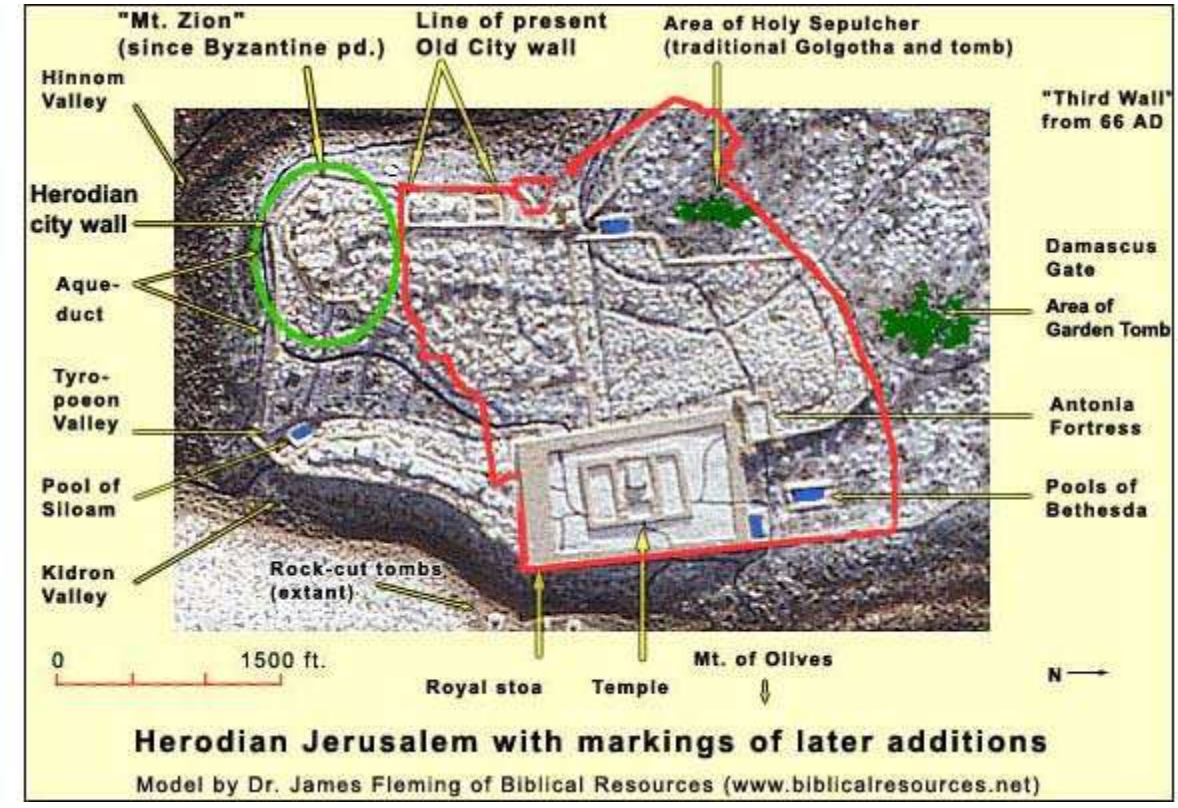
The Tanakh reference to Har Tzion (Mount Tzion) that identifies its location is derived from the Psalm 48 composed by the sons of Korah, i.e. Levites, as "the northern side of the city of the great king", which Radak interprets as the City of David "from the City of David, which is Zion (1 Kings 8:1-2; 2 Chron. 5:2)". 2 Samuel 5:7 also reads, "David took the strong hold of Zion: the same is the city of David," which identifies Mount Tzion as part of the City of David, and not an area outside today's Old City of Jerusalem. Rashi identifies the location as the source of "joy" mentioned in the Psalm as the Temple Courtyard, the location of atonement offerings in the northern part of the Temple complex.

In the New Testament, Mount Zion is used metaphorically to refer to the heavenly Jerusalem, God's holy, eternal city. Christians are said to have ". . . come to Mount Zion and to the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem, to an innumerable company of angels, to the general assembly and church of the firstborn who are registered in heaven" (Hebrews 12:22-23 cf. Revelation 14:1).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Mount Zion

http://www.netours.com/content/view/182/47/



The name "Zion" originally applied to the Jerusalem that David conquered: "Nevertheless, David took the stronghold of Zion; the same is the city of David." (2 Samuel 5:7.). This original city was located on a southern spur of the mountain where the Temple was later built. After Jerusalem expanded to include a higher hill to its west, the prophets continued to use the name Zion as a synonym for Jerusalem, e.g. Isaiah: "For out of Jerusalem a remnant will go out, and out of Mount Zion those who shall escape." (2 Kings 19:31.)

However, in the Byzantine period (if not earlier), the term came to mean just the western hill. The reason has to do with the way people read the following verses from Micah (3:12):

> Therefore Zion for your sake will be plowed like a field, > and Jerusalem will become heaps of rubble, > and the mountain of the temple like the high places of a forest.

Often the prophets say the same thing consecutively in different ways (a stylistic usage known as parallelism), but a pilgrim from Bordeaux (333 AD: our earliest Christian source describing the holy places) speaks of coming "out of Jerusalem to go up Mount Zion," with the pool of Siloam on the left. A few lines later the pilgrim cites the text from Micah. He appears to have understood it as follows: Jerusalem is the whole thing. We know that the mountain of the temple was the eastern hill. Zion must refer, therefore, to Jerusalem's other, western hill. O'Connor suggests that on the basis of such interpretations, the application of the name contracted to the western hill.

Although outside the present Old City wall, the part of the western hill that we today call Mt. Zion was inside the wall in Jesus' time:

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Jerusalem from the SW

Adapted from a photograph by Bible Places (www.bibleplaces.com)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

http://pixshark.com/mount-zion-in-the-bible.htm

Hidden - The Real location of Biblical Mt Zion! ?????? https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=tWBWkom7Z_c

Bible Gateway: Mount Zion
https://www.biblegateway.com/resources/encyclopedia-of-the-bible/Zion

ISBE: ZION
https://www.biblestudytools.com/encyclopedias/isbe/zion.html

8 Mountains of the Bible You Should Know http://www.travelledpaths.com/8-mountains-of-the-bible-you-should-know/

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Zion and Etymology

http://www.abarim-publications.com/Meaning/Zion.html

Zion in the Bible

Zion was originally a Jebusite stronghold located in or near Jerusalem or is equal to Jerusalem (2 Samuel 5:7). King David captures this stronghold and it is renamed City Of David. David sets up the tabernacle there and Solomon retrieves it from there to place the Ark and utensils in the temple.

The prophet Isaiah mentions that YHWH dwells on Mount Zion (8:18) and later writers relate the name Zion to the eternal Jerusalem (Hebrews 12:22; spelled Σιων, Sion) and heaven (Revelation 14:1).

The name Zion appears 7 times in the New Testament

Etymology of Zion

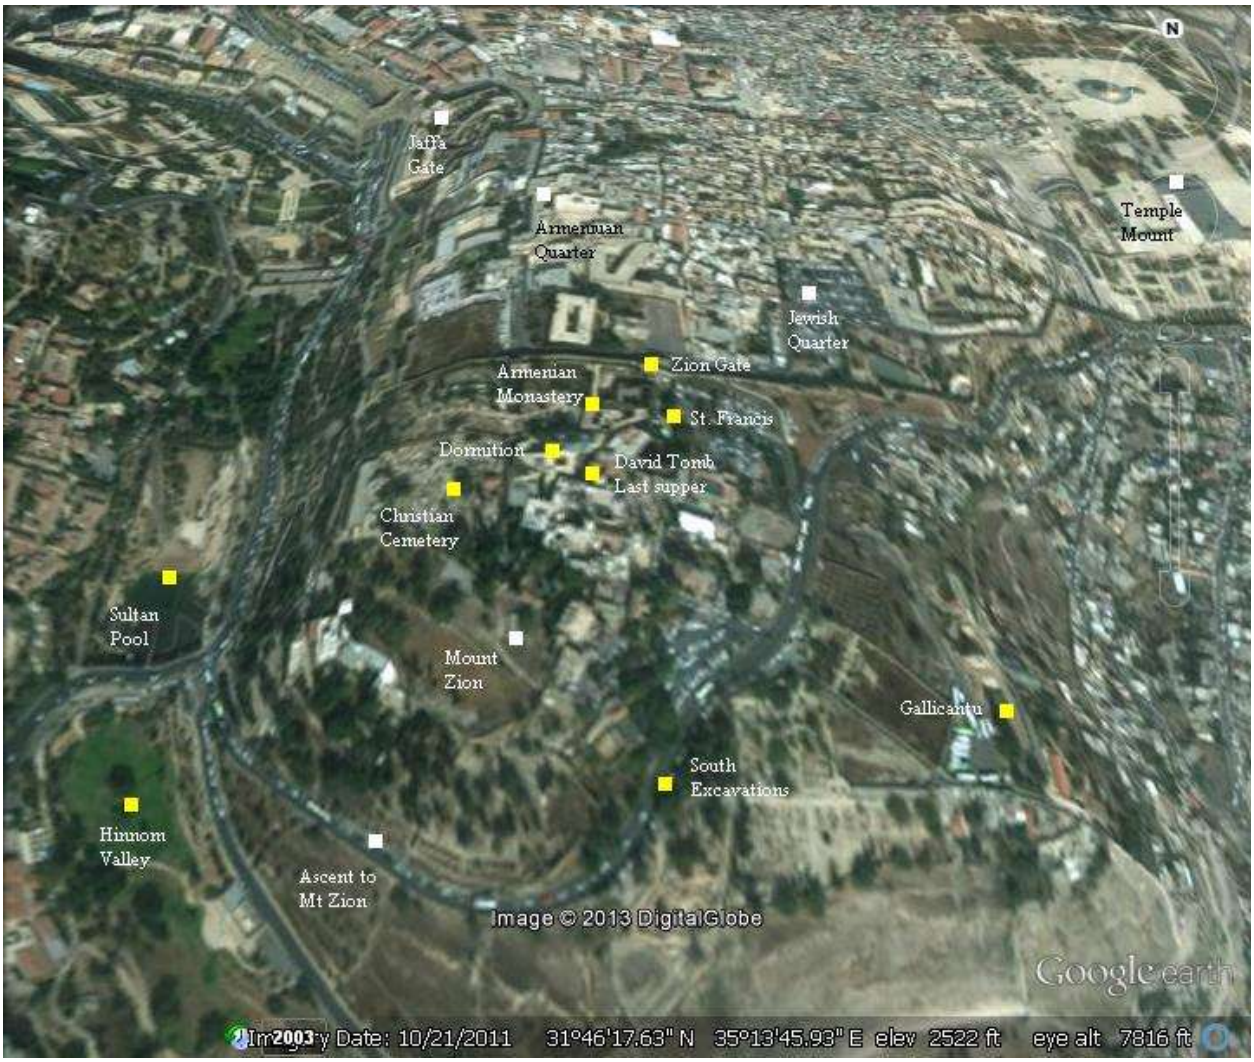
Because Zion was originally not Israeli, the name Zion comes to us probably from a language other than Hebrew. HAW Theological Wordbook of the Old Testament mentions an Arabic root s-w-n, meaning to protect or defend, which may give Zion the meaning of fortress. Others (says HAW Theological Wordbook of the Old Testament) suggest derivation from a root saha, be bald.

Spelled the way it is, however, the name Zion is identical to the Hebrew word ציון (sayon) either meaning place of dryness, or monument:

What is the biblical importance of Mount Moriah?

https://www.compellingtruth.org/Mount-Moriah.html

Biblical Symbolism: Symbols of the Church



https://www.cgg.org//index.cfm/fuseaction/Library.sr/CT/BS/k/175/Biblical-Symbolism-Symbols-of-Church.htm

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Mount Zion

http://www.biblewalks.com/sites/mountzion.html

Mount Zion is located on the south-west side of the old city, outside of the present walls. In the second temple period, mount Zion was part of the "Upper" city, and was fortified. In Roman times this was the southern side of the walled city, the place of the Jesus last supper and the home of the high priest high priest Caiaphas.

Mount Zion is an area on the south-west side of the old city. This aerial map indicates the major points of interest.

History:

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

- First temple period – The area of Mount Zion was first populated in the first temple period, but the City of David was centered in the "lower city", east and down from Mount Zion.

  According to Jewish, Christian and Muslim traditions, Mount Zion is the site of the tomb of King David.

- Second temple period – Only during the second temple period this higher hill was incorporated into the newly expanded "upper city".

  The walls from that time (2nd Century BC) are gone today, but excavations held in 1894 (F.G. Bliss) and 2008 (Y. Zelinger) revealed the foundations of the walls, gates, paved streets, and foundations from the Greek and Roman period.

- Herod - Early Roman period – A model of the Herodian city is shown here, focusing on the south side. The area of Mount Zion is marked by a yellow ellipse. The first (old) wall is located on the south west side of the city.

Jerusalem Museum model of Herod's Jerusalem - south side, with Mount Zion area marked.

According to Christian tradition, Mount Zion was the site of the palace of high priest Caiaphas, and the location of the house where Jesus held the last supper. It was also the place where his mother Mary is buried (in the Dormition). Therefore, the area has been a prime site for Christian churches, institutes, and cemeteries.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

- Late Roman period – The area of mount Zion was excluded from the Roman city planned by Hadrian (Aelia Capitolina, 2nd C AD).

- Ottoman period – The Ottoman walled city (built in 1540AD) excluded Mount Zion. The area was purchased by Christians who built monasteries, churches, cemeteries and a school.

South side:

The photo below was taken from the south side - from St. Andrews. The walls of the old city are seen on the left background, with the Tower of David and Jaffa gate on the extreme left. On the right side is Mount Zion, with the Dormition abbey on the center.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

West side:

The photo shows Mount Zion from the west. On the right side are the walls of the old city. In the slopes of Mount Zion is the Gobat school structure, built in the 19th C. Beyond it is the Dormition monastery and church structure, and its bell tower. Behind the bell tower is the traditional site of tomb of King David, and the site of the Last supper.

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Along the hillsides are Christian cemeteries, such as the west side of the Dormition abbey seen below.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

East side:

A view of the Dormition church, as seen from the "lower city". As can be seen, the height differences to mount Zion make the walk up the mountain a challenge on a hot day.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

North side

The north side of Mt Zion reaches the Ottoman walls of the Old city.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Zion Gate is located on the south-west western side of the old city. It is one of the gates leading to the Armenian and Jewish quarters:

.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Hinnom Valley

The valley below the slopes of Mount Zion is Gey Ben-Hinnom ("valley of the son of Hinnom"). This valley starts from the southwest side of the old city (a location known as the "Sultan pool"), and reaches the Kidron valley to the east of this location.

The valley is named in Hebrew "Gei ben Hinnom" , meaning the valley of the son of Hinnom (who this person was, or why the valley was named after him, is not clear). The valley is the source of the Hebrew word for Gehinom (Gehenna, Tephet, Hell). The symbol of evil is based on the fact that in ancient times children were sacrificed to the pagan god Molech; later the city garbage was burnt here. There are many Biblical references: (Jeremiah 7: 31: "And they have built the high places of Tophet, which is in the valley of the son of Hinnom, to burn their sons and their daughters in the fire; which I commanded them not, neither came it into my heart").

The photos above and below show the valley at the southern foothills of Mount Zion, which are seen on the left side. This deep valley made Mount Zion protected from this south side and the west side.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The next photo shows the view from the lower end of Mt. Zion, towards the valley of Hinnom. The village of Silwan is in the left background, and its southern superb Abu-Tor on the right side. Along the southern bank of the valley are rock hewn tombs.

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

South side excavations

Sections of the City walls, dated to the second temple and Byzantine periods, were excavated on the southern slopes of Mt Zion, west of the Catholic cemetery. The excavations (conducted 2007-2008, directed by Yehiel Zelinger) are part of a grand plan to incorporate these city walls in the Jerusalem walls national park. Earlier excavations of Bliss and Dickie (1894-1897) have traversed the external contours of the walls.

The excavation site is viewed from Abu-Tor, south of Mount Zion, across the valley of Hinnom. The location of the excavations are at the top of the path.

A panoramic view of the south side of Mount Zion, as seen from Abu-Tor, in this next photo. Pressing on this picture will pop up the panoramic viewer. Using this flash-based panoramic viewer, you can move around 200 degrees, zooming in and out - viewing the site in the amazing full screen mode (like you are really there). Points of interest are indicated on the view. It may take minutes to upload, but then its worth the waiting time.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Elusive Mount Zion

http://jbq.jewishbible.org/assets/Uploads/303/303_zion303a.pdf [PDF]

Panoramic View of Mount Zion

Throughout the Bible, the name Zion means all of Jerusalem. As David, Solomon and subsequent kings of Judah built new areas of the city, the name stretched to encompass the expanded whole. The prophet Micah added a new element, by referring to Zion as a mountain: The Lord will reign over them in Mount Zion (4:7). Still, the understanding of "Zion" as the city itself remained intact. For centuries, "Zion" and "Jerusalem" were synonymous, especially in the Books of Isaiah (36 references) and Psalms (35 references).

As the prophetic vision grew, the definition of Zion grew with it. Often, it meant the whole of the land of Judah: 'O My people who dwell in Zion' (Isa. 10:24). It even came to mean the people of Israel, rather than any specific place: . . . and saying to Zion 'You are My people' (51:16).

Then a curious thing happened. Jerusalem got bigger but "Zion" got smaller. By the end of the biblical period, Zion meant the Temple area rather than the city as a whole: 'I am the Lord your God, who dwells in Zion, My holy mountain' (Joel 4:17). This passage in Joel can be read as referring to the city, but the use of "Zion" in the Apocrypha is unambiguous: "After these events, Nicanor went up to Mount Zion. Some of the priests came out of the sanctuary" (I Macc. 7:33).

One final change was yet to come. By the First Century CE, "Zion" had moved across town. It was now the southwestern hill of Jerusalem. Josephus was probably to blame for this, as he called this hill "the stronghold of David." That did it. By making the connection of that particular hill with David, Josephus fixed forever this one part of town as the real "Zion."

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Maps

Galatians Maps

Romans Maps

Ephesians Maps

Zion / Mount Zion

Early Church History

Paul, intro./maps

Moody's Atlas of the Bible
http://www.cartogis.org/images/winners/moody.pdf [PDF]

Bible Atlas by Access Foundation [Recommended]
http://abideinme.net/maps/bible_atlas.pdf [PDF]

Alt. link:
http://www.ultimatebiblereferencelibrary.com/001_The_Bible_Atlas.pdf [PDF]

http://searchingthescriptures.net/main_pages/free_bible_land_maps.htm [Maps Online]

http://www.holybooks.com/bible-atlas/ [links to PDF]

Online Bible Atlas
http://www.godweb.org/atlasindex.htm

http://bibleatlas.org/

http://www.searchingthescriptures.net/main_pages/free_bible_land_maps.htm

Atlas Downloads (as Zip files)
1. Smith Bible Atlas Download click here

2a. Bible Maps Download click here

2b. Bible Times Maps Dowload click here

More Map Links:
https://keyoptimize.com/bible/bible-maps-pdf-download/

NetBible Maps
https://bible.org/maps

http://classic.net.bible.org/map.php

Bible Maps and Charts
https://www.knowingthebible.net/bible-studies/maps-and-charts

http://www.preceptaustin.org/bible_maps1

http://www.gods-word-first.org/bible-maps.html

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Bible Maps and Illustrations http://www.biblesnet.com/maps.html

Digital Resources for Biblical Mapping (includes links to more maps)
http://www.scrollandscreen.com/biblicalmapping/

GenerationWord.com Resources
Maps of the New Testament (plus a few OT maps and maps from the days of the Macabees)
http://www.generationword.com/maps_NT.html

Maps of the Old Testament (plus Gospels and Acts) http://www.generationword.com/maps.htm

Diagrams and Charts
http://www.generationword.com/diagrams_and_charts.html

Biblical Family Tree: Adam & Eve to Jesus
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=D9b9h5mCgAc

General Timelines / Charts

https://amazingbibletimeline.com/timeline_online/ (Adam-Eve through present)

https://www.bing.com/images/search?q=printable+biblical+history+timeline&qpvt=printable+biblical+history+timeline&qpvt=printable+biblical+history+timeline&qpvt=printable+biblical+history+timeline&FORM=IGRE

http://biblehub.com/timeline/

https://www.pinterest.com/dlackey49/bible-timeline/

http://www.christianityoasis.com/Keyword/BibleTimeline.htm

http://downloads.signaturewebsites.com/pdf/Tyndale/9781414339276.pdf [PDF] [Alternate link]

http://www.bibletimelines.net/article/183/available-timelines-sorted-by-category/theater-of-our-universe-timeline

http://www.bibletimelines.net/article/80/available-timelines-sorted-by-category/the-gospel-timeline

http://www.bibletimelines.net/article/364/print-timelines-posters-postcards-bookmarks-and-business-cards/print-timelines-large-versions

http://www.creation-science-prophecy.com/timeline.htm [PDF]

http://www.biblechronology.org/charts.html

https://www.template.net/business/charts/timeline-chart-template/ [Word, Excel, PDF]

http://creation.com/real-history-the-timeline-of-the-bible [PDF]

http://www.linearconcepts.com/theology/bible-timelines/bible-history

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Misc. (not directly related to topic, just FYI)

The Believer's Dilemma – 15 Questions
http://www.believers-dilemma.org/posts/moreInterviewsAndInquiries

Fifteen Questions that Define the Essentials of Faith (asked of various denominations)

Example: What is the Eternal State?

Does "Once Saved / Always Saved" Bring Security to Struggling Christians?
http://www.what-the-hell-is-hell.com/HellArticles/AlwaysSaved.html

Lawson, MacArthur, and RC Sproul, et al: Questions & Answers

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=85HV-VcvXQo

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=ZCd4yYfxB6k

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=MfnYgz_e17M

Example questions discussed:

Will all ethnic Israel be saved?

Do still-born children go to heaven?

Michael Horton, Steven Lawson, Alistair Begg, and Albert Mohler answer questions presented by RC Sproul
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=80onXKDbKeI

If God can do anything why can't He lie?

Does human responsibility replace irresistible grace?

Was King Saul regenerate or was he simply empowered by the Holy Spirit as a tool for God's glory without salvation?

How can you discuss controversial issues of faith with a Christian family member?

In reference to our justification, is there a reward for the elect according to their works?

Basics of Bible Interpretation (Smith)

Avoid Non-Christian Approaches To Interpreting The Bible
http://internetbiblecollege.net/Lessons/Avoid%20Non-Christian%20Approaches%20To%20Interpreting%20The%20Bible.htm [PDF]
Alternate Link:
http://internetbiblecollege.net/tWIBC/Subjects-01-10/Subject-02/Avoid%20Non-Christian%20Approaches%20To%20Interpreting%20The%20Bible.htm

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Interlinear Bibles
(Online and PDFs)

NLT Interlinear

Bible Hub

Mounce Reverse Interlinear NT

Scripture 4 All - TR - Greek

Scripture 4 All - Hebrew

QBible - Hebrew-Greek-Aramaic

StudyLight Interlinear Search

Westcott-Hort Greek [PDF]

Kata Biblon including Septuagint

Greek Septuagint (Parallel English)

English Septuagint (Parallel KJV)

Apostolic Polyglot Bible [PDF]

Apostolic Polyglot Interlinear

NT Aramaic (Peshitta) and Greek

Peshitta (NT) Aramaic-Greek

StudyBible.info

Lumia Bible (NET2 and other versions, Greek; with search – including Greek/Notes)

The Unbound Bible - http://unbound.biola.edu/

Septuagent (LXX) Finder

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Koine Greek Resources

Overview of Modern Greek Grammar
http://www.foundalis.com/lan/grkgram.htm

Grammar & Morphology of Koine Greek - Clover Sites
http://storage.cloversites.com/koineministries/documents/TFBI%20Grammatical%20and%20Morphological%20Manual%20with%20Answers.pdf [PDF]

BRIEF DEFINITIONS OF GREEK GRAMMATICAL TERMS
http://www.freebiblecommentary.org/HTML_Common/greek_grammatical_terms.html

Greek Parts of Speech
http://lib.haifa.ac.il/departments/yaaz/hadracha/menus/doc/accordancew/Accordance%20Help/content/topics/10_ref/gramm/greek_parts_of_speech.htm

Koine Greek Grammar
https://wikivisually.com/wiki/Koine_Greek_grammar

Greek Grammar Information and Resources https://biblicalgreek.org/grammar/

New Testament Greek Online
Introduction - https://lrc.la.utexas.edu/eieol/ntgol/00

Speech in Koine Greek I https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=RQfDyx5_HcU [Video]

Speech in Koine Greek II
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=BSZR6uHrnPk [Video]

Ephesians 2013-005 and 006 Koine Greek Grammar and Exegesis of Chapter 1
http://www.livingwordbc.org/PDF/Eph-003-004.pdf [PDF]

NT Greek in Diagrams
http://www.inthebeginning.org/e-diagrams/

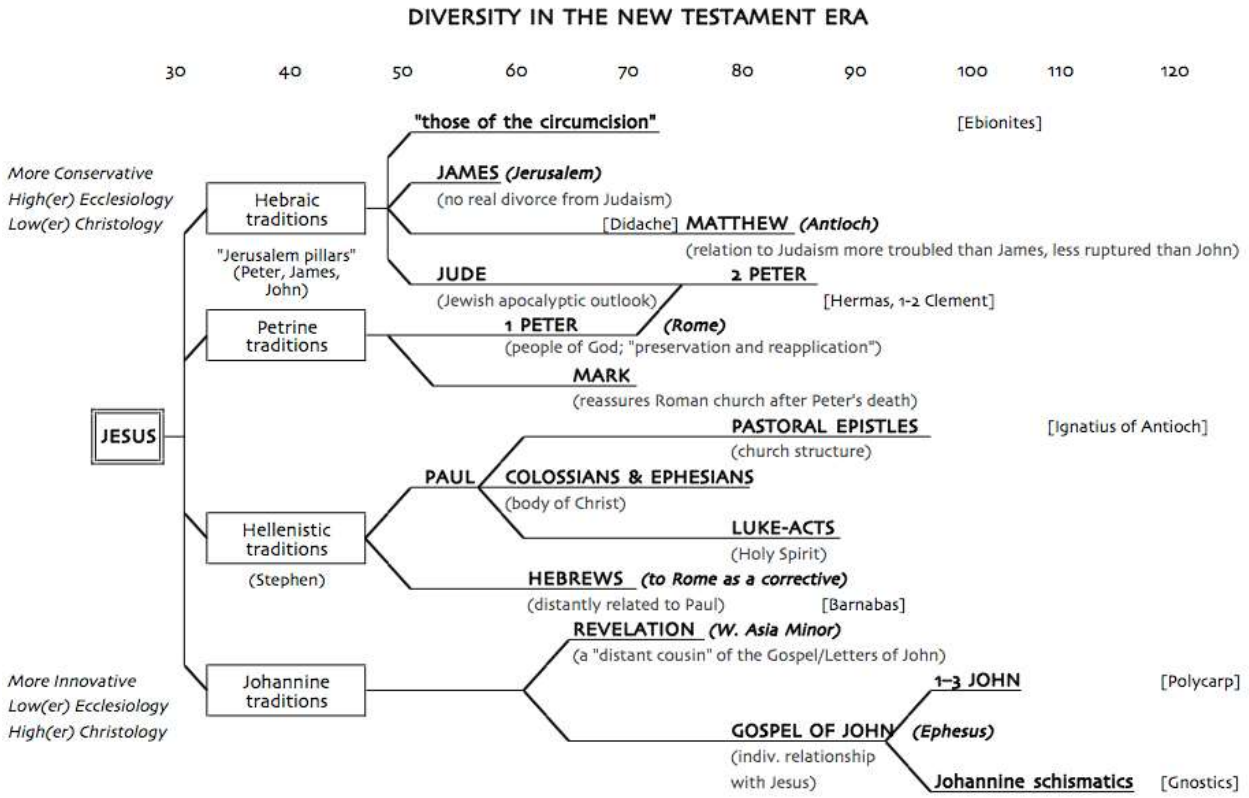
English Grammar – Parts of Speech http://www.myenglishpages.com/site_php_files/grammar-lesson-parts-of-speech.php http://web2.uvcs.uvic.ca/elc/studyzone/330/grammar/parts.htm



Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Diversity in the New Testament ("Genealogical" Table – NT and Apostolic Fathers)

https://pursiful.com/2010/06/05/diversity-in-the-new-testament/

Excerpt:

The topic of the weekend seems to be the unity and diversity of the New Testament. See posts over the past couple of days by Michael Bird, James McGrath, and Ari Katz. Since I'm currently re-thinking my New Testament intro syllabus (although I've always wanted to emphasize the issues of diversity and unity in the NT), I thought I'd add my $0.02 in the form of the following "genealogical" table of the New Testament and the Apostolic Fathers.

Based on Raymond E. Brown, The Churches the Apostles Left Behind (Paulist, 1984), expanded and modified by Darrell J. Pursiful.

The chart is mostly based on Raymond Brown's The Churches the Apostles Left Behind (Paulist, 1984), although I've adjusted some of the dates to reflect my personal opinions on such matters. My dating conforms to Richard Bauckham's conclusions in "Pseudo-Apostolic Letters" (JBL 107/3 [1988] 469–94) about the possible pseudonymous nature of certain NT writings, based on literary rather than linguistic criteria. I would also recommend anyone interested in the unity and diversity of the New Testament to get hold of Martin Hengel's Between Jesus and Paul (Fortress, 1983). See especially the first two essays in this volume, "Between Jesus and Paul: The 'Hellenists,' the 'Seven,' and Stephen (Acts 6.1-15; 7.54–8.3)" and "Christology and New Testament Chronology: A Problem in the History of Earliest Christianity," for a compelling argument that many of the key features of Pauline theology can be dated to within only a very few years of the death of Jesus.

See also*: Apostolic and Church Fathers

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Apologetics

The word apologetics does not mean to say you're sorry. Instead, it refers to the defense of what you believe to be true. Theologian and apologist Clark Pinnock explains the nature of apologetics in this way:

> The term apologetics derives from a Greek term, apologia, and was used for a defense that a person like Socrates might make of his views and actions. The apostle Peter tells every Christian to be ready to give a reason (apologia) for the hope that is in him (1 Pet. 3:15). Apologetics, then, is an activity of the Christian mind which attempts to show that the gospel message is true in what it affirms. An apologist is one who is prepared to defend the message against criticism and distortion, and to give evidences of its credibility. (Pinnock, A, 36)

Source: Evidence that Demands a Verdict (Revised, 2017 by Josh McDowell and his son, Sean, PhD)

Paul's Sermon on Mars Hill: A Biblical Model for Practical Apologetics

[Recommended]

http://jmsmith.org/downloads/Paul-at-Mars-Hill.pdf [PDF]

Excerpts:

1. Paul didn't travel to Athens with the intention of preaching there…Paul was embodying the principal set forth by his fellow apostle Peter which states that a believer should "Always be ready to make your defense to anyone who demands from you and accounting for the hope that is in you…" (1 Peter 3:15)

2. Paul argued; and not only that, but he argued with the Jews in the synagogue as well as the people in the market place. Many within the Church's ranks today feel that arguing is not Christ-like and has no place in sharing the Gospel. This is unfortunately due to the fact that at times Christians have replaced the conviction of the Holy Spirit in regards to a person's conversion experience with argument and reasoning. As a result, many Christians have taken the opposite path and abandoned the use of argumentation and reason altogether as unbiblical, or useful only when discoursing in the halls of academia. This is in clear contrast with Scripture for here we see the apostle arguing not just with the "intellectual folk" (the Stoics and Epicureans) or the "religious folk" (in the synagogue), but also with the "everyday folk" (in the market place). For Paul, despite the fact that the Gospel did not rest solely on "wise and persuasive words," it could certainly be, and often was, proclaimed using reason and argumentation.

3. Moving on in the text, we find another curios phenomenon. Though the Athenian philosophers considered Paul's talk of Jesus and the resurrection "Idle babbling" about "strange deities" they nevertheless took him to Mars Hill (the Areopagus) and asked if he would explain his "new teaching." Luke parenthetically tells us that the Athenians were always looking for opportunities to say something different or hear something new. This is interesting because Athens was considered the center of knowledge in the ancient world. And yet, despite being immersed in the various religions and philosophies of the day, the Athenian philosophers still had a craving for some kind of new truth. Amidst an extremely pluralistic society there was still something about the message of the Gospel that intrigued them. This is very much the case within modern academia.

4. Later in his sermon, Paul goes on to tell us that people everywhere are searching and even groping for God. In his mind, the Athenians' temple to the unknown god no doubt provides an example of such searching. According to his letter to the church in Rome, God's presence is a reality that even the most callous skeptic is aware of. All of this should serve as a constant reminder to the Christian that no matter how much people ridicule or revile the message of the cross, there is still a yearning for truth in our culture that only the Gospel can fulfill.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

It is also worth noting the beliefs of Paul's listeners and their similarity to the ideals prevalent in our society. The Epicureans adhered to a naturalistic philosophy that deemed pleasure the ultimate goal. The Stoics, though also naturalistic, saw virtue as the highest good. The current philosophies of hedonism and humanism…have much in common with these philosophies of old.

5. Right from the start, one cannot help but notice the politeness with which Paul addresses his listeners. Though his spirit was deeply distressed by their idolatry, he still addresses them with respect. It is a common temptation, especially in an argumentative atmosphere, to see nonbelievers as "the enemy" and to speak to them as such. This is not Paul's tactic in this passage or in any of his epistles for that matter. In fact, throughout his writings it can be argued that his harshest words are directed at those who claim to be believers. We, as Christians, must remember this as we engage the nonbeliever. It should be the Gospel that offends rather than the one who proclaims the Gospel.

   However, lest we think that the Christian should sacrifice truth on the altar of politeness, we now turn to an equally visible aspect of Paul's message: his incredible boldness. Paul doesn't beat around the bush, so to speak, in dealing with the religion of the Athenians. He tells them in no uncertain terms that the faith they possess in their idols is not only misplaced, but also foolish seeing as that the idols they worship as gods were fashioned by their very own hands. Though undoubtedly offensive to his audience, this was truth that they needed to hear. At the opposite end of the spectrum from those seeking to offend are those Christians who feel that an unbeliever should never be told anything they might object to. This extreme form of seeker-sensitive apologetics is foreign not only to Paul, but to the entire witness of scripture. Many may be offended, but the Christian's responsibility is to proclaim this message lovingly and faithfully, seeking neither to offend nor to appease those listening.

See also*: Greek Philosophy and The Use of Greek Philosophy by Paul in the Bible

Both are in this and my other separate references resource*:

Christian Scholarship: Biblical – Theological – Philosophical

(Also see my above references resource for more about apologetics)

For an excellent intro. and in-depth resource on apologetics: [Recommended]
Evidence that Demands a Verdict (Revised, 2017 by Josh McDowell and his son, Sean, PhD)

See also*: Gospel of Paul vs Peter

Gospel of Jesus vs Paul

Return to the beginning*: Gospel of Jesus the Messiah (Christ)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Biblical Passages with the Word Apologia from Evidence that Demands a Verdict (2017 Revision)

The New Testament uses the Greek word apologia, often translated in English as "defense," eight times in the New Testament. (All passages in this list are quoted from the ESV with italics added):

1. Acts 22:1: "Brothers and fathers, hear the defense that I now make before you."

2. Acts 25:16: "I answered them that it was not the custom of the Romans to give up anyone before the accused met the accusers face to face and had opportunity to make his defense concerning the charge laid against him."

3. 1 Corinthians 9:3: "This is my defense to those who would examine me."

4. 2 Corinthians 7:11: "For see what earnestness this godly grief has produced in you, but also what eagerness to clear yourselves [apologia], what indignation, what fear, what longing, what zeal, what punishment! At every point you have proved yourselves innocent in the matter."

5. Philippians 1:7: "It is right for me to feel this way about you all, because I hold you in my heart, for you are all partakers with me of grace, both in my imprisonment and in the defense and confirmation of the gospel."

6. Philippians 1:16: "The latter do it out of love, knowing that I am put here for the defense of the gospel ."
7. 1 Peter 3:15: "But in your hearts honor Christ the Lord as holy, always being prepared to make a defense to anyone who asks you for a reason for the hope that is in you; yet do it with gentleness and respect."

8. 2 Timothy 4:16: "At my first defense no one came to stand by me, but all deserted me. May it not be charged against them!"

First Peter 3:15 uses the word defense in a way that denotes the kind of defense one would make to a legal inquiry, asking, "Why are you a Christian?" A believer ought to give an adequate answer to this question. The command to be ready with an answer is directed toward every follower of Jesus—not just pastors, teachers, and leaders.

There are instances in many other passages when, even though the word apologia may not appear, the Bible either models or explicitly emphasizes the importance of apologetics. Consider a few: 2 Corinthians 10:5; Jude 3; Acts 2:22–24; 18:4; Titus 1:9; Job 38:1–41; Luke 24:44.

Jesus the Apologist

Except for 1 Peter 3:15, the New Testament appearances of apologia all come from the writing or ministry of Paul. But was Jesus an apologist? Though the New Testament does not mention Jesus using the word apologia, we nevertheless hold that he was, indeed, an apologist. Philosopher Douglas Groothuis has carefully studied the question of whether Jesus was a philosopher or an apologist. After giving many examples of how Jesus rationally defended the crucial claims of Christianity, Groothuis concludes:

> Contrary to the views of critics, Jesus Christ was a brilliant thinker, who used logical arguments to refute His critics and establish the truth of His views. When Jesus praised the faith of children, He was encouraging humility as a virtue, not irrational religious trust or a blind leap of faith in the > dark. Jesus deftly employed a variety of reasoning strategies in His debates on various topics. These include escaping the horns of a dilemma, a fortiori arguments, appeals to evidence, and reductio ad absurdum arguments. Jesus' use of persuasive arguments demonstrates that He was both a philosopher and an apologist who rationally defended His worldview in discussions with some of the best thinkers of His day. This intellectual approach does not detract from His divine authority but enhances it. Jesus' high estimation of rationality and His own application of arguments indicates [sic] that Christianity is not an anti-intellectual faith. Followers of Jesus today, therefore, should emulate His intellectual zeal, using the same kinds or arguments He Himself used. Jesus' argumentative strategies have applications to four contemporary debates: the relationship between God and morality, the reliability of the New Testament, the resurrection of Jesus, and ethical relativism. (Groothuis, JPA)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Apologetics in the Old Testament

Some falsely assume that apologetics began in the New Testament era. After explaining how Jesus and Paul engaged in logical debate both to destroy faulty beliefs and to propagate the Christian faith, philosopher J. P. Moreland observes:

> Jesus and Paul were continuing a style of persuasion peppered throughout the Old Testament prophets. Regularly, the prophets appealed to evidence to justify belief in the biblical God or in the divine authority of their inspired message: fulfilled prophecy, the historical fact of miracles, the inadequacy of finite pagan deities to be a cause of such a large, well-ordered universe compared to the God of the Bible, and so forth. They did not say, "God said it, that settles it, you should believe it!" They provided a rational defense for their claims. (Moreland, LYG, 132)

Five Reasons Apologetics Is Important Today

Reason #1: We Are All Apologists Anyway

Apologetics is not listed as a spiritual gift for teachers, preachers, or evangelists, as though only some ought to become apologists. Rather, all Christians are called to be ready with an answer (1 Peter 3:15; Jude 3). We all make a case for Christianity in some fashion or another—but are we doing it well? Beyond the specific Christian calling to have a ready defense for the faith, there is a sense in which everyone is already an apologist for something. The question is not whether we are apologists, but what kind of apologists we are. Christian author and social critic Os Guinness addresses this idea:

> From the shortest texts and tweets to the humblest website, to the angriest blog, to the most visited social networks, the daily communications of the wired world attest that everyone is now in the business of relentless self-promotion—presenting themselves, explaining themselves, defending themselves, selling themselves or sharing their inner thoughts and emotions as never before in human history. That is why it can be said that we are in the grand secular age of apologetics. The whole world has taken up apologetics without ever knowing the idea as Christians understand it. We are all apologists now, if only on behalf of "the Daily Me" or "the Tweeted Update" that we post for our virtual friends and our cyber community. The great goals of life, we are told, are to gain the widest possible public attention and to reach as many people in the world with our products—and always, our leading product is Us. (Guinness, FT, 15–16)

Reason #2: Apologetics Strengthens Believers

Reason #3: Apologetics Helps Students Hang On to Their Faith

Reason #4: Apologetics Helps with Evangelism

Reason #5: Apologetics Helps Shape Culture

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Doing Philosophy as a Christian: The Example of Justin Martyr (2016)

https://credohouse.org/blog/doing-philosophy-as-a-christian

"… I elaborate on the example of Justin Martyr, whose life points the way for those wishing to engage in philosophy as Christians. Due to space limitations, I wasn't able to include this portion in my forthcoming book; so I post it here…" [select link to see full article]

Learn How To Do Apologetics in the Twenty-First Century with Ravi Zacharia

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=W2zrHxbucOM

In Jesus we have answers that provide Correspondance and Coherence – two tests for truth

World view: Origin, Meaning, Morality and Destiny (you walk on the feet of truth and relevance)

Universities: Relativism is absolute and theism is debunked and vertical is mocked out of any reasonable discussion

Requested counseling for 1. Pornography (demeans the others),
2. Suicide (demeans themselves)
Experienced: Isolation and Alienation

European based on rationalism vs UK + US based on moral rationalism

The popularization of the death of God and the stridency to be willing to live with its ramafications

We hear about right and left…we never hear about the up and the down.

We learn by the eye-gate rather than the thought-gate

How do we reach a generation that thinks with its eyes and thinks with its feelings?

The Gospel gives what no other worldview gives: (gives a lot) … Jesus dying for us and arising

Questions secularists raise only legitimized by the Bible and the Judeo-Christian worldview

Konrad Adenauer to Billy Graham: Outside of the resurrection of Jesus Christ I know of no hope for mankind.

See also*: Reliability of the Bible,

Accuracy of the NT Bible

12 Points Showing Christianity True,

Dealing with Contradiction and Difficulties in the Bible

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Dealing with Contradictions / Difficulties in the Bible (Apologetics)

Recommended Procedures for Dealing with Bible Difficulties

8 Misconceptions About the Bible

Dealing Fairly With Bible Contradictions

Ecclessia.org - Defending the Faith (Answering Contradictions and FAQs)

Bible Contradictions and Other Difficulties (including neutral / pro / contra perspectives and resources links)

101 Cleared Up Contradictions (according to Muslims)

Bible Query - Answering FAQs about the Bible

Cleared Up Bible Contradictions (FAQs; Bereans)

Tekton: Education and Apologetics (see the "Browse Articles" box)

Errancy.com (Does the Bible contain contradictions or errors? Biblical errancy examined.)

Interactive Chart of Bible Contradictions (by your "Friendly Atheist") [also has link to Bible Cross References Chart]

Josh Mcdowell Ministry (A Cru Ministry) / The Josh McDowell Institute

> Josh (with his son, Sean) published (2017) a revised version of Josh's excellent best-selling apologetics book, Evidence that Demands a Verdict. [Recommended]

Ravi Zacharias International Ministries (Highly [Recommended], see also Youtube videos)

Alpha and Omega Ministries (James White: apologetics)

See also: Reliability of the Bible

Science, the Bible and God

Apologetics

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Rules to Evaluate Bible Contradictions and Difficulties

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

12 Points that Show Christianity is True

Here's a Twelve Step argument for the Truth of Christianity.

(This is adapted from an Apologetics workbook by Norman Geisler and Frank Turek.)

1. Truth about reality is knowable.
2. The opposite of true is false.
3. It is true that a theistic God exits.
4. If God exists, then miracles are possible.
5. Miracles can be used to confirm a message from God (i.e., as an act of God to confirm a word from God).
6. The New Testament is historically reliable.
7. The New Testament says Jesus claimed to be God.
8. Jesus' claim to be God was miraculously confirmed by"
    1. His fulfillment of many prophecies about Himself;
    2. His sinless and miraculous life;
    3. His prediction and accomplishment of His resurrection from the dead.
9. Therefore, Jesus is God.
10. Whatever Jesus (who is God) teaches is true.
11. Jesus taught that the Bible is the Word of God.
12. Therefore, it is true that the Bible is the Word of God (and anything opposed to it is false).

Source: https://www.worthychristianforums.com/topic/202895-12-steps-that-show-christianity-is-true/?page=4

Video: Twelve Points that Show Christianity is True | Norman Geisler, PhD (Overview)
https://www.tubeid.co/download-video/meTM7e2OtrKXhZc/twelve-points-that-show-christianity-is-true-norman-geisler-phd.html

Direct YouTube: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Etfts9tf6DE [Video]

Shorter Overview: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=oZhYX762Kag [Video]

I Don't Have Enough Faith to Be an Atheist: Is the New Testament True?

http://www.plumbbobblog.com/?p=7077 (re: Geisler and Turek)

Frank Turek Answers Atheist's 3 Objections to Christianity

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=XjHhtWL_3Og [Video]

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Did Jesus Rise from the Dead? (Frank Turek of impact360institute.org/) [Recommended]
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=TyZ1l7faKSw [Video] (Animated, discusses 5 points)

Why do you think Christianity is true?

John Piper: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=TLi6UkYG8H0 [Video]

Ravi Zacharias: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=nWY-6xBA0Pk [Video]

N.T. Wright: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=aoB10G3nm8o [Video] https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=ICHovRHJAYY [Video] (What is the Gospel?)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=3zXnBHddbtg [Video] (Why Does Jesus' Resurrection Matter?)

Apologetics – Answering the Tough Questions:

http://gotquestions.org

http://carm.org/

http://www.ecclesia.org/truth/defending.html

http://www.whatchristianswanttoknow.com/

http://www.neverthirsty.org/pp/archive-of-bible-questions/index.html

http://hermeneutics.stackexchange.com/questions/

http://www.answering-islam.org/ (Directled at Muslims, but has some good general apologetics info.)

75 Bible Questions – Your Instructors Pray You Won't Ask
http://www.garynorth.com/75_BIBLE_QUESTIONS.pdf [PDF]

Why You Can Believe the Bible
http://www.everystudent.com/features/bible.html

See also*: Theodicy

Apologetics

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Specific Topics related to God's command to kill in the OT:

How Could God Command Killing the Canaanites?
http://enrichmentjournal.ag.org/201004/201004_138_Canannites.cfm

Killing the Canaanites: A Response to the New Atheism's "Divine Genocide" Claims http://www.equip.org/article/killing-the-canaanites/

The Canaanites: Genocide Or Judgment?
https://bible.org/article/canaanites-genocide-or-judgment

Canaanite Culture and Religion http://history-world.org/canaanite_culture_and_religion.htm

Canaanites – Bible Encyclopedia
http://www.christiananswers.net/dictionary/canaanites.html

Cana, Canaanites – Catholic Encyclopdia
http://www.newadvent.org/cathen/03569b.htm

God's Just Destruction of the Canaanites
http://www.apologeticspress.org/APContent.aspx?category=12&article=1630

God and the Canaanites: A Biblical Perspective (includes discussion about herem)
https://www.probe.org/god-and-the-canaanites/

The Abominations of the Canaanites (David Padfield) [PDF]
http://www.padfield.com/acrobat/history/canaanite-abominations.pdf

How Many People Did God Kill?
http://godlessgeeks.com/LINKS/godkills.htm

What Made It Okay for God to Kill Women and Children In the Old Testament? [John Piper] Text+Video
]http://www.desiringgod.org/interviews/what-made-it-ok-for-god-to-kill-women-and-children-in-the-old-testament

Why Did God Tell the Jews It Is Okay to Kill the Canaanites?
http://www.denisonforum.org/faith-questions/21-bible/51-why-did-god-tell-the-jews-to-kill-the-canaanites

The Conquest of Canaan

"When you have crossed the Jordan into the land of Canaan, then you shall drive out all the inhabitants of the land from before you, destroy all their engraved stones, destroy all their molded images, and demolish all their high places; you shall dispossess the inhabitants of the land and dwell in it, for I have given you the land to possess." (Nu 33:51-53 NKJV)

God commanded the Israelites not only to march into Canaan and dispossess the existing inhabitants, but to kill them all (Dt 7:1-5). In fact, God warned the Israelites that if they did not drive out the inhabitants, "I will do to you as I thought to do to them" (Nu 33:56). His wise plan: "I will not drive them out from before you in one year, lest the land become desolate. Little by little I will drive them out from before you, until you have increased, and you inherit the land" (Ex 23:29-30 NKJV).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

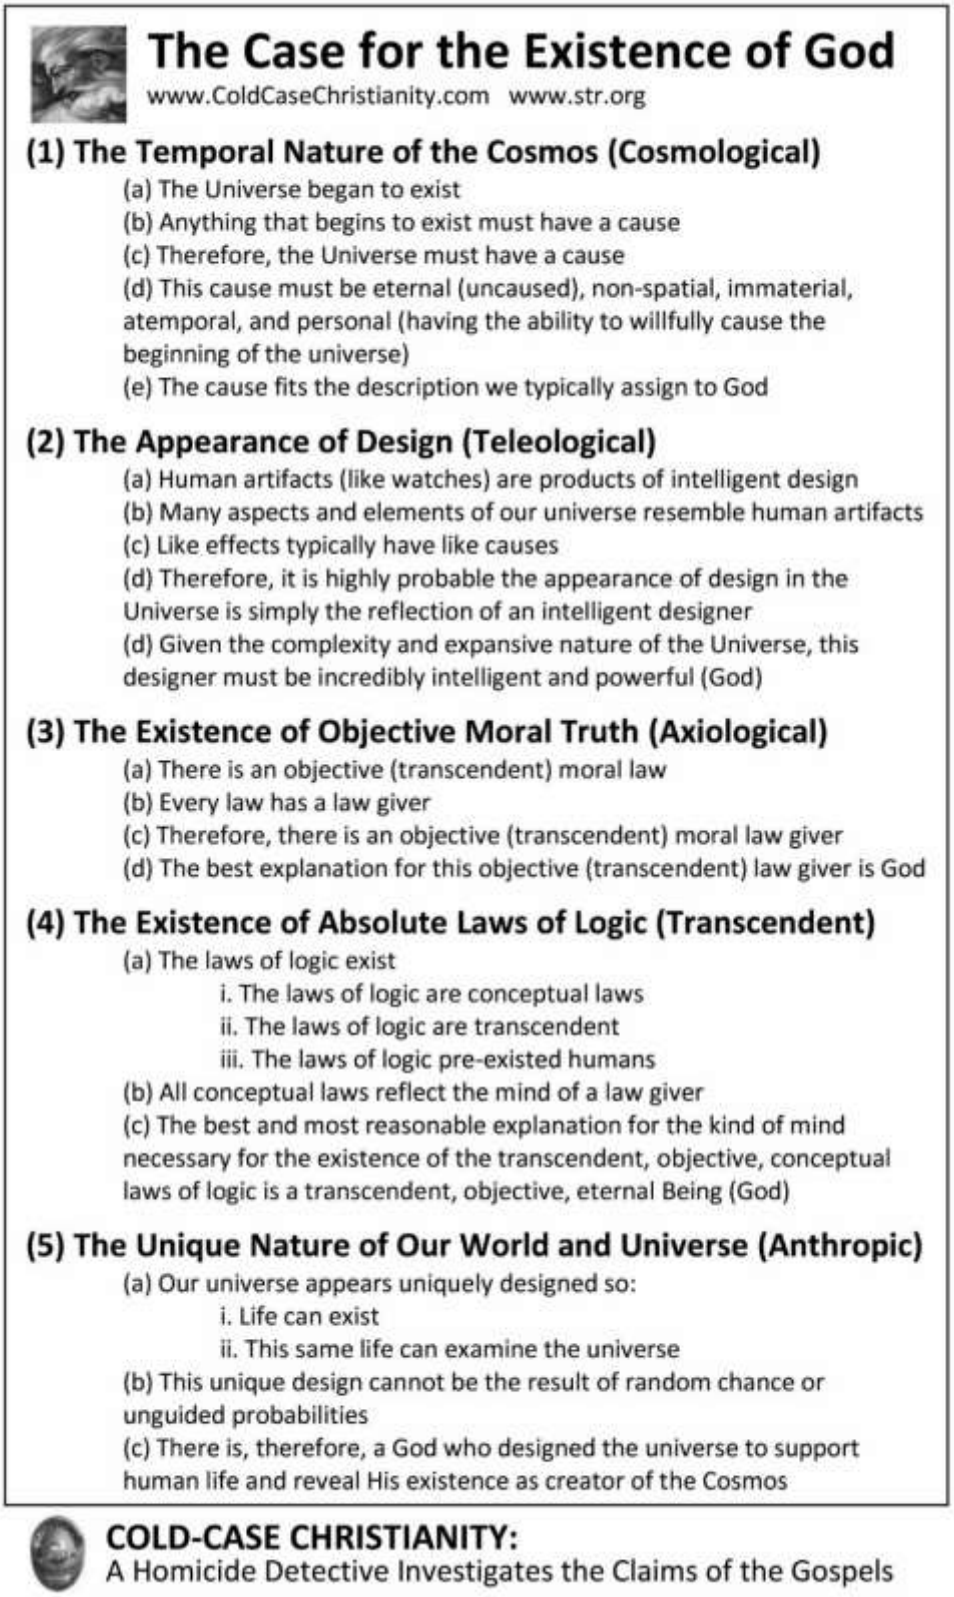
Rationale for God's Action

Critical scholars and well-meaning contemporary commentators frequently condemn God for these orders and the Hebrews for carrying them out. In a day when we read of the horrors of ethnic cleansing in Rwanda, Bosnia, and elsewhere, what can we say to defend such a course of action? God Himself said that if the Israelites did not remove these people and their idolatry from the land, they would become infected and suffer a like fate (Dt 7:4). Moreover, a study of Canaanite religion reveals that base sex worship prevailed among them and religious prostitution thrived. Presumably in time society would become so depraved and sexually transmitted diseases so widespread that the Canaanites would almost self-destruct.

Furthermore, in the counsels of divine justice, there seems to be a quota of iniquity that God permits before He punishes a people either in a minor way or by obliteration. And it seems that God will deal with a nation when it has reached such a place. This is not pure speculation. In Ge 15 God was having a conversation with Abraham that concerned His promise to give Palestine to Abraham's descendants in perpetuity. In the process, He said that the promise did not mean that the Hebrews would always inhabit the land. In fact, they would be out of the land and held in bondage in a strange land (Egypt) for four hundred years (v. 13).

Finally, at the end of that time, the Hebrews would return to Palestine, "for the sin of the Amorites has not yet reached its full measure" (v. 15:16 NIV). After the four hundred years of bondage in Egypt, the Hebrews left in the Exodus and entered Canaan. Then, God commanded them to exterminate the Amorites (Dt 20:17). Evidently by that time the sin of the Amorites had reached "full measure."

God will clearly judge the sin of the nations when they are "ripe for punishment" (Ge 15:16 REVISED ENGLISH BIBLE). We may wonder out loud whether Sodom and Gomorrah had reached their quota of iniquity when destroyed by divine judgment (Ge 19), or whether Pompeii and the other cities at the foot of Mount Vesuvius had reached that point in A.D. 79. When we learn from the excavations about the degree to which Pompeii was given over to sexual preoccupation, we may conclude that life in the city was very base. We may also wonder about the iniquity quotas of modern cities and countries.



Source: Nelson's New Illustrated Bible Manners and Customs

Jewish Interpretations of the Canaanite Genocide [video lecture]
https://biblicalstudiesonline.wordpress.com/2016/08/09/jeffrey-h-tigay-jewish-interpretations-of-the-canaanite-genocide/

See also*: Theodicy

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Case for the Existence of God

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Points to Remember When Making the Case for God's Existence

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Book of Genesis in 11 minutes and 18 seconds! (The Bible Project)
http://jmsmith.org/blog/bible-project-genesis/

https://thebibleproject.com/explore/genesis-1-11/

https://thebibleproject.com/explore/genesis-12-50/

also Revelation: https://thebibleproject.com/explore/revelation/

Ravi Zacharias, Christian Apologist [Videos]

Atheist/Scientist Challenges Ravi (re: Determinism)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=R641w4xCoFI

A Question About God Condemning Atheists to Hell (re: Moral Law)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=R641w4xCoFI

What about Condemning Others to Hell that Don't Believe in Jesus?
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=4OUDO782aag

Hell – What is it?
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=R641w4xCoFI

Does Suicide Send You to Hell?
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=7JGFrcCS2ps

Why Is the Path to Heaven Narrow?
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=H9fsuT37ZAA

Was the Jesus story based on older pagan mythologies?
http://jmsmith.org/blog/pagan-jesus/

The Gospel Plain and Clear
http://jmsmith.org/downloads/The-Gospel-Plain-and-Clear.pdf

DigitalCommons@Liberty University
http://digitalcommons.liberty.edu/
Source for conservative Christian scholarly papers (pdfs) and links to articles on a wide range of theological topics. (Just enter your search parameters to discover related publications.)

Bible Bulletin Board –Sermons, articles by great theologians, S.S. lessons: http://www.biblebb.com/

See also my other separate resources*:
Christian Scholarship: Biblical – Theological – Philosophical
The Complete Sayings of Jesus – NKJV with Appendix

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Series: Examining Jesus by the Historical Method

Does Jesus meet the scrutiny of the historical method?

This series of articles discusses how Jesus' historicity meets and exceeds the standards of the historical method as they also show that the NT record about Jesus is extremely trustworthy.

"Examining Jesus by the Historical Method (Part 1: Multiple Sources)." (Dec. 27, 15).
https://bellatorchristi.com/2015/12/27/examining-jesus-by-the-historical-method-part-1-multiple-sources/

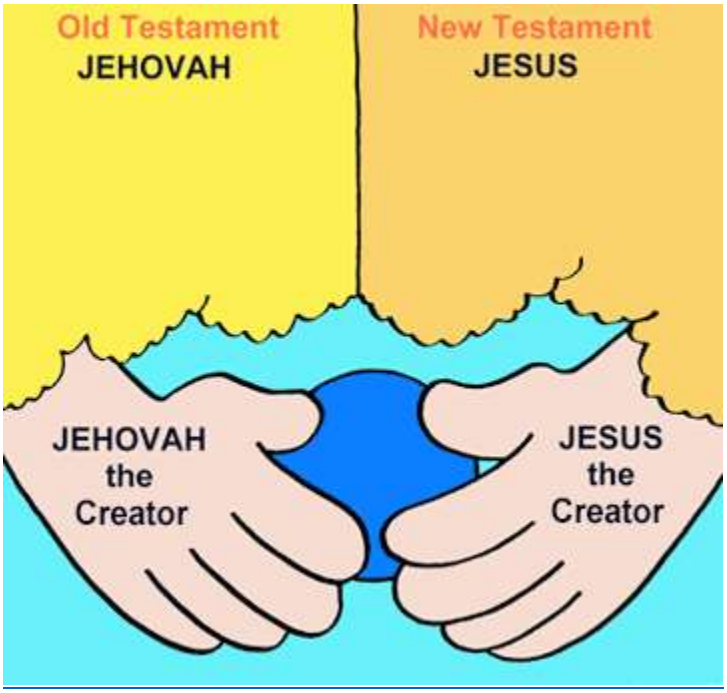
"Examining Jesus by the Historical Method (Part 2: Enemy Attestation)." (Jan. 4, 2016).
https://bellatorchristi.com/2016/01/04/examining-jesus-by-the-historical-method-part-2-enemy-attestation/

"Examining Jesus by the Historical Method (Part 3: Embarrassing Admonitions)." (Jan. 11, 2016).
https://bellatorchristi.com/2016/01/11/examining-jesus-by-the-historical-method-part-3-embarrassing-admonitions/

"Examining Jesus by the Historical Method (Part 4: Pre-NT Traditions)." (Jan. 18, 2016).
https://bellatorchristi.com/2016/01/18/examining-jesus-by-the-historical-method-part-4-early-testimony-pre-nt-traditions/

"Examining Jesus by the Historical Method (Part 5: Early NT Texts)." (Jan. 25, 2016).
https://bellatorchristi.com/2016/01/25/examining-jesus-by-the-historical-method-part-5-early-testimony-early-nt-texts/

"Examining Jesus by the Historical Method (Part 6: The Case for the Gospels)." (Feb. 1, 2016).
https://bellatorchristi.com/2016/02/01/examining-jesus-by-the-historical-method-part-6-eyewitness-testimony-the-case-for-the-gospels/



"Examining Jesus by the Historical Method (Part 7: The Gospel Witnesses)." (Feb. 8, 2016).
https://bellatorchristi.com/2016/02/08/examining-jesus-by-the-historical-method-part-7-eyewitness-testimony-the-gospel-witnesses/

"Examining Jesus by the Historical Method (Part 8: Two Final Methods and Conclusion)." (Feb. 15, 2016).
https://bellatorchristi.com/2016/02/15/examining-jesus-by-the-historical-method-part-8-2-final-methods-and-conclusion/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Jehovah in the Old Testament, and Jesus in the New Testament, always do the same things because they are both God.

Proverbs 16:4 - Creator of all things - Colossians 1:16

Source: https://www.christart.com/christianbooks/read/4694/65

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Virgin Birth of Jesus

Theopedia: Virgin Birth of Jesus
http://www.theopedia.com/virgin-birth

Virgin Birth of Christ (Catholic Perspective)
http://www.newadvent.org/cathen/15448a.htm

Was Jesus born of a virgin?
https://www.bethinking.org/jesus/q-was-jesus-born-of-a-virgin

Excerpt:

The miracle of the virgin birth of Jesus Christ has perplexed many people, and has actually kept them from accepting the truth of Christianity. However, the Bible declares that God decided that his Son would have a miraculous entrance into humanity.

Seven hundred years before the birth of Christ, the prophet Isaiah said, 'Therefore the Lord himself will give you a sign: Behold, the virgin will be with child and bear a son, and she will call his name Immanuel' (Isaiah 7:14, NASB).

> 'The angel said to her, "Do not be afraid, Mary; for you have found favor with God. And behold, you will conceive in your womb and bear a son, and you shall name him Jesus."
>
> 'Mary said to the angel, "How can this be, since I am a virgin?"
>
> 'The angel answered and said to her, "The Holy Spirit, will come upon you, and the power of the Most High will overshadow you; and for that reason the holy offspring shall be called the Son of God. ... For nothing will be impossible with God"' (Luke 1:26, 27, 30, 31, 34, 35, 37, NASB).

The virgin birth is set down in the Bible as a historical fact. The writers who recorded the story were Matthew – an eyewitness to the events in the life of Jesus – and Luke, the doctor, who presents things in the life of Christ from the viewpoint of his mother, Mary.

The passages in both Matthew and Luke are authentic, with no evidence at all that they were later additions to the text. The doctrine of the virgin birth has been believed by the Church from its beginning.

Ignatius, who lived at the beginning of the second century, wrote to the Ephesians and said, 'For our God, Jesus the Christ, was conceived in the womb by Mary, according to a dispensation, of the seed of David but also of the Holy Ghost.'

There are several reasons why the virgin birth was a necessity. The Bible teaches that the Word who became flesh was with God from the beginning (John 1:1). The fact of the pre-existence of Christ is testified many times in the New Testament (John 8:58, Philippians 2:5–11, Colossians 1:15, 16).

When Jesus came into the world, he was not a newly created individual such as we are, but was rather the eternal Son of God. To be born into this world of the virgin Mary required divine intervention, and this is exactly what the gospels record.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Another reason why Jesus needed to be virgin-born was because of his sinless nature. A basic New Testament teaching is that from the day he was born until the day he died, Jesus was without sin. To be a perfect sacrifice, he must himself be perfect – without sin. Since our race is contaminated with sin, a miraculous entrance into the world would be required, hence the virgin birth.

Moreover, if Jesus had been sired by Joseph, he would not have been able to claim legal rights to the throne of David. According to the prophecy of Jeremiah 22:28–30, there could be no king in Israel who was a descendant of King Jeconiah, and Matthew 1:12 relates that Joseph was from the line of Jeconiah. If Jesus had been fathered by Joseph, he could not rightly inherit the throne of David, since he was a relative of the cursed line.

The virgin birth of Christ is not only an historical fact, but it was also a necessary historical fact when one considers all the data.

Taken from Answers to Tough Questions Skeptics Ask About the Christian Faith, Josh McDowell and Don Stewart. Tyndale House Publishers, 1980.

The Power of Myth (1989)

http://www.equip.org/article/the-power-of-myth/
(Responding to the Power of Myth by Joseph Campbell)

The Myth of the Mythical Jesus (2016)

http://www.patheos.com/blogs/anxiousbench/2016/04/the-myth-of-the-mythical-jesus/

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Case for the Virgin Conception

The Case for the Virgin Conception

www.ColdCaseChristianity.com

The Essential Nature of the Virgin Conception

The Virgin Conception is an important piece of evidence, fulfilling the Old Testament prophecy initially given by the prophet Isaiah (Isaiah 7:14). It also explains an essential aspect of Jesus's nature, retaining Jesus' sinlessness (2 Corinthians 5:21).

Was the Virgin Conception Borrowed from Prior Mythologies?

The pre-existing mythologies described by critics are not as similar to the "virgin conception" of Jesus as they would like people to believe. It's also unreasonable to presume that Greek, Babylonian, Egyptian or other pagan mythologies related to the birth of God would be embraced as part of a narrative targeted at Jewish believers. Early Christian converts were called to a new life in Christ and repeatedly told that they were merely travelers passing through this mortal (and pagan) world. They were called to live a life that was free of worldly influences and told to reject the foolish philosophies and stories of men. This group, in particular, would be the last to return to pre-existing pagan stories and superstitions.

Does the "Unreasonable" Nature of the Virgin Conception Invalidate the Story of Jesus?

We cannot reject the virgin conception on naturalistic grounds without first examining the larger claims of the Christian Worldview. If there is sufficient reason to believe God exists (and created everything from nothing), then the virgin conception is certainly within His power and equally reasonable.

Why Didn't Paul Mention the Virgin Conception?

Paul may not have mentioned the virgin conception simply because it was widely understood or assumed. Paul may also have been silent because it was not the focus or purpose of his letters. If Paul believed that Jesus was born of a human mother and father, we would expect Paul to describe how a normal man, born of human parents, could be God Himself. Paul never does that, and this is consistent with the fact that Paul was aware of the virgin conception

Why Doesn't Mark Say Anything About Jesus' Birth?

The outline of Mark's Gospel is very similar to the outline of Peter's first sermon at Pentecost. Like Peter's sermon in Chapter 2 of the Book of Act's, Mark is focused only on the public life, ministry, death and resurrection of Jesus. At the same time, Mark does not appear to be ignorant of the "virgin conception" (see Mark 6:1-3). This early reference in the Gospel of Mark may expose the fact that Mark was aware of the "virgin conception" and that the first eyewitnesses of Jesus were also aware of Mary's marital status at the time of her conception.

COLD-CASE CHRISTIANITY:
A Homicide Detective Investigates the Claims of the Gospels

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

5 Reasons You Can Trust the Story of Christmas (Virgin Birth of Jesus) is True

Five Reasons You Can Trust the Story of Christmas Is True

www.ColdCaseChristianity.com

Reason 1:

The Supernatural Nature of the Virgin Conception Shouldn't Disqualify It

If we want to be fair about assessing the virgin conception or any other supernatural aspect of the nativity story, we cannot exclude the very possibility of the supernatural in the first place. Our presupposition against the supernatural would unfairly taint our examination of the claim.

Reason 2:

The Claim of the Virgin Conception Appears Incredibly Early in Christian History

The students of the gospel authors cited the virgin conception as a true claim about Jesus. Ignatius, the student of John (an Apostle who chose not to write about the birth of Jesus in his own gospel), included it in his early writings to local churches. Other Church leaders repeated the claim through the earliest years of the Church, and the doctrine also appears in the most ancient Church creeds. Even early non-canonical documents include the virgin conception of Jesus.

Reason 3:

The Birth Narratives in Luke and Matthew Are Not Late Additions

Luke told us he compiled the information for his gospel from a number of divergent sources (Luke 1:1-4). As a result, we should expect stylistic and linguistic differences within the gospel of Luke. In addition, any claim related to the late addition of the birth narratives defies all the manuscript evidence available to us; there is absolutely no evidence that the gospel of Matthew and Luke ever existed without the birth narratives. All manuscripts, translations, early Church documents and references to the gospels, along with every historic, reliable witness testifies to the fact that the birth narratives are ancient and part of the original record.

Reason 4:

The Virgin Conception Was Not An Invention of Early Christians

Some critics of the virgin conception argue that the earliest Christian authors inserted it in an effort to give Jesus a "heroic" birth consistent with other Old Testament heroes. But, not every Jewish hero from the Old Testament had an unusual birth story. In addition, there is no other character from the Old Testament who was born of a virgin through the miraculous conception of the Holy Spirit. This characteristic of Jesus' conception is unique to Jesus and follows no pre-existing Old Testament pattern.

Reason 5:

The Virgin Conception Wasn't Borrowed from Another Source

Skeptics also attempt to discredit the virgin conception of Jesus by claiming it was borrowed from prior pagan mythologies such as those of Mithras or Horus. But any fair examination of pagan mythological birth narratives revels the dramatic differences between the virgin conception of Jesus and stories about the supernatural emergence of mythological gods. It's irrational to believe the early Jewish readers of the gospels would embrace any part of paganism in the story of Jesus' conception as continuous with the Jewish narrative from the Old Testament. In addition, early Christian converts were repeatedly called to a new life in Christ, told they were merely travelers passing through this mortal (and pagan) world, called to live a life that was free of worldly influences, and told to reject the foolish philosophies and stories of men.

COLD-CASE CHRISTIANITY:
A Homicide Detective Investigates the Claims of the Gospels

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Why is the Virgin Birth so important?

https://www.gotquestions.org/virgin-birth.html

The doctrine of the virgin birth is crucially important (Isaiah 7:14; Matthew 1:23; Luke 1:27, 34). First, let's look at how Scripture describes the event. In response to Mary's question, "How will this be?" (Luke 1:34), Gabriel says, "The Holy Spirit will come upon you, and the power of the Most High will overshadow you" (Luke 1:35). The angel encourages Joseph to not fear marrying Mary with these words: "What is conceived in her is from the Holy Spirit" (Matthew 1:20). Matthew states that the virgin "was found to be with child through the Holy Spirit" (Matthew 1:18). Galatians 4:4 also teaches the Virgin Birth: "God sent His Son, born of a woman."

From these passages, it is certainly clear that Jesus' birth was the result of the Holy Spirit working within Mary's body. The immaterial (the Spirit) and the material (Mary's womb) were both involved. Mary, of course, could not impregnate herself, and in that sense she was simply a "vessel." Only God could perform the miracle of the Incarnation.

However, denying a physical connection between Mary and Jesus would imply that Jesus was not truly human. Scripture teaches that Jesus was fully human, with a physical body like ours. This He received from Mary. At the same time, Jesus was fully God, with an eternal, sinless nature (John 1:14; 1 Timothy 3:16; Hebrews 2:14-17.)

Jesus was not born in sin; that is, He had no sin nature (Hebrews 7:26). It would seem that the sin nature is passed down from generation to generation through the father (Romans 5:12, 17, 19). The Virgin Birth circumvented the transmission of the sin nature and allowed the eternal God to become a perfect man.

Isn't the virgin birth of Jesus Christ mythological and scientifically impossible?

https://christiananswers.net/q-aiia/virginbirth.html

Excerpt:

Larry King, the CNN talk show host, was once asked who he would most want to interview if he could choose anyone from all of history. He said, "Jesus Christ." The questioner said, "And what would you like to ask Him?" King replied, "I would like to ask Him if He was indeed virgin-born. The answer to that question would define history for me." —from Just Thinking, RZIM, Winter 1998

Critic's Claim #1

The idea of a virgin birth is SCIENTIFICALLY IMPOSSIBLE.

Pregnant woman. Illustration copyrighted.Really? Where have you been for the past 21 years? Ever since in vitro fertilization and embryonic transfer came on the scene in 1978 (not to mention artificial insemination), it is quite possible for a woman who has never experienced sexual intercourse to give birth.

Of course, the Bible makes it clear that it was Almighty God, not some high-paid gynecologist, who worked the details of Jesus' Divine-Human conception, i.e. "And the angel answered and said unto [Mary], The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, and the power of the Highest shall overshadow thee: therefore also that holy thing which shall be born of thee shall be called the Son of God."
—Luke 1:35, KJV.

Sound miraculous? Of course. But these days, who would deny that miracles occur? And such a 'small' one for the God who created the entire universe!

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Critic's Claim #2

The idea of a virgin birth is MYTHOLOGICALLY DERIVED.

Author Patrick Campbell (The Mythical Jesus) and Episcopal Bishop J.S. Spong are two of a number of individuals who have suggested that "…the virgin birth account [is a]…clearly recognized mythological element in our faith tradition whose purpose was not to describe a literal event but to capture the transcendent dimensions of God in the Earthbound words and concepts of first-century human beings."

Both men, however, overlook a simple fact: No respectable Jew would have ever condescended to buy into a Greek/Babylonian mythological base for an account dealing with the birth of his/her Messiah.

Critic's Claim #3

The idea of a virgin birth is HISTORICALLY UNSUPPORTED

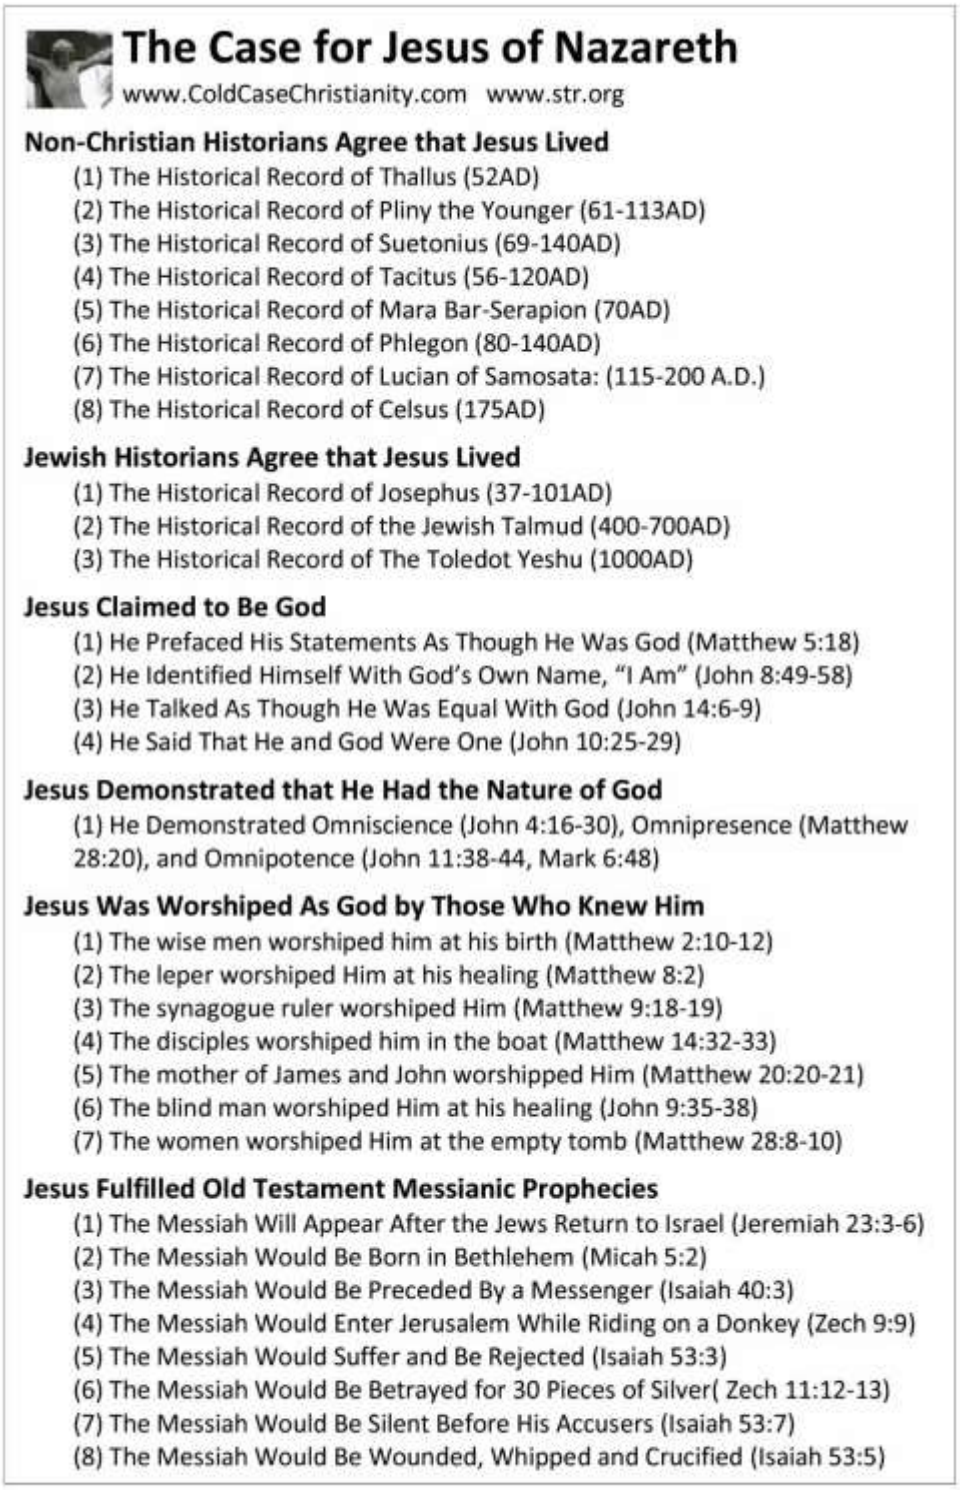
Feather pen. Illustration copyrighted.The Apostles' Creed, written in the 4th century; the Nicene Creed, adopted at the Council of Nicea in 325 A.D.; the Athanasian Creed, written about 450 A.D.; the Chalcedon Definition, adopted at the Council of Chalcedon in 451 A.D.; and the Small Catechism of Martin Luther of 1529 A.D. are only a few of the historic creeds that recognize the veracity of the Virgin Birth of Jesus. Only in more modern times have Bible critics begun to try to cast doubt on a doctrinal truth that the Church has long since historically endorsed.

Critic's Claim #4

The idea of a virgin birth is BIBLICALLY UNCONVINCING

Some critics cite the fact that the Apostle Paul is silent on the subject of the Virgin Birth, and the fact that Mary's virginity is never mentioned in the Gospel According to John, as evidence that Jesus was never born of a virgin.

But the argument from silence, always a rather weak tactic in making a case, is particularly weak here due to the fact that both Paul and John were alive and quite familiar with the Gospel accounts written by Matthew and Dr. Luke (a physician!) — and yet never either questioned or refuted it.



Critic's Claim #5

The idea of a virgin birth is STATISTICALLY UNWARRANTED

If you really want to put truth up for a vote (and who does?), let's get all of the statistics out in the open. While it is true that one very famous poll taken in 1965 (and still being frequently cited today) of 7,441 Protestant clergy showed that many mainline denominational ministers were not convinced of the truthfulness of the Virgin Birth, a more recent Harris poll of a randomly selected group of 1,011 adults found that 91% of U.S. Christians do believe in the Virgin Birth. All of which goes to show that when it comes to determining spiritual truth, our authority ought to be the Bible (Isaiah 7:14, Matthew 1:25), not men — including clergy!

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Case for Jesus of Nazareth – Evidence for the Existence and Deity of Jesus

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

How to Respond to Claims Jesus is a "Copycat Savior"

How to Respond to Claims Jesus Is a "Copycat Savior"

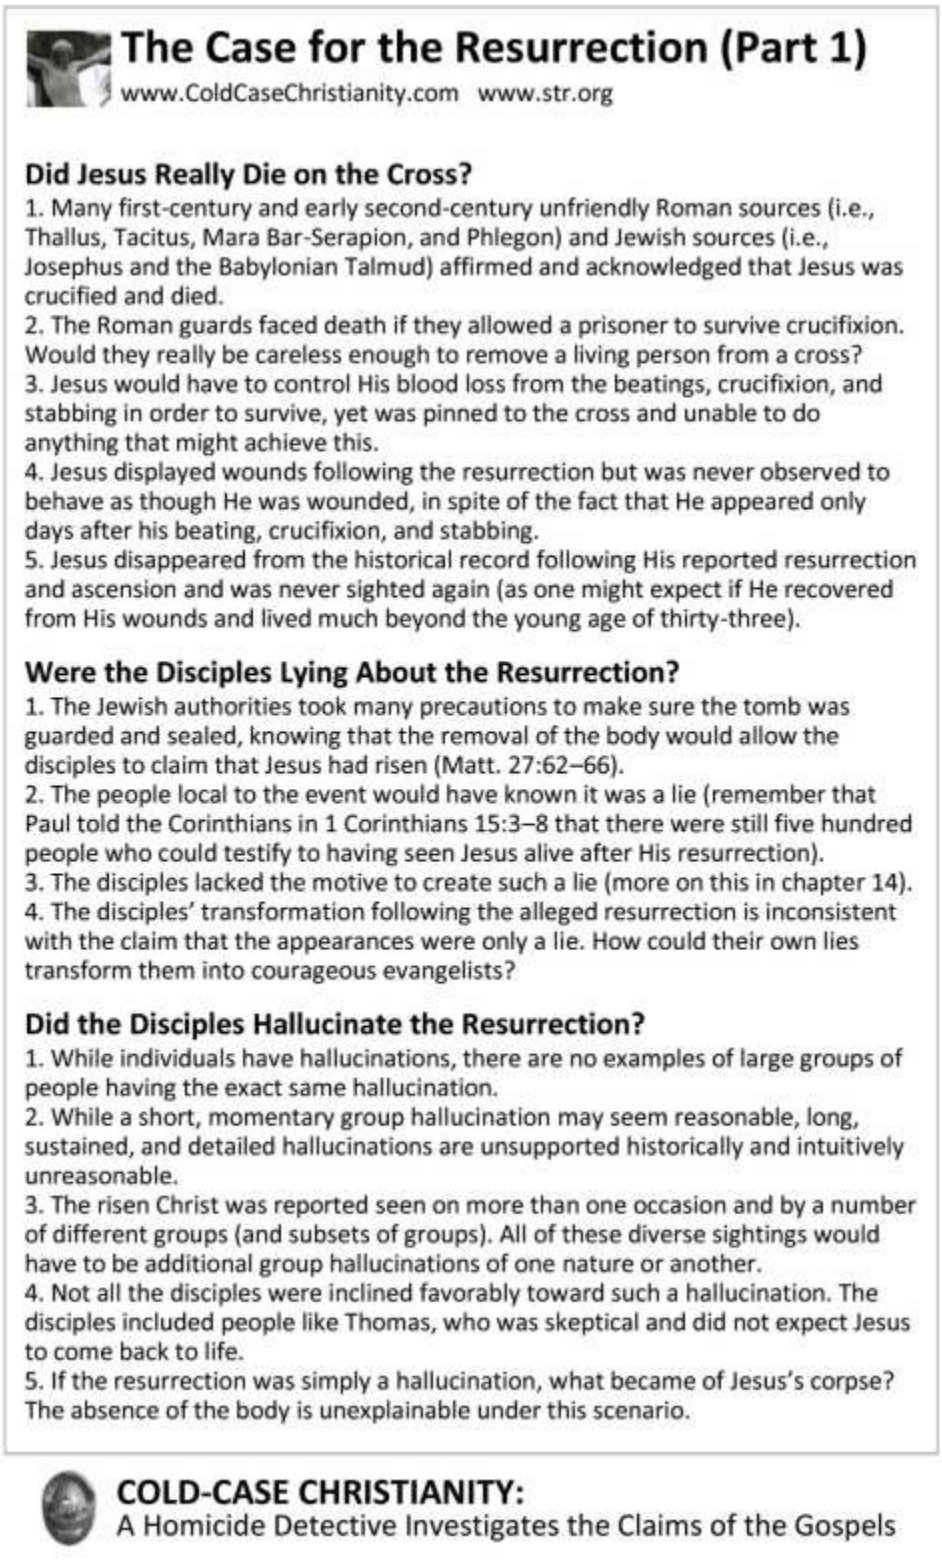
www.ColdCaseChristianity.com

1. Expose the False Claims:
The gods of mythology were not born of a virgin as Jesus was born to Mary, they did not live a life that was similar to Jesus in detail, they did not hold the titles attributed to Jesus, and they were not resurrected in a manner remotely similar to the resurrection of Christ. Primitive mythologies simply fail to resemble the Biblical account of Jesus when they are examined closely. Expose the false claims of those who say Jesus was copied from prior mythologies.

2. Expose the Errant Strategy:
Critics typically "cherry pick" from the mythological attributes of a variety of pagan gods and exaggerate the alleged similarities to construct a profile vaguely similar to Jesus. They search for singular similarities to the Christ of the Bible and then assemble these similarities from a variety of gods spanning the centuries and originating in geographically diverse regions (as if the 1st Century creators of the Jesus story would have access to these mythologies in the first place. There is no single prior mythology significantly similar to Jesus. Expose the selective strategy of those who say Jesus was copied from prior mythologies.

3. Expose the Common Cultural Expectations:
The primitive cultures who were interested in God's nature reasoned He would have the ability to perform miracles, teach humans and form disciples. These are universal expectations failing to invalidate the historicity of Jesus. As Paul recognized on Mars Hill (Acts 17:22-31), men thought deeply about the nature of God prior to His arrival as Jesus. Sometimes they imagined the details correctly, sometimes they didn't. Expose the common cultural expectations of ancient people groups to those who say Jesus was copied from prior mythologies.

4. Expose the Unlikely Approach Being Offered:
It is unreasonable to believe Christian conspirators would create a story designed to convince Jewish believers Jesus was God by inserting pagan mythological elements into the narrative. Judaism is a uniquely monotheistic religion, and the God of Judaism provides strict prohibitions against the worship of pagan gods. It is unreasonable to think the New Testament authors would utilize pagan mythology in an attempt to influence adherents of Judaism. Expose the unlikely nature of this claim by those who say Jesus was copied from prior mythologies.



5. Expose the Reliable Nature of the Gospel Eyewitness Accounts:
There are sufficient reasons to believe the history of Jesus is reliable, even if there are marginal similarities between Jesus and pagan mythologies. The evidence for the early dating of the Gospels, the corroboration of their claims (both internally and externally), the reliable transmission of their content, and the lack of bias on the part of their authors provides sufficient reason to believe they accurately describe the life, death and resurrection of Jesus. Expose the reliable nature of the Gospels to those who say Jesus was copied from prior mythologies.

COLD-CASE CHRISTIANITY:
A Homicide Detective Investigates the Claims of the Gospels

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Case for the Resurrection (Part 1 of 2)

The Case for the Resurrection (Part 1)

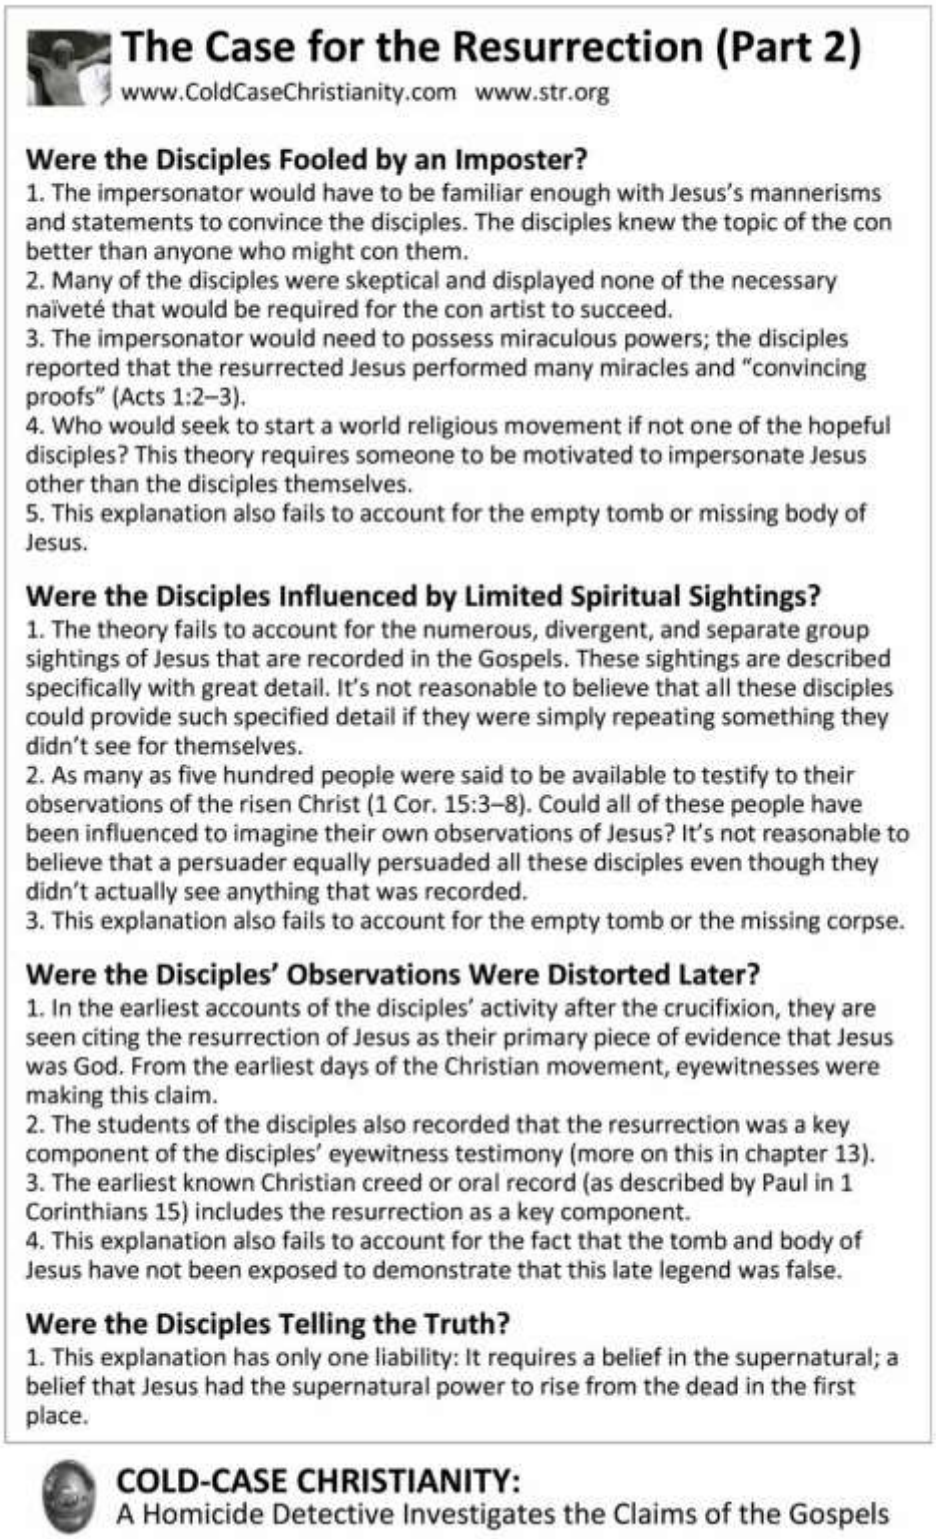
www.ColdCaseChristianity.com www.str.org

Did Jesus Really Die on the Cross?

1. Many first-century and early second-century unfriendly Roman sources (i.e., Thallus, Tacitus, Mara Bar-Serapion, and Phlegon) and Jewish sources (i.e., Josephus and the Babylonian Talmud) affirmed and acknowledged that Jesus was crucified and died.
2. The Roman guards faced death if they allowed a prisoner to survive crucifixion. Would they really be careless enough to remove a living person from a cross?
3. Jesus would have to control His blood loss from the beatings, crucifixion, and stabbing in order to survive, yet was pinned to the cross and unable to do anything that might achieve this.
4. Jesus displayed wounds following the resurrection but was never observed to behave as though He was wounded, in spite of the fact that He appeared only days after his beating, crucifixion, and stabbing.
5. Jesus disappeared from the historical record following His reported resurrection and ascension and was never sighted again (as one might expect if He recovered from His wounds and lived much beyond the young age of thirty-three).

Were the Disciples Lying About the Resurrection?

1. The Jewish authorities took many precautions to make sure the tomb was guarded and sealed, knowing that the removal of the body would allow the disciples to claim that Jesus had risen (Matt. 27:62–66).
2. The people local to the event would have known it was a lie (remember that Paul told the Corinthians in 1 Corinthians 15:3–8 that there were still five hundred people who could testify to having seen Jesus alive after His resurrection).
3. The disciples lacked the motive to create such a lie (more on this in chapter 14).
4. The disciples' transformation following the alleged resurrection is inconsistent with the claim that the appearances were only a lie. How could their own lies transform them into courageous evangelists?



Did the Disciples Hallucinate the Resurrection?

1. While individuals have hallucinations, there are no examples of large groups of people having the exact same hallucination.
2. While a short, momentary group hallucination may seem reasonable, long, sustained, and detailed hallucinations are unsupported historically and intuitively unreasonable.
3. The risen Christ was reported seen on more than one occasion and by a number of different groups (and subsets of groups). All of these diverse sightings would have to be additional group hallucinations of one nature or another.
4. Not all the disciples were inclined favorably toward such a hallucination. The disciples included people like Thomas, who was skeptical and did not expect Jesus to come back to life.
5. If the resurrection was simply a hallucination, what became of Jesus's corpse? The absence of the body is unexplainable under this scenario.

COLD-CASE CHRISTIANITY:
A Homicide Detective Investigates the Claims of the Gospels

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Case for the Resurrection (Part 2 of 2)

The Case for the Resurrection (Part 2)

www.ColdCaseChristianity.com www.str.org

Were the Disciples Fooled by an Imposter?

1. The impersonator would have to be familiar enough with Jesus's mannerisms and statements to convince the disciples. The disciples knew the topic of the con better than anyone who might con them.
2. Many of the disciples were skeptical and displayed none of the necessary naïveté that would be required for the con artist to succeed.
3. The impersonator would need to possess miraculous powers; the disciples reported that the resurrected Jesus performed many miracles and "convincing proofs" (Acts 1:2–3).
4. Who would seek to start a world religious movement if not one of the hopeful disciples? This theory requires someone to be motivated to impersonate Jesus other than the disciples themselves.
5. This explanation also fails to account for the empty tomb or missing body of Jesus.

Were the Disciples Influenced by Limited Spiritual Sightings?

1. The theory fails to account for the numerous, divergent, and separate group sightings of Jesus that are recorded in the Gospels. These sightings are described specifically with great detail. It's not reasonable to believe that all these disciples could provide such specified detail if they were simply repeating something they didn't see for themselves.
2. As many as five hundred people were said to be available to testify to their observations of the risen Christ (1 Cor. 15:3–8). Could all of these people have been influenced to imagine their own observations of Jesus? It's not reasonable to believe that a persuader equally persuaded all these disciples even though they didn't actually see anything that was recorded.
3. This explanation also fails to account for the empty tomb or the missing corpse.

Were the Disciples' Observations Were Distorted Later?

1. In the earliest accounts of the disciples' activity after the crucifixion, they are seen citing the resurrection of Jesus as their primary piece of evidence that Jesus was God. From the earliest days of the Christian movement, eyewitnesses were making this claim.
2. The students of the disciples also recorded that the resurrection was a key component of the disciples' eyewitness testimony (more on this in chapter 13).
3. The earliest known Christian creed or oral record (as described by Paul in 1 Corinthians 15) includes the resurrection as a key component.
4. This explanation also fails to account for the fact that the tomb and body of Jesus have not been exposed to demonstrate that this late legend was false.

Were the Disciples Telling the Truth?

1. This explanation has only one liability: It requires a belief in the supernatural; a belief that Jesus had the supernatural power to rise from the dead in the first place.

COLD-CASE CHRISTIANITY:
A Homicide Detective Investigates the Claims of the Gospels

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Evidentially Diverse Resurrection Appearances of Jesus

The Evidentially Diverse Resurrection Appearances of Jesus

www.ColdCaseChristianity.com

A brief list of the Resurrection sightings:

1. Jesus first appeared to Mary Magdalene in the garden shortly after His Resurrection. (Mark 16:9; John 20:11-18)
2. Jesus appeared to the women returning from the empty tomb. (Matthew 28:8-10)
3. Jesus appeared to two disciples (Cleopas and another) on the road to Emmaus. (Mark 16:12,13; Luke 24:13-35)
4. Jesus appeared to Peter. (Luke 24:34, 1 Corinthians 15:5)
5. Jesus appeared to his disciples, in Jerusalem, while Thomas was absent. (Mark 16:14-18; Luke 24:36-49; John 20:19-23)
6. Jesus again appeared to his disciples, in Jerusalem. This time Thomas was present. (John 20:24-29)
7. Jesus appeared to his disciples (Simon Peter, Thomas called Didymus, Nathanael from Cana in Galilee, Zebedee's sons and two other of his disciples), on the shore of the Sea of Galilee. (John 21:1,2)
8. Jesus was seen by 500 believers at one time. (1 Corinthians 15:6)
9. Jesus appeared to James. (1 Corinthians 15:7)
10. Jesus appeared to his disciples on a mountain in Galilee. (Matthew 28:16-20)
11. Jesus appeared to the believers in Jerusalem for forty days after the Resurrection. (Acts 1:1-11)
12. Jesus appeared to His disciples, blessed them, and ascended into heaven. (Luke 24:50-53)
13. Jesus also appeared to Paul, on the road to Damascus. (Acts 9:3-6; 1 Corinthians 15:8)

If you examine these accounts closely, you'll be impressed by the diversity of the claims:

Jesus Appeared to Groups of Diverse Size
To single eyewitnesses, to small groups and to huge crowds.

Jesus Appeared at Diverse Locations and Times
In enclosed rooms and open areas; in the region of Jerusalem, Galilee and well beyond. He appeared at night and at various times of the day.

Jesus Appeared to People of Diverse Status
To people he knew well and to people he didn't know well at all, to those in His inner circle, to those less connected and to complete strangers (Paul). Some were devout followers, some were more skeptical and some were in complete denial.

Jesus Appeared for Diverse Purposes
To many He simply wanted to demonstrate His Deity and Resurrection power. With others He ate a meal or had an important conversation. He appeared to Peter to comfort and challenge him and to Paul to call him away from his murderous mission.

Jesus Appeared for Periods of Time
Some of his appearances were little more than a few minutes, others for hours. He stayed with the believers in Jerusalem for forty days.

Jesus' Appearances Were Recorded By Diverse Authors
Two were direct eyewitnesses, two were close associates of the eyewitnesses. Some were better educated than others. One was a doctor, one a tax collector, one a fisherman.

COLD-CASE CHRISTIANITY:
A Homicide Detective Investigates the Claims of the Gospels

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

What the Earliest Non-Biblical (Apostolic Fathers) Authors Say About Jesus

See also: Apostolic and Church Fathers

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Accuracy / Reliability of the New Testament Bible

Accuracy of the New Testament Bible

Authors/Works	Recorded	Dates of Mss.	Time Span	Copies Survived
Caesar	100–44 B.C.	A.D. 900	1,000 YRS	10
Livy	59 B.C.–A.D. 17	A.D. 300	400 YRS	27
Plato	427–347 B.C.	A.D. 900	1,200 YRS	7
Tacitus (Annals)	A.D. 56–120	A.D. 800	900 YRS	3
Pliny the Younger (History)	A.D. 61–113	A.D. 850	750 YRS	7
Thucydides (History)	460–400 B.C.	A.D. 100	600 YRS	20
Suetonious (De Vita Caesarum)	A.D. 69–140	A.D. 800	900 YRS	200+
Herodotus (History)	484–425 B.C.	A.D. 100	600 YRS	75
Sophocles	496–406 B.C.	A.D. 1000	1,400 YRS	193
Catullus	54 B.C.	A.D. 1550	1,600 YRS	3
Euripides	480–406 B.C.	A.D. 1100	1,500 YRS	9
Demosthenes	383–322 B.C.	A.D. 1100	1,300 YRS	200
Aristotle	384–322 B.C.	A.D. 1100	1,400 YRS	40
Aristophanes	450–385 B.C.	A.D. 900	1,200 YRS	10
Homer	900 B.C.	400 B.C.	500 YRS	643
New Testament	A.D. 35–100	A.D. 100–150	5–30 YRS	5,700

New Testament copies include (1) fragments, (2) some incomplete copies of the NT, (3) the complete NT, which are all in Greek. Another 10,000+ manuscripts exist in Latin plus more than one million quotations from the church fathers.*

Manuscript Evidence for Ancient Writings

Author	Written	Earliest Fragment/copy	Time Span in Years	Number of Manuscripts
Caesar	100 to 44 B.C.	A.D. 900	1,000	10
Plato	427 to 347 B.C.	A.D. 900	1,200	7
Thucydides	460 to 400 B.C.	A.D. 900	1,300	8
Tacitus	A.D. 100	A.D. 1100	1,000	20
Suetonius	A.D. 75 to 160	A.D. 950	800	8
Homer (Iliad)	900 B.C.	400 B.C.	500	643
New Testament	A.D. 40 to 100	A.D. 125	25 to 50	24,000

Information in this chart can be found in various sources. This chart was adapted from: Christian Apologetics, by Norman Geisler, 1976, p. 307; and Evidence That Demands a Verdict, by Josh McDowell, 1979, pp. 42,43.

I Don't Have Enough Faith to Be an Atheist: Is the New Testament True?
http://www.plumbbobblog.com/?p=7077

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Manuscript evidence for superior New Testament reliability

https://carm.org/manuscript-evidence

The New Testament is constantly under attack, and its reliability and accuracy are often contested by critics. If the critics want to disregard the New Testament, then they must also disregard other ancient writings by Plato, Aristotle, and Homer. This is because the New Testament documents are better-preserved and more numerous than any other ancient writings. Because they are so numerous, they can be cross checked for accuracy . . . and they are very consistent.

There are presently 5,686 Greek manuscripts in existence today for the New Testament.1 If we were to compare the number of New Testament manuscripts to other ancient writings, we find that the New Testament manuscripts far outweigh the others in quantity.

Author	Date Written	Earliest Copy	Approximate Time Span between original & copy	Number of Copies	Accuracy of Copies
Lucretius	died 55 or 53 B.C.		1100 yrs	2	----
Pliny	A.D. 61-113	A.D. 850	750 yrs	7	----
Plato	427-347 B.C.	A.D. 900	1200 yrs	7	----
Demosthenes	4th Cent. B.C.	A.D. 1100	800 yrs	8	----
Herodotus	480-425 B.C.	A.D. 900	1300 yrs	8	----
Suetonius	A.D. 75-160	A.D. 950	800 yrs	8	----
Thucydides	460-400 B.C.	A.D. 900	1300 yrs	8	----
Euripides	480-406 B.C.	A.D. 1100	1300 yrs	9	----
Aristophanes	450-385 B.C.	A.D. 900	1200	10	----
Caesar	100-44 B.C.	A.D. 900	1000	10	----
Livy	59 BC-AD 17	----	???	20	----
Tacitus	circa A.D. 100	A.D. 1100	1000 yrs	20	----
Aristotle	384-322 B.C.	A.D. 1100	1400	49	----
Sophocles	496-406 B.C.	A.D. 1000	1400 yrs	193	----
Homer (Iliad)	900 B.C.	400 B.C.	500 yrs	643	95%
New Testament	1st Cent. A.D. (A.D. 50-100)	2nd Cent. A.D. (c. A.D. 130 f.)	less than 100 years	5600	99.5%

As you can see, there are thousands more New Testament Greek manuscripts than any other ancient writing. The internal consistency of the New Testament documents is about 99.5% textually pure. That is an amazing accuracy. In addition, there are over 19,000 copies in the Syriac, Latin, Coptic, and Aramaic languages. The total supporting New Testament manuscript base is over 24,000.

Almost all biblical scholars agree that the New Testament documents were all written before the close of the First Century. If Jesus was crucified in A.D. 30., then that means the entire New Testament was completed within 70 years. This is important because it means there were plenty of people around when the New Testament documents were penned--people who could have contested the writings. In other words, those who wrote the documents knew that if they were inaccurate, plenty of people would have pointed it out. But, we have absolutely no ancient documents contemporary with the First Century that contest the New Testament texts.

Furthermore, another important aspect of this discussion is the fact that we have a fragment of the gospel of John that dates back to around 29 years from the original writing (John Rylands Papyri A.D. 125). This is extremely close to the original writing date. This is simply unheard of in any other ancient writing, and it demonstrates that the Gospel of John is a First Century document.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Below is a chart with some of the oldest extant New Testament manuscripts compared to when they were originally penned. Compare these time spans with the next closest, which is Homer's Iliad, where the closest copy from the original is 500 years later. Undoubtedly, that period of time allows for more textual corruption in its transmission. How much less so for the New Testament documents?

Important Manuscript Papyri	Contents	Date Original Written	MSS Date	Approx. Time Span	Location
p^{52} (John Rylands Fragment)3	John 18:31-33, 37-38	circa A.D. 96	circa A.D. 125	29 yrs	John Rylands Library, Manchester, England
P^{46} (Chester Beatty Papyrus)	Rom. 5:17-6:3, 5-14; 8:15-25, 27-35; 10:1-11, 22, 24-33, 35; 16:1-23, 25-27; Heb.; 1 & 2 Cor., Eph., Gal., Phil., Col.; 1 Thess. 1:1, 9-10; 2:1-3; 5:5-9, 23-28	50's-70's	circa A.D. 200	Approx. 150 yrs	Chester Beatty Museum, Dublin & Ann Arbor, Michigan, University of Michigan library
P^{66} (Bodmer Papyrus)	John 1:1-6:11, 35-14:26; fragment of 14:29-21:9	70's	circa A.D. 200	Approx. 130 yrs	Cologne, Geneva
P^{67}	Matt. 3:9,15; 5:20-22, 25-28		circa A.D. 200	Approx. 130 yrs	Barcelona, Fundacion San Lucas Evangelista, P. Barc.1

If the critics of the Bible dismiss the New Testament as reliable information, then they must also dismiss the reliability of the writings of Plato, Aristotle, Caesar, Homer, and the other authors mentioned in the chart at the beginning of the paper. On the other hand, if the critics acknowledge the historicity and writings of those other individuals, then they must also retain the historicity and writings of the New Testament authors; after all, the evidence for the New Testament's reliability is far greater than the others. The Christian has substantially superior criteria for affirming the New Testament documents than he does for any other ancient writing. It is good evidence on which to base the trust in the reliability of the New Testament.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Manuscript evidence for superior New Testament reliability

https://carm.org/manuscript-evidence

There are presently 5,686 Greek manuscripts in existence today for the New Testament. If we were to compare the number of New Testament manuscripts to other ancient writings, we find that the New Testament manuscripts far outweigh the others in quantity.

Author	Date Written	Earliest Copy	Approximate Time Span between original & copy	Number of Copies	Accuracy of Copies
Lucretius	died 55 or 53 B.C.		1100 yrs	2	----
Pliny	61-113 A.D.	850 A.D.	750 yrs	7	----
Plato	427-347 B.C.	900 A.D.	1200 yrs	7	----
Demosthenes	4th Cent. B.C.	1100 A.D.	800 yrs	8	----
Herodotus	480-425 B.C.	900 A.D.	1300 yrs	8	----
Suetonius	75-160 A.D.	950 A.D.	800 yrs	8	----
Thucydides	460-400 B.C.	900 A.D.	1300 yrs	8	----
Euripides	480-406 B.C.	1100 A.D.	1300 yrs	9	----
Aristophanes	450-385 B.C.	900 A.D.	1200	10	----
Caesar	100-44 B.C.	900 A.D.	1000	10	----
Livy	59 BC-AD 17	----	???	20	----
Tacitus	circa 100 A.D.	1100 A.D.	1000 yrs	20	----
Aristotle	384-322 B.C.	1100 A.D.	1400	49	----
Sophocles	496-406 B.C.	1000 A.D.	1400 yrs	193	----
Homer (Iliad)	900 B.C.	400 B.C.	500 yrs	643	95%
New Testament	1st Cent. A.D. (50-100 A.D.	2nd Cent. A.D. (c. 130 A.D. f.)	less than 100 years	5600	99.5%

Chart Showing Accuracy of the Bible New Testament Compared to Other Accepted Documents

As you can see, there are thousands more New Testament Greek manuscripts than any other ancient writing. The internal consistency of the New Testament documents is about 99.5% textually pure. That is an amazing accuracy. In addition, there are over 19,000 copies in the Syriac, Latin, Coptic, and Aramaic languages. The total supporting New Testament manuscript base is over 24,000.

Almost all biblical scholars agree that the New Testament documents were all written before the close of the First Century. If Jesus was crucified in A.D. 30., then that means the entire New Testament was completed within 70 years. This is important because it means there were plenty of people around when the New Testament documents were penned--people who could have contested the writings. In other words, those who wrote the documents knew that if they were inaccurate, plenty of people would have pointed it out. But, we have absolutely no ancient documents contemporary with the First Century that contest the New Testament texts.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Furthermore, another important aspect of this discussion is the fact that we have a fragment of the gospel of John that dates back to around 29 years from the original writing (John Rylands Papyri A.D. 125). This is extremely close to the original writing date. This is simply unheard of in any other ancient writing, and it demonstrates that the Gospel of John is a First Century document.

Is the New Testament Text Reliable https://www.str.org/articles/is-the-new-testament-text-reliable

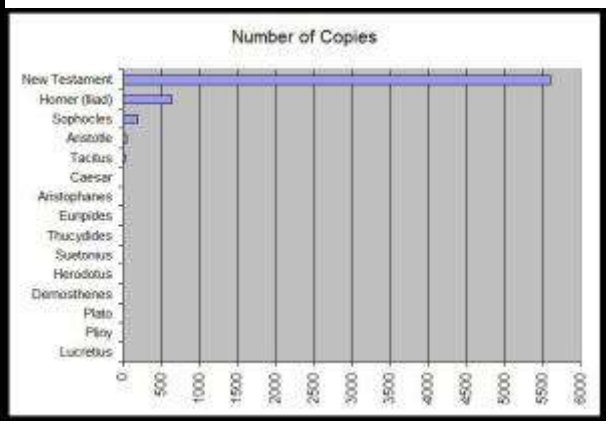
Facts for Skeptics of the New Testament http://www.equip.org/article/facts-for-skeptics-of-the-new-testament/



Archaeology and the Historical Reliability of the New Testament https://www.bethinking.org/is-the-bible-reliable/archaeology-and-the-historical-reliability-of-the-new-testament

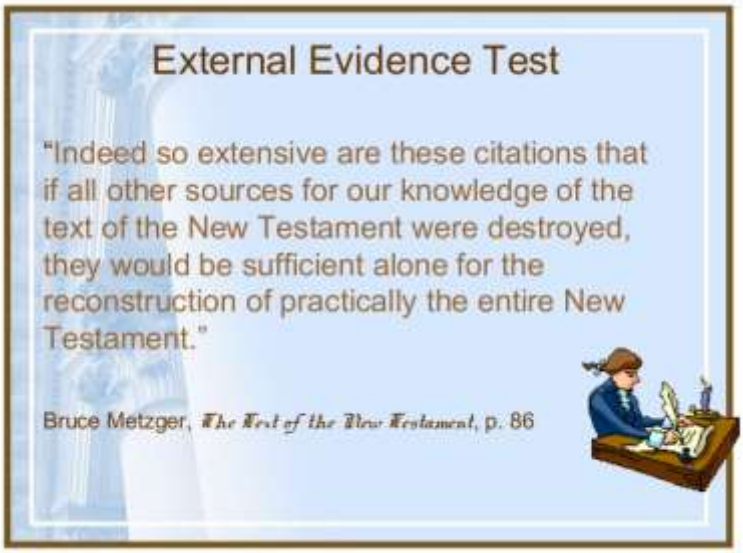
How Accurate is the Bible?
http://www.cslewisinstitute.org/webfm_send/410 [PDF]

Bibliographical Evidence
https://michaeljscott.wordpress.com/jonathan-munro-adventures/the-lost-scrolls-a-jonathan-munro-adventure/biblical-evidences/

Here are a pair of charts illustrating the differences between the age of ancient manuscripts, and the extant number of ancient manuscripts available today:

So you see, if we challenge the reliability of the New Testament manuscripts based on the notion that they've been corrupted over centuries of copying, we must allow all of classical antiquity to fall as well. And the simple fact is, we don't have centuries as it is. We have decades, and we have thousands of manuscripts and fragments of manuscripts from which to compare and choose. Therefore, we can confidently assert that the New Testament we have today is a reliably accurate version of the original text.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



Extra-Biblical Christian Sources

Quotations from early Church Fathers concerning the New Testament

Writer	Gospels	Acts	Pauline	General	Revelation	Totals
Justin Martyr	268	10	43	6	3	330
Irenaeus	1,038	194	499	23	65	1,819
Clement (Alex)	1,107	44	1,127	207	11	2,406
Origen	9,231	349	7,778	399	165	17,992
Tertullian	3,822	502	2,609	120	205	7,258
Hippolytus	734	42	387	27	188	1,378
Eusebius	3,258	211	1,592	88	27	5,176
Grand Totals	19,368	1,352	14,035	870	664	36,289

Taken from Josh McDowell, The New Evidence That Demands a Verdict, p. 43

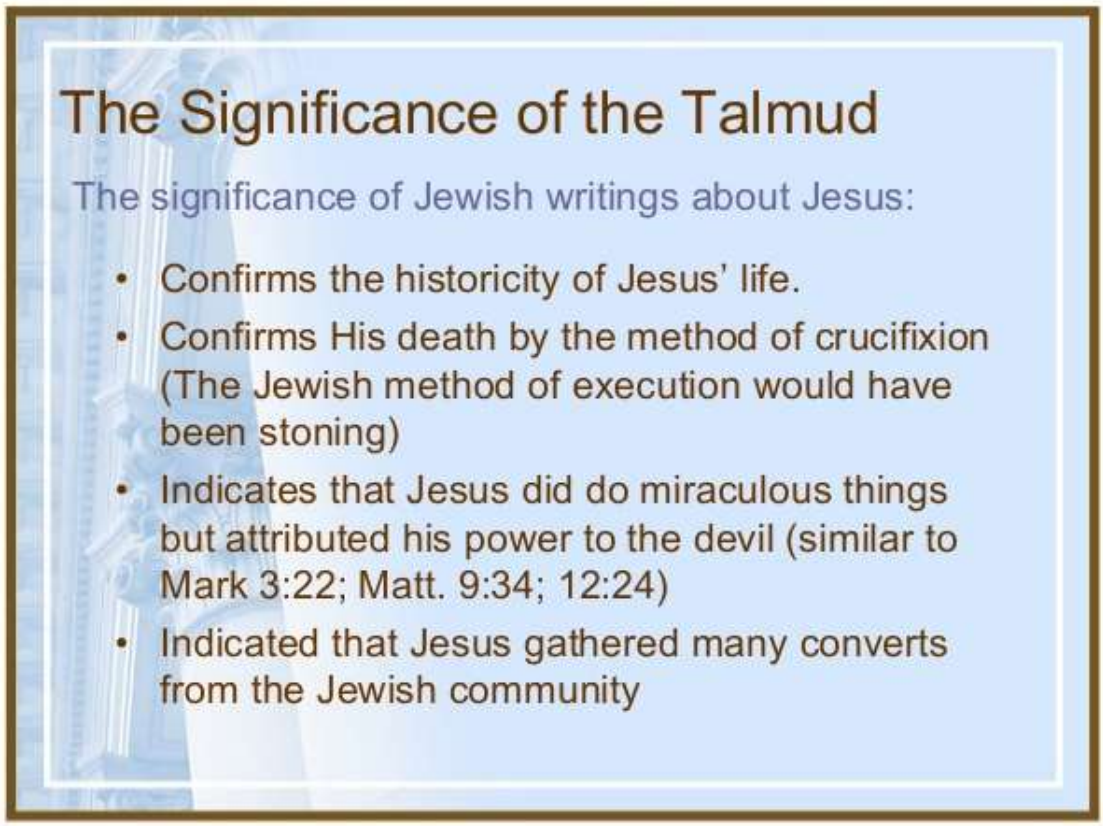
Source: https://www.slideshare.net/oknishan/reliability-of-the-bible

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



Flavius Josephus…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Dead Sea Scrolls

- The Dead Sea Scrolls demonstrated the meticulous care in recording the manuscripts for Jews.
- The Dead Sea scrolls attest to textual accuracy

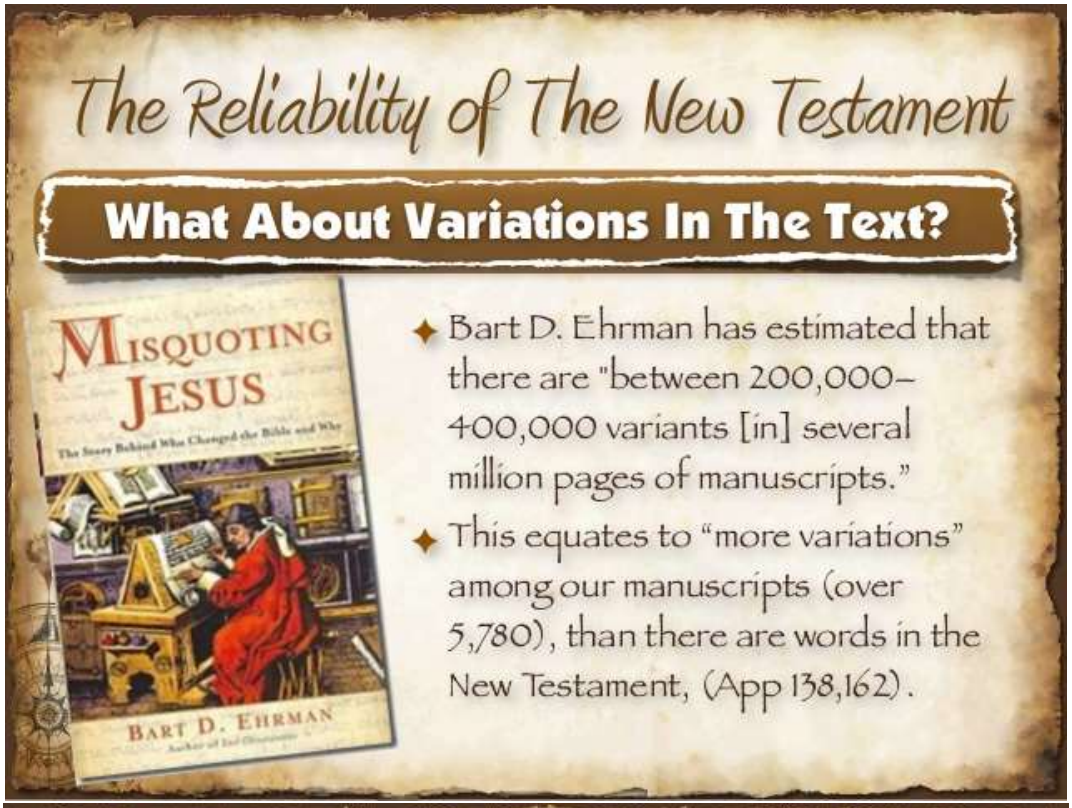
The Significance of the Dead Sea Scroll discoveries?

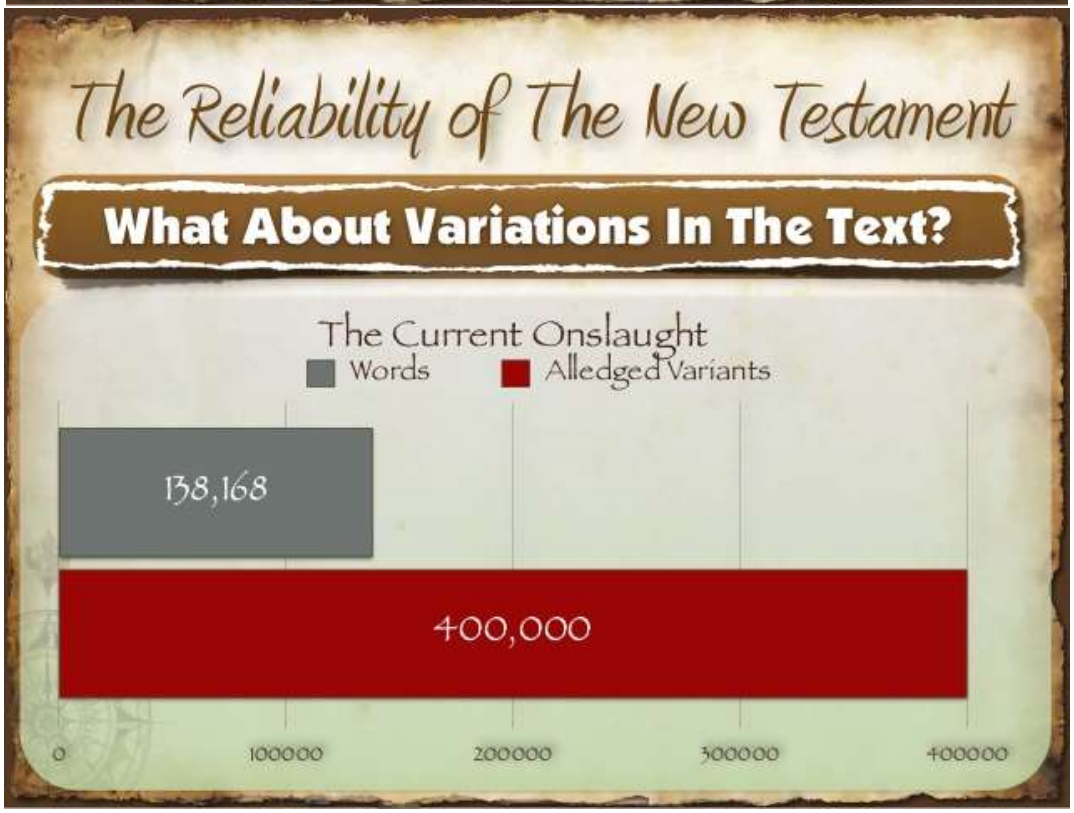
The earliest manuscripts up until the discovery of the Dead Sea Scrolls was the Cairo codex dated about A.D. 895 containing both the latter and former prophets.

The Dead Sea Scrolls date from the third century B.C. to the first century A.D.

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

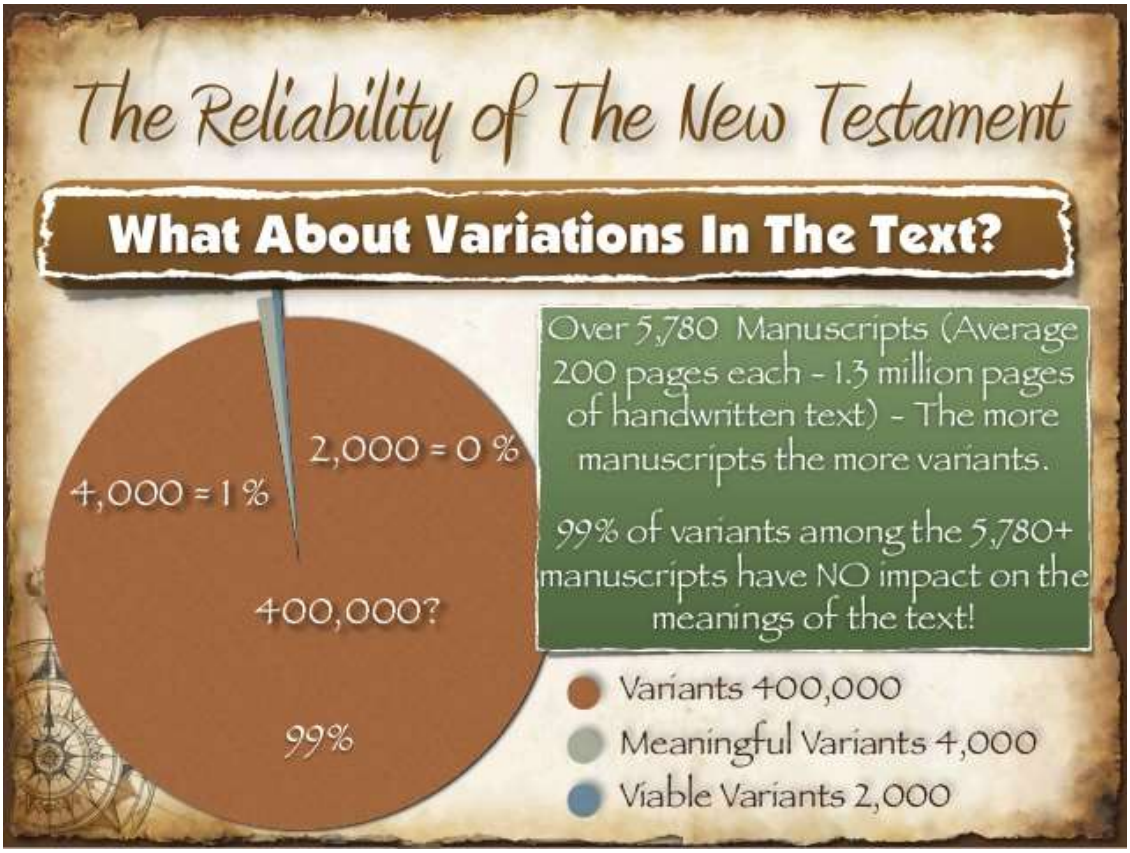


For another example of how Dead Sea Scrolls improve our knowledge/understanding of Bible and the history/culture of the times during which it was written, see:

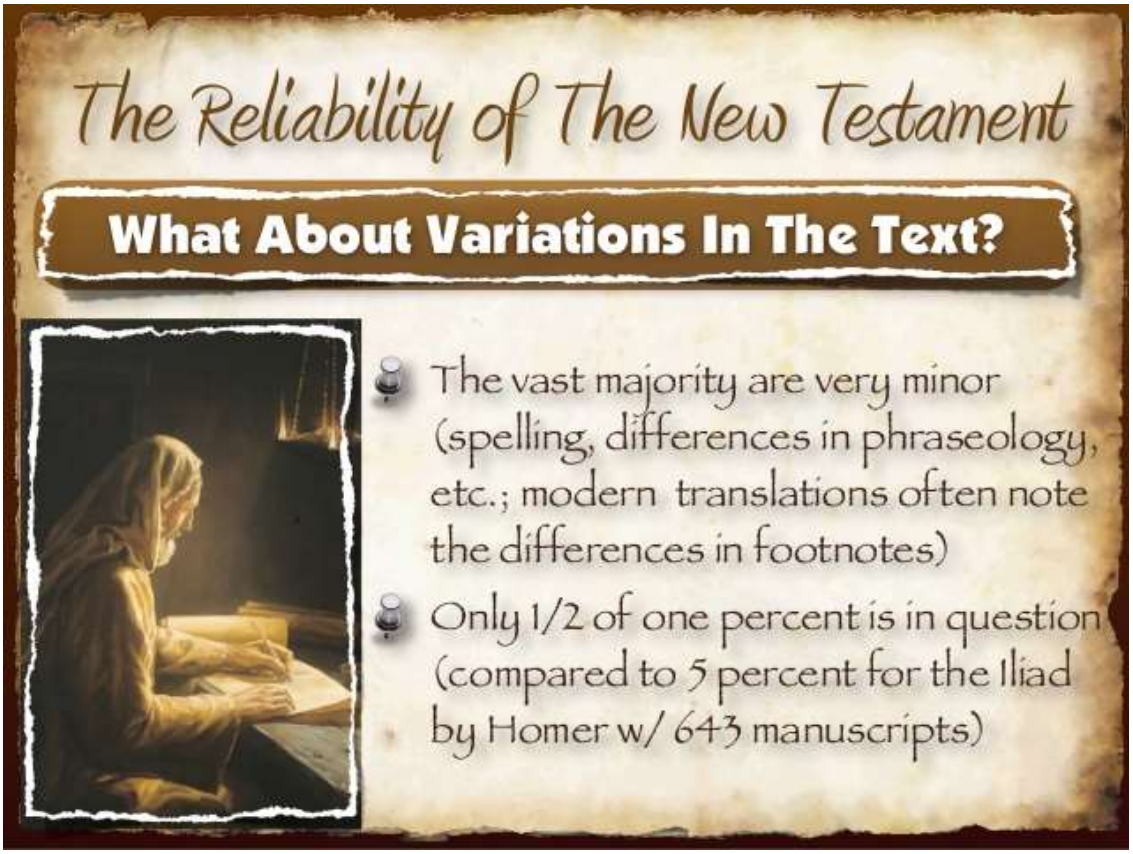


4QMMT

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



What About Variations in the Text?



Source: https://www.slideshare.net/DonMcClain/the-reliability-of-the-new-testament-text

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Source: https://www.slideshare.net/DonMcClain/the-reliability-of-the-new-testament-text

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Book of Genesis in 11 minutes and 18 seconds! (The Bible Project)
http://jmsmith.org/blog/bible-project-genesis/

https://thebibleproject.com/explore/genesis-1-11/

https://thebibleproject.com/explore/genesis-12-50/

also Revelation: https://thebibleproject.com/explore/revelation/

Ravi Zacharias, Christian Apologist [Videos]

Atheist/Scientist Challenges Ravi (re: Determinism)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=R641w4xCoFI

A Question About God Condemning Atheists to Hell (re: Moral Law)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=R641w4xCoFI

What about Condemning Others to Hell that Don't Believe in Jesus?
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=4OUDO782aag

Hell – What is it?
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=R641w4xCoFI

Does Suicide Send You to Hell?
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=7JGFrcCS2ps

Why Is the Path to Heaven Narrow?
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=H9fsuT37ZAA

Was the Jesus story based on older pagan mythologies?
http://jmsmith.org/blog/pagan-jesus/

The Gospel Plain and Clear
http://jmsmith.org/downloads/The-Gospel-Plain-and-Clear.pdf

DigitalCommons@Liberty University
http://digitalcommons.liberty.edu/
Source for conservative Christian scholarly papers (pdfs) and links to articles on a wide range of theological topics. (Just enter your search parameters to discover related publications.)

Bible Bulletin Board –Sermons, articles by great theologians, S.S. lessons: http://www.biblebb.com/

See also my other separate resources*:
Christian Scholarship: Biblical – Theological – Philosophical
The Complete Sayings of Jesus – NKJV with Appendix

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Series: Examining Jesus by the Historical Method

Does Jesus meet the scrutiny of the historical method?

This series of articles discusses how Jesus' historicity meets and exceeds the standards of the historical method as they also show that the NT record about Jesus is extremely trustworthy.

"Examining Jesus by the Historical Method (Part 1: Multiple Sources)." (Dec. 27, 15).
https://bellatorchristi.com/2015/12/27/examining-jesus-by-the-historical-method-part-1-multiple-sources/

"Examining Jesus by the Historical Method (Part 2: Enemy Attestation)." (Jan. 4, 2016).
https://bellatorchristi.com/2016/01/04/examining-jesus-by-the-historical-method-part-2-enemy-attestation/

"Examining Jesus by the Historical Method (Part 3: Embarrassing Admonitions)." (Jan. 11, 2016).
https://bellatorchristi.com/2016/01/11/examining-jesus-by-the-historical-method-part-3-embarrassing-admonitions/

"Examining Jesus by the Historical Method (Part 4: Pre-NT Traditions)." (Jan. 18, 2016).
https://bellatorchristi.com/2016/01/18/examining-jesus-by-the-historical-method-part-4-early-testimony-pre-nt-traditions/

"Examining Jesus by the Historical Method (Part 5: Early NT Texts)." (Jan. 25, 2016).
https://bellatorchristi.com/2016/01/25/examining-jesus-by-the-historical-method-part-5-early-testimony-early-nt-texts/

"Examining Jesus by the Historical Method (Part 6: The Case for the Gospels)." (Feb. 1, 2016).
https://bellatorchristi.com/2016/02/01/examining-jesus-by-the-historical-method-part-6-eyewitness-testimony-the-case-for-the-gospels/

"Examining Jesus by the Historical Method (Part 7: The Gospel Witnesses)." (Feb. 8, 2016).
https://bellatorchristi.com/2016/02/08/examining-jesus-by-the-historical-method-part-7-eyewitness-testimony-the-gospel-witnesses/

"Examining Jesus by the Historical Method (Part 8: Two Final Methods and Conclusion)." (Feb. 15, 2016).
https://bellatorchristi.com/2016/02/15/examining-jesus-by-the-historical-method-part-8-2-final-methods-and-conclusion/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

More Reliability of Bible:

See also: Accuracy / Reliability of the New Testament

Reliability of the Old Testament
http://www.theopedia.com/Historicity_of_the_Old_Testament

Evidence from Archaeology for the reliability of the Bible http://www.facingthechallenge.org/arch2.php

Why We Can Believe the Bible
http://www.everystudent.com/features/bible.html

Archeology and the Old Testament
http://www.apologeticspress.org/apcontent.aspx?category=13&article=1347

Archeology Confirms the Bible
http://www.biblestudysite.com/arch.htm

How Was The Bible Written and Transmitted?
http://www.bibleodyssey.org/tools/bible-basics/how-was-the-bible-written-and-transmitted.aspx

Bible Versions Differences
https://www.blueletterbible.org/versions.cfm

Why You Can Believe the Bible
http://www.everystudent.com/features/bible.html

Lecture - Dr Peter Williams - New Evidences the Gospels were Based on Eyewitness Accounts https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=r5Ylt1pBMm8 [Video]

N.T. Wright: How Can the Bible be Authoritative? (1991) http://ntwrightpage.com/2016/07/12/how-can-the-bible-be-authoritative/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Center for the Study of New Testament Manuscripts [Facebook] [iTunes]

(Daniel B. Wallace,(LinkedIn) PhD, Executive Director CSNTM), Professor at DTS
Dr. Wallace is a recognized expert on koine Greek.
Many of his books on Greek grammar are required standards at colleges and seminaries. (Wikipedia: Daniel B Wallace)

New Testament: Introductions and Outlines (for each book in the NT) includes discussions of different points of view regarding authorship and authenticity for each book of the NT, in addition to the introductions and outlines. (Also downloadable as Microsoft Word documents.)

Video: An Embarrassment of Riches (Youtube)
The Myth of Theological Liberalism (blog article, read also the comments)

The Center for Study and Preservation of the Majority Text - resources on the various families of the Majority Text, as well as the study of the Textus Receptus and the Greek lectionary tradition.

Dr. Wallace: Earliest Manuscript of the New Testament Discovered?
https://voice.dts.edu/article/wallace-new-testament-manscript-first-century/

How a Surf Bum Learned to Trust the Bible
https://voice.dts.edu/article/how-a-surf-bum-learned-to-trust-the-bible-wallace-daniel/

Reliability of the Gospels (physical and literary evidence of authenticity see also: the Appendix of "Complete Sayings of Jesus - NKJV"

Evidence from Archeology for the Reliability of the Bible #2 #3 #4 #5 #6 (BAS) #7 News

History of the English Bible (Wallace): https://bible.org/series/history-english-bible

See also my other separate resources*:
Christian Scholarship: Biblical – Theological – Philosophical
Mere Christianity – C.S. Lewis

See also: Paul's Letters and the New Testament

12 Points that Show Christianity is True and pages following it

Accuracy of the New Testament

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Dr. Dan Wallace Part I: "Erasmus' Greek New Testament" (2016)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=yS8bRQTzPG8

Includes Q&A and mention of Bart Ehrman near the end

Dan Wallace Erasmus Greek NT pt 2 (2016)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=UbxuG37LXtE

During the Q&A discusses the KJO issue; also recommends the NET (accurate, readable) and with extensive notes (literal in the notes) – feels the NT is better than the OT as the OT changes the language, so you don't see as clearly the Messianic prophecies), ESV (good translation, understated elegance, in line with the KJV, most memorable) and NIV tradition [i.e. 1984 onward; new is more accurate than the 1984] (more readable, but not memorable); [Note: also included KJV for our literary heritage; e.g., readers of NIV usually quote the KJV for John 3:16.] [Note: Wallace was the senior NT editor for the NET, worked on the Gospels in the ESV, also was 'kind of' a consultant for the TNIV.] Both the translators for the ESV and the new NIV said they could not do their translations without the NET translation notes.

KJO Example (referenced in above video):

E.g., Wallace and White on Anderberg with Sam Gipp
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=x8mwqc2P1PI [Video]

Do the newer translations show evidence of satanic influence (Isaiah 4:12) https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=EojRkuIi66I [Video]

Have some of the newer translations denied the trinity? (1 John 5:7) https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=aMHumjNDy54 [Video]

Full Version (Over 3 hours):
Ankerberg KJV Discussion Complete Scholars' Position [Recommended]
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=320N_Kz9H0A [Video]

Dan Wallace - Recent Discoveries of NT Manuscripts https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=SqLSSZ-nRPU [Video]

Did the Early Scribes Corrupt the New Testament? - Dan Wallace, PhD (2012)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=wiWKifMu6f8 [Video]

Bible scholar Dan Wallace defends the reliability of the New Testament against the new atheist critics. Wallace touches on many claims made by Bart Ehrman (Misquoting Jesus), C. J. Werleman (Jesus Lied), Dan Brown (The Da Vinci Code), etc. This video is part of the 'Contending with Christianity's Critics' 2012 conference: http://www.youtube.com/playlist?list=...

Slides from Dr. Wallace's video lecture (next page):

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Has the Bible been translated and retranslated so many times that we don't know what it originally said?

Year	Number of MSS	Earliest MSS
1611	7	11th century
2012	5800+	2nd century

Appendix to Bart Ehrman's Misquoting Jesus

"Why do you believe these core tenets of Christian orthodoxy to be in jeopardy based on the scribal errors you discovered in the biblical manuscripts?"

Ehrman's response:

"Essential Christian beliefs are not affected by textual variants in the manuscript tradition of the New Testament."

Is What We Have Now What They Wrote Then?

In all particulars?
Probably not.
But in all essentials?
Absolutely.

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Daniel Wallace: Review of Bart D. Ehrman, Misquoting Jesus: The Story Behind Who Changed the Bible and Why (2005)
http://www.dts.edu/download/academic/new/%5BDTS%5D%20Misquoting%20Jesus%20Book%20Review.pdf [PDF]

How Badly Has the Bible Been Corrupted? - Daniel Wallace
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Os31IEVTDJo [Video]

Daniel Wallace: Did the Ancient Church Muzzle the Canon?
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=wcWbV3QUfIg [Video]

Spark Learning Seminar | Dr. Daniel B. Wallace (2014)
The New Testament: Is What We Have Now What They Wrote Then?
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=miS4jBln4JU [Video]

See*: Bible Versions and History

See also:* The Accurracy of the NT Bible

NT Authority and Authenticity

Dealing with Contradictions / Difficulties in the Bible (links)

See also my other separate references resource*:

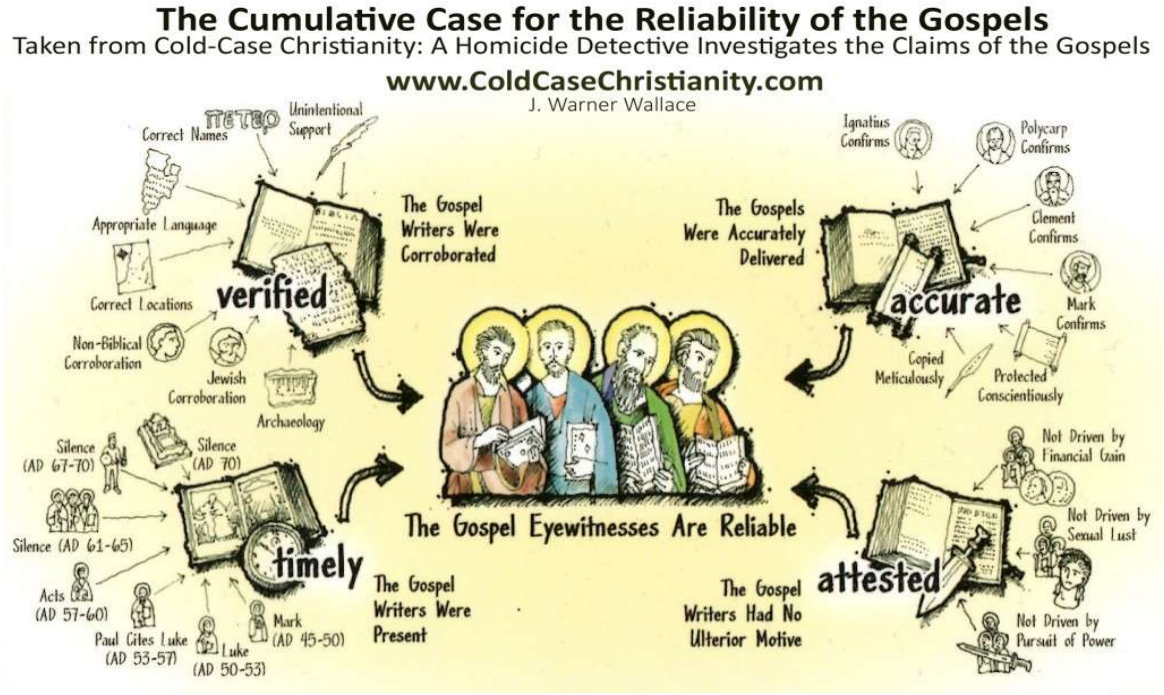
The Complete Sayings of Jesus – NKJV with Appendix



(Note: NKJV is primary text to make reading easier, except when it varies significantly from the original KJV or a different translation text is clearer and/or more accurate.)

Christian Scholarship: Biblical – Theological – Philosophical

Reliability of Bible continues…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Is the Bible True? The Cumulative Case for the Reliability of the Gospels - Christian cold-case: a homicide detective looks at the claims of the Gospels.

[Source: http://coldcasechristianity.com/2014/is-the-bible-true-the-cumulative-case-for-the-reliability-of-the-gospels-free-bible-insert/]

NOTE: This makes effective use of abductive reasoning; for details, see the "Logic: Deductive, Inductive and Abductive Reasoning" section in my separate resource: Christian Scholarship – Biblical, Theological and Philosophical

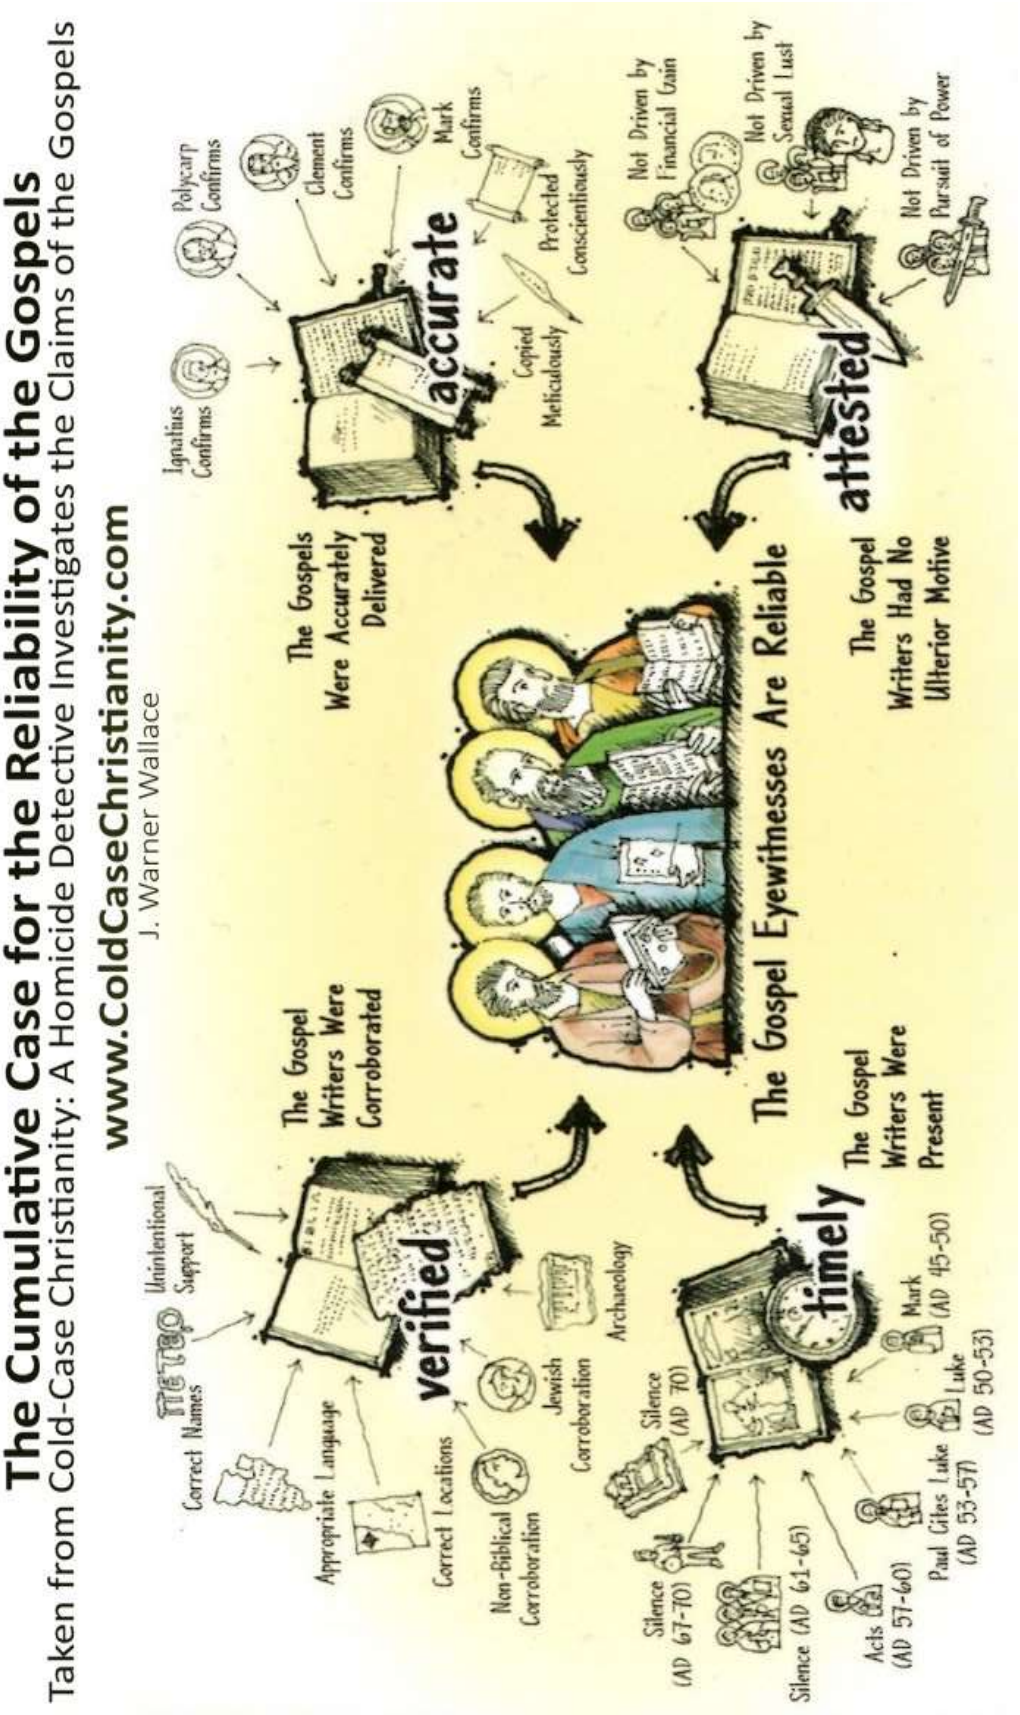
.



Why Does Every Christian Need Abductive Reasoning? (Cold-Case Christianity)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=IsnRLOExbe0 [Video]

If "Faith" Involves Making An Inference From Evidence, Why Do We Call It "Faith"?
http://coldcasechristianity.com/2014/biblical-faith-trusting-what-cant-be-seen-on-the-basis-of-what-can/(Biblical faith: "Trusting what can't be seen on the basis of what can.")

More Cold-Case Christianity videos on challenging topics:
http://coldcasechristianity.com/category/videos/

See enlarged view on next page…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The New Testament Chain of Custody

From J. Warner Wallace's book, Cold-Case Christianity: A Homicide Detective Investigates the Claims of the Gospels

The Importance of the New Testament Chain of Custody (Video)
http://coldcasechristianity.com/2015/the-importance-of-the-new-testament-chain-of-custody/

Testing the Gospels From John to Hippolytus
http://coldcasechristianity.com/2013/testing-the-gospels-from-john-to-hippolytus/

Did the New Testament Change Over Time?
https://www.appreasons.org/new-testament-change-over-time/

See also:

Paul's Letters and the New Testament

12 Points that Show Christianity is True and pages following it

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

America's Godly Heritage

http://www.beyondthefundamentals.com/download/america_s_godly_heritage.pdf

How to Waste Your Theological Studies

https://www.reformationbiblecollege.org/blog/how-to-waste-your-theological-studies/

Excerpt:

…for students pursuing theological studies, the great danger is to mistake busyness in one's studies for faithfulness.

Thankfully, Warfield offered his students, and he offers Bible college students today, three ways to avoid wasting their theological studies. In light of their vital importance to the spiritual lives of theological students, Warfield even calls them "duties." These are not arbitrary or whimsical tips, but careful reflections from a deeply devout Christian man who knew firsthand the temptations theological students face. After all, the previous forty years of his life had been spent first as a theological student and then as a teacher of theological students. Let's listen in on the wise words Warfield has for us.

Duty #1: "[F]ind daily nourishment for your religious life in your theological studies." Do not exclude your studies as sources of spiritual growth. The pursuit of Christian discipleship should not take a student away from his or her work, Warfield says, but send them to their work "with an added quality of devotion." Rather than allowing your work to occupy your mind only, "[p]ut your heart into your studies." All theological training should be approached as spiritual exercises that daily bring you into the presence of God. This means that memorizing Greek vocabulary or writing a research paper on early Christian heresies really can be done for God's glory and your good.

Duty #2: "[E]nter fully into the organic religious life of the community of which you form a part." Here Warfield is speaking of the community of faith you find in your fellow students, professors, and support staff. This is not an accidental fellowship. Each individual is a member at this time for purposes ordained by God. With this in mind, attend chapel services and take advantage of other opportunities for worship and fellowship as a college community.

Duty #3: [K]eep the fires of religious life burning brightly in your heart." This is the chief duty of anyone pursuing theological studies, the duty that undergirds the others. The fires are kept burning through the spiritual disciplines of reading and meditating on God's Word, prayer, and doing good to others. It's a real struggle even for diligent theological students to cultivate and maintain the kind of life that fulfills this duty. Warfield offers this advice: Be constantly reminding yourself of the huge privilege and responsibility it is to be a student of theology. "[I]f we face the tremendous difficulty of the work before us, it will certainly throw us back upon our knees; and if we worthily gauge the power of the gospel committed to us, that will certainly keep us on our knees."

These duties are helpfully cooperative: pursuing the first two encourages you to remember the third, which in turn refreshes your commitment to the others.

The Nashville Statement

https://cbmw.org/nashville-statement/

NOTE: I'm NOT promoting any of the above, just thought they might be of interest (pro or con).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Should Every Pastor Be an Apologist? Yes and No.

http://www.clayjones.net/2011/01/should-every-pastor-be-an-apologist-yes-and-no/

Excerpt (from comments):

[Dr.] Johnathan Pritchett says:

March 14, 2011 at 7:27 pm

I agree, and think that any church with an Education Pastor slot, and definately the youth pastor slot (look at the statistics of youth leaving church upon graduating HS) needs to have someone with an apologetics background fill that position. Too many churches have M.Div folks in almost all pastor positions these days, and as lauded as the M.Div programs are at just about every evangelical seminary out there, the quality of pastors and assistant pastors they have collectively produced across America is…well, just look at the current state of evangelicalism and make the connections.

I intentionally went for the apologetics program at Biola rather than an M.Div program anywhere so as to insure I don't become part of the problem, but part of the solution with evangelicalism these days.

As long as "jack-of-all-trades-master-of-none" M.Div degrees are held in such high esteem among evangelicals they NO LONGER deserve (maybe it was different thirty years ago), the same cookie-cutter people will be churned out of seminaries to lead our churches into the intellectual gutter.

This may sound anecdotal, but every person I have met that got a M.Div in the last ten years from anywhere can't really proclaim the Gospel, can't exegete and exposit texts, and can't answer tough questions. They just look for a post somewhere to give themselves the opportunity to spew out their versions of the five week sermon series on whatever latest "relevant" drivel that crosses their minds paired with three proof-texts or so.

There is a correlation between the anemic modern evangelical churches and the seminary programs that put out the leaders of them…armed with the M.Div as it is today.

First Evangelical Lutheran Church Debate Series

https://www.felchouston.org/debate-series.html (Past Debates available via audio/video)

Learn How to Do Apologetics in the Twenty-First Century with Ravi Zacharias

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=W2zrHxbucOM

Nabeel Qureshi answers a Muslim's Questions on the Trinity https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=d6q_c_CQPnM [Video] (Worthwhile listening to even if you are a Christian)

Nabeel Qureshi // Why I stopped believing Islam is a religion of peace

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=2htOWOF4gqs [Video]

See also: Political Islam and Statistical Islam

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Consistency

Consistency is the last refuge of the unimaginative.

http://www.quotationspage.com/quote/23578.html

> Oscar Wilde
> Irish dramatist, novelist, & poet (1854 - 1900)
> From: "The Relation of Dress to Art" in Pall Mall Gazette (2/28/1885); reprinted in Aristotle at Afternoon Tea:The Rare Oscar Wilde (1991).

https://en.wikiquote.org/wiki/Consistency

https://www.sermoncentral.com/illustrations/sermon-illustration-sermoncentral-staff-quotes-findingfulfillment-23235

https://www.openbible.info/topics/consistency

https://bible.org/seriespage/9-necessity-consistent-christian-life

https://www.biblegateway.com/resources/dictionary-of-bible-themes/1340-consistency http://coldcasechristianity.com/2013/scientific-consistency-in-the-bible-is-more-important-than-scientific-revelation/http://www.wikihow.com/Be-Consistent http://matthewball.us/2015/11/04/bible-study-how-to-develop-consistency/

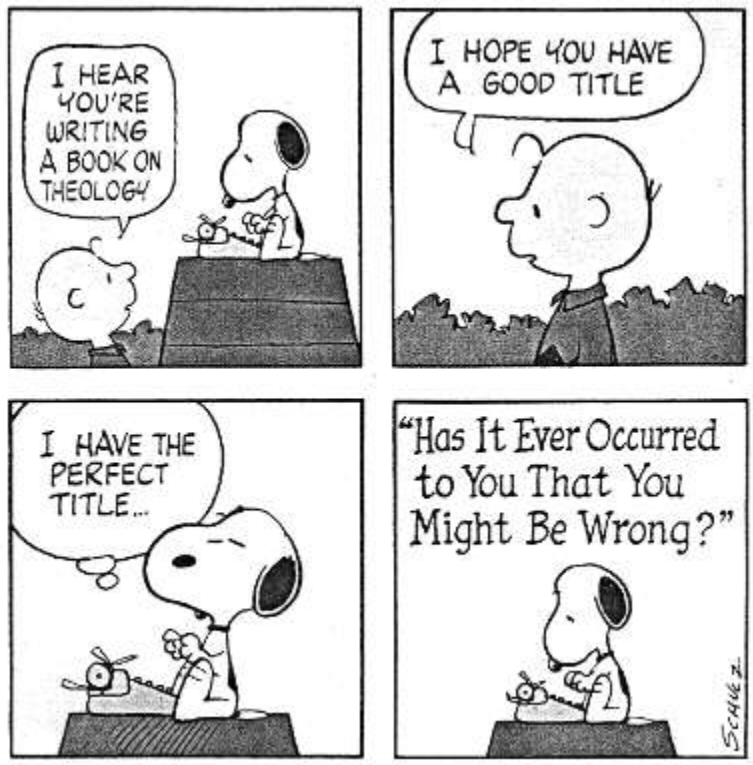
http://www.ccesonline.com/godsconsistency.htm

https://utmost.org/the-secret-of-spiritual-consistency/



https://www.quora.com/Is-obedience-the-only-consistent-moral-principle-in-the-bible

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Resources for the Sceptic
https://docs.google.com/document/d/1U2ckOQmtYe1jM2hz8glymF49gf1Ft5-9QxRrT4wlYiI/edit

Ex-Atheist Testimonies: From Atheist to Christian Series
https://www.youtube.com/playlist?list=PL-0zpu2toenabuNUBeBxQmmjr8JGuXVEs [Videos]

FYI: Series: Examining Jesus By the Historical Method
https://bellatorchristi.com/series-examining-jesus-by-the-historical-method/

See also my other separate resources*:

Christian Scholarship: Biblical – Theological – Philosophical

The Complete Sayings of Jesus – NKJV (with Appendix)

(Note: NKJV is primary text to make reading easier, except when it varies significantly from the original KJV or a different translation text is clearer and/or deemed more accurate.)

Heaven (based in part on the book, Heaven, by Randy Alcorn)

Mere Christianity – C.S. Lewis

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Athiest Perspectives

Ayn Rand " One Can Not Be Called Upon To Prove A Negative¨
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=pFYAITWOCuA

James Randi Lecture @ Caltech - Can't Prove a Negative https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=qWJTUAezxAI [Video]

The stupidity of "you can't prove a negative" https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=v2e3xngDHe4 [Video]

Is the popular "you can't prove it doesn't exist" a good argument?
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=IpRh2grvDBc [Video]

You can't prove a negative [Recommended]
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=UMHhJfImQB0 [Video]

Can you disprove a Universal Negative? [Recommended]
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=52XsW6jD4eg [Video]
By Dr. William Lane Craig of Reasonable Faith ministries

Sufficient Evidence - Ravi Zacharias Q & A https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=4EeOvWdHGaM [Audio]

Why I'm not an atheist - Ravi Zacharias https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=uGSH979kbPQ [Audio]

Originally uploaded by http://www.youtube.com/apologetics101

Ravi at Princeton University - Why I'm Not an Atheist https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=d6aDoOzYN-U [Video]

Learning to Think Critically (article from RZIM Magazine, Just Thinking)
http://www.rzim.org/wp-content/uploads/2012/12/JUST-THINKING-V21.1-web.pdf [PDF]

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

See also my other separate reference resources*:

Christian Scholarship: Biblical – Theological – Philosophical

The Complete Sayings of Jesus – NKJV with Appendix

Mere Christianity – C.S. Lewis(Note: NKJV is primary text to make reading easier, except when it varies significantly from the original KJV or a different translation text is clearer and/or deemed more accurate.)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Source: https://www.facebook.com/Christianapologetics101/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Christian Humor (and why not?!!! :-)

See also: Christian Humor - Images

Christian Jokes

http://jokes.christiansunite.com/

http://www.jokesclean.com/ChristianJokes/

http://www.beliefnet.com/ilovejesus/features/hilarious-christian-jokes.aspx

http://equerry.com/html/fun/eq_humor-hrel.htm

http://swapmeetdave.com/Humor/Religious.htm

http://www.guy-sports.com/virtual/christian_jokes.htm

Dr. Ravi Zacharias: 18 funny stories

Part 1: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=9634St2i_6Q [Video]

Part 2: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=2lkfOXIOYjs [Video]

Funny Pictures:

Funny Pictures: http://christianfunnypictures.com/
https://www.facebook.com/Christianfunnypictures

http://www.21st-century-christianity.com/Funny-Christian-Stories-1.html

http://www.beliefnet.com/FollowingJesus/Features/Worlds-Best-Church-Signs.aspx

http://www.rd.com/funny-stuff/funny-church-signs/

Christian Cartoons:

https://duckduckgo.com/?q=christian+Humor&t=palemoon&iar=images&iax=images&ia=images

Christian Cartoons and Images

https://www.pinterest.com/explore/clean-christian-humor/?lp=true

More Humor:

http://www.hopecrc.ca/humor.htm

https://www.pinterest.com/explore/church-signs/

http://www.ecclesia.org/truth/humor.html

What to do if you encounter an Anaconda

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

How about a little laughter from some popular comedians ...

Okay, not that genre of comedy, while I admit they are funny.

I want to focus on...

Christian Comedians

(Yes, Christians CAN laugh and tell jokes!)

These are as good as any comedians out there, including secular...

Here's one person's list of the "Top 10 Christian Comedians" (I agree that they should be in any "top" list, but I've also added [below] additional Christian comedians for your consideration and enjoyment):
http://www.jesuscoffeebreak.com/10-funniest-christian-stand-up-comedians-hilarious-clean-comedy/

Links to video clips on Youtube (many have their full live or DVD performances available there as well) and official websites:

Tim Hawkins: https://www.youtube.com/results?search_query=Tim+Hawkins Stand-up Comic, Musician, Hilarious Song Paradies and original tunes [Saw him live last year -- if you get a chance to see him in concert, don't miss it!]
One of the funniest and most talented comedian and comedy musician out there.
Old Rock Songs: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=HxKeCmTCDV4
Things You Don't Say to Your Wife (song): https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=iK2OakMoW_c (song)
Tech Support: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=AW1Hj4eSlIA (song)
Church: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=47hK3C7XQW8

http://timhawkins.net/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Mark Lowry: https://www.youtube.com/results?search_query=Mark+Lowry
Have you ever heard the comedy of Mark Lowry? (he has been a singer with the Bill Gaither Vocal Band and Homecoming projects):
Here's examples with Gaither: "Turn Your Radio On" (and listen to the basses): https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=YyU1ISgMcfs
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=26ZpdMFx380
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=k62YPGSfm-Y

(check out some of his solo standup video clips while you're at it) https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=pPYX8SQAIcY ("The Greatest Story Ever Told") https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=1viWme2iPYA (at CitiChurch of Dallas)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=46fk02enulQ&list=PLJpIQwO6qCHQmL44YwNVH9VvpLpLwv6Q0 (talks about his motorcycle helmet)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=FXgXTyfp7g0 (at a benefit concert) - Hilarious talk about his accident and interruptions https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=pW6EeuKLHkY (Recovering Fundamentalist) https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=V8P0zWRBXis (Remotely Controlled)

http://marklowry.com/

Chondra Pierce: https://www.youtube.com/results?search_query=chonda+pierce https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=AWkpjGMZFjc (Honeymoon Package) https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=wjcfdnqSvT0 (Piano Lessons) https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=hmSg1wY0gso (Three Little Pigs) https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=vlGt_rk9Uho (Weird Things Happen to Me)

http://chonda.org/

Brad Stine: https://www.youtube.com/results?search_query=Brad+Stine (Listen at your own risk! :-) http://www.bradstine.com/

Ken Davis: https://www.youtube.com/results?search_query=ken+davis+comedian https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=oKZG7PEhlv0 (Seriously Funny)

http://www.bradstine.com/

Jeff Allen: https://www.youtube.com/results?search_query=Jeff+Allen https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=RU8VvrCDwXk (Live)

http://www.jeffallencomedy.com/

Taylor Mason: https://www.youtube.com/results?search_query=taylor+mason https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=8C_KZ-uHihQ (Live)

http://www.taylormason.com/

Aaeon Wilburn: https://www.youtube.com/results?search_query=Aaeon+Wilburn https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=x4SUOVc9PxA

http://www.aaronwilburn.com/

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Ron Pearson: https://www.youtube.com/results?search_query=ron+pearson

https://www.facebook.com/ComedianRonPearson

Anthony Griffith: https://www.youtube.com/results?search_query=anthony+Griffith

http://www.anthonygriffith.com/

Rich Praytor: https://www.youtube.com/results?search_query=rich+praytor

http://www.christiancomedian.net/

Matt Jernigan: https://www.youtube.com/results?search_query=matt+jernigan https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=FJnS_OK3vLE

http://www.mattjernigan.com/

Michael Jr: https://www.youtube.com/results?search_query=michael+jr

http://michaeljr.com/

Tim Lovelace: https://www.youtube.com/results?search_query=Tim+Lovelace

http://timlovelace.com/

Smorgasbord of Christain Comedy Clips:

Christian Comedy Clips: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=UP50ISr7KXc

Apostles of Comedy: https://www.youtube.com/results?search_query=apostles+of+comedy

Here's a funny, cute one; -- whether you like Gospel Quartets or not:
Funny Gospel Quartet: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=GGUzkUMXNCc

Clean Comedians (booking):
http://cleancomedians.com

Enjoy!!!!!!!

Since we are on a lighter note… how about some more notes…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Christian Music Memory Lane:

The "Pat Terry Group" (PTG) Christian band grew out of Dan DeHaan's Metro Bible Studies in Atlanta. (Dan Dehaan was a popular Bible teacher in Atlanta, Georgia in the 70's and 80's before his tragic death in a plane crash he was piloting in 1982). PTG lead the music for those DeHaan's meetings.

http://u-builder.blogspot.com/2009/02/dan-dehaan-on-wwwyoutubecom-please.html

Example of the PTG and one of their popular songs, "That's The Way" (often sung at weddings, including mine!): https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Rdb633XmfcA&list=PLGftSzfMFPq5nVg12VUp7zFR97HKKx9f4&index=2

Other artists covered it, for example, Alan Jackson: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=tZnoOTf102E

A couple of other songs from that era for which he is known:

"Home Where I Belong": https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=rPXJXJy9yCc (1976)
Covered by B.J. Thomas: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=U4JihCEObko

"I Can't Wait to See Jesus": https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=58GT35hZhjA (1975)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Pat Terry disbanded the PTG in 1980 and went solo for a while. He is now a successful fulltime Nashville country songwriter...

Here's a more recent country song that he wrote and was recorded by the Oak Ridge Boys (2007): "Some Place Green":
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=3n7XkhTRLgg&list=PL9D059210C43EFD65

Pat Terry's current online website http://www.patterryonline.com/

BTW, speaking of the 70's/80's...

another wonderful Christian troubadour and zealous musical evangelist was Keith Green, who, like Dan DeHaan was also killed in a plane crash he was piloting in 1982 (he was 28).

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Keith_Green

He was well known for his live concerts with just him and a piano!

Here is a link to a live concert (Estes Park, '78):
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=NRzctDRzAiA
(has Spanish subtitles)

If I had to pick one song he sang that would be my favorite, it would have to be:
"Rushing Wind" (here's the live version, audio):
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Sk7w4y_9B2k
(it was written by Keith and his wife, Melody)

Here is the link to a YouTube audio file of all his music (live and studio):
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=1JsAjkYWdQQ

FYI (some interesting trivia -- exp. knowing that Keith would eventually end up finding and singing about Jesus): Here's Keith on "What's My Line?" with Steve Allen at age 11:
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=uJ6Vi2PUx08 and here's his life story:

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=fXOhSScVMUs

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

"So You Want to Go Back to Egypt" (live):
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=foUH4No_SVU

Web site: Last Days Ministries, maintained by his wife, Melody, who composed many of the popular songs Keith sang

Magazine article: KEITH GREEN Led the Contemporary Christian Music Surge in the 1970s (1980)

Keeping on this same "track"...

2nd Chapter of Acts

"The 2nd Chapter of Acts was a Jesus music and early contemporary Christian music group composed of sisters Annie Herring and Nelly Greisen and brother Matthew Ward. They began performing in 1973 and enjoyed their period of greatest success during the 1970s." (wikipedia)

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/2nd_Chapter_of_Acts

Mansion Builder:
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=W9-YPfqE898 (Live):
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=EmxcotW-O0w

Easter Song:
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=2ac11sZYJ4A
(written by Annie Herring, a member of the group)
(Live): https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=5gggPpVtEKQ (Here's Keith Green with his popular versions:
Studio: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=7OEqavkJGCE
Live: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Z3kc1jDahU4

"Which Way the Wind Blows" (featuring Phil Keaggy and a band called David):
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=RnxQzEl1oKA

"Consider the Lilies" (Live): https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=0RsVAUjoJX0

Web site: http://www.2ndchapterofacts.com/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

James Ward

Not as well known, but an excellent pianist, singer and songwriter. His style is contemporay, but with a heavy gospel influence.

He was an incredible solo performer, mainly known by most college students in the early 70's via the Inter-Varsity concerts that he gave.

If I had to pick out one music album that had the most impact on me, this would easily be one in the top running, if not the top...

James Ward / Himself (full album):

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=xdOzl1unNbA [recorded from vinyl -- even includes pops, cracks and a few skips (I'm looking for a better audio quality version)] (Supposedly, in 1974, he sat down at a piano, in one session, and recorded all the songs, which he wrote, on this album. I had this album and the corresponding album songbook that was published.) It's difficult for me to pick favorites, but if I have to choose, they would be the more uptempo Morning Sun, Consider the Lilies and the black gospel saturated, He Shall Be Satisfied and Speak to Me.

"(Holy Spirit,) Speak to Me" was covered (in 1975) by the long-popular, award-winning southern gospel group, The Imperials:
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=TvLKfa_7D64

> (FYI: it was a track on their "No Shortage" album; here's the title track: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=IlllQnFgorw; > and another track written by Phil Johnson/Bob Benson: “Give them all to Jesus”: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=RHs6HjWhuPM (BTW, if you're not familiar with the Imperials, prior to their 1975 lineup, they were the backup gospel group (started in 1964) who recorded (succeeding the Jordanaires) and toured with Elvis, including his Las Vegas shows (1966-1972). The lineup changed again in 1976, including the addition of Russ Taff, which produced top charting gospel songs, such as,
>

> "One More Song For You": https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=CqUIJ2UDsWY,
>
> "Eagle Song": https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=2NRJHXNHre4,
>
> "Trumpet of Jesus: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=aLSIYtFZtxU,

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

"Living Without Your Love": https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=HdnLOmaAz18&list=RDaLSIYtFZtxU&index=15, and "Praise the Lord": https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=OfTQg9whI-s)

For a studio recording performed by James Ward with accompaniment, here's "Faith Takes a Vision": https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=P-T2--RqHJw

"Rock of Ages" (James and piano only): https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=6frfpfXy3eY

Here is a recent video of him performing "Rock of Ages": https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=UznDZGOLTM8

"Keep Looking Up": https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=mRqdz7tIybc

"Father I Stretch My Hands" (James Ward and the New City Fellowship choir with David MacReynolds): https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=aLChGDz1i6A (amateur video)

"Death is Ended" catches James Ward in his element with an African-American choir director and band: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=LiZoY3RfLE8 (this is a dizzy inducing amateur video - just close your eyes :-) here is a more professionally recorded version:

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=fBHTpy0yToY (recorded live for a CD)

Here is example of praise and choir songs he has done:
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=E16zcL6qM5M (amateur audio with pics)

Missing around on the piano: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=2bVhfZw39eQ

Here's his current web site:
http://www.jameswardmusic.com/

Facebook: https://www.facebook.com/James-Ward-75310042432/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

And now, going mellower:

Honeytree

Nancy Honeytree, is considered on of the music pioneers of the Jesus Movement.

She had success in the US (and later, during the 90's, in Latin countries, singing in Spanish). Her songs dealt with personal relationships: Jesus, friends and family; also about loss, memories, and the solitary life. (Note: Born in 1952, Honeytree was single during the heighth of her popularity in the 70's and 80's, not marrying until 1990. She maintains a ministry to single adults that started in the 80's.) She toured with other popular artists of the 70's, such as Phil Keaggy and Mike Johnson.

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Nancy_Honeytree

Here is the album considered one of her best:
Evergreen (album): https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=v1qP66O3aL0

[may favorite song in the album: "(Lovely Jesus) Here I am" (2nd Track) - probably because I wrote a few songs with similar chord progressions]

More current version of one of her songs...

"Pioneer": https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=xMH6z63eYhQ

Original Version: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=M9VP32wdneU

Web Site: https://honeytree.org/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

If you're into 'smooth' big band style singers and the music of Ralph Carmichael, check out Dave Boyer

e.g., https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=SNtZ-X0eodk, and https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=8mHgQu_oo0M, https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=-MRVfLqSpXA, https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Izs70EcRLak, https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=SPE9hxRRi6A,

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=0QC48mNe80E

If you're into brass… check out trumpeter and bluesy singer…

Phil Driscoll

e.g., https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=13GEdVKK2jo; alt. version, and https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=9NdK5WMFY-o

Website: https://www.phildriscoll.com/

Hope you didn't mind my little side journey down music memory lane and enjoy the music!

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

N.T. Wright Quotes

https://www.goodreads.com/author/quotes/38932.N_T_Wright

http://quotesgram.com/n-t-wright-quotes/

http://quoteaddicts.com/author/n-t-wright

http://www.picturequotes.com/n-t-wright-quotes

https://quotefancy.com/n-t-wright-quotes (wallpapers)

Quote by N.T. Wright on the Bodily Resurrection of Jesus:

"You see, the bodily resurrection of Jesus isn't a take-it-or-leave-it thing, as though some Christians are welcome to believe it and others are welcome not to believe it. Take it away, and the whole picture is totally different. Take it away, and Karl Marx was probably right to accuse Christianity of ignoring the problems of the material world. Take it away, and Sigmund Freud was probably right to say that Christianity is a wish-fulfillment religion. Take it away, and Friedrich Nietzsche was probably right to say that Christianity was a religion for wimps. Put it back, and you have a faith that can take on the postmodern world that looks to Marx, Freud and Nietzsche as its prophets, and you can beat them at their own game with the Easter news that the foolishness of God is wiser than men, and the weakness of God is stronger than men." — N.T. Wright, For All God's Worth: True Worship and the Calling of the Church

Note: For details on Freud, Nietzsche, Marx and philosophies critical to Christianity, see my separate resource: Christian Scholarship: Biblical – Theological – Philosophical

N.T. Wright on Paul – A few Memorable Quotes

https://timstafford.wordpress.com/2013/12/03/n-t-wright-on-paul/

Reading N.T. Wright's scholarly work is like drinking from the proverbial fire hose. As far as I am concerned, it is a fire hose spouting good wine. I am a few hundred pages into his massive two-volume Paul and the Faithfulness of God, a book he has been pointing toward for decades. It's a pleasure.

I won't try to describe his argument, but I thought I would pass on a few memorable quotes.

re: Onesimus and Philemon and Slavery

. 12 "For Paul, much as he valued freedom, the mutual reconciliation of those who belonged to the Messiah mattered more than anything else. For Philemon to have responded angrily to Paul's letter by giving Onesimus his freedom but declaring that he never wanted to set eyes on him again would have meant defeat for Paul. Reconciliation was what mattered. That is why Paul wrote this letter [Philemon]."

p. 20. "Paul is not only urging and requesting but actually embodying what he elsewhere calls 'the ministry of reconciliation.' God was in the Messiah, reconciling the world to himself, he says in 2 Corinthians 5:19; now, we dare to say, God was in Paul reconciling Onesimus and Philemon."

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

p. 32 “Slavery was, for both Philemon and Paul, simply part of the worldview. It was how things got done. It was the electricity of the ancient world; try imagining your home or your town without the ability to plug things in and switch them on, and you will realize how unthinkable it was to them that there should be no slaves.”

re: Faith vs Theology/Doctrine

p. 42 “The distinction between ‘faith’ in the Reformers’ sense and ‘theology’ or ‘doctrine’ has by no means always been clear, producing as we saw the problem whereby ‘justification by faith’ has come to mean ‘justification by believing in the proper doctrine of justification,’ a position which, in attempting to swallow its own tail, produces a certain type of theological and perhaps cultural indigestion.”

re: History

p. 50 “The reason history is fascinating is because people in other times and places are so like us. The reason history is difficult is because people in other times and places are so different from us. History is, to that extent, like marriage….”

re: The Temple

pp. 96-7 “The Temple, and before it the wilderness tabernacle, were thus heirs, within the biblical narrative, to moments like Jacob’s vision, the discovery that a particular spot on earth could intersect with, and be the gateway into, heaven itself…. The Temple was not simply a convenient place to meet for worship. It was not even just the ‘single sanctuary,’ the one and only place where sacrifice was to be offered in worship to the one God. It was the place above all where the twin halves of the good creation intersected. When you went up to the Temple, it was not as though you were ‘in heaven.’ You were actually there. That was the point. Israel’s God did not have to leave heaven in order to come down and dwell in the wilderness tabernacle or the Jerusalem Temple. However surprising it may be for modern westerners to hear it, within the worldview formed by the ancient scriptures heaven and earth were always made to work together, to interlock and overlap. There might in principle be many places and ways in which this could happen, but the Jewish people had believed, throughout the millennium prior to Jesus, that the Jerusalem Temple was the place and the means par excellence for this strange and powerful mystery.”

re: Politics

p. 181 “Like Marx, ancient Jews seem to have thought that the point was not to explain the world but to change it.”

p. 203 “In the western world for the last two hundred years the categories of ‘politics’ and ‘religion’ have been carefully separated, each being defined negatively in relation to the other. ‘Politics,’ for the modern west, is about the running of countries and cities as though there were no god; ‘religion’ is about engaging in present piety and seeking future salvation as though there were no polis, no civic reality.”

Quote by N.T. Wright:

“At the heart of Galatians 2 is not an abstract individualized salvation, but a common meal. Paul does not want the Galatians to wait until they have agreed on all doctrinal arguments before they can sit down and eat together. Not to eat together is already to get the answer wrong. The whole point of his argument is that all those who belong to Christ belong at the same table with one another.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The relevance of this today should be obvious. The differences between us, as twentieth-century Christians, all too often reflect cultural, philosophical and tribal divides, rather than anything that should keep us apart from full and glad Eucharistic fellowship. I believe the church should recognize, as a matter of biblical and Christian obedience, that it is time to put the horse back before the cart, and that we are far, far more likely to reach doctrinal agreement between our different churches if we do so within the context of that common meal which belongs equally to us all because it is the meal of the Lord whom we all worship. Intercommunion, in other words, is not something we should regard as the prize to be gained at the end of the ecumenical road; it is the very paving of the road itself. If we wonder why we haven't been travelling very fast down the road of late, maybe it's because, without the proper paving, we've got stuck in the mud." — N.T. Wright, For All God's Worth: True Worship and the Calling of the Church

N.T. Wright and the "New Perspective on Paul"

http://markdroberts.com/?p=299

Excerpt:

Regarding John Piper and his book against N.T. Wright…

Here is my fear, however. John Piper is very influential, especially among the kinds of people who would be troubled by Wright's take on Paul. I'm afraid that many will buy and read Piper's book before and even without ever reading Wright himself. Then they'll quote or paraphrase Piper, without even going back to read Paul once again to see if Piper is actually right. This, I suggest, is neither Reformed, nor evangelical, nor even especially Christian. One who reads Piper should also read Wright himself, and, more importantly, should dive into a fresh examination of Scripture. Even if Wright is wrong, it's hard to believe that he doesn't have many valuable insights into the text, including many correctives for those of us who have always read Paul in a certain way…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

N.T.Wright: What Saint Paul Really Said Quotes (Quotes from the book by Wright)

https://www.goodreads.com/work/quotes/4029-what-saint-paul-really-said-was-paul-of-tarsus-the-real-founder-of-chri

QUOTES:

“There are five language-sets in particular which they employed for this purpose. Briefly, they are as follows: Wisdom, Torah, Spirit, Word and Shekinah”

“Saul of Tarsus, in other words, had found a new vocation. It would demand all the energy, all the zeal, that he had devoted to his former way of life. He was now to be a herald of the king.”

“Paul believed, in fact, that Jesus had gone through death and out the other side. Jesus had gone into a new mode of physicality, for which there was no precedent and of which there was, as yet, no other example.”

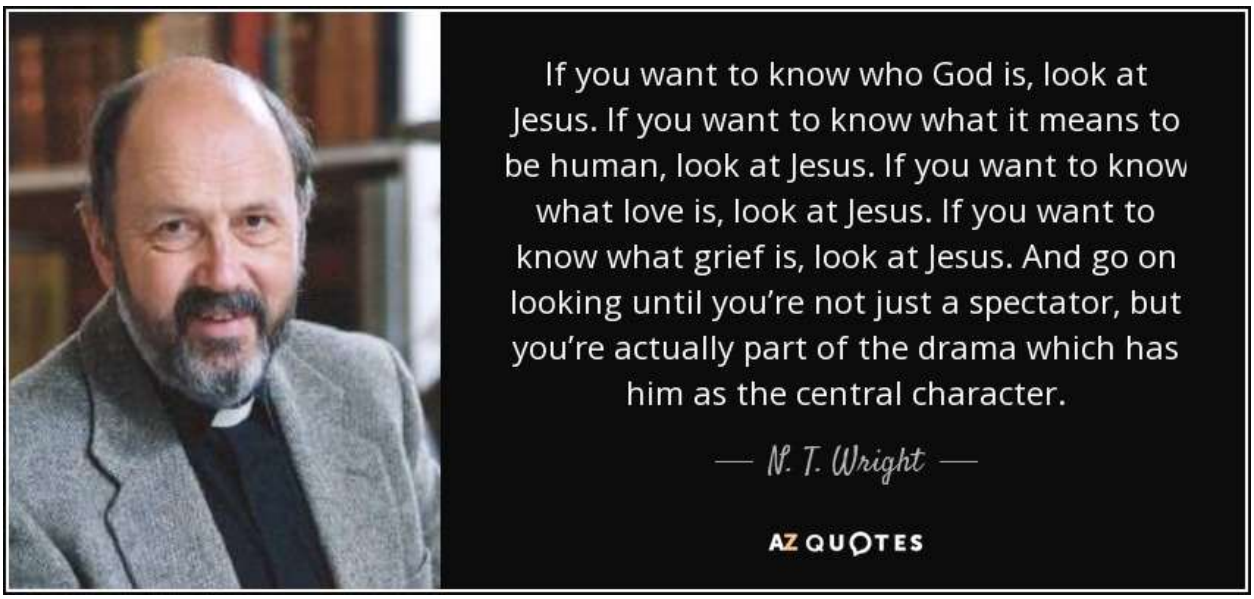
“Justification is not how someone becomes a Christian. It is the declaration that they have become a Christian. And the total context of this doctrine, here in Philippians 3, is that of the expectation - not of a final salvation in which the individual is abstracted from the present world, but of the final new heavens and new earth, as the Lord comes from the heavenly realm to transform the earthly”

“He is saying, as he says extensively in Romans 8, that the whole creation is longing for its exodus, and that when God is all in all even the division between heaven and earth, God's space and human space, will be done away with (as we see also in Revelation 21). Paul's message to the pagan world is the fulfilled-Israel message: the one creator God is, through the fulfilment of his covenant with Israel, reconciling the world to himself.”

“Once you understand how first-century Jewish covenant theology actually works, you will see that law-court language, `participation' language, and a great deal else besides, settle down and make their home with each other, dovetailed without confusion and distinguished without dislocation. But to take this further we must turn, at last, to Paul. What, precisely, does Paul mean by `justification', and how does it relate to what he meant by `the gospel'?”

“problematic within post-Reformation dogmatics. Is faith something I `do' to earn God's favour, and, if not, what role does it play? Once we release Paul's justification-language from the burden of having to describe `how someone becomes a Christian', however, this is simply no longer a problem. There is no danger of imagining that Christian faith is after all a surrogate `work', let alone a substitute form of moral righteousness. Faith is the badge of covenant membership, not something someone `performs' as a kind of initiation test.”

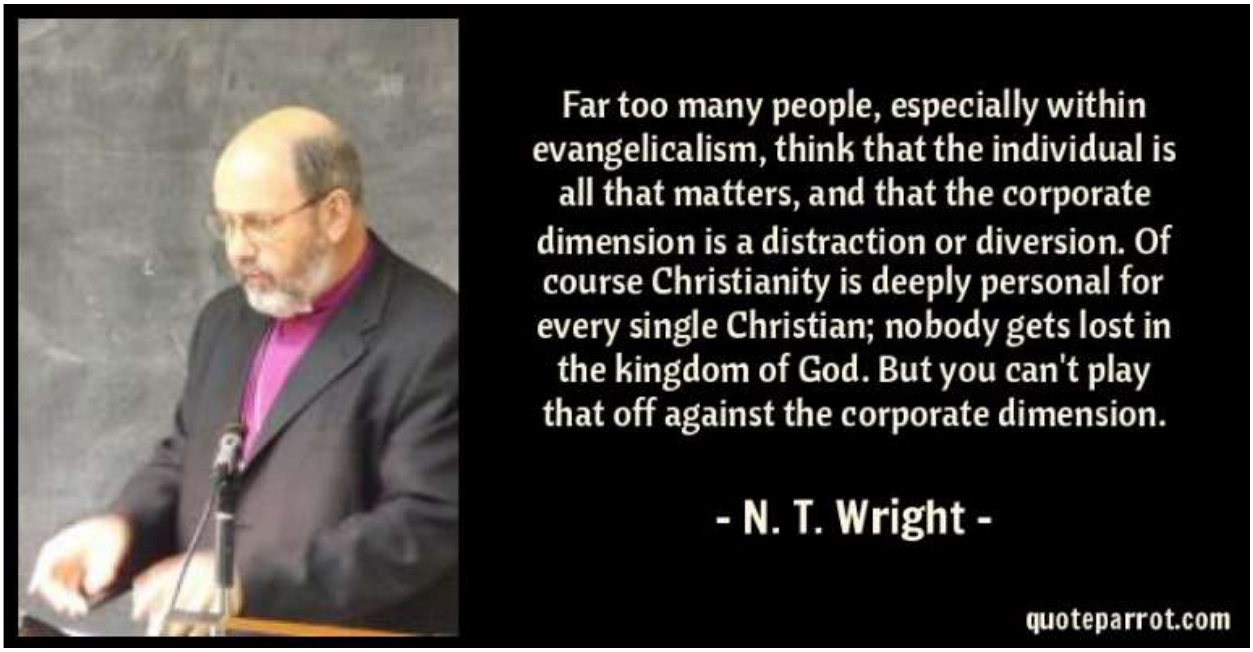
“This does not, therefore, mean `the gospel reveals justification by faith as the true scheme of salvation, as opposed to Jewish self-help moralism'. When we unpack it fully, in the light of subsequent passages in the letter, it means:



> The gospel - the announcement of the lordship of Jesus the Messiah - reveals God's righteousness, his covenant faithfulness, his dealing with the sin of the world through the fulfilment of his covenant in this Lord Jesus Christ. He has done all this righteously, that is, impartially. He has dealt with sin, and rescued the helpless. He has thereby fulfilled his promises.”

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

“The ‘God’ that the great majority believe in is, pretty certainly, the Deist god, which corresponds in Paul’s world to the Epicurean god or gods. These beings were distant, remote, and uncaring. They enjoyed a state of perfect bliss, no doubt; but they never got their hands dirty by caring for, or being active within, the world in which we humans live. It’s not surprising that people who believe in the existence of that sort of god don’t go to church except now and then.”



“Sanders argued, basically, that the normal Christian, and especially Protestant, readings of Paul were seriously flawed, because they attributed to first-century Judaism theological views which belonged rather to medieval Catholicism. Once we described Judaism accurately, Sanders argued, we were forced to rethink Paul's critique of it, and his whole positive theology in its turn.”

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

What is the Gospel?…

Everyone is saved who believes in Jesus Christ: that He…

	Died on a cross / for the Forgiveness of our Sins [as foretold by OT Prophets in Scripture],
	He was Buried / then was Raised up on the 3rd day (Resurrection) [as per OT Prophets].
	Witnesses after Jesus arose: Apostles ate and drank with Him; over 500 men/women saw.
	Why Preach? – commanded by Jesus; of first/highest importance; and to warn you that Jesus was appointed [Lord] by God to reign over everything and to judge the living and the dead

NOTE: The order of this information does NOT matter. NO gospel presentation is complete without emphasizing Jesus' resurrection and that Jesus was appointed ruler (Lord) and judge over all.

Exact wording is not required as long as the essence of the Gospel is clear and complete.

The above summary of the Gospel of Jesus Christ is based on Paul's and Peter's (via Luke's Book of Acts) explicit statements of the Gospel (see: 1 Cor. 15:1-11, 20-28; Acts 10:34-38, 39-45 re: Peter's presentation of the Gospel to the Gentile Roman Centurion Cornelius). Other similar statements of the Gospel are found in Rom. 1:1-5; Acts 17:16-34 (Paul's speech at Mars Hill, Athens) and to a lesser extent, 2 Tim. 2:8-10.

["Christ" = from Christos, the Greek word for the Hebrew "Messiah" = "Anointed One of God"; i.e., Jesus the Messiah]

Legend:

	Saved / Believes in Jesus:
	Died/Sins/Scriptures
	Buried/Resurrection
	Witnesses
	Why Preach
	Appointed by God / Lord

Submit your comments, suggestions, questions to: gospel@timoninc.com

For more details see*: The Gospel of Jesus the Messiah (Christ)

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

NOTE: For issues and details related to Heaven and life after death, as well as covering related topics and including different perspectives (including N.T. Wright) - see my separate "Reference Notes on Heaven" (based in part on the book, Heaven, by Randy Alcorn)

See also my other separate reference resources*:

Christian Scholarship: Biblical – Theological – Philosophical

The Complete Sayings of Jesus – NKJV with Appendix

> (Note: NKJV is primary text to make reading easier, except when it varies significantly from the original KJV or a different translation text is clearer and/or deemed more accurate.)

The Gospel, Salvation and Evangelism

Mere Christianity – C.S. Lewis

Index to Topics

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only