REFERENCE NOTES

Including the New Perspective on Paul and N.T. Wright

(Skip to TOC or Index)

Compilation and Notes on Paul and Romans

Copyright 2016 and 2024 by Lawrence Yerkes (LY)

Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

TOC | NOTES: Paul and Romans (and Galatians, plus Ephesians)

Preface/Disclaimer [Index]

N. T. Wright; The New Prospective on Paul (NPP); related / Covenantal Nomism

Perspectives on Paul : Two "Gestalts" of Romans (Charts)

N.T. Wright related: Interviews (chronological) / Personal/Bio-related Criticisms (re: Wright,NPP—starting with John Piper, then roughly chronological)

More N. T. Wright and related / Pistis_Christou / 4QMMT

Reformed Theology vs Lutheranism vs Calvinism vs Weslyanism / Antinomianism

Calvinism / New-Calvinism

Predestination, Election and Related Terms

Wright and Others on Predestination

and Atonement (incl. Christus Victus / Penal Substitution)

Eternal Security of the Believer – Once Saved, Always Saved

Monergism / Synergism

Heresies and Systems Compared, Gnosticism

The Use of Greek Philosophy by Paul in the Bible / Greek Philosophy

Galatians / Romans / Ephesians / Paul / Misc. / NTW Quotes / End

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Index to Topics

(In roughly alphabetical order)

A – B – C – D – E – F – G – H – I – J – K – L – M

N – O – P – Q – R – S – T – U – V – W – X – Y – Z

– A –

Abbreviations

ACURA (Wesley) (Chart)

Adoption

Alexandrian_Theology

Alexandrian_vs_Antiochene Theology

Amillennialism

Antinomianism

Antiochene Theology

Apocalyptic Paul

Apologetics: Reliability of the Bible, Accuracy of the NT Bible

12 Points Showing Christianity True,

Dealing with Contradiction and Difficulties in the Bible

Apostolic Fathers – Writings / History

Arianism (see also Heresies)

Arminianism (vs Calvinism)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Atonement (including Christus Victus / Penal Substitution)

Augustine (of Hippo)

– B –

Baptism (Water)

Barth, Karl

Bible: Reliability / Bible: NT Accuracy / Bible: Dating Books of NT

Bible Backgrounds (Culture / Customs, History)

Bible Resources: Online Interlinear Bible / Koine Greek

Bible: Contradictions / Difficulties (Dealing with)

Bible: NT Accuracy / Bible: Reliability / Bible: Dating Books of NT

Bible Project, The: Galatians, Romans, Ephesians

Body, Soul and/or Spirit? (Trichotomy/Tripartite, Dichotomy/Dipartite, Monism)

Bultmann, Rudolf

– C –

Calvinism / New Calvinism / Cage Stage Calvinism

Calvinism vs Arminianism

Calvinism vs. Arminianism vs. Open Theism vs. Molinism

Calvin vs Luther vs Reformed vs Lutheran

Christ (Messiah)

Christ or Messiah? Jesus or Yeshua?

Christian Praxis (including Living, Lifestyle, Application, Virtue, Morals, etc.)

Christianity in 2 Hours or Less

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Christus Victus (Victor) (see also Atonement)

Church Fathers (Early and Apostolic Church Fathers: Writings/History)

Church: High vs Low

Church History, Early (including Antiochene and Alexandrian Theology)

Church (Ekklesia): Local, Universal / Membership

Church and Israel

Chiasm / Chiastic Structure

Colossians vs Ephesians (text comparison)

Commandments: Ten Commandments / The Schema / Mitzvot / Greatest

Compatibilism

Confessional Baptist Covenant Theology (1689 Federalism)

Consistency

Continuity and Discontinuity

Contradictions / Difficulties in the Bible (Reliability of the Bible)

Covenantal Nomism ("Nomism" is from Greek for "Law") re: New Perspective

Covenant Theology / New Covenant Theology (What is Covenant Theology?)

Covenant Theology (Baptist)

Covenant Theology vs Dispensationalism

Creeds (of the Christian Church)

Criticisms (N.T. Wright and NPP)

Culture / Customs, History

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

– D –

Dating Books of the NT

Dead Sea Scrolls (at Qumram) (see: 4QMMT)

Deism

Demons (Robert Morris: Free Indeed Series)

Denominations / Branches of Christianity (Denomination Demographics)

Christianity in 2 Hours or Less

Denomination Theological Expressions Compared

Dispensational Theology (see also: Dispensation - Ephesians 1:10)

Dispensationalism vs Covenant Theology

Diversity in the New Testament ("Genealogical" Table – NT and Apostolic Fathers)

Divine Decree(s) of God, Doctrine of (also, Five [Elective] Degrees, Lapsarianism)

Docetism

Doubt

Doxology in the New Testament

Dualism

– E –

Early Church Fathers and History (Maps)

Ephesians (Paul's Letter to the Ephasians; Charts / other Resources)

Ephesians vs Colossians (text comparison)

Epicureanism (Comparison with Stoicism)

Epistles of the NT and Time Period – Forms, Styles, Structures

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Election, Chosen, Predestination and Related Terms

Eschatology (End Times Theology / Doctrine)

Eschatology / Eschatological Views (A-, Pre-, Post-, Millennialism, and related)

Eschatological (End Times) Millennial Comparison Charts (Tables)

Eschatological (End Times) Views, Comparison of Eschatological (End Times) Millennial Views (Graphs)

Essenes

Eternal Security of the Believer – Once Saved, Always Saved

Eucharist (Lord's Supper, Holy Communion)

Evil (Theodicy)

Existential Theology

– F –

Faith (Pistis and Fides; includes Roman Faith vs Christian Faith)

Faith vs Law (Law vs Faith)

Fasting

Federal Vision

Federalism / Federal Theology

Federalism (1689 Federalism; WCF Federalism) Confessional Baptist (Chart)

Fides (see Faith)

Forgiveness

Free Will (vs Sovereignty of God)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

– G –

Galatians (Paul's Letter to the Galatians; Charts / other Resources)

Gene Getz Life Application videos on Galatians

Gene Getz Life Application videos on Romans

Gestalt Definitions

Glossary - Romans

Gnosticism

Gospel of Jesus the Messiah (Christ) / What is the Gospel? (Various Presentations)

Greek Philosophy / Greek Philosophy use by Paul

Greek (Koine) Resources

– H –

Hell and Heaven in the Bible

Heresies and Systems Compared (Pelagianism, Manichaeism, Gnosticism, etc.)

Heresies That Were Popular and Still Effecting Church Today

High vs Low Church

History (Background History of Jews during NT times, Early Christians, Church)

Hypostatic Union

Humor – Christian (followed by a little "Christian Music Memory Lane") / Images

– I –

Imputed / Imputation (see Righteousness) (Glossary: Inputed Righteousness)

In Christ

Interviews (N.T. Wright related) / Personal/Bio related Interviews

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Israel and the Church

– J –

James

James vs Paul

Jesus – Christ / Messiah, Lord and Judge

Jesus – Virgin Birth (and Evidence for His Existence and Deity)

Jesus or Yeshua? Christ or Messiah?

Jesus Risen/Resurrected Mentioned by Apostles (List of NT Occurrences)

Jewish History

John Piper vs N.T. Wright

Judge, Jesus

Justification (also resources spread throughout this document)

Glossary: Justification Glossary (NDT): Justification

Paul Never Wrote About Justification (Clarification)

Justification: The Catholic-Protestant Argument over Justification

– K –

Karl Barth

Kerygma

King James Version of Bible and Related Controversies

Thou, Thee, Thy, Thine and Ye; and the Advantage of King James English

Bible Versions/History

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Kingdom of Heaven vs Kingdom of God (What is the Kingdom of God?)

Koine Greek Resources

– L –

Lapsarianism (Supra-… , Sub-… , Infra-… , etc.; Order of Decrees, Divine Decree)

Law vs Faith

Letter Writing During NT Times (including structure of all NT letters/epistles)

Life Application (See "Gene Getz")

LORD, Lord, lord – What is the Difference?

Low Church (High vs Low Church)

Luther, Martin (Luther's 95 Theses)

Lutheranism (and Reformed)

Luther vs Calvin vs Reformed vs Lutheran

– M –

Major Systems of Theology (e.g., Dispensational, Covenant, Christocentric, etc.)

Manachaeism (see also Heresies)

Maps of Bible (and Charts, Illustrations, Timelines)

Maps: Early Church History

Marcionism (see also Heresies)

Martin Luther

Messiah (Christ)

Messiah or Christ? Yeshua or Jesus?

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Millennial (Eschatological) Views (What Determines Your Millennial Position?)

Millennial (Eschatological) Comparison Charts (Tables)

Millennial (Eschatological) Views (Graphs)

Millennial (Eschatological) Comparison Views

Molinism (Middle Knowledge)

Monergism / Synergism

Monism

Materialism (Philosophical)

Mount Zion

Mystery

– N –

Neo-Orthodox Theology

New Prospective on Paul, and related [Intro] (see also Criticisms)

N.T. (Tom) Wright: Interviews / Bio / Criticisms / Quotes / Misc.
Hermeneutics / More

Nestorius (Nestorianism)

New Calvinism

New Covenant Theology

New Man and Old Man

New Man and the Flesh

New Testament (Books, Paul's Letters, Timelines)

Nicolaitans (see also Antinomianism)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

– O –

Old Man and New Man

Old Man and Flesh

Old Testament Sayings in Paul's Letter to the Romans (Chart)

Open Theism

Oder of Decrees (see Lapsarianism)

– P –

Paul

- Background, maps (including Paul's Travels and those of the Apostles)
- Profiles: New Bible Dictionary / New Dictionary of Theology (N.T. Wright)
- Paul's Conversion – Three Accounts in Acts (Contradictions?)
- Paul's Charge from Jesus (as told to Ananias)
- Paul's Understanding of Timing of Jesus' 2nd Coming
- Paul Receives Gospel Resurrection Creed within 5 Years of Crucifixion
- Sequence of Paul's Activities, Progress of Gospel in Acts (Maps)
- The Gospel that Paul Preached
- Gospel of Paul vs Peter (includes Charts)
  - Paul and the Gospel on Mars Hill
  - Jesus Risen/Resurrected Mentioned by Paul and Other Apostles (List of NT Occurrences)
- Gospel of Jesus vs Paul
- Paul: Was he a rabbi, married, a member of the Sanhedrin?

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Paul's_Worldview

Paul's Letters and the New Testament

Women Associated with Paul / Offerings Collected for Judea

Paul's Comfort and Conflict in Corinth

Paul's Prayers for the Churches (and for examples of how to pray)

Praying the Bible (i.e., using Paul's prayers as examples)

Paul's Use of Old Testament Sayings in Romans

Paul's Use of Proverbs Exhortations in the New Testament

Paul's Use of Greek Philosophy in the Bible / Greek Philosophy

Paul vs James (Clarification)

The Pauline Concept of Law and Sin (Clarification)

Paul Never Wrote About Justification (Clarification)

Prison during Paul's Time

Patria Potestas (also includes chart) (see also Adoption)

Penal Substitution (see also Atonement)

Pelagianism

Peter's Gospel That He Preached

Jesus Risen/Resurrected Mentioned by Peter and Other Apostles (List of NT Occurrences)

Philosophy: The Use of Greek Philosophy by Paul in the Bible / Greek Philosophy

Philemon (Paul's Letter to Philemon; N.T. Write Course)

Piper, John vs NT Wright

Pistis (see Faith)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Pistis Christou

Platonism

Politics and Christians

Postmillennial

Practical Christianity (Living, Lifestyle, Application, Virtue, Morals, etc.)

Prayer

Praying with Paul / Paul's Prayers (to the Church and more)

Praying the Bible / Paul's Four Life-Changing Prayers

Predestination, Election, Chosen, and Related Terms (Ephesians: Predestination)

Premillennial, Amillennial, Postmillennial (Charts and Why Important to Know)

Tribulation Beliefs

The Rapture, including N.T. Wright's View of the Rapture

Preterism (Preterist)

Prison (during Bible times and especially Paul's time)

Process Theology (Process Thought)

Progressive Dispensationalism

Propitiation (Glossary-Romans)

– Q –

Qumram (see: 4QMMT)

Quotes by N.T. Wright

– R –

Rapture and Pre-Millennialism (Introduction)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Rapture Theories (Pre-, Post-, Mid-, Tribulation; Pre-Wrath)

Rapture (N.T. Wright's and Others View of the Rapture)

Redemption

Reformed (including Lutheranism, Calvinism)

Reliability of the Bible (Accuracy of the NT Bible)

Remnant, Replacement and Separation Theology (Israel and the Church)

Repentance

Replacement Theology (Supersessionism)

Resurrection of Believers

Resurrection of Jesus the Messiah (Christ)

Righteousness (this topic & related resources are found throughout these Notes)

(see also: Romans Glossary) / Glossary: Righteousness / NDT/Wright

Romans (Paul's Letter to the Romans; Charts / other Resources) (OT Sayings)

Romans Sermon Series (Some of the Notes provided by Fellowship Greenville)

Roman Cult of Emporer Worship (and impacts on the Gospel)

Rome, Romans and the Roman Empire

– S –

Salvation (ABC's of) See also*: Gospel of Jesus the Messiah (Christ)

Sanctification (Glossary-Romans)

Scarlet Thread (Through the Bible)

Schweitzer, Albert

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Science, the Bible, and God

Security of the Believer

Stoicism (Comparison with Epicureanism)

Soul and/or Spirit & Body? (Trichotomy/Tripartite, Dichotomy/Dipartite, Monism)

Sovereignty of God (vs Free Will)

Stewardship

Supersessionism (Replacement Theology)

Synergism / Monergism

Systems of Theology (e.g., Dispensational, Covenant, Christocentric)

– T –

Table of Nations

Theism

Theodicy (re: Evil)

Theologians: Barth / Bultmann / Schweitzer

Theology, Major Systems of Theology (e.g., Dispensational, Covenant)

The Bible Project: Galatians, Romans, Ephesians

The Treasure Principle

Tillich, Paul

Tribulation Beliefs (Premillennial, Rapture)

Trinity (The Doctrine of the Trinity / Trinitarian Concept of God)

Non-Standard Doctrinal Perspectives on God, Jesus

TULIP (Calvinism) (and comparison with Wesley/Arminianism)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Trust (see Faith)

Twelve Points that Show Christianity is True

– U –

Unity of/in the Church

– V –

Virgin Birth of Jesus

– W –

Wesleyanism (What is Wesleyanism?)

Wheaton Theology Conference with N.T. Wright (2010)

Worldviews

Wounds of Jesus

Wright, N.T. (Tom): Interviews / Bio / Criticisms / Hermeneutics / More / Misc. / Quotes /

– Y –

Yeshua or Jesus? Christ of Messiah?

– Z –

Zion / Mount Zion

NOTE: to locate recommended resources, do a search for "[Recommended]"

(i.e., the text between the quotes and including the brackets "[ ]")

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Some Abbreviations You May Encounter:

4QMMT = Manuscript (MMT) fragments found in Cave 4, Qumram (see 4QMMT)

AP = Apocalyptic Paul (see Apocalyptic Paul)

AYB = After You Believe (by N.T. Wright)

BBC2 = IVP Bible Background Commentary 2nd Ed.

BBRC = Bible Reader's Companion

CEB = Common English Bible (see CommonEnglishBible.com)

ESV = English Standard Version of the Bible (see ESV.org)

ISBE = International Standard Bible Encyclopedia (Link1) (Link2) (Link3) (Link4)

JNTC = Jewish New Testament Commentary

JFB = Jamieson, Faucett, and Brown Commentary

KJV or KJB = King James Version of the Bible (see section on KJV and KJO issues)

KJO = King James Only adherent (believes the KJV is the only valid English version)

NIV = New International Version of the Bible (Wikipedia) (Criticism by N.T. Wright)

NPP or NP = New Perspective(s) on Paul

NET = NET Bible = New English Translation of the Bible (see NETBible.com)

NDT = New Dictionary of Theology

NLTse = New Living Translation, Second Edition (2015)

NT = New Testament

NTPG = The New Testament and the People of God (by N.T. Wright)

NTW = N.T.W. = N.T. (Tom) Wright

NTWEPH = NT Wright for Everyone Bible Study Guides – Ephesians (by N.T. Wright)

NTWGAL = NT Wright for Everyone Bible Study Guides – Galatians (by N.T. Wright)

OT = Old Testament

PFG = Paul and the Faithfulness of God (by N.T. Wright)

SAG = Scripture and the Authority of God (by N.T. Wright)

SH = Surprised by Hope (by N.T. Wright)

TBD = Tyndale Bible Dictionary

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

TPP = Traditional Perspective on Paul

TULIP = Five Points of Calvinism (see TULIP and comparisons to Wesley/Arminianism)

WEB = World English Bible (see WorldEnglishBible.org)

YLT = Young's Literal Translation Bible

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Preface/Disclaimer:

10/15/17

Added references for Galatians as there was too much overlap with Romans regarding the topics / subject matter – especially the New Perspective on Paul (NPP or NP) which is a major focal point – to create a separate document.

08/17/17

I am accumulating this information (excerpts, charts, graphics, links, etc.) as a resource for me to more easily access in the future (as a sort of bibliography with active links) and hopefully that it will be a help/time saver for others that want to explore and understand this topic on a deeper/personal level.

My attempt is to highlight what I feel is the most valuable/helpful to me in developing my understanding of a Biblical topic, but to also better understand and appreciate all views/concepts/interpretations that are currently available (even those that are opposing or contradictory).

I'm hoping others find this useful -- that these resources will provide a varied and wide enough (and essential) set of resources from which to develop a better/fuller understanding and enable them to reach their own conclusions in which they will be confident.

For Paul and the early Christians, the hope they had which allowed them to persevere, grow in numbers, etc. was the Good News of Jesus Christ and the Hope of the resurrection and being with Jesus and the new earth/heavens to come. Let our hope be infused with the same understanding and enthusiasm.

P.S. I'm not implying that this is an exhaustive survey nor all inclusive. In fact, if anyone has additional information and/or other perspectives they would like to share that will add to our understanding of our eternal life – I would love to include it here for all to benefit.

This discovery will also bring into consideration the New Perspective on Paul and theologians/scholars such as N.T Wright.

Ideally, we can flush out what we can generally agree is a reasonable and Biblically focused and Biblically sound understanding of Paul writings, especially his letter to the Romans.

NOTE: While I was compiling this list of resources on Paul and Romans, including related information, Charlie Boyd at Fellowship Greenville, SC began a series of sermons on Romans.
This is highly recommended as he always has fresh takes on topics:

You can view (video) / hear (audio) them (including accessing downloadable notes) from this page:
https://www.fellowshipgreenville.org/sermons

FYI: On Sunday mornings during their second worship session, they live stream the sermon (~11 am):
https://www.fellowshipgreenville.org/watch

I've incorporated some of the Notes from the Romans series starting here.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

N.T. (Tom) Wright Websites: NT Wright Online http://ntwrightonline.org/ NTWrightPage http://ntwrightpage.com/ Monergism: NT Wright references	Read the Spirit: NT Wright Resource Page http://www.readthespirit.com/nt-wright-bible-scholar-interviews-and-book-reviews-resource-page-for-bible-study/ The Work of the People: N.T. Wright (videos) http://www.theworkofthepeople.com/person/nt-wright Videos: NT Wright | Lectures | Sermons | Discussions | Interviews (188+ Videos) https://www.youtube.com/playlist?list=PLR2I5rwcF854ldr0ZjZAGnGNdOOURNhwy N.T. Wright podcasts… https://www.podcastchart.com/podcasts/the-n-t-wright-podcast

The Paul Page

http://www.thepaulpage.com/

an expanding website dedicated to exploring recent trends in Pauline studies like "the new perspective on Paul", "Summary of the New Perspective on Paul", and "Paul and Empire." (About)

What is this new perspective?

At its core is the recognition that Judaism is not a religion of self-righteousness whereby humankind seeks to merit salvation before God. Paul's argument with the Judaizers was not about Christian grace versus Jewish legalism. His argument was rather about the status of Gentiles in the church. Paul's doctrine of justification, therefore, had far more to do with Jewish-Gentile [unity] issues than with questions of the individual's status before God.

New Perspectives on Paul (address given by Wright in 2003)

http://ntwrightpage.com/2016/07/12/new-perspectives-on-paul/

See also: Some N.T. Wright Criticisms

Wikipedia: New Perspective on Paul

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/New_Perspective_on_Paul

Theopedia: New Perspective on Paul

http://www.theopedia.com/new-perspective-on-paul

Paul's New Perspective

http://andyunedited.ivpress.com/2017/05/pauls_new_perspective.php

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The New Perspective Explained [Recommended]

http://everything.explained.today/New_Perspective_on_Paul/

Excerpt:

The new perspective on Paul represents a significant shift in the way some scholars, especially Protestant scholars, interpret the writings of the Apostle Paul.

Paul, especially in his Epistle to the Romans, advocates justification through faith in Jesus Christ over justification through works of the Law. In the historic Lutheran and Reformed perspective, known as sola fide, theologians understood Paul as arguing that Christians' good works would not factor into their salvation - only their faith would count. But according to the "new" perspective, Paul was questioning only observances such as circumcision, dietary laws, and Sabbath laws (these were the 'boundary markers[1] that set the Jews apart from the other nations), not good works in general. This grew from the work of Ed Parish Sanders, Paul and Palestinian Judaism, published in 1977.[2] Sanders saw the Jews of Pauline times not as a "legalistic" community, nor as "works-salvation" oriented. For Sanders, the Jews felt they were saved as they were God's chosen people. By being God's chosen people they were under His covenant. The Jews kept the Law to remain under the covenant - the Law was not a way of entering the covenant but of staying in the covenant.

Development

Since the Protestant Reformation (c. 1517), studies of Paul's writings have been heavily influenced by Lutheran and Reformed views that are said to have been ascribed to the negative attributes that they associated with sixteenth-century Roman Catholicism to Second Temple Judaism. These Lutheran and Reformed views on Paul's Writings are called the "old" perspective by adherents of the "new" perspective on Paul. The "new" perspective is an attempt to lift Paul's letters out of the Lutheran-Reformed framework and interpret them based on what is said to be an understanding of first-century Judaism, taken on its own terms.

In 1963 the Lutheran theologian Krister Stendahl published a paper arguing that the typical Lutheran view of the Apostle Paul's theology did not fit with statements in Paul's writings, and in fact was based more on mistaken assumptions about Paul's beliefs than careful interpretation of his writings.[3] Stendahl warned against imposing modern Western ideas on the Bible, and especially on the works of Paul.[4] In 1977 E. P. Sanders published Paul and Palestinian Judaism.[5] In this work he studies Jewish literature and Paul's writings arguing that the traditional Lutheran understanding of the theology of Judaism and Paul was fundamentally incorrect.

Sanders continued to publish books and articles in this field, and was soon joined by the scholar James D. G. Dunn. In 1982 Dunn labelled the movement the "new perspective on Paul".[6] The work of these writers inspired a large number of scholars to study, discuss, and debate the relevant issues. Many books and articles dealing with the issues raised have since been published. The Anglican Bishop and theologian N. T. Wright has written a large number of works aimed at popularizing the "new" perspective outside of academia.[7]

The "new-perspective" movement is closely connected with a surge of recent scholarly interest in studying the Bible in the context of other ancient texts, and the use of social-scientific methods to understand ancient culture. Scholars affiliated with The Context Group as well as many others in the field have called for various reinterpretations of biblical texts based on their studies of the ancient world.

Main ideas

It is often noted that the singular title "the new perspective" gives an unjustified impression of unity. It is a field of study in which many scholars are actively pursuing research and continuously revising their own theories in light of new evidence, and who do not necessarily agree with each other on any given issue. It has been suggested by many that a plural title of "new" perspectives may therefore be more accurate. In 2003, N. T. Wright, distancing himself from both Sanders and Dunn, commented that "there are probably almost as many 'new' perspective positions as there are writers espousing it – and I disagree with most of them".[8] There are certain trends and commonalities within the movement, but what is held in common is the belief that the historic Lutheran and Reformed perspectives of Paul the Apostle and Judaism is fundamentally incorrect. The following are some of the issues being widely discussed.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Works of the Law

Paul's letters contain a substantial amount of criticism of "works of the law". The radical difference in these two interpretations of what Paul meant by "works of the law" is the most consistent distinguishing feature between the two perspectives. The historic Lutheran and Reformed perspectives interpret this phrase as referring to human effort to do good works in order to meet God's standards (Works Righteousness). In this view, Paul is arguing against the idea that humans can merit salvation from God by their good works (note that the "new" perspective agrees that we cannot merit salvation; the issue is what exactly Paul is addressing).

By contrast, new-perspective scholars see Paul as talking about "badges of covenant membership" or criticizing Gentile believers who had begun to rely on the Torah to reckon Jewish kinship.[9] It is argued that in Paul's time, Israelites were being faced with a choice of whether to continue to follow their ancestral customs, the Torah ("the ancestral customs"), or to follow the Roman Empire's trend to adopt Greek customs (Hellenization, see also Antinomianism, Hellenistic Judaism, and Circumcision controversy in early Christianity). This is comparable with Westernization and the decision faced by modern individuals such as American Indians to follow their native culture or to adopt Western customs and lifestyle, see also Cultural imperialism. The new-perspective view is that Paul's writings discuss the comparative merits of following ancient Israelite or ancient Greek customs. Paul is interpreted as being critical of a common Jewish view that following traditional Israelite customs makes a person better off before God, pointing out that Abraham was righteous before the Torah was given. Paul identifies customs he is concerned about as circumcision, dietary laws, and observance of special days.[10]

See also*: Covenantal Nomism

Human effort and good works

Due to their interpretation of the phrase "works of the law", theologians of the historic Lutheran and Reformed perspectives see Paul's rhetoric as being against human effort to earn righteousness. This is often cited by Lutheran and Reformed theologians as a central feature of the Christian religion, and the concepts of grace alone and faith alone are of great importance within the creeds of these denominations.

"New-perspective" interpretations of Paul tend to result in Paul having nothing negative to say about the idea of human effort or good works, and saying many positive things about both. New-perspective scholars point to the many statements in Paul's writings that specify the criteria of final judgment as being the works of the individual.

Wright however does not hold the view that good works contribute to one's salvation but rather that the final judgement is something we can look forward to as a future vindication of God's present declaration of our righteousness. In other words, our works are a result of our salvation and the future judgement will show that.[11] Others tend to place a higher value on the importance of good works than the historic Lutheran and Reformed perspectives do, taking the view that they causally contribute to the salvation of the individual.

Advocates of the historic Lutheran and Reformed perspectives often see this as being "salvation by works", and as a bad thing, contradicting fundamental tenets of Christianity. New-perspective scholars often respond that their views are not so different. For in the perspective of Luther and Calvin, God graciously empowers the individual to the faith which leads to salvation and also to good works, while in the "new" perspective God graciously empowers individuals to the faith and good works, which lead to salvation.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

See also Synergism in theosis in the Eastern Orthodox Church and Orthopraxy in Christianity.

See also: Monergism and Synergism

Faith, or faithfulness

An ongoing debate related to the "new" perspective has been over Paul's use of the Greek word pistis (πίστις, meaning "trust", "belief", "faith", or "faithfulness"). Writers with a more historic Lutheran and Reformed perspective have typically interpreted this word as meaning a belief in God and Christ, and trust in Christ for salvation with faith that he will save you. This interpretation is based on several passages from the Christian Bible, notably Ephesians 2:8–9, which reads, "For by grace you have been saved through faith. And this is not your own doing; it is the gift of God, not as a result of works, so that no one may boast." Interestingly, E. P. Sanders, notes that Ephesians 2:9 teaches the traditional perspectives.[12]

By contrast, many recent studies of the Greek word pistis have concluded that its primary and most common meaning was faithfulness, meaning firm commitment in an interpersonal relationship.[13] [14] [15] [16] As such, the word could be almost synonymous with "obedience" when the people in the relationship held different status levels (e.g. a slave being faithful to his master). Far from being equivalent to "lack of human effort", the word seems to imply and require human effort. The interpretation of Paul's writings that we need "faithfully" to obey God's commands is quite different from one which sees him saying that we need to have "faith" that he will do everything for us. This is also argued to explain why James was adamant that "faith without works is dead" and that "a man is justified by works, and not by faith alone" (Js. 2:24), while also saying that merely to believe places one on the same level as the demons (see James 2). The "new" perspective argues that James was concerned with those who were trying to reduce faith to an intellectual subscription without any intent to follow God or Jesus, and that Paul always intended "faith" to mean a full submission to God.

Another related issue is the pistis Christou ("faith of Christ") debate. Paul several times uses this phrase at key points in his writings and it is linguistically ambiguous as to whether it refers to our faith in Christ ("objective genitive"), or Christ's own faithfulness to God ("subjective genitive"), or even our faith/faithfulness to God like that which Christ had ("adjectival genitive"). There is wide disagreement within the academic community over which of these is the best rendering.[17] The NET Bible translation became the first mainstream English Bible translation to use a subjective genitive translation of this phrase.[18]

Grace, or favor

Writers with a more historic Lutheran and Reformed perspective have generally translated the Greek word charis as "grace" and understood it to refer to the idea that there is a lack of human effort in salvation because God is the controlling factor. However those who study ancient Greek culture have pointed out that "favor" is a better translation, as the word refers normally to "doing a favor". In ancient societies there was the expectation that such favors be repaid, and this semi-formal system of favors acted like loans.[19] Therefore, it is argued that when Paul speaks of how God did us a "favor" by sending Jesus, he is saying that God took the initiative, but is not implying a lack of human effort in salvation, and is in fact implying that Christians have an obligation to repay the favor God has done for them. Some argue that this view then undermines the initial "favor"—of sending Jesus—by saying that, despite his incarnation, life and death, Christians still have, as before, to earn their way to heaven. However, others note this is the horns of a false dilemma (all grace versus all works). Many new-perspective proponents that see "charis" as "favor" do not teach that Christians earn their way to heaven outside of the death of

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Christ. Forgiveness of sins through the blood of Christ is still necessary to salvation. But, that forgiveness demands effort on the part of the individual (cf. Paul in Phil. 3:12–16).[20]

The Atonement (See also: Atonement/PenalSubstitution/ChristusVictor)

See also: Atonement in Christianity. To writers of the historic Lutheran and Reformed perspectives the penal substitution atonement theory and the belief in the "finished work" of Christ have been central. New-perspective writers have regularly questioned whether this view is really of such central importance in Paul's writings. Generally new-perspective writers have argued that other theories of the atonement are more central to Paul's thinking, but there has been minimal agreement among them as to what Paul's real view of the atonement might be.

The following is a broad sample of different views advocated by various scholars:

- E. P. Sanders argued that Paul's central idea was that we mystically spiritually participate in the risen Christ and that all Paul's judicial language was subordinate to the participationary language.[5]
- N. T. Wright has argued that Paul sees Israel as representative of humanity and taking onto itself the sinfulness of humanity through history. Jesus, in turn, as Messiah is representative of Israel and so focuses the sins of Israel on himself on the cross. Wright's view is thus a "historicized" form of Penal Substitution.[21]
- Chris VanLandingham has argued that Paul sees Christ as having defeated the Devil and as teaching humans how God wants them to live and setting them an example.[22]
- David Brondos has argued that Paul sees Jesus as just a part in a wider narrative in which the Church is working to transform lives of individuals and the world, and that Paul's participatory language should be understood in an ethical sense (humans living Christ-like lives) rather than mystically as Sanders thought.[23]
- Pilch and Malina take the view that Paul holds to the Satisfaction theory of atonement.[24]
- Stephen Finlan holds that Paul uses numerous different metaphors to describe the atonement; “justified by his blood” (Rom 5:9) means that a cultic substance has a judicial effect. Paul also taught the transformation of believers into the image of God through Christ (Theosis).[25]

Criticism and rhetoric

The "new" perspective has been an extremely controversial subject and has drawn strong arguments and recriminations from both sides of the debate.[26]

In 2003 Steve Chalke, after being influenced by new-perspective writers, published a book targeted at a popular audience which made comments highly critical of the penal substitution theory of the atonement.[27] This caused an extensive and ongoing controversy among Evangelicals in Britain, with a strong backlash from laypeople and advocates of the Lutheran and Reformed traditions.[28] Chalke's views drew much support as well as criticism, with numerous articles, blogs and books being written on both sides of the debate.

The continuing controversy led to the Evangelical Alliance organising a symposium in July 2005 to discuss the issue. A record of this symposium includes a chapter by Chalke and his views are also contained in "the atonement debate".[29] [30] [31] A group of three conservative evangelical theologians responded to Chalke with their book, Pierced for our Transgressions (Crossway Publishing, 2007), which strongly criticised Chalke's position as inconsistent with some evangelical confessions of faith.[32] [33]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

However, N. T. Wright endorsed Chalke and spoke out against the latter book, commenting, for instance, that 'despite the ringing endorsements of famous men, it ["Pierced For Our Transgressions"] is deeply, profoundly, and disturbingly unbiblical.'[34]

Both sides of the debate have attempted to claim the higher, and more accurate, view of scripture. New-perspective advocates claim that supporters of the historic Lutheran and Reformed perspective are too committed to historic Protestant tradition, and therefore fail to take a "natural" reading of the Bible; while those of the Lutheran and Reformed perspectives claim that new-perspective advocates are too intrigued by certain interpretations of context and history, which then lead to a biased hermeneutical approach to the text.

The "new" perspective has been heavily criticized by conservative scholars in the Reformed tradition, arguing that it undermines the classical, individualistic, Augustinian interpretation of election and does not faithfully reflect the teachings of the Scriptures. It has been the subject of fierce debate among Evangelicals in recent years, mainly due to N. T. Wright's increasing popularity in evangelical circles. Its most outspoken critics include Calvinists John Piper,[35] Sinclair Ferguson,[36] [37] C. W. Powell,[38] Mark A. Seifrid, D. A. Carson,[39] Tom Holland,[40] Ligon Duncan.[41] Barry D. Smith has claimed that the New Perspective's challenge to the traditional view of Jewish faith practice as legalistic is misplaced.[42]

In 2015 John M.G. Barclay published Paul and the Gift which re-frames Paul's theology of grace and, in doing so, provides a nuanced critique of the New Perspective.[43] The book has been praised for keeping grace at the center of Paul's theology (pace the New Perspective) while illuminating how grace, understood in light of ancient theories of gift, demands reciprocity and thus the formation of new communities based not on ethnicity but the unqualified Christ-gift (much like the New Perspective).[44] [45]

See also: Reformed Theology vs Lutheranism vs Calvinism vs Weslyanism / Antinomianism

Covenantal Nomism / Pistis Christou / Paul

The Use of Greek Philosophy by Paul in the Bible / Greek Philosophy

Links to N.T. White related media (video/audio):

https://mp3songfree.net/mp3/Dr-N-T-Wright-On-Predestination.html

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Idiot's Guide to the New Perspective on Paul (2009)

http://wesleyanarminian.blogspot.com/2009/04/idiots-guide-to-new-perspective-on-paul.html

Excerpt:

It is difficult to find a brief layman's explanation of the "New Perspective on Paul" (NPP). To rectify the problem I humbly offer "The Idiot's Guide to the New Perspective on Paul" (myself being the idiot). Comments welcome! I posted something similar to this a while back on an Arminian group discussion, so this may be a repeat for a few.

An Analogy:
Imagine a church that has the following rule: EVERYONE WHO ATTENDS THIS CHURCH MUST WEAR A SUIT. The church has the rule to keep out the bums, reasoning that bums can't afford suits.

The people in the church know very well that wearing a suit in and of itself doesn't make one a Christian. They simply have the requirement for the purpose of excluding others who are not like them. They want the church for themselves, and want to keeps the bums out.

In this analogy the root problem is that the Christians want to exclude others. There is nothing inherently wrong with someone wanting to wear a suit. The problem is that they are using their preference for suits as an arbitrary rule to exclude others.

New Perspective Explained:
Among Protestant circles, Paul's writings have generally been interpreted as a criticism of legalism (the suit in the analogy). NPP argues that Paul's writings are instead a criticism of exclusivism (keeping the bums out).

NPP points out that during Paul's ministry the Jewish Christians were reluctant to accept Gentiles as fellow believers. The Jews often acted in ways to prevent the inclusion of others. One way that this manifested itself was by the demand that the Gentiles follow detailed adherence to the OT law. The law was used as a way of excluding others.

NPP argues that the Jewish Christians knew that salvation came by grace through faith. Or put another way, they did not believe that following the law would save them in and of itself. NPP argues that root problem was that the Jewish Christians wanted to keep Christianity exclusive to themselves. Thus, Paul's criticism of works should be interpreted in this light.

In short, NPP proponents argue that:
1) The Jewish Christians knew that salvation was by grace through faith, and that following the law didn't merit salvation.
2) The Jewish Christians were using the law as grounds to exclude Gentiles from fellowship.
3) Paul's beef was with the exclusion, not with those who wanted to obey the law.

Why does this matter today?
A key component of Protestant theology is that we are saved by grace through faith, and not by works (Eph 2:8-9). During the Reformation, Luther and others appealed to Paul's criticism of works in order to point out some of the severe abuses of the Roman Catholic church.

If Paul's primary concern was exclusivism rather than works, some think that this could undermine the scriptural justification for the Reformation. Exclusivism is a different problem than works based salvation.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

My Take:
I personally believe that NPP has some merits. But I also believe that the traditional Protestant view does as well. I think that both exclusivism and works salvation were addressed in the scope of Paul's writing. I also believe that both of these views can co-exists along side each other without conflict, and in fact compliment each other.

How does this relate to the Arminian / Calvinist debate?
It is often the case that Arminians are more open to NPP. Calvinists tend to be more critical of it, though this is not always the case. John Piper is a strong critic of NPP, while NT Wright is a proponent. Both are Calvinists. I personally see no reason why Arminians or Calvinists must reject NPP, as it has little to say about the definition of election or the scope of the atonement. As mentioned earlier, it does touch on certain aspects of Reformational thought, however, this is not in and of itself a good reason to reject the theory.

What are the oldest known records of interpretation agreeing with New Perspective on Paul? (Forum)

https://hermeneutics.stackexchange.com/questions/25289/what-are-the-oldest-known-records-of-interpretation-agreeing-with-new-perspectiv

(Warning: Includes a long comment by a forum poster regarding Swedenborg. Please see details on Emanuel Swedenborg and Swedenborgianism in my separate Reference Notes on Heaven.)

What is "new" in the New Perspective on Paul? (Forum)

https://christianity.stackexchange.com/questions/4706/what-is-new-in-the-new-perspective-on-paul

Intro: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=iNZ2czI-dPY [Video] (2016) [Recommended]
(Dr. Robert Wayne Stacy, Liberty University)

[Video Recommended as a balanced introduction < 7 min.]

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

N.T. Wright and the Faithfulness of Paul: Part 1 (of 9-part series): Charting the Course
A summarization by Derek Vreeland [Recommended]
https://derekvreeland.com/2014/09/n-t-wright-faithfulness-paul-part-1/

Excerpt:

New Perspective on Paul	Old Perspective on Paul
Paul's theology is driven by ecclesiology.	Paul's theology is driven by soteriology.
Justification is both juridical and participatory.	Justification is primarily juridical.
Justification is the declaration of membership in God's covenant family.	Justification is the declaration of a right relationship with God.
Judaism was a religion of grace.	Judaism was a religion of legalism.
Paul redefines Jewish thought/categories.	Paul rejects Jewish thought/categories.
Righteousness is "covenant faithfulness."	Righteousness is a moral quality or legal standing.
God's righteousness is his faithfulness to his covenant with Abraham.	God's righteousness is his moral integrity.
We embody God's righteousness.	We receive the imputation of Christ's righteousness.
The Gospel is the proclamation of Christ's lordship through his death, resurrection, and ascension.	The Gospel is the proclamation of justification by faith through grace communicated through the shed blood of Jesus Christ.

2. Methods to understanding Paul's theology
    a. History: Paul in the setting of second temple Judaism (Jewish, Roman, Greek influences)
    b. Exegesis: Interpreting Paul's writings in the light of Paul's historical context
    c. Application/relevance: How Paul was understood by his contemporaries?

3. Methods to understanding Paul's worldview
    a. Praxis: What were the common practices in Paul's world?
    b. Symbol: What key symbols filled Paul's world?
    c. Story: What narratives shaped Paul's imagination?
    d. Question: What were the BIG questions people were asking in Paul's world?

4. The contrast

Theology is our core beliefs about God, his world, and the people he has created.	Worldview is the way we look at the world, how we assign value to things (or people), how we prioritize and categorize thoughts.
Theology [is] the constructed evaluations we have made or accepted based on our worldview. Theology is conscious.	Worldview is subconscious.
Theology is the evaluation of what we are looking at.	Worldview is what we are looking through.

Note: Part of a 9-Part series summarizing Wright's book, N.T. Wright and the Faithfulness of Paul. Part 9 has links to the prior 8 articles, here is the link:
https://derekvreeland.com/2014/11/paul-in-history/

See also: Paul's Worldview

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Review: The New Perspective on Paul: An Introduction, by Kent L. Yinger (2011)

http://www.thepaulpage.com/the-new-perspective-on-paul-an-introduction/

Excerpt:

…Within the boundaries that are explored in chapters five through eight, however, the book is surprisingly thorough, touching not only on Christian debates about covenantal nomism (pp. 39-46) but a wide variety of issues: works of law (pp. 48-50), call vs. conversion (pp. 50-54), the question of Paul's introspective conscience (pp. 56-58), the description of Paul as a sinner (pp. 59,60), the debate about whether pistis christou should be rendered "faith in Christ" or "faith of Christ" (pp. 69,70), and of course several key texts (Gal. 3:10-13, pp. 54-56; Phil. 3:6, pp. 58,59; Rom. 7, pp. 60-63; Rom. 10:3, pp. 63-65; Rom. 4:1-5, pp. 65-67; and disputed Pauline texts, pp. 67-69, with a helpful citation from this reviewer).

When Yinger turns to theological considerations, he clearly and concisely articulates the issues between new perspective scholars and their conservative Reformed critics. Recognizing the diversity of viewpoints within the new perspective, for instance, Yinger writes that "Some NPP writers do, in fact, see their stance as challenging, or even overturning, the central insights of the Protestant Reformation. Others most definitely do not" (p. 72). In articulating the concerns of critics and the responses of new perspective scholars, Yinger is very fair. Describing concerns over legalism:

Critics fear that the NPP slips in legalism through a side door; NPP writers do not typically approve of legalism, but contend that particular passages in Paul deal with something else (p. 50).

According to critics:

The NPP makes Paul soft on legalism. Not so fast, protest NPP proponents. True, Paul is not opposing good deeds in the verses normally cited on this point. But that certainly does not mean he now favors salvation by works. … Even if Paul does not polemicize against legalism in the verses normally cited, this does not mean he wouldn't have done so given the opportunity. Legalism simply wasn't the issue confronting him in his churches, and thus we find little opposition to it in his letters (p. 80; cp. pp. 57,58).

But Yinger doesn't stop there. He goes on to describe a key reason for some of the misunderstandings:

The concerns of critics arise largely from the realms of church history and systematic theology, not directly from biblical studies. But NPP writers usually see themselves as biblical scholars, and less as theologians (p. 84).

It is also worth reminding readers that the NPP is primarily a matter of NT interpretation, of biblical studies. The concerns of its proponents are first of all, and sometimes solely, issues of "What did Paul say and mean?" rather than pastoral questions ("How will this affect ministry and Christian experience today?", p. 78).

Yinger considers arguments surrounding justification by faith alone (pp. 73,74), forensic justification (pp. 74,75), imputed righteousness (pp. 75-77), legalism (pp. 77-79,80), assurance (pp. 79-80), ecumenism (pp. 81,82), synergism (pp. 82,83), and individual salvation (pp. 83,84)…

Positive Effects and Future of the NPP

Yinger concludes his short introduction to the NPP by discussing what the NPP has gotten right. He identifies them as the following:

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

1. The NPP allows us to have a better grasp on Paul's letters. [A better understanding of Paul's letters (pp. 87,88)]

2. A NPP reading of Paul helps us move away from an overly Western individualistic reading of Paul which has made "justification by faith" entirely about saving individual souls rather than remaking all of creation through the fulfillment of the covenant with Israel. [a reduction of western individualism (p. 88)]

3. The NPP helps reduce anti-Semitic and anti-Jewish tendencies within Christian interpretation of Paul and facilitates a better dialogue on the topic of supersessionism among Christians. [a concern over anti-semitism (wherein he grapples honestly with the problem of supersessionism, i.e., the replacement of Israel by the church, pp. 88,89)]

4. The NPP provides considerable continuity between the Old Testament/Hebrew Bible and the New Testament. [Continuity between the testaments (pp. 89,90)] [continuity between Jesus and Paul (pp. 90-92)] [and finally ecumenism (pp. 92,93)[

In fact, even some modern American Lutheran scholars are appreciating the contributions of the NPP in some of the same ways mentioned by Yinger…

[Note: the above review mentions the main features of the NPP and is a good checklist to start your study of this general topic.]

A Student Summary
https://religiousstudies.stanford.edu/sites/default/files/brinkley-rs-71.pdf

Excerpt:

…In summary, the NPP and its core tenets center on the question of identity and participation in the covenant community of God redefined around the Messiah rather than the misconstrued "faith v. works" paradigm coming from Luther in the Reformation and later from German Lutheran scholars of the late nineteenth and twentieth-centuries.

N.T. Wright | On Worldview (2017)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=2u-f2qmYr1s [Video]

See also: Paul's Worldview according to N.T. Wright

Who was Jesus - N.T. Wright (2011)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=8WVysqUd4Gg [Video]

Tom Wright & James Dunn The New Perspective on Paul (2009) [Recommended]
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=cqZYbcvANhM (Good introduction into how the New Perspective came about and what it is really saying and addressing)

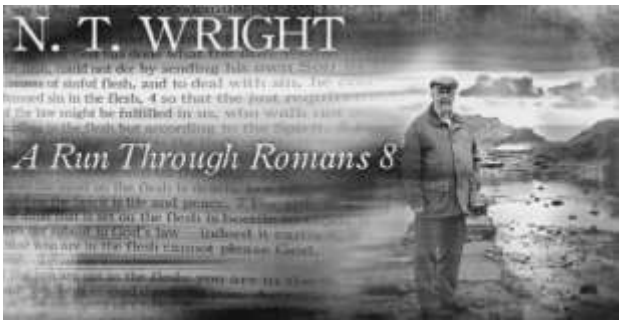
 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



N.T. Wright on Romans (Summarization)
https://theologicalsweets.wordpress.com/2011/05/07/n-t-wright-on-romans/

NT Wright on Romans . . . in 22 Minutes! (Introduction) (Links to the video)
http://thebiblicalworld.blogspot.com/2011/08/nt-wright-on-romans-in-22-minutes.html [Recommended]

Introduction and Overview of Romans, including overview of the New Perspective on Paul and more!
Wright talks about 1) the historical setting of the letter; 2) what righteousness means; and 3) the faithfulness of God.

Direct Link to Video: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=7glk-aSt-TM [Video] [Recommended]

Introduction to Romans: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=wwtDUpWYEcY [Video]

Audio of N.T. Wright discussing Romans 8 (2016) [Recommended] held at Elmbrook Church, [Wikipedia] home of the Elmbrook Christian Studies Center (Six sessions, taking a look at Chp 8 via different 'slices/themes'):

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=fyE5tyTc18c [Audio] https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=71U0IHBCYKY [Audio] https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=QLqUI8MG5yM [Audio] https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=KCaTMNfbh0I [Audio] https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=-ouBxLOoVO8 [Audio] https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=KevX-yjabGo [Audio]

Lecture - N.T. Wright - How Paul Invented Christian Theology
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=WkcjFHYIugY [Video]

Historical Paul and "Systematic Theology" (2014)
http://ntwrightpage.com/2017/02/24/historical-paul-and-systematic-theology/

Introduction: N.T. Wright and the Biblical Worldview (2006)
https://biblicalstudies.org.uk/pdf/ref-rev/15-2/15-2_intro.pdf [PDF]

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

N.T. Wright vs James White – Justification and Saint Paul (2013) (Unbelievable Radio)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Zp8rMsOCsvY [Audio] [Recommended]

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=dQoczsyfBAo [Audio] [Recommended]

Simply Christian: The Biblical Paradigm of N.T. Wright (2006)
https://biblicalstudies.org.uk/pdf/ref-rev/15-2/15-2_armstrong.pdf [PDF]

N.T. Wright: Pauline Cartographer (2006)
https://biblicalstudies.org.uk/pdf/ref-rev/15-2/15-2_smith.pdf [PDF]

N.T. Wright on Predestination (and Election, Chosen)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=qKwIijhZW-M [Video]

Three Books that Changed N.T. Wright's Life (2017)
https://www.christiantoday.com/article/three.books.that.changed.nt.wrights.life/104297.htm

https://vimeo.com/201857771 [Video]

Covenantal nomism? A comparative review of Sanders and Carson et al http://www.rabbisaul.com/articles/nomism.php

Excerpt:

Briefly put, covenantal nomism is the view that one's place in God's plan is established on the basis of the covenant and that the covenant requires as the proper response of man his obedience to its commandments, while providing means of atonement for transgression. (Sanders, 75)

(NOTE: "nomism" is from Greek for "law")

E. P. Sanders - Paul and Palestinian Judaism, a comparison of patterns of religion
http://xiypdf.abhappybooks.com/paul-and-palestinian-e-p-sanders-pdf-3328343.pdf [PDF]

http://s-space.snu.ac.kr/bitstream/10371/5180/3/religiousstudy_v25_139.pdf [PDF]

Jesus and Paul and the New Testament https://jesusandpaulandthenewtestament.wordpress.com/ [Blog, various topics]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The History of the Interpretation of the Apostle Paul
"E. P. Sanders and the New Perspective on Paul"
http://www.tyndale.cam.ac.uk/Tyndale/staff/Head/Lent_07_Handout.htm

Outline Excerpts:

V. Ed Parish Sanders, Paul and Palestinian Judaism
Palestinian Judaism (c 400 pages)

a) Tannaitic Literature

i.e. Rabbinic literature between AD 70 and AD 200, including Mishnah, Tosefta, some Midrashim, sayings of early Rabbis in the Talmuds and other literature

b) Dead Sea Scrolls

c) Apcrypha and Pseudepigrapha

Ben Sirach, 1 Enoch, Jubilees, Psalms of Solomon and 4 Ezar

…

f) …

d. Conclusions

i. General

For Judaism: "obedience maintains one's position in the covenant, but it does not earn God's grace as such. It simply keeps an individual in the group which is the recipient of God's grace." (p420) In other words: "obedience is universally held to be the behaviour appropriate to being in the covenant, not the means of earning God's grace." (421).

'Israel's situation in the covenant required the law to be obeyed as fully and completely as possible … as the only proper response to the God who chose Israel and gave them commandments' (p. 81).

ii. Covenantal Nomism:

"(1) God has chosen Israel and (2) given the law. The law implies both (3) God's promise to maintain election and (4) the requirement to obey. (5) God rewards obedience and punishes transgression. (6) The law provides for means of atonement, and atonement results in (7) maintenance or re-establishment of the covenantal relationship. (8) All those who are maintained in the covenant by obedience, atonement and God's mercy belong to the group which will be saved. An important interpretation of the first and last points is that election and ultimately salvation are considered to be by God's mercy rather than human achievement." (p422)

iii. "basic consistency in the underlying pattern of religion"

iv. "On the assumption that a religion should be understood on the basis of its own self-presentations, as long as these are not manifestly bowdlerized, and not on the basis of polemical attacks, we must say that Judaism of before 70 kept grace and works in the right perspective, did not trivialize the commandments of God and was not especially marked by hypocrisy. The frequent Christian charge against Judaism, it must be recalled, is not that some individual Jews misunderstood, misapplied and abused their religion, but that Judaism necessarily tends towards petty legalism, self-serving and self-deceiving casuistry, and a mixture of arrogance and lack of confidence in God. But the surviving Jewish literature is as free of these characteristics as any I have ever read. By consistently maintaining the basic framework of covenantal nomism, the gift and demand of God were kept in a healthy relationship with each other, the minutiae of the law were observed on the basis of the large principles of religion and because of commitment to God, and humility before God who chose and would ultimately redeem Israel was encouraged." (p426f)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

v. 4 Ezra atypical.

…

h) Paul

a. Six letters, no Acts, no development, a theologian but not a systematic theologian; 'I view Paul as a coherent thinker, despite the unsystematic nature of his thought and the variations in formulation' (p. 433).

b. Fundamental influence of Schweitzer

c. Two basic convictions governed Paul's Christian life:

i. 'That Jesus Christ is Lord, that in him God has provided for the salvation of all who believe (in the general sense of "be converted"), and that he will soon return to bring all things to an end;

ii. That he, Paul, was called to be the apostle to the Gentiles' (p. 441f).

d. The solution as preceding the problem

e. Conclusions:

i. Paul "presents an essentially different type of religiousness from any found in Palestinian Jewish literature." (p543)

ii. Fundamental agreement with PJ on grace and works: "salvation is by grace but judgment is according to works; works are the condition of remaining 'in', but they do not earn salvation. ... The point is that God saves by grace, but that within the framework established by grace he rewards good deeds and punishes transgression." (p543)

iii. Differences: the meaning of "righteousness" (a transfer term rather than behaviour descriptive), the place of repentance (absent in Paul), the nature of sin (as a power rather than transgression), the nature of the "saved" group (participation with/in Christ), and the necessity of all to transfer from the damned to the saved (including Jews for Paul). (see pp 544-548)

iv. Paul's religion is described as "participationist eschatology" (p552).

v. Paul advocates a different type of religion, his critique of Judaism as a system of religion is total. The Abrahamic covenant is fulfilled in Christians: "In short, this is what Paul finds wrong with Judaism: it is not Christianity." (p552)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Deibert on Falk on Sanders

http://www.tyndale.cam.ac.uk/Tyndale/staff/Head/DeibertonFalkonSanders.PDF [PDF]

Excerpt:

The 'pattern' or 'structure' of covenantal nomism is this:

(1) God has chosen Israel and (2) given the law.

The law implies both (3) God's promise to maintain the election and (4) the requirement to obey.

(5) God rewards obedience and punishes transgression.

(6) The law provides for means of atonement, and atonement results in (7) maintenance or re-establishment of the covenantal relationship.

(8) All those who are maintained in the covenant by obedience, atonement and God's mercy belong to the group which will be saved."

(NOTE: "nomism" is from Greek for "law")

See also: Covenantal Nomism

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Redemption from the New Perspective?
Towards a Multi-Layered Pauline Theology of the Cross (2006)
http://ntwrightpage.com/2016/04/05/redemption-from-the-new-perspective/

Perspectives on the Apostle Paul http://subscribe.vision.org/first-followers/bid/36296/Perspectives-on-the-Apostle-Paul

The New Perspective on Paul: An Introduction (proposed)
https://readingacts.com/2011/08/26/the-new-perspective-on-paul-an-introduction/

The New Perspective on Paul: An Introduction
https://readingacts.com/2013/08/27/the-new-perspective-on-paul-an-introduction-2/

The New Perspective on Paul: What Was the Old Perspective?
https://readingacts.com/2013/08/28/the-new-perspective-on-paul-what-was-the-old-perspective-2/

Basics of the New Perspective: Judaism as a Religion of Grace
https://readingacts.com/2011/08/29/basics-of-the-new-perspective-judaism-as-a-religion-of-grace/

The New Perspective on Paul: Defining Justification
https://readingacts.com/2013/09/02/the-new-perspective-on-paul-defining-justification/

The New Perspective on Paul: Works of Righteousness
https://readingacts.com/2013/08/31/the-new-perspective-on-paul-works-of-righteousness/

The New Perspective on Paul: Scholarly Response to the NPP
https://readingacts.com/2013/09/03/the-new-perspective-on-paul-scholarly-response-to-the-npp/

The New Perspective on Paul: Dispensationalism and the NPP
https://readingacts.com/2013/09/04/the-new-perspective-on-paul-dispensationalism-and-the-npp/

[See also: Two Major Systems of Theology]

Was Paul "Predisposed to Conversion"? (Originally published: 2011)
https://readingacts.com/2017/09/12/was-paul-predisposed-to-conversion/

Gentiles and the Jewish Law
https://readingacts.com/2017/09/14/gentiles-and-the-jewish-law/

Who is the Wretched Man? – Romans 7:24
https://readingacts.com/2016/10/19/who-is-the-wretched-man-romans-724/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Acts 9 – Introducing Rabbi Saul https://readingacts.com/2015/02/11/acts-9-introducing-rabbi-saul/

Justification: The New Perspective on Paul View (2012)
http://nathanielclaiborne.com/new-perspective-on-paul-justification/

(Part of series looking at the 5 sections of the book, Justification: Five Views)

See also:
Glossary: Justification

Glossary (NDT): Justification

Paul and Justification (2013)
(An Orthodox Perspective on the New Perspective on Paul) https://orthodoxruminations.wordpress.com/2013/08/04/paul-and-justification-an-orthodox-perspective-on-the-new-perspective-on-paul/

Excerpt:

…For Paul, justification is neither exclusively forensic nor exclusively transformative. It is both, because the context of justification is Zechariah 3. Mankind is robed in the robe of divine righteousness that Adam had forfeited. Through this theosis-event, Satan is defeated and the human being is vindicated before the Judgment Seat. So justification is a transformation which brings about a status, a status which anticipates final glorification and its associated "in the right" verdict at the Last Judgment. This harmonizes texts like 1 Corinthians 6:11 (where justification is clearly transformative) with texts like Romans 8:33 (which is clearly forensic, yet in the context of a transformative event.) This is why we cannot reduce "justified" to "declared righteous" or "made righteous." Justification is its own concept, with its own particular nuance.

The New Perspective on Paul: A Brief Essay [PDF] (2009)
http://assets.bakerpublishinggroup.com/processed/esource-assets/files/459/original/hyperlink-11-03.pdf?1375208924

Varia on NTW's Paul and the Faithfulness of God #1
https://cruxsolablog.com/2013/11/14/varia-on-ntws-paul-and-the-faithfulness-of-god-1/

N.T. Wright vs James White – Justification and Saint Paul (2013) (Unbelievable Radio)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Zp8rMsOCsvY [Audio] [Recommended]

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=dQoczsyfBAo [Audio] [Recommended]

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

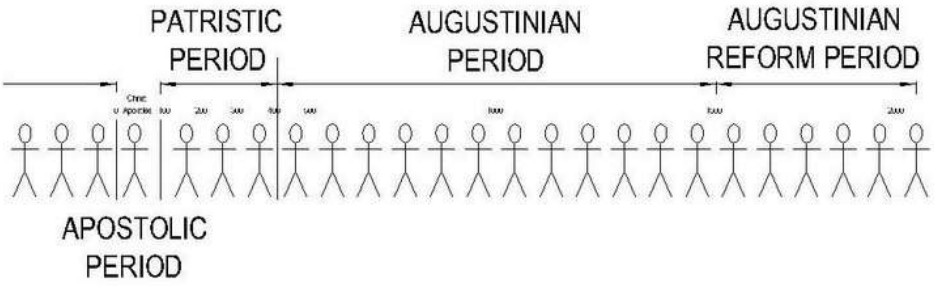
Early Church Justification [Recommended]

http://thescripturesays.org/early-church/justification/

Contents

- Introduction (this post)
- Epistle of Barnabas (c.e. 70–131)
- Clement of Rome (died c.e. 101)
- Justin Martyr (c.e. 103-165)
- Ireneaus of Lyons (c.e. 125-202)
- Mathetes (c.e. 130-200)
- Clement of Alexandria (c.e. 150-215)
- Tertullian (c.e. 155-240)
- Hippolytus of Rome (c.e. 170–235)
- Origen (c.e. 185-254)
- Cyprian of Carthage (c.e. 200-258)
- Eusebius of Caesarea (c.e. 260-340)
- Ambrosiaster (c.e. 366-384)
- Pelagius (c.e. 360-418)
- Augustine of Hippo (c.e. 354–430)
- The Early Perspective on Justification

Periods in church history



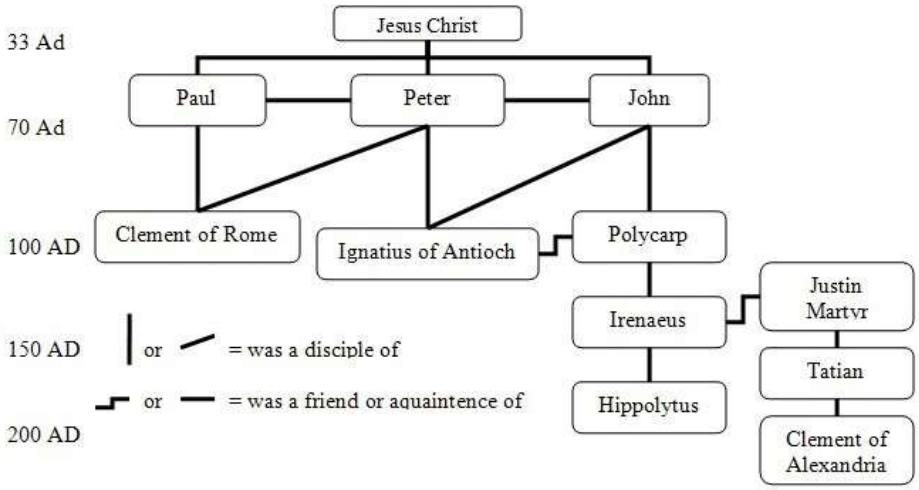
The early church discussions about justification and works of law at times involve statements about various ‘dispensations’ in salvation history.

I’ve drawn a couple diagrams showing these different time periods in biblical history and what follows. The names of the periods I have given myself and are not universally adopted. I’ve given them to distinguish and show relationships between each.

1. The Primeval period represents the time between creation and when God gave Abraham the law of circumcision.
2. The Jewish Law period is between circumcision and the time of Jesus, the gospel.
3. The Apostolic period is during the time of the Gospel and the Apostles afterwards. The early church believes the gospel is the story of Jesus, from his birth up to his resurrection and ascension.
4. The Patristic Period. This is the time of the Early church I will be mainly quoting from.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

5. The Augustinian Period is the time from Augustine, mainly the Roman Catholic Church and up to the Protestant Reformation.
6. The Augustinian Reform Period is the time from the Protestant Reformation till now.



I'm going to start from the Patristic period.

Period 4 – The Patristic Period

The Patristic Period is the time from the apostles right up to the time of Augustine.

The following diagram should help show the relationships between various people and the apostles within this time.

As you can see the early church fathers Clement of Rome and Ignatius of Antioch had direct contact with the apostles. Ireneaus and Justin Martyr knew Polycarp who knew the apostle John.

Normally we have only scripture to work out what the early Christians believed. The significance of these relationships should open us up to believe they had another source. The apostles themselves.

See also: Apostolic and Church Fathers – Writings / History

Diversity in the New Testament ("Genealogical" Table – NT and Apostolic Fathers)

Early Church Fathers Relationships Charts

Dating Books of the NT Bible

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The historical context I'm interested in is the exposure of these early Christian writers to;

- the apostles,
- the scriptures (the Old Testament and to varying degrees the apostles writings in the New Testament),
- the early christian community with its beliefs and teachings (100 years after the apostles), and
- first and second century Jews.

The diagram above shows that the early church's exposure to Judaism dwindled quickly in the first two centuries. I've largely assumed by the third century they were many Gentile communities separate from Jewish. (I realise there are some exceptions).

I think from the fourth century Christianity became increasingly a Gentile (non-Jewish) faith. With this progression, it's logical to assume Christian arguments defending their beliefs and practices against Jews would be needed less and less and when no longer used – forgotten.

Following the apostles we should expect the concept of Chinese whispers to take effect as time passes. Only the scriptures remained. The shared Jew-Gentile-Christian context and common knowledge of the first Christian communities would fade into the past.

Where we have differences of opinion over possible and valid interpretations of scripture – especially considering interactions between early Christianity and Judaism. It makes sense to prefer the interpretations of the people immediately after the apostles than those much later.

Period 5 – Augustinian

The Augustinian Period is the time from Augustine, mainly the Roman Catholic Church and up to the Protestant Reformation.

I include Augustine and Pelagius in this time period. But it continues much beyond them. I've called it the Augustinian Period because of the massive influence Augustine has had on church history and in particular the Roman Catholic Church.

Period 6 – Augustinian Reform

The Augustinian Reform Period is the time of the protestant reformation. Martin Luther and John Calvin are prominent examples.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

I've called this period the 'Augustinian Reform' because just as the Roman Catholic church was influenced by Augustines theology of justification, so were the reformers. The reformers were still working within an Augustinian framework when they worked out their own interpretations and theology.

In some cases I will be assessing what the early church fathers have written by comparing them against the justification framework I have discussed in my apostolic mindset series and New Perspective on Paul page.

In the next post we will look at the Epistle of Barnabas. It is traditionally ascribed to Barnabas who is mentioned in the Acts of the Apostles (Acts 4.36; 9.27; 11.22; etc). It was probably written between the years 70 – 131 and addressed to Christian Gentiles. He associates the counting of righteousness with the covenant and argues Christians (Jews and Gentiles) are heirs of the covenant, not the Jews.

The New Perspective on Paul

http://thescripturesays.org/new-perspective-on-paul/

Contents

- Framing
  - Story of Creation
  - Story of Israel / Law
  - Story of Jesus / The Gospel
  - Future Story
- Framing the Story of Israel
  - Judaism (Sanders)
  - The Jewish Law
  - Works of law (Dunn)
  - Righteousness
  - Righteousness and Covenant
  - Righteousness of God (Wright)
- Framing the Gospel
- Justification
  - Imagery of Justification
    - 1. COVENANT (Promises)
    - 2. LAW COURT / FORENSIC (Judgment)
    - 3. SLAVE MARKET (Redemption, Liberation) / KINGDOM (Dominion, Reign)
    - 4. SACRIFICIAL (Blood, Death)
  - The Sinners and the Righteous

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

- Events of Justification
  - 1) Event @ C2 – Sinners are made righteous by the faithfulness of Jesus Christ (C1 to C3)
  - 2) Event @ C3 – People are identified as righteous by their faith in Christ and good works (C3 or C4)
  - 3) Event @ C4 – The final judgment is a rendering according to works
  - Imputation and the Obedience of Christ

Justification in the Early Church – The Early Perspective on Justification http://thescripturesays.org/2016/03/27/justification-in-the-early-church-16-the-early-perspective-on-justification/

Justification and the New Perspective (2011) [blog articles related to these topics]
http://johnharmstrong.typepad.com/john_h_armstrong_/justification_and_the_new_perspective/

JBTSStudies - JBTS Online (Journal of Biblical and Theological Studies) (2016)
Paul's Doctrine of Justification; The Righteousness of God (Magazine with several articles)
http://jbtsonline.org/wp-content/uploads/2016/09/JBTS-1.1-1.pdf [PDF]

A Justification Debate Primer – re: N.T. Wright, et. al. (2010)
https://bible.org/article/justification-debate-primer

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The What and Why of N. T. Wright's Justification

https://21stcenturyreformation.blogspot.com/2010/04/what-and-why-of-n-t-wrights_6287.html

Excerpts;

I have been reading N. T. Wright's Justification for awhile now and I just completed the section on Galatians and Philippians. It is hard to understand the distinction Wright is making and why he feels so determined to make it. Even more amazing is why is Piper and crew so vehemently opposed to Wright's way of thinking. I think the point is the underlying worldview between the two positions. So, I will attempt to articulate Wrights point and show how this relates to his worldview "perspective".

Galatians

Where Wright absolutely shines above all other exegetes is his ability to incorporate the entire book into one cohesive argument. Wright includes all the puzzle pieces in discussing the entire picture of the book of Galatians. (See also: Galatians)

Galatians opens with Paul discussing his dispute with Peter. The book is actually about this practical pastoral problem. When the agitators from James (i.e. Jerusalem) came to Galatia, Peter ate in a kind of separate but equal "for-Jews-only" table. The book is about table unity and what constitutes a person's acceptance and identity as "on of God's people". Most interpreters simply skip over this context and instead answer a different question than the one Paul is answering. Isn't the book about how we as individuals stand before God at the judgment? Isn't righteousness the moral quality needed to be accepted into heaven? Here is the subtle difference. The question is actually better stated "What are the cultural markers that define the people of God?" Now here is the point. The reason we formulate the question in an ecclesiological fashion is because God's ultimate purpose is to build a racially diverse and radically beautiful community here on earth. Salvation is manifested in the context not of a future heaven only but in the context of a present church.

This understanding of the big picture of a very practical and present transformed community is the theological foundation to understand Wrights actual distinction. For this reason, Wright emphasizes the covenant with Abraham to make a great nation and inherit the earth and that every nation will be blessed. If this Paul's vision and emphasis, we must incorporate this emphasis in our reading of Paul. The reformers on the other hand were reading Paul to find the answer to a different question that was facing them in their historical context namely the question of purgatory and indulgences. But this question is not the Paul's question. The question then is how is God fulfilling the covenant of Abraham and making this one community out of both Jews and Gentiles and how does this answer in the Messiah answer Peter's hypocrisy in eating at a separate table and faking that he is a Torah follower.

In this context of community building, we must attach meaning to the term "justification". In this context, the first meaning of justification is being accounted as a full member of the community. The sole marker of being a member of the new eschatological community is "faith in the faithfulness of the Messiah". Through this faith in the work of the faithful Israelite, Jesus the Messiah, we are justified that is we accepted in Him as a member of the community. Therefore, to be declared righteous is to be declared a member of the community. Righteousness is a status and not an account of virtue that is great enough to earn heaven.

Here is a way to understand the distinction by looking at a few illustrations.

The Example of Islam, Pharisees, the Qumran Community, and Understanding First Century Judaism

While reading Wright, it dawned on me, "This is exactly the point of Islam!!" Wright makes the point and I am convinced he is correct that first century Judaism never saw perfect attention to the law as necessary to being acceptable before God. Instead the search was for what are the key markers in Torah to constituting being a faithful Israelite. The key is that posing these markers is then reckoned as righteousness. The question is what are the key markers of a member of the people of God. When we see that this is the theology of Paul and first century Jews, then we understand Paul. For the Pharisee the keys were obviously food regulations and sabbath regulations on top of the obvious circumcision and the calendar. For Muslims this is obvious too. The answer to the Muslim is the five pillars. These are the markers of the true people of God. For the Taliban, the signs are a rigorous punishing of the infidel who refuses the markers. This zeal is the marker. For the Christian the marker is faith in the Christ. This is the only marker and this marker is transcends the Law, Torah, and therefore is the great foundation for ethnic unity. This understanding of the quest for definitions of what constitutes community membership is key to understanding Paul and ALL of his books. This the question being answered in Romans, Philippians, and so clearly Ephesians.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The key then to Wright's exegesis is twofold. First, we must make sure we understand Paul and Paul's entire argument and not bring our own perspective to the text. Secondly, we must maintain the worldview of salvation as the membership in the beautiful community here on earth with an eye to this membership being affirmed in the future.

It is this understanding that informs our understanding of the terms "righteous" and "justification".

Application

Here is another key to understanding Paul's emphasis. Christianity becomes more about the moral beauty of the community than our own personal piety. Most western Christians owner story is the story of maintenance of their personal standing with God through confession and repentance. Of course this is important BUT it is not the most important. God's bigger picture, bigger than your personal virtue, is the righteous functioning of the church community. It is the manifestation of the kingdom in the community that we are to emphasize. This perspective, if you will, transforms our priorities and our approach to the faith in a profound way. Sin is now understandably more about love and the one another commands than smoking and drinking and naughty words. The proper perspective on the centrality of community in this life and the purposes of God to build a community to His glory is more important than our journey to heaven. Here is the key to understanding the "what" and "why" of Paul and the New Testament and therefore putting Paul in proper "perspective".

NT Wright On Justification - Part 1

https://21stcenturyreformation.blogspot.com/2010/02/n-t-wright-on-justification-part-1.html

Excerpt:

I am reading N. T. Wright's book on justification and John Piper's critique of N. T. Wright as well and John Owen's original work on "Justification by Faith" (or here). My goal is actually personal in that I believe my own spiritual growth needs a big dose of grace. As we receive grace, we become more gracious. I have six children and I need a lot of grace to remain gracious. I find good exposition to be sanctifying and inspiring for me.

My blog plan is that while I read I will summarize and make comment.

The first thing one must understand and appreciate is how remarkably conservative N. T. Wright is. Many conservatives seem to paint Wright as a theological liberal but in the pantheon of New Testament scholars N. T. Wright is stand in the solidly if not even extremely conservative camp. In fact in this book, Wright's approach is to flank Piper and co. on the right. It is Wright who appeals to scripture as opposed to tradition. On this note and with many illustrations, Wright begins his book, as he must begin all his more thorough works, with an appeal to method and an explanation of the role worldview of the many actors in hermeneutic process.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

An Appeal to Method and the Role of Worldview

This section and a far more expounded discussion of method (see The New Testament and the People of God) is extremely important to understand thoroughly. The basic point is so simple. The reader must be very aware that, as a subject, he or she plays a role in the reading of the text. If one is humble in light of this awareness, the reader will seek all manner of evidence in an attempt to get to the mind of the author of the biblical text. What we are after is not our experience of the text or confirmation of our previously held convictions regarding the meaning of the text. We are always after the illusive meaning of the text itself. Therefore, it is vital that we tough the world that the author touched by immersing ourselves in the world of the author. This process is called contextualization. Is it not more important to learn about the world of Paul, than the world of the reformers if we are after and seeking to understand the bible. This process of radical doubt concerning our own preconceptions and even doubt about our traditions is the basis of conservatism and sola scriptura.

N. T. Wright illustrates this principle with many illustrations but these will have to wait for tomorrow....

N. T. Wright - Justification God's Plan and Paul's Vision - Part 2

https://21stcenturyreformation.blogspot.com/2010/02/n-t-wright-justification-gods-plan-and.html

Excerpt:

In the opening pages of his response to John Piper's critique, N. T. Wright tries to explain his perspective on the tenor of the dialogue between himself and his reformed critics.

Wright describes a scene where we are attempting to explain to a man who "by some accident of education" had never heard that the earth revolved and rotated. You expalin the solar system and planetary motion with props and passion over a glass of wine. The next morning you wake up to the other man's persistent knock. He takes you to a hilltop over looking the ocean. He returns to the topic of the previous night and then the great evidence arises in the east and he turns and says, "see I told you. There it is before our eyes. Do not let all these new ideas confuse you when the fact is so clear and simple and is right there plain for all to see." Confident that he is the defender of the truth against silly sophistication, he looks at you with a look of almost pity.

How N. T. Wright Flanks Piper on the Right

What is it in the self-satisfied traditionalist that stands in the way of learning? The first few chapters in Wright's justification attempt to convince the traditionalist to consider that maybe there exist strongholds that are impeding their ability to see scriptures clearly. If we can all agree on a few hermeneutical principles, maybe some progress in the dialogue can be made.

So here are the principles as I see them that Wright suggests:

We must look at everything Paul says. If our system cannot explain or account for some passages, then we must be open to a new perspective which can actually account for the entire system of Pauline thought. This suggestion is fundamentally conservative in that this principle is appealing to scripture. A good understanding of scripture must be able to assist in understanding other scriptures.
A sub set of this principle would be that in order to understand a passage we need to be able to understand the entire argument of the passage and how that passage fits in a larger argument.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

As an illustration of this point, Wright uses the analogy of building a puzzle using all the puzzle pieces. If we refuse to use all the puzzle pieces and then force ourselves to make a picture out of the puzzle pieces remaining, we will not get a good picture or a clear understanding of the intended scene. So too, if we do not take every passage into account, we will not be able to understand the entire picture of Pauline thought nor will we have much success or assurance that we understand what little bits we do think we have pieced together.

A second principle is that it is important to look to scriptures and the world of scriptures as opposed to tradition and the world of the 16th century and the thought patterns of the 16th-17th centuries as the authority in scripture interpretation. This point is so obvious and humorous at the same time. Wright is clearly flanking Piper on the right. Is it conservative to point the believers to the 1st century or the 16th? To scripture or tradition? Should we illuminate Paul with the world of Paul or the world of Calvin and Luther?
A great example of this principle is Luther's own appeal to scripture and the world of scripture to make one of the key revelations of the reformation. Luther appealed to 1st century usage of the word metanoia. Luther insisted that a more accurate translation of Pauline though would be "to repent" and not "to do penance". On what basis could Luther make this argument but to go back to scripture and the use of such word elsewhere in the first century. Wright is out reforming the reformed purists by using examples of how the reformers did exactly what he is doing, (i.e. looking to scriptures as the final authority as against our traditions.
A last example of this is to make the distinction between the questions we are attempting to answer via the text and the questions Paul was trying to answer via his text. Every generation has its controversies and every generations theologies are an attempt to answer these controversies. But isn't it more important to understand what Paul problems Paul was trying to solve when he wrote the text. The aim is to avoid eisegesis and get back to exegesis.

If we are honest, each of Wright's principles are an appeal to true scriptural conservatism as opposed to a conservatism that attempts to conserve tradition. Indeed, N. T. Wright is flanking John Piper on the right.

Next post: A little more on worldview (like this old post)

Besides the index links for justification:

Justification / Glossary: Justification / Glossary (NDT): Justification

Justification: The Catholic-Protestant Argument over Justification (Geisler, et al.)

you will also find references to justification throughout this document (just do a search on on the term).

See also*: Imputed Righteousness

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Important Creeds and Councils of the Christian Church (by C.R. Biggs) (2014)
http://thirdmill.org/articles/cr_biggs/cha_biggs.CofC.12.pdf [PDF] (Reformed) (Thirdmill.org)

Excerpt:

What is "Sola Fide"?

Faith is an instrument with no power in and of itself. Faith is the gift of God when He regenerates a lost sinner. This divine ability is given and it is the instrument in which we take hold of Christ by believing in His meritorious life, death and resurrection. Salvation is by works. The works of Christ alone applied to the sinner, received by faith. "Strictly speaking, the true Christian church does not teach justification by faith. It teaches justification by Christ. Where does the faith come in? It is simply the uniting with, becoming one with, the Lord Jesus Christ. Being married to Christ, all that is His becomes His bride's, the believer's…that is the meaning of the word 'reckons' or imputes or credits. The justified one 'does not work, but trusts God who justifies the wicked' (Rom. 4:5)." - John Gerstner, 'Justification by Faith Alone'

Roman Catholicism: Faith + Works = (brings) justification

Modern Evangelicalism: Faith = (brings) justification - works

Reformed Theology: Faith = (brings) justification + works

See also: Reformed Theology vs Lutheranism vs Calvinism vs Weslyanism

Creeds of the Christian Church

Patheos/JesusCreed: New Perspective (Category) (Links to related articles) http://www.patheos.com/blogs/jesuscreed/category/new-perspective/

Patheos/JesusCreed: What's the Old Perspective? (Scot McNight) (2015)
http://www.patheos.com/blogs/jesuscreed/2015/03/09/whats-the-old-perspective-on-paul/

Excerpt:

I've not seen the old perspective on soteriology, as framed mostly through one reading of Paul, expressed any better than in Carl Trueman's sketch of Luther's theology at work in the Heidelberg Disputation (slightly reformatted):

To get a fuller view of the old perspective than is found in what is quoted below one has to bring in not only the Old Testament and law but also Judaism and works of the law and tie them to an Augustinian anthropology. Not all of this is present in this summary, but the anthropology of self-deception is the foundation on which the whole posture toward law and works of the law and ultimately Judaism will be formed — and what Luther had to say about Judaism later in his life is, in the words of Trueman, "nauseating" (54). There are a number of factors at work in Luther's statements about the Jews, but one of them had to do with his anthropology as it was aimed at "law." …

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Two Perspectives on Paul (Lutheran / Traditional Perspective vs The "New Perspective")

http://normtroubles.blogspot.com/2007/09/two-perspective-on-paul.html (Bruce Fisk)

Excerpt:

Lutheran / Traditional Perspective versus
The "New Perspective"

Central Concern

Justification: how can sinners be made right before God?

Gentile inclusion: on what terms may Gentiles join God's people?

State of 1st c. Judaism

Burdened by the Law; dead in sin; marked by hypocrisy and legalism; bound up with sin, death & law (in contrast to grace, life & faith).

Vibrant, dynamic, diverse; a religion of grace; pattern of religion: "covenantal nomism*" (Sanders); in (spiritual) exile (Wright)

> *"Covenantal Nomism" (according to Sanders): the notion that the Israelite's place in God's plan is determined by the covenant which God established with Israel, and that obedience to the law is Israel's proper response to God's initial act of grace. (NOTE: "nomism" is from Greek for "law")

The Law in Judaism

Onerous burden for those who broke it; cause of boasting for those who kept it.

A gracious, delightful gift from God, "holy and righteous and good" (Rom 7:12; Ps 119:97)

Paul's problem with Judaism

Legalism: it promotes legalistic works righteousness; merit theology; pride in accomplishments; faulty view of grace and works

Nationalism / racism / exclusivism / particularism: the role of the Law in establishing boundary markers, Jewish privilege (Dunn); "It is not Christianity" (Sanders)

Paul's condition prior to conversion

A frustrated, guilt-ridden sinner who valued works over faith, and who struggled unsuccessfully to measure up to the Law's demands (Rom 7:14-24).

A Law-keeping (blameless) Pharisee who denied Jesus was God's Messiah (Gal 1:14; Phil 3:4-8). Images of a distressed Paul are projections of the West's "introspective conscience."

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Paul's conversion

Paul leaves his now-dead ancestral religion and its Law to trust and follow Christ. Paul rejects Law-keeping as impossible and/or pride-producing.

Paul is not "converted" from Judaism but "called" within it to be the apostle to the Gentiles (Stendahl). Paul didn't so much convert from Judaism but to Christianity (Sanders). See 2 Cor 3:4-18; Phil 3:3-11.

Justification by faith

The center / organizing principle of Paul's Gospel: God's gracious declaration that a sinner is right before God through his faith in Christ's work. God's response to human failure / pride.

A "subsidiary crater" in Paul's thought (Schweitzer); a polemical / apologetic doctrine developed to defend the full status of Gentile converts and to refute Jewish-Christian efforts to impose circumcision, etc. on them.

Paul's Gospel

Repent of dead works and trust in Christ's atoning work to be justified / saved (Rom. 3:21-24). Key antithesis: Law versus Gospel.

Jesus is the anointed, risen and exalted Lord over all nations (Wright; Rom 1:1-5). Salvation comes by transfer to the realm of his lordship, by union with / participation in Christ (Sanders; 2 Cor 5:17; Rom 6:3-7).

Paul's reasoning

Forward: from plight to solution: Law-sin-guilt à faith in Christ à justification apart from Law

Backward: from solution to plight (Sanders): Christ à various (unsystematic, inconsistent, incompatible) assessments of sin & Law (Gal 2:21; 3:19, 24-25; Rom 3:20; 4:15; 10:4)

Or: From plight to solution to plight (Wright): exile à Christ à sin / law

Theme of Romans

A "compendium of Christian doctrine" (Melancthon).
A theological treatise on justification by grace through faith.
Romans 9-11 are a parenthesis.

An occasional document defending the faithfulness of God (to the nations, to Israel) and the co-equal status of Jews and Gentiles.
Romans 9-11 are the climax of the letter.

Works of the Law (erga nomou, e.g. Rom.3:28)

Striving to do good; good works performed for salvation

Observing Torah; what pious Jews do; only bad when imposed on Gentiles; passé because it excludes Gentiles.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Pistis Christou (e.g., Ga.2:16) [See also: Pistis Christou]

Faith in Christ (objective genitive; anthropological reading) (Dunn)

Faith(fulness) of Christ = subjective genitive; Christological reading (Hays)

Paul and Caesar: A New Reading of Romans (2002)

http://ntwrightpage.com/2016/07/12/paul-and-caesar-a-new-reading-of-romans/

Excerpt:

When we set Paul's gospel, not least the letter to the Romans, against the context of the widespread and increasing Caesar-cult of his day, with all that it implied, we discover a fresh perspective, a new angle on familiar passages, which informs and to an extent modifies traditional readings.

This is not to suggest in any way — to anticipate the most obvious criticism! — that the major theological or religious subject matter of Romans has been set aside or relativized. On the contrary. The critique of the powers which Paul has in mind depends precisely on a thoroughgoing and well worked out theology, not least a very high Christology and a strong doctrine of justification, and is fortified by the explicitly Christian religion from which and to which Paul writes. To show how this works out — to integrate Paul's explicit and implicit polemic against paganism in general, the powers in particular, and the Caesar-cult especially, within his wider theology and exegesis — is a long and complicated task. I hope I have shown that it is both necessary and fruitful.

N.T. Wright: Paul

http://ntwrightpage.com/2016/04/05/paul/

Excerpt:

…Since the Reformation, it has been customary to read Paul as the enemy of 'legalism' in religion (see Law and Gospel). Though important in its own way, this issue does not represent Paul's central thrust. Instead, the contemporary church would do well to learn from Paul the true significance of Christ-shaped monotheism and of the new covenant in the Spirit, which together provide the basis, rationale, content and pattern for the church's life and, particularly, its responsibility for world-wide mission.

N. T. Wright (1948–) has been named by Christianity Today as one of today's top theologians. He earned a Bachelor of Arts in Theology, Masters in Anglican ministry, and DPhil from University of Oxford.

A fellow and chaplain at Cambridge from 1978–81, he then served as assistant professor of New Testament language and literature at McGill University in Montreal. Before becoming a chaplain, tutor, lecturer and fellow at Oxford in 1986, Wright served as dean of Lichfield Cathedral, Canon Theologian of Westminster Abbey, and Bishop of Durham. Wright is currently Professor of New Testament and Early Christianity at St. Andrews University.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Theopedia: N.T. Wright

Excerpt:

Nicholas Thomas ("Tom") Wright (b. 1948) is an Anglican theologian and Professor of New Testament and Early Christianity at the University of St Andrews, Scotland. He was formerly Bishop of Durham until August, 2010. Wright received his D.Phil. and D.D. degrees from Oxford, and taught New Testament studies for twenty years at Cambridge, McGill and Oxford Universities. He is an expert on the historical Jesus, especially his resurrection. Wright is also well known as an exponent of the New Perspective on Paul, especially on the topic of justification. His Christian Origins and the Question of God book series forcefully counters the " Liberal Myth of Christian Origins" heresy that is popular among some liberal factions.

Wikipedia: N.T. Wright - Wikipedia

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/N._T._Wright

Excerpt:

Nicholas Thomas Wright (born 1 December 1948) is a leading British New Testament scholar, Pauline theologian, and retired Anglican bishop. In academia, he is published as N. T. Wright, but is otherwise known as Tom Wright. Between 2003 and his retirement in 2010, he was the Bishop of Durham. He then became Research Professor of New Testament and Early Christianity at St Mary's College in the University of St Andrews in Scotland.

He writes prolifically about theology, Christian life, and the relationship of these two things. He advocates a biblical re-evaluation of and fresh approach to theological matters such as justification, women's ordination, and popular Christian views about life after death. He has also criticized the idea of a literal Rapture. Alternate source: Fulcrum website. The author of over seventy books, Wright is highly regarded in academic and theological circles primarily for his "Christian Origins and the Question of God" series. The third volume, The Resurrection of the Son of God, is considered by many pastors and theologians to be a seminal Christian work on the resurrection of the historical Jesus, while the most recently released fourth volume, Paul and the Faithfulness of God, is hailed as Wright's magnum opus.

Facebook: N.T. Wright

The Work of the People: N.T. Wright

http://www.theworkofthepeople.com/person/nt-wright

More NT Wright videos at "The Work of the People"

http://www.theworkofthepeople.com/list/people/nt-wright

YouTube: N.T. Wright – Topic

https://www.youtube.com/channel/UCPaAVYSXqkGjgWEp3zGd1_g [Videos]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

NT Wright Resource Page for Bible Study and Small Groups
https://www.readthespirit.com/nt-wright-bible-scholar-interviews-and-book-reviews-resource-page-for-bible-study/

N.T. Wright Online (Courses / fee required)
https://www.udemy.com/user/nicholasthomaswright/

N. T. Wright | Lectures | Sermons | Discussions | Interviews (188+ Videos)
https://www.youtube.com/playlist?list=PLR2I5rwcF854ldr0ZjZAGnGNdOOURNhwy

Podcasts

Nomad 85- The Man Behind the Theology: N.T. Wright (Interview; Podcast) (2015)
http://feedproxy.google.com/~r/TheNtWrightPodcast/~5/aKioo3V780s/Nomad_85_Tom_Wright_4.mp3 [Audio]

NT Wright on Seminary Dropout (2015) [Audio]
https://www.podcastchart.com/podcasts/the-n-t-wright-podcast/episodes/nt-wright-on-seminary-dropout

Justification & New Perspective on Paul (2015) [Audio]
https://www.podcastchart.com/podcasts/the-n-t-wright-podcast/episodes/justification-new-perspective-on-paul

What's so Great About the Apostle Paul? (2014) [Audio]
https://www.podcastchart.com/podcasts/the-n-t-wright-podcast/episodes/what-s-so-great-about-the-apostle-paul

Heaven is Not the End of the World (2014) [Audio]
https://www.podcastchart.com/podcasts/the-n-t-wright-podcast/episodes/heaven-is-not-the-end-of-the-world

A New Creation-Shaped Church (2014) [Audio]
https://www.podcastchart.com/podcasts/the-n-t-wright-podcast/episodes/a-new-creation-shaped-church

The Jesus of Myth and History (2014) [Audio] https://www.podcastchart.com/podcasts/the-n-t-wright-podcast/episodes/the-jesus-of-myth-and-history

Many more

BioLogos – N.T. Wright Blog
http://biologos.org/author/nt-wright

Considering N.T. Wright (Sharing Laity Lodge)
http://www.markdroberts.com/htmfiles/resources/ntwright.htm

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The New Perspective on Paul: A Brief Essay [PDF]
http://assets.bakerpublishinggroup.com/processed/esource-assets/files/405/original/hyperlink-11-03.pdf?1417294004

Excerpt:

New Perspective on Paul: An Example

What does this verse of scripture mean?

> A person is justified by faith, apart from works of the law. (Rom. 3:28)

Traditional Interpretation
People are put right with God by trusting in what God has graciously done through Jesus Christ rather than by doing things that would earn God's favor. In this view, works of the law = meritorious acts of human achievement (keeping commandments, performing good works, etc.).

New Perspective
People are put right with God by trusting in what God has graciously done through Jesus Christ rather than by being faithful to the covenant that God made with Israel. In this view, works of the law = covenant markers that identify Jews as belonging to God's chosen nation (circumcision, Sabbath observance, dietary restrictions, etc.).

Paul and Judaism: The Apostle in the Context of Recent Interpretation
https://wordandworld.luthersem.edu/content/pdfs/20-3_Galatians/20-3_Aageson.pdf [PDF]

Beyond Covenantal Nomism: Paul, Judaism and Perfect Obedience
http://basketoffigs.org/NewPerspectives/das.pdf [PDF] (NOTE: "nomism" is from Greek for "law")

Sanders' Errors on Paul, Jews and Justification [PDF]
http://internetbiblecollege.net/Lessons/Sanderserrorson%20Paul,%20Jews%20&%20justification.pdf

The New Perspective: Paul, Luther and Judaism
http://www.biblicalstudies.org.uk/pdf/sbet/22-1_004.pdf [PDF]

Wikipedia: E. P. Sanders
https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/E._P._Sanders [PDF]

N.T. Wright – 4QMMT and Paul: Justification, 'Works', and Eschatology (2006)
http://ntwrightpage.com/files/2016/05/Wright_4QMMT_Paul.pdf [PDF] (See also: 4QMMT)

N.T. Wright – Justification: The Biblical Basis and Its Relevance for Contemporary Evangelicalism (1980)
http://ntwrightpage.com/1980/01/01/justification-the-biblical-basis-and-its-relevance-for-contemporary-evangelicalism/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Paul Page

http://www.thepaulpage.com/
an expanding website dedicated to exploring recent trends in Pauline studies like "the new perspective on Paul", "Summary of the New Perspective on Paul", and "Paul and Empire."

What is this new perspective?
At its core is the recognition that Judaism is not a religion of self-righteousness whereby humankind seeks to merit salvation before God. Paul's argument with the Judaizers was not about Christian grace versus Jewish legalism. His argument was rather about the status of Gentiles in the church. Paul's doctrine of justification, therefore, had far more to do with Jewish-Gentile issues than with questions of the individual's status before God.

The New Perspective on Paul (Dunn) (c. 2008)

http://markgoodacre.org/PaulPage/New.html

The Shape of Justification (NT Wright) (2009)

http://www.thepaulpage.com/the-shape-of-justification/

N.T. Wright and New Insights on Paul http://www.jerrybowyer.com/podcasts/JerryBowyer--NTWright.mp3 [Audio]

Paul and Empire
Whereas the new perspective on Paul considers Paul's writings in the context of first-century Judaism, a more recent trend in Pauline studies considers Paul's writings in the political context of imperial Rome. This development, pioneered most notably by scholars like Richard Horsley, Neil Elliott, and more recently John Dominic Crossan, was described as a "fresh" perspective on Paul by N.T. Wright in his 2000 Manson Memorial Lecture.

Might the new perspective and this more recent aspect of Pauline studies be considered two distinct but interrelated (complementary?) aspects of what may be more accurately characterized as a quest for the historical Paul? Perhaps this is a question that will be answered only in hindsight.

What Is the New Perspective on Paul? How Should It Be Assessed? (Reformed)

https://blogs.thegospelcoalition.org/justintaylor/2010/10/11/what-is-the-new-perspective-on-paul-how-should-it-be-assessed/

Excerpt:

Summary. (Note: article by Gospel Coalition, 2010).
The foundation of the New Perspective on Paul, allegedly proved by Sanders, is not nearly as secure as some claim. We have significant evidence that Paul rejects the law because of human inability and that some of his opponents had fallen prey to legalism. Even if the New Perspective falls short of providing an adequate explanation of Paul's view of the law, it rightly observes that the inclusion of the Gentiles was a major theme in Pauline theology. What the proponents fail to explain as convincingly is how the Gentile inclusion into the people of God should be integrated with Paul's theology of law. Finally, I have indicated here that scholars have shown that Sanders's reading of the Jewish sources is overly simplistic. A careful reading of the Jewish sources indicates that some Jews emphasized the role of obedience for obtaining eschatological salvation.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Question: "Is the New Perspective on Paul biblical?" (Argues it is NOT.)
https://www.gotquestions.org/New-Perspective-Paul.html

The New Perspective on Paul
http://www.trinityfoundation.org/journal.php?id=237

NT Wright: How Paul Invented Christian Theology
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=WkcjFHYIugY [Video]

Paul and Caesar: A New Reading of Romans (2002)
http://ntwrightpage.com/2016/07/12/paul-and-caesar-a-new-reading-of-romans/

NT Wright: Righteousness (originally published in New Dictionary of Theology [NDT])
http://ntwrightpage.com/2016/07/12/righteousness/

NT Wright: On Becoming the Righteousness of God (1993) http://ntwrightpage.com/2016/05/07/on-becoming-the-righteousness-of-god/ [Downloadable PDF]

Question:
How do your views of justification relate to what is taught in the 39 Articles on justification? Where do you agree/disagree with the Articles?
http://ntwrightpage.com/2016/04/25/wrightsaid-qa-january-2004/

Answer:
I agree with Articles 11, 12 and 13 which deal with this subject. But I do think that the word 'merit' in article 11 ('…only for the merit of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ') needs unpacking. Clearly in C16/C17 theology it played a particular role, which is not too far from that of Romans 5 where the obedience of the Messiah is the ground of 'the many' being declared to be `in the right'. But – this is perhaps a critical difference between my reading of Paul and that of some others – I do not see Paul saying that justification is what happens when the righteousness of Christ is imputed to us; I see him saying (in Romans 6, classically) that the death and resurrection of Christ is to be reckoned to us. This needs teasing out further. I have tried to stress in various places that I am not trying to deny what the reformers were trying to affirm, only to ground in more fully biblical thinking the underlying truths of the faith. In particular (let me just say this to those out there who may need to hear it!) I am often puzzled and distressed when people question whether I really believe in the substitutionary meaning of Jesus' death. I would simply say: read my published sermons; read chapter 12 of Jesus and the Victory of God; ask yourself, not whether I go through the hoops of all the words that your tradition has told you we should say, but whether I represent fairly what scripture, and Jesus himself, said about the meaning of his death. That is my only aim.

Wikipedia: New_Perspective_on_Paul
https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/New_Perspective_on_Paul

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

NT Wright: Justification

http://ntwrightpage.com/2016/04/05/justification/

Excerpt:

JUSTIFICATION denotes, primarily, that action in the lawcourt whereby a judge upholds the case of one party in dispute before him (in the Hebrew lawcourt, where the image originates, all cases consist of an accuser and a defendant, there being no public prosecutor). Having heard the case, the judge finds in favour of one party, and thereby 'justifies' him: if he finds for the defendant, this action has the force of 'acquittal'. The person justified is described as 'just', 'righteous' (on the terminology, see Righteousness), not as a description of moral character but as a statement of his status before the court (which will, ideally, be matched by character, but that is not the point).

Since this lawcourt imagery is used in Scripture to elucidate God's dealings with Israel, his covenant people, 'justification' comes to denote God's action in restoring the fortunes of Israel after she has been oppressed: it is as though Israel, or a faithful individual within Israel, is the innocent defendant in a trial (see Pss. 43:1; 135:14; Is. 50:8; Lk. 18:7), whose cause will be upheld by the righteous covenant God. As Israel's troubles increase in the period after the exile, it becomes increasingly clear that what is needed is a final day of judgment, when God will right all wrongs, and vindicate his people, once and for all. This notion, which is closely correlated with the hope of resurrection (God's vindication of Israel after her suffering) is staunchly upheld in the NT.

Early Traditions and the Origins of Christianity (1998)

http://ntwrightpage.com/2016/04/05/early-traditions-and-the-origins-of-christianity/

Creation and Covenant (2005)

http://ntwrightpage.com/2016/04/05/creation-and-covenant/

NT Wright Sermon: Those whom he justified, he also glorified (Rom. 8:17-39) (2013)

http://ntwrightpage.com/2016/03/30/those-whom-he-justified-he-also-glorified/

NTWright: Justification: Yesterday, Today, and Forever (2011) (Lecture)

http://www.etsjets.org/files/JETS-PDFs/54/54-1/JETS_54-1_49-63_Wright.pdf [PDF]

N.T. Wright on Justification and Sanctification (2011)

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=ii5YHwrkEpQ [Video] (5 min.)

NT Wright: Mind, Spirit, Soul and Body: All for One and One for All Reflections on Paul's Anthropology in his Complex Contexts

http://ntwrightpage.com/2016/07/12/mind-spirit-soul-and-body/

See also: Trichotomy, Dichotomy or Monism?

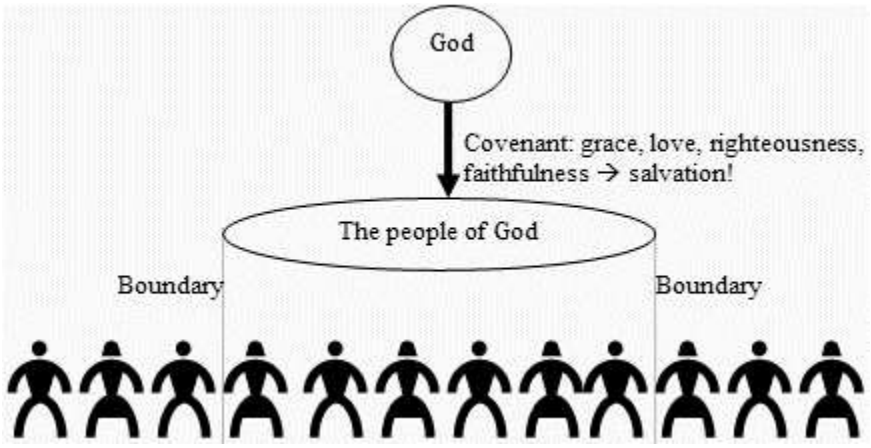
 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

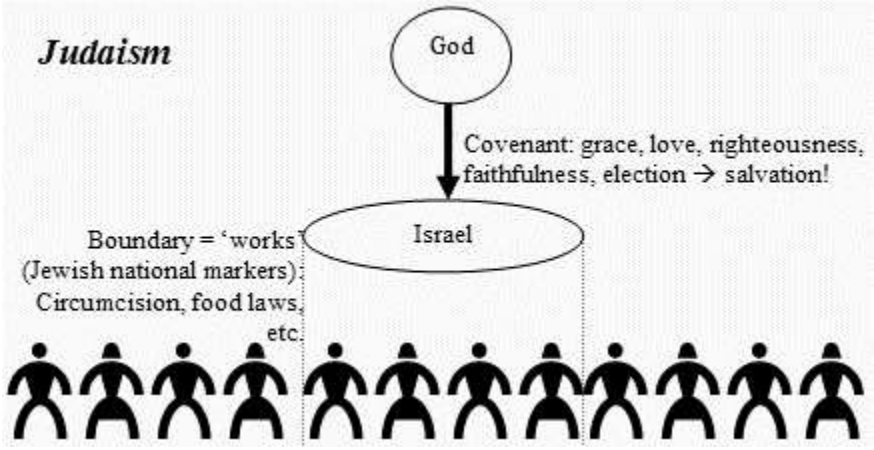
The New Perspective on Paul: Summary and Reflections



http://www.lionelwindsor.net/2006/02/01/the-new-perspective-on-paul-summary-and-reflections/

Excerpt:

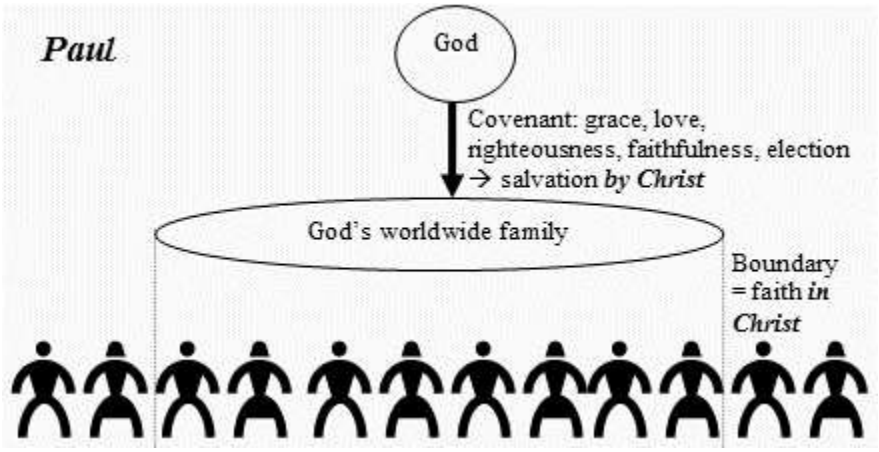
…N. T. Wright claims that he is adopting 'a covenantal reading of Paul'. For Wright, 'covenant' is the key to understanding all of Paul's letters. Righteousness is 'covenant membership', justification is 'the declaration of covenant membership', faith is 'the badge of covenant membership', etc. Although Wright never really defines 'covenant', here (in broad brushstrokes) is what I think he means by the concept.



Basically, 'covenant' is the way that God relates to humanity. 'Covenant' defines a closely-related or even synonymous entity called the 'people of God' (or 'God's worldwide family', or 'The Church'). This 'people' has distinct 'boundaries' which define who is 'in' or 'out'. Diagrammatically, I think this is a fair representation of Wright's schema of the relationship between God and his people:

Wright's view of the covenant:

…



Wright's New Perspective on Judaism:

…

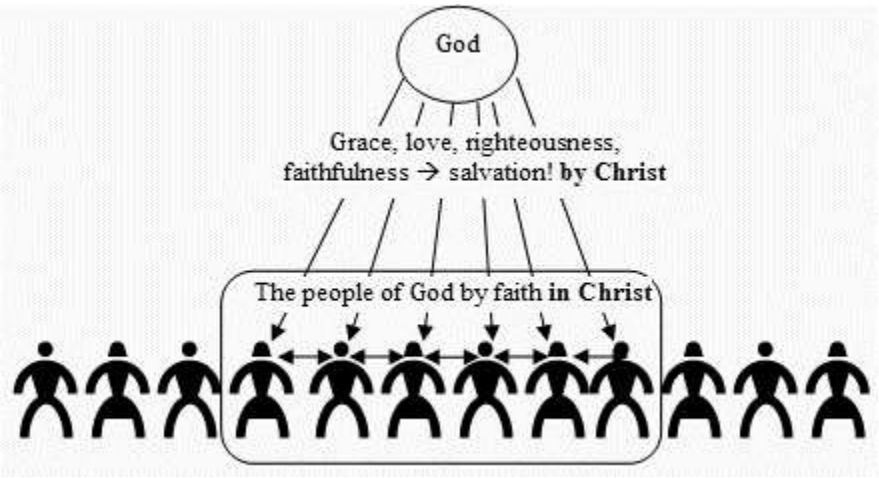
 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Wright's New Perspective on Paul:

…

How 'covenant' redefines other concepts

Here is a summary of some of Wright's statements in his commentary on Romans that help us to see how he redefines certain traditional Protestant words in the light of his 'covenantal' reading.[12] According to Wright:



- the gospel is not a message first and foremost about how humans get saved but an announcement about Jesus, the Messiah, i.e. the covenant head of the people of God.
- the law is not a principle or a moral regulation but it is the Torah, which includes ceremonies that can estrange Jew and Gentile but whose ultimate ground is faith.
- sin is not individual transgression of the rules of the law but The fall of Adam, in which all humans are incorporated. Its main effect is estrangement between people, particularly Jew and Gentile.
- God's righteousness is not God's justice in rewarding the godly and punishing the ungodly but God's faithfulness to his covenant, which may even involve forgiving sinners in order to remain faithful to the covenant.
- our righteousness is not an undeserved, imputed state of non-condemnation from God but membership of the covenant people of God.
- justification is not a description of how somebody becomes a Christian but the verdict of righteousness at the last day based on covenant membership, now able to be pronounced on all who have the badge of covenant membership (faith).
- grace is the work of Christ in bringing us into the covenant plus the work of the Spirit in making us act in line with the covenant.
- sacrifice / propitiation is the mysterious and complex removal of God's wrath at sin from his covenant people (not so much from the individual) by the death of the Messiah.
- faith is not a spiritual act which gains merit for the sinner in place of works [N.B. this is Wright's understanding of the Protestant view, but not the Reformer's view] but the badge of membership in the people of God, given by God's sheer grace, which includes Christlike trust and active Christlike loyalty to God.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

- works are not the keeping of moral regulations to earn God's favour but ceremonies which distinguish Israel from the nations

…I think the following diagram presents a better understanding of the 'people of God'.

…

Muting the gospel

I also find intriguing a recent newspaper article by a non-Christian journalist describing her experience of having friends in a Christian group. The journalist describes how she was both attracted to and repelled by the group. The attraction, to her, was the sense of 'community' that gave the group cohesion and caused her to envy them. But she was also overwhelmingly repelled by their use of the word of God which, in her mind, placed 'boundaries' on who was 'in' and who was 'out'. She had seemingly not heard about the death and resurrection of Christ (which is what she should have been attracted and repelled by!). That is, she had not actually heard the gospel. However, she had surmised from the speech and behaviour of this group that Christianity was all about whether you were included or excluded from the community. This may be just her misunderstanding, and certainly she does not have the full picture. However, it is worrying, because, at least in this case, the idea of 'community' had replaced the work of Christ as the central tenet of Christian witness to an unbeliever. The New Perspective may well have been at work in this group.

Being found outside of Christ

The greatest danger I can see is that the 'people of God' (in Wright especially) has been drastically redefined. It has morphed away from being the community of individuals whom God loves, and has become a separate entity which one must join. This new so-called 'people of God', if it isn't held in check, may well turn into a beast that claims to be a mediator between the individual and God. In seeking to be justified by joining this alien entity, we may find ourselves outside of Christ and his benefits (cf. 1 Tim 2:5). This is a very grave danger indeed.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

N.T. Wright and the New Perspective on Paul

http://www.ligonier.org/learn/articles/nt-wright-and-new-perspective-paul/

Excerpt:

The new perspective offers some good insights but seems to introduce its own distortions. Of course all our traditions must be judged by Scripture, and we are all creatures of our own age.

The new perspective seems to react to the excessive individualism among many Protestants. It has reflected with some sense of guilt, and rightly, on Christian complicity in the Holocaust, and it recognises the importance of Christian unity, bewailing, again rightly, the Protestant/Roman Catholic divide in a spiritually needy world. Its interpretations seems more influenced by such factors at crucial points than by what Scripture actually says. (The Presbyterian Banner, May 2002)

The "New Perspective on Paul" in about 1,000 Words

https://pursiful.com/2012/04/10/the-new-perspective-on-paul-in-about-1000-words/

Excerpt:

Note: NPP [New Perspective on Paul] is more a general trend in Pauline scholarship than a codified, monolithic theological system. NPP-scholars can argue with each other just as much as traditionalists do.

The Basics

1. A "new perspective on Judaism." NPP begins by attempting to arrive at a more accurate understanding of the Judaism of Paul's own day—including passages in Paul's letters where he sounds quite positive about the Jewish law (e.g., Rom 7:12; Phil 3:5-6).

- Protestants have tended to read Luther's conflict with Catholicism into Paul's conflict with the Judaizers (e.g., in Galatians). NPP insists the two are not the same.
- Sanders: Early Judaism had just as strong an emphasis on grace as Pauline Christianity did. Observing the law merely kept Jews in the covenant God had established through his gracious election ("covenantal nomism"). Jews keep the Torah not to get into heaven, but because they're Jewish.
- Rather than a form of legalism hoping to earn God's favor by good works, NPP says first-century Judaism strove to maintain the identity of the Jewish nation, especially by keeping those aspects of the Torah that set them apart: Sabbath-observance, dietary rules, and circumcision.

2. Applying this understanding of Judaism to Paul. Having reached these conclusions about early Judaism, what are the implications for one's understanding of Paul? NPP tries to read Paul in light of his own issues and concerns, rather than those of a later era.

- General conclusion: Paul was much more interested in the problem of the Jewish-Gentile relationship in God's covenant than in a Luther-like struggle with his own sense of guilt before a holy God

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

- What is Paul's problem, then, with "the works of the law"? According to NPP, when Paul speaks of "the works of the law" he has in mind only the "boundary-marker" aspects. His problem isn't legalistic self-righteousness in general, but how these aspects of the Torah served to exclude Gentiles.
- Note that "Old Perspective" need not mean "Wrong Perspective." Some scholars—including Wright himself—insist the two perspectives can exist side by side. (Wright explicitly upholds all of the most central doctrines of the Reformation.) It's more an issue of what is the central focus in Paul's thought.

Old Perspective	New Perspective
Anthropocentric: how human beings become right with God	Theocentric and Christocentric: God's lordship in Christ over the entire universe
"Works of the law" = human acts of righteousness performed to earn acceptability before God	"Works of the law" = elements of Jewish law that accentuate Jewish privilege and mark out Israel from other nations
"Justification" related to the doctrine of salvation: "What must I do to be saved?"	Justification related to the doctrine of the church: "Who is a member of the people of God?"
"Faith" = trust in God's mercy alone, not in human acts of righteousness	"Faith" = trust in God's mercy alone, not in boundary-marking rituals like circumcision
A "Romans Road" approach: "You can be forgiven and live forever in heaven"	An "Ephesians Road" approach: "God is restoring all of creation, and you can join in"

Strengths of the New Perspective

1. It accentuates the universal focus of God's dealings in Christ: both Jew and Gentile are included.
2. It sets Paul in his proper historical context: Paul can be Paul rather than being Augustine or Luther.
3. It cautions Christians about how we speak about Judaism in our conversations about Scripture.

Reasonable Concerns

(see Gathercole, although Wright later addresses many of these issues)

1. First-century Judaism does, in fact, occasionally speak of heavenly rewards for law-keeping.
2. Is Paul speaking strictly of things like circumcision when he speaks of "works of the law," or is he thinking of keeping the law in its entirety?
3. Criticism of "individualistic" old-perspective thinking can throw the baby out with the bath water. Individual and corporate faith are not at odds with one another.
4. One should not confuse the content of justification with its applications. The core meaning of justification is about how believers, despite their sin, can be reckoned as righteous before God.
5. Seeing justification as primarily addressing how Gentiles can be incorporated into the people of God can lead to a downplaying of sin.
6. Since the emphasis in some discussions of justification is on inclusion, tolerance, and ecumenism, there can be a tendency to downplay the importance of doctrinal clarity.

Unreasonable Concerns

1. "NPP abandons the Reformation view of Paul and justification." The appeal to tradition is precisely the sort of objection the medieval Catholic Church raised against the Reformers! Shouldn't Protestants of all people want to go back to the Bible and "see whether these things are so" (Acts 17:11)?

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

2. "NPP doesn't support powerful evangelistic preaching." This objection skirts dangerously close to "the end justifies the means." Isn't it better to trust that the truth will lead to powerful preaching, whether it is consistent with traditional interpretations of Paul or not?

Further Reading

- Michael Bird, "After the New Perspective – Part 1" … "Part 2" … "Part 3"
- Craig Blomberg, Review of Justification: God's Plan and Paul's Vision by N. T. Wright
- Simon Gathercole, "What Did Paul Really Mean?"
- Mark D. Roberts, "N. T. Wright and the 'New Perspective on Paul'"
- "Scot McKnight's New Perspective Primer"

Paul's New Perspective: Charting a Soteriological Journey (book review)
http://www.thepaulpage.com/pauls-new-perspective-charting-a-soteriological-journey/

The Achilles Heel of the New Perspective on Paul (Reformed)
https://www.michaeljkruger.com/the-achilles-heel-of-the-new-perspective-on-paul/

Who's Really Influenced by Their Cultural Situation? A Deep Irony in the New Perspective on Paul (Reformed)
https://www.michaeljkruger.com/whos-really-influenced-by-their-cultural-situation-a-deep-irony-in-the-new-perspective-on-paul/

The "Righteousness" of Romans and Galatians, and the Gospel of Christ http://www.thepaulpage.com/the-righteousness-of-romans-and-galatians-and-the-gospel-of-christ/includes several perspectives, including the alternative of the New Perspective on Paul and section on "resolving the tensions".

Tom Wright: Galatians Introduction – St. Andrews (2011)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=IZUDuBu1xvY

Justification in Paul: A Comparison of Galatians with Romans
https://www.academia.edu/10100395/Justification_in_Paul_A_Comparison_of_Galatians_with_Romans_paper_SBL_San_Diego_2014_?auto=download [PDF] (Note: Registration/Login may be required)

"Justification" by N.T. Wright – Reviewed by Dr. Michael Horton (2009)
https://www.whitehorseinn.org/images/Horton-WrightReview.pdf [PDF] (whitehorseinn.org)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Hermeneutics (II) Concerning the New Perspective on Paul [PDF]
http://alpharetta-bible-study.com/images/PDFs/2013/05%20-%20HERMENEUTICS%20%282%29%20by%20Marc%20Gibson.pdf

(Hermeneutics (I))

N.T. Wright extends debate with John Piper by releasing Apostle Paul tome
http://religionnews.com/2013/11/06/nt-wright-john-piper-paul-debate-tome/ (Interview by John Merritt)

The Shape of Justification http://ntwrightpage.com/2016/04/05/the-shape-of-justification/
(A misunderstood term has caused great confusion in understanding Paul, and it's time to get it right.)

N.T. Wright Under Review (by Thomas Schreiner)
http://www.augsburgfortress.org/media/downloads/Wright_PaulandtheFaithfullnessofGod_CredoMagazine_1_31_2014.pdf [PDF]
Revisiting the Apostle Paul and His Doctrine of Justification

N.T. Wright on Romans (Summarization)
https://theologicalsweets.wordpress.com/2011/05/07/n-t-wright-on-romans/

NT Wright on Romans . . . in 22 Minutes! (Introduction) (Links to the video) (2011)
http://thebiblicalworld.blogspot.com/2011/08/nt-wright-on-romans-in-22-minutes.html

Direct Link to Video: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=7glk-aSt-TM [Video]

Another Introductory Version: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=wwtDUpWYEcY [Video]

N. T. Wright Romans: Introduction (20 minutes) (2016)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=wwtDUpWYEcY [Video]

Prof. N.T. Wright presents an introduction to Paul's Epistle to the Romans. This is a part of the course on Romans available soon at ntwrightonline.org/romans/

How God Became King : Why We've All Misunderstood the Gospels | N. T. Wright
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Mks4gYcjpXc [Video] (2012) (Calvin College) [Recommended]

N.T. Wright: Paul for Tomorrow's World, Part 1 - Lecture (2015) (William Jessup Univ.)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=UX1GSVR0Tdc [Video]

N.T. Wright: Paul for Tomorrow's World, Part 2 - Q&A (2015)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Tso7vBdkS0U [Video]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Dr. N. T. Wright Student Q&A (2014) [Recommended]
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=bptERDE44ck [Video]

Dr. N. T. Wright Academic Review (2014)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=3Fiw4kqrYj0 [Video]

Seminar - Paul - N.T. Wright (2014)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=hP56P1DQMOY [Video]

This panel discussion was part of a Lanier Theological Library Seminar Series held on Friday March 21, 2014. Dr. N.T. Wright, Dr. Bruce Corley, and Dr. Ross Wagner participate in a panel discussion on the Apostle Paul with a considerable concentration on Paul"s intended meaning in Romans chapters 9-11 as well as other issues.

Panel Members are:

Dr. N.T. Wright (Professor. University of St. Andrews)

Dr. Bruce Corley (Former President, Now Professor of New Testament and Greek. B.H. Carroll Theological Institute)

Dr. Ross Wagner (Associate Professor, Duke Divinity School)

Mark Lanier, Moderator

The Rt. Rev. N.T. Wright - "The Challenge of Pauline Theology" https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Kc9Pvlo-YoM [Video]

Simply Wright: "The Jesus We Never Knew" https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=3iTQuM8f8LY [Video] https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=AbFxzrLt97w [Video]

Simply Wright: "Jesus and the Future"
Part 1: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=AbFxzrLt97w [Video]

Part 2: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=o8PixgTOGKs [Video]

Simply Wright: "Jesus at the Crossroads of History"
Part 1: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=BgOzZJodlyA [Video]

Part 2: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=x-TU8oNn5go [Video]

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

How God Became King : Why We've All Misunderstood the Gospels | N. T. Wright
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Mks4gYcjpXc [Video] (2012) (Calvin College) [Recommended]

You're Included: How God Became King (N.T. Wright, interviewed by Dr. Gary Deddo)
Part 1: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=IEHliSDNxa4 [Video] (2016)

Part 2: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=FEmIQspS6xc [Video]

NT Wright: What did it mean to call Jesus "God"? (2013)
http://www.patheos.com/blogs/jesuscreed/2013/11/05/what-did-it-mean-to-call-jesus-god-nt-wright/

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Regarding the Resurrection of Jesus the Messiah (Christ)

See also*: Occurrences of Jesus Risen/Resurrected Mentioned by Apostles in the Bible

Easter in Durham? N.T. Wright's The Resurrection of the Son of God – REVIEW
http://www.biblicalstudies.org.uk/pdf/anvil/21-4_285.pdf [PDF]

https://biblicalstudies.org.uk/pdf/anvil/21-4_walton.pdf [PDF]

Another review: http://jimhamilton.info/2013/05/28/review-of-n-t-wrights-the-resurrection-of-the-son-of-god/

Negative review: http://www.robertmprice.mindvendor.com/rev_ntwrong.htm
[Alt. Link: https://www.preteristarchive.com/2003_price_wright/]

The Resurrection of the Son of God
http://images.acswebnetworks.com/1/2320/NTWrightResurrectionNotesPartIbyDMiller.pdf
Condensed, paraphrased, and summarized by Duncan C. Miller, Sc.D.

Why is the Resurrection So Important? (Randy Alcorn)
http://www.christianity.com/god/jesus-christ/why-is-the-resurrection-so-important.html

Resurrection and Rock'n'Roll: N.T. Wright's Easter Morning Sermon
https://scottemery.wordpress.com/2010/04/11/resurrection-and-rocknroll-n-t-wrights-easter-morning-sermon/

NT Wright: Why we can trust that Jesus was really resurrected (2017)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Ln6LWHe84SQ [Video]

T Wright: Why Jesus' resurrection really happened (2017)
https://www.premierchristianity.com/Blog/NT-Wright-Why-Jesus-resurrection-really-happened

N.T. Wright on the Resurrection ("Did Jesus Really Rise from the Dead?") (2007)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=KnkNKIJ_dnw [Video] (Lecture March 16, 2007 in the Bast Center, Roanoke College; the lecture begins around the 8:40 mark)

Did Jesus Rise from the Dead? (Frank Turek of impact360institute.org/) [Recommended] https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=TyZ1l7faKSw [Video] (Animated, discusses 5 points)

4 Historical Facts that Prove Jesus Really Did Rise from the Dead (2016)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=RmKg62GDqF4 [Video]
Why would anyone believe that Jesus Christ was crucified, buried and then rose from the dead three days later? Dr. William Lane Craig explains four historical facts, accepted by the majority of historical scholars, that lead to the conclusion that Jesus really did rise from the dead. John Ankerberg Show

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Minimal Facts of the Resurrection
http://pleaseconvinceme.com/2013/the-minimal-facts-of-the-resurrection/

Quick overview of N.T. Wright's case for the resurrection https://winteryknight.com/2009/03/24/quick-overview-of-nt-wrights-case-for-the-resurrection/

How every Christian can learn to explain the resurrection of Jesus to others https://winteryknight.com/2009/03/06/how-every-christian-can-learn-to-explain-the-resurrection-of-jesus-to-others/

The Resurrection Argument That Changed a Generation of Scholars - Gary Habermas at UCSB (2002): https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=ay_Db4RwZ_M [Video] [Recommended]
(includes discussion of basic Gospel from 1 Cor. 15 of D-D-R-B = Deity, Death, Resurrection, Belief)

Gary Habermas explains the earliest source of resurrection facts https://winteryknight.com/2009/04/03/gary-habermas-explains-the-earliest-source-of-resurrection-facts/

Excerpt:

> Timeline of New Testament sources [Minimal Facts Argument] [Also]
>
> You can only use the data that pass these criteria when you are constructing historical hypotheses in a debate setting. But the passage of 1 Corinthians 15:3-7 is special, because it has the markings [of] an ancient creed. As Habermas explains, Paul received this creed within five years of the crucifixion. Paul verified this creed twice with eyewitnesses, Peter, John and James, in Galatians 1:11-24 and Galatians 2:1-10.
>
> So, let's set the date of Jesus' death as being 30 AD. Then ask the question: what sources are closest to the event? We need to have multiple early sources in order to be able to surface minimal facts that can be used when debating skeptics and atheists. Here's the timeline, using the absolute latest possible dates for the sources:
>
> - 30 A.D.: Jesus is crucified. (+0)
> - 31 A.D.: The early creed originates around this time
> - 35 A.D.: Paul receives the early creed from Peter, John and James in Jerusalem
> - 55 A.D.: 1 Corinthians (+25)
> - 70 A.D. Mark (+40)
> - 80 A.D. Matthew (+50)
> - 85 A.D. Luke (+55)
> - 95 A.D. John (+65)
>
> My preferred dates on the gospels are at least 5 years earlier than the skeptical dates. So, your earliest source for minimal facts about the resurrection is 1 Corinthians 15:3-7. I explained before how to leverage the facts in 1 Cor 15, and other minimal facts, into a case for the resurrection.

The Resurrection of Resurrection - N.T. Wright (2000)
http://ntwrightpage.com/2016/04/05/the-resurrection-of-resurrection/

See also:

Galatians

The Gospel

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Christian Origins and the Resurrection of Jesus: The Resurrection of Jesus as a Historical Problem (1998) [Recommended]

http://ntwrightpage.com/2016/07/12/christian-origins-and-the-resurrection-of-jesus-the-resurrection-of-jesus-as-a-historical-problem/

See also: Reliability of the Bible

Occurrences of Jesus Risen/Resurrected Mentioned by Apostles in the Bible

Jesus' Resurrection and Christian Origins (review) (2002) http://ntwrightpage.com/2016/07/12/jesus-resurrection-and-christian-origins/

Excerpt (Intro):

The question of Jesus' resurrection continues to haunt the thinking and writing of many scholars. I shall not debate in detail with them here; there are other places for that. I want instead to sketch, in broad strokes, a historical argument about what happened three days after Jesus' crucifixion.

The question divides into four.
First, what did people in the first century, both pagans and Jews, hope for? What did they believe about life after death, and particularly about resurrection?
Second, what did the early Christians believe on the same subjects? What did they hope for?
Third, what reasons did the early Christians give for their hope and belief, and what did they mean by the key word 'resurrection' which they used of Jesus?
Finally, what can the historian say by way of comment on this early Christian claim?

Quote by N.T. Wright on the Bodily Resurrection of Jesus:

"You see, the bodily resurrection of Jesus isn't a take-it-or-leave-it thing, as though some Christians are welcome to believe it and others are welcome not to believe it. Take it away, and the whole picture is totally different. Take it away, and Karl Marx was probably right to accuse Christianity of ignoring the problems of the material world. Take it away, and Sigmund Freud was probably right to say that Christianity is a wish-fulfillment religion. Take it away, and Friedrich Nietzsche was probably right to say that Christianity was a religion for wimps. Put it back, and you have a faith that can take on the postmodern world that looks to Marx, Freud and Nietzsche as its prophets, and you can beat them at their own game with the Easter news that the foolishness of God is wiser than men, and the weakness of God is stronger than men." — N.T. Wright, For All God's Worth: True Worship and the Calling of the Church

Note: For details on Freud, Nietzsche, Marx and philosophies critical to Christianity, see my separate references resource: Christian Scholarship: Biblical – Theological – Philosophical

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Resurrection and the Postmodern Dilemma – N.T. Wright (1998)
http://ntwrightpage.com/2016/04/05/the-resurrection-and-the-postmodern-dilemma/

N.T. Wright on the Enlightenment, postmodernism, and common misreadings of scripture (2012)
https://rachelheldevans.com/blog/wright-common-misreadings-scripture?rq=wright

The Bible for the Post Modern World – N.T. Wright (1999)
http://www.biblicaltheology.ca/blue_files/The%20Bible%20for%20the%20Post%20Modern%20World.pdf [PDF]

N.T. Wright on Post-Modernity and the Enlightenment (links to Video) http://benwitherington.blogspot.com/2009/05/nt-wright-on-post-modernity-and.html

See also:* Worldviews

Note: For details on Postmodernism and other philosophies impacting the Church, see my separate references resource:* Christian Scholarship: Biblical – Theological – Philosophical

Eric Metaxas: Science Increasingly Makes the Case for God (2014)
http://ericmetaxas.com/media/articles/science-increasingly-makes-case-god/

Can a Scientist Believe in the Resurrection? (2007)
http://www.jamesgregory.org.uk/series-1/can-a-scientist-believe-in-the-resurrection/

Here is a lecture (that link has PDF transcript, audio and videos) that Wright gave on the resurrection as part of the "James Gregory public lectures on Science, Religion, and Human Flourishing" (Univ. of St. Andrews, Scotland)

N.T. Wright explains seven "mutations" caused by the resurrection
https://winteryknight.com/2011/08/05/n-t-wright-explains-seven-mutations-caused-by-the-resurrection/

Excerpt:

N.T. Wright's historical case for the bodily resurrection of Jesus

Wright basically argues that the resurrection cannot have been a myth invented by the early Christian community, because the idea of the Messiah dying and being bodily resurrected to eternal life was completely unexpected in Jewish theology, and therefore would not have been fabricated.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

In Judaism, when people die, they stay dead. At the most, they might re-appear as apparitions, or be resuscitated to life for a while, but then die again later. There was no concept of the bodily resurrection to eternal life of a single person, especially of the Messiah, prior to the general resurrection of all the righteous dead on judgment day.

Wright's case for the resurrection has 3 parts:

- The Jewish theological beliefs of the early Christian community underwent 7 mutations that are inexplicable apart from the bodily resurrection of Jesus
- The empty tomb
- The post-mortem appearances of Jesus to individuals and groups, friends and foes

Here's the outline of Wright's case:

…the foundation of my argument for what happened at Easter is the reflection that this Jewish hope has undergone remarkable modifications or mutations within early Christianity, which can be plotted consistently right across the first two centuries. And these mutations are so striking, in an area of human experience where societies tend to be very conservative, that they force the historian… to ask, "Why did they occur?"

The mutations occur within a strictly Jewish context. The early Christians held firmly, like most of their Jewish contemporaries, to a two-step belief about the future: first, death and whatever lies immediately beyond; second, a new bodily existence in a newly remade world. 'Resurrection' is not a fancy word for 'life after death'; it denotes life after 'life after death'.

And here are the 7 mutations:

1. Christian theology of the afterlife mutates from multiples views (Judaism) to a single view: resurrection (Christianity). When you die, your soul goes off to wait in Sheol. On judgment day, the righteous dead get new resurrection bodies, identical to Jesus' resurrection body.
2. The relative importance of the doctrine of resurrection changes from being peripheral (Judaism) to central (Christianity).
3. The idea of what the resurrection would be like goes from multiple views (Judaism) to a single view: an incorruptible, spiritually-oriented body composed of the material of the previous corruptible body (Christianity).
4. The timing of the resurrection changes from judgment day (Judaism) to a split between the resurrection of the Messiah right now and the resurrection of the rest of the righteous on judgment day (Christianity).
5. There is a new view of eschatology as collaboration with God to transform the world.
6. There is a new metaphorical concept of resurrection, referred to as being "born-again".
7. There is a new association of the concept of resurrection to the Messiah. (The Messiah was not even supposed to die, and he certainly wasn't supposed to rise again from the dead in a resurrected body!)

   There are also other historical puzzles that are solved by postulating a bodily resurrection of Jesus.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

1. Jewish people thought that the Messiah was not supposed to die. Although there were lots of (warrior) Messiahs running around at the time, whenever they got killed, their followers would abandon them. Why didn't Jesus' followers abandon him when he died?
2. If the early Christian church wanted to communicate that Jesus was special, despite his shameful death on the cross, they would have made up a story using the existing Jewish concept of exaltation. Applying the concept of bodily resurrection to a dead Messiah would be a radical departure from Jewish theology, when an invented exaltation was already available to do the job.
3. The early church became extremely reckless about sickness and death, taking care of people with communicable diseases and testifying about their faith in the face of torture and execution. Why did they scorn sickness and death?
4. The gospels, especially Mark, do not contain any embellishments and "theology historicized". If they were made-up, there would have been events that had some connection to theological concepts. But the narratives are instead bare-bones: "Guy dies public death. People encounter same guy alive later." Plain vanilla narrative.
5. The story of the women who were the first witnesses to the empty tomb cannot have been invented, because the testimony of women was inadmissible under almost all circumstances at that time. If the story were invented, they would have invented male discoverers of the tomb. Female discovers would have hampered conversion efforts.
6. There are almost no legendary embellishments in the gospels, while there are plenty in the later gnostic forgeries. No crowds of singing angels, no talking crosses, and no booming voices from the clouds.
7. There is no mention of the future hope of the general resurrection, which I guess they thought was imminent anyway.

To conclude, Wright makes the argument that the best explanation of all of these changes in theology and practice is that God raised Jesus (bodily) from the dead. There is simply no way that this community would have made up the single resurrection of the Messiah – who wasn't even supposed to die – and then put themselves on the line for that belief.

And remember, the belief in a resurrected Jesus was something that the earliest witnesses could really assess, because they were the ones who saw him killed and then walking around again after his death. They were able to confirm or deny their belief in the resurrection of Jesus based on their own personal experiences with the object of those beliefs.

Can a Scientist Trust the New Testament? (2014)

http://www.jamesgregory.org.uk/series-2/can-a-scientist-trust-the-new-testament/

Here is another lecture (that link has PDF transcript, audio and videos) that Wright as part of the "James Gregory public lectures on Science, Religion, and Human Flourishing" (Univ. of St. Andrews, Scotland)

Jesus Bodily Resurrection vs Greek philosophy - N.T. Wright

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=jzWgcRFaOpw [Video]

See also*: Greek Philosophy / Greek Philosophy use by Paul

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Did Jesus Really Rise from the Dead? Dr. N.T. Wright (Bast Center) (2007)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=KnkNKIJ_dnw [Video]

(@ about 13min, he briefly talks about "Kingdom of Heaven" in Matthew and then "Life after Life after Death" followed by history of concept of death in pagan and Jewish worlds.)

N.T. Wright - Death, Resurrection, and Afterlife (2003)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=HXAc_x_egk4 [Video] Resurrection is the point at which God's creation (mercy) and God's justice meet.

See also: Reliability of the Bible

Occurrences of Jesus Risen/Resurrected Mentioned by Apostles in the Bible

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

N.T. Wright Defends Resurrection in first point-counterpoint forum (2005)

http://www.bpnews.net/20376

Excerpt:

N.T. Wright and John Dominic Crossan voice divergent views on the resurrection in the inaugural Greer-Heard Point-Counterpoint Forum at New Orleans Seminary. by Katherine Albers

N.T. Wright and John Dominic Crossan were the featured speakers for the inaugural Greer-Heard Point-Counterpoint Forum at New Orleans Seminary. Wright, an Anglical evangelical scholar, defended the literal, bodily resurrection of Jesus, while Crossan, a professor emeritus at DePaul University, set forth a metaphorical interpretation of the resurrection. by Katherine Albers

Continued…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

NEW ORLEANS (BP)--“Enormous forces in our culture are determined to deny that Jesus was raised from the dead,” N.T. Wright, an Anglican evangelical scholar, said.

“Over and over again, they use arguments that can be shown to be invalid and propose alternative scenarios which can be shown to be impossible.”

Wright and John Dominic Crossan, a member of the Jesus Seminar, voiced divergent views of the resurrection during the inaugural Greer-Heard Point-Counterpoint Forum at New Orleans Baptist Theological Seminary March 11. (Wikipedia: NOBTS)

Wright, bishop of Durham, England, defended the literal, bodily resurrection of Jesus as the only tenable view, while Crossan, a professor emeritus at DePaul University, set forth a metaphorical interpretation of the resurrection.

To begin the forum, each speaker was given 20 minutes to explain his beliefs. During the following dialogue, both Crossan and Wright questioned each other and clarified their positions.

Wright began by examining some of the common attempts to explain away the resurrection. He said one argument proposes that ancient people did not understand the laws of nature and were, therefore, more inclined to accept unsophisticated answers.

“That is simply absurd,” Wright said. “The ancients knew perfectly well that dead people didn’t rise. We didn’t need modern science to tell us that.”

Others have pointed to Hellenistic and pagan stories featuring empty graves and visions of the dead as the reason the early church began to believe in the resurrection. But Wright said these stories are completely different from the biblical resurrection accounts.

The presence of resurrection beliefs in Judaism cannot account for the focus on Jesus’ resurrection in the early church either, Wright said, noting that resurrection was peripheral in Judaism, or not a foundational part of the Jewish beliefs. In Christianity, the resurrection of Jesus is central.

“I’ve shown conclusively that [the Apostle] Paul really did believe in the bodily resurrection despite generations of critics going back as far as the second century trying to make out that he didn’t,” Wright said.

The empty tomb and Jesus’ appearances caused the early church to believe in His bodily resurrection, Wright said, noting that the empty tomb and the resurrection appearances taken together constitute a sufficient condition for belief in the resurrection.

“Having examined as many of the alternative explanations I could find and having shown them all to be completely inadequate, the one we are left with, however unlikely, must press itself upon us as being true,” Wright said. “It is only with the bodily resurrection of Jesus, demonstrating that His death dealt a decisive blow to evil, that we could find the proper grounds for calling the kingdoms of earth to submit to the Kingdom of God.”

Crossan, on the other hand, said he believes the mode of the resurrection is secondary to the meaning of the resurrection. Though taking a metaphorical approach to the resurrection, Crossan maintained that, whether one believes in a literal or metaphorical resurrection, the implications of the resurrection should make a difference in the world today.

“We are talking about cosmic transformation from a world of injustice, impurity and violence into a world of justice and peace and purity and holiness,” he said.

Crossan denied that the empty tomb and the appearances of Jesus served as a sufficient cause for the rise of resurrection belief in the early church.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

“That would get you to the exaltation,” Crossan said. “It would get you to the conclusion that Jesus has been exalted, maybe even to the right hand of God.... Something else is absolutely needed to make that leap of faith [to belief in a literal, bodily resurrection].”

Crossan said Jesus’ words about launching the Kingdom of God caused the early church to believe in the resurrection.

“If you want to debate what has to be taken literally and what has to be taken metaphorically, it is a perfectly valid debate,” Crossan said. “But there is something else -– the question of meaning.”

Crossan said he would like to hear someone who takes the resurrection literally share the implications of that belief, asking how that belief could change the world.

“Tell me that from your literal reading,” he said. “I will try, as one who takes it metaphorically, to spell out the implications from a metaphorical reading.”

Those who disagree over the mode of the resurrection, whether literal or metaphorical, will find common ground in the area of meaning, Crosson said.

During the dialogue time, Wright pressed Crossan on the use of “literal and metaphorical.” Wright argued for the use of the terms “concrete and abstract.”

“Often we use the terms literal and metaphorical when, actually, we mean concrete and abstract,” Wright said. “I do think it makes an enormous difference if you say that what happened on Easter day was not a concrete event.”

Wright also challenged Crossan to explain the changes that occurred as believers in Christ moved from Judaism and other cultures to Christianity.

“Something happened which caused all those Christians from very different backgrounds to transform the beliefs their cultures had given them into this remarkable new shape,” Wright said.

Crossan, however, spoke again of Jesus’ teaching on the Kingdom of God.

“I think for me it’s extraordinarily important that the historical Jesus, the Jesus of the Gospels, has already made an announcement,” he said. “It is not that the Kingdom is beginning. It is that the Kingdom has begun. When He sends people out, I think these people ... experienced part of the Kingdom.”

Crossan said he believes the early believers saw apparitions rather than the literal risen Jesus. The apparitions along with their experience with the Kingdom, Crossan said, caused the dramatic shift in their beliefs.

Wright responded, “I agree with you that Jesus’ proclamation of the Kingdom and their awareness of the power of God through the preaching of Jesus is one of the preconditions for the eventual interpretation at which they arrived.” But, he said, “I don’t think those by themselves would have been sufficient to generate anyone saying, ‘He has been raised from the dead.’”

New Orleans Seminary President Chuck Kelley described the dialogue, which was attended by about 1,000 people in Leavell Chapel, as “a great opportunity for our seminary family and many other guests to see how we can dialogue with the world and get the Gospel out there without sacrificing our convictions ... a great model for how to take a strongly held belief like we have in the resurrection and then share and defend that belief with those who don’t accept it.”

The forum continued on March 12 with a number of noted scholars responding to Crossan and Wright, including presentations by Gary Habermas, distinguished professor of apologetics and philosophy at Liberty University; Craig Evans, Payzant distinguished professor in New Testament at Acadia Divinity College; R. Douglas Geivett, professor of philosophy at Talbot School of Theology; Chuck Quarles, associate professor of New Testament and Greek at NOBTS; William Lane Craig, research professor at Talbot School of Theology; and Ted Peters, interim president at Pacific Lutheran Seminary. Responses from Wright and Crossan followed each speaker.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

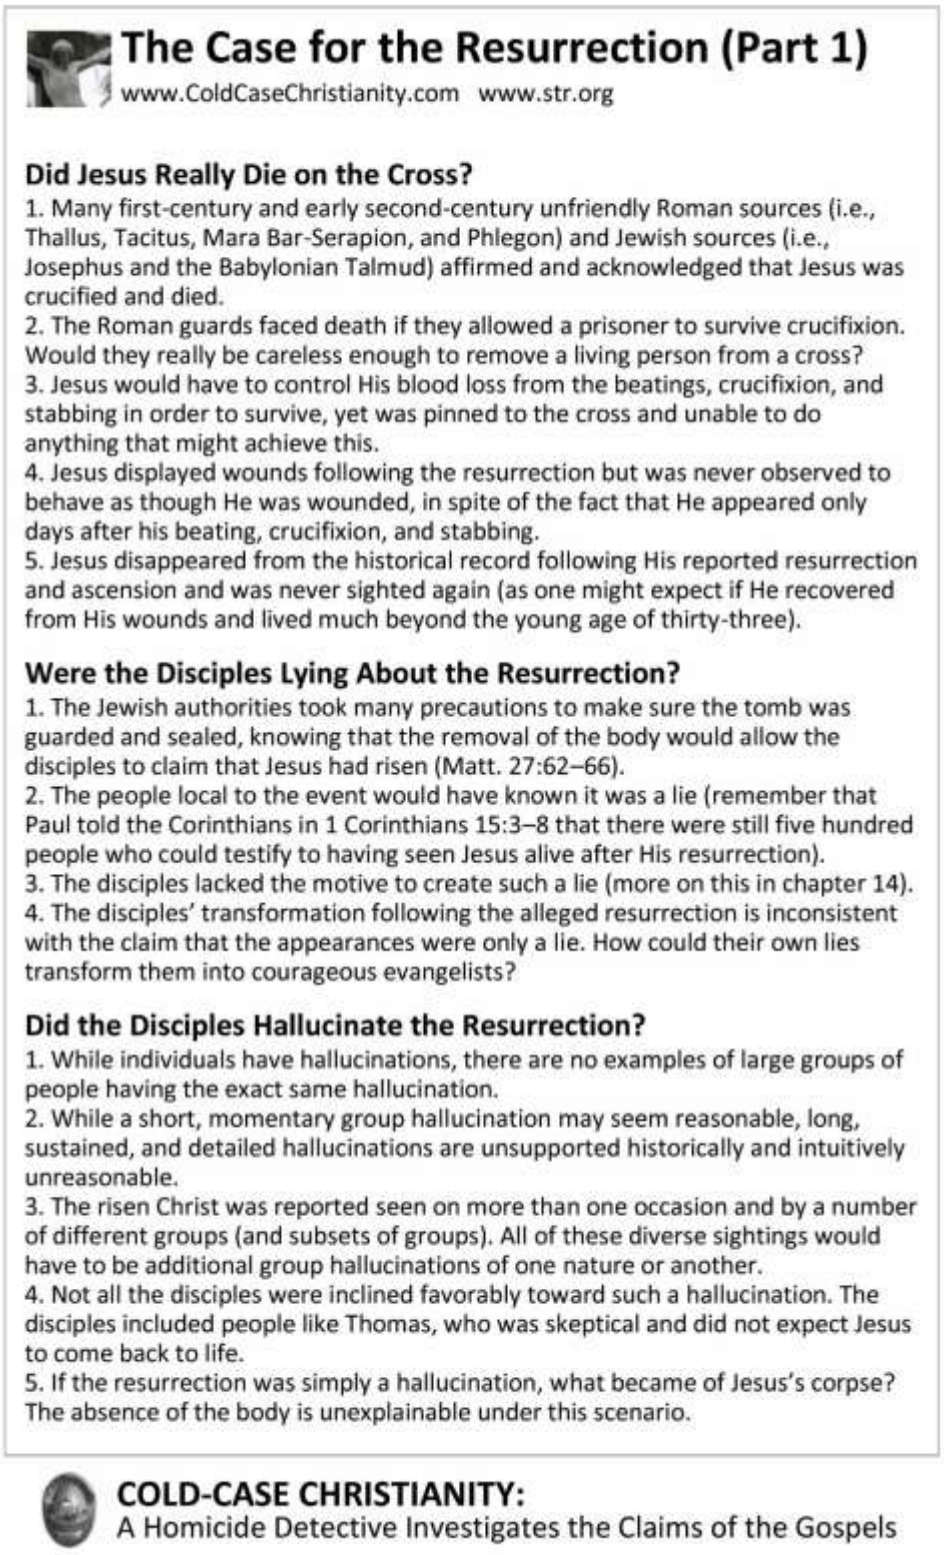
Numerous other evangelical scholars were present because the Southwest regional meeting of the Evangelical Theological Society, the Evangelical Missiological Society and the Evangelical Philosophical Society met that weekend on the NOBTS campus in conjunction with the Greer-Heard Forum.

Established through a gift from Bill and Carolyn Heard, the forum was designed to help students and ministers learn to think critically and to be prepared to engage secular society. The Heards were on hand for the inaugural event.



“This is exactly what Bill and I initially envisioned for this event,” said Bob Stewart, assistant professor of philosophy and theology at NOBTS. Stewart occupies the Greer-Heard Chair of Faith and Culture and was responsible for planning the forum.

Stewart announced that the Friday night dialogue, along with the papers presented Saturday and a few additional articles, will be published by Fortress Press in North America and by SPCK in Europe in the spring of 2006. Audio CDs of this year’s forum are also available, and may be ordered online at www.greer-heard.com.

See also : Occurrences of Jesus Risen/Resurrected Mentioned by Apostles in the Bible

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Additional Proof of the Resurrection of Jesus (Part 1 of 2)

The Case for the Resurrection (Part 1)

www.ColdCaseChristianity.com www.str.org

Did Jesus Really Die on the Cross?

1. Many first-century and early second-century unfriendly Roman sources (i.e., Thallus, Tacitus, Mara Bar-Serapion, and Phlegon) and Jewish sources (i.e., Josephus and the Babylonian Talmud) affirmed and acknowledged that Jesus was crucified and died.
2. The Roman guards faced death if they allowed a prisoner to survive crucifixion. Would they really be careless enough to remove a living person from a cross?
3. Jesus would have to control His blood loss from the beatings, crucifixion, and stabbing in order to survive, yet was pinned to the cross and unable to do anything that might achieve this.
4. Jesus displayed wounds following the resurrection but was never observed to behave as though He was wounded, in spite of the fact that He appeared only days after his beating, crucifixion, and stabbing.
5. Jesus disappeared from the historical record following His reported resurrection and ascension and was never sighted again (as one might expect if He recovered from His wounds and lived much beyond the young age of thirty-three).

Were the Disciples Lying About the Resurrection?

1. The Jewish authorities took many precautions to make sure the tomb was guarded and sealed, knowing that the removal of the body would allow the disciples to claim that Jesus had risen (Matt. 27:62–66).
2. The people local to the event would have known it was a lie (remember that Paul told the Corinthians in 1 Corinthians 15:3–8 that there were still five hundred people who could testify to having seen Jesus alive after His resurrection).
3. The disciples lacked the motive to create such a lie (more on this in chapter 14).
4. The disciples' transformation following the alleged resurrection is inconsistent with the claim that the appearances were only a lie. How could their own lies transform them into courageous evangelists?

Did the Disciples Hallucinate the Resurrection?

1. While individuals have hallucinations, there are no examples of large groups of people having the exact same hallucination.
2. While a short, momentary group hallucination may seem reasonable, long, sustained, and detailed hallucinations are unsupported historically and intuitively unreasonable.
3. The risen Christ was reported seen on more than one occasion and by a number of different groups (and subsets of groups). All of these diverse sightings would have to be additional group hallucinations of one nature or another.
4. Not all the disciples were inclined favorably toward such a hallucination. The disciples included people like Thomas, who was skeptical and did not expect Jesus to come back to life.
5. If the resurrection was simply a hallucination, what became of Jesus's corpse? The absence of the body is unexplainable under this scenario.

COLD-CASE CHRISTIANITY:
A Homicide Detective Investigates the Claims of the Gospels

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Case for the Resurrection (Part 2 of 2)

The Case for the Resurrection (Part 2)

www.ColdCaseChristianity.com www.str.org

Were the Disciples Fooled by an Imposter?

1. The impersonator would have to be familiar enough with Jesus's mannerisms and statements to convince the disciples. The disciples knew the topic of the con better than anyone who might con them.
2. Many of the disciples were skeptical and displayed none of the necessary naïveté that would be required for the con artist to succeed.
3. The impersonator would need to possess miraculous powers; the disciples reported that the resurrected Jesus performed many miracles and "convincing proofs" (Acts 1:2–3).
4. Who would seek to start a world religious movement if not one of the hopeful disciples? This theory requires someone to be motivated to impersonate Jesus other than the disciples themselves.
5. This explanation also fails to account for the empty tomb or missing body of Jesus.

Were the Disciples Influenced by Limited Spiritual Sightings?

1. The theory fails to account for the numerous, divergent, and separate group sightings of Jesus that are recorded in the Gospels. These sightings are described specifically with great detail. It's not reasonable to believe that all these disciples could provide such specified detail if they were simply repeating something they didn't see for themselves.
2. As many as five hundred people were said to be available to testify to their observations of the risen Christ (1 Cor. 15:3–8). Could all of these people have been influenced to imagine their own observations of Jesus? It's not reasonable to believe that a persuader equally persuaded all these disciples even though they didn't actually see anything that was recorded.
3. This explanation also fails to account for the empty tomb or the missing corpse.

Were the Disciples' Observations Were Distorted Later?

1. In the earliest accounts of the disciples' activity after the crucifixion, they are seen citing the resurrection of Jesus as their primary piece of evidence that Jesus was God. From the earliest days of the Christian movement, eyewitnesses were making this claim.
2. The students of the disciples also recorded that the resurrection was a key component of the disciples' eyewitness testimony (more on this in chapter 13).
3. The earliest known Christian creed or oral record (as described by Paul in 1 Corinthians 15) includes the resurrection as a key component.
4. This explanation also fails to account for the fact that the tomb and body of Jesus have not been exposed to demonstrate that this late legend was false.

Were the Disciples Telling the Truth?

1. This explanation has only one liability: It requires a belief in the supernatural; a belief that Jesus had the supernatural power to rise from the dead in the first place.

COLD-CASE CHRISTIANITY:
A Homicide Detective Investigates the Claims of the Gospels

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Resurrection of Believers

NOTE: For issues and details related to Heaven and life after death, as well as covering related topics and including different perspectives (including N.T. Wright) - see my separate "Reference Notes on Heaven" (based in part on the book, Heaven, by Randy Alcorn)

Surprised by Hope: Justin Martyr and the Didascalia Apostolorum

http://oneinjesus.info/2009/01/surprised-by-hope-justin-martyr-and-the-didascalia-apostolorum/

Excerpt:

Back in the summer, I wrote a series of posts around N. T. Wright's book Surprised by Hope, regarding the nature the end of time. Wright argues — quite convincingly — that the Bible teaches a bodily resurrection in a remade New Heaven and New Earth, with heaven coming down to earth to join the two into a Paradise in which we'll live with the Trinity forever.

Well, I've been reading In the Shadow of the Temple, by Oskar Skarsaune, regarding the Jewish roots of Christianity. It's a good book, although not light reading by any means. I doubt I'll post much about it, but it has this interesting quote from the Second Century Christian Justin Martyr:

> Moreover, I pointed out to you that some who are called Christians, but are godless, impious heretics, teach doctrines that are in every way blasphemous, atheistical, and foolish. … For I choose to follow not men or men's doctrines, but God and the doctrines [delivered] by Him. For if you have fallen in with some who are called Christians, but who do not admit this [truth], and venture to blaspheme the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob; who say there is no resurrection of the dead, and that their souls, when they die, are taken to heaven; do not imagine that they are Christians, even as one, if he would rightly consider it, would not admit that the Sadducees, or similar sects of Genistæ, Meristæ, Galilæans, Hellenists, Pharisees, Baptists, are Jews (do not hear me impatiently when I tell you what I think), but are [only] called Jews and children of Abraham, worshipping God with the lips, as God Himself declared, but the heart was far from Him. But I and others, who are right-minded Christians on all points, are assured that there will be a resurrection of the dead, and a thousand years in Jerusalem, which will then be built, adorned, and enlarged, [as] the prophets Ezekiel and Isaiah and others declare.

(Dialogue with Trypho, chapter 80). Now, it's critically important to realize that "resurrection" in First Century language refers exclusively to a bodily resurrection. Justin was condemning Platonists who argued that the soul is immortal but the body is not, so that the soul goes to heaven while the body is never resurrected.

The Third Century Didascalia Apostolorum says,

> And by other false prophets beside was the enemy working. [vi. 10] And they all had one law upon earth, that they should not employ the Torah and the Prophets, and that they should blaspheme God Almighty, and should not believe in the resurrection.

(23: vi. 10).

An interesting note is that the condemnation of those who deny the resurrection of the dead seems to have been taken straight from rabbinic teaching —

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

These are they that have no share in the world to come: he that says there is no resurrection of the dead prescribed in the Law … .

(Danby, Mishnah, p. 397 quoted by Skarsaune at 244).

As stated in the Wikipedia article on resurrection —

> The Apostles' Creed explicitly ends with an affirmation of belief in "the resurrection of the body".
>
> The Christian writers Irenaeus and Justin Martyr, in the 2nd Century, wrote against the idea that only the soul survived. Justin insists that a man is both soul and body and Christ has promised to raise both, just as his own body was raised. He wrote: "Seeing as … the Saviour in the whole Gospel shows that there is salvation for the flesh, why do we any longer endure those unbelieving and dangerous arguments, and fail to see that we are retrograding when we listen to such an argument as this: that the soul is immortal, but the body mortal, and incapable of being revived? For this we used to hear from Pythagoras and Plato, even before we learned the truth. If then the Saviour said this, and proclaimed salvation to the soul alone, what new thing, beyond what we heard from Pythagoras and Plato and all their band, did He bring us? But now He has come proclaiming the glad tidings of a new and strange hope to men."

Strange, isn't it, that a doctrine considered essential early on has been nearly entirely forgotten. Indeed, if you argue for a bodily resurrection, you're considered a little strange.

Now, I don't say any of this to argue that those denying a bodily resurrection are damned. Rather, I just want to point out that the doctrine not only has the very strong Biblical support argued for in the previous posts, it was even considered essential by the early Church Fathers.

However, the Platonic (Greek) view of the afterlike came to dominate Christian thinking, despite vociferous objection by leading Christian thinkers in the Second and Third Centuries. This shouldn't be surprising, as a great deal of Grecian thought crept into Christian thinking over the years.

NOTE: For issues and details related to Heaven and life after death, as well as covering related topics and including different perspectives (including N.T. Wright) - see my separate "Reference Notes on Heaven" (based in part on the book, Heaven, by Randy Alcorn)

See also*: Early Church Fathers and History

Resurrection of Jesus the Messiah (Christ)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

NT Wright's The New Testament and the People of God, A Book Report

Ch.1 https://jaclt.wordpress.com/2016/12/12/nt-wrights-the-new-testament-and-the-people-of-god-a-book-report-ch-1/

Ch.2 https://jaclt.wordpress.com/2016/12/25/nt-wrights-the-new-testament-and-the-people-of-god-a-book-report-ch-2/

Ch.3 https://jaclt.wordpress.com/2017/01/23/nt-wrights-the-new-testament-and-the-people-of-god-a-book-report-ch-3/

N.T. Wright: What is the "Gospel of God"? (in Romans)

http://ntwrightonline.org/what-is-the-gospel-of-god/ [links to video]

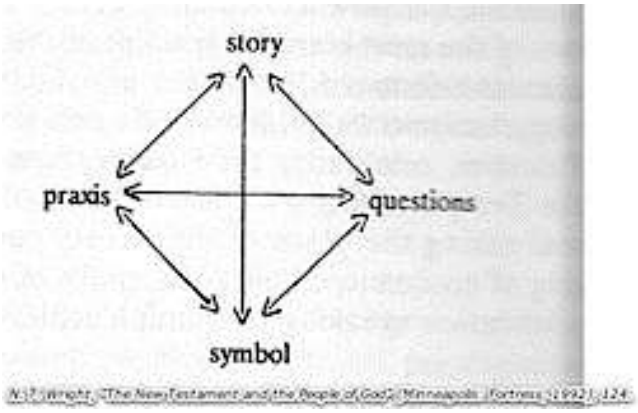
Lewis Couldn't Write About Aliens AND Centaurs — (Or, N.T. Wright on Pauline Authorship)

https://derekzrishmawy.com/2013/11/27/its-a-matter-of-style-n-t-wright-on-pauline-authorship/

The PFG (i.e., Wright's book, "Paul and the Foundations of God") (2013)

http://thinktheology.co.uk/blog/article/the_pfg

Paul and His Letter to Philemon [Recommended]



(Online Course by N.T. Wright; Free but registration required)

https://www.udemy.com/paul-and-his-letter-to-philemon/

Prof. N.T. Wright compares Paul's letter to Philemon to a letter of Pliny showing powerful countercultural differences.

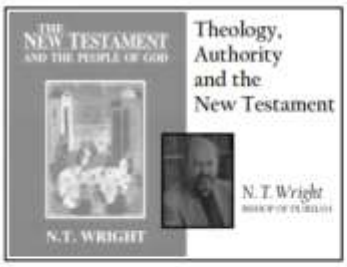
Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Here's how Wright diagrams worldview in The New Testament and the People of God.

He then goes on to say that the part we refer to as culture runs between symbol and praxis.

Source: https://nickmelazzo.wordpress.com/page/48/

See also: Paul's Worldview for description of diagram as applied to Paul



FYI: N.T. Wright | On Worldview (2017)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=2u-f2qmYr1s [Video]

Introduction: N.T. Wright and the Biblical Worldview (2006)
https://biblicalstudies.org.uk/pdf/ref-rev/15-2/15-2_intro.pdf [PDF]

See also:* Worldviews

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Fact or Opinion?
Slides from an Overview of his Book, The New Testament and the People of God http://www.blakleycreative.com/jtb/BXnB_Texts/BXnB04_Wright_Authority_print.pdf

What's at stake for Wright?

- Wright is concerned with the nature of theological truth claims. That is, Wright is concerned with questions about how one goes about making and evaluating claims about God, for example, claims about:
  - who God is
  - what God is like
  - what God does and does not do
  - what God has done, is doing, will do

Fact or Opinion?

- 2 + 2 = 4
- Emma is so funny.
- The Declaration of Independence was signed in 1796.
- Thaddaeus' favorite color is yellow.
- That was a really good movie.

What's the Difference?

- A factual statement reveals something about the object in question, the truthfulness or falsity of which is independent of the person making the statement; while an opinion reveals something about the person making the statement but nothing about the object about which they speak.

Fact or Opinion?

- O. J. Simpson murdered Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman.
- Human beings descended from apes.
- Jesus is God.

On Theology 1 (1 of 2)

Theology, . . ., turns the spotlight on certain particular dimensions of the worldview, of any worldview. It is possible to suggest a sharply focused definition of theology: theology is the study of gods, or a god. It is also quite common, to work with a more wide-ranging definition, interacting with elements of the worldview-pattern: »

On Theology 1 (2 of 2)

» theology suggests certain ways of telling the story, explores certain ways of answering the questions, offers particular interpretations of the symbols, and suggests and critiques certain forms of praxis.

On Theology 2 (1 of 2)

Theology thus tells stories about human beings and the world, stories which involve either a being not reducible to materialist analysis or at least a provocative space within the story-line where such a being might, by implication, be located. »

On Theology 2 (2 of 2)

» In the light of this story-telling activity, theology asks questions, as to whether there is a god, what relation this god has to the world in which we live, and what if anything this god is doing, or will do, about putting it to rights.

NTPG slides continued on next page…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

On Revelation 1

Marx, Nietzsche, and Freud persuaded a whole generation to be skeptical of revelation, and to see it not as pointing beyond itself to a divine reality but as pointing back to other aspects of human individual and/or corporate existence and identity.

On Revelation 2

Equally . . . theologians have not found it at all easy to move beyond a belief in revelation itself to actual statements about the divine. Such statements all too easily collapse into restatements of the revelatory mode itself. Analysis of the actual being of a god, of 'divine substance', is conceived as highly problematic.

Question #1

There are four things which world-views characteristically do, in each of which the entire worldview can be glimpsed. First, . . ., worldviews provide the stories through which human beings view reality.

Question #2

Second, from these stories one can in principle discover how to answer the basic questions that determine human existence: who are we, where are we, what is wrong, and what is the solution?

Question #3

Third, the stories that express the worldview, and the answers which it provides to the questions of identity, environment, evil and eschatology, are expressed ... in cultural symbols.

Question #4

In the last question, the word eschatology appeared. Eschatology is the study of what? the end; the last things

Question #5

Fourth, worldviews include a praxis, a way-of-being in the world.... [The] real shape of someone's worldview can often be seen in the sort of actions they perform, particularly if the actions are so instinctive or habitual as to be taken for granted.

Question #6

Worldviews are thus the basic stuff of human existence, the lens through which the world is seen, the blueprint for how one should live in it, and above all the sense of identity and place which enables human beings to be what they are.

Question #7

Theology suggests certain ways of telling the story, explores certain ways of answering the questions, offers particular interpretations of the symbols, and suggests and critiques certain forms of praxis.

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Jesus Bodily Resurrection Vs Greek philosophy - N.T. Wright
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=jzWgcRFaOpw [Video]

How Greek was Paul's Eschatology? [N.T. Wright] [PDF]
https://research-repository.st-andrews.ac.uk/bitstream/handle/10023/8760/SNTS_Paul_s_eschatology_AcceptedManuscript.pdf?sequence=1

The Wisdom of the Greeks (Paul and Greek Philosophy)
http://mydigitalseminary.com/wisdom-greeks/
Discusses the chapter, "Athene and Her Owl: The Wisdom of the Greeks", N.T. Wright's, Paul and the Faithfulness of God, where Wright examines the influence of Greek philosophy on Paul's world.

See also: The Use of Greek Philosophy by Paul in the Bible

See also: Greek Philosophy – Epicurean, Platonism, Stoicism

NOTE: For more N.T. Wright discussing issues related to Heaven and life after death, as well as covering related topics and including different perspectives - see my separate "Reference Notes on Heaven"

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The following provides a good summary and/or companion guide to N.T. Wright's extensive writings on Paul and especially Romans.

N.T. Wright and the Faithfulness of Paul: Part 9: Paul in History (by Derek Vreeland)

https://derekvreeland.com/2014/11/paul-in-history/ (also includes links to parts 1-8)

See related interview article about corresponding book:

Through the Eyes of N.T. Wright by Derek Vreeland (Interview by Brian Zahnd)

https://brianzahnd.com/2015/09/through-the-eyes-of-n-t-wright/

Excerpts (Interview Q&As):

BZ: How would N.T. Wright describe Paul's use of the word "justification"?

DV: In Paul and the Faithfulness of God, Wright works to reconstruct the very complex world of Paul. We better understand the words Paul uses when we understand the world around him. One common word in Paul's vocabulary is "justified," which (in the ESV) appears 11 times in the book of Romans alone. The common evangelical assumption has been that to be justified means an individual has received an official pardon from God whereby that person now has a right relationship with God. However, when we survey Paul's historical context this interpretation loses its persuasiveness because individuals seeking a right relationship with God was simply not the core issue for Jews or for Greek-minded Romans. The key issue in the form of a question was this: Who is a part of God's family? One question Paul deals with in many of his letters is how are Gentiles a part of God's covenant people without become Jewish? A simple answer is because God has declared them to be within the covenant family through the faithfulness of Jesus.

Justification is not a matter of how individuals "get saved," rather it describes God's act of declaring who is a part of God's covenant community.

BZ: Eschatology is always a popular topic. What does N.T. Wright do with Paul's eschatology?

DV: Wright frames Paul's theology around three central themes: monotheism, election, and eschatology, so God's future for the world (eschatology) is a massively important subject. In reading Wright, I have found that eschatology is not the caboose at the end of the train, but the engine driving Paul's theological project. From Wright's perspective, Paul's view of God's future is one of renewal and reconciliation. The rhetorical climax of Romans 8, for example, is not people indwelt with God's spirit crying out "Abba, Father," but with creation groaning, longing to be set free from corruption. This future is one of new creation, where human being are reconciled to one another and to God, and the division between heaven and earth is reconciled and God's dwells with and reigns over his people in an age of peace. This future reign is the age to come, which has broken into the present evil age through Jesus and the Spirit. We are people shaped by the age to coming, living in this age colonizing it with the values and culture of the age to come. In this regard, Wright connects ethics to eschatology. How we live now is not based on the values of this present age that is passing away, but on the age to come where Jesus is King. We are people of the light living in the land of darkness, bringing the light of new creation into a tired, broken-down world.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

BZ: How does ecclesiology and the role of the church factor into N.T. Wright's understanding of Paul's theology?

DV: The church is the a the very center of Paul's worldview and his theology. While Paul was a thinker on par with the Greek philosophers, he did not write speculative philosophical essays. He wrote letters to churches to instruct and encourage them, and to help them think "Christianly" to use a term from Wright. Paul envisioned a holy, unified church at the heart of all of his work. In fact, the unity of the church is the single thread binding together all of Paul's letters. Paul never thought of his letters as a new Christian torah. He was clear; Jesus the Messiah is the fulfillment, the telos, of the torah. Paul does theology in his letters as a way to help his churches think theologically. For Paul this renewal of the mind was integral to the viability and flourishing of the church. Wright goes so far as to say Paul created what we know as Christian theology. While Paul remained a Jewish thinker who wrote using Jewish language and metaphors, he was creating something very new for the people of God. He demonstrated for the church how to think prayerfully about God, God's people, and God's future in the light of Jesus and the Spirit.

"Paul on the Unity of the Church" by N.T. Wright - Session One (2014)

Why Unity Mattered to Paul https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=1NZ2epO9cjI [Video]

Galatians 2, 1 Corinthians 8-10, etc.

"Paul on the Unity of the Church" by N.T. Wright - Session Two (2014)

Path to Unity: Messiah and the Spirit https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=cnB0j0HQa8Q [Video]

Ephesians esp. Chapter 3 (e.g., verse 10,); 1 Corinthians 8-10, Romans 14, etc.

N.T. Wright on Paul – A few Memorable Quotes

https://timstafford.wordpress.com/2013/12/03/n-t-wright-on-paul/

Reading N.T. Wright's scholarly work is like drinking from the proverbial fire hose. As far as I am concerned, it is a fire hose spouting good wine. I am a few hundred pages into his massive two-volume Paul and the Faithfulness of God, a book he has been pointing toward for decades. It's a pleasure.

I won't try to describe his argument, but I thought I would pass on a few memorable quotes.

(See also: N.T. Write Quotes)

re: Onesimus and Philemon and Slavery

. 12 "For Paul, much as he valued freedom, the mutual reconciliation of those who belonged to the Messiah mattered more than anything else. For Philemon to have responded angrily to Paul's letter by giving Onesimus his freedom but declaring that he never wanted to set eyes on him again would have meant defeat for Paul. Reconciliation was what mattered. That is why Paul wrote this letter [Philemon]."

p. 20. "Paul is not only urging and requesting but actually embodying what he elsewhere calls 'the ministry of reconciliation.' God was in the Messiah, reconciling the world to himself, he says in 2 Corinthians 5:19; now, we dare to say, God was in Paul reconciling Onesimus and Philemon."

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

p. 32 “Slavery was, for both Philemon and Paul, simply part of the worldview. It was how things got done. It was the electricity of the ancient world; try imagining your home or your town without the ability to plug things in and switch them on, and you will realize how unthinkable it was to them that there should be no slaves.”

re: Faith vs Theology/Doctrine

p. 42 “The distinction between ‘faith’ in the Reformers’ sense and ‘theology’ or ‘doctrine’ has by no means always been clear, producing as we saw the problem whereby ‘justification by faith’ has come to mean ‘justification by believing in the proper doctrine of justification,’ a position which, in attempting to swallow its own tail, produces a certain type of theological and perhaps cultural indigestion.”

re: History

p. 50 “The reason history is fascinating is because people in other times and places are so like us. The reason history is difficult is because people in other times and places are so different from us. History is, to that extent, like marriage….”

Re: The Temple

pp. 96-7 “The Temple, and before it the wilderness tabernacle, were thus heirs, within the biblical narrative, to moments like Jacob’s vision, the discovery that a particular spot on earth could intersect with, and be the gateway into, heaven itself…. The Temple was not simply a convenient place to meet for worship. It was not even just the ‘single sanctuary,’ the one and only place where sacrifice was to be offered in worship to the one God. It was the place above all where the twin halves of the good creation intersected. When you went up to the Temple, it was not as though you were ‘in heaven.’ You were actually there. That was the point. Israel’s God did not have to leave heaven in order to come down and dwell in the wilderness tabernacle or the Jerusalem Temple. However surprising it may be for modern westerners to hear it, within the worldview formed by the ancient scriptures heaven and earth were always made to work together, to interlock and overlap. There might in principle be many places and ways in which this could happen, but the Jewish people had believed, throughout the millennium prior to Jesus, that the Jerusalem Temple was the place and the means par excellence for this strange and powerful mystery.”

re: Politics

p. 181 “Like Marx, ancient Jews seem to have thought that the point was not to explain the world but to change it.”

p. 203 “In the western world for the last two hundred years the categories of ‘politics’ and ‘religion’ have been carefully separated, each being defined negatively in relation to the other. ‘Politics,’ for the modern west, is about the running of countries and cities as though there were no god; ‘religion’ is about engaging in present piety and seeking future salvation as though there were no polis, no civic reality.”

Quote by N.T. Wright:

“At the heart of Galatians 2 is not an abstract individualized salvation, but a common meal. Paul does not want the Galatians to wait until they have agreed on all doctrinal arguments before they can sit down and eat together. Not to eat together is already to get the answer wrong. The whole point of his argument is that all those who belong to Christ belong at the same table with one another.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The relevance of this today should be obvious. The differences between us, as twentieth-century Christians, all too often reflect cultural, philosophical and tribal divides, rather than anything that should keep us apart from full and glad Eucharistic fellowship. I believe the church should recognize, as a matter of biblical and Christian obedience, that it is time to put the horse back before the cart, and that we are far, far more likely to reach doctrinal agreement between our different churches if we do so within the context of that common meal which belongs equally to us all because it is the meal of the Lord whom we all worship. Intercommunion, in other words, is not something we should regard as the prize to be gained at the end of the ecumenical road; it is the very paving of the road itself. If we wonder why we haven't been travelling very fast down the road of late, maybe it's because, without the proper paving, we've got stuck in the mud." — N.T. Wright, For All God's Worth: True Worship and the Calling of the Church

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Dr. N. T. Wright Academic Review (2014)

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=3Fiw4kqrYj0 [Video] (Discussion at Oklahoma Christian University (OC) of his newly released book, Paul and the Faithfulness of God, including a panel discussion with fellow scholars Richard Hays, Jerry Sumney and James Thompson.) Wright made several appearances at Oklahoma Christian University (OC) March 24-25, 2014. Other appearances were also recorded and are (via Vimeo) available here: http://www.oc.edu/events/mcgaw-lecture/past-speakers/n-t-wright.html, and (via YouTube) as follows:

Dr. N. T. Wright Luncheon

https://vimeo.com/90358114 [Video] (Note: could only find on vimeo)
@ 8:30 talks about problem with attitude of Christians separating spiritual from rest of life and is due to a Western culture of deism (God is an absentee landlord) and Epicurean (not sure if any gods at all, but they never had anything to do with our world and never will) mind set

Dr. N. T. Wright lecture at Oklahoma Christian

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=usRHAVN4Cpo [Video] https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=2cBuYaU_wf4 [Video] (Alt./longer)

Dr. N. T. Wright Student Q&A

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=bptERDE44ck [Video]

Dr. N. T. Wright at OC

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=o3EtZKJeme4 [Video] ("Good News", approx. 18 min.)

Dr. N. T. Wright - Oklahoma Christian Q&A

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=3pCSL5Wugpg [Video] (personal info, msg. to leave; 14 min.)
also briefly discusses reading the Bible, how, when and how often he reads the Bible; Paul; church; etc.

Dr. Ravi Zacharias at Oklahoma Christian University (2015)

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=NDgha3oipYc [Video] (mentions following N.T. Wright)

N. T. Wright on Paul and the Faithfulness of God: A Conversation with Richard B. Hays – Justification and Spirit in Galatians 2 and Romans 8 with Richard B. Hays (2014)

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=JM8DGAnUq2k [Recommended]
Includes discussion of Galatians 2, Romans 8; Gal. 3:22, Rom. 3:22; and also discuss pistis Christou

Discussion Guide (for above video):

http://www.augsburgfortress.org/media/downloads/NTWright_VideoDiscussionGuide_Hays.pdf [PDF]

Galatians 2: 11-21

1. Richard Hays outlines four important aspects of his interpretation of Paul's understanding of justification as found in Galatians 2:11-21.
   a) In Hays's first point, what is Paul's understanding of the "truth of the Gospel"? In Paul's eyes how has Peter's table fellowship practice denied that truth? For Paul, how is the practice of table fellowship central to questions of justification?
   b) Paul, says Hays, does not reject his Jewish identity but rather relies on Torah to say that justification comes, not from the law, but from God's faithfulness. How does Hays then tie participation in the new life of Christ and Jesus' act of loving and giving of himself to the faithfulness of God?
   c) Summarize Hays's understanding of Paul's theology of justification as outlined in Galatians 2:11-21.
   d) Which of N. T. Wright's responses to the points made by Dr. Hays were most helpful to you? Why?

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

e) Which points made by Dr. Hays or Dr. Wright do you want to think about or inquire into further?

2. N. T. Wright says that while justification and being in Christ are joined at the hip for Paul, justification and participation are not synonymous. Some scholars have argued that justification and participation are in opposition to each other, but Hays and Wright agree that the fusion of the two is a better interpretation. What are your thoughts? Why is this argument important in interpreting Paul's theology?

3. How, in your understanding, are the faithfulness of God, the faithfulness of Christ, and human faith/faithfulness intimately connected in Paul's theology as outlined in these Galatians verses? In one or two sentences, summarize your understanding of Paul's theology of justification.

Romans 8

1. In this conversation about Romans 8 you see leading Paul scholars working through questions that they are still exploring and questions about which they wonder. What do you take away from observing this animated and candid exchange? What further questions does the conversation raise for you?

2. N. T. Wright and Richard Hays each identify why Paul's writings "light them up" and why they have given so much of their scholarly careers to thinking and writing about Paul. What is it about Paul and his letters that raises interest and passion in you?

The Kingdom New Testament – N.T. Wright (referenced in above video)

https://redeeminggod.com/kingdom-new-testament/

http://www.internetmonk.com/archive/n-t-wrights-the-kingdom-new-testament

https://www.readthespirit.com/explore/interview-nt-tom-wright-on-kingdom-new-testament/

Evening Conversation with NT Wright and Richard Hays (2016)

Trinity Forum / Duke Divinity School Evening Conversation in Wash., D.C. on the subject of "The Good News and the Good Life."
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=w6XakC2ZjsU [Video] (full unedited version)

https://vimeo.com/156750788 [Alt. link]

N.T. Wright: Panel Discussion on Pauline Theology with Faculty (2014)

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=mNzcwo6opqg [Video]
The faculty panel members included Douglas Campbell, professor of New Testament; Susan Eastman, associate research professor of New Testament; and J. Ross Wagner, associate professor of New Testament. Professor Richard Hays moderated. (Nov. 12, 2014)

Wright begins with an explanation of his theme, the return of Yahwah to Zion as a key to Paul's Christology (in book, Paul and the Faithfulness of God), based off his study of 2nd Temple Judaism.

This is a somewhat contentious discussion at Duke Divinity School, due in large part to Campbell, but interesting nevertheless

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

N.T. Wright - Paul and the Faithfulness of God (University of Edinburgh) (2014)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=0XszYFTkpGo [Video]

World's Leading New Testament Scholar On What Really Happened On The Cross
https://www.forbes.com/sites/jerrybowyer/2017/06/19/worlds-leading-new-testament-scholar-on-what-really-happened-on-the-cross/#1665bdf03e48

World's Top New Testament Scholar – Christians Need to Read the Gospels Through Ancient Jewish Eyes http://affluentinvestor.com/2017/07/worlds-top-new-testament-scholar-christians-need-read-gospels-ancient-jewish-eyes/

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Wright's OT Ethical Framework

https://theologicalsweets.wordpress.com/2012/03/17/wrights-ot-ethical-framework/

Excerpt:

There is much in the book to recommend, but I found the suggested framework for understanding OT ethics to be particularly helpful. He identifies three major themes in the Old Testament (God, Israel and land) and relates them to the major themes in the other major periods of Bible history (creation, NT and the end times). He uses a series of triangle diagrams to illustrate his point, beginning with the simplest one found below.

God, Israel and the land — these were the three pillars of Israel's worldview, the primary factors of their theology and ethics. We may conceptualize these as a triangle of relationships, each of which affected and interacted with both the others. So we can take each 'corner' of this triangle in turn and examine Old Testament ethical teaching from the theological angle (God), the social angle (Israel) and the economic angle (the land) [Wright, OT Ethics, p. 18].

Now let me briefly summarize each segment of the triangle.

- God (The Theological Angle, or Divine Angle in An Eye for an Eye). God is the primary factor in Old Testament ethics. Everything else naturally flows from a proper understanding and relationship to God. God's identity and character can be thoroughly found throughout Scripture, and it forms the basis for his covenant and dealings with Israel. He acted on their behalf, redeeming them from bondage and delivering them to the Promised Land. His will and intentions are reflected in his actions and his laws. The origin of the Torah is God and adherence to it promotes a healthy relationship with him. It provides the way of life and calls for imitation of God's character.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

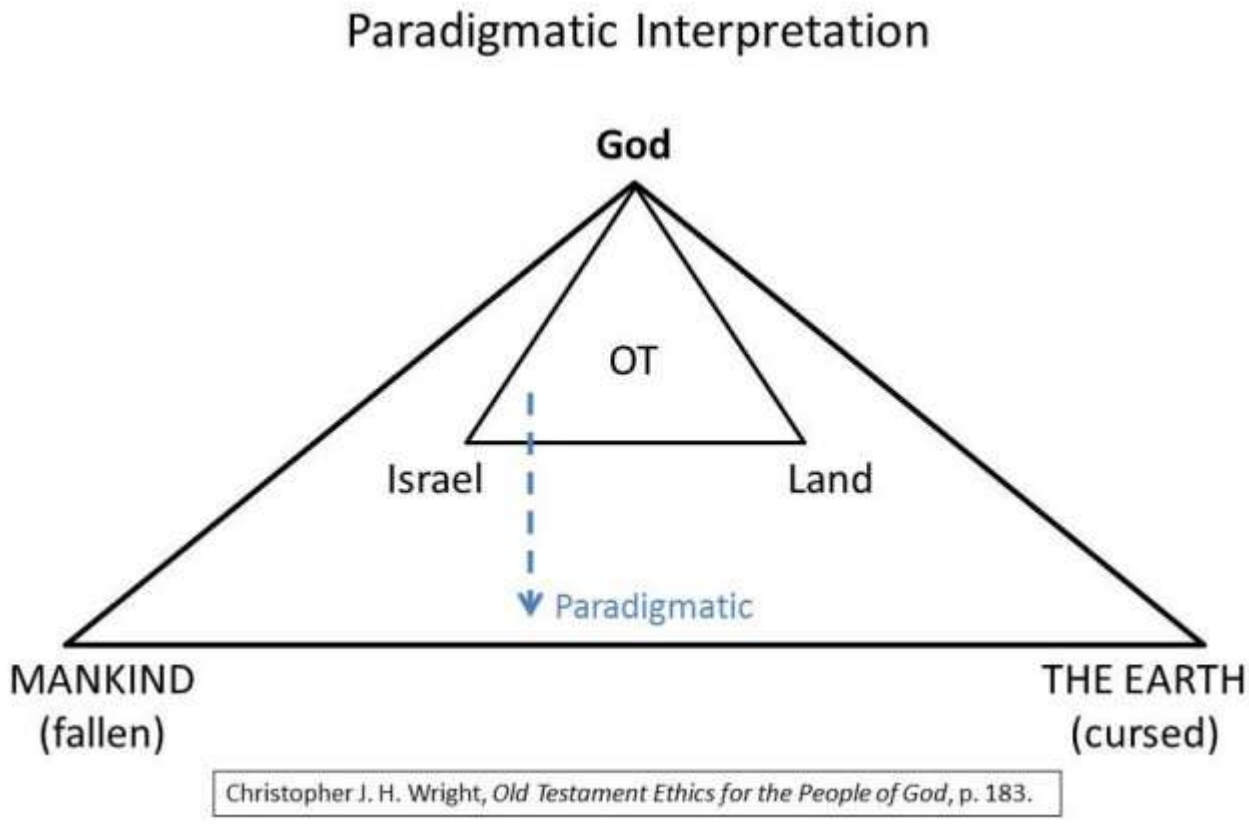
- Israel (The Social Angle). Israel's understanding of God directly impacted their relationship with others. Israel was to relate to others as people who had experienced God's blessings. As such, they were to extend the same kind of grace and kindness to others, particularly those who were weak or helpless. Just as sin destroyed relationships with other people, redemption extended to the social elements of society. Israel was called to be a holy nation, and their treatment of others was a reflection of their God.
- The Land (The Economic Angle). The land was a central element of the covenants with Abraham and Israel, and it served as the epitome of divine blessings. The land was a gift from God that provided ongoing blessings of sustenance and security. Ethics for Israel demanded a proper perspective on physical blessings. The land and all physical blessings belonged to God, and Israel were called to trust God as the source of all life and use their wealth for the benefit of the community. The land was also a measuring stick for the status of the covenant. Covenant blessings involved a healthy and productive land while covenant curses resulted in depletion of the land and/or removal from the land.

See my next post on Wright's Paradigmatic Interpretation here:

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



Wright's Paradigmatic Interpretation

https://theologicalsweets.wordpress.com/2012/03/23/wrights-paradigmatic-interpretation/

Excerpt:

Wright extends his use of the OT Ethical Framework in his Paradigmatic Interpretation. This interpretive process provides meaning and insight for Christians today who look back to the Law to find its original function and benefit today. I had written on this earlier, and I know some of you thought I was making this word up. But, alas, Wright uses the same word (several years before I could read "c-a-t" much less "para-dig-mat-ic"). Wright describes his approach in the following way:

This approach rests on the belief that God's relation to Israel in their land was a deliberate reflection of God's relation to humankind on the earth. Or, to be more precise, God's involvement with Israel in their land was God's redemptive address to the fracturing of his creative purpose for human beings and the earth. Humanity has rebelled and lives on an earth under God's curse. Israel was redeemed and lived in a land God promised to bless (Wright, OT Ethics, 183).

In short, paradigmatic interpretation calls for finding principles within the Law and making application in a different setting and context. It adds flexibility to a law and allows it to find meaning when the particular circumstances of a law have changed.

The reason this works is because there is a direct connection between the central elements of Creation and Israel's ethics. Wright states that this is a "deliberate reflection of God's relation to humankind on the earth." In the beginning, human sin corrupted God's original intention for creation. God's redemptive purposes, which most conspicuously started with Abraham and progressed in the nation of Israel, address the fundamental plight of humanity.

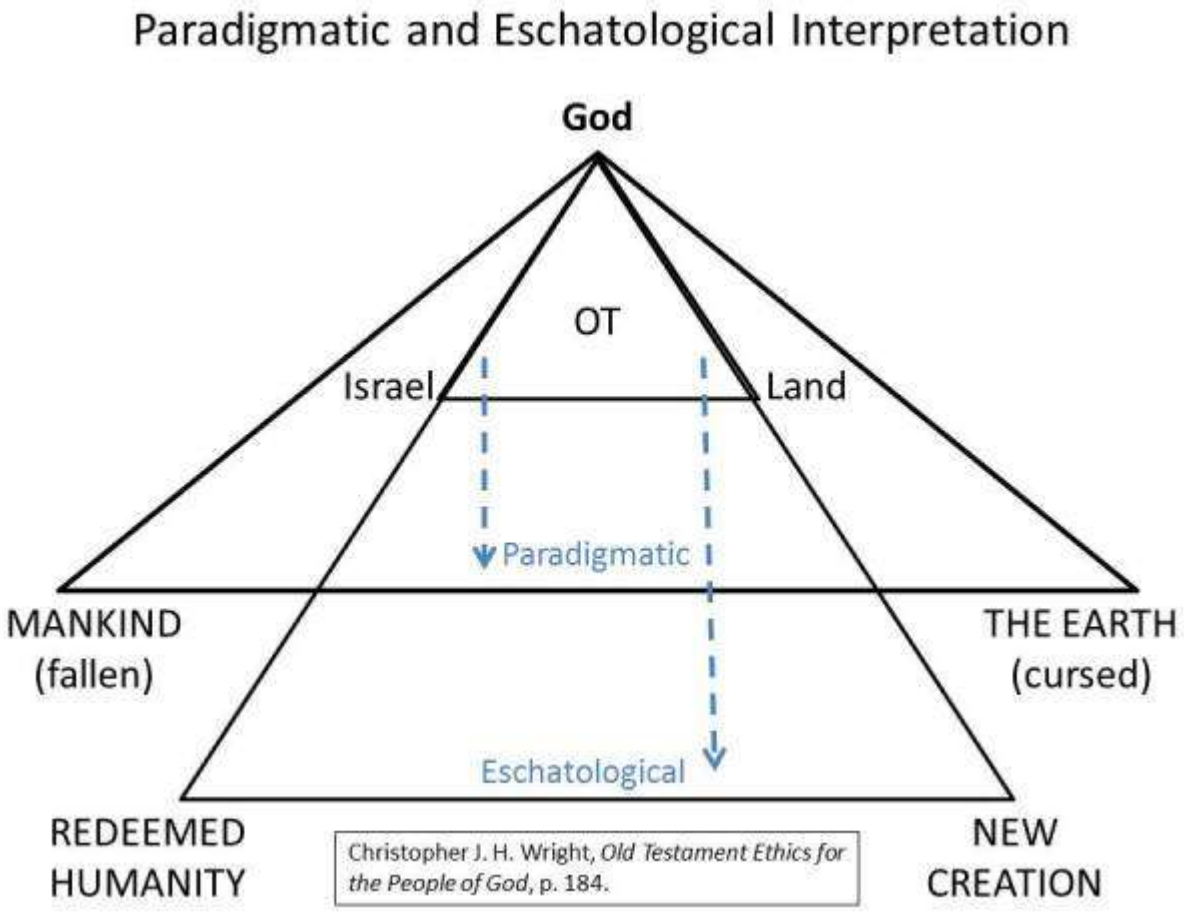
 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

To say it another way, the OT Law reflects the heart of God, which makes sense because God is the source of the Law. It originated with him. It displays his creational (o.k., so maybe that one's made up) intentions and reveals his redemptive purposes. It is the basis for what is carried forth into the New Testament. It provides indispensable background for understanding the NT.

It finds value today because it addresses proper perspectives for God, society and economic resources. As much as societies changes, neither God nor human nature has changed. In many ways, we are still dealing with the same issues addressed in the Law.

My next post on Wright's Interpretive Framework can be found here:

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



Wright's Eschatological Interpretation

https://theologicalsweets.wordpress.com/2012/04/17/wrights-escatological-interpretation/

Excerpt:

In Wright's Paradigmatic Interpretation, he notes that there are intentional connections in the major themes of Creation and the OT Law. God's relationship with Israel and the land show God's effort to address sinful humans and a fallen creation. There are elements of redemption in the OT Law that address widespread sinfulness. The Eschatological Interpretation takes this one step further. The Law not only looks back as a way to redress sin, but it looks forward to the end of all things when God will ultimately make all things right. It anticipates the day when God will redeem completely and totally; sin and rebellion will be vanquished. Notice Wright's explanation and diagram.

This approach rests on the conviction, solidly based in the Old as well as the New Testament, that God's redemptive purpose, initiated through Israel and their land, will ultimately embrace all nations and the whole earth, in a transformed and perfect new creation. Returning to the diagram, if we can think in dynamic terms while using a static figure, this means that the redemptive triangle will ultimately 'transcend' (break through) the triangle of fallen creation (Wright, OT Ethics, p. 184).

When considering how things ought to be now, specifically as addressed in the Law of God, it is helpful to balance things against God's intentions in the beginning with Creation and God's ultimate purposes in the end. Sin led to a reversal of God's original intentions for humanity. Instead of immediate realization of all God planned for man and woman, the Law was provided as a mechanism to reintroduce God's will. This involved a process where God loved his people, called them and worked with them in relationship with society and the land. Israel's stubbornness illustrates the fact that this was not a full and immediate realization of redemption.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

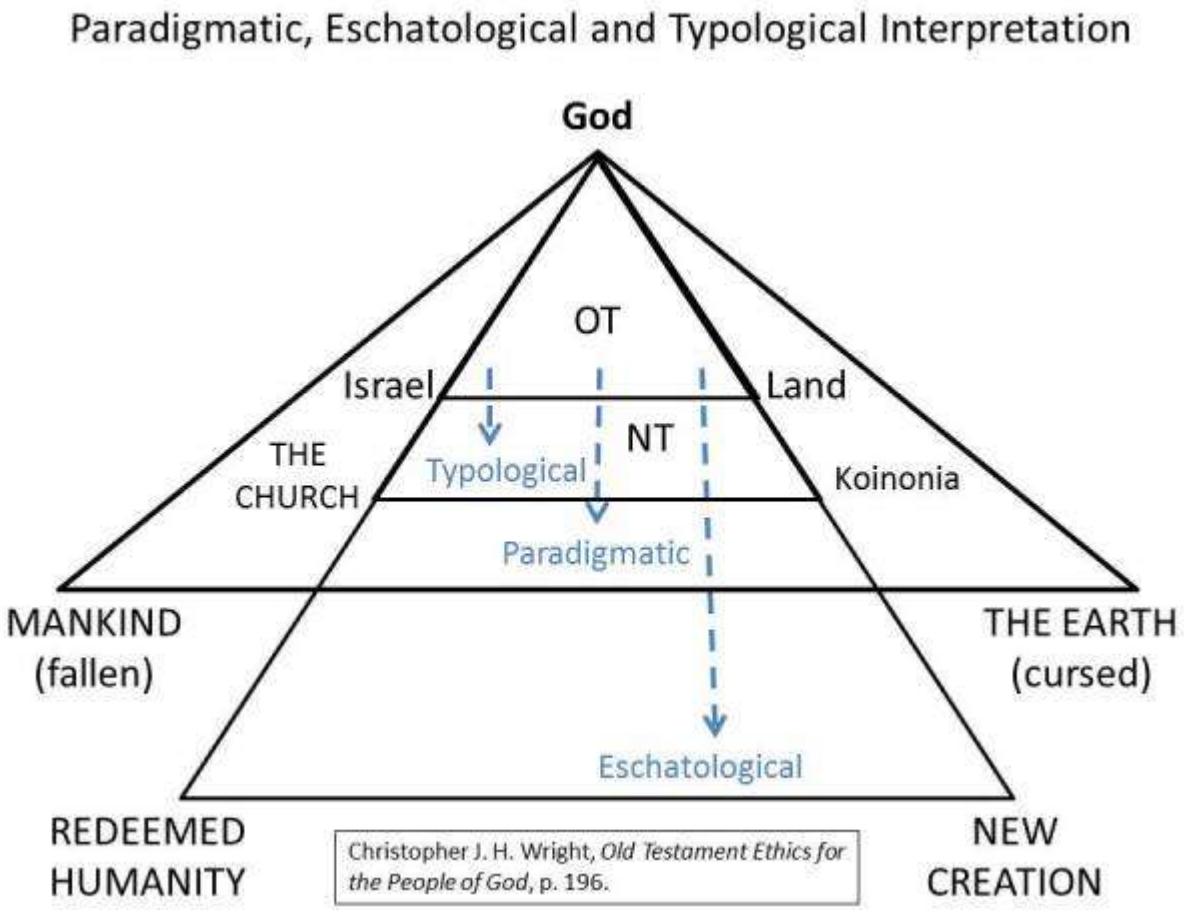
Another interesting connection in Scripture is "the heavens and the earth." In the beginning, God created the heavens and the earth (Gen. 1:1). Sin represented the human response and rejection of God's plans. In the end, though, there will be "the new heavens and the new earth" (Isa. 65:17; 66:22; 2 Pet 3:13; Rev. 21:1). Israel in the OT and Christians today are charged with remembering God's original intention of creation while anticipating and trying to live into his ultimate purposes of the new heavens and the new earth. The struggle against sin and fallenness takes on a cosmic importance when considered in this light.

The next post of Wright's Typological Framework can be found here:

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



Wright's Typological Interpretation

https://theologicalsweets.wordpress.com/2012/04/28/wrights-typological-interpretation/

Excerpt:

This is a fourth post on Wright's models of interpretation in Old Testament Ethics and the People of God. The Paradigmatic Model related the OT Law to Creation, where it sought to restore God's creative purposes for humans and creation that had been tarnished by sin. The Eschatological Model related the OT Law to the End, where God will ultimately and completely bring redemption. In the Typological Model, Wright relates the OT Law to what was being accomplished by Christ in the NT. Christ completes and fulfills the Law, so the OT Law must naturally be understood in light of what was being accomplished by Christ. Wright states the following:

So then, the typological interpretation of the land, which relates it to the person and work of Jesus the Messiah, does not come to a 'dead end' with Jesus himself. Rather, it carries the social and economic thrust of the Old Testament ethics onwards into the ethics of practical relationships within New Testament Israel, the Messianic community. Citizenship of the kingdom of God most certainly has a social and economic dimension. This is a dimension that has transcended the land and kinship structure of Old Testament Israel, but not in such a way as to make that original structure irrelevant (Wright, OT Ethics, 196).

There are several things to note here.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

First, I find it extremely helpful that Wright considers the Old Testament in light of the other major movements of Scripture (Creation, Christ and the Consummation of Ages). This fits within the basic structure for the message of the Bible:

- Creation
- Community of Israel
- Christ
- Community of Christians (Church)
- Consummation of Ages

This structure is chiastic with God's ultimate purposes in the outer most part of the outline, God's institution of his will with fallen humanity in the next innermost sections, and Christ at the center of the picture, who perfectly reveals the Father and brings the two worlds together in reconciliation.

Second, there is a definite progression in the revelation and attainment of God's will. A fallen creation overturned God's original desires for humanity. The Law began a re-institution of God's will in a sinful world. Christ perfectly revealed the Father, highlighting and intensifying the message while providing an avenue for forgiveness that was absent from the first covenant. And Christ's work was fulfilled in anticipation of ultimate redemption in the End.

Third, the OT must be understood in light of the NT. The old is completed in the new. God's will finds full fruition in Christ. Without Christ, there is a huge gap in understanding of the OT.

Fourth, the inverse is true, too. The NT must be understood in light of the OT. This means that approaching the NT necessitates a consideration of the social and ethical implications of the OT. The major thrusts of the OT should not be discarded, leaving the NT to comment only on the "spiritual." The NT has real and valid implications for society, and a healthy understanding of the OT helps illuminate these.

Fifth, the typological method of interpretation illustrates that manner this connection is often explicitly (and implicitly) made. The NT provides types, or intentional correspondences between the figures and events of the OT. The OT prefigures and sets the stage for what is to come, and the NT shows intentional connection with its past.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

New Perspective on Paul (2013)

http://www.religionfacts.com/new-perspective-on-paul

Excerpt:

…There are multiple points of contention between the perspectives, which include, but are not limited to, the following:

Imputation or Inclusion

Certain New Perspective scholars contend that the Pauline term "justification" is the result of a sinner being made right with God and entails their inclusion into God's covenant community. The Old Perspective contends "justification" refers to the process by which a sinner is made right with God, which includes the transfer, or "imputation", of Christ's righteousness to the sinner.

N.T. Wright posits that the Pauline term "justification" isn't the means by which a person is made right with God, but a sign that they already are. "Justification," he writes, "is the doctrine which insists that all those who have this faith belong as full members of this family, on this basis and no other." Wright elaborates, 'Justification' in the first century was not about how someone might establish a relationship with God. It was about God's eschatological definition, both future and present, of who was, in fact, a member of his people. In Sanders' terms, it was not so much about 'getting in,' or indeed about 'staying in,' as about 'how you could tell who was in.' In standard Christian theological language, it wasn't so much about soteriology as about ecclesiology; not so much about salvation as about the church.

Justification, Wright argues, is the declaration of being in right relationship with God.

Old Perspective theologians believe the Pauline word "justification" refers to the means by which sinners are made right with God, as opposed to being merely being an announcement of a person's inclusion into the people of God. N.T. Wright rejects the idea that God justifies the sinner through transferring, or "imputing," Christ's righteousness to them, but that the sinner is just declared righteous as a covenant member.

One critic of The New Perspective, Douglas Moo, contrasts Paul and Wright with the following table:

Romans 4:5
Paul	"faith	is credited	as righteousness" (NAU)
N.T. Wright	faith	is a badge	of covenant membership

Gathercole elaborates:

> At its core, the doctrine of justification says that sinners can be miraculously reckoned righteous before God. This happens for all who believe and has nothing to do with observance of the law, which for sinners is impossible. With this foundation in place, we can move on to see how Paul uses the doctrine of justification by faith. The new perspective rightly observes that Paul uses justification to argue that Gentile Christians need not take on the yoke of the law (Galatians) and that Jewish Christians and Gentile Christians should live together in harmony (Romans 14-15). While we must not neglect these demands, we should not allow the tail to wag the dog.

Many Old Perspective scholars use a summary description articulated by Moo (1950-present, professor of New Testament at Wheaton College) in his criticism of N.T. Wright's arguments, as a way to summarize the methodological differences between the perspectives:

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

> "[N.T.] Wright backgrounds what the New Testament foregrounds, and foregrounds what the New Testament backgrounds."

In other words, The Old Perspective accuses The New Perspective of promoting what Paul makes secondary (i.e. ethnic inclusion) and demoting what he makes primary (i.e. sinners being reckoned as righteous)…

Old and New Perspectives on Paul: A Third Way? (Reformed / Gospel Coalition)

https://www.thegospelcoalition.org/article/old-and-new-perspectives-on-paul-a-third-way

Excerpt:

John Barclay, professor of divinity at Durham University in England, has written a sizable contribution to New Testament studies in Paul and the Gift. His basic thesis is that gift is the proper first-century category for comprehending Paul's term grace (2). His primary focus is examining the divine gift giving, which for the apostle Paul is God's gift of Christ (4).

Barclay believes gift is the best way to understand Paul's concept of grace for three chief reasons.

First, grace is a multifaceted concept that theologians frequently use but seldom define. Some stress the incongruity of grace (giving to an unworthy recipient); others the efficacy of grace. Barclay points out that these different "perfections" of grace (conceptual extensions) aren't better or worse interpretations of the concept, just different aspects of it (6). He identifies six possible perfections of grace (70–75, 563):

- Superabundance—the size or permanence of a gift
- Singularity—the giver's sole and exclusive desire to express benevolence and goodness
- Priority—the timing of the gift, namely, that it takes place prior to the initiative of the recipient
- Incongruity—a gift given without regard to the worthiness of the recipient
- Efficacy—the effect of the gift, namely, what the gift is designed to accomplish
- Non-circularity—the gift escapes reciprocity and a system of exchange

Second, ever since E. P. Sanders published Paul and Palestinian Judaism, many New Testament scholars have been careful to emphasize that Second Temple Judaism was a religion of grace. The problem with Sanders's thesis, however, is that Second Temple conceptions of grace weren't uniform, which undermines claims that Paul's views were either similar or dissimilar to first-century views (6).

Third, though Paul regularly highlights the incongruous aspect of grace—that God gives the Christ-gift without regard to the worth of the recipient (6)—Barclay argues against the idea that incongruity automatically eliminates all forms of reciprocity. He claims the concept of unconditional gift-giving—a no-strings-attached concept—germinates with Luther and fully flowers with Immanuel Kant but is anachronistic to Paul's first-century context (e.g., 11, 44, 50–51, 63, 115, 185). In his judgment, Paul knows nothing of a "pure" gift (52, 64)…

What is There Between Minneapolis and St. Andrews? A Third Way in the Pipe-Wright Debate (2011)

https://www.academia.edu/4574669/What_is_There_Between_Minneapolis_and_St._Andrews_A_Third_Way_in_the_Pipe-Wright_Debate (Downloadable as a PDF)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

What's the "Old" Perspective on Paul?

http://www.patheos.com/blogs/jesuscreed/2015/03/09/whats-the-old-perspective-on-paul/
Review: Carl Trueman's sketch of Luther's theology at work in the Heidelberg Disputation

The New Perspective on Paul: Calvin and N. T. Wright

https://christianreformedink.wordpress.com/bad-theology/new-perspective-on-paul/the-new-perspective-on-paul-calvin-and-n-t-wright/

Excerpt:

…In recent years N. T. Wright, Canon Theologian at Westminster Abbey, has written numerous works from the new perspective. His works have echoed the same charge as Sanders and Dunn, namely the Protestant reading of Paul has been influenced by alien theological issues. Along similar lines to Sanders and Dunn, Wright argues:

> Judaism in Paul's day was not, as has regularly been supposed, a religion of legalistic works-righteousness. If we imagine that it was, and that Paul was attacking it as if it was, we will do great violence to it and to him. Most Protestant exegetes had read Paul and Judaism as if Judaism was a form of the old heresy Pelagianism, according to which humans must pull themselves up by their moral bootstraps and thereby earn justification, righteousness, and salvation. No, said Sanders. Keeping the law within Judaism always functioned within a covenantal scheme. God took the initiative, when he made a covenant with Judaism; God's grace thus precedes everything that people (specifically, Jews) do in response. The Jew keeps the law out of gratitude, as the proper response to grace—not, in other words, in order to get into the covenant people, but to stay in. Being 'in' in the first place was God's gift.[6]

One can easily see the approbation of the general theses of the new perspective in Wright's statement. Elsewhere, in commenting about the significance of the ministry of Christ, Wright contends that traditional interpretations miss the mark. Wright states:

> Those who heeded Jesus' call to audition for the kingdom-play that God was staging through him found themselves facing a challenge. Christians from quite early in the church's life have allowed themselves to see this challenge as a new rule book, as though his intention was simply to offer a new code of morality. This has become problematic within the Reformation in particular, where people have been sensitive about the danger of putting one's human 'good works' logically prior to the faith by which one is justified. But that was not the point…

N.T. Wright vs. John Piper (Soteriology101, Leighton Flowers)

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=piWSvMIIUn0 [Video]

Covenant and Justification: Horton vs. Piper and Wright

http://theaquilareport.com/covenant-and-justification-horton-vs-piper-and-wright/

N.T. Wright extends debate with John Piper by releasing Apostle Paul tome

http://religionnews.com/2013/11/06/nt-wright-john-piper-paul-debate-tome/ (Interview by John Merritt)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

What is There Between Minneapolis and St. Andrews? A Third Way in the Pipe-Wright Debate (2011)

https://www.academia.edu/4574669/What_is_There_Between_Minneapolis_and_St._Andrews_A_Third_Way_in_the_Pipe-Wright_Debate (Downloadable as a PDF)

N.T. Wright and the "New Perspective on Paul" (2007)

http://markdroberts.com/?p=299

Excerpt:

Regarding John Piper and his book against N.T. Wright…

Here is my fear, however. John Piper is very influential, especially among the kinds of people who would be troubled by Wright's take on Paul. I'm afraid that many will buy and read Piper's book before and even without ever reading Wright himself. Then they'll quote or paraphrase Piper, without even going back to read Paul once again to see if Piper is actually right. This, I suggest, is neither Reformed, nor evangelical, nor even especially Christian. One who reads Piper should also read Wright himself, and, more importantly, should dive into a fresh examination of Scripture. Even if Wright is wrong, it's hard to believe that he doesn't have many valuable insights into the text, including many correctives for those of us who have always read Paul in a certain way…

Resources

If you're looking for more information on N.T. Wright and the New Perspective on Paul, let me recommend:

Scot McKnight, a series of blog posts on the New Perspective by a top evangelical New Testament scholar.

Collin Hansen, "From the Seminaries to the Pews"; a short history of the recent controversy over the New Perspective

Simon Gathercole, "What Did Paul Really Mean?"; an fine introduction and criticism that appeared in Christianity Today in August 2007

John Piper, The Future of Justification: A Response to N.T. Wright

Transcript of an interview of N.T. Wright conducted by Trevin Wax. An extraordinarily interesting and helpful resource.

N.T. Wright, "New Perspectives on Paul"

N.T. Wright, "The Shape of Justification"

N.T. Wright, "Paul in Different Perspectives"

"A Conversation on Paul with James D.G. Dunn and N.T. Wright"

Trevin Wax Interview with N.T. Wright (Full Transcript)

https://blogs.thegospelcoalition.org/trevinwax/2007/11/19/trevin-wax-interview-with-nt-wright-full-transcript/

Link to MP3: http://saidatsouthern.com/nt-wright-interview-mp3/ [Audio]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

An Evening Conversation on Paul with James Dunn and NT Wright (2009)

(Edited Transcript for second half of 2-part conversation) http://www.thepaulpage.com/an-evening-conversation-on-paul-with-james-d-g-dunn-and-n-t-wright/

NT Wright Page: Full Transcript of 2-part Conversation; Downloadable as a PDF

http://ntwrightpage.com/2016/05/09/an-evening-conversation-on-jesus-and-paul/

Links to MP3's

http://ntwrightpage.com/2016/05/06/jesus-durham-nt-seminar/ (re: Jesus)

http://ntwrightpage.com/2016/05/06/paul-durham-nt-seminar/ (re: Paul)

God's Righteousness & Our Justification (2003)

http://hornes.org/theologia/mark-horne/gods-righteousness-and-our-justification

Excerpt:

One of the questions that is commonly asked about Tom Wright regards his teaching about how Paul uses the term "the righteousness of God." Since Wright's interpretation of the term in Paul's epistles is commonly mentioned in passing but rarely analyzed, it seems like a good idea to explicitly spell it out here so people can possess an informed opinion.

One should keep in mind a couple of things:

1. This has nothing conceptually to do with "the new perspective." It has nothing to do with the nature of first-century Judaism as being either grace-based or merit-based.

2. Wright's exegesis in no way contradicts the claims of The Westminster Confession and Catechisms. One can still believe (and should) that the righteousness of Christ is imputed to sinners who are united to Christ by faith. Nothing changes if one agrees with Wright about "the righteousness of God." Wright doesn't think that texts like Romans 1.17 are speaking of the imputation of God's righteousness to sinners. He may be right or wrong, but there is plenty of canonical grounding for Christ obeying and dying in the place of his people without those texts…

…Remember Isaiah 56.1b: "For My salvation is about to come / And My righteousness to be revealed." The Gospel declares the death and resurrection of Jesus and in doing so reveals God's righteousness. Notice Paul's parallelism between "the righteousness of God is revealed" and "the wrath of God is revealed." Obviously, "the wrath of God" is not something imputed to sinners so that they are reckoned as being wrathful with God's own wrath. Rather, it is God's character manifested toward them. That is yet another contextual cue demanding that we understand "the righteousness of God" to refer to his own character which compelled him to act on behalf of his people.

Finally, one needs to remember that the close proximity of references to God's righteousness and those to justification are perfectly understandable without any notion of a transfer of "righteousness" from God to the sinner. (To repeat yet again: I am not denying that Jesus' righteous status is shared with His people. It most certainly is. I am simply denying that Paul is speaking of such imputation in these specific passages.) Consider Psalm 35.24: "Judge me, O LORD, according to Thy righteousness." Though two different word groups are used, the Psalmist is plainly asking for justification and believes it will be given to him on the basis of God's righteousness. But there is no transfer imagined here. The point is that God's character and integrity guarantee that he will vindicate those who belong to him. Likewise, in Isaiah 45.24, 25, the righteousness of God means he can be trusted to fulfill his promise so that "all the offspring of Israel" will be "justified."…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The New Perspective in Northern Ireland

http://www.patheos.com/blogs/jesuscreed/2016/04/05/the-new-perspective-in-northern-ireland/

Excerpt:

Here is Patrick Mitchel's chart that maps Paul's theology of the Christian life (and he offers observations showing no chart can contain it all):

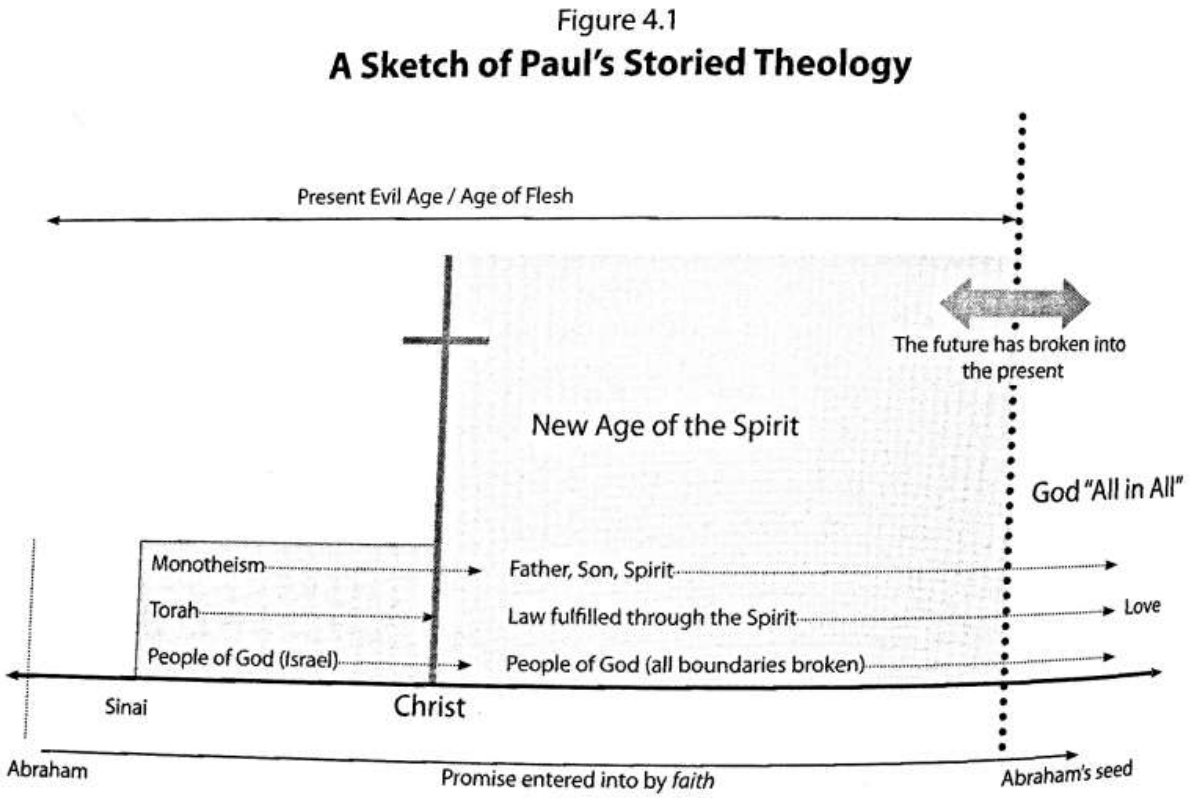

image: http://wp.production.patheos.com/blogs/jesuscreed/files/2016/04/Screen-Shot-2016-04-02-at-8.51.40-AM.png

Notice continuity, the covenant God makes with Abraham setting the Bible's narrative, the importance of some discontinuity, the prominence of Spirit, and the pervasive reshaping under the influence of eschatology. This in contrast to the simplistic but appealing to some law vs. grace narrative/ideology that at times overrides all other themes.

With NT Wright, Mitchel observes a "restructuring" of monotheism, Torah and the people of God. Justification, too, then is inseparably linked to ethical transformation in the new age of the Spirit that generates transformation.

See also: Calvinism

and: Reformed Theology vs Lutheranism vs Calvinism vs Weslyanism

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Centrality or Directionality in Pauline Theology?

https://dmyencich.wordpress.com/2016/10/11/centrality-and-or-directionality-in-pauline-theology/

Excerpt:

(If ever there were an image begging for Raiden-style lightning bolts to be Photoshopped in, it's this picture of my friend, mentor, and former NT professor, Rollin Ramsaran.)

Many debates between the "New" and "Old Perspective" on Paul (hereafter 'NP' and 'OP,' respectively) rise and fall on defining the center of Paul's theology. For various OP/Lutheran readers of Paul, the center is justification by faith. For Albert Schweitzer, the center was being "in Christ," with justification nestled as a subsidiary within that center. Schweitzer's "crater-within-a-crater" reading of Paul's central concerns was then redeployed, in modified form, in E. P. Sanders' Paul and Palestinian Judaism, one of the first shots fired by what has later come to be known as the NP. What is important here is that all three—Luther, Schweitzer, and Sanders—assumed that Paul's theology had a center and that identifying this center was the first step toward satisfactory exegesis.

Identifying the 'center' of Paul's thought, however, is not the only way we can attempt to understand and describe the apostle's theology. In the analysis of any discourse, talk of a "center" is profoundly metaphorical. Neither Paul's letters nor theology are geometrical shapes; in treating them as one, we deploy "center" as a heuristic metaphor to describe how his thought 'works' (again, another metaphor!). In the study of Paul, attempting to describe his center has its benefits. It allows for taxonomy, for the identification of all the various parts and pieces of Paul's theology and the singular driving force that lends animation to them all. But, again, "center" is not the only metaphor we can use and, by using it, we necessarily risk over-emphasizing one thing and under-emphasizing others. There are other options.

Another metaphor we might use instead of "center" is "direction." As my seminary mentor, Rollin Ramsaran, put it to me at SBL last year: Paul's theology doesn't have a center; it moves in a direction. This is reflected in Ramsaran's preferred method of teaching Paul: the Pauline Moral Reasoning Chart or, as many Emmanuel Christian Seminary students and alumni affectionately call it, the Paul Chart:

(C) Rollin Ramsaran, teaching document. Reproduced from my class notes.

Here Ramsaran, who is neither OP nor NP (but maybe he might hang out with some of the Apocalypticists? I'll have to ask him next time we break bread), emphasizes that Paul's theology doesn't have a center but rather a beginning point: God's grace, extended first to Israel through the Law and now to the gentiles through Christ. The proper human response to this grace is faith, which then leads to the gift of the Spirit (which binds Christians one to another and together to Christ), and so on. Already the center(s) described by Luther, Schweitzer, and Sanders are subsumed in the directional schematic.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Importantly, though, they are not downplayed; they are simply re-contextualized as stops on the way to the telos of Pauline theology, the parousia.

The Paul Chart doesn't play out exactly like this in every single letter but, among the undisputeds, it's hard to argue that this isn't Paul's basic order of operations. As Ramsaran teaches it, we can use the chart not only to read Paul as a thinker but to read and identify "the weight" of an individual letter ("the weight" = which point[s] on the chart are emphasized most in a given letter). As part of my preparation to teach a series on Paul at a local church, I ran each of the undisputed letters through Ramsaran's chart. While only the longer letters (Rom, 1 Cor) run through the whole chart, every aspect appears and works out in this basic order depending on the circumstances of a given letter.

Reading a whole slew of NP material, I have been wondering of late if "center" is the best metaphor we might use. While Ramsaran's Paul Chart does not unseat the explanatory power of all aspects of the NP (nor does it even attempt to), this seems to me to be the better way to map Paul's theology. By insisting on a center, we must necessarily relegate other aspects of Paul's thought to a periphery. If, on the other hand, we insist on reading Paul directionally, fewer items of import (e.g., eschatology, ethics) are pushed toward a periphery and are instead contextualized within a distinctly Pauline theological teleology.

10/13/2016: I've since used Ramsaran's chart to read Galatians. You can read my interpretation here.

My friend, Jordan Kellicut, sent me this image, which is spiffier than the one drawn from my notes. His assistant, Jessie, at Oakland Drive Christian Church cleaned this up nicely.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Wheaton Theology Conference with N.T. Wright (2010)

http://www.andyrowell.net/andy_rowell/2010/04/audio-and-video-of-the-wheaton-theology-conference-with-nt-wright-is-now-available-online-for-free.html

- I would highly recommend Richard Hays's lecture which explores the relationship between Scripture and tradition. I have blogged about it at: N. T. Wright, Richard Hays, and Karl Barth on Scripture and Tradition (See below)
- I would also highly recommend Kevin Vanhoozer's address in which he tries to look for common ground with the Neo-Reformed and New Perspective regarding justification. (See below)
- Jeremy Begbie's lecture about features of Wright's ecclesiology which have particular appeal among those interested in new expressions of the church is also very good. (See below)
- Wright's chapel message in which he urges students to memorize Ephesians is also good. (See below)
- Wright's final lecture on Paul is a preview of his big book on Paul which may be available in 2012. (See below)
- All of the lectures are worthwhile listening to.

See Michael Gorman's overview of the whole conference:

N.T. Wright Wheaton Conference Report (1)
http://www.michaeljgorman.net/2010/04/18/ntw-wheaton-report-1/

N.T. Wright Wheaton Conference Report (2)
http://www.michaeljgorman.net/2010/04/19/nt-wright-wheaton-conference-report-2/

N.T. Wright Wheaton Conference Report (3)
http://www.michaeljgorman.net/2010/04/20/nt-wright-wheaton-conference-report-3/

N.T. Wright Himself at the N.T. Wright Wheaton Conference (4)
http://www.michaeljgorman.net/2010/04/22/nt-wright-at-the-nt-wright-wheaton-conference-4/

N.T. Wright's Pauline Respondents: Conference Report (5)
http://www.michaeljgorman.net/2010/04/26/nt-wrights-pauline-respondents-conference-report-5/

(Professor) N.T. Wright Going to St. Andrews http://www.michaeljgorman.net/2010/04/27/professor-nt-wright-going-to-st-andrews/

Resources for Wheaton Theology Conference on N. T. Wright http://www.andyrowell.net/andy_rowell/2010/04/resources-for-wheaton-theology-conference-on-n-t-wright.html

N.T. Wright for Everyone: The Historical Jesus by Kevin Hanks
https://www.scribd.com/doc/27995789/NT-Wright-for-Everyone-The-Historical-Jesus

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

N.T. Wright for Everyone: the Apostle Paul by Nijay K. Gupta
https://www.scribd.com/document/26629137/NT-Wright-for-Everyone-the-Apostle-Paul

N.T. Wright for Everyone: Biblical Theology By Kyle T. Fever
https://www.scribd.com/doc/27022370/NT-Wright-on-Biblical-Theology

A Theological Dialogue with N.T. Wright – Lectures (iTunes)
https://itunes.apple.com/us/podcast/a-theological-dialogue-with-n-t-wright/id430717675?mt=2

N.T. Wright | Wheaton College Chapel Message (2010) re: Ephesians
http://player.mashpedia.com/player.php?q=WCRMRKSiV2c [Video] [NOTE: Requires Registering] https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=WCRMRKSiV2c [Video] includes

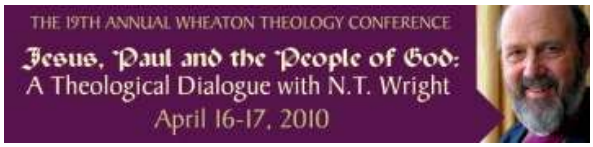
Overview of Ephesians in 15 Minutes by N. T. Wright [subset of above Chapel Message]
https://mysteryoffaithblog.com/2010/09/27/n-t-wright-overview-of-ephesians-in-15-minutes/ [links to video]

Wheaton Theology Conference | Panel: Wright, Hays, Walsh, Keesmaat, Thompson, and Perrin
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=XNv4ww1TbtM [Video]

Richard Hays | Knowing Jesus: Story, History, and the Question of Truth (2010)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=a2FlVhQEIaM [Video]

Another example of Dr. Hays' lecturing (not related to conference)…
Richard Hays: The Creed as Hermeneutical Lens for Ready Scripture, and Vice Versa
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=KU6FJWE-EO4 [Video] (2013) AnglicanTV

How do we read the Bible? How does the way we read the Bible inform our theology and ministry? Modern and postmodern methods of Biblical interpretation (hermeneutics) have tended to read the Bible as an isolated text with little unified meaning or coherence—but this has not always been the case. Throughout most of church history, Christians have read the Bible under the guidance of the Rule of Faith and the great Creeds of the Church. How does such a creedal hermeneutic square with contemporary Christian and secular approaches to the Bible, and what are the implications of this approach for Christian theology, spirituality, and mission?



See Wright's response to Hays…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Hays v. Wright at Wheaton (2010) – Commentary

Part 1 of 2: http://www.jrdkirk.com/2010/04/19/hays-v-wright-at-wheaton-part-1-of-2/

At the Wheaton Theology Conference on N. T. Wright, Richard Hays gave a critical assessment (above) of Wright's Jesus, as represented in Jesus and the Victory of God.

I want to respond to this lecture because it brings to the surface the passion behind my next major research project on the humanity of Jesus.

First off, I want to say where I agree with Hays. Jesus and the Victory of God is valuable as a "theology of the synoptic gospels," and as something that gives us a historically contextualized reading of that sort of Jesus.

But our Jesus is the canonical Jesus, which means that we are not trying to look through the gospels at something that lies behind, but to understand the Jesus whom we meet in the canonical stories. I find JVG valuable as a help toward understanding these stories, not as an approximation of "the historical Jesus."

Also, I agree with Hays that we are to read the gospels with a "resurrection hermeneutic," because I believe that the gospels were written with a resurrection hermeneutic.

Without detracting from these base-hits, and in large part because of them, I call foul on a couple of other points. First, Hays spoke of "resurrection hermeneutics" in the same breath as "incarnational hermeneutics". These are fundamentally different for one important reason: whereas all four gospels affirm the resurrection, only John has an incarnation. So, while reading these with a prior understanding of Jesus as resurrected Lord is a good reading of the gospels as written, reading them all as witnesses to the incarnate God is truly bringing in the theology of the church, and requires its own separate argument.

And I want to suggest that Hays has provided the strongest argument against an incarnation hermeneutic in his critique of JVG.

One place at which Hays finds JVG wanting is that it does not give due attention to the unique voices of each of the four Gospels we have in our New Testament canon. It is insufficiently attentive to the particular stories of Matthew, Mark, and Luke (Wright's sources). But this is the very reason why an incarnation hermeneutic is inappropriate for interpreting the same books! Hays is asking for a canonical reading that flattens out the polyvalent witness, the individual voices, of the Gospels.

Resurrection hermeneutic? Sure. Because the resurrection/ascension is Jesus' enthronement (Matthew, Luke), so when Jesus comes proclaiming the reign of God, he is enacting something that we know more fully once he is enthroned as the one who reigns at God's right hand.

Why is it that I am so resistant to allowing the church's tradition to transform the witness of the Synoptic Gospels? Tune in tomorrow.

Part 2 of 2: http://www.jrdkirk.com/2010/04/20/hays-v-wright-at-wheaton-part-2-of-2/

This is the second part of my engagement with Richard Hays's critique of N. T. Wright at the Wheaton Theology Conference last week. I left off last time with a suggestion that we have to separate the idea of a "resurrection hermeneutic" (Yay!) from an "incarnation hermeneutic" (Boo!).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

This time I need to say a bit more about why this distinction is necessary; in particular, today's post indicates why I find no power whatsoever in the comment, "What? Like the church has been misreading the Bible for 2,000 years?"

In the short response to Hays that Wright makes at the end of the Marianne Meye Thompson (peace be upon her) video, one thing he says is that Jesus comes proclaiming the reign of God–something that the creeds of the church are entirely silent about.And now I'm going to say something that I know will raise the hackles of so many of my good friends–who will, no doubt, fill the comments with quotes and indications about why I'm wrong. So be it. Enlighten me!

What Wright is pointing out is one sliver of a larger problem with "the church" as a guide to reading Jesus: when the church cared about Jesus as a Jewish man it gave us the Synoptic Gospels, when this became irrelevant and/or an embarrassment, it gave us the rule of faith.

The significance of Jesus' humanity, according to the creeds, is that it allows God to die. And this is, of course, a tremendously important component in Christian theology.

But the silence of the creeds on the life of Jesus is more than telling. Questions of ontology so consumed the energies of early Christological debates, and the church fathers so quickly became Gentiles, that the story of Jesus as told in the Synoptics was essentially irrelevant for fundamental Christian belief–as irrelevant as the story of Israel itself.

The Christology of the church is not a careful reflection on, and integration of, the entirety of the NT canon. It is a reflection of the church's prioritization of John in the midst of debates that pressed for clarity on Jesus' ontology. But these debates ensued without a concomitant realization that the "ontology" of the Gospels is a storied ontology about, first and foremost, a first century Jewish man. This is why there remains a massive amount of work to be done, integrating a more robust human Christology into the faith of the church.

So, do we read the Synoptic Gospels with a resurrection hermeneutic? Absolutely! Because the resurrected Lord is the one who came exercising power and authority with the advent of the Kingdom of God.

But do we read the Synoptic Gospels with an incarnational hermeneutic? No, because we realize that the Jesus of the creeds, the "incarnate God", has no need of Mark 1-14. And this makes me highly skeptical that the tradition is a good guide for reading the story that Mark chose to write.

As Hays argued in his critique of Jesus and the Victory of God, the church chose to give us a four-fold Gospel canon. Honoring that polyphonic tradition means that we must not allow John's Jesus (= the church's Jesus plus a couple verses from Matthew 1 or Luke 1) to run roughshod over the very different stories that Matthew, Mark, and Luke chose to tell.

Marianne Meye Thompson | The Gospel of John Meets Jesus and the Victory of God (2010)

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=D2bcXk2pUwE [Video]

Nicholas Perrin | Jesus' Eschatology and Kingdom Ethics: Ever the Twain Shall Meet (2010)

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=xcF74b99pxg [Video]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

N.T. Wright | Paul and the People of God (2010)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=aewGFwNldzw [Video]

Wheaton Theology Conference | Panel: Wright, Vanhoozer, Begbie, Bockmuehl, and Humphrey (2010)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=PSieEAXSsXY [Video]

Kevin J. Vanhoozer | The State of the Union with Christ in St. Paul and in Protestant Soteriology (2010) "Wrighting the Wrongs of the Reformation" [Recommended]
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=HwIifBl-H5I [Video]

Alt. link: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=D1atyv0VZFk [Video]

Jeremy Begbie | The Shape of Things to Come? Wright Amidst Emerging Ecclesiologies (2010)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=TLb2jDmM9kg [Video]

N.T. Wright | Jesus and the People of God (2010)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=1AukgNlAgiI [Video]

N. T. Wright, Richard Hays, and Karl Barth on Scripture and Tradition (2010)
http://www.andyrowell.net/andy_rowell/2010/04/n-t-wright-richard-hays-and-karl-barth-on-scripture-and-tradition.html

Excerpt:

Richard Hays began today's Wheaton Theology Conference with a fascinating appreciation and critique of N.T Wright's work. Hays noted how surprised he was to find a couple of years ago that Wright was very suspicious of overly-theologically-determined readings of Scripture while Hays is trying to more explicitly ground his interpretation in the church's tradition.

As the day went on, it occurred to me that Hays and Wright have slightly different audiences in mind when they write. The two opponents Hays usually has in mind are flaccid Christianity and supposedly benevolent secularism; whereas Wright is usually trying to combat Christian fundamentalism / dogmatism and atheists (like Hitchens, Dawkins and some members of the Jesus Seminar). Hays is concerned about the assumptions of the New Testament guild, the excesses of the secular university, and the theological dilution of mainline Christianity. Wright is concerned about calcified theological paradigms, systematic theologians acting as heresy police, and professors who bully impressionable students to jettison Christian belief. Hays's opponents are grayer whereas Wright's are more black and white. Hays noted and Wright affirmed today that Wright worries about the reading of Scripture being confined to the attic (by the fundamentalist) or in the basement (by the atheist bully).

Hays prefers the method of unmasking hidden assumptions and out-churching his opponents with beauty; whereas Wright prefers the method of recovering the Bible and out-arguing his opponents with reason. Hays thinks the presuppositions of his opponents are unexamined and need to be exposed as such. He has little hope they will be persuaded but thinks that the witness of the cruciform community might win a hearing. Wright believes his historical arguments may give his opponents pause or may at least slow them down and he hopes that his arguments will at least reinforce the wavering Christian.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Hays said he would like to get his friends Karl Barth (1886-1968) and N.T. Wright (1948-) together for a chat with one another. Wright expressed in the evening lecture that he is concerned about Barth's rejection of natural theology. In particular, I think Wright is concerned that Barth would be contemptuous of Wright's historical work with the Gospels--"Nein, Tom!" More likely I think, Barth would want to more clearly situate theologically what Wright is doing (as Hays and Thompson attempted to do today).

In particular, I think Wright would appreciate Barth's 1963 book Evangelical Theology which describes how Barth thinks theology should be done. Here are two quotes that I think theologically frame what Wright is doing in his work.

Barth explains that a Christian should approach the Scriptures by asking "what are the Scriptures saying about God?" In order to attempt to answer this question, Barth endorses the use of any tool including historical work.

"Its [Theology's] searching of the Scriptures consists in asking the texts whether and to what extent they might witness to him [God] . . . Every possible means must be used: philological and historical criticism and analysis, careful consideration of the nearer and the more remote textual relationships, and not least, the enlistment of every device of the conjectural imagination that is available." (Evangelical Theology, 34-35).

In his books which are often historical and apologetic works, Wright does exactly what Barth says above--Wright explores how the Scriptures speak of God. Wright says to the reader something like, "This is what these texts seem to say about Jesus. Here is where I looked. This is what I found." That is proclamation. That is witness.

Wright is concerned that dogmatic or fundamentalist Christian theology functionally discourages Scripture reading. It says, "We have already found everything there is to be found. Don't bother looking." Barth would affirm Wright's concern. Barth welcomes revisiting the tradition to test its faithfulness to the Scriptures.

Theology has to reconsider the confession of the community, testing and rethinking it in the light of its enduring foundation, object, and content. The faith of the community is asked to seek understanding. Faith seeking understanding, Fides quaerens intellectum, is what theology must embody and represent. What distinguishes faith from blind assent is just its special character as "faith seeking understanding." Certainly, the assumption behind all this will be that the community itself may have been on the right track in the recent or remote past, or at any rate on a not altogether crooked path. Consequently, fundamental trust instead of mistrust will be the initial attitude of theology toward the tradition which determines the present-day Church. And any questions and proposals which theology has to direct to the tradition will definitely not be forced on the community like a decree; any such findings will be presented for consideration only as wellweighed suggestions. Nevertheless, no ecclesiastical authority should be allowed by theology to hinder it from honestly pursuing its critical task, and the same applies to any frightened voices from the midst of the rest of the congregation. The task of theology is to discuss freely the reservations as well as the proposals for improvement which occur to it in reflection on the inherited witness of the community. Theology says credo, I believe, along with the present-day community and its fathers. But it says credo ut intelligam, "I believe in order to understand." To achieve this understanding, it must be granted leeway for the good of the community itself. (Evangelical Theology, 42-43).

It seems to me Hays, Wright and Barth are quite close on all of these matters but that it is useful to have iron sharpen iron.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Wheaton Conference Report (2010)
http://www.reformation21.org/articles/wheaton-conference-report.php

 End: Wheaton Theology Conference with N.T. Wright Resources ********

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Misc. (not directly related to anything else in these notes, but of interest nevertheless):

Os Guinness | Transforming the World Yet Again (2015) Wheaton Chapel
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=FZHmpvuSUJk [Video]

Evening Conversation with Os Guinness The Trinity Forum
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=B7Rq-zHJWas [Video] (2013)

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Hgk6hPaQ_p4 [Video] (2014)

ZI Symposium with Ravi Zacharias, Os Guinness, and Edmund Chan (2017)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=tHQaHl04thY [Video]

Edmund Chan – "The Heart of Success Re-defined"
Os Guinness – "The Heartbreak of Our Nation"
Ravi Zacharias – "Our Heaven-Sent Message"

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Covenantal Nomism

[Jump to the next section]

(NOTE: "nomism" is from Greek for "law")

Covenantal Nomism: Wikipedia

Covenantal Nomism (from Deibert on Falk on Sanders)

http://www.tyndale.cam.ac.uk/Tyndale/staff/Head/DeibertonFalkonSanders.PDF [PDF]

Excerpt:

The 'pattern' or 'structure' of covenantal nomism is this:

(1) God has chosen Israel and (2) given the law.

The law implies both (3) God's promise to maintain the election and (4) the requirement to obey.

(5) God rewards obedience and punishes transgression.

(6) The law provides for means of atonement, and atonement results in (7) maintenance or re-establishment of the covenantal relationship.

(8) All those who are maintained in the covenant by obedience, atonement and God's mercy belong to the group which will be saved."

Covenantal nomism? (From A comparative review of Sanders and Carson et al)

http://www.rabbisaul.com/articles/nomism.php

Excerpt:

Briefly put, covenantal nomism is the view that one's place in God's plan is established on the basis of the covenant and that the covenant requires as the proper response of man his obedience to its commandments, while providing means of atonement for transgression. (Sanders, 75)

The History of the Interpretation of the Apostle Paul

http://www.tyndale.cam.ac.uk/Tyndale/staff/Head/Lent_07_Handout.htm

Excerpt:

i. General

> For Judaism: "obedience maintains one's position in the covenant, but it does not earn God's grace as such. It simply keeps an individual in the group which is the recipient of God's grace." (p420) In other words: "obedience is universally held to be the behaviour appropriate to being in the covenant, not the means of earning God's grace." (421).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

'Israel's situation in the covenant required the law to be obeyed as fully and completely as possible … as the only proper response to the God who chose Israel and gave them commandments' (p. 81).

ii. Covenantal Nomism:

"(1) God has chosen Israel and (2) given the law. The law implies both (3) God's promise to maintain election and (4) the requirement to obey. (5) God rewards obedience and punishes transgression. (6) The law provides for means of atonement, and atonement results in (7) maintenance or re-establishment of the covenantal relationship. (8) All those who are maintained in the covenant by obedience, atonement and God's mercy belong to the group which will be saved. An important interpretation of the first and last points is that election and ultimately salvation are considered to be by God's mercy rather than human achievement." (p422)

iii. "basic consistency in the underlying pattern of religion"

iv. "On the assumption that a religion should be understood on the basis of its own self-presentations, as long as these are not manifestly bowdlerized, and not on the basis of polemical attacks, we must say that Judaism of before 70 kept grace and works in the right perspective, did not trivialize the commandments of God and was not especially marked by hypocrisy. The frequent Christian charge against Judaism, it must be recalled, is not that some individual Jews misunderstood, misapplied and abused their religion, but that Judaism necessarily tends towards petty legalism, self-serving and self-deceiving casuistry, and a mixture of arrogance and lack of confidence in God. But the surviving Jewish literature is as free of these characteristics as any I have ever read. By consistently maintaining the basic framework of covenantal nomism, the gift and demand of God were kept in a healthy relationship with each other, the minutiae of the law were observed on the basis of the large principles of religion and because of commitment to God, and humility before God who chose and would ultimately redeem Israel was encouraged." (p426f)

v. 4 Ezra atypical.

Two Perspectives on Paul (Lutheran / Traditional Perspective vs The "New Perspective")

http://normtroubles.blogspot.com/2007/09/two-perspective-on-paul.html (Bruce Fisk)

Excerpt:

State of 1st c. Judaism

Burdened by the Law; dead in sin; marked by hypocrisy and legalism; bound up with sin, death & law (in contrast to grace, life & faith).

Vibrant, dynamic, diverse; a religion of grace; pattern of religion: "covenantal nomism*" (Sanders); in (spiritual) exile (Wright)

*"Covenantal Nomism" (according to Sanders): the notion that the Israelite's place in God's plan is determined by the covenant which God established with Israel, and that obedience to the law is Israel's proper response to God's initial act of grace. (NOTE: "nomism" is from Greek for "law")

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

One Law, One People: Thoughts on Covenantal Nomism (By Ariel ben-Lyman HaNaviy)

https://bouldermenschristianfellowship.org/2013/09/06/covenantal-nomism/

Excerpt:

Power Points:

- What Sha'ul is really talking about when he employs the Greek phrase "ergon nomos," translated most often as "deeds of Law" is in actuality a technical phrase that the Judaisms of Sha'ul's day employed to speak of the halakhah, that is, the proper way in which a Jew is to walk out Torah.
- Indeed, the prevailing view of the sages of the 1st Century held to the common belief that Isra'el and Isra'el alone shared a place in the world to come. Thus, if a non-Jew wished to enter into HaShem's blessings and promises, such a person had to convert to Judaism first.
- For Sha'ul no such 'man-made" conversion policy existed in Scripture!
- By contrast, Sha'ul taught most assuredly that Gentiles were grafted into Isra'el the same way that Avraham was counted as righteous by God in B'resheet (Genesis) chapter 15: faith in the promised Word of the LORD.
- The halakhah that teaches Gentile inclusion only by way of conversion (read most often as "circumcision" in Galatians) was naturally at odds with the True Gospel of Gentile inclusion by faith in Yeshua plus nothing!
- If we understand that quite often Sha'ul's use of the term circumcision in Galatians is actually shorthand for "the man-made ritual that seeks to turn Gentiles into Jews" then the letter begins to make more sense Hebraically and contextually.

Conclusions:

- God is the God of both Jews and Gentiles! One need not change his station in life before God can accept him. What is more, the real change that takes place in a person's life is effected by the Ruach HaKodesh when, because of Yeshua's bloody, sacrificial death, the sinner takes on the status of righteous! Man cannot add to that which God perfects. A conversion to Judaism (a.k.a. circumcision), in Sha'ul's mind, added nothing to those wishing to be counted as true Israelites in the Torah Community. To Sha'ul, their genuine faith in the Promised Word of HaShem, as evidenced by the genuine working of the Spirit among them, was all the "identity" they would ever need! Once counted as righteous by the Righteous One Himself, all the new [Gentile] believer needed to do was begin to walk in that righteousness, a walk already described in the pages of the Written Torah, a walk formerly impossible due to the deadness of flesh and bondage to sin.
- Failure to continue in genuine trusting faithfulness for either Jew or Gentile participants invited God to place them in a position that Sha'ul called "broken off." In other words, natural branches (Jews) could be broken off because of lack of trust, and grafted-in branches (Gentiles) could also be broken off due to lack of trust (read Romans chapter 11)! Far from purporting that some "ethnic-driven" halakhah secured one's place in the 'olam haba (Age to Come), the native born Jew, the convert Jew, and the good old fashioned Gentiles all faced the same penalty for remorseless lack of faith: spiritual death. We see then that the Torah is the universal document for both peoples and it outlines God's plan for all mankind, both Jews and Gentiles.

The "mystery of the Gospel" is that Isra'el is actually comprised of both Jews and Gentiles! To be grafted into the family of God is to join oneself to a Jewish Olive Tree without having to succumb to any kind of man-made conversion policy whatsoever! To this end, one becomes submissive to the instructions and righteousness of God, and inherits the blessings of God, whether he is of Gentile or Jewish stock!

Thus, as we unlock some of Paul's technical phrases we find that:

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

- "Works/Deeds of [the] Law"=most often refers to a prevailing Jewish policy that teaches that the Torah is for Jews only and that ethnic status is the qualifying factor for pleasing God.

- "Under [the] Law"=most often is shorthand for "under the condemnation of the law as it pertains to unregenerate sinners, their proclivity and slavery to sin, and the just punishment reserved for such individuals."

Just Another Jim: Covenantal Nomism https://justanotherjim.wordpress.com/tag/covenantal-nomism/ (Tag)

Covenantal Momism – Oxford Biblical Studies
http://www.oxfordbiblicalstudies.com/article/opr/t94/e446

A term coined for the OT belief that God has chosen Israel and given the Law. God will be faithful to his promise but the nation is required to obey him. The Law provides the means for atonement which maintains the covenantal relationship.

Covenantal Nomism and Justification (by a member of a Messianic Congregation) http://www.tetzetorah.com/covenantal-nomism-and-justification/ [Recommended]
(Provides a different viewing angle on the NPP issues)

Excerpt:

Before we transition for the most part from circumcision and works of the Law into a different Pauline phrase known as "under the Law" (in Section Seven below), I want to tie works of the Law together with the pattern of religion in 1st century Isra'el by briefly examining the theological concepts known as "covenantal nomism" and "justification." If, as I maintain, 1st century Isra'el did not define "works of the Law" (i.e., Torah observance) as legalism (the way the Church defines legalism), how then exactly did she conceptualize and define her Law-keeping? What was her motive for remaining so devoted to the Torah and subsequently to the covenants? Did she believe her Torah observance granted her "salvation"? Or perhaps did she instead believe her Torah observance helped to maintain a status of non-idolater (viz "justified existing covenant member") since her initial and ongoing "salvation" was believed to have been gained by belonging to the people group of Isra'el, and therefore, such maintenance was necessary to stay "saved"?

What Nanos and other recent scholars (E.P. Sanders, James D. G. Dunn, N. T. Wright, et al) are describing, as pertaining to Paul's 1st century Judaism and how it reportedly defined itself in terms of patterns of religion, has been carefully labeled as covenantal nomism.

> Where Christians [e.g. Nanos] Got it Wrong with Paul – Scot McKnight
> http://www.patheos.com/blogs/jesuscreed/2012/08/20/where-christians-got-it-wrong-with-paul/

Theopedia.com introduces and describes covenantal nomism for us in the following way…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

HERMENEUTICS (II): Concerning the New Perspective on Paul

http://alpharetta-bible-study.com/images/PDFs/2013/05%20-%20HERMENEUTICS%20(2)%20by%20Marc%20Gibson.pdf [PDF]

Excerpt:

We should begin with presenting a basic understanding of the NPP (which is easier said than done). The following chart illustrates the two basic premises of the NPP and the issues that derive from them:

("nomism" is from Greek for "law")

Note: This chart is based on material by Donald Hagner, "Paul and Judaism: The Jewish Matrix of Early Christianity: Issues inthe Current Debate." [PDF], 111-116. The text is his and the chart arrangement is by the writer of the article.

Note: The above article and its viewpoint is critical of the New Perspective on Paul (including for chart)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Additional related references related to covenantal nomism…

Beyond Covenantal Nomism: Paul, Judaism and Perfect Obedience

http://basketoffigs.org/NewPerspectives/das.pdf [PDF] (NOTE: "nomism" is from Greek for "law")

Review: The New Perspective on Paul: An Introduction, by Kent L. Yinger (2011)

http://www.thepaulpage.com/the-new-perspective-on-paul-an-introduction/

Excerpt:

…Within the boundaries that are explored in chapters five through eight, however, the book is surprisingly thorough, touching not only on Christian debates about covenantal nomism (pp. 39-46) but a wide variety of issues: works of law (pp. 48-50), call vs. conversion (pp. 50-54), the question of Paul's introspective conscience (pp. 56-58), the description of Paul as a sinner (pp. 59,60), the debate about whether pistis christou should be rendered "faith in Christ" or "faith of Christ" (pp. 69,70), and of course several key texts (Gal. 3:10-13, pp. 54-56; Phil. 3:6, pp. 58,59; Rom. 7 , pp. 60-63; Rom. 10:3, pp. 63-65; Rom. 4:1-5, pp. 65-67; and disputed Pauline texts, pp. 67-69, with a helpful citation from this reviewer).

Covenantal Nomism vs Variegated Nomism [PDF]

http://alpharetta-bible-study.com/images/PDFs/2013/03%20-%20Covenantal%20Nomism%20by%20David%20Norfleet.pdf

A Review Article by Don Garlington:

D. A. Carson, Peter T. O'Brien, and Mark A. Seifrid, eds., Justification and Variegated Nomism, Volume I, The Complexities of Second Temple Judaism

http://www.thepaulpage.com/Variegated_Nomism.pdf [PDF] (c. 2001?)

See also: The Creation Covenant in the Appendix of the article

Atl. Link: https://www.scribd.com/document/199676841/Variegated-Nomism

The New Perspective – A survey of the New Perspective on Paul (c. 2007 ?)

http://lectionarystudies.com/studyn/newperspective.html [Critical of NPP)

Excerpt:

…New perspective scholars claim that Paul was no Luther oppressed by sin and guilt, driven to desperation by Biblical law. Yet, it does seem likely that they have underplayed the role of the law. Law obedience is not just a status privilege, but a covenant requirement. First century Judaism saw the Torah as something more than just a life-style manual for members of the covenant. See Justification and Variegated Nomism: Vol.#1: The complexities of Second Temple Judaism, ed. Carson, 2001. [Note: see above reference link for a review of by Don Garlington] On the other hand, there is much to commend the observation that neither were first century Jews crude legalists (the use of the law to earn salvation). Stephen Wasterholm in Perspectives Old and New on Paul: The Lutheran Paul and his critics, 2004, although soundly reformed ("Lutheran"), holds that Pharisaic Judaism "knew and depended on God's grace and did not promote a self-righteous pursuit of salvation by works."

In the end this debate comes down to Paul's understanding of the law. Sanders observation that "works of the law", for a first century Jew, are the deeds done in obedience to the Torah for the purpose of maintaining their standing before God ("covenant nomism - the maintenance of status" rather than "covenant legalism"), has much to commend it. Yet, rather than seeing the faith / obedience correlatives as positives, it is more than likely that nomism is the very heresy that Paul is attacking. Working to retain stading before God and/or progress that standing, in the sense of advancing holiness, cuts at the very heart of a right-standing before God which is "reckoned" by "faith" (Christ's faith/faithfulness and our faith in his faith/faithfulness - right-standing has always been reckoned by faith, cf. Abraham [faith in the faithfulness of God]). Obedience (always imperfect) is a product of faith and secures nothing, nor serves any meritorious end.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

So, what do we draw from all this? For Paul, "works of the law" (the strict obedience of the Torah for the purpose of maintaining and/or progressing right standing before God - nomism) is a heresy. Right-standing before God (covenant compliance / inclusion / acceptance) rests wholly on God's grace (God's covenant mercy facilitated in the faithfulness of Christ), and is appropriated through the instrument of faith - "from faith first to last". It is very unlikely that Paul is arguing that justification is a mechanism by which God includes Gentiles with the people of God in these last days. It is far more likely that Paul understands justification as a divine action "to set right before God", Bruce, which righteous state is realized in union with Christ / "in Christ" (righteousness realized in identification with Christ better reflects Pauline throught than imputed righteousness). In simple terms, Paul's argument in Galatians and Romans is not about ecclesiology, but soteriology.

The debate continues. At times, the new perspective edges toward being "another gospel", but at the same time, by challenging Luther's synthesis, it has served as a positive corrective. Romans and Galatians is more about staying saved than getting saved, ie., the problem Paul addresses is nomism, not legalism. None-the-less, I happily leave Luther with the last word. "A Christian is free from all things and over all things so that he needs no works to make him righteous and save him, since faith alone abundantly confers all these things. Should he grow so foolish, however, as to presume to become righteous, free, saved, and a Christian by means of some good work, he would instantly lose faith and all its benefits", Luther, 1520.

("nomism" is from Greek for "law")

Seifrid Essay on Romans 1_18 - 3_20 - From Variegated Nomism (see above references)
http://constantlyreforming.net/mooreish/files/16bf7110-2fc6-4db8-b830-f264e7928eea/Seifrid%20Essay%20on%20Romans%201_18%20-%203_20%20-%20From%20Variegated%20Nomism_searchable.pdf [PDF]

A Review of Justification and Variegated Nomism: Vol. 1 The Complexities of Second Temple Judaism (2003)
https://works.bepress.com/prichard_choi/6/download/

The Obedience of Faith in the Letter to the Romans by Don Garlington (1990)
The Obedience of Faith in the Letter to the Romans: Part 1 [PDF]

The Obedience of Faith in the Letter to the Romans: Part 2 [PDF]
(The Obedience of Faith and Judgment by Works) (by Garlington, Westminster Theological Seminary)

The Obedience of Faith in the Letter to the Romans: Part 3 [PDF]

The Obedience of Faith in the Letter to the Romans: Part 3 (b) [PDF]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Paul Among Jews and Gentiles Pt. 1 (of 4) (2008)

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=qUizdIWpw68 [Video]

Saint Joseph's College Core 4 Lecture on Paul and Romans. This lecture focuses on the historical Jewish context of the letters of Paul. It uses the new perspective and covenantal nomism to reorient our discussion on the Jewish/Christian split in the first few centuries of our common era.

Theologia: Covenantal Nomism

http://hornes.org/theologia/mark-horne/covenantal-nomism

http://hornes.org/mark/2007/06/covenantal-nomism/

Excerpt:

"Covenantal Nomism" sounds like a description of tiny contract-loving creatures who live underground. But it is actually a recent term used to describe the pattern of religious belief and practice in first-century Palestinian Judaism. The idea is that God graciously establishes a structured relationship based on promises, a "covenant," with undeserving sinful creatures. In response, those people are to gratefully follow God because they trust him. The law (in Greek: "nomos") was given to Israel to mark them out as God's covenant people and to give them a tangible way to show their trust in God's promises. In the words of the famous hymn, Covenantal Nomism means "Trust and Obey." To put it another way, Covenantal Nomism means "We love [God] because he first love us" (First John 4.19).

In Covenantal Nomism, it is understood that people continue to sin. The covenant includes the means for being forgiven of sins. These means are not ways to compensate for sins or win back God's love. Rather, they are ways that God has given us, because he already loves us, to put us back on track. For Israel in the Old Testament, these means of dealing with ongoing sin often involved sacrifice. In the New Testament Jesus was revealed to be the true sacrifice who propitiated God's wrath against sin so that now the means of forgiveness are simpler: "if we walk in the light as He Himself is in the light, we have fellowship with one another, and the blood of Jesus His Son cleanses us from all sin. … If we confess our sins, He is faithful and righteous to forgive us our sins and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness" (First John 1.7, 9).

Covenantal Nomism can be contrasted with "Legalism" the idea that one must earn God's favor by doing enough good works. Whether this means that one's alleged good deeds must outweigh his bad, or that certain number of good must be done, or anything else, it is simply contrary to the Bible. According to the Bible we are sinners whose best works are deserving of condemnation due to the perversity of our hearts. The good news is that God freely bestows his love on us and brings us into covenant relationship to himself. He makes us part of his family, his covenant, by giving us faith–belief in the Gospel and trust in His promises. Only by faith are we righteous in God's sight.

An example of Covenantal Nomism can be found in the parents of John the Baptist: "they were both righteous in the sight of God, walking blamelessly in all the commandments and requirements of the Lord" (Luke 1.6). There is no question that John's parents were sinners like the rest of us. But they were counted as righteous and were blameless in their walk.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

There is evidence that Covenantal Nomism was perverted at that time of Jesus. It was perverted because the actual content of God's law had been twisted beyond recognition. For example, Jesus accused the teachers of the Law of setting aside God's word in favor of their own commandments (c.f. Mark 7.8). Related to that, some were teaching that if one kept properly (as defined by rather rigid, man-made standards) certain ritual aspects of God's covenant, one was safe from the wrath of God even though one was flouting the moral laws that God had given his people. Thus, John that Baptist preached, "You brood of vipers, who warned you to flee from the wrath to come? Therefore bring forth fruits in keeping with repentance, and do not begin to say to yourselves, 'We have Abraham for our father,' for I say to you that God is able from these stones to raise up children to Abraham" (Luke 3.7, 8). Interestingly, Luke calls John's harangue, with it's specific moral instruction, "the gospel" (3.18).

Once the Church was established after Pentecost, a new issue arose. Did baptized believing Gentiles need to become circumcised Jews in order to be full members of the Covenant people? At the Jerusalem Council, the answer was firmly "No!" God's covenant people now included both Jew and Gentile without distinction.

Traditionally, some have tried to interpret the issue in Acts 15 as a debate over "legalism." The problem with this is that the Jerusalem Council wrote to the Gentile Christians to do certain things rather than becoming circumcised. "For it seemed good to the Holy Spirit and to us to lay upon you no greater burden than these essentials: that you abstain from things sacrificed to idols and from blood and from things strangled and from fornication; if you keep yourselves free from such things, you will do well" (Acts 15.28, 29).

If the point of being circumcised was to earn God's favor, then that would mean the Jerusalem Council simply came up with a different easier legalism. God forbid! The point was that one is no longer identified as belonging to God's people by circumcision. Rather, one is identified by the gift of faith–responding to the Gospel by repentance and submission to baptism. That gift that is incompatible with idolatry or the commonplace rituals associated with paganism such as Temple prostitution or imbibing blood. (Notice that the prohibition on blood is not unique to Israel but was given to Noah [Genesis 9.4]).

The boundaries of the covenant people of God have changed, but the expectation of a life of continual repentance from sin has not. As the Apostle Paul wrote: "Circumcision is nothing, and uncircumcision is nothing, but what matters is the keeping of the commandments of God" (First Corinthians 7.19).

"Covenantal Nomism" in Jubilees?

http://szabadosadam.hu/divinity/wp-content/uploads/2010/09/Covenantal-Nomism-in-Jubilees.pdf [PDF]

Covenantal Nomism as a 'Symbolic Universe' (2007)

http://repository.up.ac.za/bitstream/handle/2263/5274/Cromhout_Covenantal%282007%29.pdf [PDF]

Paul, The Law, and Covenantal Nomism

https://brandonsfrank.wordpress.com/2016/03/13/paul-the-law-and-covenantal-nomism/

Excerpt:

Paul viewed the law not only as being good for showing the need for a savior, but also being completed in the work of Christ. The Messiah was foretold from the very beginning, which was followed by the giving of the Mosaic Law. This Law served as a guide to keep the human heart pointed towards its creator while foreshadowing its goal through Leviticus 16. Paul viewed the seed of Abraham spoken of in Genesis as being none other than Jesus, Abraham's direct descendant. Paul viewed the Messiah's work as being parallel with the first Adam in that just as Adam imputed sin to all humanity, Jesus would impute righteousness to all who believed. Paul communicated in Romans 10:4 that Jesus was the goal and completion of the Law, which was the only way to offer a fix for the limitations of humanity. Paul knew from experience that the Law was the best teacher to help mankind realize their true reality and extensiveness of their sin. It was because of a deep understanding of the Law followed by a real life-giving experience with Jesus Christ that Paul fully understood its meaning.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

See also: The Messiah Revealed

THE New Perspective on Paul (Ken Silva, 2010) [Critical of NPP)

Into: http://apprising.org/2010/05/08/introduction-to-the-new-perspectives-on-paul/

Part 1: http://apprising.org/2010/05/08/the-new-perspective-on-paul-part-1/

Part 2: http://apprising.org/2010/05/08/the-new-perspective-on-paul-part-2/

Part 3: http://apprising.org/2010/05/08/the-new-perspective-on-paul-part-3/ (reprint of a 2007 article)

Excerpt:

On what do the NPP scholars base their understanding of Second Temple Judaism? They claim when the primary rabbinical writings are studied they yield a very different understanding of Judaism than that of the Reformers and evangelicals since. What these writings yield is covenantal nomism as described above; that is, a religion in which one enters the covenant by the grace of God but stays in the covenant through obedience…

…Robert Thomas, at the end of his article on the hermeneutics of the NPP offers an excellent summary of the NPP teachings. I will close my paper with a selection of a few of these:

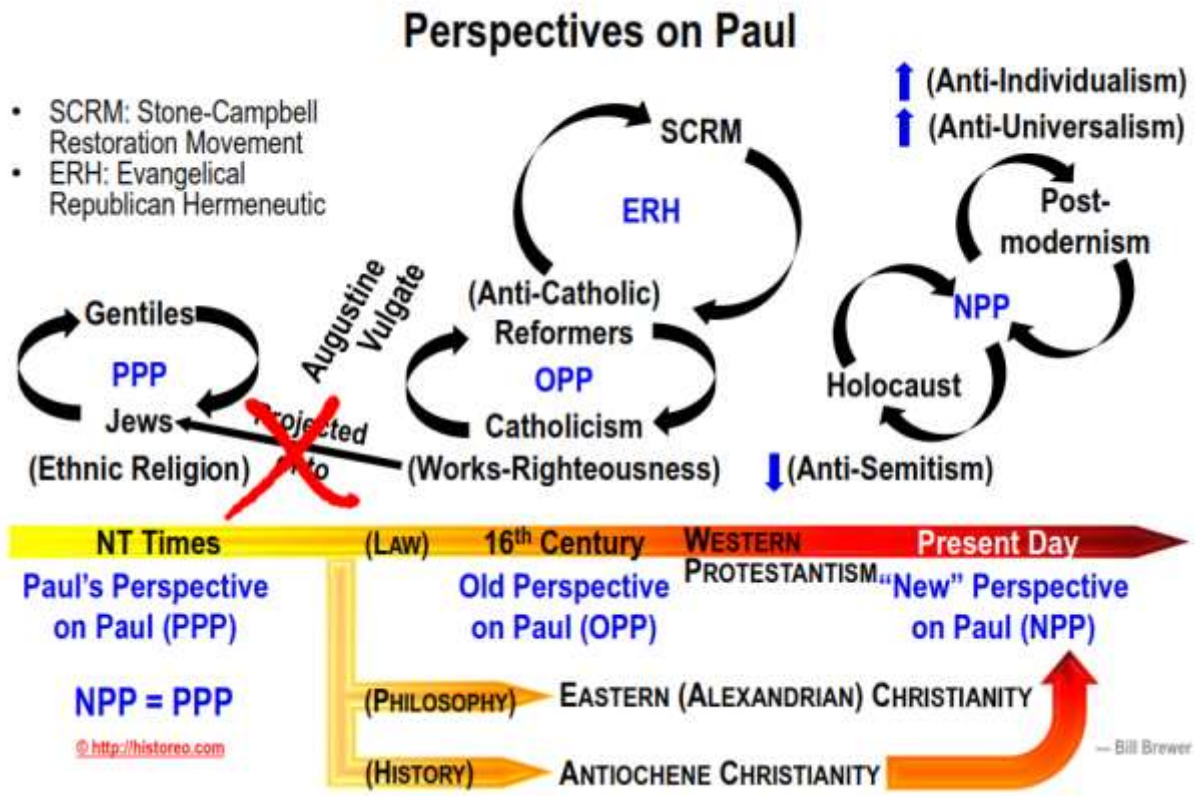
- First-century Judaism was not a salvation-by-works religion.
- Until the death and resurrection of Christ, by virtue of God's election, any physical descendant of Abraham is a member of the covenant people and thereby justified.
- Those who maintain the covenantal nomism relationship by obedience are the ones who will be saved.
- Paul retained his covenantal nomism after his Damascus road experience.
- From that point on, his mission was to dispense with circumcision, Sabbath observance, and dietary restrictions of the Mosaic law as boundaries that limited who could be a member of the covenant people.
- Guilt was not expressed in Paul's writings, but was introduced by Augustine and Luther.
- Justification by faith and imputed righteousness was read into Paul by Augustine, Luther, Wesley, and Calvin because of their contemporary situations.
- Faith is not the means of justification or of joining the covenant community; it is rather a badge of covenant membership. One joins the covenant community through water baptism.
- Final justification is based on works of obedience to the Mosaic law so that any justification a person enjoys at present is only preliminary and can be reversed.[18]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Early Judaism and Covenantal Nomism: A Review Article (Simon J. Gathercole) (2004)
http://www.biblicalstudies.org.uk/pdf/eq/2004-2_153.pdf [PDF]

Righteousness in the Concept of Covenantal Nomism: An Exegetical Study of the Psalms of Solomon and Paul's Letters (2009) (Master's Thesis)
http://researchrepository.murdoch.edu.au/1697/2/laloh02Whole.pdf [PDF]

Covenantal Nomism and the Hebrew Bible (2016)
https://www.academia.edu/30083597/Covenantal_Nomism_and_the_Hebrew_Bible



Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

[Jump to the next section]

Perspectives on Paul

https://historeo.com/web/?p=1843

As promised, here is a placeholder post for discussion of “Perspectives on Paul.”

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only [Go to Top - TOC]

Notes on Antiochene Christianity

Antiochene Theology

The Antiochene School

The Antiochene Tradition

How to pronounce Antiochene [Video]

Antiochene Christianity (Catholic Definition):
The dominant theology of the early Church in Antioch. It was generally in contrast with and sometimes opposed to the theology of Alexandria. Its underlying philosophy, favoring the historical rather than the speculative, was from Aristotle (384-322 B.C.). In Christology it stressed the humanity of Christ, sometimes to the extreme of denying the hypostatic union.

Notes on Alexandrian Theology

Alexandrian Theology

Allegorical Interpretation of the Scriptures / The School of Alexandria

Alexandrian vs Antiochene:

The Alexandrian and Antiochian Christological Thoughts [PDF]

Hermeneutics: Alexandrian VS. Antiochene

Antioch and Alexandrea - Manuscript Evidence

Theological Traditions of Alexandria and Antioch

The Schools of Antioch and Alexandria

The Schools of Alexandria and Antioch

Antiochenes and Alexandrians

Alexandrian and Antiochian Schools

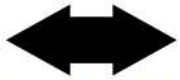
Classical Models for the Interpretation of Scripture [PPT]

Early Church History [PDF] Christological Controversies

See also comparisons and highpoints below

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

To illustrate the significance, here are the new and old perspectives applied to the Book of Romans:



See also: Gestalt definitions

Two "Gestalts" of Romans: Macro Level

OLD PERSPECTIVE	NEW PERSPECTIVE
• How God makes individuals righteous	• How God has made Himself righteous
• Justification of individuals	• Justification of God
• Individual salvation	• History of salvation ("all Israel")
• Faith in Christ	• The faith of Christ
• "Son of God" as 2nd Person of the Trinity	• "Son of God" as Messiah of Israel
• Opposition to works-righteousness as the means of salvation	• Opposition to use of works to define the faith of Abraham as an ethnic religion

• The relationship between two "Laws"
  • Jewish Law (Torah)
  • Natural Law
	• Two experiences of one Law
	  • Torah as grounds for boasting
	  • Torah as an indictment

• Chapters 9-11 as extraneous to the purpose of the letter	• Chapters 9-11 as central to the purpose of the letter

Gestalt Shift

© http://historeo.com — Bill Brewer

[See the Two Gestalts – Micro Level Views]

From the old perspective, Romans is about . . .

- How God makes individuals righteous
- Justification of individuals
- Individual salvation
- Faith in Christ
- "Son of God" as 2nd Person of the Trinity
- Opposition to works-righteousness as the means of salvation
- The relationship between two "Laws"
  - Jewish Law (Torah)
  - Natural Law
- Chapters 9-11 as extraneous to the purpose of the letter

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

From the new perspective, it's about . . .

- How God has made Himself righteous
- Justification of God
- History of salvation ("all Israel")
- The faith of Christ
- "Son of God" as Messiah of Israel
- Opposition to use of works to define the faith of Abraham as an ethnic religion
- Two experiences of one Law
    - Torah as grounds for boasting
    - Torah as an indictment
- Chapters 9-11 as central to the purpose of the letter

Since many websites offer a tremendous amount of content on "The New Perspective," I will limit this post to whatever I can add. The preceding information is valuable in characterizing The New Perspective as a reemergence of Antiochene themes in Pauline scholarship. I recommend Christian Thought Revisited by Justo Gonzales for background on the three main branches of Christian thought, including the Antiochene strand. The following chart provides a simple way to visualize the differences: Jesus as lawgiver, Jesus as teacher/philosopher, and Jesus as pioneer representing the Western, Eastern/Alexandrian, and Antiochene branches respectively.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The next charts show how the Western and the Eastern branches differ across 12 categories.

	Western Christianity	Alexandrian Christianity
Main Category:	Law	Truth
Main Interest:	Moral	Metaphysics
Philosophy:	Stoic	Platonic
God:	Lawgiver, Judge	Ineffable One, Transcendent
Creation:	Complete	Dualistic
Sin:	Breaking Law	Not Contemplating the One
Original Sin:	Inherited	Individual
Human Fix:	Moral Debt	Forgetfulness
Work of Christ:	Expiation, Forgiveness, New Law	Example, Teaching, Illumination
Sacraments:	Washing, Merit	Reminders, Symbols
Eschatos:	Kingdom of Law/Order	Contemplation and Return
Biblical Interpretation:	Moral Code, Prophecy	Allegory

From Christian Thought Revisited by Husto L. Gonzales

Western Christianity (From Christian Thought Revisited by Justo L. Gonzales)

- Main Category: Law
- Main Interest: Moral
- Philosophy: Stoic
- God: Lawgiver, Judge
- Creation: Complete
- Sin: Breaking Law
- Original Sin: Inherited
- Human Fix: Moral Debt

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

- Work of Christ: Expiation, Forgiveness, New Law
- Sacraments: Washing, Merit
- Eschatos: Moral Kingdom of Law/Order
- Biblical Interpretation: Moral Code, Prophecy

Alexandrian Christianity (From Christian Thought Revisited by Justo L. Gonzales)

- Main Category: Truth
- Main Interest: Metaphysics
- Philosophy: Platonic
- God: Ineffable One, Transcendent
- Creation: Dualistic
- Sin: Not Contemplating the One
- Original Sin: Individual
- Human Fix: Forgetfulness
- Work of Christ: Example, Teaching, Illumination
- Sacraments: Reminders, Symbols
- Eschatos: Contemplation and Return
- Biblical Interpretation: Allegory

Antiochene Christianity (From Christian Thought Revisited by Justo L. Gonzales)

- Main Category: Pastoral
- Main Interest: History
- Philosophy: Varied
- God: Shepherd, Father
- Creation: Begun
- Sin: Anticipatory Disobedience
- Original Sin: One sinned for all
- Human Fix: Subjection
- Work of Christ: Victory, Liberation, Opening the Future
- Sacraments: Grafting, Nutrition
- Eschatos: Kingdom of Freedom and Growth
- Biblical Interpretation: Typology, Prophecy

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The next chart shows all three branches in terms of the 12 categories. My contribution is to highlight the emphases of the Western tradition and the Antiochene tradition in light of "The New Perspective."

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The next two 'Micro Level' charts show how the competing gestalts of Romans are manifested in key passages.

Ref: Romans 3:21-22

Note: For more details of genitive case and whether to translate the original Greek words, pistis Christou, as "Faith IN Christ" or "Faith OF Christ", see: Pistis Christou

See also: Gestalt definitions

[See the Two Gestalts – Macro Level View]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

For example, the Old Perspective sees Romans 3:21-22 as being about individual salvation. The New Perspective sees the passage being about corporate or covenantal salvation.

See also: Gestalt definitions

[See the Two Gestalts – Macro Level View]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

In many cases, The Old Perspective is instantiated within the text by versions that bias the reader toward particular understandings of passages.

Rom 3:22, "Faith of Jesus Christ"

A Even the righteousness of God through faith in Jesus Christ NASB95

C Even the righteousness of God which is by faith of Jesus Christ .... KJV

B Namely, the righteousness of God through the faithfulness of Jesus Christ .... NET

B God's righteousness through the faithfulness of Jesus Christ .... ISV

C Righteousness of God by faith of Jesus Christ .... DARBY

C Even the righteousness of God which is by faith of Jesus Christ .... AV 1873

C Even the justice of God, by faith of Jesus Christ .... D-R

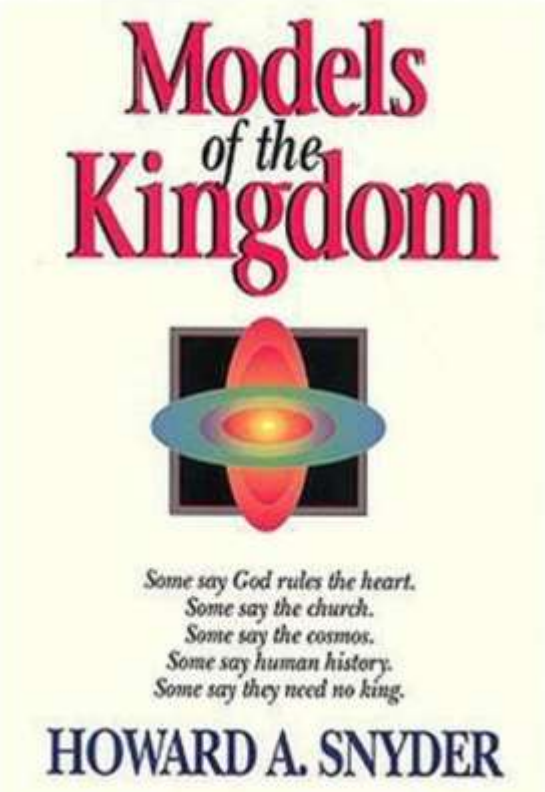
C Even the righteousness of God which is by faith of Jesus Christ .... AV

Which of the preceding versions biases the reader to . . .

A. The Old Perspective?

B. The New Perspective?

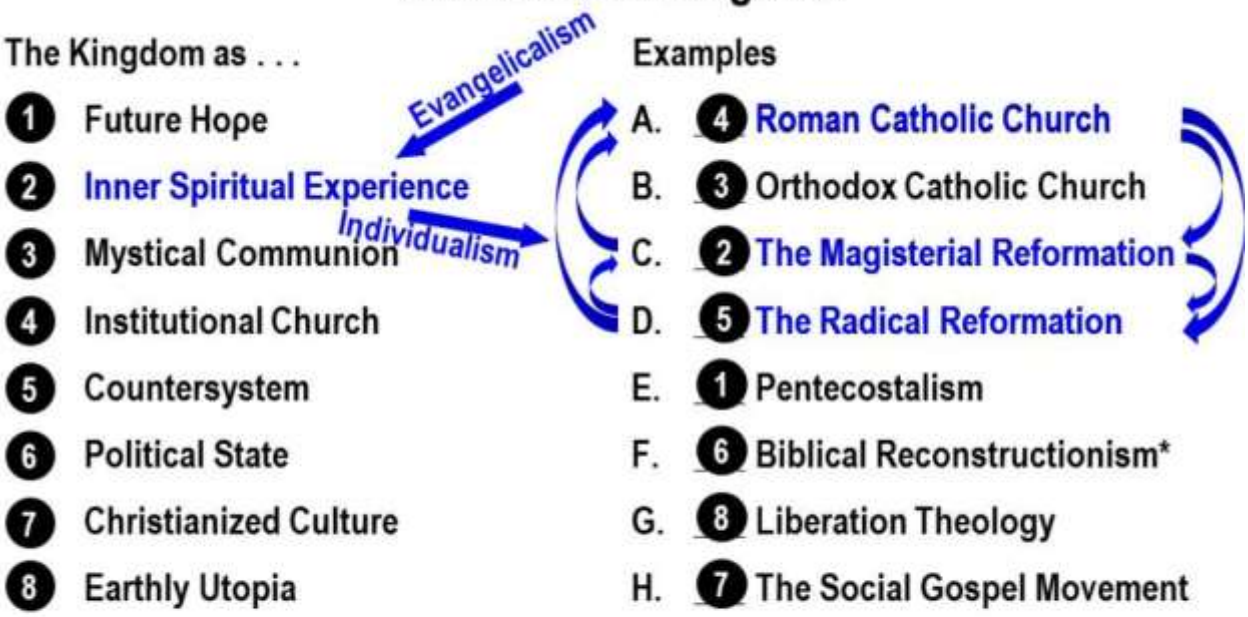
C. The remaining preserve the ambiguity.



© http://historeo.com — Bill Brewer

Models of the Kingdom

The Kingdom as . . .

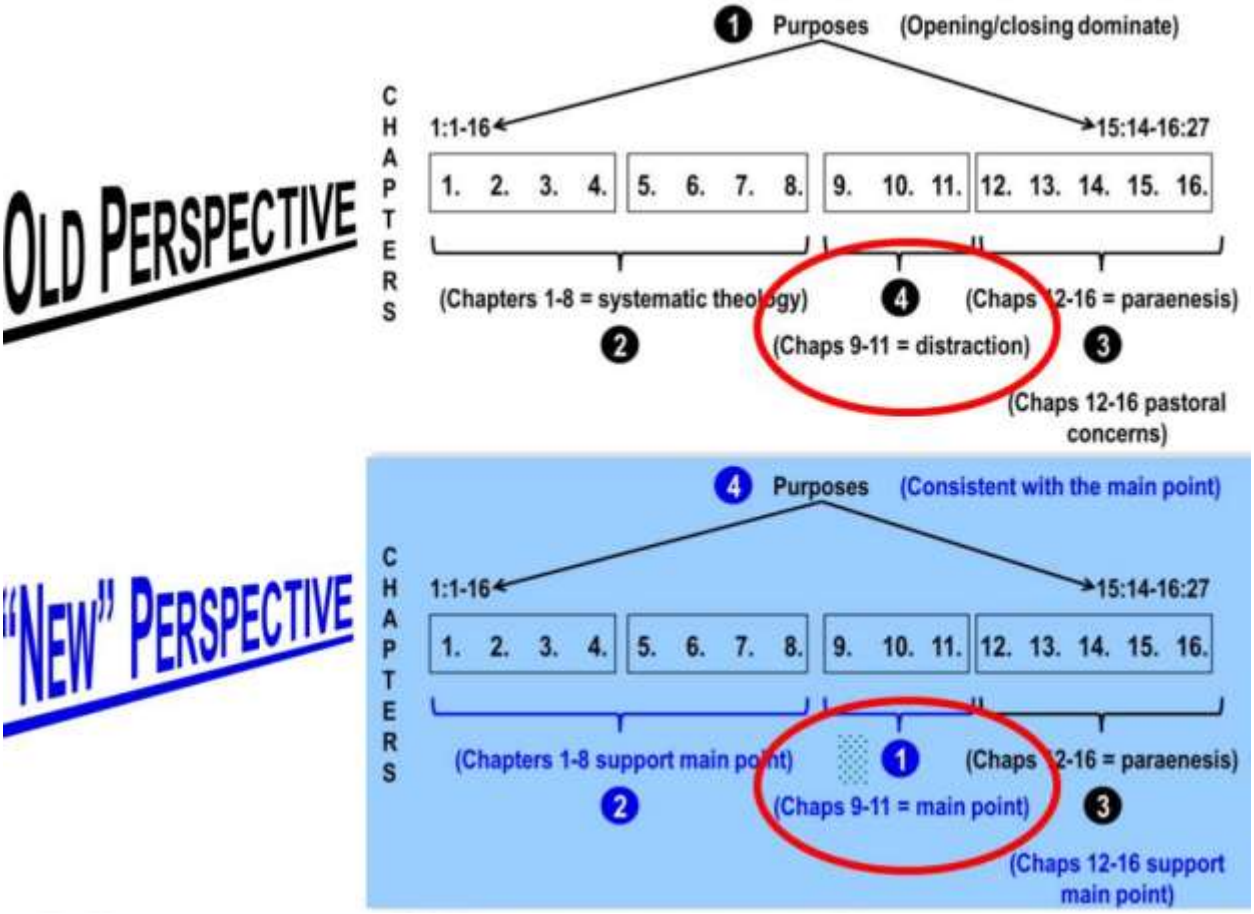


1. Future Hope
2. Inner Spiritual Experience
3. Mystical Communion
4. Institutional Church
5. Countersystem
6. Political State
7. Christianized Culture
8. Earthly Utopia

Models of the Kingdom, Howard A. Snyder, 1991, Abingdon Press

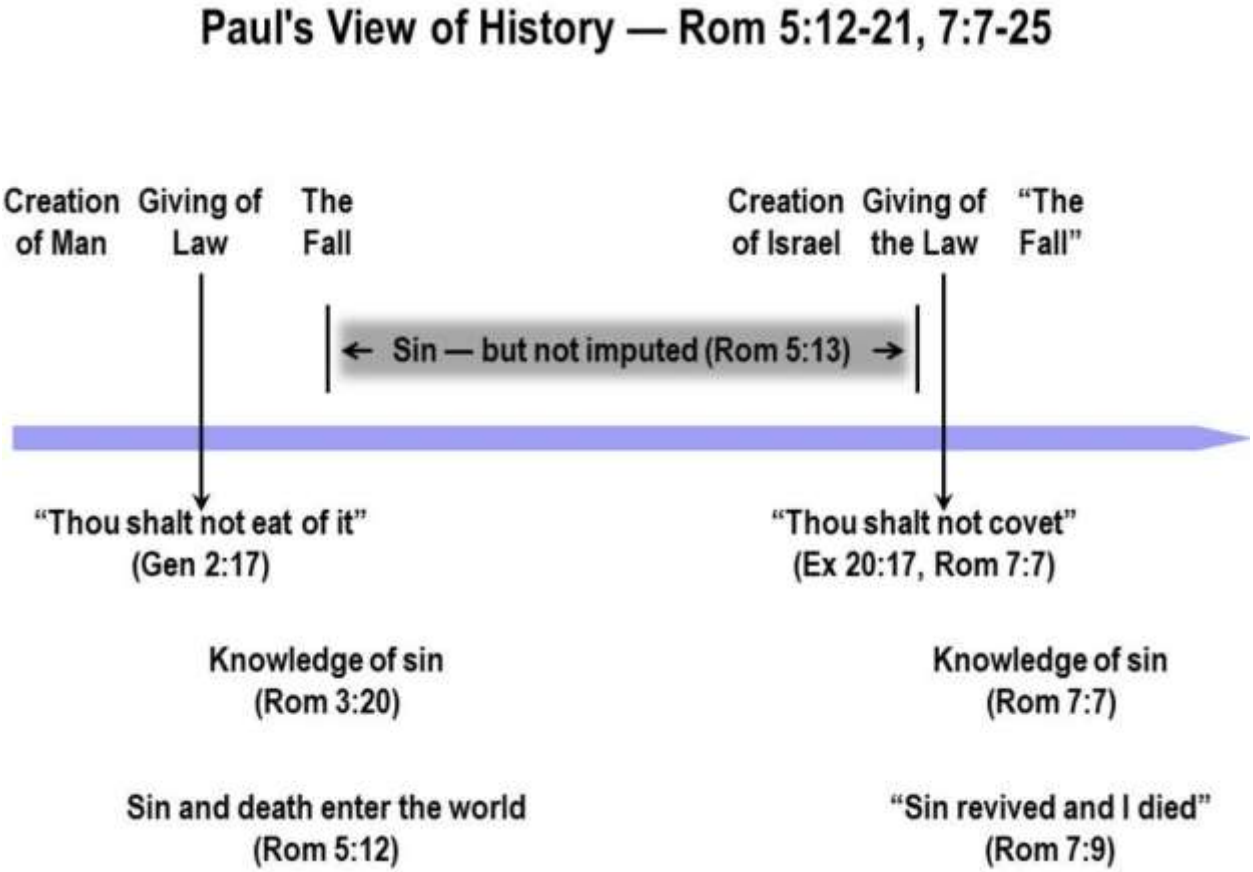
 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Models of the Kingdom



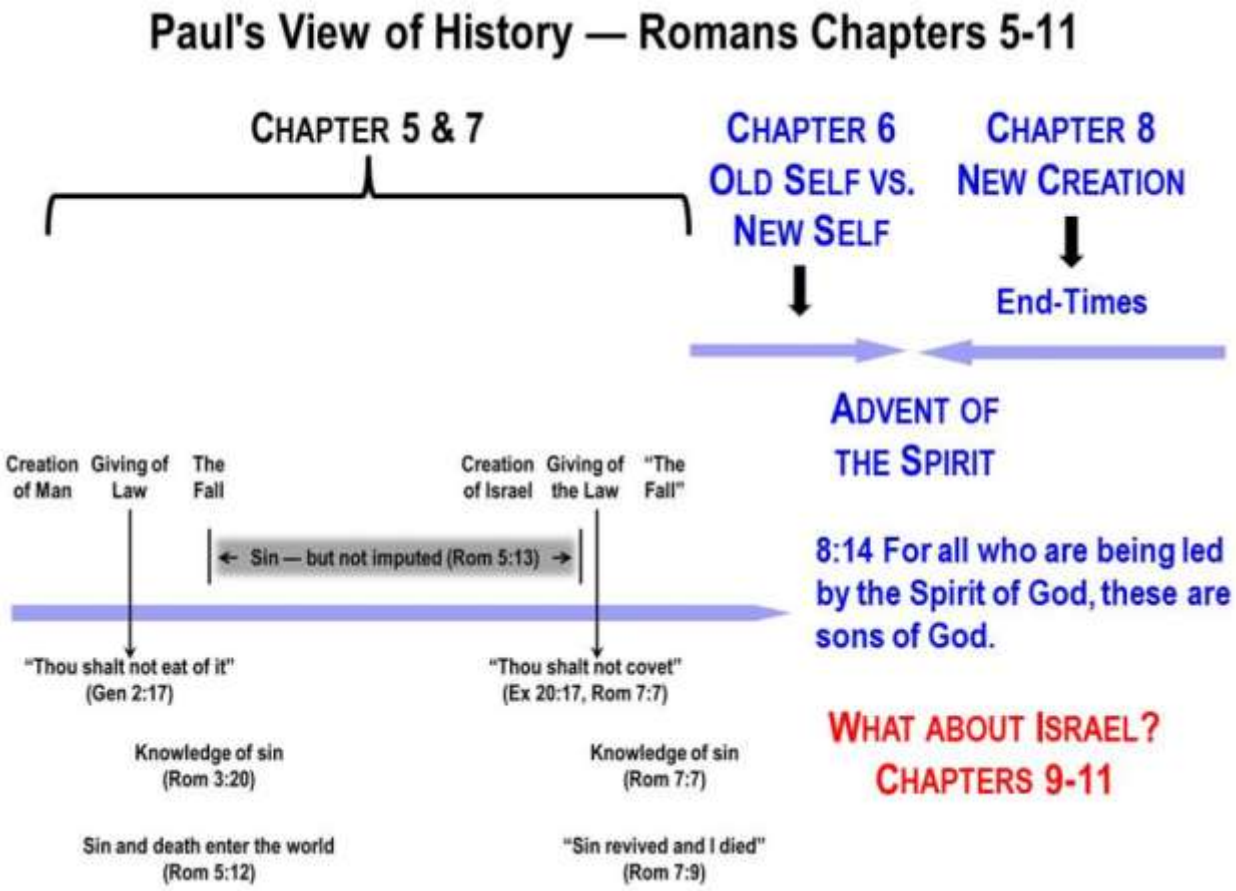
Models of the Kingdom, Howard A. Snyder, 1991, Abingdon Press

*Theonomy, Dominion Theology



Key Points:

1. Effect of Reformation's emphasis on individualism on the reading of Romans
2. Debunking dynamic of pluralism within Western Christianity



Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Definitions: Gestalt

Gestalt Principles

http://www.scholarpedia.org/article/Gestalt_principles

Excerpt:

Gestalt principles, or gestalt laws, are rules of the organization of perceptual scenes. When we look at the world, we usually perceive complex scenes composed of many groups of objects on some background, with the objects themselves consisting of parts, which may be composed of smaller parts, etc. How do we accomplish such a remarkable perceptual achievement, given that the visual input is, in a sense, just a spatial distribution of variously colored individual points? The beginnings and the direction of an answer were provided by a group of researchers early in the twentieth century, known as Gestalt psychologists. Gestalt is a German word meaning 'shape' or 'form'. Gestalt principles aim to formulate the regularities according to which the perceptual input is organized into unitary forms, also referred to as (sub)wholes, groups, groupings, or Gestalten (the plural form of Gestalt). These principles mainly apply to vision, but there are also analogous aspects in auditory and somatosensory perception. In visual perception, such forms are the regions of the visual field whose portions are perceived as grouped or joined together, and are thus segregated from the rest of the visual field. The Gestalt principles were introduced in a seminal paper by Wertheimer (1923/1938), and were further developed by Köhler (1929), Koffka (1935), and Metzger (1936/2006; see review by Todorović, 2007). For a modern textbook presentation, including more recent contributions, see Palmer (1999).

https://www.merriam-webster.com/dictionary/gestalt

Definition of gestalt (plural gestalts also gestalten)

\-ˈstäl-tᵊn, -ˈshtäl-, -ˈstȯl-, -ˈshtȯl-\

: something that is made of many parts and yet is somehow more than or different from the combination of its parts

> When he gets rolling, you're not responding to single jokes—it's the whole gestalt of the movie that's funny. — Pauline Kael

; broadly : the general quality or character of something

> When new employees are recruited fresh out of college and can look forward to working for the same company for 40 years, it changes the gestalt of management. — Brenton R. Schlender
>
> … the Old Hollywood gestalt, where daughters adored and romanticized their charismatic, powerful, often unavailable fathers. — Nora Johnson

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

http://www.dictionary.com/browse/gestalt

[guh-shtahlt, -shtawlt, -stahlt, -stawlt] noun, plural gestalts, gestalten

1. a configuration, pattern, or organized field having specific properties that cannot be derived from the summation of its component parts; a unified whole.

2. an instance or example of such a unified whole.

Origin of gestalt: 1920-1925; German: figure, form, structure

http://www.businessdictionary.com/definition/gestalt.html

Fuzzy German word with no exact English equivalent, variously defined as completeness, configuration, essence, form, manner, organic structure, totality, and wholeness. At the level of an individual, it means the organized form or pattern that makes up all of a person's experience of what is perceived to be 'out there.' See also gestalt theory.

https://www.alleydog.com/glossary/definition.php?term=Gestalt

Gestalt

The term Gestalt may be defined as an object, idea, or experience as being more than the sum of its parts. When you put the parts together, you get the whole - in other words, you get the Gestalt.

Gestalt is the basis of Gestalt Psychology, which is the study of how people integrate and organize perceptual information (information they perceive - things they see, hear, etc) into meaningful wholes.

For example, can you tell what this is?: 8>)

The reason you may be able to recognize a face is because you're able to see an overall form (a face) just by putting a few symbols or shapes together. In other words, you see the Gestalt, not just the symbols. This is incredibly useful but can sometimes lead to problems such as illusions or visual tricks.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

N.T. Wright Interviews (in roughly chronological order) [Personal/Bio Interviews]

A Reformation & Revival Journal Interview with N.T. Wright: Part 1 – Theology, Why Bother (2002) [Recommended]
http://www.biblicalstudies.org.uk/pdf/ref-rev/11-1/11-1_interview.pdf [PDF]

An Interview with N.T. Wright (online version of above pdf)
(2002; note article mistakenly says 2003)
http://hornes.org/theologia/travis-tamerius/interview-with-n-t-wright

A Reformation & Revival Journal Interview with N.T. Wright: Part 2 – Justification: Modern Reflections (2002) [Recommended]
https://biblicalstudies.org.uk/pdf/ref-rev/11-2/11-2_interview.pdf [PDF]

https://biblicalstudies.org.uk/pdf/ref-rev/11-2/11-2_tamerius.pdf [PDF] Alt. Link

https://biblicalstudies.org.uk/pdf/ref-rev/11-2/11-2_lusk.pdf [PDF] Alt. Link

Interview with Anglican Bishop N.T. Wright of Durham, England (2004)
http://www.nationalcatholicreporter.org/word/wright.htm

NT Wright: QandA's (September 2004)
http://ntwrightpage.com/2016/04/25/wrightsaid-qa-september-2004/

Gower Street: Interview with N.T. Wright (Part 7 of 6): a lagniappe!
http://gowerstreet.blogspot.com/2005/01/interview-with-nt-wright-part-7-of-6.html
(Also, has links to other 6 previous parts)

An Interview with N. T. Wright [recommended]
https://criswell.files.wordpress.com/2006/03/2,2%20InterviewwithN.T.Wright(Streett).PDF [PDF]

N.T. Wright, "Simply Christian." Podcast: Journeys Interview Parts 1 thru 4 (2006)
http://www.thekindlings.com/podcasts/nt-wright-%E2%80%9Csimply-christian%E2%80%9D-podcast-journeys-interview-segment-1-of-4/

http://www.thekindlings.com/podcasts/nt-wright-%E2%80%9Csimply-christian%E2%80%9D-podcast-journeys-interview-segment-2-of-4/

http://www.thekindlings.com/podcasts/nt-wright-%E2%80%9Csimply-christian%E2%80%9D-podcast-journeys-interview-segment-3-of-4/

http://www.thekindlings.com/podcasts/nt-wright-%E2%80%9Csimply-christian%E2%80%9D-podcast-journeys-interview-segment-4-of-4/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

An interview with N. T. Wright – What are the four greatest modern NT scholars?
http://www.faith-theology.com/2006/04/interview-with-n-t-wright.html

Excerpt:

During a coffee-break yesterday, Bishop Wright kindly agreed to participate in an interview for Faith and Theology. So I asked him to respond to the question: "Who do you think is the greatest modern New Testament scholar?" Instead of naming just one person, he named four. Here's what he said (paraphrased slightly):

"Well, I greatly admire Albert Schweitzer. He had feet of clay, of course, but he really saw the big picture, and he got it right on some of the most important issues.

"The Canadian Catholic scholar, Ben Meyer, has been under-appreciated. But he did some very important work, with massive scholarly and philosophical apparatus. His loss was a tremendous blow to the field of New Testament studies. And some of his work is still only being implemented today.

"Then, among contemporary scholars, Richard Bauckham from the University of St Andrews is doing some work that is really unrivalled at the moment. Richard has an absolutely astonishing command of the first-century sources.

"Hmmm, who else? It's silly that I can't think of anyone else, since there are so many scholars whom I read every single day, with great appreciation.... Well, yes, there's Martin Hengel. He's said some rather intemperate things against the New Perspective, which is unfortunate, really, because he has done as much as anyone to contribute to our understanding of early Judaism."

At this point, Wright was about to name a fifth person as well, but I insisted that he finish his cup of tea instead.

Homiletics Interview: N. T. Wright (2006)
https://www.homileticsonline.com/subscriber/interviews/wright.asp [see Excerpt in Dualism section]

N. T. Wright Interview – Mere Mission
http://creedalchristian.blogspot.com/2007/09/n-t-wright-interview.html

N.T. Wright talks about how to present the gospel in a postmodern world. Also discusses C.S. Lewis, Gnosticism and more.

References: http://www.christianitytoday.com/ct/2007/january/22.38.html (Christianity Today; subscription required)

Trevin Wax Interview with N.T. Wright (Full Transcript) [Downloadable PDF]
https://blogs.thegospelcoalition.org/trevinwax/2007/11/19/trevin-wax-interview-with-nt-wright-full-transcript/

NT Wright on Justification & New Perspective on Paul – Mp3 Interview (2007)
http://saidatsouthern.com/nt-wright-interview-mp3/ [Audio available]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Interview with N. T. Wright (Criswell College Radio Interview) (2008) http://www.dennyburk.com/interview-with-n-t-wright/ [Links to Audio]

Christians Wrong About Heaven, Says Bishop (2008)
http://content.time.com/time/printout/0,8816,1710844,00.html (Printable version)

http://content.time.com/time/world/article/0,8599,1710844,00.html

N.T. Wright Interview: Finding Heaven--and Hell--on Earth
http://www.beliefnet.com/faiths/christianity/2008/03/finding-heaven-and-hell-on-earth.aspx

Let It Flow Out: An Interview with N. T. Wright (2008) (Mark D. Roberts – Bio) https://www.theologyofwork.org/the-high-calling/blog/let-it-flow-out-interview-n-t-wright

http://www.beliefnet.com/columnists/markdroberts/2009/01/let-it-flow-out-an-interview-with-n-t-wright.html

http://www.patheos.com/blogs/thehighcalling/2014/11/let-it-flow-out-an-interview-with-n-t-wright/

http://markdroberts.com/?p=711

Introducing N.T. Wright at Laity Lodge (Mark D. Roberts) (Sharing Laity Lodge)
http://www.beliefnet.com/columnists/markdroberts/2007/12/introducing-nt-wright-at-laity-lodge.html

http://www.markdroberts.com/htmfiles/resources/sharinglaitylodge.htm#dec707

T. Wax Interview with N.T. Wright – Responding to Piper on Justification (2009)
https://blogs.thegospelcoalition.org/trevinwax/category/future-of-justification/ (See also: NT Wright Criticisms)

An Interview with N.T. Wright (Available as several video clips) http://drwinn.com/2009/05/28/an-interview-with-nt-wright/

Socrates in the City – Introduction of N.T. Wright by Eric Metaxas (2011)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=91zvwcZCzwg [Video]

Socrates in the City: One of New York's Best Kept Secrets
https://ccithink.com/tag/greek-philosopher-socrates/

Beyond the Evangelical – Frank Viola
http://frankviola.org/2012/01/23/ntwright/

N.T. Wright & Frank Viola (2013)
https://www.scribd.com/document/163934823/79498020-N-T-Wright-Frank-Viola-Interview

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

N.T. Wright vs James White – Justification and Saint Paul (2013) (Unbelievable Radio)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Zp8rMsOCsvY [Audio] [Recommended]

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=dQoczsyfBAo [Audio] [Recommended]

(Note: Included because a large portion is taken up with interviewing Wright)

Tom Wright Skewers the New Marcionism (2013)
http://thinktheology.co.uk/blog/article/tom_wright_skewers_the_new_marcionism

An Interview with N.T. Wright: Paul, Discipleship, Love & Justice
http://kenwytsma.com/2014/02/18/an-interview-with-n-t-wright-paul-discipleship-love-justice/

N.T. Wright on the Bible and why he won't call himself an inerrantist http://religionnews.com/2014/06/02/n-t-wright-bible-isnt-inerrantist/

An Interview With N.T. Wright – Good God? (2014) (TheVeritas.org)
Veritas Forum: Reconciling A Good God With A World Filled With Suffering
http://danielpassini.org/an-interview-with-n-t-wright/

Direct link to video: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=kjdLatKLo1k [Video] (2014)

Includes personal info., what doubts he had about his faith, good vs evil, etc.

(Start off with questioning "Why?" regarding his appearance on the Colbert Report)

Facing the Canon with Tom Wright (2014) [Recommended]
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=8sCoF4uNLWQ [Video]
Wright answers difficult questions submitted to him by John Canon, including women leadership in the church, resurrection, Israel today and returning to the land and the centrality of Jesus for gentiles and Jews, Isaiah 53, prayer, why to bad things happen to good people?, sacraments, why does not Bible address more everyday issues, marriage, sharing the Gospel.

FYI: check out his interview of Nick Gumble founder of Alpha International [Recommended]

For more about the evangelistic messages of J. John, see the Evangelism section of my other separate references resource*:

The Gospel, Salvation and Evangelism

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

N.T. Wright Interview: Gay Marriage
https://www.firstthings.com/blogs/firstthoughts/2014/06/n-t-wrights-argument-against-same-sex-marriage

What's so Great About the Apostle Paul? (2014) [Audio]
https://www.podcastchart.com/podcasts/the-n-t-wright-podcast/episodes/what-s-so-great-about-the-apostle-paul

Heaven is Not the End of the World (2014) [Audio]
https://www.podcastchart.com/podcasts/the-n-t-wright-podcast/episodes/heaven-is-not-the-end-of-the-world

A New Creation-Shaped Church (2014) [Audio]
https://www.podcastchart.com/podcasts/the-n-t-wright-podcast/episodes/a-new-creation-shaped-church

The Jesus of Myth and History (2014) [Audio]
https://www.podcastchart.com/podcasts/the-n-t-wright-podcast/episodes/the-jesus-of-myth-and-history

NT Wright, et al: On the Future of the Church (Fuller Theological Seminary) (2014)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=aNTz6QRVdg0 [Video]

Tom (N.T.) Wright, Miroslav Volf and Mark Labberton talk about the issues, questions, and dilemmas that face the church moving into the future. (Includes some brief bio by Wright)

Interview: N.T. Wright Speaks About His New Book (Surprised by Scripture)
http://www.patheos.com/blogs/revangelical/2014/06/01/exclusive-n-t-wright-speaks-about-his-new-book.html

The Bible - Who Cares? (2014)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=WCgOcidksjo [Video]
The Veritas Forum at UNC; asking Wright questions about scripture and culture (Warning: Poor audio quality, but worth the effort to listen anyway)

Nomad 85- The Man Behind the Theology: N.T. Wright (2015)
http://feedproxy.google.com/~r/TheNtWrightPodcast/~5/aKioo3V780s/Nomad_85_Tom_Wright_4.mp3 [Audio]

NT Wright on Seminary Dropout (2015) [Audio]
https://www.podcastchart.com/podcasts/the-n-t-wright-podcast/episodes/nt-wright-on-seminary-dropout

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Justification & New Perspective on Paul (2015) [Audio]

https://www.podcastchart.com/podcasts/the-n-t-wright-podcast/episodes/justification-new-perspective-on-paul

Interview with N.T. Wright (by Jonathan Storment)

http://www.patheos.com/blogs/jesuscreed/2015/01/21/interview-with-n-t-wright-by-jonathan-storment/

An Interview with N.T. Wright (2015)

http://amateurtheologians.com/2015/05/24/n-t-wright-interview/

This is an interview with Professor N.T. Wright one of the worlds leading NT scholars of our day and age. Wright has written over 70 books and still counting. Wright is a Professor at St. Andrews University in Scotland, for more information on Him check out his website http://www.ntwrightonline.org/ - Casey Dayton

1) What is the kingdom of God?

Israel's scriptures, especially the Psalms and Daniel, promise that one day the creator of the world will 'become' king in a new way, bringing the whole world into proper order at last so that the seas, the fields, the trees and the animals will celebrate. This is focused particularly on the deliverance of Israel from pagan oppression and the coming of non-Jewish nations to worship the one God (Isaiah 52 etc.). This hope was spoken of in Jesus' day in terms, particularly, of the revolutionary expectation that 'only God will be king' – i.e., no humans involved; but others connected it with a possible Messiah. Jesus of Nazareth made this the main theme of his public career, that God was at last becoming king in the way he had promised, with the evidence being the healings and celebrations which showed that God's rescuing and restorative power was indeed at work. Following Jesus' own lead, the four evangelists in their different ways tell the story of Jesus' death and resurrection as the story of how this 'kingdom' was accomplished, in the defeat of the dark powers that had enslaved the world in sin and death and the launch of the promised new creation . . . see below!

2) Does God intend to renew His creation?

Absolutely yes. The Psalms and Isaiah promised it; Jesus embodied it; Paul explains it (Romans 8.18-30).

3) How does the resurrection of Jesus change everything?

Among the Jewish people, some had hoped for resurrection (especially the Pharisees), but this was seen as the resurrection of all God's people at the end of time. Jesus' resurrection is the raising of one person in the middle of time, indicating that God has begun his new-creation plan close up and personal, so that Jesus' followers now live with the sure and certain hope of the new world in which God will do for the whole creation at the end what he did for Jesus at Easter. Instead of waiting for new creation, this means that by the power of the Spirit the followers of Jesus are now to share in it in advance. New hope; new energy; new possibilities.

4) What does Paul mean when he says, "if anyone is in Christ, he is a new creation?"

What he actually says is that 'if anyone in Messiah – new creation!'. There isn't a verb in the Greek; nor does he say that 'we' are new creations, plural – rather, it seems, that when someone is in Christ (in Messiah, better; for Paul, the Greek word 'Christ' indicates the Jewish idea 'Messiah', not simply a name), that person becomes a living part of the new creation which was launched at Easter, or if you like a living window on to that new reality. Of course, any and every Christian, himself or herself, is indeed a new creation, but for Paul this truth is part of the still larger whole.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

5) What does hope in its biblical context mean?

Hope is a virtue, which means you have to practice it – it doesn't just happen automatically. Like the other aspects of the 'fruit of the spirit', you have to pray for the Spirit and then work at living the reality. So 'hope' itself denotes the virtue which Christians have when they look to the future and realize that it's God's future and that Jesus has already opened it up before us. We sometimes also use the word, as in 'the hope', to denote the reality for which we hope, which I've briefly described above.

6) How does resurrection theology impact the church in the face of suffering?

From the very early days, the followers of Jesus knew that his resurrection gave them a hope which would sustain them through suffering, even through martyrdom. In fact, it was one of the things that the pagan world found most astonishing about the early Christians – that they had a completely different attitude to suffering and death. Since they belonged to Jesus the Messiah, and since he had suffered and been raised, the resurrection shed a flood of new light on their experience. Of course, believing in the resurrection doesn't make it any easier when you (or someone you love) is going through horrible pain or deprivation or facing large-scale tragedy. But the testimony of Christians down the years is that this belief enables you to hold on and come through.

You're Included: How God Became King (N.T. Wright, interviewed by Dr. Gary Deddo)

Part 1: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=IEHliSDNxa4 [Video] (2016)

Part 2: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=FEmIQspS6xc [Video]

N. T. Wright: The Church Continues the Revolution Jesus Started

http://www.christianitytoday.com/ct/2016/october-web-only/n-t-wright-jesus-death-does-more-than-just-get-us-into-heav.html

InTouch Magazine – Once and For All: An Interview with N.T. Wright (2/10/2016)

https://www.intouch.org/read/magazine/features/once-and-for-all Interviewer: Jamie Hughes

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Interview with N.T. Wright – The Trinity Forum (2016)
https://vimeo.com/157182241 [Video]

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=RKe0lTuVJDc [Video]

NT Wright - Paul and the Faithfulness of God; The Paul Debate – WTCLive (2016)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Ww84s1B7K9k [Video]

In this WTCLive episode, legendary New Testament scholar N.T. Wright discusses his recent 1700pg tome Paul and the Faithfulness of God (Fortress Press/SPCK, 2013) and his more recent book The Paul Debate (Baylor/SPCK, 2015) in which he responds to critiques of his big book on Paul. Wright also discusses the implications of his work on Paul for the Church and marketplace. (Some brief bio)

An Interview with N. T. Wright (Downloadable Transcript)
http://inchristus.com/2016/10/16/interview-n-t-wright/

N.T. Wright on the Eric Metaxas Show (Interview, Podcast) (Metaxas also of Socrates in the City)
Hour 1: https://soundcloud.com/the-eric-metaxas-show/nt-wright-hour-1 (Audio)

Hour 2: https://soundcloud.com/the-eric-metaxas-show/professor-nt-wright-hour-2 (Audio)

Alt. page link: http://ntwrightpage.com/2017/02/15/interview-with-eric-metaxas/

A Conversation with N. T. Wright
http://ntwrightpage.com/2017/04/30/a-conversation-with-nt-wright/ [Video]

The Gospel of N.T. Wright – An Interview (an email exchange) (2017)
http://uncommonlegacy.com/gospel-ntw-interview/

Special Event: N.T. Wright Interview - Part 1 - Personal Info (2017) (biblical-literacy.org/)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=urEWj9il7Os [Video]

Special Event: N.T. Wright Interview - Part 2 - Temple Theology & New Creation themes explored (2017) (biblical-literacy.org/)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=ZXdtohAsm_0 [Video]

Ask NT Wright anything - Listener Q&A (2017)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=x2rSX8cwU64 [Video]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

N.T. Wright Explains How Easter Changed Everything (2017)

https://relevantmagazine.com/feature/this-changes-everything/
What so many Christians get wrong about the cross.

David Moe's Conversations with Professor N.T. Wright (2017)

Part 1: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=tIX0W0tXZ7A [Video]

Part 2: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=KbsiHl7Rjco [Video]

Part 3: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=s7p5kTEHdFM [Video]

N.T. Wright: What the Church Has Missed in the Crucifixion of Jesus (2017)

https://churchleaders.com/podcast/311352-n-t-wright-church-missed-crucifixion-jesus.html (Audio)

Key Questions:

When we look at look at Jesus' crucifixion and we take into account Israel's story, what did the cross of Christ achieve?

What has the church done right in the area of evangelism?

What can we learn from the early church that connects with what we're dealing with in the world today?

Key Quotes:

"The role of humans is to reflect God's image into the world and to reflect the praises of all creation back to God in articulate and glad worship and praise."

"Humans were made to stand at the cusp, to stand on the edge of heaven and earth and belong in both. Because God wants to belong in both and God calls humans to bear his image."

"God has to deal with human sin in order to rob the idols of their power so that then new creation can begin. That is the story that the New Testament is telling."

"The call of Abraham in Genesis 12…is God's means of putting right the problem of Adam."

"Jesus comes as Israel's representative Messiah in order to do for Israel and the world what Israel and the world couldn't do for themselves."

"The story of Israel is the story of how the creator intends to rescue the creation. The story of Jesus is how God comes in person to rescue Israel in order to achieve that ultimate end."

"This is the problem, that we have traditionally, in the west, taken phrases which belong in Jewish eschatology and we've turned them into platonic cosmology."

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

"We need to recognize in ministry today that where the gospel actually bites in our society will have economic, political, philosophical, religious, ethnic, all sorts of overtones."

"We have for too long allowed the Enlightenment of the 18th and 19th centuries to set the pace, which has said: Religion and real life are in two totally different categories. And Christians teach religion so please don't mention politics, society, etc."

"A Christian political theology is more complicated and difficult than we have often realized. It isn't just a matter of saying 'We've all got to be holy anarchists.' Nor is it just a matter of saying 'The elected officials in every country are right whatever they do, so you've just got to obey them.'"

"How can we in the church as a whole…be training the people in [our] congregation[s] so that they will be people who will speak for Jesus in Caesar's world today?"

"Trust the God of surprises."

Invitation to Study The Day the Revolution Began with Prof. N.T. Wright

https://vimeo.com/184166878 [Video]

Read the Spirit:

N.T. Wright interview: Why Left, Right & Lewis get it wrong

https://www.readthespirit.com/explore/nt-wright-interview-why-left-right-lewis-get-it-wrong/

Interview: N.T. 'Tom' Wright on Kingdom New Testament

https://www.readthespirit.com/explore/interview-nt-tom-wright-on-kingdom-new-testament/

NT Wright Resource Page for Bible Study and Small Groups

https://www.readthespirit.com/nt-wright-bible-scholar-interviews-and-book-reviews-resource-page-for-bible-study/

More Wright Interviews and Q&A's on the NTWrightPage.com

http://ntwrightpage.com/category/q-a-and-interviews/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Unbelievable Radio Program (Unbelievable - Facebook) (Premier Christian Radio)

Ask NT Wright anything - Listener Q&A (2016)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=x2rSX8cwU64 [Audio]

What happened on the cross? NT Wright & Thomas Schreiner (2016) [Unbelievable Radio]
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=loat_y8SQBo [Audio] [Recommended]

NT (Tom) Wright's book "The Day the Revolution Began: Reconsidering the meaning of Jesus' crucifixion" says that the cross was about much more than Jesus absolving us of sin. He discusses atonement theology, God's wrath and penal substitution with reformed Bible scholar Thomas Schreiner. It's also the 500th podcast episode of the show [Unbelievable]!

Direct link to podcast page:
https://www.premierchristianradio.com/Shows/Saturday/Unbelievable/Episodes/NT-Wright-on-Paul-Hell-Satan-Creation-Adam-Eve-more-Unbelievable

Direct (alternate) link to podcast mp3 file:
http://cdnbakmi.kaltura.com/p/618072/sp/61807200/serveFlavor/entryId/1_du0h3j9o/v/1/flavorId/1_5reehb9y/name/a.mp3

Note: Originally prodcast on 11/12/16 just after the U.S.A. elections, so you will hear references to that during the audio.

N.T. Wright vs James White – Justification and Saint Paul (2013)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Zp8rMsOCsvY [Audio] [Recommended]

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=dQoczsyfBAo [Audio] [Recommended]

Additional Episodes of Misc. Interest:

Unbelievable? Ask Alvin Plantinga Anything - answering your questions (2017)
https://www.premierchristianradio.com/Shows/Saturday/Unbelievable/Episodes/Unbelievable-Ask-Alvin-Plantinga-Anything-answering-your-questions [Audio]

Unbelievable? Rodney Stark Q&A + Nabeel Qureshi remembered by David Wood (2017)
https://www.premierchristianradio.com/Shows/Saturday/Unbelievable/Episodes/Unbelievable-Rodney-Stark-Q-A-Nabeel-Qureshi-remembered-by-David-Wood [Audio]

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Unbelievable? How a Dice can show that God exists (2016) https://www.premierchristianradio.com/Shows/Saturday/Unbelievable/Conference-Videos/How-a-Dice-can-show-that-God-exists https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=yy6kaDaeDT8 [Video]

(Read the comments)

NT Wright: Why we can trust that Jesus was really resurrected (2017)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Ln6LWHe84SQ [Video]

T Wright: Why Jesus' resurrection really happened (2017)
https://www.premierchristianity.com/Blog/NT-Wright-Why-Jesus-resurrection-really-happened

NT Wright: Why Jesus' crucifixion is a fact of history (2017) https://www.premierchristianity.com/Blog/NT-Wright-Why-Jesus-crucifixion-is-a-fact-of-history [Audio]

3 videos which explain Tom Wright's cross-centred Christianity (2017) [Video] https://www.premierchristianity.com/Blog/3-videos-which-explain-Tom-Wright-s-cross-centred-Christianity

The Wright Stuff: It (2012) [Audio] https://www.premierchristianradio.com/Shows/Weekday/Inspirational-Breakfast/Interviews/The-Wright-stuff-It

https://www.premierchristianradio.com/Shows/Archived-Shows/Miscellaneous/Clips/The-Wright-stuff-It

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Interviews Providing Personal / Bio Information

Dr. N. T. Wright - Oklahoma Christian Q&A
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=3pCSL5Wugpg [Video] (personal info, msg. to leave; 14 min.)

Also discusses reading the Bible, how, when and how often he reads the Bible.

An Interview with N.T. Wright – Good God? (2014) (TheVeritas.org)
Veritas Forum: Reconciling A Good God With A World Filled With Suffering
http://danielpassini.org/an-interview-with-n-t-wright/

Direct link to video: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=kjdLatKLo1k [Video] (2014)

Includes personal info., what doubts he had about his faith, good vs evil, etc.

(Start off with questioning "Why?" regarding his appearance on the Colbert Report)

Special Event: N.T. Wright Interview - Part 1 - Personal Info (2017) (biblical-literacy.org/)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=urEWj9il7Os [Video]

A Conversation with N. T. Wright
http://ntwrightpage.com/2017/04/30/a-conversation-with-nt-wright/ [Video]

(Contains some personal info., esp. in first part)

N.T. Wright & Frank Viola (2013)
https://www.scribd.com/document/163934823/79498020-N-T-Wright-Frank-Viola-Interview

N.T. Wright vs James White – Justification and Saint Paul (2013)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Zp8rMsOCsvY [Audio] [Recommended]

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=dQoczsyfBAo [Audio] [Recommended]

(Note: Included because a large portion is taken up with interviewing Wright)

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

NT Wright - Paul and the Faithfulness of God; The Paul Debate – WTCLive (2016)

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Ww84s1B7K9k [Video]

In this WTCLive episode, legendary New Testament scholar N.T. Wright discusses his recent 1700pg tome Paul and the Faithfulness of God (Fortress Press/SPCK, 2013) and his more recent book The Paul Debate (Baylor/SPCK, 2015) in which he responds to critiques of his big book on Paul. Wright also discusses the implications of his work on Paul for the Church and marketplace. (Some brief bio at beginning)

Three Books that Changed N.T. Wright's Life (2017)

https://www.christiantoday.com/article/three.books.that.changed.nt.wrights.life/104297.htm

https://vimeo.com/201857771 [Video]

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Some Criticisms of N.T. Wright (and/or New Perspective on Paul)

Piper vs Wright criticisms:

N.T. Wright vs. John Piper (Soteriology101, Leighton Flowers) (2015)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=piWSvMIIUn0 [Video]

The Future of Justification by John Piper, A Response to N.T. Wright (2007, FULL) http://cdn.desiringgod.org/pdf/books_bfj/books_bfj.pdf [PDF] (see corresponding chart on next page)

Piper vs. Wright on Justification: A Layman's Guide (Gospel Coalition) (2009)
https://blogs.thegospelcoalition.org/trevinwax/2009/06/26/piper-vs-wright-on-justification-a-laymans-guide/

N.T. Wright and the "New Perspective on Paul" (2007)
http://markdroberts.com/?p=299

Excerpt:

Regarding John Piper and his book against N.T. Wright…

Here is my fear, however. John Piper is very influential, especially among the kinds of people who would be troubled by Wright's take on Paul. I'm afraid that many will buy and read Piper's book before and even without ever reading Wright himself. Then they'll quote or paraphrase Piper, without even going back to read Paul once again to see if Piper is actually right. This, I suggest, is neither Reformed, nor evangelical, nor even especially Christian. One who reads Piper should also read Wright himself, and, more importantly, should dive into a fresh examination of Scripture. Even if Wright is wrong, it's hard to believe that he doesn't have many valuable insights into the text, including many correctives for those of us who have always read Paul in a certain way…

N. T. Wright discusses his book, "Justification" (2009) (Response to Piper's book) https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=fwHD9SHpKR4 [Video] (see also other Justification resources in this doc.)

Covenant and Justification: Horton vs. Piper and Wright (2010)
http://theaquilareport.com/covenant-and-justification-horton-vs-piper-and-wright/

What is There Between Minneapolis and St. Andrews? A Third Way in the Pipe-Wright Debate (2011)
https://www.academia.edu/4574669/What_is_There_Between_Minneapolis_and_St._Andrews_A_Third_Way_in_the_Pipe-Wright_Debate (Downloadable as a PDF)

N.T. Wright extends debate with John Piper by releasing Apostle Paul tome
http://religionnews.com/2013/11/06/nt-wright-john-piper-paul-debate-tome/ (Interview) (2013)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Link to Christianity Today Primer: (see prior page for corresponding articles and full book)
http://www.christianitytoday.com/ct/content/pdf/justification_june09.pdf [PDF]
Above Link to Christianity Today Primer - Chart: (2007)

Since Christianity Today's August 2007 cover story, "What Did Paul Really Mean?" Piper and Wright have taken the debate on justification from the academy to the masses. Here is where the two evangelicals differ.

	JOHN PIPER	N.T. WRIGHT
	Pastor of Bethlehem Baptist Church in Minneapolis. Author of The Future of Justification: A Response to N. T. Wright.	Bishop of Durham, Church of England. Author of Justification: God's Plan and Paul's Vision.
THE PROBLEM	God created a good world that was subjected to futility because of the sinful, treasonous choice of the first human beings. Because of this offense against the glory of God, humans are alienated from their Creator and deserve his just condemnation for their sins.	God created a good world, designed to be looked after and brought to its intended purpose through his image-bearing human beings. This purpose was thwarted by the sinful choice of the first human beings. Because of human sinfulness, the world needs to be put to rights again and its original purpose taken forward to completion. God's purpose in putting humans "right" is that through them, the world can be put to rights.	THE PROBLEM
THE LAW	God revealed himself through the Law, which pointed to Christ as its end and goal, commanded the obedience that comes from faith, increased transgressions, and shut the mouths of all humans because no one has performed the righteousness of the Law so as not to need a substitute.	God made a covenant with Abraham in order to set in motion his plan to rescue his world through Abraham's family. God gave his people the Torah, his holy Law, as a pedagogue—a way to keep Israel, God's wayward people, from going totally off track until the coming of the Messiah. Israel was supposed to embody the law and thus be a light to the nations. But Israel has failed at this task.	THE COVENANT
GOD'S RIGHTEOUSNESS	The essence of God's righteousness is his unwavering faithfulness to uphold the glory of his name in all he does. No single action, like covenant keeping, is God's righteousness. For all his acts are done in righteousness. The essence of human righteousness is the unwavering faithfulness to uphold the glory of God in all we do. The problem is that we all fall short of this glory; that is, no one is righteous.	God's righteousness refers to his own faithfulness to the covenant he made with Abraham. Israel has been unfaithful to this commission. What is now required, if the world's sin is to be dealt with and a worldwide family created for Abraham, is a faithful Israelite who can be faithful to the covenant in Israel's stead.	GOD'S RIGHTEOUSNESS
FIRST-CENTURY JUDAISM	Many Jews in Jesus' day (like the Pharisees described in the Gospels) did not see the need for a substitute in order to be right with God, but sought to establish their own righteousness through "works of the Law." Whether keeping Sabbath or not committing adultery, these works became the basis of one's right standing with God. The inclination to rely on one's own ceremonial and moral acts is universal, apart from divine grace.	Jews in Jesus' day believed that the Law was given to them as people who were already in covenant with God. Therefore, the Law was not viewed as a way to earn God's favor, but as a sign that one was already in covenant with God. The "works of the Law" are not ways to earn favor with God, but badges of covenant identity by which one determines who is in the covenant and who is not. Many Jews in Paul's day were clinging to these identity markers (Sabbath, circumcision) in a way that made their Jewish identity exclusive. Therefore, their exclusivism was keeping the promise of God from flowing to the nations.	FIRST-CENTURY JUDAISM
THE GOSPEL	The heart of the gospel is the good news that Christ died for our sins and was raised from the dead. What makes this good news is that Christ's death accomplished a perfect righteousness before God and suffered a perfect condemnation from God, both of which are counted as ours through faith alone, so that we have eternal life with God in the new heavens and the new earth.	The gospel is the royal announcement that the crucified and risen Jesus, who died for our sins and rose again according to the Scriptures, has been enthroned as the true Lord of the world. When this gospel is preached, God calls people to salvation, out of sheer grace, leading them to repentance and faith in Jesus Christ as the risen Lord.	THE GOSPEL
HOW THIS HAPPENS	By faith we are united with Christ Jesus so that in union with him, his perfect righteousness and punishment are counted as ours (imputed to us). In this way, perfection is provided, sin is forgiven, wrath is removed, and God is totally for us. Thus, Christ alone is the basis of our justification, and the faith that unites us to him is the means or instrument of our justification. Trusting in Christ as Savior, Lord, and Supreme Treasure of our lives produces the fruit of love, or it is dead.	God himself, in the person of Jesus Christ (the faithful Israelite), has come, allowing the continuation of his plan to rescue human beings, and, through them, the world. The Messiah represents his people, standing in for them, taking upon himself the death that they deserved. God justifies (declares righteous) all those who are "in Christ," so that the vindication of Jesus upon his resurrection becomes the vindication of all those who trust in him. Justification refers to God's declaration of who is in the covenant (this worldwide family of Abraham through whom God's purposes can now be extended into the wider world) and is made on the basis of faith in Jesus Christ alone, not the "works of the Law" (i.e., badges of ethnic identity that once kept Jews and Gentiles apart).	HOW THIS HAPPENS
FUTURE JUSTIFICATION	Present justification is based on the substitutionary work of Christ alone, enjoyed in union with him through faith alone. Future justification is the open confirmation and declaration that in Christ Jesus we are perfectly blameless before God. This final judgment accords with our works. That is, the fruit of the Holy Spirit in our lives will be brought forward as the evidence and confirmation of true faith and union with Christ. Without that validating transformation, there will be no future salvation.	Present justification is the announcement issued on the basis of faith and faith alone of who is part of the covenant family of God. The present verdict gives the assurance that the verdict announced on the Last Day will match it; the Holy Spirit gives the power through which that future verdict, when given, will be seen to be in accordance with the life that the believer has then lived.	FUTURE JUSTIFICATION

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

A Justification Debate Primer – re: N.T. Wright, et. al. (2010)
https://bible.org/article/justification-debate-primer

The following are roughly in chronological order…

N.T. Wright on Justification - C.E. Hill (2001)
http://www.thirdmill.org/files/english/html/nt/NT.h.Hill.Wright.html

Tom Wright's Ecumenical Teaching (2002)
https://banneroftruth.org/us/resources/articles/2002/tom-wrights-ecumenical-teaching/

Getting Some Perspective on the "New Perspective":
What's at stake (or not!) for Reformed Pastors regarding the contemporary discussion of Paul and "the works of the law"? (2002) http://hornes.org/theologia/mark-horne/perspective-on-the-new-perspective

A Short Note on N.T. Wright and His Reformed Critics (2002) http://hornes.org/theologia/rich-lusk/a-short-note-on-n-t-wright-his-reformed-critics

The Attractions of the New Perspective(s) on Paul (by Ligon Duncan, Reformed, c. 2003) http://www.ligonier.org/learn/articles/attractions-new-perspectives-paul/

Excerpt:

V. What are the Problems with the New Perspective?

Let me rush on, and suggest the problems in the NPP are precisely in the four areas of the concerns and agendas of the NPP. Let's just walk right back through them again.

The Historical-Contextual Errors of the NPP

First, there is a historical-contextual problem in the new perspective's interpretation of Second Temple Judaism. They have gotten it wrong. They have painted too rosy a picture of Rabbinic Judaism. Paul Zahl (Dean of the Cathedral of the Advent in Birmingham, Alabama), who studied under Peter Stuhlmacher on the continent (no mean student of Paul, himself), has written, in a fairly recent Themelios, a little article on "The Mistakes of the New Perspective on Paul." [25] It is very insightful. He says this:

> E.P. Sanders mistakes the 'semi-Pelagianism' of Second Temple Judaism for 'Pelagianism' and thus misunderstands Luther's critique of the Roman Catholic Church as well as Luther's grasp of Paul. Sanders is in reaction to something that doesn't exist. He has therefore founded a movement with an illusory raison d'etre!

In other words: Sanders thinks that Luther's struggle with Roman Catholicism was a struggle against Pelagianism, therefore Luther projected the 'straw man' of Pelagianism onto Judaism. This is untrue. Luther's objection to the scholastic theology of the Roman Catholic Church was never to its Pelagianism. The Church was never Pelagian. It neither believed that salvation was according to works of the Law nor that the human being had to 'work' in order to gain the gracious favour of God. Medieval Catholicism was semi-Pelagian. This is to say, the Church taught that man and God were co-operators in salvation, that grace could complement and supplement human nature, and that 'I can get by with a little help from my friends' (The Beatles, 'Sergeant Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band'). Luther and the Church of Rome agreed that salvation was by faith. The difference was that Luther said it was by faith alone. We are not participants with God, we are not co-creators with him, we are not in any kind of relationship that involves mutuality or co-dependence [when it comes to justification and saving grace]. Salvation is a one-way street! The sola in sola fide is the thing.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

But when you read most accounts of Judaism, both 'then' (i.e., in Jesus' and Paul's time) and now, you see very quickly that Judaism operates in what Christian theologians recognize as semi-Pelagian categories. Judaism, then and now, understands the will human beings to be free, more or less. With support of the community, considerable leeway from the standpoint of the gracious God, and the extensive possibilities for repentance, forgiveness, and restoration, the human being can fly right. Judaism receives the Christian idea of original sin as overly pessimistic. Judaism shares with Christianity the hope of God's grace to sinners, as Sanders rightly pointed out. However, the New Testament understands the human condition as less tractable, less subject to effort and amelioration than Judaism generally does. Luther understood from Paul that Judaism did not go far enough in its analysis of the human problem. Luther's inherited religion had been semi-Pelagian, as Judaism was and still is.

Sanders and his partners in the New Perspective have missed completely the distinction between Pelagianism and semi-Pelagianism. Therefore they understand neither Luther nor Paul, nor are they aware of the vital difference in anthropology that distinguishes rabbinic Judaism from Pauline Christianity.[26]

Now, I think it is a very insightful comment. I have already contended that you can read Sander's estimation of Palestinian Judaism, grant him all his main conclusions of "finding," and still show that Palestinian Judaism is teaching a semi-Pelagian view of salvation. Human-merit theology is just as much a problem in the theology of semi-Pelagianism as it is in Pelagianism, but it is far more subtle. Basically, Sanders and Wright and other proponents of the NPP say that "unless you can show me the crassest, most blatant examples of merit theology, then the Rabbinic Judaism of the day is alleviated of the charge of merit theology." But semi-Pelagianism, and we know this pastorally, is subtle and as elusive as an eel. The person who is trying to combine grace and works in salvation is the hardest to get to and the one most easily self-deceived.

So there is a historical-contextual problem (that leads to a huge pastoral-theological problem). They have gotten Rabbinic Judaism wrong. Grant Sanders all his conclusions of "finding" and we can still prove from those very conclusions that Rabbinic Judaism was wrong.

The Practical Pastoral and Theological Errors of the NPP

Fourth and finally, the NPP is promotive of theological errors with significant negative practical and pastoral consequences. NPP New Testament theology tends to be reductionist or minimalist in nature, and undercuts the certainty of believers regarding the substance of the Gospel message. Allow me to suggest two examples here. First, take the common NPP teaching on the nature and content of the Gospel. Wright's definition of the Gospel makes the Gospel wholly about the person of Christ and not about his work ("the Gospel is 'Jesus is Lord and Messiah' not 'Jesus died for your sins'"). Now that kind of movement towards an incarnational approach to redemption, we have seen before in some modern quarters (Barth, Torrance, etc.). I suspect that Wright himself is somewhat influenced by those theological traditions in this area. Notice this definition of the Gospel moves back from the work of Christ to the person of Christ. Though Wright doesn't deny the importance of the work of Christ, he rarely, if ever, attempts to articulate clearly just what that work is and how it functions. In other words, the doctrine of the atonement is underdeveloped and underemphasized in Wright's version of Pauline and New Testament theology. But when one's mantra is that the Gospel is not "Jesus died for your sins" but "Jesus is Lord," it is incumbent upon one to articulate how that is an identifiably evangelical view of the Gospel, if one wants evangelical credentials.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Second, notice how the NPP diminishes the New Testament emphasis on the importance of the problem of sin and its forgiveness in relation to the Gospel. In the NPP, "righteousness" is primarily about God's faithfulness (on the divine side), and our membership status in the covenant community (on the human side), not God dealing with us in strict justice through the atoning work of Christ (on the divine side, see Romans 1:16-18, 3:21-28) and our being acquitted of our sins by God and justified by God through the alien righteousness of Christ (on the human side). So, the minute you accept that the Gospel is not about justification, as Wright does, and that righteousness is about "covenant membership," as Wright does, then at the very least you have a huge hole in the historic Protestant consensus on and articulation of the Gospel in relation to human sin and divine justice, in at least three areas. These areas are: (1) the nature of the human predicament, (2) the nature of Paul's pastoral context and counsel, and (3) the nature of the Christian message of salvation. Hence, if the problem of sin is going to be dealt with in Wright's system without devaluation of the seriousness of the problem, then he has a massive reconstruction project on his hands. His writing to this point does not assure us that he can avoid diminution of this reformational theme.

VI. What Good Has or Can Come Out of the Debate on the New Perspective?

What good has or can come out of the NPP debate? Well, a lot. Positively, the NPP has probably increased our knowledge of the theological context of the early Christian world simply by putting that issue on the front burner. Negatively, we've discovered how little evangelicals know or care about the historic Protestant doctrine of justification by grace through faith, in some measure because of the NPP. It has functioned as a "theological ice storm" to show us where the dead limbs were on evangelicalism's tree. That's important pastorally. We needed to know how bad a shape we were in. Now we know and can work to do something about it. But primarily, let me suggest three things here.

First, the NPP (via its own inability to appreciate that legalism needn't be of the most obviously Pelagian variety to be legalism indeed) has reminded us not to think of all soteric legalism as overt and crass. It usually isn't. Legalism is usually a very insidious thing that has to be smoked out with care. The NPP, by its own failure to distinguish semi-Pelagianism and Pelagianism, and by its readiness to baptize semi-Pelagianism as orthodox, has reminded us to be careful and precise as we address legalism in our own preaching of the doctrine of justification from the text of the New Testament.

Second, the NPP (through its relentless assault on a Bultmannian/Lutheran/existentialist interpretation of Paul) has sent out a warning against the overly psychologized, subjectivized view of justification that is out there on the evangelical market today. I am talking about views of justification which see it as fundamentally subjective, rather than objective. The NPP has brutally and effectively parodied these kinds of presentations of justification (though it has often mistaken them for the historic Protestant teaching). Many evangelicals tout justification as the solution to self-image problems, self-esteem deficits, and emotional neediness, rather than as the solution of God's righteous wrath against rebellious sinners. Consequently, they fail to emphasize adequately the objective thing that it is - an objective, extrinsic act of God (with enormous subjective consequences, to be sure), an act that is not subjective, in se, at all or in any way. None of justification's subjective benefits flow until its objective reality is grasped. And that grasped objective reality enables a right understanding and experience of the subjective blessings that accrue to the justified (assurance of God's love, peace of conscience, joy in the Holy Spirit, growth in grace, and final perseverance). The NPP has sent us a warning about an unbiblically subjective view of justification both by its critique of pop-evangelical views of justification, and through the promotion of its own view of justification, which is, ironically, fundamentally an objective declaration of the subjective (though in the case of the NPP the subjective reality being declared is primarily social, rather than individual).

Thirdly, the NPP (because of its reductionist definition of the content of the Gospel) is going to force us to think rigorously about the meaning of the Gospel. How do we responsibly and exegetically articulate the precise nature and content of "the Gospel," justification and imputation? This is one of the concerns of the Alliance of Confessing Evangelicals, to address the issue of the Gospel, and help scholars, pastors, and other faithful Christians derive from the New Testament, exegetically, theologically, precisely, comprehensively, and clearly, just what the Gospel is. I regularly find that students who have read the NPP, whether they are favorable or unfavorable towards it after reading it, are confused about just what the Gospel is and how to articulate it from the New Testament. This confusion is precisely because of the confusion of the NPP on this question, and its contradiction of classical Christian formulations, and not because of some mental deficiency in the students.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Some Random Thoughts on N.T. Wright's Romans Commentary – Rick Lusk (2003)
http://hornes.org/theologia/rich-lusk/wright-on-romans
(Lusk, a Reformed Presbyterian, provides an overall positive review, but with severall specific criticisms.)

What's Wrong with Wright: Examining the New Perspective on Paul by Phil Johnson http://www.ligonier.org/learn/articles/whats-wrong-wright-examining-new-perspective-paul/

A Defense of the Old Perspective on Paul – What Did St. Paul Really Say? – Johnson (2004)
https://www.monergism.com/thethreshold/articles/onsite/new_p.html

D.A. Carson's The Vindication of Imputation on the difference between exegetical and theological levels of discourse (2004)
http://s3.amazonaws.com/tgc-documents/carson/2004_vindication_of_imputation.pdf [PDF]

N. T. Wright on Romans 5:12-21 and Justification a Case Study in Exegesis, Theological Method, and the "New Perspective on Paul" (2005)
http://www.midamerica.edu/uploads/files/pdf/journal/16-venema.pdf [PDF]

Hermeneutics of The New Perspective on Paul (2005)
https://www.tms.edu/m/tmsj16k.pdf [PDF]

An Overview and Critique of the New Perspective on Paul's Doctrine of Justification (by Jeffery Smith, Covenant Reformed Baptist Church, Easley, SC) (2005)
http://www.biblicalstudies.org.uk/pdf/rbtr/03-1_077.pdf [PDF]

The New Perspective on Paul – Its Basic Tenents, History and Presuppositions
https://www.tms.edu/m/tmsj16g.pdf [PDF] (2005)
(Note: TMS = The Master's Seminary, founded by John MacArthur)

The New Perspective's View of Paul and the Law (2005) (More of a Caution)
https://www.tms.edu/m/tmsj16i.pdf [PDF]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

An Explanation of the New Perspective on Paul (2005)
http://www.onthewing.org/user/Chapell_NewPerspective.pdf [PDF] (offers some pros along with cons)

Dr. Riddlebarger's Lectures on the New Perspectives on Paul (Reformed) (20??)
https://www.monergism.com/legacy/mt/mp3/dr-riddlebargers-lectures-new-perspectives-paul

(List of links to MP3 [Audio] files) (more links…)

Reformed Confessionalism and the New Perspective on Paul – Kim Riddlebarger (rev. 2006)
http://kimriddlebarger.squarespace.com/theological-essays/New%20Perspective%20on%20Paul%20revised%202006.pdf [PDF]

N.T. Wright and the "New Perspective on Paul" Review (2007)
http://markdroberts.com/?p=299

The New Perspective – A survey of the New Perspective on Paul (c. 2007 ?)
http://lectionarystudies.com/studyn/newperspective.html

Excerpt:

…New perspective scholars claim that Paul was no Luther oppressed by sin and guilt, driven to desperation by Biblical law. Yet, it does seem likely that they have underplayed the role of the law. Law obedience is not just a status privilege, but a covenant requirement. First century Judaism saw the Torah as something more than just a life-style manual for members of the covenant. See Justification and Variegated Nomism: Vol.#1: The complexities of Second Temple Judaism, ed. Carson, 2001. On the other hand, there is much to commend the observation that neither were first century Jews crude legalists (the use of the law to earn salvation). Stephen Wasterholm in Perspectives Old and New on Paul: The Lutheran Paul and his critics, 2004, although soundly reformed ("Lutheran"), holds that Pharisaic Judaism "knew and depended on God's grace and did not promote a self-righteous pursuit of salvation by works."

In the end this debate comes down to Paul's understanding of the law. Sanders observation that "works of the law", for a first century Jew, are the deeds done in obedience to the Torah for the purpose of maintaining their standing before God ("covenant nomism - the maintenance of status" rather than "covenant legalism"), has much to commend it. Yet, rather than seeing the faith / obedience correlatives as positives, it is more than likely that nomism is the very heresy that Paul is attacking. Working to retain stading before God and/or progress that standing, in the sense of advancing holiness, cuts at the very heart of a right-standing before God which is "reckoned" by "faith" (Christ's faith/faithfulness and our faith in his faith/faithfulness - right-standing has always been reckoned by faith, cf. Abraham [faith in the faithfulness of God]). Obedience (always imperfect) is a product of faith and secures nothing, nor serves any meritorious end.

So, what do we draw from all this? For Paul, "works of the law" (the strict obedience of the Torah for the purpose of maintaining and/or progressing right standing before God - nomism) is a heresy. Right-standing before God (covenant compliance / inclusion / acceptance) rests wholly on God's grace (God's covenant mercy facilitated in the faithfulness of Christ), and is appropriated through the instrument of faith - "from faith first to last". It is very unlikely that Paul is arguing that justification is a mechanism by which God includes Gentiles with the people of God in these last days. It is far more likely that Paul understands justification as a divine action "to set right before God", Bruce, which righteous state is realized in union with Christ / "in Christ" (righteousness realized in identification with Christ better reflects Pauline throught than imputed righteousness). In simple terms, Paul's argument in Galatians and Romans is not about ecclesiology, but soteriology.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The debate continues. At times, the new perspective edges toward being "another gospel", but at the same time, by challenging Luther's synthesis, it has served as a positive corrective. Romans and Galatians is more about staying saved than getting saved, ie., the problem Paul addresses is nomism, not legalism. None-the-less, I happily leave Luther with the last word. "A Christian is free from all things and over all things so that he needs no works to make him righteous and save him, since faith alone abundantly confers all these things. Should he grow so foolish, however, as to presume to become righteous, free, saved, and a Christian by means of some good work, he would instantly lose faith and all its benefits", Luther, 1520.

("nomism" is from Greek for "law")

See also: Covenantal Nomism

Is the Doctrine of Imputed Righteousness Biblical? A Response to N. T. Wright https://johnploughman.wordpress.com/2007/02/02/is-the-doctrine-of-imputed-righteousness-biblical-a-response-to-n-t-wright/

(see the "about" for actual name of article author)

The Possibilities and Perils in Being a Really Smart Bishop (R.J. Neuhaus / Catholic)
https://www.firstthings.com/article/2008/04/the-possibilities-and-perils-in-being-a-really-smart-bishop

N.T. Wright Responds to Richard John Neuhaus (re: Surprised by Hope criticisms)
https://www.firstthings.com/article/2008/06/nt-wright-responds-to-richard-john-neuhaus

Beware of NT Wright (2009)
https://flockalert.wordpress.com/2009/04/26/beware-of-nt-wright/

Wright on Imputed Righteousness (2009)
http://feedingonchrist.com/wright-on-imputed-righteousness/

John Calvin and N.T. Wright on Imputed Righteousness (2009) by Paul Helm
http://equip.sbts.edu/wp-content/uploads/2015/10/9037-SBJT-V13-N.4-Helm.pdf [PDF]

Five Arguments Against Future Justification According to Works (2009)
http://www.reformation21.org/articles/five-arguments-against-future-justification-according-to-works.php

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

A Justification Debate Primer – re: N.T. Wright, et. al. (2010)
https://bible.org/article/justification-debate-primer

Wright Is Wrong on Imputation by Thomas Schreiner (2010)
http://www.ligonier.org/learn/articles/wright-wrong-imputation/

God Is Not The Author Of Confusion - But NT Wright Is A Strong Contender (2010)
http://onceuponacross.blogspot.com/2010/11/god-is-not-author-of-confusion-but-nt.html
(Witty 'Humpty Dumpty" analogy of Wright's exegesis; read the comment)

NT Wright v The Gospel [Critique] (2010)
Part 1: http://onceuponacross.blogspot.com/2010/04/nt-wright-v-gospel-part-1.html

Part 2: http://onceuponacross.blogspot.com/2010/05/nt-wright-v-gospel-part-2.html

Part 3: http://onceuponacross.blogspot.com/2010/05/nt-wright-v-gospel-part-3.html

Note: See Comment in Part 3

NT Wright v RC Sproul [Critique] (2010)
http://onceuponacross.blogspot.com/2010/05/nt-wright-v-rc-sproul.html

Exclusive Interview with Phil Johnson - Is NT Wright A Heretic? (2010)
Part 1: http://onceuponacross.blogspot.com/2010/08/exclusive-interview-with-phil-johnson.html

Part 2: http://onceuponacross.blogspot.com/2010/08/exclusive-interview-with-phil-johnson_25.html

Part 3: http://onceuponacross.blogspot.com/2010/08/exclusive-interview-with-phil-johnson_30.html

Christ or Family as the "Seed" of Promise? (2010)
An Evaluation of N. T. Wright on Galatians 3:16
http://www.sbts.edu/resources/files/2010/10/sbjt-v14-n3_deroache_meyer.pdf [PDF]

The Emerging Consequences of Whose Ideas? (2010)
https://www.9marks.org/article/emerging-consequences-whose-ideas/

What Is the New Perspective on Paul? How Should It Be Assessed? (Reformed)
https://blogs.thegospelcoalition.org/justintaylor/2010/10/11/what-is-the-new-perspective-on-paul-how-should-it-be-assessed/

Excerpt:

Summary. (Note: article by Gospel Coalition, 2010).
The foundation of the New Perspective on Paul, allegedly proved by Sanders, is not nearly as secure as some claim. We have significant evidence that Paul rejects the law because of human inability and that some of his opponents had fallen prey to legalism. Even if the New Perspective falls short of providing an adequate explanation of Paul's view of the law, it rightly observes that the inclusion of the Gentiles was a major theme in Pauline theology. What the proponents fail to explain as convincingly is how the Gentile inclusion into the people of God should be integrated with Paul's theology of law. Finally, I have indicated here that scholars have shown that Sanders's reading of the Jewish sources is overly simplistic. A careful reading of the Jewish sources indicates that some Jews emphasized the role of obedience for obtaining eschatological salvation.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

THE New Perspective on Paul (Ken Silva, 2010)

Into: http://apprising.org/2010/05/08/introduction-to-the-new-perspectives-on-paul/

Part 1: http://apprising.org/2010/05/08/the-new-perspective-on-paul-part-1/

Part 2: http://apprising.org/2010/05/08/the-new-perspective-on-paul-part-2/

Part 3: http://apprising.org/2010/05/08/the-new-perspective-on-paul-part-3/ (reprint of a 2007 article)

Excerpt (Part 2):

In part one of our series on the New Perspective on Paul, we examined the origins and surveyed its basic teachings. We concluded that introduction by stating that the NPP bases most of its theological views on its understanding of the rabbinical teaching of what is known as "Second Temple Judaism."

Second Temple Judaism

This leads us to a brief discussion about what Judaism of the New Testament times actually believed and taught. Foundational to NPP theology and without which the system collapses, is Sanders' thesis that Judaism of Paul's day (often referred to as Second Temple Judaism or Palestinian Judaism) was not a self-righteous, merit-based religion. Long before the Reformation, Augustine had defended the faith against Pelagianism which taught that salvation was obtained through works. The Reformers, they claim, had read their struggle with Catholicism back into the New Testament texts and assumed the practitioners of Judaism were as Pelagian as medieval Catholicism. The Reformers equated sixteenth century Roman theology with Pelagianism then linked both with Second Temple Judaism.

Thus, in the minds of Luther, Calvin and the other Reformers, Paul was addressing first century Pelagianism found in Judaism much as they were addressing it in Romanism. It is the contention of the NPP leaders that the Reformers misread Paul because of this faulty link between Judaism and Pelagianism. For this reason it is believed that Paul did not so much as even address legalism, for Palestinian Judaism was not a legalistic religion. First century Judaism was a religion of grace and Paul did not have any significant theological disagreements with it.

On what do the NPP scholars base their understanding of Second Temple Judaism? They claim when the primary rabbinical writings are studied they yield a very different understanding of Judaism than that of the Reformers and evangelicals since. What these writings yield is covenantal nomism as described above; that is, a religion in which one enters the covenant by the grace of God but stays in the covenant through obedience…

Excerpt (from Part 3):

Robert Thomas, at the end of his article on the hermeneutics of the NPP offers an excellent summary of the NPP teachings. I will close my paper with a selection of a few of these:

- First-century Judaism was not a salvation-by-works religion.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

- Until the death and resurrection of Christ, by virtue of God's election, any physical descendant of Abraham is a member of the covenant people and thereby justified.
- Those who maintain the covenantal nomism relationship by obedience are the ones who will be saved.
- Paul retained his covenantal nomism after his Damascus road experience.
- From that point on, his mission was to dispense with circumcision, Sabbath observance, and dietary restrictions of the Mosaic law as boundaries that limited who could be a member of the covenant people.
- Guilt was not expressed in Paul's writings, but was introduced by Augustine and Luther.
- Justification by faith and imputed righteousness was read into Paul by Augustine, Luther, Wesley, and Calvin because of their contemporary situations.
- Faith is not the means of justification or of joining the covenant community; it is rather a badge of covenant membership. One joins the covenant community through water baptism.
- Final justification is based on works of obedience to the Mosaic law so that any justification a person enjoys at present is only preliminary and can be reversed.[18]

N. T. Wright and Justification by Roger E. Olsen [Recommended]

http://www.patheos.com/blogs/rogereolson/2010/11/n-t-wright-and-justification/

Excerpt:

…So what is all the fuss about? As I read Justification I kept an eye open for THE central point of controversy between Wright and his critics (especially but not only John Piper). It seems to come down to this (although there are admittedly several facets to the "new perspective on Paul" that do not all boil down to this): According to Wright, Paul did not teach an imputation of God's or Christ's righteousness to the repenting and believing sinner. Wright especially rejects any notion that Paul taught an imputation of Christ's "active obedience" (fulfillment of the Torah) to said persons. He affirms, however, an imputation of righteousness by which he means acquittal as in a court of law. For him "justification" means forgiveness and membership in God's people. He goes to great lengths to deny that he is suggesting any Pelagian or semi-Pelagian merit involved in justification. It is solely by God's grace through faith. But the "faith" is first and foremost "the faithfulness of Jesus–the perfect covenant partner" and secondarily the believing person's embrace of Jesus as the Messiah of God resulting in membership in God's people.
I think Wright's main point about justification is stated in nutshell form on page 206. The passage is too lengthy to quote here. In brief, Wright says that when God justifies a person he creates for that person a new status of belonging to the Messiah. He does not, Wright argues, infuse virtue into the person (a la Catholic theology) or impute God's own (or Jesus' own) righteousness to him or her. Rather, "What the judge has done is to pass judicial sentence on sin, in the faithful death of the Messiah, so that those who belong to the Messiah, though in themselves 'ungodly' and without virtue or merit, now find themselves hearing the lawcourt verdict 'in the right'." (p. 206)

Now, of course, I cannot boil the entire book's argument down to this. But it seems to me much, if not most, of the book's argument is aimed at supporting this thesis. And this is that to which Wright's critics most strenuously object because they inherit and hold dearly to a Reformed tradition that says God imputes to repentant and believing sinners both the "active and passive obedience" of Christ such that, in God's sight, the justified person is regarded by God as having fulfilled Torah.

Another interesting point of disagreement has to do with monergism and synergism. On pages 192-193 Wright scoffs at those who, in knee-jerk fashion, "shout 'synergism'!" whenever someone (like Wright) talks about people making free choices with regard to their own salvation. I will leave it to others to decide whether Wright's soteriology is more consistent with Arminianism or monergism, but I detect at least echoes of Arminian theology in the long paragraph ending page 192 and beginning page 193. (Please note! I am not "claiming" Wright for the "Arminian side." I have no idea where he would place himself in this dispute and perhaps he would simply appeal to paradox rather than affirm either synergism or monergism. But his statements about human free choices enabled by grace sound more Arminian than Calvinist to me!)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

At this point I am reserving final judgment about Wright's thesis. I want to give it more study and thought. However, I am whole heartedly in agreement with him that serious biblical study trumps tradition. In such matters tradition gets a vote but never a veto. And I find it difficult to consider this a matter of orthodoxy or heresy. Wright affirms imputed righteousness on account of faith–Christ's faithfulness and our grasp of that through believing in his death and resurrection. The only difference that I can see between his doctrine of justification and the traditional Reformed doctrine is his denial of imputation of Christ's active obedience. For him justification is nevertheless a divine declaration about a repentant and believing sinner's status. It is not infusion of moral virtue. Could it be that, in the overall scheme of evangelical theology (including both Reformed and Wesleyan perspectives on soteriology) this is a tempest in a teapot? Wesley also denied imputation of Christ's active obedience. But, then, Wright's critics probably consider Wesley less than fully Protestant.

A Needed Corrective to Lutheran Readings (2010)
https://wordandworld.luthersem.edu/content/pdfs/30-4_Paul/30-4_Face_to_Face.pdf [PDF]

N. T. Wright on Resurrection Justification (2010)
https://theecclesialcalvinist.wordpress.com/2013/06/03/n-t-wright-on-resurrection-justification/

Justification: The Saving Righteousness of God in Christ by Tomas Schreiner (2011)
http://www.etsjets.org/files/JETS-PDFs/54/54-1/JETS_54-1_19-34_Schreiner.pdf

The New Perspective on Paul: An Introduction. Kent L. Yinger (2011)
http://ejournals.bc.edu/ojs/index.php/scjr/article/view/1762 [by a Jewish reviewer, J. D. Garroway]

Kent L. Yinger: The New Perspective on Paul - Review (2011)
http://www.postost.net/2011/03/kent-l-yinger-new-perspective-paul

The New Perspective on Paul, Ethnocentrism, and Judaism (2011)
https://www.jasonstaples.com/bible/the-new-perspective-on-paul-ethnocentrism-and-judaism/

Excerpt:

…Lest I take the easy way out and stop short of providing an alternative proposal of my own, I am convinced that Paul did not oppose his Jewish contemporaries because of legalism, self-righteousness, particularity, or ethnocentrism but over the question of how one becomes a righteous person (or rather, a part of a righteous people) who will justly be judged as righteous in the final judgment. He argues that no external law, facts of birth, or ritual practice can reliably be said to truly make a person (or people) righteous. Against this, he points to the power of the Spirit to transform a person from the inside out as the only means of true righteousness, asserting that the death and resurrection of the Messiah have provided for an outpouring of this Spirit for the transformation of his people (and ultimately the world itself). Paul's thinking was thoroughly apocalyptic—emphasizing God's righteous judgment—and thoroughly centered on God's restoration of his people through this transformation by the Spirit. This may not scratch modern itches to the degree that the Evangelical or academic multicultural Pauls do, but I am convinced that it is a more faithful reconstruction of what was truly at root in Paul's proclamation.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Flawed Theology of N. T. Wright (2011)

https://www.commentarymagazine.com/culture-civilization/religion/christianity/flawed-theology-of-n-t-wright/

On preaching the theology of Tom Wright (2011)

http://www.walkingwithgiants.net/preaching/on-preaching-the-theology-of-tom-wright/

Chris Tilling has a high regard for the writings of Tom Wright. It is of interest, therefore, that he thinks that many who attempt to reflect Wright's teaching in their preaching end up saying either of two things:-

1. "You thought this text means this…but you are wrong! It is not about going to heaven when you die. Understood in terms of exile and restoration, it means…" Tilling remarks that this iconoclastic habit has a tendency to undermine hearers' confidence in Scripture. After all, if I'm given the impression that everything I thought I knew about the teaching of the Bible is now found to be askew, and needs correcting by experts, then maybe Scripture isn't as clear as I once thought it was.

2. "Salvation is not about being rescued from this material world. It is about the transformation of the physical, and this means that justice in the present world is important." This kind of utterance forms a healthy corrective to the undue stress on the individual and on a future 'spiritual' salvation. However, says Tilling, it can too often be linked with a neglect of the gospel's call to repentance from sin and personal faith in Christ.

Tilling thinks that Wright himself can be excused from these imbalances. I wish I could agree.

"Justification" and "righteousness" are not the same (2011)

http://www.lionelwindsor.net/2011/02/21/justification-and-righteousness-are-not-the-same/

Improve your theological word power: Imputation

http://www.lionelwindsor.net/2009/09/30/improve-your-theological-word-power-imputation/

The Debate Over Justification by Faith (Seventh-Day Adventist perspective) (2011)

http://www.perspectivedigest.org/article/55/archives/16-4/the-debate-over-justification-by-faith

Some Evangelicals and Catholics think they have reached agreement on this issue, but they're overlooking some essentials.

Excerpt:

…The New Perspectives on Paul (NPP), New Covenant Theology (NCT), and Federal Vision (FV) reject the doctrine of justification by faith alone (sola fide), the emphasis on which the church stands or falls (articula stantis et cadentis ecclesiae).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

R. Albert Mohler, Jr., president of Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, said, "By this historic and crucial measure [Justification by faith, the article on which the church stands or falls] evangelicalism in its contemporary form is largely falling—and falling fast." He concludes, "The drama of the gospel has not changed, but the audience for evangelical theology has changed—and not for the better. The emergence of these new systems of thought [New Perspectives on Paul and Federal Vision], neither of which is as new as its proponents suggest, indicates a dangerous and potentially fatal weakening of evangelical conviction and doctrinal discernment."[85]

Abraham Kuyper said in Scripture "justification occupies the most conspicuous place, and is presented as of greatest importance for the sinner." It is "the very kernel of the Reformation, which puts this doctrine of 'justification by faith' oddly and clearly in opposition to the 'meritorious works of Rome.'" He rightly urged "not to merge justification and sanctification."[86] The Reformed Church also rightly urged that there be no merging of justification and sanctification.

Protestants would do well to listen to Catholic apologist Robert Sungenis: "Between Catholics and Protestants lies a great divide concerning whether the Christian has imputed or infused righteousness. Indeed this difference is probably the most crucial in the ongoing debate, because it encompasses the most theological territory. In fact, the original motivation of the Reformation was to distance itself from the medieval concept of infused righteousness formulated largely by the theology of Augustine."[87]

Karl Barth adds: "[Trent] speaks of the good works of the regenerate man, who is only a little sinner and commits only tiny sins, and who is the happy position of being able to increase the grace of justification in cooperation with it, and even to augment the degree of his eternal bliss. The practical consequence of all this is that the misery of man is not regarded in any way as serious or dangerous either for Christians or non-Christians. The Reformation communions could not unite with a Catholic Church which held this doctrine, and they cannot accept the call to reunion with it today."[88]

"But with its doctrine of justification the Roman Church closed the door to self-reformation and deprived itself of all possibility of seizing the initiative in uniting the divided Church. It was impossible for the Evangelical Churches to return to fellowship with Rome when the decisive point of dispute was handled in this way. They could not surrender truth to unity."[89]

Barth's statements need to guide the contemporary process, for arguably truth has been surrendered for unity, and that is too high a price to pay for the war against secularism, for only truth will overcome error. False theology is just as secular as any other secularism, but more insidious because it is in the church rather than outside.

Richard John Neuhaus stated the Catholic difference from Protestants: "For the Catholic, faith in Christ and faith in the Church are one act of faith."[90] This is because Catholic theology identifies the church with Christ, for the church is alleged to be literally the "body of Christ" instead of metaphorically, as in Protestant theology. The debate over the doctrine of salvation between Evangelicals and Catholics has a deeper level in biblical ecclesiology. Christ as prophet, priest, and king cannot be confined within a church (as in Roman theology) because He is the head of the church. In fact, "the Church is only the Body of which He is the Head."[91]

In other words, it is Christ who justifies, and not the church. In spite of all the work of ECT, there cannot be true union on justification unless the Catholic Church gives up its identity with Christ, because the church cannot be the extension of the incarnation. The church isn't Christ, nor is Christ the church. The ascended Christ was addressed as God by the Father. He is exalted and seated at the Father's right hand, and has all authority in heaven and earth. To be Christian, the church must remain submissive, humble, and under Christ's authority—under the One who is truly infallible. Nor is it good enough to say bishops preside "in place of God over the flock"[92] so that "the faithful must cling to their bishop,"[93] because the church is "the universal sacrament of salvation."[94]

This is not what Peter—the alleged first pope—said: "'Salvation is found in no one else [besides Christ], for there is no other name under heaven given to men by which we must be saved'" (Acts 4:12, NIV). Christians don't need mediators to come to Jesus Christ, for He is the only mediator between God and humans: "There is one God and one mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus" (1 Tim. 2:5, NIV). He is the only authorized priest in the Christian era (Epistle to the Hebrews). "Let us then approach the throne of grace with confidence, so that we may receive mercy and find grace to help us in our time of need" (Heb. 4:16, NIV). The good news: Christ "is able to save completely those who come to God through him [not through a church, human priests, saints, or Mary], because he always lives to intercede for them" (Heb. 7:25, NIV).[95]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Thought and Writings of N. T. Wright: An Arminian Appraisal (2011)
http://www.helwyssocietyforum.com/?p=1340 (Includes discussion of Justification, Righteousness, etc)

What N.T. Wright Really Said
http://hornes.org/mark/2011/02/what-n-t-wright-really-said/

What follows deals primarily with two essays, one by Dr. Douglas Kelly and the other by The Rev. Richard Phillips. My reason for writing this essay is that many people are confidently saying things about N. T. Wright that I believe are contrary to fact.

"Justification" by N.T. Wright – Reviewed by Dr. Michael Horton (2009)
https://www.whitehorseinn.org/images/Horton-WrightReview.pdf [PDF] (whitehorseinn.org)

Beware of N.T. Wright (2011) (re: Infant Baptism – Baptism Regeneration)
https://theonomyresources.blogspot.com/2011/05/beware-of-nt-wright.html

What Are We To Do With N.T. Wright? (2011)
http://reformedacademic.blogspot.com/2011/09/what-are-we-to-do-with-nt-wright.html
(Note: Make sure you read the comments)

N. T. Wright, Apocalyptic and Galatians (2011)
https://readingacts.com/2011/10/07/n-t-wright-apocalyptic-and-galatians/

N.T. Wright, Calvinism, and Scripture (2012)
https://rachelheldevans.com/blog/wright-calvinism-scripture (Part of a series of discussions on Wright's book, Scripture and the Authority of God)

Balancing Out (W)Right: Jesus' Theology of Individual and Corporate Repentance and Forgiveness in the Gospel of Luke (2012)
http://www.etsjets.org/files/JETS-PDFs/55/55-2/JETS%2055-2_299-321_Chatraw.pdf [PDF]

The New Perspective on Paul: A Reformed Assessment (2012)
https://www.researchgate.net/profile/Stephen_Paynter2/publication/302904291_The_New_Perspective_on_Paul_A_Reformed_Assessment/links/5732f6ca08ae9ace8406357b.pdf [PDF]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

What is the New Perspective on Paul? (2012) http://facultyblog.eternitybiblecollege.com/2012/01/what-is-the-new-perspective-on-paul/

What is the "New Perspective on Paul"? A Basic Explanation (Part 1) (2013)
https://sharperiron.org/article/what-new-perspective-paul-basic-explanation-part-1

Excerpt:

…The so-called “New Perspective on Paul” would be better called “New Perspectives on Paul.” But in whatever variation, and whatever its problems, the New Perspective offers an important and robust challenge to traditional Reformation views of justification and Pauline theology. I should say that I do not dismiss everything the New Perspective has to say. While I am completely in agreement with the Reformers on justification by grace through faith, I am not ready to “throw the baby out with the bath water.”…

What is the "New Perspective on Paul"? A Basic Explanation (Part 2) (2013)
https://sharperiron.org/article/what-new-perspective-paul-basic-explanation-part-2

Excerpt:

… From what has been said already we may view the NPP as an attempt to adjust Christian understanding of the way First Century Jews saw themselves in relation, first to God and second to the Gentiles. To God they apparently did not think, like the Reformers believed they did, that they could earn merit with God. Instead it is claimed, they held that by grace they were in the grace covenant which assured national blessing to Israel. Hence, by observing the rites and solemnities of circumcision, Sabbath observance, kosher practices, etc., they were showing fidelity to the covenant. Hence, when they read “works of the law” as in Gal. 3:10 above, the Jews understood it to mean these exclusivist observances.

But that is not all. The New Perspective also urges us to reinterpret the Apostle Paul’s mindset in these same terms. Once we do that, we are told, we will see that Paul was not speaking about works of merit at all in Romans and Galatians. Rather, he was speaking about these badges of exclusivity.

You see, the real problem [according to NPP] Paul was writing about was that the Jews would not allow that through Christ’s work on the Cross the Gentiles too were invited to become covenant people along with Israel. Just as the Jews believed they were partakers of God’s covenant grace, so also they must accept that Gentiles likewise would be included with them if they believed the good news that God had opened the covenant up to them as equal sharers of covenant grace with Israel, but without the need for Israel’s badges—which, remember, as markers of exclusivity, would be rendered unnecessary and redundant. …

What is the "New Perspective on Paul"? A Basic Explanation (Part 3) (2013)
https://sharperiron.org/article/what-new-perspective-paul-basic-explanation-part-3

Excerpt:

... This is the gospel of the New Perspective:

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

As it was proclaimed to Israel by Jesus and by Paul and others, the Gospel was that Israel's exile was over. Important to Wright is this view that ever since the Babylonian captivity Israel had been in exile. Even though they were in their own land, they were still in exile because they were under Roman rule, and so did not have self-sovereignty. The proclamation of the death and resurrection of Messiah, is for Wright the solution to Israel's exile. They are to believe that Jesus is the Messiah; that Jesus is Lord. Having that badge of faith acts as the new and only badge of entrance into the covenant and is what justifies them.

Clearly there has been a radical shift of emphasis! ...

What is the "New Perspective on Paul"? A Basic Explanation (Part 4) (2013)

https://sharperiron.org/article/what-new-perspective-paul-basic-explanation-part-4 (links to prior 3 parts)

Excerpt:

Though limited and simplified, I hope this has been something of a useful orientation to the New Perspective on Paul. The main issue as I see it is, as always, hermeneutical. In short, proponents of this position allow their relative comprehension of facets of Second Temple Judaism (roughly 500 BC to AD 70) to cloud their reading of the New Testament, and especially of the Apostle Paul. Read as sufficient in itself, the New Testament sets out a clear picture of Jewish antagonism to the Gospel; not because of narrow covenantal boundary-markers, but because "seeking to establish their own righteousness, [they] have not submitted to the righteousness of God" (Rom. 10:3).

The New Perspective on Paul A Historical, Critical, Appraisal of a New Approach to Judaism and Paul (2013)

http://thegoodteacher.com/Special/New%20Perspective%20(C.%20Reeves%20Submitted).pdf [PDF]

A Guide to the New Perspective on Paul (2013)

http://www.spiritandtruth.org/teaching/documents/articles/144/144.pdf [PDF]

Galatians 2:11-21 and the Interpretive Context of "Works of the Law" (2013)

http://www.etsjets.org/files/JETS-PDFs/56/56-2/JETS_56-2_307-323_Scacewater.pdf [PDF]

N.T. Wright vs James White – Justification and Saint Paul (2013) (Unbelievable Radio)

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Zp8rMsOCsvY [Audio] [Recommended]

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=dQoczsyfBAo [Audio] [Recommended]

The "Remnant" and What It Says About "Second Temple Judaism" [PDF] (c. 2013)

http://alpharetta-bible-study.com/images/PDFs/2013/08%20-%20Remnant%20by%20Allan%20Turner.pdf

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Doug Moo reviews N.T. Wright's "Paul and the Faithfulness of God" (highlights)

http://www.patheos.com/blogs/euangelion/2013/11/doug-moo-reviews-n-t-wrights-paul-and-the-faithfulness-of-god/(Includes link to full review by Moo)

Over at TGC, Douglas Moo (Wheaton College) provides a lengthy and interesting review of N.T. Wright's Paul and the Faithfulness of God:

Critically:

I won't list other instances, but Paul and the Faithfulness of God contains too many of these kinds of rhetorically effective but exaggerated or overly generalized claims. A related problem is Wright's tendency to set himself against the world—and then wonder why the world is so blind as to fail to see what he sees. A key thread, for instance, is Wright's insistence that the basic story Paul's working with has to do with God's fulfillment of his covenant promises to Abraham—a vital focus that "almost all exegetes miss" and that has been "screened out from the official traditions of the church from at least the time of the great creeds" (494). This problem is sometimes compounded by a caricature of the tradition with which he disagrees (as in his critique of "traditional western soteriology" [a rather broad category!] as focused on soul saving [754-55]).

Luke Warm:

[U]ltimately significant for his view of justification, Wright claims Second-Temple Jews weren't concerned with "life after death" but rather with how to tell in the present who would be vindicated on the last day (see 4QMMT; here, by the way, is another place where Wright sets up a bit of a straw man—the question is properly framed not as "life after death" but as concern for vindication in the judgment [see Simon Gathercole]). Paul would hardly be engaged in answering questions his contemporaries weren't asking. Contrary to some critics of Wright, the "vertical" issue of the individual's salvation does find plenty of room in his Pauline theology. But Wright's understanding of "gospel," justification, and other issues are tilted toward the "horizontal" to a degree that doesn't finally do justice to Paul's own emphases. "Gospel," for instance, undoubtedly has the "God reigns" sense Wright wants to give the language, but it remains a stubborn fact that Paul uses the language in most cases with reference to the new relationship with God that the inaugurated reign of God makes available. It's this balance concerning Paul's actual usage of his key theological language that I sometimes find missing in Wright's presentation ("Yes, but . . ." is my frequent reaction when reading Wright)

Positively:

I strongly endorse Wright's clear and convincing case for a strictly forensic sense of justification against those who would expand the concept to include transformation or (the more recent buzz word) "theosis" (956-59). Wright forthrightly argues a "Reformation-style" "faith alone" view of initial justification, claiming it's the basis for our assurance and arguing the verdict announced now by faith will be confirmed on the last day (954-55; 1031-32). He also continues to stress a future justification that will be "according to the fullness of the life that has been led" (941; formally about "judgment," but Wright clearly sees judgment and future justification as interchangeable) or "on the basis of the totality of the life led" (1028). I sympathize with Wright's desire to accommodate the emphasis Paul puts on obedience, and I think he's right to find a future aspect of justification in Paul. But little words are very important here; I agree future justification is "according to" the life lived but not "on the basis" of the life lived. I also continue to think Wright puts too much emphasis on the "covenant" side of justification at the expense of the forensic (he emphatically includes both in his view) and shifts the emphasis in Paul a bit by tying justification to the question of "How can we tell who are God's people?" rather than "How can we become God's people?"

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The PFG (i.e., Wright's book, "Paul and the Foundations of God") (2013)
http://thinktheology.co.uk/blog/article/the_pfg

Is N.T. Wright Wrong About Jesus? (2013) http://theaquilareport.com/is-n-t-wright-wrong-about-jesus/

Excerpt:

N.T. Wright, formerly Bishop of Dunham, is well-known for his association with the New Perspective on Paul (NPP) and for his staunch defense of the bodily resurrection of Jesus. I was first introduced to Wright's books through a pastor who thought Wright had been unfairly criticized. The pastor encouraged me to read him for myself and not to be swayed by unfavorable reviews. He told me that Wright's book, Surprised by Hope, was the best he'd read on heaven. So I began to read Wright. I started with Surprised by Hope, and I found much that concerned me on a number of topics.

Instead of agreeing with the pastor, I was shocked that any Reformed pastor who had read the book would recommend it, given how far off-base Wright was on many different issues. I continued to read Wright's books and articles, and I also began researching what others had written in critique of his work. I discovered that the one area I found the most troubling almost no one had written about: Wright's Christology.

Early on in my reading, I began to wonder if Wright really believes that Jesus is/was God. This article is the result of two years of research into what Wright believes, or at least has written, about Christ. The books and articles I've read and will quote here are: Surprised by Hope, The Meaning of Jesus, Simply Jesus, Jesus and the Victory of God (I've read portions, but not the whole of this one), "Jesus and the Identity of God", and "Jesus' Self Understanding".

To help explain why I began this research, here is Wright's answer for "Is Jesus God?"

> When people ask "Was Jesus God?," they usually think they know what the word God means and are asking whether we can fit Jesus into that. I regard this as deeply misleading (The Meaning of Jesus, 144).

And,

> I do not think Jesus "knew he was God" in the same sense that one knows one is tired or happy, male or female. He did not sit back and say to himself, "Well, I never! I'm the second person of the Trinity!" (The Meaning of Jesus, 154).

This article will look first at what Wright has written concerning Jesus generally and then specifically at how Wright interprets the major events in Jesus's life.

Michael Horton: Topics re N.T. Wright – criticisms https://whitehorseinn.org/?s=n.t.+wright

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Adoption Nuggets (4): Dipping Into Historical Theology (2) (2013) http://www.fromhisfullness.com/tag/n-t-wright/

Excerpt:

…Fourthly, there are those who seem to have deliberately excised adoption from their theology. It is surely no coincidence that John Wesley took out every reference to adoption from his revision of the Westminster Shorter Catechism. Adoption likely suffered the consequences of Wesley's attempt to circumvent the doctrine of predestination. Nor does it appear coincidental that the Scottish laird Thomas Erskine of Linlathen dropped his references to adoption along the seventeen year route he took from his early Calvinism to his later Universalism. The jury currently is still out on how N.T. Wright could redefine justification as God's declaration of membership of the covenant family with scarcely any reference to adoption. His recent rejoinder to Kevin Vanhoozer that adoption is a central idea in his work raises more question than it answers. What is clear, as in the case of Erskine before him, Prof. Wright consistently translates Paul's use of huiothesia in Galatians and Romans as "sonship" rather than "adoption." Without this unwarranted change of translation (See James M. Scott), N. T. Wright's creation of a new mega-model of justification out of the biblical data covering justification and adoption would not have been possible. Its thirty year lifespan has only been possible, I suggest, because of the deep-seated neglect of adoption which has left N.T. Wright's critics unable to see that the key to the dismantling of the redefinition lies not in the classic Protestant doctrine of justification but in the recovery of a freshly biblically-sensitive understanding of adoption.

See*: Adoption

Book Review: When Wright is Wrong: A Reformed Baptist Critique of N.T. Wright's New Perspective on Paul by Philip Griffiths https://founders.org/reviews/book-review-when-wright-is-wrong-a-reformed-baptist-critique-of-n-t-wrights-new-perspective-on-paul/

Nearly Everything Wrong with N. T. Wright Summed Up in One Chapter Heading https://banneroftruth.org/uk/resources/articles/2018/nearly-everything-wrong-n-t-wright-summed-one-chapter-heading/ (Rachel Miller)

The Overstatement of NT Wright – Matt Perman
https://mattperman.com/2015/01/the-overstatement-of-nt-wright/

The Most Comprehensive Critique of N. T. Wright – Todd Scacewater
http://exegeticaltools.com/2016/04/25/comprehensive-critique-n-t-wright/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Hermeneutics (I): Principles, Problems, and the Use of Extra-Biblical Sources [PDF]
http://alpharetta-bible-study.com/images/PDFs/2013/04%20-%20HERMENEUTICS%20%281%29%20by%20Marc%20Gibson.pdf

Hermeneutics (II): Concerning the New Perspective on Paul
http://alpharetta-bible-study.com/images/PDFs/2013/05%20-%20HERMENEUTICS%20(2)%20by%20Marc%20Gibson.pdf [PDF]

Excerpt:

We should begin with presenting a basic understanding of the NPP (which is easier said than done). The following chart illustrates the two basic premises of the NPP and the issues that derive from them:

("nomism" is from Greek for "law")

Note: This chart is based on material by Donald Hagner, "Paul and Judaism: The Jewish Matrix of Early Christianity: Issues inthe Current Debate." [PDF], 111-116. The text is his and the chart arrangement is by the writer of the article.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

N.T. Wright on "splitting Shema" (2014) (Anthony F. Bruzzard) (Restoration Fellowship)

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=fF94iaXWBcg [Video]

N.T. Wright - An Analysis (2014)

http://mentalsymmetry.com/wright.php

Excerpt:

…In order to conserve pixels, I will refer to Paul and the Faithfulness of God as PFG, Surprised by Hope as SH, Scripture and the Authority of God as SAG, The New Testament and the People of God as NTPG, and After You Believe as AYB…

One of the primary features of Wright's scholarship is that all of his writing is driven by a single paradigm. Using the language of mental symmetry, he is driven by a general Teacher theory. My research and writing is also guided by the single paradigm of the theory of mental symmetry, so I know from personal experience the strengths and weaknesses that result from paradigm driven research. In my opinion, The Structure of Scientific Revolutions, by Thomas Kuhn, contains the best description of what it means to do paradigm driven research, and I notice that Wright refers in passing to Kuhn's concept of 'normal science' in NTPG (p. 24) (That is the only reference to Kuhn that I could find.)

Wright's level of scholarship is intimidating and Wright's credentials as a biblical exegete are impeccable. For instance, the bibliography to PFG is 63 pages long. Therefore, the next sentence may seem like hubris on my part. In brief, I suggest that Wright lacks the expertise that is required to construct a system of Christian theology. This is not because Wright is unqualified. Far from it. Rather, I suggest that his expertise lies in the wrong areas. Using an analogy, suppose that a professor taught a class in physics by describing the history of the development of physics and by comparing the texts of different physics textbooks in order to trace the origins of various concepts. This would be a fascinating class to attend and one would learn a lot, however it has nothing to do with physics itself. That is because the laws of physics describe how the natural world functions. Learning physics and how it describes the world is totally different than learning the history of physics and how concepts of physics emerged throughout history. A physicist teaches physics, an expert in the history of physics teaches how physics developed, while a physics 'exegete' compares various physics textbooks. Wright is a world expert in the history of Christianity as well as the exegetical analysis of texts related to Christianity. However, Wright does not appear to have the same level of expertise in the content of Christianity.

Wright tells us the kind of expertise that is required to study the content of Christianity. "It is precisely because of the major restructuring of Paul's symbolic world that 'theology' comes to have a different, much larger and more important place in his worldview, and thereafter in the Christian church, than ever it had in either Judaism or paganism...Jewish writers have often commented that 'theology', as that word is now understood, is largely a Christian construct, and they are right, for just this reason: that a fresh, reflective understanding of God, the world, the human race, and so on grew and developed to fill the vacuum left by the departing symbols of Judaism. It had to if the new worldview was to have any staying power. It is no accident that we have seen, at the very moments when Paul is hammering out the nature of his new, symbolically freighted community, that he reaches for his reworked Jewish-style monotheism. It wasn't just that he needed some doctrinal stiffening, and found that particular doctrine useful for the task. Prayerful reflection on God, God's ways, God's work, God's purpose, and ultimately God's faithfulness – that task we loosely call 'theology' – had, quite suddenly, to take on a new role. Paul seems to have believed that this, too, was providential, and part of the meaning of the gospel. The Messiah's people, he often insisted, were to be 'transformed by the renewing of the mind'. Thinking clearly about God and his purposes was not just an intellectual luxury, an indulgence for long winter evenings. It was part of the solid ground upon which the single, central worldview-symbol would stand firm. The renewed people of God were to be renewed in their minds, learning to think in a way that was given, for the first time ever, the task of sustaining a worldview." (PFG, 403).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

This quote contains a number of key concepts. First, Christianity is held together by abstract theology. Second, this abstract theology is the basis for the concrete Christian worldview. Third, the core concept of theology is the idea of a monotheistic God. Fourth, the individual Christian is personally 'transformed by the renewing of the mind'. Wright says here that Paul often insisted upon this approach and Wright himself repeats this phrase from the beginning of Romans 12 about a dozen times in PFG. Fifth, renewing of the mind leads to an abstract understanding which then 'sustains' a person's concrete worldview.

Translating this into the language of mental symmetry, Christian doctrine needs to be described as a universal paradigm in Teacher thought. A concept of a Christian God emerges as a universal paradigm in Teacher thought applies to personal identity. Christian personal transformation occurs primarily internally and cognitively. The process of personal transformation involves submitting personal identity in Mercy thought to a universal understanding of God in Teacher thought. Notice how we have taken Wright's concepts and restated them in more universal terms, which is precisely what we must do if one God holds everything together and if one must use the mind to understand the nature of this one God. Thus, the theory of mental symmetry tries to do precisely what Wright says that the Christian should do, and my primary goal in developing the theory of mental symmetry is to follow the advice that Wright gives in this passage.

This does not mean that one has to be a cognitive scientist in order to be a mature Christian, just as one does not have to be a civil engineer in order to build bridges. There is also the school of hard knocks. If a person tries, fails, and eventually succeeds in constructing enough bridges that stay up without falling down, then one will learn the skill of building bridges. The reason that one studies civil engineering is to avoid the painful route of learning through personal failure. Similarly, the individual who is experienced the gut-wrenching agony of having childish personal identity torn apart and reassembled in the light of eternal truth will instinctively know what a passage such as Romans 7 is describing. He may not be able to describe the process using the language of the cognitive scientist, but he knows at a deep personal level what it means to 'be crucified with Christ'.

While Wright has the expertise that is needed to describe the history of Christianity and how Paul came up with the concept of theologically based personal transformation, I suggest that Wright lacks the expertise that is needed to actually describe both the theoretical side and the practical side of theologically based personal transformation. I will mention several reasons for making this statement here, and then we will look at them in more detail later…

Second Thoughts on the "New Perspective on Paul". Part 1 of 2 (2014)
https://www.krisispraxis.com/archives/2014/10/second-thoughts-on-the-new-perspective-on-paul-part-12/

Second Thoughts on the "New Perspective on Paul". Part 2 of 2
https://www.krisispraxis.com/archives/2014/10/second-thoughts-on-the-new-perspective-on-paul-part-22/

SBL Review (5): Critical Responses to Wright on Paul (2014)
http://thinktheology.co.uk/blog/article/sbl_review_5_critical_responses_to_wright_on_paul

Notes on critiques of N.T. Wright's Paul and the Faithfulness of Christ by Steve Mason, Pauline scholar Douglas Campbell, and theologian Alan Torrance; followed by a rebuttal by Wright.

Repentance and forgiveness, the Wright way (2015) (Summary and Critique) http://www.walkingwithgiants.net/bible/gospels/repentance-and-forgiveness-the-wright-way/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Pauline Perspectives: A Summary and Critique of the New Perspective on Paul (2015) [Downloadable as a PDF] (from a Lutheran Perspective)

https://www.academia.edu/10132524/The_New_Perspective_on_Paul_-_A_Summary_and_Critique

Excerpt:

Advocates of the New Perspective on Paul such as E. P. Sanders, James D. G. Dunn, and N. T. Wright stand as monumental figures in Pauline studies. Their detailed scholarship and prolific writing has made a significant contribution to the exegesis of Paul's epistles and the construction of his theology. Nevertheless, their proposals contain weaknesses which make uncritical adoption of their views dangerous. In particular, the view that Judaism was a religion of grace fails to account for the strong emphasis in Second Temple Judaism on the necessity of obedience to God's law and mutes the testimony of Paul himself. Likewise, their insistence that the phrase "works of the law" refers only to a few specific "boundary marking" practices of Judaism undercuts Paul's assessment of the absolute necessity of the gospel as the only means of salvation. Finally, their removal of the doctrine of justification from its soteriological moorings threatens to undermine the chief doctrine of the Christian faith. May God grant that his church may continually return to his Word so as to be blessed to think his thoughts after him.

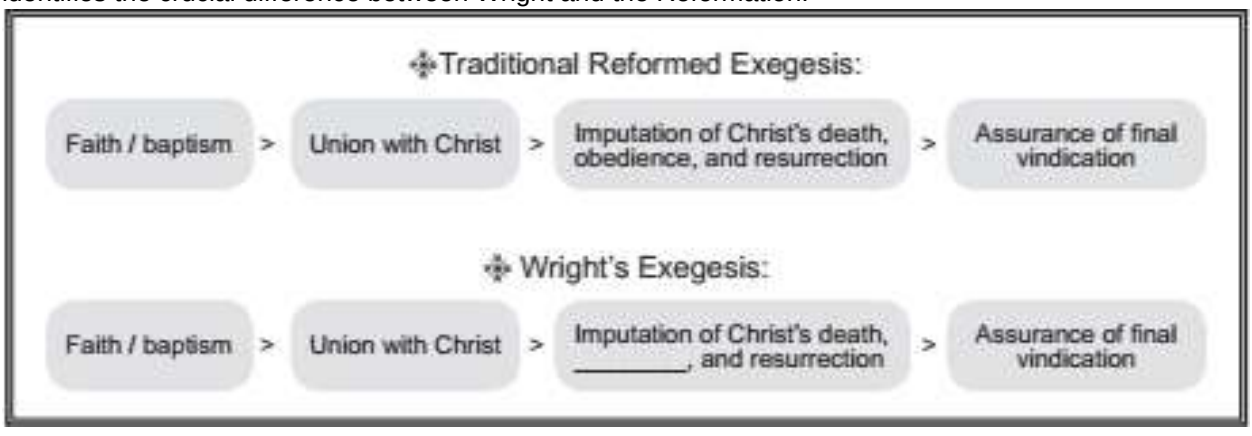
N.T. Wright's Pauline Odyssey (2015)

http://www.augsburgfortress.org/media/downloads/9780800699635_Review_The%20Ds%20Commentary%20on%20Books_October%202015.pdf [PDF]

Debating Justification with N.T. Wright and New Perspective on Paul. Part 1 (2016)

https://www.krisispraxis.com/archives/2016/05/debating-justification-with-n-t-wright-and-new-perspective-on-paul-part-1/

Debating Justification with N.T. Wright and New Perspective on Paul. Part 2



https://www.krisispraxis.com/archives/2016/05/debating-justification-with-n-t-wright-and-new-perspective-on-paul-part-2/

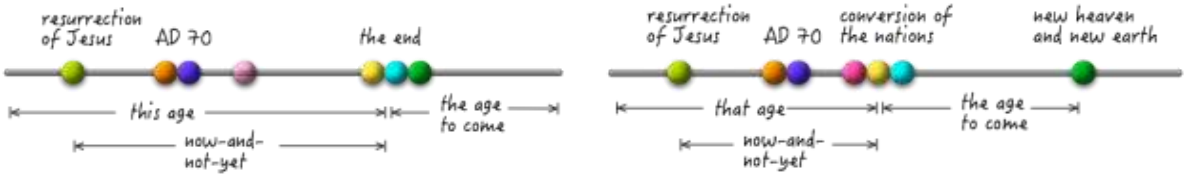
What Wright Really Said About Forensic Justification and Imputation – Debating Justification with N.T. Wright and NPP. Part 3 (2016)

https://www.krisispraxis.com/archives/2016/09/what-wright-really-said-about-forensic-justification-and-imputation/

Excerpt:

Piper offers (in his 2007 book, see above link to full PDF copy of book) the following diagram which identifies the crucial difference between Wright and the Reformation:

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



Righteousness and Justification in the Book of Galatians: Debating Justification with N.T. Wright and NPP. Part 4
https://www.krisispraxis.com/archives/2016/09/righteousness-and-justification-in-the-book-of-galatians-debating-justification-with-n-t-wright-and-npp-part-4/

Justification and Union With Christ – A Via Media Between Abstract Forensic and Transformative Justification. Debating Justification with N.T. Wright and NPP. Part 5.
https://www.krisispraxis.com/archives/2016/09/justification-and-union-with-christ-a-via-media-between-abstract-forensic-and-transformative-justification-debating-justification-with-n-t-wright-and-npp-part-5/

NPP – Regensburg (1541) Redux? Reformation Forensic Justification vs Transformative Justification: Debating Justification with N.T. Wright and NPP. Part 6
https://www.krisispraxis.com/archives/2016/09/npp-regensburg-1541-redux-reformation-forensic-justification-vs-transformative-justification-debating-justification-with-n-t-wright-and-npp-part-6/

Thomas Schreiner's Critique of N.T. Wright's View of Justification – Debating Justification with N.T. Wright and NPP. Part 7
https://www.krisispraxis.com/archives/2016/09/thomas-schreiners-critique-of-n-t-wrights-view-of-justification-debating-justification-with-n-t-wright-and-npp-part-7/

N.T. Wright and Paul's eschatology (with coloured beads) (2016)
http://www.postost.net/2016/06/nt-wright-paul-eschatology-coloured-beads

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

An illustrated guide to Tom Wright and an introduction to "transtomism" http://www.postost.net/2016/10/illustrated-guide-tom-wright-introduction-transtomism

Excerpts:

…Here we have what is perhaps the most important development in recent evangelical thought—the shift from narrative to history. In the spirit of Watling's book and in honour of "Tom" I present this idea in a simple diagram.

…Reading Wright's massive output has helped me to grasp the fundamental point that what the New Testament gives us is not a how-to-be-saved manual with a how-to-do-church appendix…

…So I have argued here and elsewhere for a more consistent application of the narrative-historical method—let's call it "transtomist" (trans-Tom-ist). The stand-out implication of this approach is that New Testament eschatology has in view two blindingly obvious historical "horizons"—first, seen from the vantage point of Jesus and the early church in Jerusalem, the devastating war against Rome; secondly, the eventual overthrow of classical paganism and the confession of Jesus as Lord by the nations of the Greek-Roman world, which increasingly preoccupied the prophetic mind of the church as it spread across Asia Minor and Europe. Elements of this outlook are apparent in Wright's work, but they have been overshadowed by his wish to present Jesus to the church and to the world—for understandable reasons—as the beginning of God's new creation.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

What happened on the cross? NT Wright & Thomas Schreiner (2016) [Unbelievable Radio]

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=loat_y8SQBo [Audio] [Recommended]

NT (Tom) Wright's book "The Day the Revolution Began: Reconsidering the meaning of Jesus' crucifixion" says that the cross was about much more than Jesus absolving us of sin. He discusses atonement theology, God's wrath and penal substitution with reformed Bible scholar Thomas Schreiner. It's also the 500th podcast episode of the show [Unbelievable]!

Direct link to podcast page:
https://www.premierchristianradio.com/Shows/Saturday/Unbelievable/Episodes/NT-Wright-on-Paul-Hell-Satan-Creation-Adam-Eve-more-Unbelievable

Direct (alternate) link to podcast mp3 file:
http://cdnbakmi.kaltura.com/p/618072/sp/61807200/serveFlavor/entryId/1_du0h3j9o/v/1/flavorId/1_5reehb9y/name/a.mp3

Note: Originally prodcast on 11/12/16 just after the U.S.A. elections, so you will hear references to that during the audio.

N. T. Wright's The Day the Revolution Began: A Few Reflections (2017)

http://dogmadoxa.blogspot.com/2017/01/n-t-wrights-day-revolution-began-few.html

Two methodological flaws of N.T. Wright's New Perspective on Paul (2017; PDF)

https://www.askderricktheology.com/two-methodological-flaws-of-n-t-wrights-new-perspective-on-paul/

https://www.askderricktheology.com/wp-content/uploads/2017/02/methodological-flaws-of-N-T-Wrights-New-Perspective-on-Paul.pdf [PDF]

Cracking the Foundation of the New Perspective on Paul: Covenantal Nomism versus Reformed Covenantal Theology (2017) (Reformed)

https://reformedforum.org/ctc503/ (links to [Audio])

N.T. Wright's Long Farewell (2017)

http://midwestoutreach.org/2017/07/27/n-t-wrights-long-farewell/

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

New Perspective on Paul and Justification by Faith Alone (William Lane Craig, PhD, DTh)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=gEVUC8-tDOY [Video] [Reformed perspective] (2017)
(Note: Two lectures in one. Part one concludes stating the reformation view is correct and that justification is a judicial act of atonement… Second part (@35:20) starts off dealing with imputation)

N. T. Wright vs. Michael Reeves on Imputation. (2017)
https://www.monergism.com/blog/n-t-wright-vs-michael-reeves-imputation

N. T. Wright explains why he denies the doctrine of imputed righteousness:

> "If we use the language of the law court, it makes no sense whatever to say that the judge imputes, imparts, bequeaths or conveys or otherwise transfers his righteousness to either the plaintiff or the defendant. Righteousness is not an object, a substance or a gas which can be passed across the courtroom." N. T. Wright, What Paul Really Said, pg. 98

Michael Reeves Responds:

> "But if Christ takes our sin and we take his righteousness because we are united to him, then all those difficulties melt away. As Calvin would argue: " We do not, therefore, contemplate him (Christ) outside ourselves from afar in order that his righteousness may be imputed to us but because we put on Christ and are engrafted into his body - in short, because he deigns to make us one with him." - Calvin, Institutes 3.11.10. If Christ and the believer are made one then the sin-righteousness swap is as unobjectionable as what happens in a marriage when a man and woman become one. It is as if a rich husband were - at his own cost to pay off all his wife's debts and then share with her his enormous wealth.
>
> Source: What the Reformation Still Matters by Michael Reeves and Tim Chester,

Here We Are, Slaves to This Day:
A Review of "Exile: A Conversation with N.T. Wright" Edited by James M. Scott https://tabletalktheology.com/2017/10/11/here-we-are-slaves-to-this-day-a-review-of-exile-a-conversation-with-n-t-wright-edited-by-james-m-scott/

http://englewoodreview.org/n-t-wright-exile-a-conversation-feature-review/

Excerpt:

At their best, good conversations are lively, wide-ranging, and sometimes even surprising. They push us to consider ideas from new angles and hammer out with fresh clarity why we see things the way we do. It's not always easy to find these kinds of discussions, but the essays that make up Exile: A Conversation with N.T. Wright demonstrate for the most part what thoughtful scholarly discussion is meant to look like. The contributors are generally successful at avoiding the twin pitfalls of uncritical acceptance and blunt rejection in their responses to N.T. Wright's influential (and controversial) proposal regarding the notion of ongoing exile as an influential "controlling narrative" for many Second Temple Jews and early Jesus followers (8).

The book opens with a lengthy essay by Wright himself giving a fresh articulation of his thesis. He delves into passages like Deuteronomy 27-33, with its sequence of sin-exile-restoration, and the great prayers of

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Daniel 9 and Nehemiah 9, as well as other literature from the Second Temple period like the Dead Sea Scrolls, all in order to demonstrate that many Jews saw themselves as continuing to live in a state of exile, even though a large number of them had geographically returned to the land of Israel (21-22). Turning to his critics, Wright asks:

Would any serious-thinking first-century Jew claim that the promises of Isaiah 40-66, or of Jeremiah, Ezekiel, or Zechariah, had been fulfilled? That the power and domination of paganism had been broken? That YHWH had already returned to Zion? That the covenant had been renewed and Israel's sins forgiven?… Or—in other words—that the exile was really over? (35)

The anticipated answer is clearly in the negative. For Wright, remembering this backdrop is important for understanding Jesus' "kingdom of God" language. When Jesus told stories about the kingdom and even declared that it was at hand (Mark 1:15), Wright sees this language as thereby also announcing that "the real return from exile for the people, and the real return of YHWH to Zion" were finally happening (45-46). Using language strongly familiar for those who have read his other books (especially The Day the Revolution Began), Wright ends by characterizing Paul as a man deeply convinced that Jesus' life, death, and resurrection had finally brought the long period of exile to an end, inaugurating creation's long-awaited renewal by God (62,80).

The responses included in this book come from a wide range of figures, including the distinguished Old Testament theologian Walter Brueggemann and New Testament scholars like Scot McKnight and Timo Eskola. As in any good conversation, the participants engage with Wright in a spirit of both appreciation and critique. Some build on the foundation of his work and attempt to go beyond it, while others spend significant time questioning parts of his proposal that they find to be problematic. Unfortunately, there isn't time to work through each and every response essay, as interesting as that would be. Nevertheless, I want to bring up a few of the ones that I found to be especially intriguing additions to the discussion.

Brueggemann softens his critique by affirming that he thinks Wright is basically on the mark when it comes to the major claim of his thesis about ongoing exile (88,92). Nevertheless, he finds Wright's arguments to be a bit expansive and reductionist. In his many scholarly works, Brueggemann embraces the richly varied and dialogical nature of the Old Testament canon, so it's not surprising to see him express reservations about seeing the narrative of exile and return as being the essential key to understanding the Judaism of Jesus' day (88). Without a doubt, Brueggemann is persuaded that this theme is important, but, as he puts it, "I doubt that here or anywhere is there 'a key to everything else'" (90).

Jörn Kiefer's essay is a noteworthy critical reflection on Wright's arguments. He questions the frequently assumed connection between exile and a deep sense of loss and sorrow (119). For instance, he brings up a passage in Philo where exile's aftermath is compared to the spreading settlement of colonies around the world (122). Kiefer ends by asserting that those who spent their lives outside of their ancestral homeland by no means thought they had come "to the end of their story with God" (134). It should be said that holding this conviction isn't necessarily the same as seeing the exile in a positive light. After all, belief in God's continued involvement with His people also contributed to the longings for messianic deliverance from continued exile felt by many Jews living in their homeland under Roman rule.

In his concluding reflections, Wright agrees with Kiefer that there were probably many Jews living throughout the Mediterranean world who didn't see their lot in life in terms of national punishment. However, Wright counters that he never meant that all first-century Jews believed they were living in a state of ongoing exile, only that "a significant number of Jews living in the ancestral homeland saw things this way," and furthermore that this sense of exile fueled eschatological hopes for redemption that shaped the reception of claims about the coming of God's kingdom (307).

Most of the conversations contained in the pages of Exile center on ancient texts. This makes Philip Alexander's response especially worth mentioning before we finish up this review because he focuses instead on some of the events that took place during the period of Jewish history stretching from the Maccabean revolt on through the costly wars against Rome. Hence, this paper seeks to lend support to Wright's thesis from a relatively unexplored angle. Though it's difficult to assess motivations behind ancient historical movements, Alexander's examination this era is well-crafted. He ends by concluding that many of the major military-political events in the land of Israel during this era seem to have been driven by Jews who could see themselves as nothing other than "slaves in their own land" so long as they were still being ruled over by foreign powers like Rome. For these people, "the exile had not been totally ended, because Israel had not yet been fully restored" (154). The essays of Hans Boersma and Ephraim Radner are unfortunate exceptions to the healthy dialogue that takes place in most of the book's pages. In response to their papers, Wright exasperatedly comments that "these two essayists seem not to have heard what is actually being said" (320). In these cases, both sides unfortunately seem to be speaking past each other, showing that the proverbial ditch between biblical studies and dogmatic/systematic theology can still sometimes be hazardous to cross.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

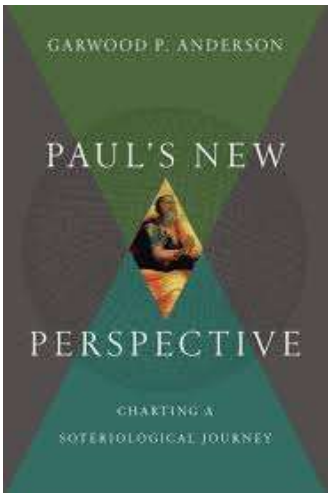
In the end, though, most of the essays are well worth savoring. Wright's proposal emerges from Exile relatively unscathed, and it will be interesting to see how discussions about the significance of exile as a theme continue to unfold in the future. Regardless, I'm grateful to the contributors in this book for asking numerous substantive questions and leaving readers like myself with much to ponder.

GospelCoalition: N. T. Wright on Prolegomena by J.V. Fesko (themelios: Vol. 31, Issue 3)
https://www.thegospelcoalition.org/themelios/article/n-t-wright-on-prolegomena/ (2006)



Key words: Epistemology, Positivism, Phenomenology, Worldview, Historical-Critical, Narrative in Theology

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

IVP: Paul's New Perspective – Review of Garwood Anderson's Book

http://andyunedited.ivpress.com/2017/05/pauls_new_perspective.php

Excerpt:

Anderson contends that the letters were written over a longer span and show development in Paul's thinking, though without changing his mind. Paul began with a specific idea that Torah obedience ("works of the law") is not able to reconcile us to God and later expanded this idea to cover any kind of merit.

As Anderson argues, "Justification is the language of choice when at stake is the place of Gentiles in the covenant or the relationship of Jews and Gentiles to each other" (284). When his concern broadens, so does his vocabulary. In Paul's later writings, for example, he uses salvation to describe ultimate deliverance from wrath to come and a restoration that is also forthcoming. Salvation, the larger term, includes justification (308). In addition, Anderson contends, Galatians is not a brief summary of Romans, despite having certain features in common. It was written significantly earlier with Romans showing important developments in his thinking.

To summarize: "The thesis of this study is that the [NPP (New Paul Perspective] is Paul's oldest perspective and that the 'old' perspective [TPP (Traditional Protestant Perspective)] describes what would become (more or less) Paul's settled 'new' perspective (p. 379).

Paul's New Perspective by Garwood Anderson

Summary: http://mydigitalseminary.com/pauls-new-perspective-1/

Review: http://mydigitalseminary.com/pauls-new-perspective-2/

Excerpt:

First, Romans and Galatians, though similar on a surface level, are vastly different letters if one considers theological development. In fact, "Paul's soteriological vision resolves in the space from Galatians to Romans" (p334). In other words, Romans is the pinnacle of Paul's own theological development.

Second, from Romans onward, Paul abbreviates his soteriological statements in settled formulaic statements, relies less upon the OT, and is not driven by circumstances. What's more, he appears more comfortable with endorsing good "works" in his final letters.

Read Paul in Your Bible, Then Read This (re: Garwood Anderson, Paul's New Perspective)

https://theologianslibrary.com/tag/garwood-anderson/

Excerpt:

…Though Anderson's developmental thesis does not depend on enlargement of the accepted seven-letter Pauline corpus, a chunk of the book is devoted to making a case for the disputed letters. Anderson makes a case for the inclusion of Colossians, Ephesians, and the Pastoral Epistles, along with the undisputed Galatians, Romans, 1 Thessalonians, 1 & 2 Corinthians, Philippians and Philemon. The extension of the Pauline corpus from the undisputed seven letters to a contested 13 letter corpus is important, Anderson believes, because it allows us to fill out Paul's theology and development: "I'm persuaded that excessive trepidation on this matter has precluded New Testament scholars from seeing a possibly larger picture" (166). In arguing for their authenticity, Anderson summarizes his case by saying that "far from a misunderstanding of or derivation from Paul's soteriology, these letters corroborate a trajectory already evident in the undisputed letters, so much so that one would be justified in thinking that Paul himself wrote them" (381).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Let me end by quoting a juicy bit at the conclusion of Anderson's book that will give you a feel for where Anderson is going and hopefully will entice you to pick this one up:

The rapprochement offered here succeeds only under two conditions, to be sketched now briefly: 1) that justification cease to be the center and preoccupation of Pauline theology such that it is made to bear weight for which it was not intended and 2) that union with Christ once and for all take [sic] its place as the central and integrative fulcrum of Pauline soteriology in all of its juridical, relational, transformational, and ecclesial dimensions (384).

For those looking for a way to better understand New Testament and Pauline scholarship and the points in the key debates, there is no better place to begin than Paul's New Perspective. But I must warn you, once you begin reading in Pauline studies, it's hard to stop. But it will make you read your New Testament like you never have before. As Wesley Hill says, in Anderson's book "one is reminded yet again why wrestling with Paul is so invigorating."

Book Notice: Paul's New Perspective

http://www.patheos.com/blogs/euangelion/2016/11/book-notice-pauls-new-perspective/

Excerpt:

…I'm pleased to say that Garwood Anderson, writing out of the Anglo-Catholic tradition, engages in a similar enterprise of trying to plot a cogent and compelling account of Paul by critical synthesizing several perspectives. He deals with N.T. Wright, James Dunn, Doug Campbell, John Barclay, Michael Gorman and others. I cannot emphasize how highly I think of this book. I need not bother doing an updated edition of my own Saving Righteousness because Garwood has done it for me. A must have book for those working in Pauline soteriology…

Paul's New Perspective - Review

https://cwoznicki.com/tag/garwood-anderson/

Excerpt:

…Never disparaging either the NPP or the TPP, Anderson argues that both positions get a lot about Paul right, and that both sides have helped the church understand something important about its relation to God and the world. Some figures, like Wright, get it more right than others. For instance Wright in PFG rightly describes Paul's logic as going vertical to horizontal, however the emphasis in Wright's work is horizontal to vertical. Similarly, Dunn has helped reveal the horizontal problems Paul was dealing with when it came to the law's role in acting as a dividing role between Jews and Gentiles.

In order to establish the case that Paul's "new perspective" is actually his "old perspective" and that the traditional perspective is actually Paul's "new perspective" Anderson has to establish this chronologically

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

from his letters. Anderson notes that this is a bit problematic, as the position he argues for is not the majority view of critical scholarship (its not idiosyncratic either).

- Galatians is the Earliest Letter, dated around 49AD
- Romans is dated around 56-58AD
- The Thessalonian and Corinthian Correspondence fall between Galatians and Romans
- Philippians was composed in Rome
- Colossians, Ephesians and Philemon are authentic and written from Rome
- Paul survived his Roman imprisonment, turned his attention east and wrote the Pastoral Letters.

Having established the provenance of these letters Anderson turns his attention to two topics Works/Grace and Justification/Salvation in light of his reestablished order of letters. From this new order he shows that with regards to works, his early topic of "works of the law" shifts to "works" (full stop) with Romans acting as a transition between these two positions. Grace also follows this pattern. Beginning with Romans, grace is opposed to and excludes works. Concerning justification/salvation, in his later letters Paul recedes from the language of justification and prefers to use language of salvation and reconciliation. These two sections are made up of indepth exegetical and lexical work.

Assessment

So how convincing is Anderson's argument that the New Perspective is Paul's is actually Paul's old perspective? I guess that comes down to one important factor, how convincing do you think Anderson's assessment of Paul's literary itinerary is? Do you find it plausible that Galatians is Paul's first letter? If you think Galatians & Romans are fairly closely dated that his argument doesn't really work. Do you buy a Roman (as opposed to Ephesian) provenance of the Prison letters? If you don't then that throws a wrench in his entire reading of Pauline development as well. The problem with Anderson's propsal is that you have to hold to a lot of minority positions regarding the composition of these letters. Neither the NPP or the TPP hangs upon one's acceptance of a particular dating of Paul's letters, but Andersons' thesis certainly does. This doesn't necessarily mean that Anderson's explanation is wrong. In fact, I would argue that it has a lot going for it! It breaks down some of the false dichotomies of the NPP/TPP debate, allows the church to incorporate the best of both perspectives, and has a lot of explanatory power. (His thesis even helps explain some of the concerns brought up by Apocalyptic readings of Paul!) But the fact that his whole argument is built upon the foundation of dates makes his foundation rather feeble. If one can decisively show his dating of Paul's letters are wrong, his argument (in my opinion) falls apart.

All in all I would say that Paul's New Perspective is a well written and well researched book, offering a via media in a rather creative way. Students of Pauline theology would do well to pick up this book, he does a fine job charging the various debates between NPP & TPP camps. His chapter on Post-NPP authors is fine as well. I can see myself assigning these chapters to students in a Pauline theology book, helping them get acquainted with contemporary debates in the Pauline literature. On top of all this, the summary of his position is rhetorically powerful, much like EP Sanders' was: "covenantal nomism," "getting in vs. staying in," "solution to plight," and "in short, this is what Paul finds wrong in Judaism: it is not Christianity." Anderson's position is quite memorable as well: "Paul's New Perspective is Paul's old perspective." This catchy statement alone ensures the ideas in this book will be remembered, regardless of their staying power.

FYI: Good Friday 2016 - The Sermon - Dr. Garwood Anderson

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=qVr_WPm6r8g [Video] (Not related to his book, but the only video of Anderson I could find at the time.)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Paul's New Perspective: Charting a Soteriological Journey

http://www.thepaulpage.com/pauls-new-perspective-charting-a-soteriological-journey/

Excerpt:

What began as a promising breakthrough in Pauline studies just three decades ago — "the new perspective on Paul," as James D.G. Dunn famously dubbed it in 1982 — seems in recent years to have became mired in increasingly polemical disputes among evangelical Christian scholars. The new perspective, particularly on the historical context of Paul's doctrine of justification, drew strong criticism from some Reformed quarters, leading most notably to the rhetorical impasse of the debate between John Piper[1] and N.T. Wright.[2] Garwood P. Anderson introduces his ambitious new book, Paul's New Perspective: Charting a Soteriological Journey, with a description of the Wright-Piper debate, which left many evangelicals in a puzzling quagmire and looking almost in vain for a way forward (pp. 1-3). In the chapters that follow, Anderson details numerous attempts over the years to work "beyond the new perspective on Paul," with varying degrees of success but no clear consensus.

Anderson's own attempt is an impressive project, an extended argument intended to build on the strengths of both "the new perspective on Paul" (abbreviated as "NPP") and "the traditional perspective on Paul" (abbreviated as "TPP") while carefully qualifying each in turn. In what may become the most memorable statement of his book, Anderson cleverly writes that "In short, I argue that the new perspective on Paul is a better account of Paul's older perspective" (p. 12). Or, as he sums it up later:

The proposal of this book is that contradictory schools of Pauline interpretation are both right, just not at the same time. … The thesis of this study is that the new perspective on Paul is Paul's oldest perspective and that the "old" perspective describes what would become (more or less) Paul's settled "new" perspective (p. 379).

This is clearly an innovative way to have one's cake and eat it too — to argue for a restrained "new perspective" of Paul's earlier letters but a more "traditional perspective" in Paul's later letters, charting a specific trajectory of development in Paul's teaching.[3] In a pastorally-sensitive tone which should hearten evangelical scholars, Anderson doesn't argue that this proposed trajectory of Paul's theological arguments constitute internal contradictions or reversals, but rather a nuancing of thought, with Paul's earlier thinking and his later thinking not being mutually exclusive.

Since the proposal for such a trajectory requires some distance between Paul's letters, Anderson necessarily spends a substantial portion of his work on chronology and dating. Two full chapters (four and five, pp. 153-225) methodically work through an itinerary beginning with the South Galatian hypothesis (with Galatians written first, ca. 48 – 49 CE) and arguing for a Pauline mission extending past Paul's Roman imprisonment to include Colossians and Ephesians (alongside Philemon and Philippians) ca. 60 – 62 CE and even the Pastoral Epistles ca. 62 – 65 CE. Though (by his own admission[4]) Anderson's arguments are unlikely to persuade more than a few to change their opinions about whether Paul personally authored all the letters attributed to him in the New Testament canon, by positing thirteen letters over a fifteen-year span instead of seven letters over a five-year span, Anderson creates a plausible framework for a trajectory of development in Paul's own thought:

Thus, I am working with a thirteen-letter corpus and a Pauline soteriology that stretches from AD 49 to the mid-60s — indeed, as I will argue, with a soteriology that itself stretches. By way of comparison, some studies of the development of Pauline soteriology are limited to seven letters while having primary interest in but two (Galatians and Romans), and these may be separated by a span of mere months (p. 166).

Anderson admits to having considered sidestepping the question of authenticity by focusing on the theological trajectory of the Pauline corpus irrespective of Paul's personal authorship, but notes that his proposal for a development in Paul's own thought is better accounted for with the chronology proposed (cf. p. 222)…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Question: "Is the New Perspective on Paul biblical?" (Argues it is NOT.)
https://www.gotquestions.org/New-Perspective-Paul.html

What is as Stake with Wright's View of Justification?
http://www.ligonier.org/learn/media/what-stake-wrights-view/ [Video]
(Also mentions Karl Barth)

Why NT Wright is NOT Reformed – by Rev. Fred Greco http://www.apuritansmind.com/the-christian-walk/why-nt-wright-is-not-reformed-by-rev-fred-greco/
A sober look at the non-Reformed teachings of NT Wright

Paul Within Judaism
http://www.thepaulpage.com/paul-within-judaism/

As explained elsewhere on The Paul Page, the new perspective on Paul pioneered by scholars like E.P. Sanders, James D.G. Dunn, and N.T. Wright is predicated on the recent Protestant Christian recognition that Judaism was never a religion of legalism. While seeking new interpretations of Paul against the background of this reevaluation of Judaism, however, those working out of this perspective nevertheless continue to set Paul in contrast to the Judaism of his day. A smaller but increasingly vocal group of scholars within this movement have gone even further, arguing that Paul never ceased to be a Torah observant Jew.

These scholars – including Lloyd Gaston, John Gager, Stanley Stowers, Neil Elliott, Mark Nanos, and Pamela Eisenbaum, among others – are increasingly distinguishing between their approach and the more familiar new perspective on Paul. Some have suggested describing their perspective as "the radical new perspective on Paul." However they can best be described, these Jewish and Christian interpreters of Paul argue that the new perspective on Paul has simply replaced one negative stereotype of Judaism—that of legalism—with a different negative stereotype, that of exclusivism or ethnocentrism. Their alternative argument is that Paul's negative rhetoric about the Torah was intended only for Gentiles, not for Jews.

> Where Christians [e.g. Nanos] Got it Wrong with Paul – Scot McKnight
> http://www.patheos.com/blogs/jesuscreed/2012/08/20/where-christians-got-it-wrong-with-paul/

N. T. Wright and Reformed Theology: Friends or Foes?
http://www.trinity-pres.net/essays/Wright-Reformed-theology-friends-or-foes.pdf [PDF]

Excerpt:

…No doubt, much more needs to be said, but hopefully this essay will at least temper some criticism of Wright and encourage many within the Reformed camp to take another look at his valuable work. It is all too easy to dismiss Wright without a hearing when a theologian of Gaffin's stature is critical of him. But we must not shy away from semper Reformanda, from continually reforming our theology and confessions according to the Scriptures. The sixteenth century reformers made great headway in understanding Paul. But we have several more centuries of preaching, exegesis, and scholarship behind us and should not be afraid to move forward, albeit with due caution. Plus, we should recognize the questions facing us are quite different today and cannot but force us to look at Paul from different angles. I am confident that in the long run, Wright's work on the New Testament will come be treasured by the Reformed tradition as the "next step" in our growing understanding of God's revelation in Christ. Accepting Wright need not mean rejecting the Reformation.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

After You Believe – N. T. Wright on Christian character (Review)
http://www.booksandculture.com/articles/webexclusives/2010/may/afteryoubelieve.html?paging=off
(Review of Wright's book: After You Believe – Why Character Matters)

Review: Tom Wright's Virtue Reborn (aka After You Believe)
http://kinnon.tv/2010/03/review-tom-wrights-virtue-reborn-aka-after-you-believe.html

The Virtues and Vices of N.T. Wright's After You Believe (2013)
http://www.mbird.com/2013/07/the-virtues-and-vices-of-n-t-wrights-after-you-believe/

All the Lonely Virtues, Where Do They All Belong? (2015)
http://www.mbird.com/2015/05/all-the-lonely-virtues-where-do-they-all-belong/

NOTE: "After You Believe" is the title of the book used in the United States, it's called "Virtue Reborn" in Great Britain.

N.T. Wright, Christian Virtue, and the Missing Person of God (A Critique, 2012) http://ceruleansanctum.com/2012/10/n-t-wright-christian-virtue-and-the-missing-person-of-god.html

Excerpt:

The central idea of this Wright book is that a return to instinctual practice of Christian virtues is the only way to save Christianity. Too many Christians today don't function like genuine Christians because a true Christian ethic eludes them. Most of this, Wright claims, is due to a misunderstanding of what it means to be a Christian postconversion. Too few people grasp how the basic truths of Christianity should inform our practice of the Kingdom of God on earth, and how the Kingdom should undergird our beliefs.

Wright's solution to the problem is to instill Christian ethics in people the same way a drill sergeant teaches his military charges how to rebuild a gun while blindfolded. Everything about the Christian life needs to be so instinctual and second nature that we no longer think about what we're doing, but it instead comes naturally. Wright claims this occurs through a synergistic practice and methodical incorporation of five elements: Scripture, Stories, Examples, Community, and Practices.

Quite a few leaders in Evangelicalism would certainly add a hearty Amen to Wright's plan, especially those who love to talk about the Desert Fathers and Ancient Faith. Practice makes perfect in their regard, and building a new Christian army of those who do without thinking sounds like the cure for what ails us.

While I can certainly see that drilling people in the core truths of Christianity, both truths in fact and truths in practice, is a good thing, Wright's book has a glaring omission. As someone who has not read Wright before, I see this lack as so enormous, it makes me wonder just how wise Wright truly is and how he ever ascended to gathering such a herd of fanboys.

To me, what cripples modern Christians more than anything else, even when they embody those worthy virtues Wright espouses, is a complete lack of understanding as to what it means to live by the Spirit. The key differentiator between the righteous people of the OT and the righteous people of the NT is that the NT folks now have the Spirit of God living in them always. Say what you will about the Church, but its defining characteristic is that God now resides in men. No other reality trumps this.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

That Wright writes almost nothing in his 307-page tome about how to live by the Spirit pretty much renders his entire book useless. Christian virtues are critical, but Wright's advocacy of a drilled Christian ethic resembles building a Lamborghini and then leaving out the engine. Unless Christians learn to live by the Spirit, all that drilling, worldview, and ethic will lead to just another failed attempt to turn Christianity into a set of rules, with Wright's entire plan condensed to making those rules reflexes that require no thinking—and no Spirit, either.

What is particularly galling is that Wright goes so far as to downgrade the idea of fully realized Spirit-led living as "romantic." This smacks of rushing to the polar extreme in an effort to make his point about the need for a practiced, down-to-earth Christian ethic. He makes the mistake of denigrating the key element of the Christian life in his effort to amplify a smaller component he feels has been neglected. In the end, though, he commits the ultimate "throwing the baby out with the bathwater" error that someone of his stature in Evangelicalism should NEVER make.

When Evangelicalism persists in reducing Christianity to a Spirit-less ethic, it substitutes the zombie religionist for the fully alive believer. And we need more "Christian" zombies like we need…well, more zombies. Which is to say, not at all.

How Evangelicalism can continue to mangle life in the Spirit and push out this pale imitation of Christian maturity is beyond me, yet this is what passes for the Christian life in most churches: Here are the rules of the Faith; now live by them. How no one can see that this is no different from any other failed religious system is startling to me, yet this is what I perpetually see in most Evangelical churches. We simply do not know how to live by the Spirit.

Words cannot adequately express my utter disappointment with After You Believe. To me, it's little more than an intellectual exercise that represents the half-answer now working against restoring the Church in the West to its former glory, despite Wright's contention that it is the balm for what ails us. A partial balm maybe, but until more reputable Christian authors start writing on how to live by the Spirit, we'll keep instituting partial balms that ultimately prevent us from becoming all that God intends us to be.

Excerpt (from comments):

Dan [Edelen], any recommended insights or resources on living by the Spirit? I wonder sometimes if I have the essential understanding of what it means. I know that I have a very difficult time explaining it to others. Thanks. -Clint

> Clint,
>
> As noted in the post, contemporary resources on living by the Spirit are hard to come by. I've found that Watchman Nee and Andrew Murray often have the most insights, though their info tends to be found as nuggets within larger texts. Same for A.W. Tozer and R.A. Torrey. Look into their Spirit-centered writings.
>
> That said, Nee's The Release of the Spirit is considered a classic and goes into some depth on the differences between being "soul-led" and Spirit-led. This is an essential distinction lost on most Evangelicals.
>
> I may write more on this topic later.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Clint, a few links [Edited/updated by LY]:

[R.A. Torrey, The Person and Work of the Holy Spirit]
http://www.gutenberg.org/dirs/3/0/2/4/30241/30241-pdf.pdf [PDF] Other formats available

Watchman Nee, The Release of the Spirit

Click on the following link, https://www.ministrybooks.org/index.cfm, then search for 'The Release of the Spirit'.
You should get at least 2 results that include "The Breaking of the Outer Man and the Release of the Spirit"

Note: "Exercise of our Spirit for the Release of the Spirit" is by Witness Nee.

http://onlinebooks.library.upenn.edu/webbin/book/lookupname?key=Murray%2c%20Andrew%2c%201828-1917 [Andrew Murray]

See other more 'positive' reviews of After You Believe (Virtue Reborn) listed in the following section (i.e., after this "Criticisms" section).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

More N.T. Wright related…

The New Testament and the 'State' [1] - N.T. Wright
https://theologicalstudies.org.uk/article_state_wright.html

On N.T. Wright and Israel - Leeds Messianic Fellowship
http://lmf.org.uk/wp-content/uploads/2010/08/NT-Wright-and-the-Jewish-People.pdf

N.T. Wright on Romans 13: Civil Government https://reformedreader.wordpress.com/2008/05/10/nt-wright-on-romans-13-civil-government/

Imagine All The People: (2014)
N.T. Wright's Radical Eschatology and the Shifting Currents of Faith and Politics http://www.ethosreview.org/intellectual-spaces/imagine-all-the-people/

N.T. Wright – blog article by Frank Viola
http://frankviola.org/2012/01/23/ntwright/
Viola equates N.T. Wright to F.F. Bruce as the "new F.F. Bruce" in a prelude to his interview of Wright regarding his book, Simply Jesus.

N.T. Wright's How God Became King – Review [Reformed] (2012)
https://www.thegospelcoalition.org/article/how_god_became_king
"…as this review has briefly sought to demonstrate, Wright's way of looking at Jesus and the kingdom is not so much a return to the biblical text but the agenda of an Anglican churchman seeking to apply a political theology to the Gospel narratives."

N.T. Wright on Evolution, Deism, Separation of Church & State, & Heaven on Earth
http://www.patheos.com/blogs/thepangeablog/2012/04/29/n-t-wright-on-evolution-deism-church-and-state/

Links to video: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=_yPCTnGMRFM [Video]

Exit the Second Coming? – Review of N.T. Wright's Jesus and the Victory of God – Christian origins and the Question of God, Vol. 2 (1996)
http://www.biblicalstudies.org.uk/pdf/anvil/16-4_281.pdf [PDF]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Gospel According to the Jesus Seminar
http://veritas-ucsb.org/library/pearson/seminar/js2.html

Bart Ehrman's Latest Book – How Jesus Became God (Review)
http://str.typepad.com/weblog/2014/04/bart-ehrmans-latest-book-how-jesus-became-god.html

Excerpt (comment):

The real root of Ehrman's objections have nothing to do with textual criticism or biblical criticism. They are really philosophical. Ehrman's has bought into the problem of evil (that discredits God's existence), and from there the rest of his conclusions flow. You can see some discussions between he and N.T. Wright, and it's pretty clear after their conversation that Ehrman's main thing is that he just doesn't see God active in the world, for whatever personal reason that might be. His exegesis and many of his conclusions just seem like basically an extension of Bultmann which Wright has critiqued devastatingly in a number of ways, just read Jesus and the Victory of God. Ehrman is just basically repeating the old Epicurean idea that God isn't here. (See also other comments)

Note: For a quick summary by Wright of Ehrman, listen to this HomeBrewedChristianity podcast

For excellent analysis of the weaknesses, inconsistancies of Ehrman's claims: [Recommended]
Evidence that Demands a Verdict (Revised, 2017 by Josh McDowell and his son, Sean, PhD)

Is N. T. Wright a Threat to Classical Protestantism?
https://calvinistinternational.com/2013/03/12/is-n-t-wright-a-threat-to-classical-protestantism/

N.T. Wright: "Simply Christian" (Lecture at Calvin College, 01/05/2007)
http://www.calvin.edu/january/2007/wright.htm (Link to Audio)

N.T. Wright: Space, Time, and Sacraments (Lecture at Calvin College, 01/06/2007) https://worship.calvin.edu/resources/resource-library/space-time-and-sacraments-n-t-wright/ (Links to Audio and summaries)
Video clip: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=0hrWprl6LdM

N.T. Wright and Infant Baptism (2006)
http://alastair.adversaria.co.uk/?p=373
(references "Part 4" of following articles "Searching for the Third Way: Baptism")

Searching for The Third Way: Baptism (Church of Christ)
Part 1: http://oneinjesus.info/2008/11/searching-for-the-third-way-baptism-part-1/
…
Part 4: http://oneinjesus.info/2008/11/searching-for-the-third-way-baptism-part-4/ (References NT Wright)
…
Part 8: http://oneinjesus.info/2008/11/searching-for-the-third-way-baptism-part-8/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

N. T. Wright on Baptism (2007)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=5xjPI9KVPYM [Video] (see also comments)

From the Seedbed vault circa 2007. Renowned Author and speaker N.T. Wright sits down with Maxie Dunnam, Ben Witherington III and J.D. Walt [Alt: http://www.seedbed.com/author/jd-walt/] to talk about his view on baptism. In the final installment of this four part series, Wright lays out a narrative of baptism starting in Exodus and weaving it into Romans. He explains how the act of baptism is rooted in Exodus, which creates a depth in understanding.

Beware of N.T. Wright (2011)
https://theonomyresources.blogspot.com/2011/05/beware-of-nt-wright.html
(A critique re: Infant Baptism – Baptism Regeneration)

N. T. Wright on the Implications of Baptism for the Christian Life (Anglican) http://creedalchristian.blogspot.com/2011/10/n-t-wright-on-implications-of-baptism.html

N.T. Wright: How Can the Bible be Authoritative? (1991)
http://ntwrightpage.com/2016/07/12/how-can-the-bible-be-authoritative/

Following Paul's Map and Charting our own Course (2017)
http://ntwrightonline.org/following-pauls-map-charting-course/(Mentions why/how Wright started his current ministry after resigning from pastoring)

N.T. Wright: Acts of the Apostles (Online Course; 2017)
http://ntwrightonline.org/actsebook (Link to overview video and downloadable eBook)

Shipwreck and Kingdom: Acts and the Anglican Communion http://ntwrightpage.com/2005/06/28/shipwreck-and-kingdom-acts-and-the-anglican-communion/

(Closing address to the meeting of the Anglican Consultative Council)

N. T. Wright Reconsiders the Meaning of Jesus's Death (Review; 2016) https://www.thegospelcoalition.org/article/book-reviews-the-day-the-revolution-began (A passage from N.T. Wright's book, Simply Christian: Why Christianity Makes Sense)

Is Tom Right?: An Extended Review of N. T. Wright's Justification: God's Plan and Paul's Vision (2012)
https://www.researchgate.net/publication/259424404_Is_Tom_Right_An_Extended_Review_of_N_T_Wright%27s_Justification_God%27s_Plan_and_Paul%27s_Vision

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

NT Wright, Paul and His Interpreters, the Cover (Review; 2015)
http://www.patheos.com/blogs/jesuscreed/2015/10/28/nt-wright-paul-and-his-interpreters-the-cover/

N. T. Wright on the Gospel and Meal Jesus Gave Us (Eucharist)
https://worship.calvin.edu/resources/resource-library/n-t-wright-on-the-gospel-and-meal-jesus-gave-us/

A Survey of Historical Jesus Studies: From Reimarus to Wright (2004)
https://bible.org/article/survey-historical-jesus-studies-reimarus-wright

Historical Jesus Theories: N. T. Wright http://www.earlychristianwritings.com/jesus/ntwright.html

Excerpt:

In The New Testament and the People of God, N. T. Wright sets forth a critical realist account of knowledge. By this, Wright means that it is impossible to do "mere history" from a supposed objective standpoint, just as much as it is impossible to see an object without using one's eyes. Wright states that the text and our own worldview stand in dialogue, with historical knowledge as the interplay of text and worldview in public dialogue.

Wright sketches Second Temple Judaism as telling the story of Israel's relationship to God and as using the symbols of Temple, Land, Torah, and Ethnic Identity. Jews held to creational monotheism over against henotheism, pantheism, deism, and Gnosticism. Jews held to providential monotheism, according to which God is continually active in the world. And Jews held to covenantal monotheism, in which God plans to restore the world through Israel. Jews rejected the forms of dualism in which there are a source of all that is bad and a source of all that is good, in which the material world is a shadow of the ideal world, and in which human beings are composed of body and spirit in opposition. Wright contends that Jews hoped for the revolution of the current world order but not a destruction of the material world in a final conflagration as depicted in Stoic philosophy.

Wright writes, "it should be quite clear that what united early Christians, deeper than all diversity, was that they told, and lived, a form of Israel's story which reached its climax in Jesus and which then issued in their spirit-given new life and task." (The New Testament and the People of God, p. 456, emphasis original) Wright turns the typical form-critical assumption on its head in saying that it is likely that pericopes originally contained narrative contexts but were stripped of them in a process of Hellenization, as is seen in the Gospel of Thomas. Wright rejects the "Q-plus-Thomas hypothesis" of a non-eschatological Jesus movement and states that Q, if it existed, was in form much like Community Rule from Qumran in containing both future and realized eschatology.

Wright elaborates on his disagreement with scholars such as Crossan and Mack in his book Jesus and the Victory of God. Wright uses as his principal tool the criterion of double similarity, according to which material that makes sense in a Jewish context and explains the rise of the church is likely to be historical. Wright maintains that Jesus planned for his own death: "Jesus, then, went up to Jerusalem not just to preach, but to die . . . Jesus believed that the messianic woes were about to burst upon Israel, and that he had to take them upon himself, solo" (Jesus and the Victory of God, p. 609). Wright believes that the development of soteriology in the church cannot be explained adequately unless it had its seed on the far side of Easter.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Quest for the Historical Jesus – What Is It and Why Should I Care?

http://www.dbts.edu/pdf/macp/2011/Compton%20J,%20Quest%20for%20Historical%20Jesus.pdf [PDF]

N.T. Wright's Hermeneutic: An Exploration (Churchman Vol 117/2 (2003))

http://www.churchsociety.org/churchman/documents/Cman_117_2_Stewart.pdf [PDF]

Wright's hermeneutic includes elements of Walsh and Middleton's worldview analysis, Greimas's narrative analysis, Meyer's analysis of intentionality, and Wright's revised application of form and redaction criticism. All these elements are applied in a manner consistent with Wright's commitment to critical realism as his basic epistemology.

N.T. Wright's Hermeneutic: Part 2 – The Historical Jesus (Churchman Vol 117/3 (2003))

https://biblicalstudies.org.uk/pdf/churchman/117-03_235.pdf [PDF]

Wright makes a strong case for a narrative interpretation of the gospels. But the issue is not primarily about how one ought to interpret the gospels. It is about how actions that Jesus took were interpreted before the gospels were written. There are also here some questions as to the applicability of Greimas's literary method to historical reconstruction.

One also must ask how much does Wright see himself in the well of history? Wright insists that he is uncomfortable with the Jesus that he finds through the application of his method. This is probably so. Certainly the Jesus that Wright pictures is neither an Oxford professor nor canon theologian of the most prestigious Anglican abbey in the world. But he nevertheless bears a striking resemblance to Wright's hermeneutic. Wright's hermeneutic is built upon the analysis of stories. Wright's Jesus is the messianic storyteller. Perhaps as Wright looks back through over 200 years of liberal and existential darkness all he sees is his hermeneutic in the well of history. This is not a condemnation of Wright or his method. Neither is it an attempt to discern Wright's personal psyche in his work. It is evidence for the accuracy of the thesis of this paper: there is a strong connection between one's hermeneutic and one's conclusion concerning the historical Jesus.

Wright's critical realism leads him consistently to state his argument in terms of a via media. Repeatedly he opts for the middle road between whatever positions he labels as positivism and phenomenalism. He illustrates his method through diagrams that remind one of Thiselton's two horizons (which remind one of Gadamer's fusion of horizons). The drawings are somewhat helpful to the first-time reader, but may serve to oversimplify the task. What is involved in historical Jesus research is not critiquing the degree to which one's knowledge of what is known is shaped by one's theoretical precepts (although of course that is part of the challenge of knowing). The task is more complicated than the way in which Wright's diagram pictures it in two horizons. What is actually involved in historical Jesus research is not—

Observer----------Object

It is actually closer to one of the two models below.

Observer---Text (Mark?)---Oral Tradition---Object (Jesus) or Observer---Object (text)---Oral Tradition---(Jesus)

In other words, while there may be two horizons (observer/knower and object/referent/that which is nown) there are many layers, or intermediate objects, that one must "get through" in or der to have access to, or to know, the referent that one desires to know, whether that referent is a physical object or some historical fact(s). Whichever model one prefers the task involves several levels more than Wright's' diagram pictures. Wright is aware of the complex nature of the task. He makes it clear in his response to Marsh and Casey that he understands that knowledge in a critical–realist model is of an ongoing and spiral nature. The point is not that he treats the material simplistically. It is rather that his diagram presents the theoretical issues involved somewhat simplistically.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Wright's model is innovative and thought provoking. He is well aware of the current state of historical Jesus research and his work addresses appropriately that of others in the field. Wright is correct concerning most of the major moves he makes, although some areas need to be more clearly explicated, while others can be balanced out by more attention to what the text explicitly states. But overall Wright has shown the way forward with his clear and unique proposals concerning Jesus.

Understanding N.T. Wright – Part 1 - Tools for the Task

https://21stcenturyreformation.blogspot.com/2008/08/understanding-nt-wright-part-1.html

Excerpt:

"Tools for the Task" from The New Testament and the People of God

Introducing the Question of Christian Origins

Upon reading "Tools for the Task", part II of N.T. Wright's The New Testament and the People of God, I found the principles so helpful that I feel compelled to share the wealth. This section is pretty heavy lifting for the uninitiated layman like myself. My aim here is to shed some light on how the principles, the Tools for the Task, that Bishop Wright introduces to the reader are actually quite common sense but also quite profound and practical.

To understand the epistemological framework that N.T. Wright is building as the Tools for the Task of his study of Christian Origins, it is helpful to know the kind of knowledge he will be attempting to obtain. In his life work, Christian Origins and the Question of God, Bishop Wright is attempting to answer some very pertinent and practical questions. In our 21st Century western culture, there is great confusion surrounding the origins of Christianity. This quagmire of opinions plays itself out in the media, in academia, and in the minds of both the educated and the not so educated. It seems every pseudo-intellectual with a Mocha Frappuccino has an opinion about the origins of the Christian faith, and all these opinions seem to be a pop version of the last 100 years of academic criticism. N.T. Wright's quest is to utilize sound historical and philosophical methods to make a systematically thorough analysis of the question of Christian origins.

Many of the scenarios that play out in the popular culture in the form of popular myth surround the question of "Who is Jesus?" One common myth is that Jesus never proclaimed himself to be the Messiah. In this view, it was only the church that developed these messianic claims. In this scenario, we have Jesus of Nazareth, the "historical Jesus", on the one hand, and the Christ of faith, the creation of the church, on the other. Such a view is quite well-developed within both academia and the popular mind. The fact is that academic, "historical"/critical research and theory has found its way into almost every nook and cranny of the popular mind. One example of the popular mind is quite archetypically represented by the pop icon John Lennon when he said, "I'm all right with Jesus but his followers were a bunch of stupid blokes." This sentiment takes as accepted knowledge the dogma of the popular myth of Christian origins. This perspective accepts a restructuring of history which sees Jesus as an enlightened mystic, but the apostles or the biblical writers (that is, the early church) as primitive-minded folk who misguided their faith into Jesus and thus created the personality cult of Christianity.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Such a view takes many forms in the popular mind. For example, I have an acquaintance, an intelligent and educated man, who believes that the most likely scenario is that Jesus didn't even ever exist. This reconstruction starts with the idea that there is a gap between the historical Jesus and the Christian faith as developed by the biblical writers and takes this gap to its logical extreme. This scenario simply says that if what we know about Jesus is actually the construction of the minds of the biblical writers, and if this construction is divorced from actual historical events, then on what basis do we believe that there was ever even a Jesus to begin with? The assumption is that there are actually no historical events which are the referents of the biblical texts. The biblical texts, from this perspective, represent entirely the mind of first-century fanatics. So the question is, "how do we know or can we even come to know anything at all about the actual historical events referred to by the biblical texts?" Answering these questions is vital because the historical events are the actual ground of historic Christianity.

As we ask these questions in order to uncover the history behind Christianity, (i.e. Christian origins), it will not do to simply either accept or reject biblical authority. This is the approach of the anti-intellectuals otherwise known as fundamentalists. Biblical authority as the sole basis for our epistemology is fundamentally circular logic. How do we know the truthfulness of the biblical history? We read the bible. It is easy to see the circularity of this reasoning. Instead, we must develop some tools for the task. In my next post, I will discuss what appears to me and to N.T. Wright as the best way forward.

Understanding N.T. Wright - Tools for the Task – Part 2 - Critical Realism part 1

https://21stcenturyreformation.blogspot.com/2008/09/understanding-nt-wright-tools-for-task.html

Excerpt:

In my first post, Tools for the Task part 1, I discussed N.T. Wright overarching goal or his life work. N.T. Wright has embarked upon what he calls the Third Quest. Wright's quest is to, in light of the abundance of extra-biblical evidence concerning 1st Century Judaism, develop a historically grounded hypothesis about how Christianity developed. A key quote for N.T. Wright, having reflected upon the first two quests for the historical Jesus is "when all was said and done, they dug a well and found at the bottom a reflection of themselves." Wright is saying that these theologians used methodologies which were not critical enough and their conclusions ended up being a reflection of their own preconceived worldviews. What happened in the 20th century quests for the historical Jesus is that the theologians did not utilize the proper historian's "Tools for the Task". The result is the pop culture misconceptions about Christian origins which I wrote about in Part 1 of this series.

The First Tool for the Task – Critical Realism

Defining Critical

In our family, I often ask my older children the question, "What is the worst thing a person can be?" The answer they usually give is, "A compliant thinker". Next I ask, "And what is the opposite of a compliant thinker?" The answer they give, "A critical thinker". In my mind, one of the great enemies in the 21st Century is anti-intellectualism. To use our intellect and to be lifelong learners, we must understand what it means to be a critical thinker.

A critical thinker is a person who is constantly pursuing a revision of two perspectives: first, the perspective given to us and, second, our own perspective. In other words, a true critical thinker is constantly aware of how his own preconceptions and the preconceptions of others undermine learning and getting the process of getting closer and closer to reality. This critical approach is the first tool for the task which is the critical side of critical realism. To be critical means being constantly aware of the role that perspective plays in the telling and listening of any and all truth claims. Being critical is in many ways the foundation of the scientific method. We are constantly seeking to re-evaluate and therefore improve our understanding of reality by questioning and challenging both our own understanding and the accepted wisdom. We ask ourselves, “Is there another perspective which can help me see things clearly? What is the tellers stance? What is my stance?" We are always aware that, as subjects, both the teller of the truth and the hearer of the truth participates in the knowing process. Therefore, as learners we must use certain tools to be enable us to be skillful critics of both ourselves and the accepted wisdom in order to be active and skillful critical thinkers. To be a critical thinker, one must be both arrogant enough to question the accepted dogma and humble enough to critique one’s own preconceptions.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

So that is the critical part of “Critical realism”. The next term to understand is the term "realism”. I will discuss this term in the next post. As we proceed, with other terms which N.T. Wright spends considerable time defining including, “worldview”, “theology”, “story”, “hypothesis and verification”, we will come to see how incredibly helpful these tools are to understanding both the biblical texts and the origins of Christianity.

N.T. Wright: Method in Historical Jesus Research

An Exploration and Critique of the methodology of N.T. Wright

https://ordinand.files.wordpress.com/2008/09/nt-wright-methodology1.pdf [PDF]

Excerpt:

The purpose of this paper is to examine and analyse the methodology of N.T. Wright as presented in part II of New Testament and the People of God (NTPOG), and used and developed in J*esus and the Victory of God (JVOG)*. This paper is broken down into the following sections. Part A of this paper will examine the broad contours of Wright's epistemological method, whereas part B shall look, with an eye on the quest for the historical Jesus, at how the insights from part A are developed in regards to historiography.

Part A: Epistemological Method, Critical Realism

In JVOG Wright seeks to apply his methodology from NTPOG part II to the quest for the historical Jesus. In order to be able to engage with Wright's reconstruction of the historical Jesus it is necessary to examine his methodological approach for 'if we do not explore presuppositional matters, we can expect endless and fruitless debate.' so 'i*t is vital that a project such as this one should show from the outset where it stands on basic questions of method.*' N.T. Wright adopts an epistemological method called critical realism which is contrasted, by Wright, to the (i) positivist position and (ii) phenomenalism which are the 'optimistic and pessimistic version of the enlightenment epistemological project.

a) 'Positivism'

The positivist position, which Wright associates with 'naïve realism' seeks 'solid and unquestionable knowledge'. The knower, from a positvist stanpoint has 'instant access to raw data about which they can simply make propositions on the basis of sense experience.' The following diagram illustrates the directness, and absence of the hermeneutical spiral, from the observer to the object.

Observer ----------> Object

-simply looking at objective reality

-tested by empirical observation

-if it doesn't work, it's nonsense

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

b) Phenomenalism

The phenomenalist, in contrast to the optimistic and epistemological certainty of the 'positivist' 'translates talk about external objects... into statements about sense data,' for 'the only thing of which I [positivist] can be sure when confronted by things in (what seems to be) the external world are my own sense-data'.

Observer----------> Object

-I seem to have evidence of external reality

<----------

-but I am really only sure of my sense data

Critical Realism

In contrast to both of these positions N.T Wright proposes > a form of critical realism. This is a way of describing the process of 'knowing' that acknowledges the reality of thing known, as something other than the knower (hence realism), whilst also fully acknowledging that the only access we have to this reality lies along the spiralling path of appropriate dialogue or conversation between the knower and thing known (hence 'critical). This path leads to critical reflection on the products of our enquiry into 'reality', so that our assertions about 'reality' acknowledge their own provisionality. Knowledge, in other words, although in principal concerning realities independent of the mid of the knower, is never itself independent of the knower Positivist stress the reality of the object at the expense of the subjectivity of the knower whereas phenomenalism stresses the subjective role of the knower whilst being unable to talk about reality outside of the mind of the knower. In contrast to these two positions critical realism does not lose either the subjectivity of the knower, nor the reality of a world which exists outside of the mind of the knower.

Wright represents this diagrammatically,

Observer----------> Object

initial observation

<----------

is challenged by critical reflection

---------->

but can survive the challenge and speak truly of reality.

A critical realist approach seeks to overcome the false choice between pure objectivity and pure subjectivity, between an enlightenment epistemology and the post-modern response.

Wright notes three things which are needed for critical awareness

> I) There is no 'gods eye view available to human beings.'
>
> II) All information from the real world is interpreted 'through a grid of expectations, memories, stories, psychological states and so on'..'it is peculiar in terms of my worldview'.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

III) 'We belong to a particular human community', in which the cosmos is interpreted in a myriad of ways, for 'every human community shares and cherishes certain assumptions, traditions, expectations, anxieties, and so forth, which encourage its members to construe reality in particular ways'.

Critical Realism: How does it Work?

Critical Realism seeks positively to attain knowledge by taking account of worldviews and using a method of 'hypothesis and verification', both of which should be used intentionally, according to Wright, as the tools of critical reflection.

Stories and Worldviews

In the positivist epistemological model hypotheses are 'constructed out of the sense data received, and then go in search of more sense-evidence which will either confirm, modify or destroy the hypothesis thus created.' However, for Wright, a hypothesis does not simply spring up from the data but 'needs a larger framework on which to draw, a larger set of stories about things which happen in the world.' External reality is perceived from a framework of reference, a worldview which is characterised at a basic level by stories. We cannot simply 'see' the historical truth, as with naïve realism, for we live in a story laden world. 'There is no such thing as 'neutral' or 'objective' proof; only the claim that the story we are now telling about the world as a whole makes more sense.' than other stories.

A good hypothesis, or story, will attain the following.

- Simplicity of Outline
- Elegance in handling the details within it
- The inclusion of all parts of the story
- The ability of the story to make sense beyond its immediate subject matter.

Hypothesis and Verification

A full account of verification, according to Wright, must include the following: I) question II) hypothesis III) testing of hypothesis

- (I) Question: The question arises 'because one's present story is in some way either puzzling or incomplete'
- (II) Hypothesis: A new story which offers itself as an explanation
- (III) Success of the story to include all of the data.

The following fictional story illustrates the cognitive method of hypothesis and verification.

I arrive home to find my front door unlocked which raises a number of questions. Did I forget to unlock it? Have I been broken into? The explanatory stories, answers to these questions, are hypotheses. These explanatory stories appear to arrive by intuition. On moving into the house I see the TV is missing. I here find that one of the explanatory stories has emerged as a 'successful explanatory story' as it makes sense of the new data. We see that a story gives rise to a question, new stories appear, that is hypotheses are put forward, which begin to make sense of the data in a simple matter. These new stories can be verified with external reality. I could have have had as a hypothesis the story that the wife had taken the TV to work and forgotten to lock the door. Yet this is not the simplest story which accounts for the data. This story, as with Wright's driving story, shows what is meant by hypothesis and verification.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Wright offers the following diagram.

Story-telling humans----------> Story-laden world initial observation (already within a story)

<----------

Is challenged by critical reflection on ourselves as story-tellers

(i.e) recognizing that our claims about reality may be mistaken)

---------->

but can, through further narrative, find alternative ways of speaking truly about the world, with the use of new or modified stories.

Summary and Conclusion

We have seen that Wright puts forward an epistemological position known as critical realism. This approach seeks to recognise that we do not arrive at knowledge through sense perception alone but that the mind of the knower interacts with data to produce stories, hypothesis and knowledge.

These broad strokes of a critical realist approach to knowing provide, at a presuppositional level, the basis of Wright's historiographical method. It is to this which we will now turn...

See also*: Worldview

See also my other separate references resource*:

Christian Scholarship: Biblical – Theological – Philosophical

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

N.T. Wright and Critical Realism: Part 1
https://ordinand.wordpress.com/2008/05/22/nt-wright-and-critical-realism-part-1/

N.T. Wright and Paul's eschatology (with coloured beads)

http://www.postost.net/2016/06/nt-wright-paul-eschatology-coloured-beads

A Look at Karl Barth and N.T. Wright's Exegetical Methodologies
https://ordinand.files.wordpress.com/2008/04/chapter-1.pdf [PDF]

Karl Barth and N.T. Wright's Exegetical Methodologies
https://ordinand.files.wordpress.com/2008/04/chapter-2.pdf [PDF]

Wrights-Historical-Exegetical-Methodology
https://ordinand.files.wordpress.com/2008/04/chapter-3.pdf [PDF]

N.T. Wright: The Virgin Birth and the Constraints of History (2014)
http://www.abc.net.au/religion/articles/2014/12/23/4153797.htm

BioLogos – N.T. Wright Blog
http://biologos.org/author/nt-wright

NT Wright spanks RC Sproul and Al Mohler (MISLABELED / BAD TITLE) is really:
N.T. Wright on Creation and Evolution after a clip of Comments by RC Sproul and Al Mohler
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=jQ9_AFwnsWw

N.T. Wright on Genesis (2010)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=ffWo7nzL66o [Video]

N.T. Wright - Evolution (2011)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=_yPCTnGMRFM [Video]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

N.T. Wright: If Creation is Through Christ, Evolution is What You Would Expect
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=wZ2qrkE-t00 [Video] (2017)

(See also: Epicureanism, Deism)

N.T. Wright – Review comments on his publications (LibraryThing) https://www.librarything.com/author/WrightN.T.

3 Reasons Dispensationalism has Lost Appeal for Young Leaders https://calvarychapel.com/resources/article/view/3-reasons-dispensationalism-has-lost-appeal-for-young-leaders/

Pitfalls of Dispensationalism
https://calvarychapel.com/resources/article/view/pitfalls-of-dispensationalism/

See also: Two Major Systems of Theology

Can Tom Wright save Christianity?" (2017)
https://baptistnews.com/article/can-tom-wright-save-christianity/

Deconstructing the Bully God — NT Wright by Scot McKnight [Recommended] http://www.patheos.com/blogs/jesuscreed/2015/02/11/deconstructing-the-bully-god-nt-wright/

Excerpt:

That's the problem with so much Christian theology. A bad view of God is destructive to the faith, to the church, and to the person. N.T. Wright, in Simply Good News, seeks to present how the Bible presents God and the first thing that has to be done to get this God in our minds and hearts is to dethrone the bad gods we have created.

For instance, the bully God — the bully in the sky, odd demands and gets petulant easily.

> Most people today, in short, assume that the word God refers to a dull, distant, and perhaps dangerous being. Most of those who think like that try hard, not surprisingly, to believe that this being doesn't exist. "I don't believe in God," said the novelist Kingsley Amis, "and I hate him."
>
> They are right.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

> That God—the dull, distant, and dangerous one—does not exist (128).

Deists, philosophers and — Wright thinks — even the Reformers got in on developing this bad, bully God:

> But the Reformers, and then the Puritans, and then many other Christian movements such as the early Methodists, had a different reaction. They stressed the saving death of Jesus as the means by which the wrath of God had been averted. Often this was accompanied by great gratitude and ove. Often, however, it has left the semipagan vision of God untouched. That then produced a further reaction, which is where the modern angry atheists come in (129).

The God of the Bible — and he focuses on the Psalms — is a different kind of God from those in the ancient world. God is sovereign, holy, creator, and altogether loving and faithful. He gets his Barth on with this one:

> If he is God, our primary role is not to analyze him but to worship him; it is not for us to figure him out but to let him figure us out (133).

Again, we see God in Jesus and this is the burden of Wright's chapter, to fashion an understanding of God that takes Jesus as the one who reveals who God is by who he is himself. Wright sees three themes:

1. God is creator. Here is where a christocentric or christological framing of God changes the game:

> Jesus doesn't give an explanation for the pain and sorrow of the world. He comes where the pain is most acute and takes it upon himself. Jesus doesn't explain why there is suffering, illness, and death n the world. He brings healing and hope. He doesn't allow the problem of evil to be the subject of a seminar. He allows evil to do its worst to him. He exhausts it, drains its power, and emerges with new life. The resurrection says, more clearly than anything else can, "There is a God, and he is the creator of the world we know, and he is the father of Jesus, Israel's Messiah." That is the first part of the good news about God (137).

2. God is judge of creation. Here God judges death and sets the world right:

> Nothing will be lost. All that is good and beautiful, and especially all that has been done out of love for God, out of the power of Jesus's death and new life, and by the leading of the Spirit, will somehow be part of God's new world (138).

3. God is lover. God creates and judges out of love.

> So what does this love do when faced with broken limbs and broken lives? What does it do when confronted by denial and rejection? What does it do when humans who have the capacity to share in the innermost being of the Creator twist that capacity into its opposite, the capacity to hate and sneer and spit and snarl, to kick and stab and wound and kill? Does love then say, "Well, perhaps love is all very well when things are going fine, but now that it s all gone wrong, we'd better try the other way"? No, the good news that Jesus put into practice during his public career and that he enacted as he went to his death is this: love, faced with rejection, overcomes it with yet more love (140).

NT Wright: Doubts about Doubt: Honest to God Forty Years On (2005)

http://ntwrightpage.com/2016/04/05/doubts-about-doubt-honest-to-god-forty-years-on/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Honest to God, published in 1963, was one of the most public religious bestsellers of the twentieth century. Because it was written by an Anglican bishop it was especially controversial. Yet there are questions that remain and this article highlights seven such questions which draw attention to weaknesses in the book. An alternative proposal is offered here. Robinson had his finger on a real problem in postwar British church life and, in a measure, theology. I believe the problem was mostly or largely caused not by the New Testament and historic Christianity itself, but by the way in which the post-Enlightenment world had assimilated and re-expressed the Christian faith

See also: Honest to God – Fifty Years On (PDF); Paul Tillich; Bultmann

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

After You Believe – N. T. Wright on Christian character (Review)
http://www.booksandculture.com/articles/webexclusives/2010/may/afteryoubelieve.html?paging=off
(Review of Wright's book: After You Believe – Why Character Matters)

[See also Wright criticisms section]

Review: Tom Wright's Virtue Reborn (aka After You Believe)
http://kinnon.tv/2010/03/review-tom-wrights-virtue-reborn-aka-after-you-believe.html

NOTE: "After You Believe" is the title of the book used in the United States, it's called "Virtue Reborn" in Great Britain.

"After You Believe," by N.T. Wright
http://www.renewedinspirit.org/2010/06/br-after-you-believe-by-nt-wright.html

Excerpt:

…These questions should not detract from the overall excellence of After You Believe. The book will provide many challenges to traditional Protestant and Evangelical theology; nevertheless, those who tend toward legalistic views will find little comfort. It is a book worth considering in (what should be) our attempt toward developing a better balance between legalism and antinomianism in the Christian life.

Bishop N.T. "Tom" Wright interview on true character—"After You Believe" https://www.readthespirit.com/explore/637-bishop-nt-tom-wright-interview-on-true-characterafter-yo/

Excerpt from Bio Section:

NT WRIGHT: An Evangelical? Because of that splash in American headlines, many Americans regard Wright as a conservative evangelical. However, in the UK, he's known as a leading light among Open Evangelicals, Christians who celebrate church traditions but also engage in a progressive way with the larger world. This is crucial in understanding how some of Wright's books wind up raising points similar to those made by American emergent-church writers like Brian McLaren. To understand this important distinction, see our coverage of Wright's How God Became King, below.

Note: Open Evangelical refers to a particular Christian school of thought or churchmanship, primarily in the United Kingdom (especially in the Church of England). Open evangelicals describe their position as combining a traditional evangelical emphasis on the nature of scriptural authority, the teaching of the ecumenical creeds and other traditional doctrinal teachings, with an approach towards culture and other theological points of view which tends to be more inclusive than that taken by other evangelicals. Some open evangelicals aim to take a middle position between conservative and charismatic evangelicals, while others would combine conservative theological emphases with more liberal social positions.

Open Evangelicalism is particularly represented by the Fulcrum movement in the Church of England, and prominent advocates of the open evangelical position include N.T. Wright (Research Professor of New Testament and Early Christianity at the University of St Andrews in Scotland and formerly the Bishop of Durham), Bishop Graham Kings, and Steven Croft, the Bishop of Oxford. The primary journal of open evangelicalism is Anvil.

Among Anglican theological colleges, Open Evangelicalism is particularly strong within Ridley Hall in Cambridge and Cranmer Hall in Durham. Prominent open evangelical churches include St Mary's Islington (Diocese of London) and St Nicholas' Durham.
-Wikipedia

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

N.T. Wright - After you Believe: Why Christian Character Matters (2012)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=ukyNU51OcnA [Video]

(Character formation or virtue)

The Virtues and Vices of N.T. Wright's After You Believe (2013)
http://www.mbird.com/2013/07/the-virtues-and-vices-of-n-t-wrights-after-you-believe/

Social Justice is a Virtue (Article in progressive site: Sojourner) (2010) https://sojo.net/articles/social-justice-virtue (References After You Believe)

School/parenting virtue resource:

Instilling Virtue – Tools for Success: Parenting and Academic Strategies (2016)
https://www.tbcs.org/uploaded/Resources/Presentations/Tools_for_Success_16/Can_we_instill_virtue_in_our_children.pdf [PDF]

Resource of the The Bear Creek School (Classical Christian Liberal Arts Education, K-12)

N.T. Wright: "Your Job Matters" (2016)
https://hellochristian.com/1959-nt-wright-your-job-matters

Excerpt:

HelloChristian.com spoke with N.T. Wright. We asked the leading British New Testament scholar and retired Anglican bishop 8 questions on a variety of topics. Today: Why is it to important to take part in society as a journalist, musician or banker in the light of the Gospel?

"God wants police officers, bankers, He wants shop-keepers. He wants husbands and wives, He wants people who will make his world happen and that is how God wants to run the world and He wants us to do it in the Spirit of Jesus and service of love and humility, not arrogantly and for our own self-aggrandizement. So the question is not: 'Should I be a banker? Should I be a policeman? Should I be an engineer?' But if that is my calling, what does it mean to do that reflecting the love of God into the world? That's the critical question."

"God wants humans to be creative, to make things happen, organize, to run the world."

Often people think the highest calling you can get is to become a missionary or pastor. Tom Wright: "Of course God wants people to be working in the Church but in the public domain but we also need lawyers and doctors and shop-keepers and everybody else. It's better if they be Christians than not and people have many different vocations."

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

"I think Paul would have found this an odd question. In the Jewish theology which comes through in his Christian theology, God makes the world in such a way that human beings will be his agents, his royal priesthood within the world. God wants humans to be creative, to make things happen, organize, to run the world and then God will hold us accountable."

"I think the unclarity on this topic is the result of the fact that the last 200 years, the Western Churches have gone along to an extent to the idea of the Enlightenment where religion and real life are separate. And for a long time, people are happy to still do religion but the real life has been kept apart from that."

"The Christian Gospel is about being in the fallen world and making it to the place where God wants us to be. That's why our work matters, whether you're a police officer, shop-keeper, or banker."

N.T. Wright interview: Why Left, Right & Lewis get it wrong

https://www.readthespirit.com/explore/nt-wright-interview-why-left-right-lewis-get-it-wrong/
(Highlights of interview with NT "Tom" Wright on How God Became King)

How N. T. Wright Changed My Faith

https://www.theologyofwork.org/the-high-calling/blog/how-n-t-wright-changed-my-faith

Excerpt:

Despite what many people think, within the Christian family and outside it, the point of Christianity isn't "to go to heaven when you die." N. T. Wright, Simply Christian

…The most important contribution N.T. Wright makes is his emphasis that our goal is not heaven. Instead, participation in the Kingdom of God as taught and demonstrated by Jesus of Nazareth, right here, right now. We can pray and believe and act into the Lord's Prayer for God's Kingdom to come, God's will to be done, on earth as it is in heaven. These concepts and others helped me move away from a selfish mindset of personal salvation that focused on admission to a very boring heaven, toward a fuller and more biblical understanding of God's mission to restore, renew, and draw all of Creation toward a dramatic conclusion.

N.T. White: Suspending Skepticism: History and the Virgin Birth

http://www.abc.net.au/religion/articles/2011/12/28/3398969.htm

Bold answers from NT Wright (2015) [Recommended]

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=aoB10G3nm8o [Video]

N.T. Wright: What is the Gospel? (2013)

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=ICHovRHJAYY [Video]

N.T. Wright: What is the gospel, and why is it the "good news"? (2009)

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=cWoezpvlEz4 [Video] (John Ankerberg Show)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

N.T. White: Women's Service in the Church: The Biblical Basis (2011)

http://ntwrightpage.com/2016/07/12/womens-service-in-the-church-the-biblical-basis/

The Lord's Prayer as a Paradigm of Christian Prayer (2001)

http://ntwrightpage.com/2016/07/12/the-lords-prayer-as-a-paradigm-of-christian-prayer/

Excerpt:

…The Christian is also called to make the Lord's Prayer paradigmatic in his or her own personal life. The context in Matthew 6 includes Jesus' command to go into one's own room, shut the door, and pray to the Father who sees in secret (6:6). (We might want to ask, how many of Jesus' original hearers had private rooms into which they could retreat, with doors by which they could shut out all others?) The life of the individual Christian is lived out between baptism and bodily death and resurrection on the same principle as the life of the corporate church. It is true, of course, that the story of Israel's wilderness wanderings has been more regularly applied to the Christian life than to church history, and the symbolism is well enough known: the crossing of the Jordan symbolizing death, and so forth — or, as in some "second blessing" traditions, altered so that the crossing of the Jordan signals an entry into a "higher life" of full sanctification. Nonetheless, the Exodus story is still a fruitful source of imagery for reconstructing a genuinely Christian spirituality.

The Lord's Prayer, as used by a Christian who is conscious of his or her pilgrimage to the eventual promised land, celebrates the great beginning of that pilgrimage when, in baptism

, that individual is united with Christ in his death and resurrection. Calling God "Father" says and celebrates all of that. The early petitions of the prayer, with their focus on God's name, God's kingdom, and God's will, can all be used in this context as the framework for focusing in one's private prayer on God himself, and for claiming already in the present — as, indeed, is done in the sacraments — the blessings of the future that are already secured in Christ. And within private prayer, as with public prayer, all of the other elements take their place: intercession, the prayer for forgiveness, and the clear-eyed plea against peirasmos and against the poneros. These all find their appropriate, though still subordinate, home. The individual Christian is called to be a man, woman, or child of prayer as a New Exodus person.

But that cannot be the whole story. For, as I said in the first section of this article, at its heart the Lord's Prayer is an invitation to each Christian to share in the praying life of Jesus himself. The early Christians were very conscious of Jesus' exalted presence before God's throne, where his constant task is to intercede on behalf of his people (cf. Rom. 8:34; Heb. 7:25; 9:24). The Lord's Prayer, therefore, by uniting Jesus' people with their Lord in the prayer that formed the inner core of his own life, brings about the situation where those who pray it are even now, whether they realize it or not, "seated in the heavenly places in Christ Jesus" (Eph. 2:6; cf. Col. 3:1,3).

There are different ways of appropriately embodying this reality. Precisely because we are to pray God's kingdom into existence "on earth as it is in heaven," it is always worthwhile exploring and reflecting on those ways — including matters of place, posture, timing, musical accompaniment, and so on. These are not mere incidentals. They will, of course, vary quite widely with culture, personality, and opportunity. Such variations, however, do not suggest that there are not some more and some less appropriate outward forms and fashions. Rather, the reverse is true. Each individual Christian and every church community is responsible, under God, for not just maintaining a human tradition — or, for that matter, demolishing one — but for discovering the forms that the Lord's Prayer itself prompts and suggests within a particular culture and for the particular people who are going to be using it.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Letter to the Galatians: Exegesis and Theology (2000)
http://ntwrightpage.com/2016/07/12/the-letter-to-the-galatians-exegesis-and-theology/

Worship and the Spirit in the New Testament (2008) http://ntwrightpage.com/2016/04/25/worship-and-the-spirit-in-the-new-testament/

N.T. Wright: Two Radical Jews
http://ntwrightpage.com/2016/04/25/two-radical-jews/
(a review article of Daniel Boyarin, A Radical Jew: Paul and the Politics of Identity.)

N.T. Wright: The Monarchs and the Message:
Reflections on Bible Translation from the Sixteenth to the Twenty-First Century (2011) http://ntwrightpage.com/2016/04/05/the-monarchs-and-the-message/

Excerpt:

…When people ask me which version of the Bible they should use, I have for many years told them that I don't much mind as long as they always have at least two open on the desk. It is, of course, better for everyone to learn Greek. The finest translations are still, basically, a matter of trying to play a Beethoven symphony on a mouth-organ. But what a new translation can perhaps do today is to jolt people out of the familiar, and open their eyes and imaginations to new possibilities: particularly to the new possibilities which speak of the ultimate monarchy, of Jesus as the king of the world in a way that Paul and Mark understood well but most contemporary readers have hardly begun to imagine…

N.T. Wright: Historical Paul and 'Systematic Theology' (2014) [Recommended]
http://ntwrightpage.com/2017/02/24/historical-paul-and-systematic-theology/

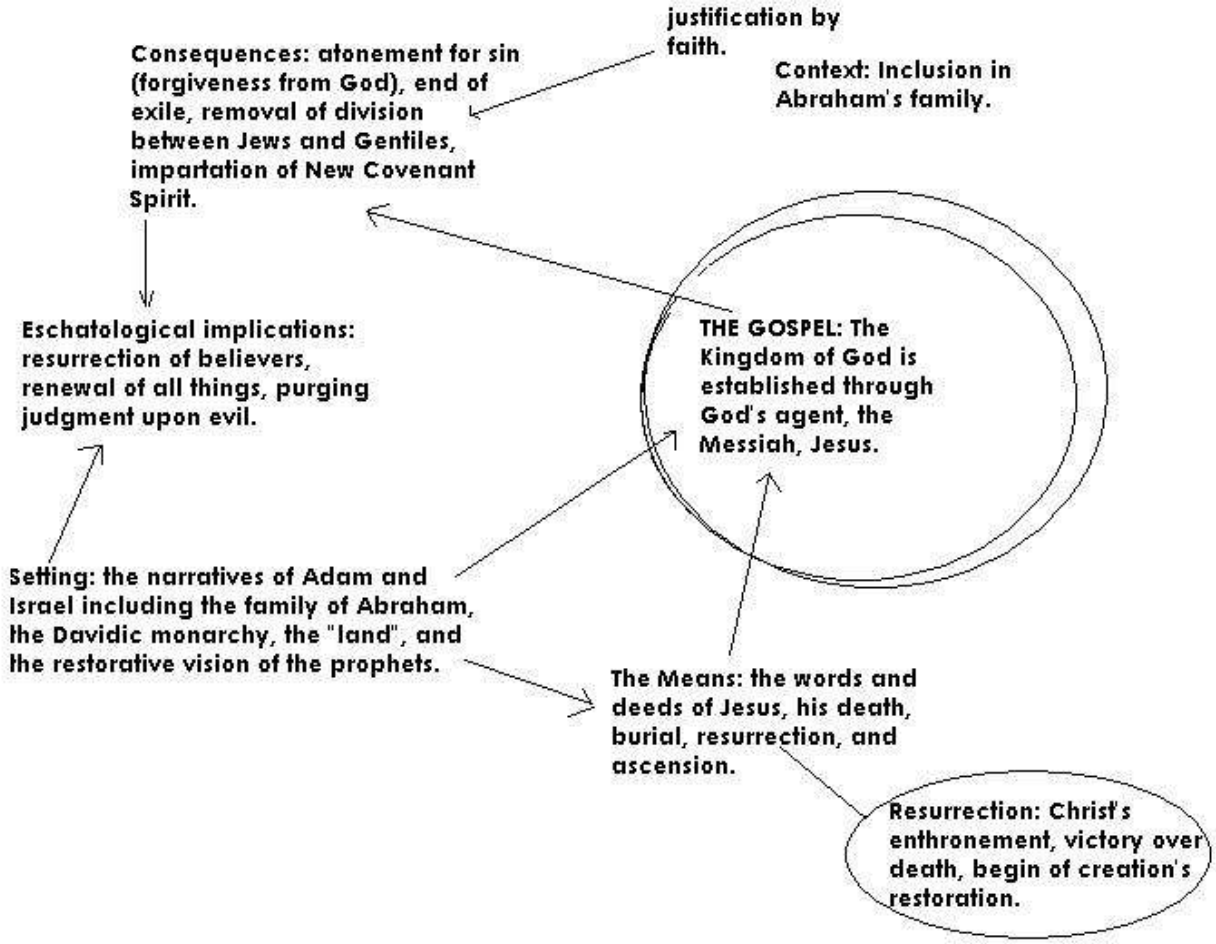
NT Wright Resource Page for Bible Study and Small Groups
https://www.readthespirit.com/nt-wright-bible-scholar-interviews-and-book-reviews-resource-page-for-bible-study/

N.T. Wright Online (Courses / fee required)
https://www.udemy.com/user/nicholasthomaswright/

N. T. Wright | Lectures | Sermons | Discussions | Interviews (188+ Videos)
https://www.youtube.com/playlist?list=PLR2I5rwcF854ldr0ZjZAGnGNdOOURNhwy

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

N.T. Wright, Scot McKnight and the Gospel: Compared and Contrasted (2011)



http://www.covenantoflove.net/gospel/n-t-wright-scot-mcknight-and-the-gospel-compared-and-contrasted/

At first glance it appears that Scot McKnight's gospel proposal in his recent book, The King Jesus Gospel, is very much "Wrightian". But the more I reflected on what McKnight had to say, and the more I perused much of what Wright says throughout his work, the wider a contrast between the two developed. These two scholars have many points of agreement though, and so much so that it may be suggested that McKnight's gospel proposal was an outworking of Wright's influence on his thinking. But Scot is a superb scholar in his own right, so it might simply be suggested that his understanding of the gospel developed independent of Wright, whom he sources simply as a scholar in agreement. (Note: Covers their Agreements and Disagreements)

A Gospel Diagram

https://nearemmaus.wordpress.com/2011/10/29/a-gospel-diagram/

Note from author: I acknowledge influence from N.T. Wright and Scot McKnight primarily.

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

http://www.theworkofthepeople.com/long-term-restoration-project (link to video)

What did God do in Christ that we could not do for ourselves? NT Wright's 2 minute summary of the Bible.

Questions for Reflection:

 To the question, “What did God do in Christ that we could not do for ourselves? ,” Wright says that the “meaning that what did in Christ” has “to do with the long term project at recuing the world.” God had to become the Israel in Jesus the Messiah, the Christ. How does this “long term restoration project” affect the way we perceive what God is doing in our lives and the life of the church?

 Wright talks about how the “meaning of [Christ’s] death and the meaning of [Christ’s] launching of the Kingdom” go together. In other words, Christ becomes the people who could be obedient people of God, and Christ becomes the King of the Kingdom that could not be established by the kings of the world. How is God’s work a way of demonstrating God’s love? How does this work help us to see our weaknesses and embrace God’s forgiveness?

More NT Wright videos at “The Work of the People”
http://www.theworkofthepeople.com/list/people/nt-wright

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

http://www.theworkofthepeople.com/worship-songs (links to video)

NT Wright on worship music.

Questions for reflection:

 Music reflected and challenged the existing culture. When Wright participated in Christian folk music in the 60's the "idiom seemed to be slanted toward the negative." In contemporary Christian music the tendency is to move toward "teenage love songs." How is the tendency to reflect culture in Christian music detrimental? What might be the difference between an understanding of a romanticized love of God and a proper love of God?

 Wright warns that teenage love is like "striking a match" which is an exciting thing to do, but the point is to "light the candle." How might worship music help us to love God consistently instead of "falling in love" with God? How might the church continue to create music that will endure?

More NT Wright videos at "The Work of the People"
http://www.theworkofthepeople.com/list/people/nt-wright

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Bible - Who Cares?
Molly Worthen asks NT Wright questions about scripture and culture at UNC
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=WCgOcidksjo [Video] [Warning: Audio is very poor quality / distortion]

A Conversation with NT Wright (2017)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=xksJMBG3qfg [Video]

Life's Biggest Questions NT Wright (2017)
Veritas Forum at Univ. of Cincinnati https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=fyA0m1UCvyc [Video]

The Bible: Gospel, Guide, or Garbage? (2013)
Veritas Forum: NT Wright and Sean Kelly at Harvard University https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=CTpgvI_vUjc [Video]

The Bible: Gospel, Guide, or Garbage? (2014)
Veritas Forum: NT Wright and Sean Kelly at Univ. of Texas, Austin https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=w1wqG2PbwNQ [Video]

Good God? A conversation with Professor N.T. Wright at Duke (2014)
Veritas Forum: addresses reconciling a good God with a world filled with suffering https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=kjdLatKLo1k [Video] (TheVeritas.org)
(Includes personal info., what doubts he had about his faith, good vs evil, etc.)

How God Became King : Why We've All Misunderstood the Gospels | N. T. Wright
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Mks4gYcjpXc [Video] (2012) (Calvin College) Recommended]

You're Included - How God Became King (2013)
Part 1: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=IEHliSDNxa4 [Video]

Part 2: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=FEmIQspS6xc [Video]

A Run Through Romans 8 | N. T. Wright (Audio only) (2016)
Session 1: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=fyE5tyTc18c

Session 2: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=71U0IHBCYKY

Session 3: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=QLqUI8MG5yM

Session 4: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=KCaTMNfbh0I

Session 5: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=-ouBxLOoVO8

Session 6: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=KevX-yjabGo

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

N.T. Wright: Panel Discussion on Pauline Theology with Faculty (2014)

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=mNzcwo6opqg [Video]
This is a somewhat contentious discussion at Duke Divinity School, but interesting nevertheless

Evening Conversation with NT Wright and Richard Hays (2016)

The Trinity Forum on "The Good News and the Good Life" at the Duke Divinity School https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=w6XakC2ZjsU [Video]

Good God? A conversation with Professor N.T. Wright at Duke

The Veritas Forum at The Duke Divinity School (2014)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=kjdLatKLo1k [Video]
(Includes personal info., what doubts he had about his faith, good vs evil, etc.)

What Gods Do We Believe in Now? NT Wright and Gary Morson

Veritas Forum at Northwestern University (2012)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=LQYCE5-DtdY [Video]

Bishop Wright on Bishop Robinson – Doubts about Doubt: Honest to God Forty Years On https://jasongoroncy.com/2014/02/07/bishop-wright-on-bishop-robinson/ (Excerpt, Intro) (2014)

Full Article:
https://cruciality.files.wordpress.com/2014/02/wright-doubts-about-doubt-honest-to-god-forty-years-on.pdf [PDF] (2005)

NT Wright's Inaugural Lecture (at St. Andrews University): Imagining the Kingdom: Mission and Theology in Early Christianity

https://jasongoroncy.com/2011/11/03/nt-wright%E2%80%99s-inaugural-lecture-imagining-the-kingdom-mission-and-theology-in-early-christianity%E2%80%99/

Excerpt:

The four gospels … are thus appropriately named 'gospel', in line both with Isaiah 40 and 52 and with the contemporary pagan usage. They themselves, in telling the story of how God became king in and through Jesus, invite their readers to the imaginative leap of saying, 'Suppose this is how God has done it? Suppose the world's way of empire is all wrong? Suppose there's a different way, and suppose that Jesus, in his life, death and resurrection, has brought it about?' And the gospels themselves, of course, contain stories at a second level, stories purportedly told by Jesus himself, which were themselves, in their day, designed to break open the worldview of their hearers and to initiate a massive imaginative leap to which Jesus gave the name 'faith'. The gospels invite their readers, in other words, to a multiple exercise, both of imagining what it might have been like to make that leap in the first century (both for Jesus' hearers and then, at a second stage, for their own readers) and, as a further stage again, of imagining what it might be like to do so today. For too long gospel study has been dominated by the attempt to make the gospels reflect, simply, the faith-world of the early church. Why, after all, the radical critics used to say, would the early Christians have been particularly interested in miscellaneous stories of what Jesus actually said or did, when all that really mattered was his saving death, making the gospels simply 'passion narratives with extended introductions'? The conservative response has been that early converts would naturally want to know more about this Jesus in whom they had come to place their faith. But this stand-off, on both sides, has usually failed to reflect the larger question: that the gospels tell the story of Jesus not out of mere historical anecdotage or faith-projection, but because this is how Jesus launched the kingdom of God, which he then accomplished in his death and resurrection. Even to hold this possibility in one's head requires, in today's western church, whether radical or conservative, no less than in the non-Christian world, a huge effort of the imagination.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

This imagination, like all good right-brain activity, must then be firmly and thoroughly worked through the left brain, disciplined by the rigorous historical and textual analysis for which the discipline of biblical studies has rightly become famous. But, by itself, the left brain will produce, and has often produced, a discipline full of facts but without meaning, high on analysis and low on reconstruction, good at categories and weak on the kingdom…

Full Lecture (text):
https://cruciality.files.wordpress.com/2011/11/wright-imagining-the-kingdom-mission-and-theology-in-early-christianity.pdf [PDF]

Living Well in the Light of Death - NT Wright and Shelly Kagan at Yale

The Veritas Forum at the University of Yale (2014)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=c4uEEpd3vEc [Video] Includes talking about Epicurean philosophy of death

NOTE: For more N.T. Wright discussing issues related to Heaven and life after death, as well as covering related topics and including different perspectives - see my separate "Reference Notes on Heaven" (based in part on the book, Heaven, by Randy Alcorn)

Tom Wright on How (not) to Read the Gospels (2012)

http://www.patheos.com/blogs/jesuscreed/2012/04/11/tom-wright-on-how-not-to-read-the-gospels/

Quote by N.T. Wright: Worship vs Theology

"Put it this way: if your idea of God, if your idea of the salvation offered in Christ, is vague or remote, your idea of worship will be fuzzy and ill-formed. The closer you get to the truth, the clearer becomes the beauty, and the more you will find worship welling up within you. That's why theology and worship belong together. The one isn't just a headtrip; the other isn't just emotion."
— N.T. Wright, For All God's Worth: True Worship and the Calling of the Church

See also:* N.T. Wright Quotes

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

NT Wright: QandA's (September 2004) [Recommended]
http://ntwrightpage.com/2016/04/25/wrightsaid-qa-september-2004/

Question:
When did you change your mind on the PISTIS CHRISTOU debate, and what was the deciding factor in the change?

Answer:
I don't know when it was but I would guess some time in the mid-1980s. I suspect getting to know Richard Hays and his work was a factor in it, though I hasten to add that the fact that RH and I became good friends in the early 1980s has not prevented us going on seeing some things quite differently, so I wouldn't have changed just to agree with him! The main factor was my grasp of Romans 3.1ff. in terms of God requiring faithfulness from Israel for the covenant to function. Again, see the commentary. This does not make me think that ALL possible references MUST go the same way, but it's a strong push.

Question:
How do you understand James 2:14ff? What does James mean when he says we are justified by works? How do you reconcile James to Paul's teaching on justification by faith, and the Protestant tradition of sola fide? Are works instrumental in justification in some way?

Answer:
What James means by 'works' are clearly the living fruit of a lively faith; he does not mean 'the works which mark out Jews from Gentiles' (see above!). What he means by 'faith' is clearly 'the bare Jewish confession of monotheism', not the lively faith of which Paul speaks. What he means by 'justify' is the ultimate justification of which Paul too speaks in e.g. Romans 2.1-16, the future verdict delivered on the basis of the whole life led. Too many people forget that that remains basic for Paul; Paul's 'justification by faith' is all about the future verdict being brought forward into the present. That isn't what James is talking about.

Question:
IN NTPG (New Testament and the People of God), p. 461, the last paragraph, you said:

> The forth and final aspect of Christian hope is the expectation of the return of Jesus. It is vital to stress both that most of the texts normally drawn on in this connection have nothing to do with the case, and that there are several others which still bear on it directly. Following our exposition in chapter 10, it should be clear that texts which speak of the "coming of the son of man on a cloud" have as their obvious first-century meaning the prediction of vindication for the true Israel.

According to what you wrote in other places, 1 Thess 4:15 – 17 and 1 Cor 15:51-52 are among "several others which still bear on it directly".

Paul uses "we" in 1 Thess 4:15-17. The obvious referent of this pronoun in this context seems to be his readers and himself. When Paul said "we who are alive, who are left until the coming of the Lord", it seems that he did not think of the possibility that none of his readers and himself would be alive until THN PAROUSIA TOU KYRIOU.

So, how does Paul's "we" language does not suggest that "the Lord's return itself must happen within a generation" (p. 463, NTPG)? Similarly Paul said in 1 Cor 15:51-52, "We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed". The obvious referent of this "we" here is also his readers and himself. So, how can "we shall not all sleep… at the last trumpet" not imply that some of his readers and himself would not sleep at the last trumpet?

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Answer:
From Paul's point of view, of course the return of Jesus might have occurred at any time, therefore it could be tomorrow — or today — and he and his readers might still be alive. But by Philippians he has faced the possibility that he may well die first (though he still thinks he may not), and by 2 Corinthians he has concluded that he probably will die first. Certainly from his perspective it remains a clear possibility that some of them will still be alive. But nothing in his theology hinges on that as a prediction which would then be falsified by subsequent generations of church history.

Chuck Colson on N.T. Wright on the "Echoes of a Voice" that are all around us...
http://www.ransom-road.com/2011/12/chuck-colson-on-nt-wright-on-the-echoes.html

The Possibilities and Perils in Being a Really Smart Bishop (R.J. Neuhaus / Catholic)
https://www.firstthings.com/article/2008/04/the-possibilities-and-perils-in-being-a-really-smart-bishop

N.T. Wright Responds to Richard John Neuhaus (re: Surprised by Hope criticisms)
https://www.firstthings.com/article/2008/06/nt-wright-responds-to-richard-john-neuhaus

Another Review of Surprised by Hope ("Tom Wright on Christian Hope") …
https://theprogressiveprophet.wordpress.com/2008/08/19/tom-wright-on-christian-hope/

For Heaven's Sake: A Review of N. T. Wright's Surprised by Hope (2009) [Mormon] https://rsc.byu.edu/archived/volume-10-number-3-2009/heaven-s-sake-review-n-t-wright-s-surprised-hope http://scholarsarchive.byu.edu/cgi/viewcontent.cgi?article=1420&context=re [PDF]

Book Review: Surprised by Hope by Tom Wright (The Evangelical Liberal) https://evangelicaliberal.wordpress.com/2011/05/02/books-surprised-by-hope-by-tom-wright/

Rethinking Heaven: An Overview Of NT Wright's Book "Surprised By Hope" (2008)
http://igracemusic.com/rufsermons/Rethinking%20Heaven.pdf [PDF]

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Review of N.T. Wright's Surprised by Hope

Part I: http://www.21stcr.org/multimedia-2011/1-articles/bb-surprised_by_hope.html

Excerpts:

From the front flap of the book: "For years Christians have been asking, 'If you died tonight, do you know where you would go?' It turns out that many believers have been giving the wrong answer. It is not heaven." This statement describing N.T. Wright's thinking and teaching should be a real challenge to all believers. (I agree with the bishop that the popular answer is wrong, but is not the question also wrong?) Wright is the Church of England Bishop of Durham and one of the world's foremost biblical scholars and a prolific and well-read author.

…

Wright has found that "most people simply don't know what orthodox Christian belief is" and that they "have little or no idea what the word resurrection actually means or why Christians say they believe it." This book is an attempt to answer the question about what the ultimate Christian hope is. He gives many and varied examples of popular ignorance on this subject, both within and outside the church, and speaks eloquently of the Christian confusion about hope. Of Canon Henry Scott Holland's sermons used at funerals (which thousands request), Wright wonders at the "extraordinary denial that is going on when this is done. It amounts to a resolute refusal to tell the truth about the real and savage break, the horrible denial of the goodness of human life, that every death involves... It offers hollow comfort. By itself, without comment, it simply tells lies. It is not even a parody of Christian hope. Instead, it simply denies that there is any problem, any need for hope in the first place" (emphasis mine). The importance of this is seen in the contrast of these views: for Scott Holland there is nothing to be conquered, but for John Donne (former Dean of St. Paul's) death was an enemy. Note well that for the Christian it is a *beaten e*nemy. "In line with much classic Christian thought, Donne sees life after death in two stages: first, a short sleep, then an eternal waking. And death shall be no more. Donne grasped what we shall discover to be the central New Testament belief: that at the last, death will be not simply redefined but defeated." Wright explains that if immortal souls leave their immortal bodies, death still rules.

Wright's insistence on belief in resurrection contrasts starkly with popular teaching: "Current orthodox Christianity no longer holds to the belief in physical resurrection, preferring the concept of the eternal existence of the soul" (Death and the Afterlife, Brian Innes). Wright sums up: "Let us be quite clear. If this is true, then death is not conquered but redescribed." He is adept at pointing out erroneous lines of hymns and how they form our belief systems and he urges us to be clear about the two poles represented: one presents death as a friend coming to take us to a better place, the other as an enemy which can and will be defeated.

"Many Christians grow up assuming that whenever the New Testament speaks of heaven it refers to the place to which the saved will go after death. In Matthew's gospel, Jesus' sayings in the other gospels about the 'kingdom of God' are rendered as 'kingdom of heaven,' so they have their assumptions confirmed and suppose that he is indeed talking about how to go to heaven when you die, which is certainly not what either Jesus or Matthew had in mind. Many mental pictures have grown up around this and are now assumed to be what the Bible teaches or what Christians believe."

"But the language of heaven in the New Testament doesn't work that way. God's kingdom in the preaching of Jesus refers not to postmortem destiny, not to our escape from this world into another one, but to God's sovereign rule coming 'on earth as it is in heaven.' The roots of the misunderstanding go very deep, not least into the residual Platonism that has infected whole swaths of Christian thinking and has misled people into supposing that Christians are meant to devalue this present world and our present bodies and regard them as shabby or shameful." Could Wright be any stronger? He has said that what is commonly believed among Christians — that we possess immortal souls which go on a journey to heaven or to hell at death — has no warrant in Scripture. I was amazed at Wright's strength of feeling and his boldness in charging the church with confusion, distortion and wrong rendering of Scripture.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

"Resurrection itself has not disappeared entirely, but again and again it is pushed to the margins, and the underlying story told in the service about the recently deceased is not (as it would be were it in line with the New Testament) about their resting peacefully in anticipation of the final renewal of all things but about their going on a journey to end up in 'God's kingdom.' One could put it like this: if someone came to these funeral services with no idea of the classic Jewish and Christian teaching on the subject, the funeral services would do little to enlighten them and plenty to mislead them or confirm them in their existing muddle. I hope that those who take seriously the argument of the present book will examine the current practice of the church, from its official liturgies to all the unofficial bits and pieces that surround them, and try to discover fresh ways of expressing, embodying, and teaching what the New Testament actually teaches rather than the mangled, half-understood, and vaguely held theories and opinions we are meeting...Frankly, what we have at the moment isn't, as the old liturgies used to say, 'the sure and certain hope of the resurrection of the dead' but the vague and fuzzy optimism that somehow things may work out in the end."…

…

To the question "Do we have immortal souls?" Wright answers: "Again, much Christian and sub-Christian tradition has assumed that we all do indeed have souls that need saving and that the soul, if saved, will be the part of us that goes to heaven when we die. All this, however, finds minimal support in the New Testament, including the teaching of Jesus, where the word soul, though rare, reflects when it does occur underlying Hebrew or Aramaic words referring not to a disembodied entity hidden within the outer shell of the disposable body but rather to what we would call the whole person or personality, seen as being confronted by God. As to immortality, 1 Timothy 6:16 declares that only God himself has immortality, and 2 Timothy 1:10 declares that immortality has only come to light, and hence is presumably only available, through the gospel. In other words, the idea that every human possesses an immortal soul, which is the 'real' part of them, finds little support in the Bible." Remember that this is a British gentleman speaking and therefore when he says "little support" we could translate this into American English as "none whatsoever."

A central point for Wright is to answer the question of what in Scripture the ultimate hope is — for Christians and indeed for the whole world. What does hope look like? Unfortunately, a startling difference emerges when we compare today's universal and popular view of hope with what was held by early Christians. To them "Resurrection meant bodies. We cannot emphasize this too strongly, not least because much modern writing continues, most misleadingly, to use the word resurrection as a virtual synonym for life after death in the popular sense." He adds, "When the early Christians said that Jesus had risen from the dead, they knew they were saying that something had happened to him that had happened to nobody else and that nobody expected to happen. They were not talking about Jesus' soul going into heavenly bliss."

The Bishop emphasizes this point: "Only in the late second century, a good 150 years after the time of Jesus, do we find people using the word resurrection to mean something quite different from what it meant in Judaism and early Christianity, namely, a spiritual experience in the present leading to a disembodied hope in the future." Wright regards this as a mutation of the faith, and finds the fact that resurrection loses its primacy in importance to be a second mutation, both changing the nature of the faith as it was once held. He regards the loss as so great as to be responsible for the loss of the entire New Testament, i.e. take away one and you have taken away the other.

This is a very interesting point. We are speaking of a change in the meaning of a word being responsible for a loss of the faith. It appears that when we attempt to modify or redescribe or spiritualize or in any other way reduce the impact of an event, we can be guilty of grave error. Wright writes masterly about this: "Death is the last weapon of the tyrant, and the point of the resurrection, despite much misunderstanding, is that death has been defeated. Resurrection is not the redescription of death; it is its overthrow and, with that, the overthrow of those whose power depends on it." He points out that historically belief in the resurrection empowered many to endure very great suffering. The ones who escaped persecution were the Gnostics who had altered the meaning of the resurrection into a private spirituality, the very opposite of the original meaning. (And this very idea about one's own private spiritual resurrection is indeed what we hear preached at very many funerals today.) Wright says that "Resurrection in the first century meant someone physically, thoroughly dead becoming physically, thoroughly alive again, not simply surviving or entering a 'purely spiritual' world, whatever that might be. Resurrection therefore necessarily impinges on the public world."

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Bishop Wright reveals to us why he was surprised by hope: "And this is the point where believing in the resurrection of Jesus suddenly ceases to be a matter of inquiring about an odd event in the first century and becomes a matter of rediscovering hope in the twenty-first century. Hope is what you get when you suddenly realize that a different worldview is possible, a worldview in which the rich, the powerful, and the unscrupulous do not after all have the last word." Pardon my sarcasm when I say that upon investigating the Scriptures, of course one is surprised — because the church does not teach these things! (i.e that the Kingdom of God is our future hope and that the Kingdom of Heaven is a synonym for Kingdom of God and that it will be revealed on the earth.)

One of Wright's most valuable points is, I think, his emphasis on the larger picture — the future world renewed and restored, the Kingdom of God, heaven on earth, and of course Jesus' resurrection which paved the way for our own. With the exception of money, has anything else been more sought for than the fountain of youth, eternity, an undying nature? And yet that very immortality is what is being offered.

Wright's take: "In the last two hundred years Western thought has overemphasized the individual at the expense of the larger picture of God's creation. What is more, in much Western piety, at least since the Middle Ages, the influence of Greek philosophy has been very marked, resulting in a future expectation that bears far more resemblance to Plato's vision of souls entering into disembodied bliss than to the biblical picture of new heavens and new earth…Plato remains the most influential thinker in the history of the Western world. For Plato, the present world of space, time, and matter is a world of illusion, of flickering shadows in a cave, and the most appropriate human task is to get in touch with the true reality, which is beyond space, time and matter...The Platonic strain entered Christian thinking early on, not least with the phenomenon known as Gnosticism." (Gnostics believed that the material world is evil and the aim is therefore to do away with our material selves.)

Here is Wright's enlightening remark: "The discovery of the Nag Hammadi scrolls...has in our day fueled a desire to reinterpret Christianity itself in terms of a supposedly original Gnostic spirituality that contrasts sharply with the concrete kingdom-of-God-on-Earth announced by the Jesus of the canonical gospels." The following summary of the state of things certainly got my attention: "Most Western Christians — and most Western non-Christians for that matter — in fact suppose that Christianity was committed to at least a soft version of Plato's position. A good many Christian hymns and poems wander off unthinkingly in the direction of Gnosticism. The 'just passing through' spirituality...encourages precisely a Gnostic attitude: the created world is at best irrelevant, at worst a dark, evil, gloomy place, and we immortal souls, who existed in a different sphere, are looking forward to returning to it as soon as we're allowed to. A massive assumption has been made in Western Christianity that the purpose of being a Christian is simply, or at least mainly, to 'go to heaven when you die,' and texts that don't say that but mention heaven are read as if they did say it, and texts that say the opposite, like Romans 8:18-25 and Rev. 21-22, are simply screened out as if they didn't exist."…

Part II: http://www.21stcr.org/multimedia-2011/1-articles/bb-surprised_by_hope%20-%20pt%202.html

Excerpts:

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Professor Wright finds that there is confusion about what Christians are supposed to believe with reference to the redemption of our bodies. He sums this up: "This is all the more curious in that the New Testament itself, which most churches officially regard as their primary doctrinal source, is crystal clear on the matter. In a classic passage, Paul speaks of 'the redemption of our bodies' (Rom. 8:23). There is no room for doubt as to what he means: God's people are promised a new type of bodily existence, the fulfillment and redemption of our present bodily life. The rest of the early Christian writings, where they address the subject, are completely in tune with this...This expression of hope — hope for the resurrection of the body — was, however, so out of tune with several of the prevailing moods of Christian thought down the years that it became muzzled and distorted and then not even known" (emphasis mine).

Another surprise awaits (I think!). "What does Jesus mean when he declares that there are 'many dwelling places' in his father's house? This has regularly been taken, not least when used in the context of bereavement, to mean that the dead (or at least dead Christians) will simply go to heaven permanently rather than being raised again subsequently to new bodily life. But the word for 'dwelling places' here, monai, is regularly used in ancient Greek not for a final resting place but for a temporary halt on a journey that will take you somewhere else in the long run." Professor Wright has here invented a new phrase and a new belief system — life after life after death. Wright is unsure as to the nature of existence in this intermediate state.

…

Wright makes a valid and interesting point in saying that Westerners "have been buying our mental furniture for so long in Plato's factory" that we have come to assume that "the only way to be permanent, unchanging, and immortal is to become nonphysical." Plato has done quite a number on us with his legacy of matter being evil, contrasted with spirit which is seen as good, and Wright counters with Paul's contention that we must all appear before the judgment seat and for that we shall need bodies. Can anyone imagine this scene without a body? With reference to Paul's declaration that "flesh and blood cannot inherit God's kingdom" Wright comments: "He doesn't mean that physicality will be abolished. 'Flesh and blood' is a technical term for that which is corruptible, transient, heading for death. The contrast, again, is not between what we call physical and what we call nonphysical but between corruptible physicality, on the one hand, and incorruptible physicality, on the other."

The following is very enlightening and could well provide understanding for an "Aha!" moment which is so valuable: "Once again our language gets us into trouble. The word immortality is often used to mean 'disembodied immortality,' and it is sometimes then used in sharp contrast with resurrection. As a result, we easily forget Paul's point about the resurrection body. It will be a body, but it will not be subject to mortality. An 'immortal body' is something most people find so strange that they don't even pause to wonder if that's what Paul and the other early Christians were talking about. But it is. There is a world of difference between this belief and a belief in an 'immortal soul.' Platonists believe that all humans have an immortal element within them, normally referred to as 'soul.'"

There is an amazing quotation by Justin Martyr which confirms this. Writing in the second century, he said, "If you have fallen in with some who are called Christians...who say that there is no resurrection of the dead, and that their souls when they die are taken to heaven: do not imagine that they are Christians" (Dialogue with Trypho, ch. 80). One can hear the passion and the cry from the heart in this statement and in Wright's: "The use of the word heaven to denote the ultimate goal of the redeemed, though of course hugely popularized...is severely misleading and does not begin to do justice to the Christian hope. I am repeatedly frustrated by how hard it is to get this point through the thick wall of traditional thought and language that most Christians put up. The ultimate destination is (once more) not going to heaven when you die but being bodily raised into the transformed, glorious likeness of Jesus Christ." It is certain that the New Testament scholar J.A.T. Robinson saw this as well as he said, "'Heaven' is never in fact used in the Bible for the destination of the dying."…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

N.T. Wright: Farewell to the Rapture (2001)

http://itsinthetext.blogspot.com/2013/03/farewell-to-rapture-nt-wright_4.html

Original text: http://ntwrightpage.com/2016/07/12/farewell-to-the-rapture/

See also: The Rapture, including N.T. Wright's View on the Rapture (includes videos by Wright)

Premillennial, Amillennial, Postmillennial (includes info. on the rapture)

The Kingdom of God with the Rt Revd Dr Tom Wright (2015)

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=rLiy-WlS9mA [Video]

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Church – N.T. Wright: Believing and Belonging, Simply Christian (2006)

http://ntwrightpage.com/2016/04/04/believing-and-belonging/

Excerpt:

The river and the tree appear to be opposites.

> The river begins, quite literally, all over the place. A tiny spring way up in the hills; a distant lake, itself fed by streams; a melting glacier—all of them and a thousand more contribute to the babble and rush of water, the smooth flow here and the swirling rapids there. Gradually other streams, other whole rivers, make their contribution. Out of many there emerges the one. I lived for a time by the banks of the Ottawa River in Canada, just upstream from where it joins the St. Lawrence. It is, at that point, over a mile wide. Many streams have made it what it is.
>
> The tree begins with a single seed. An acorn or its equivalent falls into the earth: tiny, vulnerable, alone. It germinates and puts out roots down into the dark earth. Simultaneously it sends up a shoot into the light and air. The roots quickly diverge and probe all over the place, looking for nourishment and water. The shoot becomes a trunk, again a single upright stalk, but this, too, quickly diverges. An oak or a cedar will spread far and wide in all directions. Even the tall, narrow poplar is far more than just a single trunk. The river flows from many into one; the tree grows from one into many.

We need both images if we are to understand the church.

The church is like a river. In the last book of the Bible, John the visionary sees a huge throng of people from every nation, kindred, tribe, and tongue coming together in a great chorus of praise. Like the river, they all started in different places, but they have now brought their different streams into a single flow. The image of the river reminds us forcibly that, though the church consists by definition of people from the "widest possible variety of backgrounds, part of the point of it all is that they belong to one another, and are meant to be part of the same powerful flow, going now in the same single direction. Diversity gives "way to unity.

But at the same time the church is like a tree. The single seed, Jesus himself, has been sown in the dark earth and has produced an amazing plant. Branches have set off in all directions, some pointing almost directly upward, some reaching down to the earth, some heading out over neighboring walls. Looking at the eager, out-stretched branches, you'd hardly know they were all from the same stem. But they are. Unity generates diversity.

These images shouldn't be pressed too far. In the final chapter of the Bible, where river and trees come together as part of the extraordinary picture of the New Jerusalem, the river comes from a single source, and the trees all bear leaves with the same healing power. But this double image nonetheless helps us understand something of what Christians mean by the church—the people of God, the Body of Christ, the Bride of Christ, God's household, the motley collection of people who gather periodically in the shabby building up the road. What is the church? Who belongs to it, and how? Equally to the point, what is the church for?

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

NT Wright Talks Jesus and the scholars who discuss him (2016) [Recommended]

https://homebrewedchristianity.com/2016/06/30/nt-wright-talks-jesus-and-the-scholars-who-discuss-him/(Links to Home Brewed Christianity Audio Podcast and corresponding Video)

This #BarrelAged episode was NT Wright's first visit to the podcast.

Chad and Tripp begin by playing a theological name game, where Bishop Tom talks about:

- Bart Ehrman
- John Sheldy Spong
- Luke Timothy Johnson
- Marcus Borg
- John Dominic Crossan
- Jurgen Moltmann
- E.P. Sanders
- Richard Hays (also mentions about Barth, Post-Liberal Theology, Lindbeck, historical scholarship)
- Stanley Hauerwas (mentions virtue ethics)

later they also mention: Richard Cisik; Buddhism; modernity/postmodernity; Plus: the important choice he made not to decide between being an academic or priest, and golf as an ecumenical exercise.

It is time for the DEVILPALOOZA! (2016)

https://homebrewedchristianity.com/2016/05/16/devilpalooza-n-t-wright-richard-beck-greg-boyd-tony-jones-and-duke/

This is a zesty episode of the podcast. Even the Duke of not-so-interesting media coverage couldn't ruin it. Heads up, our intro lasts a full twenty minute introduction. Then at the 21:00 mark the actual Devilapalooza begins with Tripp Fuller, Tony Jones and Luke Norsworthy. At 31:30 Richard Beck comes on the stage talking Reviving Old Scratch , N.T. Wright joins at 55:20, and at 1:19:12 Greg Boyd gets on the mic. If you are really desperate for more go the intro, Luke and Tripp finish at 1:46:53,

Now it is time to nerd out!

Direct Video Link: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=iAwsBFBRGT4&feature=youtu.be [Recommended] if nothing else than to enjoy the lightening quick banter, but it touches on a range of topics, philosophies and people.

Note: First half hour Tripp and Tony starting off, then Luke Norsworthy joining in on an interview of Richard Beck, author of the book, Reviving Old Scratch: Demons and the Devil for Doubters and the Disenchanted. For a critique of book: "Wink at the Devil": https://joshuamcnall.com/tag/richard-beck/re: the term "Old Scratch": http://experimentaltheology.blogspot.com/2012/09/old-scratch.html

[Note: Wright is on show because of his connection with publisher, Fortress Press, and Tony (employee) and Trip (book author)]

For more HomeBrewedChristianity broadcasts with N.T. Wright:
https://homebrewedchristianity.com/?s=wright

FYI: THE EMERGING CHURCH AND PROGRESSIVE CHRISTIAN THEOLOGY AFTER GOOGLE (2010)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

What did it mean to call Jesus "God"? re:NT Wright's, Paul and the Faithfulness of God
http://www.patheos.com/blogs/jesuscreed/2013/11/05/what-did-it-mean-to-call-jesus-god-nt-wright/

What happened on the cross? NT Wright & Thomas Schreiner (2016) [Unbelievable Radio]
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=loat_y8SQBo [Audio] [Recommended]

NT (Tom) Wright's book "The Day the Revolution Began: Reconsidering the meaning of Jesus' crucifixion" says that the cross was about much more than Jesus absolving us of sin. He discusses atonement theology, God's wrath and penal substitution with reformed Bible scholar Thomas Schreiner. It's also the 500th podcast episode of the show [Unbelievable]!

Direct link to podcast page:
https://www.premierchristianradio.com/Shows/Saturday/Unbelievable/Episodes/NT-Wright-on-Paul-Hell-Satan-Creation-Adam-Eve-more-Unbelievable

Direct (alternate) link to podcast mp3 file:
http://cdnbakmi.kaltura.com/p/618072/sp/61807200/serveFlavor/entryId/1_du0h3j9o/v/1/flavorId/1_5reehb9y/name/a.mp3

Note: Originally prodcast on 11/12/16 just after the U.S.A. elections, so you will hear references to that during the audio.

Christians Wrong About Heaven, Says Bishop (2008)
http://content.time.com/time/printout/0,8816,1710844,00.html (Printable version)

http://content.time.com/time/world/article/0,8599,1710844,00.html

Continued…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Why Is Hell Not Talked About? NT Wright to Pope Benedict XVI's question

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=ka2AAKgIRSM [Video] (2008)

What Is Hell Like? Does It Even Exist? NT Wright on 100 Huntley Street

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=vggzqXzEvZ0 [Video] (2008)

Transcript: "The word hell has had a checkered career in the history of the church. And it wasn't hugely important in the early days. It was important, but not nearly as important as it became in the middle ages. And the in the middle ages, you get this polarization of heaven over here and hell over there, and you have to go to one place or the other eventually. So you have the Sistine Chapel, with that great thing behind the altar. This enormous great judgment seat, with the souls going off into these different directions. Very interestingly, I was sitting in the Sistine chapel just a few weeks ago. I was sitting for a service, and I was sitting next to a Greek Orthodox...who said to me, looking at the pictures of Jesus on one wall. He said, these I can understand. The pictures of Moses on the other wall, he said, those I can understand. Then he pointed at the end wall of judgment, and said, that I cannot understand. That's how you in the west have talked about judgment and heaven and hell. He said, we have never done it that way before, because the bible doesn't do it that way. I thought, whoops. I think he's right actually. And whether you're Catholic or Protestant, that scenario which is etched into the consciousness of Western Christianity really has to be shaken about a bit. Because if heaven and earth are to join together. It's not a matter of leaving earth and going to heaven. Its heaven and earth joined together. And hell is what happens when human beings say, the God in whose image they were made, we don't want to worship you. We don't want our human life to be shaped by you. We don't want, who we are as humans to be transformed by the love of Jesus dying and rising for us. We don't want any of that. We want to stay as we are and do our own thing. And if you do that, what you're saying is, you want to stop being image bearing human being within this good world that God has made. And you are colluding with your own progressive dehumanization. And that is such a shocking and horrible thing, that it's not surprising that the biblical writers and others have used very vivid and terrifying language about it. But, people have picked that up and said, this is a literal description of reality. Somewhere down there, there is a lake of fire, and it's got worms in it and it's got serpents and demons and there coming to get you. But I think actually, the reality is more sober and sad than that, which is this progressive shrinking of human life. And that happens during this life, but it seems to be that if someone resolutely says to God, I'm not going to worship you...it's not just Ill not come to church. It's a matter of deep down somewhere, there is a rejection of the good creator God, then that it the choice humans make. In other words, I think the human choices in this life really matter. We're not just playing a game of chess where tomorrow morning God will put the pieces back on the board and say, Ok that was just a game. Now were doing something different. The choices we make here really do matter. There's part of me that would love to be a Universalist, and say, it'll be alright. Everyone will get there in the end. I actually think the choices you make in the present are more important than that."

What Will We Do In Heaven? NT Wright on 100 Huntley Street (2008)

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=HIUc4Kng1SQ [Video]

Transcript: "It's not entirely clear. But one thing is clear. And that is that those who belong to Jesus Christ in the present will actually, and I hesitate to say this because it sounds arrogant or triumphatalistic, but it's what the new testament says, Those who belong to Jesus Christ will be running the new world, as Gods stewards. But take away all the sting of the idea of running things as being wicked bosses or forcing everybody to do this or that. Because the model of leadership and of ruling which is there, is that of Jesus himself. That of the gentle shepherd. That of the steward. Is that of the one who says, if anyone wants to be great they must be your servant? So, again and again, in Paul, in Revelation, and elsewhere, there is this sense that if you have learned in this life to look after the bit of the world that God has given you, which might be your own body, your family, might be business, a church, whatever. Then this is preparing you to help God look after his new creation. And that's awesome. I don't think I've ever heard a sermon on that. But it is right there in the texts. And one of the loveliest lines of the text right at the end of the bible, it says, that out of the New Jerusalem, there flows a river and the river has trees on either side of it. And the leaves of the tree are for the healing of the nations. So there is a project of healing in Gods new world. What that means I really have very little idea. But it sounds full of hope and possibility."

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Rethinking Life After Death (NT Wright) (2012)

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=rZC6tbgpsl4 [Video]

What is Purgatory? NT Wright on 100 Huntley Street (2008)

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Qoo7rGhfsMw [Video]

Transcript: "Purgatory is different because, purgatory in traditional catholic theology was always a gloomy, dark strange place. Today, people sometimes talk about it, in terms of, well actually, purgatory is where the love of God finally heals us of all our problems, etc. In biblical theology, it is death itself that finishes off that which needs to be finished off. So that after death, there is nothing more that needs to be sorted out and finished off. What you're left with after death, if you're a Christian, baptized, indwelt by the Spirit, what you're left with then is the real you. Or however you want to describe it as a soul or whatever. But waiting to be complete by being given a new body. I think actually that purgatory is a good metaphor for being a Christian in the present is. That is, a struggle to be holy. A struggle to finish off what's still bad about us. The suffering that goes with that, with the world as we know it. That's why Dante's purgatory is the most popular of his trilogy because we know that place. That's where we live."

What Is The "Paradise" Jesus Speaks Of On The Cross? NT Wright on 100 Huntley Street (2008)

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=wpObupLv2IA

Transcript: "Paradise is an ancient Persian word that means, Garden. A lovely beautiful garden. And it's a word that was in common use at the time to mean a place of rest and refreshment and delight. But it's not the ultimate destination. And you can see that from Luke's gospel already. Jesus says, "Today, you will be with me in paradise." Now wait a minute, that's Good Friday. Is that the end of the story for Jesus? No it isn't. 3 days later, Easter day, Jesus is raised from the dead. He's the beginning of Gods new world. But in the meantime, he has been in this resting place in paradise. Now that gets complicated, because the Bible also says, that Jesus went to Hades, to preach to the spirits in prison. Which is a very strange passage. But the clear thing is that, paradise is the temporary, beautiful, blissful place, before the final moment."

NOTE: For issues related to Heaven and life after death, as well as covering related topics and including different perspectives - see my separate "Reference Notes on Heaven"

Continued…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Paul's References to Hell in the Bible

http://www.pilkingtonandsons.com/art_paulsteachingonhell.htm

Excerpt:

What follows here in this article is a complete listing of every occurrence of Paul's usage of the word hell. We shall list all of his teachings regarding hell as recorded by Luke in the Book of Acts, as well as himself in all of his epistles (Romans through Philemon).

Paul's Usage of the word Hell in the Book of Acts	Paul's Usage of the word Hell in His Epistles

Are you surprised to see empty columns?

Did you ever stop to consider that Paul, our Apostle, never once used the word hell?

He didn't use the word hell in any recorded messages from the Book of Acts. He didn't use the word hell in any of his epistles. Not once! None! Zero!

…

Consider for a moment this declaration of Paul himself, found in the Book of Acts:

> "Wherefore I take you to record this day, that I am pure from the blood of all men. For I have not shunned to declare unto you all the counsel of God" (Acts 20:26,27*).*

The plain and simple fact is that Paul was NOT negligent in his teaching ministry. Here is a passage that makes this clear. Paul said that he was "pure from the blood of all men," because he had declared "all the counsel of God" – a counsel which obviously DID NOT include hell at all.

Then did he say anything related to "hell"? …continued…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

What did the Apostle Paul teach about Hell?

http://christianworldviewpress.com/what-did-the-apostle-paul-teach-about-hell/

Excerpt:

Last week, I wrote about the teachings of Jesus on the eternal destination of those who will reject him. Jesus taught about the reality of hell, and that it will last forever. In this article, I will answer the question, "What did the Apostle Paul teach about Hell?"

The first thing that is interesting about Paul's letters is that he never uses the Greek words that are translated "hell." Even so, he does teach about the fate of those who reject Jesus Christ. He never gets into a lengthy discussion of it, but does make some very important remarks about the unbeliever and his or her final destination.

Condemnation and the Wrath of God

The first thing to note about Paul's teaching on the fate of the wicked is that he says that these people are condemned and will suffer God's wrath. 2 Thessalonians 2:12 says that "all will be condemned who have not believed the truth but have delighted in wickedness." Notice that Paul says that those who are condemned are those who do not believe the truth. "Truth" in Paul's thinking is believing in Jesus Christ.

Paul describes God's action against unbelievers with the word "wrath." Romans 2:5, 8 says, "But because of your stubbornness and your unrepentant heart, you are storing up wrath against yourself for the day of God's wrath, when his righteous judgment will be revealed…But for those who are self-seeking and who reject the truth and follow evil, there will be wrath and anger."

Paul is clear that those who are stubborn, unrepentant of their sins, and who reject the Lord will be objects of God's wrath on the Day of Judgment. Colossians 3:6 explains this further when Paul says that God's wrath is coming because of things such as lust, idolatry, greed, sexual immorality, and other evil deeds.

However, Paul doesn't just give us the fate of the wicked. He teaches that those who believe in Jesus Christ are not to be recipients of God's wrath (Romans 5:9; 1 Thessalonians 1:10; 5:9), showing his audience that there is a way to avoid the coming judgment: believe in Jesus Christ.

Eternally Condemned and Trouble

Paul wrote the letter to the Galatian church to combat false teaching. He opposed the false teaching so strongly that he said, "But even if we or an angel from heaven should preach a gospel other than the one we preached to you, let him be eternally condemned! As we have already said, so now I say again: If anybody is preaching to you a gospel other than what you accepted, let him be eternally condemned!" (Galatians 1:8-9). Paul goes as far to say that anyone who teaches something that is different from the gospel of Jesus Christ (a person or even an angel) will be condemned to damnation forever.

Paul continues his teaching of hell when he says in Romans 2:9, "There will be trouble and distress for every human being who does evil." Clearly, the afterlife is in view since, in our current world, those who do evil don't always experience trouble and distress. The righteous are typically persecuted and go through tribulation (tribulation means trouble). Paul is teaching that those who reject God and do evil will experience trouble and distress in the next life.

Destruction and Separation from God

2 Thessalonians 1:8-10 is one of the most important passages about Paul's teaching on hell. These verses say, "He will punish those who do not know God and do not obey the gospel of our Lord Jesus. They will be punished with everlasting destruction and shut out from the presence of the Lord and from the majesty of his power on the day he comes to be glorified in his holy people and to be marveled at among those who have believed."

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The passage speaks about God punishing those who do not obey the gospel (believe in Jesus) with everlasting destruction. Paul then explains this by saying that the punishment is being "shut out from the presence of the Lord." "Paul elaborates the meaning of 'eternal destruction' with the idea of being separated from the presence of God."[1]

Paul teaches this idea elsewhere. Galatians 6:8 says, "The one who sows to please his sinful nature, from that nature will reap destruction; the one who sows to please the Spirit, from the Spirit will reap eternal life." Philippians 1:28 and 3:19 teach that non-Christians will be destroyed. 2 Thessalonians 2:10 says, "They perish because they refused to love the truth and so be saved."

These verses tell us a lot. First, the ungodly will be destroyed, but Christians will be given eternal life. Second, those who perish will do so because they refused to believe in Jesus Christ. However, these verses have fueled a debate on whether or not hell will last forever. Paul says that the wicked will be destroyed. Does this not imply that those in hell will be destroyed in a way that means they will cease to exist?

Most of the time when Paul describes the fate of the wicked as "destruction" he is using two Greek words or word groups.[2] These words do not absolutely have to be defined as meaning "destruction" in the sense that something is going "extinct." These terms often have another meaning: "the situation of a person or object that has lost the essence of its nature or function." In fact, these words can refer to land that has lost its fruitfulness (Ezekiel 6:14; 14:16); ointment that is wasted and used for no apparent purpose (Matthew 26:8; Mark 14:4); wineskins that have holes in them (Matthew 9:17; Mark 2:22; Luke 5:37); a coin that's useless because it is lost (Luke 15:9); or the entire world that "perishes" in the Flood (2 Peter 3:6). "In none of these cases do the objects cease to exist; they cease to be useful or to exist in their original, intended state."[3]

Bible scholar Charles Wanamaker notes that "destruction" in 2 Thessalonians 1:9 can be interpreted as a literal annihilation or as having a metaphorical meaning of punishment, not a literal destruction. He says, "As there is no evidence in Paul (or the rest of the NT for that matter) for a concept of final annihilation of the godless, the expression 'eternal destruction' should probably be taken in a metaphorical manner as indicating the severity of the punishment awaiting the enemies of God."[4]

Conclusion

Although Paul does not use the Greek words translated "hell," he does speak about the destination of those who reject Jesus. He teaches that those who go to hell will endure the wrath of God, become useless, be separated from God (the source of happiness and all that is good), and be distressed. This reality should motivate Christians to share the gospel with everyone that they know.

[1] Douglas J. Moo, "Paul on Hell." In Hell Under Fire eds. Christopher W. Morgan and Robert A. Peterson. Grand Rapids: Zondervan, 2004. Pg. 108.

[2] Olethros and apollymi / apoleia.

[3] Moo, 104-105.

[4] Charles A. Wanamaker, The Epistles to the Thessalonians: A Commentary on the Greek Text. Carlisle: William B. Eerdmans Publishing, 1990. Pg. 229.

2 Thessalonians 1:9—Will the wicked be annihilated or suffer conscious punishment forever?
http://defendinginerrancy.com/bible-solutions/2_Thessalonians_1.9.php

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Question: Did Jesus ever say anything about hell?

(I don't believe in hell myself. I believe God is a God of love and wouldn't send anyone to hell. I think preachers who talk about hell all the time are just trying to scare people into believing in their religion.)

https://billygraham.org/answer/did-jesus-ever-say-anything-about-hell-i-dont-believe-in-hell-myself/

Excerpt:

Yes, Jesus did talk about the reality of hell — in fact, He talked about it more than any other person in the Bible. He warned, “Do not be afraid of those who kill the body but cannot kill the soul. Rather, be afraid of the One who can destroy both soul and body in hell” (Matthew 10:28).

Did He say this simply to scare us? The reality of hell should frighten us, because not one word in the Bible about hell would ever make you want to go there — not if you take it seriously. The Bible speaks of hell as a place of absolute loneliness and despair and hopelessness. It calls it a place of “darkness, where there will be weeping and gnashing of teeth” (Matthew 22:13).

But Jesus didn’t talk about hell just to scare us. He talked about it instead because He wanted us to know that God has provided a way of escape! Listen: God doesn’t want you to be separated from Him forever. He loves you, and He wants you to spend eternity with Him in heaven. Unlike hell, heaven is a place of joy and peace and freedom from all the fears and pains of this world. Who wouldn’t want to go there?

Don’t gamble with your soul, and don’t turn your back on Jesus. Instead, by faith turn to Christ and commit your life to Him. He alone gives us hope — hope for today, and hope for eternity.

Jesus' Teaching on Hell (2007)

http://www.tentmaker.org/articles/jesusteachingonhell.html

What Did Jesus Say About Hell?

http://y-jesus.com/jesus-say-about-hell/

What does Jesus say about Hell?

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=GRqyW_XT42o [Video]

"Jesus Preach in Hell” in the KJV Bible

https://www.kingjamesbibleonline.org/search.php?q=jesus+preach+in+hell&page=21&bsec=&quote

What Did Jesus and the Bible Say About Hell

http://www.thehypertexts.com/Hell%20Bible%20Jesus.htm

Ephesians TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

NOTE: For issues and details related to Hell, Heaven and life after death, as well as covering related topics and including different perspectives (including N.T. Wright) - see my separate "Reference Notes on Heaven" (based in part on the book, Heaven, by Randy Alcorn)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Video clips of a discussion with Dr. Tod Bolsinger.

This is mainly a Q & A session at the Annual Pastors' Retreat for Los Ranchos Presbytery held at Serra Retreat Center in Malibu, CA. (2009)

N.T. Wright on Heaven 1 (2009)

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=LjElNncC-dg [Video] (Notes: also touches on the rapture, "Heaven is important, but it's not the end of the world", and more)

N.T. Wright on the Postmodern Movement 2 (2009)

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=4P3noKr2T1A [Video]

N.T. Wright on Satan and Evil 3 (2009)

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=JhrkB_55qaY [Video] (Note: also discussed in "Devilpalooza" video/audio - links above)

N.T. Wright on Debate about Homosexuality 4 (2009)

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=YpQHGPGejKs [Video]

Homosexuality: Why Does God Declare Homosexual Conduct Sinful? Part 2 (Romans 1) [references N.T. Wright] [Not related to above video nor retreat]
http://oneinjesus.info/2015/08/homosexuality-why-does-god-declare-homosexual-conduct-sinful-part-2/

NT Wright on homosexuality, science, gender https://religionnews.com/2014/06/03/nt-wright-homosexuality-science-gender/

FYI: Eric Metaxas - Responds to Australian "Anti-Gay" Accusations
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=6m9Jn6v5i6Y [Video] (also, read the comments)

N.T. Wright on Women in Ministry 5 (2009)

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=QaVVXleoAdU [Video]

(Bishop Wright advocates for the full participation of women in the life of the Church. Citing the examples of Junia as an apostle and Phoebe as a deacon in Romans 16, and the commissioning of Mary Magdelene as the first person to announce the resurrection of Jesus in John 20, he believes that the biblical evidence supporting women in leadership is overwhelming. Also, talks about 1 Corinthians 11 and 14)

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

N.T. Wright Q & A at Los Ranchos Presbytery Retreat (2009)

https://vimeo.com/12506419 [Video]

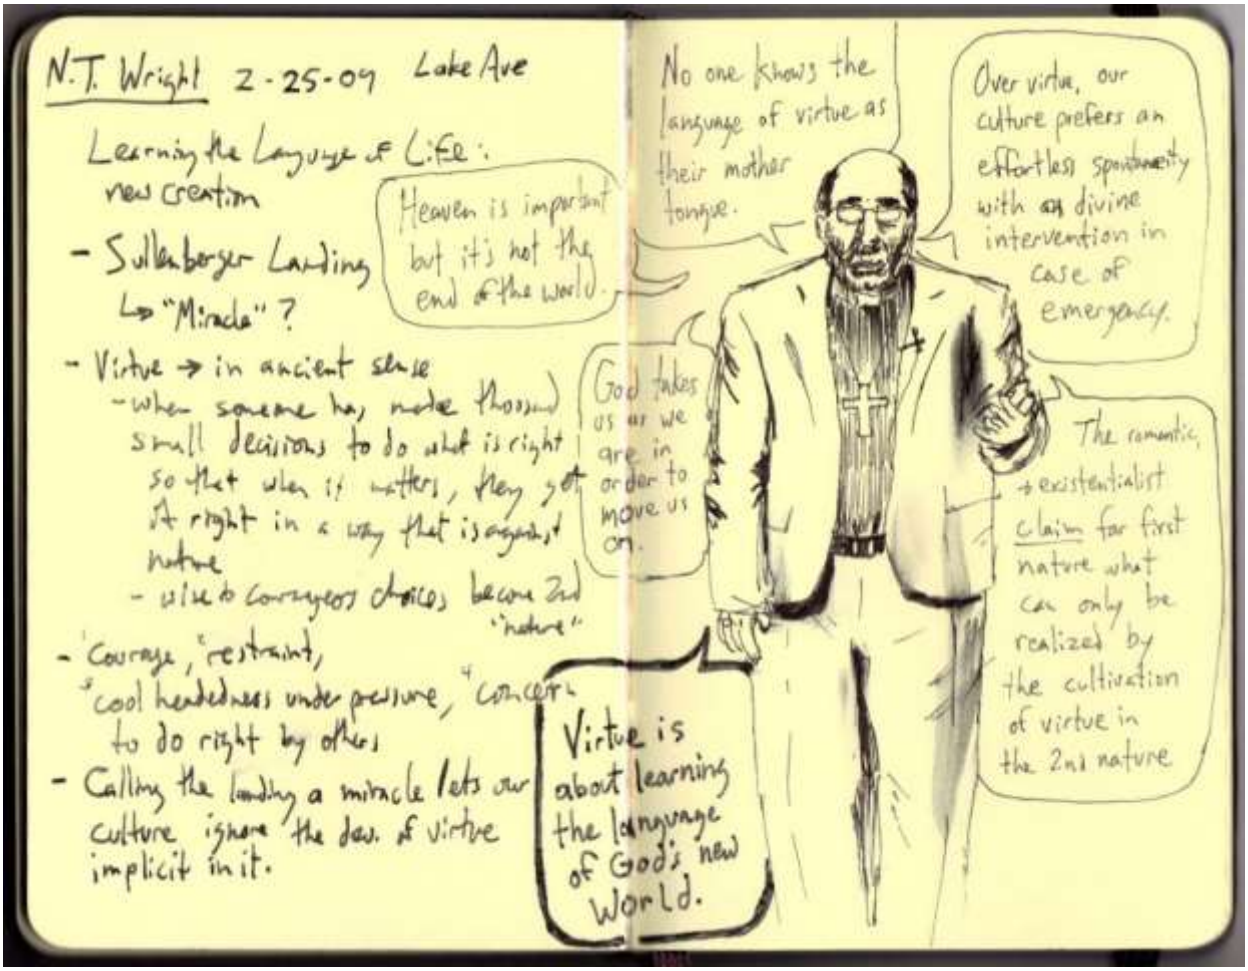
Wright succinctly answers a variety of challenging audience questions including one relating to "Paradise" in which he points out unless you are alive when Jesus returns, you will be changed "in the twinkling of an eye". Otherwise, there is an interim state. There are few details in the Bible about it. Jesus said (John 14:2) "In my father's house are many 'rooms' [KJV: mansions]". The Greek word is monai (plural). It is not a place you go forever and ever. It is a wayside inn where you go to be refreshed and rested before continuing the journey.

[NET Bible Note for John 14.2] Many interpreters have associated μοναί (monai) with an Aramaic word that can refer to a stopping place or resting place for a traveler on a journey. This is similar to one of the meanings the word can have in secular Greek (Pausanius 10.31.7). Origen understood the use here to refer to stations on the road to God. This may well have been the understanding of the Latin translators who translated μονή (monē*)* by mansio, a stopping place. The English translation "mansions" can be traced back to Tyndale, but in Middle English the word simply meant "a dwelling place" (not necessarily large or imposing) with no connotation of being temporary. The interpretation put forward by Origen would have been well suited to Gnosticism, where the soul in its ascent passes through stages during which it is gradually purified of all that is material and therefore evil…

The Humor of N.T. Wright (2009)

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=pgS8oFc5dkI [Video]

Vimeo Videos by N.T. Wright



https://vimeo.com/search?q=N.T.+Wright

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Additional videos with N.T. Wright (on Acts, etc.) and other theologians:
https://losranchos.org/tell/lrptv/

Controversial Issues (listed above) and the Book of Acts (YouTube channel):
https://www.youtube.com/user/LRPtv#p/u/2/YpQHGPGejKs [Video]

N.T. Wright's lecture at Pasadena's Lake Avenue Church, entitled "Learning the Language of Life: New Creation and Christian Virtue."

HT for Drawing: Matt Lumkin (Notes of lecture)

http://jrwoodward.net/2009/03/audio-of-nt-wright-new-creation-and-christian-virtue/

http://deathisdefeated.ning.com/profiles/blogs/audio-nt-wright-on-christian (2009)

You need to be a member of Deathisdefeated to access audio and add comments! Join Deathisdefeated

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

N.T. Wright Lecture

http://thewellsacramento.org/?p=134

Check this out. I (Josh) happened on a great lecture on iTunesU. It's a presentation at Fuller at Fuller Seminary by N.T. Wright. It's called "Learning the Language of Life: New Creation and Christian Virtue"

He gives a scholastic presentation for the role of virtues in the greater scheme of Christian living and identity. Virtues are not ends in themselves. In his discussion he hits on how spiritual disciplines and virtues can both fit into the greater theme of God's work.

Download it and lets talk about it. (it requires itunes)

N.T. Wright: The Holy Spirit in the Church

http://fpcperu.org/wp-content/uploads/2013/10/The-Holy-Spirit-in-the-Church.pdf [PDF]

NT Wright, et al: On the Future of the Church (Fuller Theological Seminary) (2014)

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=aNTz6QRVdg0 [Video]

Tom (N.T.) Wright, Miroslav Volf and Mark Labberton talk about the issues, questions, and dilemmas that face the church moving into the future. (Includes some brief bio by Wright)

W.T. Wright on Paul for Tomorrow

https://vimeo.com/channels/111906/12505715 [Video]

(Talks about Paul and the Kingdom of God)

The Kingdom of God with the Rt Revd Dr Tom Wright (2015)

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=rLiy-WlS9mA [Video]

(Lecture followed by Q and A)

N.T. Wright: The Puzzles of the Cross (2016)

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=_X6m-g5Omnw [Video]

N.T. Wright gives the opening lecture of the Wycliffe Hall Summer School 2016. The teaching theme for the week was The Victory of the Cross.

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Additional misc. articles regarding N. T. Wright

N. T. Wright on the Episcopal Church USA
http://www.dennyburk.com/n-t-wright-on-the-episcopal-church-usa/

Visiting Tom Wright – A Good Start in Scotland
https://jrichardmiddleton.wordpress.com/2017/04/23/visiting-tom-wright-a-good-start-in-scotland/

Archives for N.T. Wright
https://rodlampard.com/tag/n-t-wright/

Rehabilitating Marx?
https://rodlampard.com/2013/11/05/rehabilitating-marx/

Excerpt:

…It is here that I find myself in agreement with Tom Wright, who points out that neo-Gnosticism finds itself expressed in both far-right and far-left ideologies. To the point where the 'vox Dei (voice of God) is set aside leaving the vox populi (voice of the people) to become a law unto itself' (2013:39 Creation, Power and Truth SPCK Great Britain).

For the Church, Wright suggests that:

> 'we should understand some key elements of today's culture in terms of modern types of Gnosticism e.g.: Far-right American Evangelicalism, the Historical distortions & elevated conspiracies from the Left, Dan Brown & Richard Dawkins et.al…We can and should identify, and critique, an overall gnostic mood in today's culture'
> (2013, pp.4-31. Creation, Power and Truth SPCK Great Britain)

Note: For details about Marx and other philosophical and political systems critical towards Christianity, see my separate resource: Christian Scholarship: Biblical – Theological – Philosophical

N.T. Wright podcasts…
https://www.podcastchart.com/podcasts/the-n-t-wright-podcast

N.T. Wright Sings Bob Dylan (May 7, 2012, the Rabbit Room)
https://vimeo.com/41782945 [Video]

And the Nothing to Do with NT Wright blog:
N.T. Wrong
https://ntwrong.wordpress.com/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Humor of N.T. Wright (2009)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=pgS8oFc5dkI [Video]

N.T. Wright on the Colbert Report (2008) http://www.cc.com/video-clips/m7daav/the-colbert-report-bishop-n-t--wright

Hitler Rant on John Piper and N.T. Wright [Humor/Satire] https://www.jaydinitto.com/hitler-on-john-piper-and-n-t-wright/ (links to video)

Direct YouTube link: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=M_6EuMuC4Kc [Video]

(see also: Piper vs Wright issues)

Tom-foolery: 12 Epic Facts About N.T. Wright http://www.christianitytoday.com/pastors/2013/august-online-only/tom-foolery-12-epic-facts-about-nt-wright.html

https://dunelm.wordpress.com/2013/12/05/nt-wright-as-the-chuck-norris-of-new-testament-studies/ (alt.)

Move over, Chuck Norris. A new (perspective) hero is here to set the world Wright. (You call it idolatry. We call it reality. POW!)

1. N. T. Wright doesn't parse nouns. They decline themselves before him.

2. When James Dunn came up with the New Perspective, it was already old to N. T. Wright.

3. N. T. Wright doesn't baptize infants. He sprinkles the hell out of them.

4. Dead theologians sit around and read books about N. T. Wright.

5. The Trinity isn't a mystery to N. T. Wright.

6. N. T. Wright doesn't read books. He stares at them until he gets the information he wants.

7. N. T. Wright once preached all night in an upper room. No one fell asleep.

8. Instead of playing crossword puzzles during breakfast, N. T. Wright solves New Testament manuscript variances.

9. N. T. Wright knows the Adamic tongue. But he only uses it to order take out.

10. N. T. Wright makes purple the most masculine color.

11. N. T. Wright is actually the guy Paul is talking about in 2 Corinthians 12.

12. N.T. Wright is only bald because his hair got too scared of his brain.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Pistis Christou

N. T. Wright on Paul and the Faithfulness of God: A Conversation with Richard B. Hays – Justification and Spirit in Galatians 2 and Romans 8 with Richard B. Hays (2014)

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=JM8DGAnUq2k [Recommended]

Includes discussion of Galatians 2, Romans 8; Gal. 3:22, Rom. 3:22; and also discuss pistis Christou

Discussion Guide (for above video):

http://www.augsburgfortress.org/media/downloads/NTWright_VideoDiscussionGuide_Hays.pdf [PDF]

Galatians 2: 11-21

1. Richard Hays outlines four important aspects of his interpretation of Paul's understanding of justification as found in Galatians 2:11-21.
   a) In Hays's first point, what is Paul's understanding of the "truth of the Gospel"? In Paul's eyes how has Peter's table fellowship practice denied that truth? For Paul, how is the practice of table fellowship central to questions of justification?
   b) Paul, says Hays, does not reject his Jewish identity but rather relies on Torah to say that justification comes, not from the law, but from God's faithfulness. How does Hays then tie participation in the new life of Christ and Jesus' act of loving and giving of himself to the faithfulness of God?
   c) Summarize Hays's understanding of Paul's theology of justification as outlined in Galatians 2:11-21.
   d) Which of N. T. Wright's responses to the points made by Dr. Hays were most helpful to you? Why?
   e) Which points made by Dr. Hays or Dr. Wright do you want to think about or inquire into further?

2. N. T. Wright says that while justification and being in Christ are joined at the hip for Paul, justification and participation are not synonymous. Some scholars have argued that justification and participation are in opposition to each other, but Hays and Wright agree that the fusion of the two is a better interpretation. What are your thoughts? Why is this argument important in interpreting Paul's theology?

3. How, in your understanding, are the faithfulness of God, the faithfulness of Christ, and human faith/faithfulness intimately connected in Paul's theology as outlined in these Galatians verses? In one or two sentences, summarize your understanding of Paul's theology of justification.

Romans 8

1. In this conversation about Romans 8 you see leading Paul scholars working through questions that they are still exploring and questions about which they wonder. What do you take away from observing this animated and candid exchange? What further questions does the conversation raise for you?

2. N. T. Wright and Richard Hays each identify why Paul's writings "light them up" and why they have given so much of their scholarly careers to thinking and writing about Paul. What is it about Paul and his letters that raises interest and passion in you?

Pistis Christou: A Pauline Bungle?

http://thinktheology.co.uk/blog/article/pistis-christou-a-pauline-bungle

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

"Faith IN Christ" or "Faithfulness OF Christ" (Gospel Coalition)
https://blogs.thegospelcoalition.org/trevinwax/2011/05/23/faith-in-christ-or-faithfulness-of-christ/

'Faith in Christ' or 'Faithfulness of Christ'? What's the Difference? (Gospel Coalition)
https://www.thegospelcoalition.org/article/faith-in-christ-or-faithfulness-of-christ-whats-the-difference/

Pistis Christou → (Compare translations) KJV, NASB, NIV and NET Bibles: Galatians 2:15-21

'Pistis Christou' and Implications for the Doctrine of Justification (Orthodox) https://blogs.ancientfaith.com/onbehalfofall/pistis-christou-and-implications-for-the-doctrine-of-justification/

Excerpt:

In short, Christou is the genitive form of the word "Messiah," and genitives can be either subjective or objective. An objective translation would see the Messiah as the object of faith (i.e. faith in Messiah) while a subjective translation would see the Messiah as the one possessing faith (i.e. the faithfulness of the Messiah).

In most cases, the meaning of the genitive can easily be determined by context. In this case, the translation is highly ambiguous and requires careful study of the broad shape of Paul's theology within which the concept of pistis Christou situates itself.[1. For a positive evaluation of the subjective genitive in the literature, see Hays, Richard B.. The faith of Jesus Christ: an investigation of the narrative substructure of Galatians 3:1-4:11. Chico, Calif.: Scholars Press, 1983. Print. Alternatively, for a negative perspective, see Carson, D. A., Peter Thomas Brien, and Mark A. Seifrid. Justification and variegated nomism. Grand Rapids, MI: Baker Academic, 2004. Print.] (Note: See also: Covenantal Nomism for review of the Seifrid, et al, publication)

Pisteos Christou and the Subjective Gentive (a Catholic perspective)
http://pauliscatholic.com/2009/08/pistis-christou-the-subjective-gentive-and-christs-so-called-faith/

Pistis Christou: An Adjectival Genitive
http://theogeek.blogspot.com/2007/12/pistis-christou-adjectival-genitive.html

An (ancient) introduction to "faith in Christ" vs. "Christ's faith" http://undeception.com/pistis-iesou-christou/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Pistis Christou Debate: Main Arguments and Responses in Summary (2010)

http://journals.sagepub.com/doi/abs/10.1177/1476993X09360725 (Abstract and large Bibliography)

https://www.academia.edu/6249215/The_Pistis_Christou_Debate_Main_Arguments_and_Responses_in_Summary (Downloadable as PDF)

Excerpts:

…'Both the subjective or objective theories as currently presented have loopholes, and therefore a high degree of certainty should not be claimed in deciding between them' (Jewett; 2007: 277).

…Debating the pistis Christou phrases and their immediate contexts appears inconclusive. As such, interpreters resort either intentionally or unintentionally to their models for reading Paul that are already in place. This is a natural consequence of the hermeneutical circle, but if left unacknowledged, this practice can appear as begging the question. Both camps are guilty on this point; and, indeed, whichever interpretation is more ingrained is more susceptible to this fallacy…

Conclusion: Both interpretations have their challenges, and neither can win the day on the basis of grammatical or immediate contextual arguments. The locus of the debate, therefore, is not on whether 'faith in Christ' or the 'faith(fullness) of Christ' is a viable translation. The present state of the debate suggests that both translations are viable. Nevertheless, interpreters must make a decision between the tow or intentionally argue for some combination thereof. Matlock is correct that a both/and or combined reading 'does not prevail simply by virtue of finding it difficult or loathsome to choose' (2009: 88). So the debate goes on. Moving forward, interpreters must come to grips with the much larger hermeneutical and theological assumptions at play for both side and engage them in that arena.

Pistis Christou – The Faith of Christ – A Bibliography

https://rpodle6.wordpress.com/pistis-christou-the-faith-of-christ-a-bibliography/

Pistis Christou as the Irrevocable Nature of Salvation with special reference to Gal 2:16

http://www.preciousheart.net/ti/2009/35-065_Han_Christou_Irrevocable_Galatians1.pdf [PDF]

The Faith of Jesus Christ by Michael Bird – Introduction

http://g.christianbook.com/g/pdf/hp/9781598564297-intro.pdf [PDF]

FYI: Michael Bird: Youtube Channel: https://www.youtube.com/channel/UC21I7qYVHPsOzL9ujxiRWZA

Michael F. Bird on N.T. Wright and D.A. Carson

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=35UE4el2yPY [Video]

New Testament scholar, Michael F. Bird, discusses authors that have been influential to him

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

NT Wright: The Letter to the Galatians: Exegesis and Theology (2000)
http://ntwrightpage.com/2016/07/12/the-letter-to-the-galatians-exegesis-and-theology/

(includes comments re: pistis Christou)

NT Wright: QandA's (September 2004)
http://ntwrightpage.com/2016/04/25/wrightsaid-qa-september-2004/

Question:
When did you change your mind on the PISTIS CHRISTOU debate, and what was the deciding factor in the change?

Answer:
I don't know when it was but I would guess some time in the mid-1980s. I suspect getting to know Richard Hays and his work was a factor in it, though I hasten to add that the fact that RH and I became good friends in the early 1980s has not prevented us going on seeing some things quite differently, so I wouldn't have changed just to agree with him! The main factor was my grasp of Romans 3.1ff. in terms of God requiring faithfulness from Israel for the covenant to function. Again, see the commentary. This does not make me think that ALL possible references MUST go the same way, but it's a strong push.

See also*: The New Perspective Explaned – Faith or Faithfulness

Pistis Christou continued next page…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Pistis Christou Question

http://thefirstaidparty.com/pistis.htm

Context is an important factor in determining such cases as these. For example, in Romans 10:2, Paul refers to ζῆλον θεοῦ (literally, zeal of God). Does this mean zeal for God or God's zeal? However, Paul's discussion about the nation of Israel provides an important clue which makes the objective reading (zeal for God) the more likely.

Knowing that a man is not justified by the works of the law, but by the faith of Jesus Christ, even we have believed in Jesus Christ, that we might be justified by the faith of Christ and not by the works of the law; for by the works of the law shall no flesh be justified.
Galatians 2:16 A.V.(King James) know that a man is not justified by observing the law, but by faith in Jesus Christ. So we, too, have put our faith in Christ Jesus that we may be justified by faith in Christ and not by observing the law, because by observing the law no-one will be justified.

Galatians 2:16 New International Version

yet we know that no one is justified by the works of the law but by the faithfulness of Jesus Christ. And we have come to believe in Christ Jesus, so that we may be justified by the faithfulness of Christ and not by the works of the law, because by the works of the law no one will be justified. Galatians 2:16 New English Translation (NET)

The question that has exercised the church throughout the centuries is, whether Paul teaches that we are
(1) Justified by the faith - or faithfulness - of Christ (subjective genitive). This is often called the Christocentric (Christ centred) position because Christ alone is the active agent in the justification process.

(2) Justified by our faith in Christ (objective genitive). This is sometimes called the anthropocentric (human centered) position because the individual must also actively participate (by demonstrating faith) in their justification.

Test your Bibles
Look up Galatians 2:16 in as many versions as you can find. How do they render the text?
Is there any difference between older versions and more modern ones?
If so, what could the reasons be for this trend?

A further problem concerns what Paul means by πιστις (faith).

Does he mean faith (as in belief) or faithfulness (as in obedience)?

OTHER INSTANCES
Rom 3:22; 3:26
Gal 2:20; 3:22
Eph 3:12 (of/in him)
Phil 3:9

There are times when 'faith in Christ is stated unambiguously by using the prepostion 'in'
Eph 1:15
Col 2:5
1 Tim 3:13
2 Tim 3:15

Notes
1. In Rom 4:16, Paul is obviously discussing the faith of Abrham and not faith in Abraham.
2. James refers to the faith of Jesus in James 2:1.

How do you answer this question?
Think about how you are deciding which 'reading' is right (1 or 2). Are you interpreting it in the light of your own understanding of faith (theology) or from the text itself (exegesis)?
Try to work out from the text alone what Paul might have been intending to say.

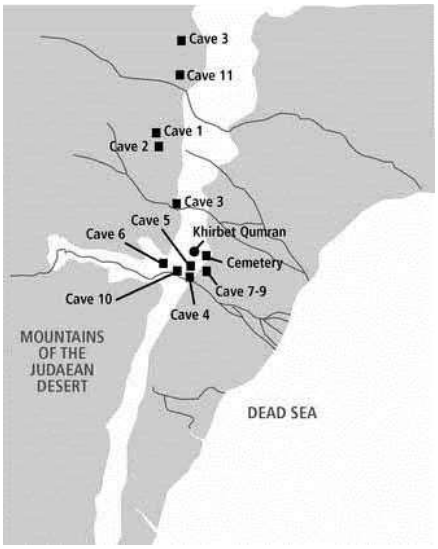
Don't ignore the context of Gal 2:16 - does it shed any light on how this phrase should be understood?

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Pistis Christou continued…

Another example: Here are the Romans 3:21-26 verses from three different versions of the Bible:

[21] But now apart from the law the righteousness of God (which is attested by the law and the prophets) has been disclosed – [22] namely, the righteousness of God through the faithfulness of Jesus Christ for all who believe. For there is no distinction, [23] for all have sinned and fall short of the glory of God. [24] But they are justified freely by his grace through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus. [25] God publicly displayed him at his death as the mercy seat accessible through faith. This was to demonstrate his righteousness, because God in his forbearance had passed over the sins previously committed. [26] This was also to demonstrate his righteousness in the present time, so that he would be just and the justifier of the one who lives because of Jesus' faithfulness. [Net Bible]



[21] But now the righteousness of God without the law is manifested, being witnessed by the law and the prophets; [22] Even the righteousness of God which is by faith of Jesus Christ unto all and upon all them that believe: for there is no difference: [23] For all have sinned, and come short of the glory of God; [24] Being justified freely by his grace through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus: [25] Whom God hath set forth to be a propitiation through faith in his blood, to declare his righteousness for the remission of sins that are past, through the forbearance of God; [26] To declare, I say, at this time his righteousness: that he might be just, and the justifier of him which believeth in Jesus. [KJV]

[21] But now the righteousness of God has been manifested apart from the law, although the Law and the Prophets bear witness to it— [22] the righteousness of God through faith in Jesus Christ for all who believe. For there is no distinction: [23] for all have sinned and fall short of the glory of God, [24] and are justified by his grace as a gift, through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus, [25] whom God put forward as a propitiation by his blood, to be received by faith. This was to show God's righteousness, because in his divine forbearance he had passed over former sins. [26] It was to show his righteousness at the present time, so that he might be just and the justifier of the one who has faith in Jesus. [ESV]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

4QMMT (Qumran Document)

4QMMT (or MMT), also known as the Halakhic Letter or the Sectarian Manifesto, is one of the Dead Sea Scrolls that were discovered at Qumran in Judean Samaria. The manuscript is mainly concerned with the issue of the purity of liquid streams, a matter of great debate between the Pharisees and the Sadducees in later rabbinic texts.

4QMMT was found in Cave 4 at Qumran on six fragmented manuscripts (4Q394, 4Q395, 4Q396, 4Q397, 4Q398, 4Q399). These manuscripts were found between the years 1953 and 1959, and today they are held at the Rockefeller Museum in Jerusalem Beginning in 1959, John Strugnell worked alone on 4QMMT. In 1979, he recruited Hebrew scholar Elisha Qimron to join his team, to assist in completing the effort.

Provisionally designated "4QMishn" (Mishnah), it was later renamed as "4QMMT" (Miqsat Ma'ase ha-Torah or Some Precepts of the Law) by Qimron, who, with Strugnell, edited the manuscript. Strugnell and Qimron have dated the writing on the fragments to a period between the late Hasmonean and Middle Herodian eras, which places them between the early 1st century BCE and the early 1st century CE. The editors believe that at that time the fragments now comprising 4QMMT were copied from six individual manuscripts into one.

-Wikipedia

4QMMT – Overviews

http://www.theinfolist.com/php/HTMLGet.php?FindGo=4QMMT [more] https://memim.com/4qmmt.html (Memim Encyclopedia ??? Possibly Russian?)

http://www.tyndale.cam.ac.uk/Tyndale/staff/Head/4QMMT.htm

Excerpt:

4QMMT (hereafter MMT) has been at the center of quite a furor of activity among Qumran scholars over the last decade. Even before it official 'release' in 1994, scholars were already arguing about its interpretation and significance, based on 'bootleg' copies then circulating. With its sectarian halakhic disputes and phrases like 'works of the law', it was not long before this enthusiasm bled over into NT studies as well. The reason for the excitement is that MMT gives tantalizing glimpses into the nature of Second Temple Judaism as well as into the origins of the Qumran community itself.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Text

MMT is customarily divided into three main sections:

Section A\ the (Qumran) calendar

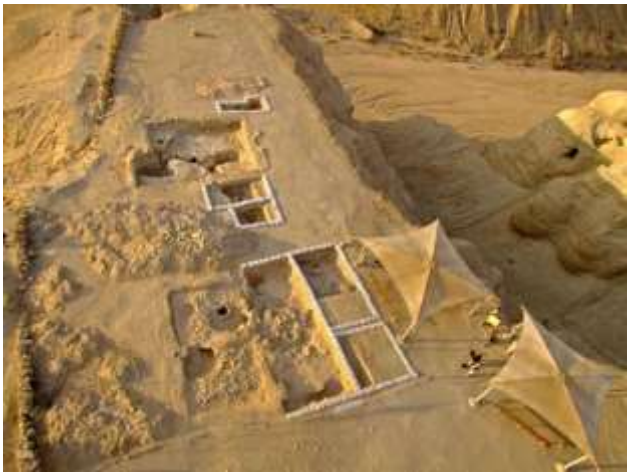
Section B\ halakhic disputes

Section C\ exhortation

What we possess from cave 4 are six fragmentary manuscripts (4Q394-399, also referred to as MSS a-f), which cover varying overlapping portions of this text. The exhortation of section C is clearly the conclusion of the document, but we only have a small portion of the end of section A, and we also have no idea what may have come before that. So, MMT is only the latter portion of a larger document. Qimron and Strugnell, the editors of the DJD edition, estimate that, 'The surviving text…probably covers about two-thirds of the original. Because the six manuscripts overlap in their contents, there are no major breaks in the text, but nonetheless it remains fragmentary, and requires interpolations at many points. Integrating the manuscripts together, the editors of DJD 10 produced a 'composite' MMT text comprised of three sections and 135 lines.

http://bibledashboard.com/open/web/MUESRR/4qmmt.html

Excerpt:



I. Introductory Remark:

MMT (Miqsat Ma'ase Ha-Torah) is composed of six fragments, taken from Cave 4, containing instructions concerning the Qumran Calendar, Qumran interpretation of law, and instructions for what should be happening in the Jerusalem temple. It seems to be a letter sent from a leader in the Qumran community to a temple leader in Jerusalem.

II. Outline of 4QMMT

A. The Qumran Calendar -- MMT A
B. Regulations Concerning the law of God (4Q394 3-7i conflated with 4Q395) -- MMT B

1. Regulations for Gentile offerings 1-16
2. Functions and duties of the Priests 17-33
3. Regulations for sacrifices 35-41
4. Eating the sacrificed meat 40-41
5. Those not allowed in the Temple 42-60
6. Purity of Jerusalem 61-63
7. Planting of fruit trees 64-66
8. Lepers 66-71
9. Regulations for handling corpse 72-74
10. Fornication and holiness 75-78

C. Purity of the Priesthood

1. Defilement of the priesthood 79b-82
2. Women's involvement 89-91a
3. Warning against defilement of priesthood 91b-92a

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

4. A call to segregation 92b-93b
5. Women (4Q397 14-21) 4-6

D. A Call for Repentance -- MMT C

1. Warning against not following the law 8-25
2. Reminder of what the recipient should do 25-28
3. Do what is good for you and Israel 28-32

Tens of thousands of Dead Sea Scroll fragments were discovered in the Qumran caves near the Dead Sea. Seen here is Qumran Cave 4, where the majority of the Dead Sea Scrolls were found. --BAS

III. Contents of 4QMMT

The Halakhic letter seems to be a letter written from a leader, or group of leaders, within the Qumran community to a leader of the temple in Jerusalem. The community is expressing strong concern over the lack of adherence to the law. In the original presentation of this text, by John Strugnell, the letter was assumed to have been written by the leader of the Qumran community, possibly the Teacher of Righteousness, to the leader of Jerusalem. In the portion of the manuscript that was preserved there are no direct statements of who the author is and who the recipient is, but it would not be outside of reason to draw such a conclusion. It should be noted that John Strugnell gives no credence to the idea that it is from the Teacher of Righteousness nor does he consider it a letter.

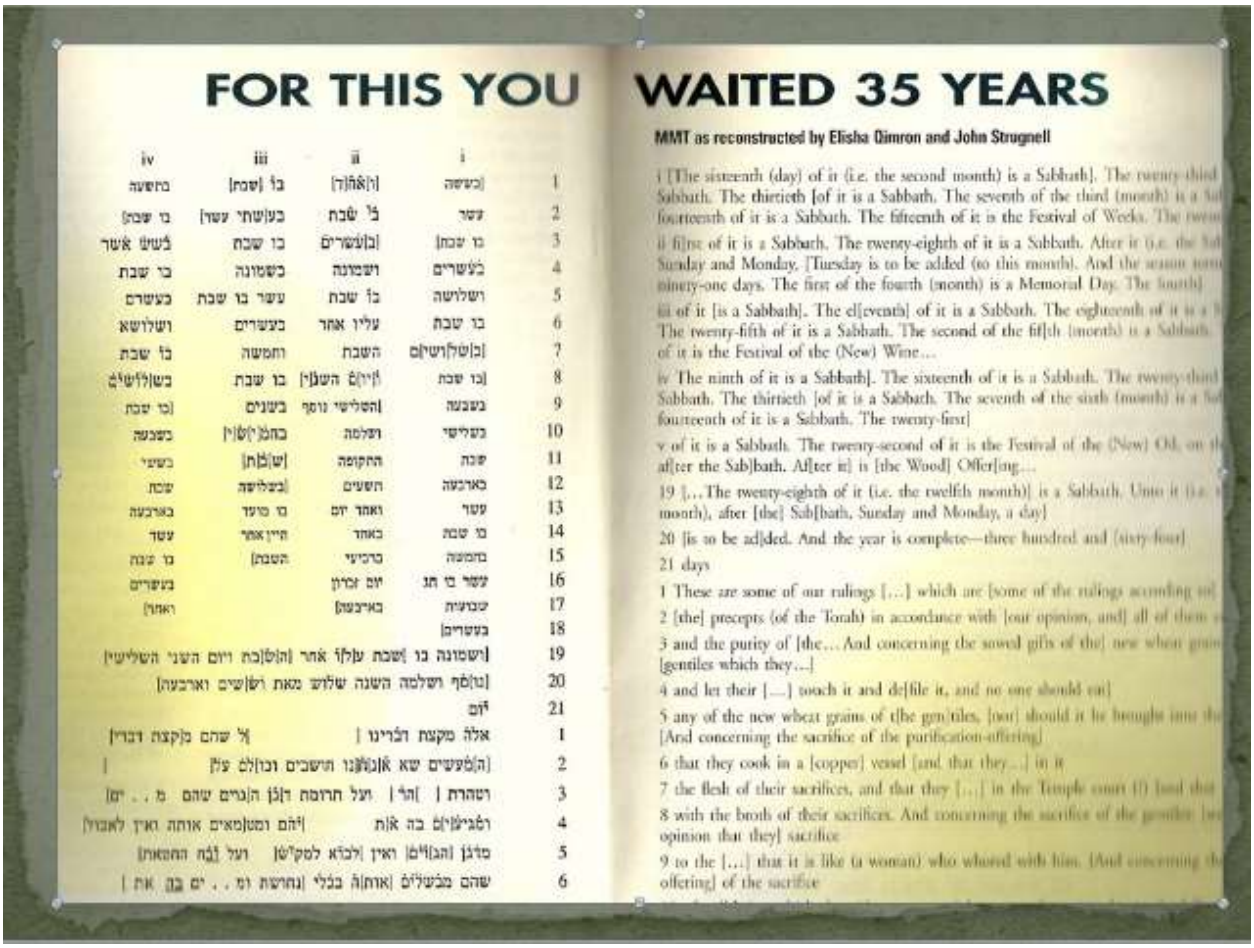
The concerns of MMT begin with a discussion of a three hundred and sixty four day solar calendar. The community demands the replacement of the current three hundred fifty four day lunar calendar, that was introduced by the Jerusalem high priest Jonathan, with the solar three hundred sixty four day calendar. They considered this a violation of the regulations of God.

The letter also voices some twenty violations of the Torah by the leader in Jerusalem. The letter calls for an adherence to these laws so as not to mislead those who are being lead by this leader. The concern over the this leadership is expressed when the decree is given to not allow blind or deaf people near the temple. If they hear the word of the law how could blind man live what he has heard and how could a deaf man hear the law that is being presented. The senders are deeply concerned about maintaining and reestablishing the purity of the temple and it's leaders.

In the conclusion of the letter a plea is made to the Jerusalem temple leader to repent and "keep far from you the evil scheming and the counsel of Belial "(29). The senders appeal to his understanding of God's justice and to do what is good for him and good for Israel.

16. Text 36, Second Letter on Works Reckoned as Righteousness

Some Fragments of 4QMMT



http://ccat.sas.upenn.edu/rak/courses/427/texts/4QMMT.htm

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Second Letter on "Works Reckoned as Righteousness" http://www.preteristarchive.com/BibleStudies/DeadSeaScrolls/4Q397-399_MMT_eisenman.html

A Sectarian Manifesto: "The MMT" or "Some of the Works of the Torah (Law)" http://jacksonsnyder.com/arc/Translations/4qmmt.htm
QMMT: 4Q394-399, Miqsat Ma'ase Ha-Torah
From Dead Sea Scrolls: A New Translation: Wise, Abegg, Cook

Dead Seas Scrolls Project: 4QMMT
http://deadseascrollsproject.blogspot.com/2009/06/4qmmt.html

FOR THIS YOU

WAITED 35 YEARS

MMT as reconstructed by Elisha Qimron and John Strugnell

Tom Wright & James Dunn The New Perspective on Paul (2009) [Recommended]
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=IZUDuBu1xvY [Video]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

re: Tom Wright & James Dunn – The New Perspective on Paul (2009)
https://epistletothegalatians.wordpress.com/tag/n-t-wright/

Provides references relating to the Qumran document 4QMMT

4QMMT and Paul: Justification, 'Works,' and Eschatology (2006)
http://ntwrightpage.com/2016/05/07/4qmmt-and-paul-justification-works-and-eschatology/ [links to PDF]

Alt link: https://www.homeworkmarket.com/sites/default/files/qx/15/02/27/02/wright_4qmmt_paul.pdf
(note: the above link opens as a standard web page, not a PDF)

Excerpt:

The Question

The topic of justification has been central, and often divisive, in many debates throughout church history. Though recent ecumenical documents have a more eirenic tone, and mutual understand- ing may have improved, it is not clear that there has been significant progress in understanding what Paul himself, to whom everyone appeals, was talking about. Meanwhile, Pauline scholar- ship has gone its own way. Released from the straitjacket of post-reformation controversy, dis- cussion has focussed on other issues. No major advance has been made, within the so-called 'new perspective', on the question of what Paul meant by 'justification'.1

Insufficient attention has been given in this area to the Dead Sea Scrolls. A few fragments found in a cave might seem a small rudder with which to turn the large ship of Paul's theology, but careful consideration of one text in particular gives support for a way of reading Paul that locates him within the world of second-Temple Judaism, gives depth and coherence to some of his key passages, and provides food for thought on wider issues. I am delighted to offer these reflections in honor of a friend and colleague whose work at the interface between the New Testament and second-Temple Judaism has been influential and inspirational.

In some of the best-known translations of the Dead Sea Scrolls, 'justification' features prominently…

N.T. Wright's Paul and the Faithfulness of God: A Review by Simon Gathercole (2014)
https://www.fulcrum-anglican.org.uk/articles/n-t-wrights-paul-and-the-faithfulness-of-god-a-review-by-simon-gathercole/

Critical Assessment of N.T. Wright's Interpretation of 'the Works of the Law' in 4QMMT (2015) (Student Paper) https://www.academia.edu/10278743/Critical_Assessment_of_N.T._Wright_s_Interpretation_of_the_Works_of_the_Law_in_4QMMT

What is There Between Minneapolis and St. Andrews? A Third Way in the Pipe-Wright Debate (2011)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

https://www.academia.edu/4574669/What_is_There_Between_Minneapolis_and_St._Andrews_A_Third_Way_in_the_Pipe-Wright_Debate (Downloadable as a PDF) [includes discussion of 4QMMT]

1QpHab and 4QMMT (Lecture Text) (Univ. of Wisconsin, L&S Support Services)

http://imp.lss.wisc.edu/%7Erltroxel/JHL/Lect24.pdf [PDF]

Paul 1: Laws of God on Trial

https://bibletopicexpo.wordpress.com/tag/4qmmt/

Excerpt:

The phrase "works of the law" appears seven times in Paul's writings. Ro.3:20 "By the works [g2041] of the law no flesh shall be justified in His sight." Ro.3:28 "A man is justified by faith, apart from works of the law." Ga.3:5 "Does He who gives you the Spirit and works miracles among you, do it by the works of the law or the hearing of faith?" (also Ro.9:32, Ga.2:16, 3:2, 3:10.) What was this "works of the law"?

The concept "works of the law", which Paul was against, is found as Essene rituals in the Dead Sea Scrolls 4QMMT. This related to their sectarian solar calendar, purity regulations & cooking utensils & ceremony, the intermarriage of priests with commoners, etc. Essene oral law interpretations weren't continued in rabbinic Judaism. Neither's oral law applies to Christians…they aren't God's commands.

[[Sidebar: Excerpts from 'Works of the Law' and the Jewish Settlement in Asia Minor by Barry F. Parker: "It is not a case of Paul attacking the law in Galatians 3. Rather, he is attacking a particular understanding of the law. His assault is not on the law but on certain 'works of the law'. There is no place whatsoever for a random selection of works of the law. 4QMMT's 'works of the law' is the linguistic equivalent of Paul's 'e1rga no/mou' (e.g. Rom 3:20, 28; Gal 2:16; 3:2, 5, 10). Indeed, it seems to be the only extant equivalent. As such, it is crucial in the understanding of Paul's use of the phrase 'works of the law'. Rom.3:20-22, Paul makes the point that Christ adhered to the law in its entirety and not selectively, and it is by participating in that sort of faithfulness that both Jew and Gentile are made righteous and are rescued from their God-less condition."

Parker's conclusion: "Paul's opponents in Galatia have twisted the purpose of the law almost beyond recognition, and Paul has no tolerance for their view. Notably, he condemns their emphasis on selective works of the law. Ironically, however, Paul's language in Galatians 3 appears to disparage the law because it is dictated by the perverted view of the law that he encounters in Galatia. The more disparaging language concerning law in Galatians 3 does not refer to the Torah per se, but to a perversion of it. Paul does not present the law as greater than the promise, but rather as in keeping with it. The law fails only in its inability to impart righteousness. The use of 'works of the law' there confirms both that Paul is in (indirect) dialogue with those familiar with Essene terminology and that selectivity is in view. Although he speaks to a different audience about a different problem regarding the law in Romans, when Paul uses the phrase 'e1rga no/mou' in Romans 3, the immediate context is quite similar to what he addresses in Galatians. It is, in both cases, a matter of the righteousness of God, as expressed in the faithfulness of Christ. This faithfulness of Christ suffices for both Jew and Gentile (pagan), who are equally condemned— in Galatians they are condemned for trying to supplement that faithfulness with a perverted version of the law, and in Romans they are condemned for perverting the law by their very efforts to fulfill it through a selective participation in it."]]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Works of the Law posted by James Trimm (2012)

http://nazarenespace.com/forum/topics/works-of-the-law

Excerpt:

The phrase "works of the law" (which is sometimes rendered "deeds of the law" in the KJV) appears only nine times in the New Testament and only in Paul's writings: Rom. 3:20, 28; Rom. 9:32; Gal. 2:16, 3:2, 3:5, 10.

(In Gal. 3:10 the Aramaic has "works because of the law" rather than "works of the law".)

This phrase, "works of the law", is best understood through its usage in Gal. 2:16. Here Paul writes:

Knowing that a man is not justified by the works of the law,
but by the faith of Jesus Christ,
even we have believed in Jesus Christ,
that we might be justified by the faith of Christ,
and not by the works of the law:
for by the works of the law shall no flesh be justified.
(Gal. 2:16 KJV)

If we consider this passage carefully we can see that Paul uses this phrase to describe a false method of justification which is diametrically opposed to "faith in the Messiah". To Paul "works of the law" is not an obsolete Old Testament system, but a heresy that has never been true.

The term "works of the Torah" has shown up as a technical theological term used in a document in the Dead Sea Scrolls called MMT which says:

Now we have written to you some of the works of the law, those which we determined would be beneficial for you...
And it will be reckoned to you as righteousness,
in that you have done what is right and good before Him...
(4QMMT (4Q394-399) Section C lines 26b-31)

And that this is an amazing inverse literary parallel to Gal. 2:16; 3:6:

Now we have written to you some of the works of the law, those which we determined would be beneficial for you...
And it will be reckoned to you as righteousness,
in that you have done what is right and good before Him...

(4QMMT (4Q394-399) Section C lines 26b-31)

Knowing that a man is not justified by the works of the law, but by the faith of Yeshua the Messiah, even we have believed in Yeshua the Messiah, that we might be justified by the faith of Messiah, and not by the works of the law: for by the works of the law shall no flesh be justified....

Even as Abraham believed God, and it was reckoned to him for righteousness.

(Gal. 2:16; 3:6)

This heretical doctrine laid out in MMT is based on twenty-four purity regulations about which the Essenes held a stricter halacha than their Pharisaic counterparts, and which they believed would be reckoned to them as righteousness. Apparently Paul's opponent takes "righteousness/justification" in this passage of MMT to mean "salvation". Paul however argues that it is faith in Messiah and not these "works of the law" by which we are saved:

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

When Paul speaks out against "works of the law" it is like a Baptist preacher speaking out against "Latter Day Saints", he does not mean the words according to their literal meaning, he has nothing against "Saints" who live in the "Latter Days" he is using the Mormon's theological technical term to refer to their theology.

There can be no doubt that Paul sees "works of the law" as categorically bad, yet Paul calls the Torah itself "holy, just and good" (Rom. 7:12), certainly Paul does not use these phrases to refer to the Torah itself as obsolete, but to a heresy, a false theology that was never true...

The Origens of the Essenes (by James Trimm)

http://nazarenespace.com/page/the-origin-of-the-essenes

Excerpt:

John Hycranas was succeeded as High Priest and King by his son Alexander Jannaeus (103-76). Once, while he was officiating as High Priest at Sukkot, the Pharisees pelted him with their citrons. Jannaeus responded by slaughtering Pharisees by the thousands (Josephus; Antiquities of the Jews 13:13:5; alt.link to Antiquities). Pharisees joined with Jannaeus' foreign enemies, but when he overtook them, he had the conspirators crucified. (Josephus; Ant. 13:14).

It seems that at this point in time a radical group split off from the Pharisees. This group became known as the Essenes. This group was led by a figure known to us only as the "Teacher of Righteousness". The Teacher of Righteousness was at odds with a figure referred to simply as the "Wicked Priest" whom most scholars identify with Alexander Jannaeus.

At the same time the Essenes were at odds with the group from which they had split off from, which they refer to with several euphemisms, most notably the "wall builders" (clearly the Pharisees).

The Essenes describe their origin this way:

…we separated from the majority of the people
and from all their uncleanness and from being party
to or going along with them in these matters.
(4QMMT C:7-9)

At the time the "majority" were the Pharisees, as Josephus writes:

…the Sadducees are able to persuade none but the rich, and have not the populace obsequious to them, but the Pharisees have the majority on their side…
(Ant. 13:10:6)

The Essenes separated from the Pharisees because they felt that the Pharisaic halacha was not strict enough, and that as a result the Temple was being defiled:

They [the wall-builders] also defile the sanctuary, for they do not separate clean from unclean according to the Law.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

(Dam. Doc. 5, 6-7) (i.e., re: Damascus Document; Summary; Historical Review)

…we separated from the majority of the people
and from all their uncleanness and from being party
to or going along with them in these matters.
(4QMMT C:7-9)

The Essenes found the Pharisaic "wall" of restrictions to be too lax:

The Wall-Builders who went after "Precept"—Precept is a Raver of whom it says, "they shall surely rave" (Mic. 2:6)…
(Dam. Doc. 4, 19)

But against his enemies, the Wall-Builders, his anger burns.
(Dam. Doc. 8, 18)

Speaking of the Wall-Builders the Damascus Document states they fall into "three traps of Belial (4, 14-16) These three traps are given as "fornication… wealth… defiling the sanctuary." (4, 17-18)…

…

As for the righteous man, by faith to him one may find life." (Hab. 2:4b) This refers to all those who obey the Law among the Jews whom God will rescue from among those doomed to judgment, because of their suffering and their faith in the Teacher of Righteousness.
(Hab. Com. 7, 17 - 8, 3)

They also saw their justification as coming from these New Covenant purity regulations which they came to refer to as the "Works of the Law"

These are some of our pronouncements concerning the Law of God. Specifically, some pronouncements concerning the Works of the Law that we have determined [are beneficial] and all of them concern defiling mixtures and purity....

A lengthy list of pronouncements is then given. Then the document concludes:

Now we have written to you some of the Works of the Law, those which we determined would be beneficial for you and your people,... And it will be reckoned to you as righteousness...
(4QMMT)

Thus the Qumran Community taught that they were all partakers in a New Covenant established by their Teacher of Righteousness, which offered them justification through their faith in him and his teachings, specifically purity regulations which were known as "Works of the Law". In other words their idea of the "New Covenant" was based on these "Works of the Law".

Yeshua, his Talmidim and the Essenes (by James Trimm)

http://nazarenespace.com/page/yeshua-his-talmidim-and-the Yochanan and the Essenes (by James Trimm) [Statement of Faith]

http://nazarenespace.com/page/yochanan-and-the-essenes-1

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

FYI: Foundations of Pharisaic Judaism (by James Trimm)
http://nazarenespace.com/page/foundations-of-pharisaic

FYI: Nazarenes and the Oral Law (by James Trimm)
http://nazarenespace.com/page/nazarenes-and-the-oral-law

FYI: Interlinear Hebrew / Aramaic NT
http://nazarenespace.com/page/interlinear-heb-aram-nt

The Dead Sea Scrolls and the New Testaement [Recommended]
http://www.auburn.edu/~allenkc/openhse/deadsea.html

(Compares/contrasts Christianity and the Essenes of the Dead Sea Scrolls)

The Essenes and Christianity – Comparisons
http://www.tektonics.org/af/essene.php

See more*: Essenes

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Jewish Roots of Galatians (2013)
http://www.netivyah.org/book/the-jewish-roots-of-galatians/

Revolvy: 4QMMT (Content from Wikipedia)
https://broom02.revolvy.com/topic/4QMMT

Golb and the Dead Sea Scrolls (A Work in Progress)
http://raphaelgolb.blogspot.com/2011/01/who-was-4qmmt-really-addressed-to.html

Was the Addressee of 4QMMT Herod Himself? (Theories 1 and 2)

Miqsat Ma'ase HaTorah (4QMMT), Elisha Qimron, Anchor Bible Dictionary (ed. David Noel Freedman), Doubleday, New York 1992.
http://cojs.org/miqsat_ma-ase_hatorah_-4qmmt-_elisha_qimron-_anchor_bible_dictionary_-ed-_david_noel_freedman-_doubleday-_new_york_1992/

Excerpt:

D. The Contribution of MMT to the Study of Judaism

At this early stage of research, the contribution of MMT can not be fully evaluated. The following are a few preliminary remarks.

1. As has been noted, MMT consists of controversial halakhot and thus provides evidence not only for the halakha of the sect, but also for that of its opponents. Examining the halakhic view of the latter, we learn that they are nearly always identical with those of the rabbis. This is also the case in additional polemical passages in other Dead Sea Scrolls. This identity proves that the opponents of the sect were the predecessors of the rabbis, most probably the Pharisees. It further demonstrates that the corresponding rabbinic halakha (to halakhot discussed in the Dead Sea Scrolls) was established at a very early date. This contradicts the view of those scholars who believe that the Pharisaic halakha was a "new" halakha. The halakhic correspondence with the Mishna serves to authenticate those historical sections in the rabbinic sources as truly reflecting the reality of the Second Temple period, even though they were put in written form much later (contra some recent scholarly trends).

2. MMT contributes much to our knowledge of the history of sectarianism in that period. For example, until now there was no explicit evidence concerning the reasons for the schism. Josephus gives the impression that the sects were primarily divided over theological questions, for instance those relating to the resurrection of the dead or the role of Divine providence. MMT proves that the real reason was the controversy over ritual laws. Josephus' description should be understood as an attempt to produce an explanation that would make sense to his Greek (and Roman) readers.

3. Of special interest to biblical scholars are the interpretations given in MMT to certain juridical passages in the Torah in particular, and its methods of interpretation in general.

4. The contribution of MMT to the history of the Hebrew language is also significant, but requires a more detailed discussion than can be undertaken

The Dead Sea Scrolls
http://www.ultimatebiblereferencelibrary.com/Dead_Sea_Scrolls_Exibit.pdf [PDF]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Torah Precepts Scroll (Library of Congress, 2010)

http://www.loc.gov/exhibits/scrolls/scr2.html

The Torah Precepts Scroll
Translation of the Torah Precepts Scroll

Miqsat Ma`ase ha-Torah
4Q396(MMT[superscript]c)
Parchment
Copied late first century B.C.E.-early first century C.E.
Fragment A: height 8 cm (3 1/8 in.), length 12.9 cm (5 in.)
Fragment B: height 4.3 cm (1 11/16 in.), length 7 cm (2 3/4 in.)
Fragment C: height 9.1 cm (3 9/16 in.), length 17.4 cm (6 7/8 in.)
Courtesy of the Israel Antiquities Authority (8)

This scroll, apparently in the form of a letter, is unique in language, style, and content. Using linguistic and theological analysis, the original text has been dated as one of the earliest works of the Qumran sect. This sectarian polemical document, of which six incomplete manuscripts have been discovered, is commonly referred to as MMT, an abbreviation of its Hebrew name, Miqsat Ma`ase ha-Torah. Together the six fragments provide a composite text of about 130 lines, which probably cover about two-thirds of the original. The initial part of the text is completely missing.

Apparently it consisted of four sections: (1) the opening formula, now lost; (2) a calendar of 364 days; (3) a list of more than twenty rulings in religious law (Halakhot), most of which are peculiar to the sect; and (4) an epilogue that deals with the separation of the sect from the multitude of the people and attempts to persuade the addressee to adopt the sect's legal views. The "halakhot," or religious laws, form the core of the letter; the remainder of the text is merely the framework. The calendar, although a separate section, was probably also related to the sphere of "halakhah." These "halakhot" deal chiefly with the Temple and its ritual. The author states that disagreement on these matters caused the sect to secede from Israel.

References:

Strugnell, J., and E. Qimron. Discoveries in the Judaean Desert, X. Oxford, forthcoming.

Sussman, Y. "The History of `Halakha' and the Dead Sea Scrolls -- Preliminary Observations on Miqsat Ma`ase Ha-Torah (4QMMT)" (in Hebrew), Tarbiz 59 (1990):11-76.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Sacred Page: Readings for the 20th Sunday of OT (Catholic)

http://www.thesacredpage.com/2017/08/who-let-riffraff-in-readings-for-20th.html

Excerpt:

In the days of Isaiah, the people of Israel were living—or should have been living—according to the stipulations of the Mosaic Covenant (that is, the covenant with Israel mediated by Moses, not a covenant God made with Moses). This covenant, summarized in its final form in the Book of Deuteronomy, did not have much room for the Gentiles, except perhaps as subjugated vassals of the People of Israel:

Deut. 28:1 "And if you obey the voice of the LORD your God, being careful to do all his commandments which I command you this day, the LORD your God will set you high above all the nations of the earth.... "The LORD will cause your enemies who rise against you to be defeated before you; they shall come out against you one way, and flee before you seven ways. 10 And all the peoples of the earth shall see that you are called by the name of the LORD; and they shall be afraid of you. 12 ... you shall lend to many nations, but you shall not borrow. 13 And the LORD will make you the head, and not the tail; and you shall tend upward only, and not downward; if you obey the commandments of the LORD your God ....

In Jesus' day, the different sects of Judaism had varying stances toward the Gentiles. The Pharisees were at least interested in making proselytes of them (Matt 23:15), but the Essenes had no use for them. According to 4QMMT, the document "On the Works of the Law" found in the fourth cave of Qumran, it was not even lawful to take wheat grown by Gentiles and offer it in the temple!

However, the prophets of Israel foresaw a coming age where the negative attitude toward the Gentiles based on the Mosaic Covenant would be undone. Our First Reading is one of the more famous passages from the second half of the Book of Isaiah that anticipates such a situation:

Reading 1 Is 56:1, 6-7

Thus says the LORD:
Observe what is right, do what is just;
for my salvation is about to come,
my justice, about to be revealed.

The foreigners who join themselves to the LORD, ministering to him,
loving the name of the LORD, and becoming his servants-all who keep the sabbath free from profanation and hold to my covenant, them I will bring to my holy mountain and make joyful in my house of prayer; their burnt offerings and sacrifices will be acceptable on my altar, for my house shall be called a house of prayer for all peoples.

Strikingly, some of the language used to describe the relationship of these foreigners to the Lord is priestly terminology. These foreigners will "minister" (Heb. shereth) to the LORD and become his "servants" (Heb. 'ebadim). The verb shereth is usually employed to describe priestly labor (cf Exod 28:35 etc.), and the priests themselves are called "servants of the LORD" (cf. Ps 134:1; Ps 135:1). This oracle of Isaiah makes it sound as though, in the latter days, foreigners will not only be able to worship God, but also serve in a priestly capacity.

Isaiah's promise that the "burnt offerings and sacrifices" of foreigners would be acceptable on the altar of the LORD could scarcely be more at odds with the perspective of the Essenes of Jesus' day. In the famous work "4QMMT," a letter on legal issues apparently sent from the Essenes at Qumran to the Pharisees in Jerusalem, the Essenes criticize perceived abuses taking place in the Temple:

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

[Concerning the offering of] the [gentile gr]ain [that they are …] 7 and allowing their […] to touch it and [become] def[iled. No one should eat] 8 from [Gent]ile grain [nor] bring it into the sanctuary […] ... Concerning the Gentile sacrifice, [we have determined that they are] sacrifici[ng] 12 to the […] which is [like a woman] who has fornicated with him. (4Q394 frags. 3-7, col. I, lines 6-12 [excerpted])

Although the text is fragmentary, it seems clear that the Essenes objected even to the grain of Gentiles being brought into the sanctuary—much less the Gentiles themselves entering and offering sacrifice to God!

According to Mark 11, Jesus entered the temple and drove out the money changers. The area of the Temple that Jesus "cleansed" is usually understood to be the outer court, or "court of the Gentiles"—the external area that was the closest Gentiles were allowed to come into God's presence in the Second Temple Period (517 BC—AD 70). After driving out the merchants, Our Lord quotes from today's First Reading: "And he taught, and said to them, "Is it not written, 'My house shall be called a house of prayer for all the nations? But you have made it a den of robbers" (Mark 11:17). Part of the purpose of the Temple cleansing was to restore to the Gentiles what access to God was permissible for them under the Old Covenant system.

P. The Responsorial continues the theme of the Gentiles (Nations) entering into relationship with God:

Responsorial Psalm Ps 67:2-3, 5, 6, 8

R. (4) O God, let all the nations praise you!
May God have pity on us and bless us;
may he let his face shine upon us.
So may your way be known upon earth;
among all nations, your salvation.
R. O God, let all the nations praise you!
May the nations be glad and exult because you rule the peoples in equity;
the nations on the earth you guide.
R. O God, let all the nations praise you!
May the peoples praise you, O God;
may all the peoples praise you!
May God bless us,
and may all the ends of the earth fear him!
R. O God, let all the nations praise you!

There are many psalms that call on the "peoples" or "nations" to bless the LORD. Is this all empty rhetoric, invented in antiquity when no one but Jews came to the Temple? I think not. According to the Books of Samuel and Kings, the Kingdom of Israel under David and Solomon expanded to become an empire including the surrounding non-Israelite nations as vassal states (see 2 Sam 8–10; 1 Kings 4). During this period, Jerusalem probably saw a steady stream of Gentile officials coming on diplomatic business with the royal court, which would likely include worshipping the God of their suzerain. It seems likely to me that several psalms were originally written with this context in mind, in which Israelites would be mixed with visiting foreigners in the Solomonic Temple (e.g. Ps 47:9).

Library of Congress: Scrolls from the Dead Sea

http://www.loc.gov/exhibits/scrolls/index.html

Acts of Torah [4QMMT (4Q394-399)] (Works of the Law)

http://virtualreligion.net/iho/4QMMT.html

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Rev. Know-It-All's Guide to Reading the Bible, That Big Book on the Coffee Table
http://www.stlambert.org/documents/2015/1/Guide_to_reading_the_Bible.pdf [PDF]

Online link to excerpt: https://stlambert.org/news/rkias-guide-to-reading-the-bible-part-1

Excerpt: (Note: Catholic Perspecitve)

Let me begin by quoting my favorite theologian, the Rev. Billy Bob. "God hates method. He loves principle." Do not misread the preceding. God hates method, not Methodists. God loves Methodists very much. No one can put on a church supper like Methodists.

What is the Rev. Billy Bob trying to say? An example: You go to the Thursday prayer meeting and that Thursday you are in charge of the prayer ministry. You are wearing your favorite bowling shirt, your red feedlot cap and your St. Christopher medal. Before you sit, an afflicted soul who has come for healing prayer with the worst case of athlete's foot in medical history enters the room. You anoint him with holy water, praying in tongues all the while with the laying on of hands and conclude with three Hail Mary's. And much to your shock he is instantly healed!

You now know how to heal the sick. You wear your favorite bowling shirt, your red feedlot cap and your St. Christopher medal. You anoint with holy water, praying in tongues with the laying on of hands and conclude with three Hail Mary's. So you do the same thing next week, now that you have the gift of healing, and nothing happens. The minute you think you've got God down to a method He does things a different way. God hates method. He loves principle.

This is the point that St. Paul is trying to make when he talks about works of the law. "...a man is not justified by the works of the law but by faith in Jesus Christ..." Galatians 2:16. There is only one place other than the New Testament in all of ancient literature where the phrase "works of the law" appears. It is in the Dead Sea Scroll 4QMMT: "Miqtsat Ma'asei ha Torah" ("Precepts of the Works of the Law"). It seems to be written by Essenes to Pharisees about ritual purity. In the scroll 4QMMT we read in ruling 16 "Concerning streams of liquid; we have determined that they are not intrinsically pure. Indeed, streams of liquid do not form a barrier between the pure and the impure for the liquid that is in the stream and that in its receptacle become as one liquid." So there! Take that, you loose and liberal Pharisees!

(What the heck is this guy talking about????)Simply this: If a clay bowl is unclean and you pour water from a clay pitcher into the bowl, the uncleanness leaps up the stream of water and pollutes the pitcher and both must broken! Surely you remember this from you reading of Leviticus? The scroll ends with "Now we have written you some of the works of the law which we determined would be beneficial to you."

When Paul talks about works of the law, he is saying that we are not saved by this ritual nonsense, but by conversion of heart and mind. 500 years ago Luther decided that Paul was saying that we don't have to do anything to go to heaven. Paul would have been a bit surprised at that conclusion (Romans 2:24), as would Jesus (Matt7:23) In fact, St. James says that it is clear we are not saved by faith alone, but by works also (James 2:24)

If Luther had understood that the phrase "works of the law" was about ritual purity and not about kindness and mercy, and that Paul simply wanted to explain that these external rituals of kosher law don't save, he would have spared the world a lot of trouble. It is always intriguing to me that people who talk loudly about dead works and salvation by faith alone constantly try to get people who were baptized as infants by the pouring of water to be re-baptized by a very specific formula as adults and only by immersion. They believe in method, not in principle. Whether they admit it or not they are professing salvation by a work of law.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

We want to reduce the Bible to a set of rules. It is a book of principles, the principles of the Kingdom of Heaven. That is not to say that rules are unimportant. On the Contrary! For children, good rules are essential and we cannot enter the Kingdom of Heaven unless we are like little children. These rules however, depend on love and trust and a desire to obey the Father who loves us. They are rules that teach the principles of the Kingdom. They are not rules that we can get around, rules that enable us to do as little as possible. They are instructions in the very character of God.

The prayer of the pagan is "God, give me what I want." the prayer of the Christian is "Lord, teach me your ways." (Psalm 25:4, 86:11,27,11 and the whole rest of the Bible.) The Bible is not a science text, it is not a history text, it is not a rule book. It has all these things in it, but it is primarily a collection of books that deal with the way God has loved us since the beginning of time.

So here is principle #1 THE BIBLE EXISTS TO TEACH US GOD'S WAY OF DOING THINGS, HIS CHARACTER, HIS PRINCIPLES AND HIS PROMISES.

A 'Slain Messiah' in 4q Serekh Milhûamah (4q285)? (1992)

http://www.tyndalehouse.com/tynbul/library/TynBull_1992_43_1_08_Bockmuehl_SlainMessiah.pdf [PDF]

…First came the news that Professor John Strugnell of Harvard Divinity School had been deposed in late 1990 as head of the international editorial team which has overseen the official publication of the Dead Sea Scrolls since their discovery in 1947. The most immediate reason for Strugnell's dismissal after only three years at the helm reportedly lay in his increasingly acerbic anti-Jewish pronouncements in a series of press interviews.

All this transpired amidst mounting scholarly protest at the creeping pace of publication and the editorial committee's continuing refusal to release the photographs of the Scrolls. The Editors' infuriating practice of writing articles on unpublished scrolls long before their actual publication had led to a growing impatience among Qumran scholars barred from access to these materials. In consequence, 'samizdat' copies of manuscript transcriptions began to proliferate in the academic community. Thus, for the past two years or more, photocopies of otherwise unidentified handwritten transcriptions of 4QMMT have been circulating; this document is a letter from the Qumran community to the religious authorities in Jerusalem explaining their differences over the halakhah of sacrifices, temple purity, fornication, etc. Although to this day that important text is still not officially published, 4QMMT has been discussed in publications and senior seminars in numerous locations.

Partly in response to increasing scholarly pressure, in 1988 the editorial team authorized a limited release of a preliminary concordance of the Scrolls, many of which remained unpublished and under a tight seal. The acquisition of a copy by Hebrew Union College in Cincinnati, Ohio led that institution's veteran Qumran scholar Ben Zion Wacholder to collaborate with his research student Martin Abegg on a computer-produced reconstruction of the texts originally analyzed in the Qumran concordance. Amidst a fanfare of publicity, this work was released on 4 September 1991 as A Preliminary Edition of the Unpublished Dead Sea Scrolls—The Hebrew and Aramaic Texts from Cave Four (Washington, DC: Biblical Archaeology Society). Not surprisingly, the official Qumran editorial team were incensed at what they perceived to be a breach of scholarly propriety.

However, the pace of developments continued to increase further when in September the Huntington Library in San Marino, California unilaterally decided to make its photographs of the Scrolls (deposited there for safekeeping) available to researchers; in late October the Israeli Antiquities Authority dropped its initially fierce resistance to the release of the photographs…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Essenes

Who were the Essenes and Were Jesus and John the Baptist Essenes? (2009)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=CwWmNT2a7H0&index=4&list=PLE8D42080A018F866

[Video] (Clip from Paul Ankerberg Show appearance of N.T. Wright)

Wikipedia: Essenes

Excerpt:

The Essenes (in Modern Hebrew: אִסִּיִים, Isiyim; Greek: Ἐσσηνοί, Ἐσσαῖοι, or Ὀσσαῖοι, Essenoi, Essaioi, Ossaioi) were a sect of Second Temple Judaism that flourished from the 2nd century BC to the 1st century AD which some scholars claim seceded from the Zadokite priests. Being much fewer in number than the Pharisees and the Sadducees (the other two major sects at the time), the Essenes lived in various cities but congregated in communal life dedicated to asceticism (some groups practised celibacy), voluntary poverty, and daily immersion. Many separate but related religious groups of that era shared similar mystic, eschatological, messianic, and ascetic beliefs. These groups are collectively referred to by various scholars as the "Essenes." Josephus records that Essenes existed in large numbers, and thousands lived throughout Roman Judaea.

The Essenes have gained fame in modern times as a result of the discovery of an extensive group of religious documents known as the Dead Sea Scrolls, which are commonly believed to be the Essenes' library—although not conclusive. These documents preserve multiple copies of parts of the Hebrew Bible untouched from possibly as early as 300 BCE until their discovery in 1946. Some scholars dispute the notion that the Essenes wrote the Dead Sea Scrolls. Rachel Elior questions even the existence of the Essenes.

The first reference is by the Roman writer Pliny the Elder (died c. 79 CE) in his Natural History. Pliny relates in a few lines that the Essenes do not marry, possess no money, and had existed for thousands of generations. Unlike Philo, who did not mention any particular geographical location of the Essenes other than the whole land of Israel, Pliny places them in Ein Gedi, next to the Dead Sea.

A little later, Josephus gave a detailed account of the Essenes in The Jewish War (c. 75 CE), with a shorter description in Antiquities of the Jews (c. 94 CE) and The Life of Flavius Josephus (c. 97 CE). Claiming first hand knowledge, he lists the Essenoi as one of the three sects of Jewish philosophy alongside the Pharisees and the Sadducees. He relates the same information concerning piety, celibacy, the absence of personal property and of money, the belief in communality, and commitment to a strict observance of Sabbath. He further adds that the Essenes ritually immersed in water every morning, ate together after prayer, devoted themselves to charity and benevolence, forbade the expression of anger, studied the books of the elders, preserved secrets, and were very mindful of the names of the angels kept in their sacred writings.

Pliny, also a geographer, located them in the desert near the northwestern shore of the Dead Sea, where the Dead Sea Scrolls were discovered.

The Essenes and Christianity – Comparisons
http://www.tektonics.org/af/essene.php

See also: 4QMMT (re: Qumram Dead Sea Scrolls manuscripts 4QMMT and the Essenes)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Essenes – Jewish Encyclopedia
http://jewishencyclopedia.com/articles/5867-essenes

Ancient Jewish History: Pharisees, Sadducees & Essenes (Jewish Virtual Library)
http://www.jewishvirtuallibrary.org/pharisees-sadducees-and-essenes

The Essenes – Bible.org
https://bible.org/seriespage/4-essenes

For more about the Essenes and other 1st Century (and 2nd Temple) Jewish groups of the NT, see my other separate references resource*:

The Complete Sayings of Jesus – NKJV with Appendix

(Note: NKJV is primary text to make reading easier, except when it varies significantly from the original KJV or a different translation text is clearer and/or deemed more accurate.)

© Diagram Visual Information Ltd.

PHARISEES (from Greek for "separated ones")	SCRIBES (soferim in ancient Hebrew)	SADDUCEES (perhaps from Greek for "followers of Zadok," Solomon's High Priest)	ESSENES (probably Greek from the Syriac "holy ones")	ZEALOTS (from Greek "zealous one")
Evolution • Brotherhoods devoted to the Torah and its strict adherence from c150 BCE. Became the people's party, favored passive resistance to Greco-Roman rule	Evolution • Copiers and interpreters of the Torah since before the Exile of 586 BCE. Linked to the Pharisees, but some were also Sadducees and on the Sanhedrin Supreme Council	Evolution • Conservative, wealthy, and aristocratic party of the status quo from c150 BCE. Usually held the high priesthood and were the majority of the 71-member Sanhedrin Supreme Council. Prepared to work with Rome and Herods	Evolution • Breakaway desert monastic group, especially at Qumran on the Dead Sea from c130 BCE Lived communally, without private property, as farmers or craftsmen under a Teacher of Righteousness and Council	Evolution • Extremist fighters who regarded political freedom as a religious imperative. Underground resistance movement, especially strong in Galilee. The most fanatical became sicarii, dagger-wielding assassins
Beliefs • Believed in Messianic redemption, resurrection, free will, angels and demons, and oral interpretations of the Torah	Beliefs • Defined work, etc, so as to keep the Sabbath. Obedience to their written code would win salvation	Beliefs • Did not believe in resurrection, free will, angels, and demons, or oral interpretations of the Torah – enjoy this life	Beliefs • Priesthood, Temple sacrifices, and calendar were all invalid. They expected the world's early end and did not believe in resurrection. Year's probation for membership	Beliefs • "No rule but the Law – No King but God". They expected a Messiah to save their cause
Practices • Fasted twice a week and washed ritually. Observed seven hours of prayer and gave 10 percent of all possessions to the Temple	Practices • Compiled the Mishnah record of oral law c200 CE	Practices • High Priests had a monopoly on animals for sacrifice and levied 10 percent tithe for upkeep of the Temple. Marriage and luxurious living were acceptable	Practices • Worshipped three times a day in strict order. Copied Hebrew scriptures. Ritual baths plus meal of wine and bread on Sabbath. Few married, and women lived outside walls	Practices • Led revolts against Rome in 6, 41 and 66–73 CE but were often divided among themselves
Fate • Numbered perhaps 60,000 at the time of Herod. Disappeared after 70 CE but theology survived	Fate • Only group to survive the Jewish Revolt of 66–73 CE	Fate • Did not survive the destruction of the Temple 70 CE	Fate • Numbered about 4,000. Qumran was destroyed 68–70 CE	Fate • Last stand by 900 Zealots at Masada 73 CE

Judaism: Pharisees, Scribes, Sadducees, Essenes, and Zealots

Published by Facts On File, Inc. All electronic storage, reproduction, or transmittal is copyright protected by the publisher.

Source: http://www.fofweb.com/Electronic_Images/Onfiles/CROFvol4-04.pdf

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Jewish History

Excerpt:

Who is a Jew?

Who is a Jew? For many this is a confusing question. Is being Jewish a religion or ethnic group? The term applies to both the religion and the ethnicity of a person. Someone can be a Jew and an atheist, because they are applying the term to their ethnic background as opposed to a religious background.

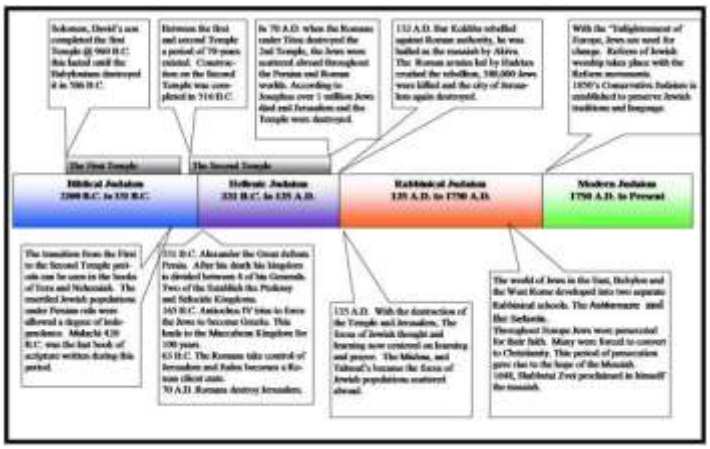
The Jewish faith is linked to the group of people known today as the Jewish people. The majority of people who are Jewish in faith, have an ethnic descent from the people of the land. The word, Jew comes from the Hebrew word,ydwhy*Y'huwdiy*, meaning Judah. Judah was the southern kingdom of Israel, the name and religion of descendent of Israel is linked with the southern kingdom, Judah. So when someone becomes Jewish they convert to the faith of the people of the land of Judah.

Are there different Jewish faiths?

Just like Christianity has Protestant, Catholic and Orthodox divisions with many subdivisions, there are different Jewish sects. Each Jewish sect has a their own history and circumstances on how they developed. There are three main Jewish sects, Orthodox,Conservative and Reform. The Orthodox is the oldest, tracing their heritage to the Pharisees mentioned in the New Testament. The Reform movement began in the early 19th century in Germany, challenging many of the Rabbinic traditions. The Conservative movement formed out of the Reform movement in the 1840's, seeing the importance of keeping some laws and traditions.

Jewish History

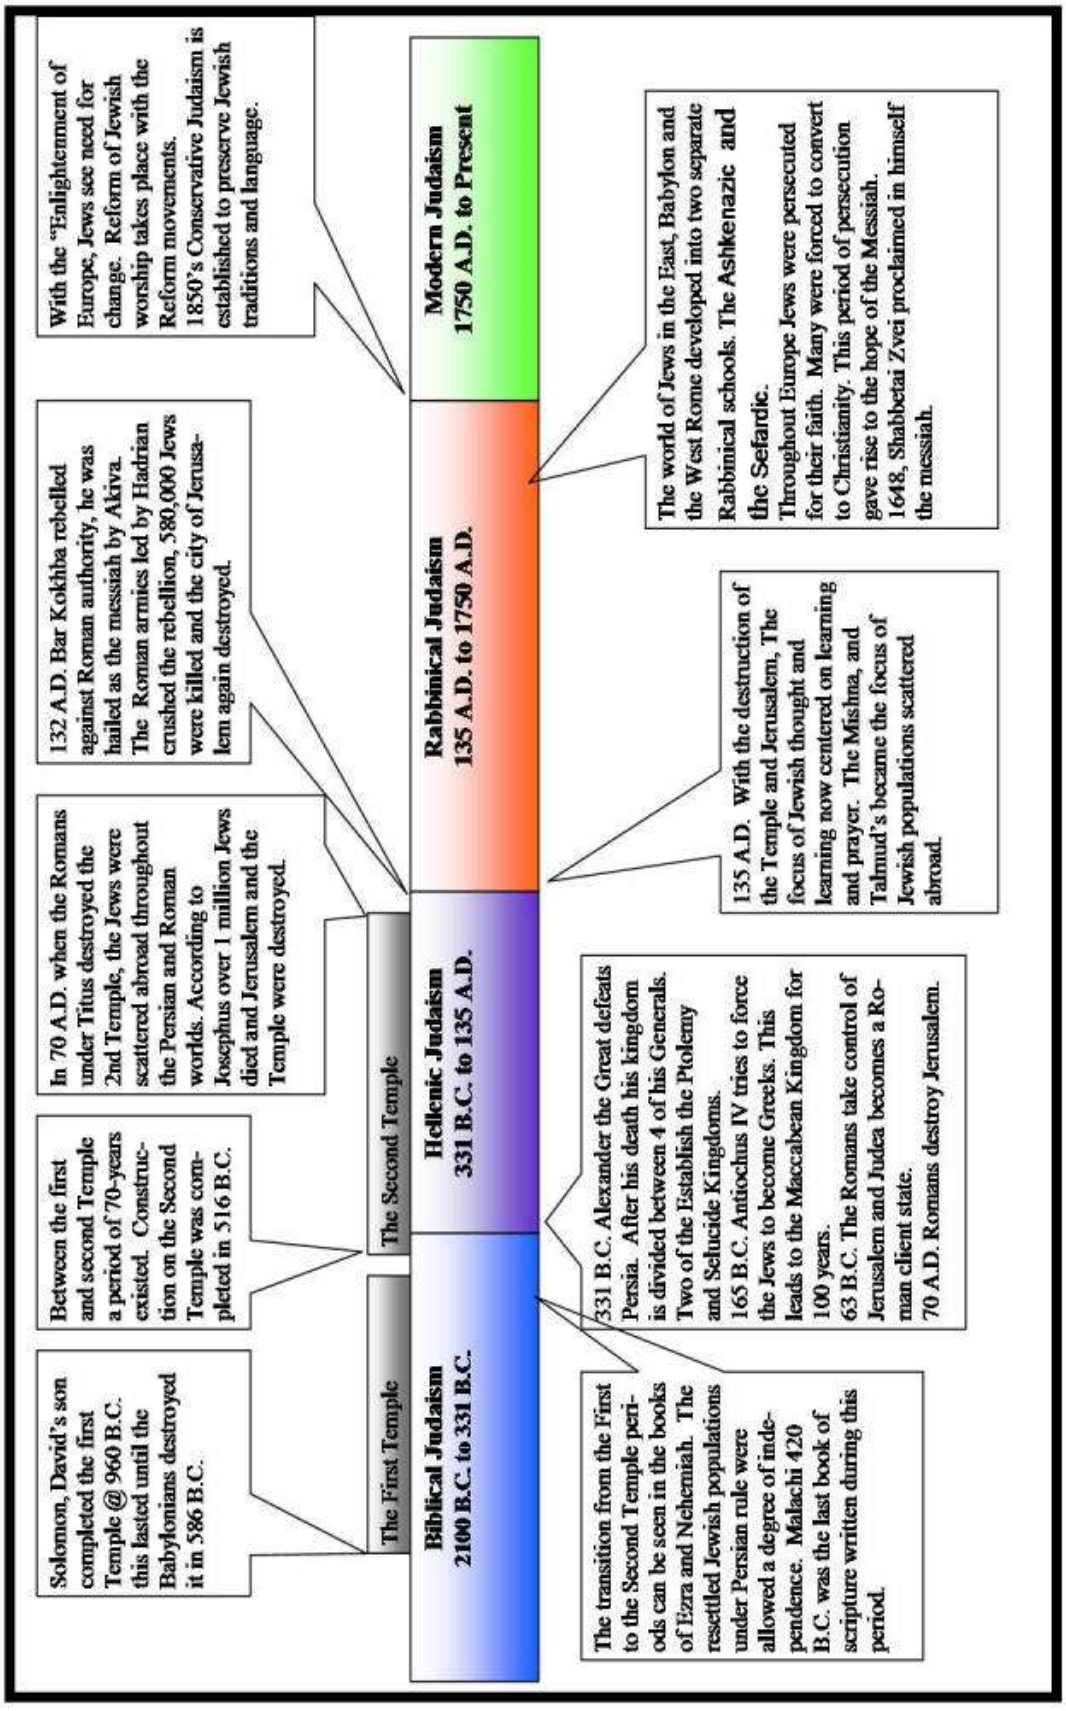
Jewish history dates back to the time of Abraham 2100 B.C, who was the founder of the Jewish people, and who is buried in Hebron. Next to the Temple Mount, the Tomb of Abraham is the most hotly contested piece of property in the world. Judaism can be broken down into 4 periods for simplicity.



Biblical Judaism 2100 to 332 B.C

Hellenic Judaism 332 B.C to 135 A.D.

Rabbinic Judaism 35 A.D. to 1750 A.D



Modern Judaism 1750 A.D. to Present

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

See next page for larger view…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Books of Judaism

http://www.truthnet.org/TheMessiah/3_Books_of_Judaism/

For more about the Jewish sects, history and culture, see my other separate references resource*:

The Complete Sayings of Jesus – NKJV with Appendix

(Note: NKJV is primary text to make reading easier, except when it varies significantly from the original KJV or a different translation text is clearer and/or more accurate.)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Supersessionism or Replacement (or Fulfillment) Theology

(supersessionism, i.e., the replacement of Israel by the church).

See also*: Replacment, Remnant and Separation Theology

Wikipedia: Superssionism

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Supersessionism

In Christianity, supersessionism is a theological view on the current status of the church in relation to the Jewish people and Judaism. It holds that the Christian Church has succeeded the Israelites as the definitive people of God or that the New Covenant has replaced or superseded the Mosaic covenant. From a supersessionist's "point of view, just by continuing to exist [outside the Church], the Jews dissent". This view directly contrasts with dual-covenant theology which holds that the Mosaic covenant remains valid for Jews.

Supersessionism has formed a core tenet of the Church for the majority of its existence. Subsequent to and because of the Holocaust, some mainstream Christian theologians and denominations have rejected supersessionism.

[FYI: The Islamic tradition views Islam as the final and most authentic expression of Abrahamic prophetic monotheism, superseding both Jewish and Christian teachings. The doctrine of tahrif teaches that earlier monotheistic scriptures or their interpretations have been corrupted, while the Quran presents a pure version of the divine message that they originally contained.]

Many Christian theologians saw the New Covenant in Christ as a replacement for the Mosaic Covenant. Historically, statements on behalf of the Roman Catholic Church have claimed its ecclesiastical structures to be a fulfillment and replacement of Jewish ecclesiastical structures (see also Jerusalem as an allegory for the Church). As recently as 1965 Vatican Council II affirmed, "the Church is the new people of God," without intending to make "Israel according to the flesh", the Jewish people, irrelevant in terms of eschatology (see "Roman Catholicism," below). Modern Protestants hold to a range of positions on the topic.

Theopedia: Supersessionism

https://www.theopedia.com/supersessionism

Supersessionism is the traditional Christian belief that Christianity is the fulfillment of Biblical Judaism, and therefore that Jews who deny that Jesus is the Jewish Messiah fall short of their calling as God's Chosen people.

Supersessionism, in its more radical form, maintains that the Jews are no longer considered to be God's Chosen people in any sense. This understanding is generally termed "replacement theology."

The traditional form of supersessionism does not theorize a replacement; instead it argues that Israel has been superseded only in the sense that the Church has been entrusted with the fulfillment of the promises of which Jewish Israel is the trustee. This belief has served not only as the explanation for why believers in Christ should not become Jews, but is also the reason that Jews are not exempted by the Christian churches, from the call of the Gospel to believe in Jesus Christ for salvation from sin and from the penalties due to sin.

In recent times, the doctrine of supersessionism has been blamed for mistreatment of the Jews in the past. Some liberal Protestant groups have therefore formally renounced supersessionism, affirming that Jews and other non-Christians have a valid way to find God within their own faith, which breaks from historic Protestant teaching. Dispensationalism affirms that salvation is only through faith in Christ, and that Jews fall short of obtaining the kingdom of the promised Messiah, unless they are converted to Christianity. However, in their view, a future mass conversion will result in the restoration of the nation Israel prior to the Millennium, apart from the church dispensation. This anticipation of a future role for the ethnic and geo-political nation of Israel in the plan of God, apart from the Church, is what is meant by some dispensationalists who style themselves as rejectors of "supersessionism" or "replacement theology", and thus they are using the terms in a way that is distinctive to their expectation of future events.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

What are the Replacement Denominations?

https://amos37.com/replacement-denominations/

Note: the following article also includes a list of some of the replacement denominations…

Replacement Theology: A Lie From the Pit of Hell (Perspective of a Messianic Jew)

https://grandmageri422.me/2016/08/11/replacement-theology-a-lie-from-the-pit-of-hell/

Excerpt:

Replacement Theology (RT), has been around for centuries. The term used by theologians is supersessionism. The church supersedes Israel. Theologians have cited the destruction of the Temple in 70 AD as proof that God was finished with the Jewish people.

There are two main schools of thought regarding RT:

> Israel's role as God's Chosen was completed once Jesus came to earth (economic supersessionism).
>
> Because of her disobedience, Israel forfeited her role as Chosen of God because of her rejection of Jesus as Messiah (punitive supersessionism).

Punitive supersessionism was clearly articulated by Martin Luther in his sermon: "On the Jews and Their Lies."

> For such ruthless wrath of God is sufficient evidence that they [i.e., the Jewish people] assuredly have erred and gone astray. Even a child can comprehend this. For one dare not regard God as so cruel that he would punish his own people so long, so terrible, so unmercifully … Therefore this work of wrath is proof that the Jews, surely rejected by God, are no longer his people, and neither is he any longer their God. ("On the Jews and Their Lies," Trans. Martin H. Bertram, in Luther's Works [Philadelphia: Fortress Press, 1971], p. 265).

How could a man used of God as was Martin Luther come to such a conclusion about the Jews? It is written that later in his life, Luther was convinced that he was called of God to save the Jews. When his efforts failed, he became enraged. In one night, in response to his anti-Semitic sermon, synagogues were burned to the ground and over 2000 Jews were slaughtered. Martin Luther was used by God in a mighty way in the Great Reformation, but alas he was merely a man. His teachings about Jews had a dramatic impact on the church in Germany for many years to come. Hitler was a great fan of Luther. He carried the sermon: "On the Jews and Their Lies" to every SS meeting.

RT is closely related to Reformed or Covenant Theology, which is associated with John Calvin. If you've noticed that your pastor does not speak or teach on eschatology (the study of End Times) it's most likely that the leadership of your church adhere to amillennialism. A view of eschatology which views End Times prophecy as "spiritual" instead of literal. It's a convenient way of avoiding the promises made to Israel in the Word. Since the proponents of RT believe that the church inherited the promises made to

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Israel, there is no need to teach that End Times prophecy is literal. The prophecies are viewed more as allegorical.

It has always amazed me that churches who teach RT completely ignore some critically important words by the apostle Paul in Romans 11. I would HIGHLY recommend that you read all of Romans 11 (9 and 10 as well) but Romans 11 truly expresses why the Jews did not receive their Savior, and clearly shows that God is not done with His Chosen people.

I would love to print all of Romans 11, but I am placing what I consider to be the heart of this chapter:

> "For I do not desire, brethren, that you should be ignorant of this mystery, lest you should be wise in your own opinion, that blindness in part has happened to Israel until the fullness of the Gentiles has come in. And so all Israel will be saved, as it is written:
>
> "The Deliverer will come out of Zion, and He will turn away ungodliness from Jacob; for this is My covenant with them, when I take away their sins."
>
> Concerning the gospel they are enemies for your sake, but concerning the election they are beloved for the sake of the fathers. For the gifts and the calling of God are irrevocable. For as you were once disobedient to God, yet have now obtained mercy through their disobedience, even so these also have now been disobedient, that through the mercy shown you they also may obtain mercy. For God has committed them all to disobedience, that He might have mercy on all" (Romans 11:25-32).

How could this be any clearer? God ordained that a blindness in part would happen to Israel, until all of the Gentiles who were to be saved would come into His Kingdom. It also states the gifts of and the calling of God are irrevocable.

God's plan from the beginning was to offer salvation to the entire world. He used the Jewish people to bring His law to show His Holiness, and then through their lineage He would ultimately bring His Son to pay for all sin. What a merciful and loving God we serve!

Satan is determined to lie and deceive mankind. He uses just a little bit of truth (Scripture) and then twists it for his purposes. He knows the Word better than any one of us. His motivation for memorizing God's Word is to seek and destroy God's people. He started in the Garden of Eden with Eve. He tried it against Jesus in the wilderness. Jesus always fought him (and shut him down) with pure Scripture.

God made a Covenant with Israel. I've read articles by Bible teachers who claim that Israel relinquished the promises made by God because of their rebellion. God cannot lie. He made the promises. It has nothing to do with how good or bad Israel is. It has everything to do with God and His faithfulness.

Supersessionism (another Messianic Jewish perspective)

https://derek4messiah.wordpress.com/supersessionism/

Excerpt:

Supersessionism can be sneaky (if you don't know what supersessionism is, check here).

A commenter on the Jesus Creed blog, where I guest-posted recently about Richard Harvey's book, Mapping Messianic Jewish Theology, said that someone asked N.T. Wright (famed scholar of the New Testament) if he was supersessionist. Wright said that he was not.

The thing you can learn from a good book on the subject (we'll be learning from a great one, Soulen's The God of Israel and Christian Theology) is that supersessionism is not just overt anti-Judaism.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Supersessionism is far more pervasive in Christian theology and far more surreptitious (that means sneaky). My guess is that Wright thought to himself, "I am very sensitive to Jewish issues, I am sympathetic to Judaism, and therefore, my ideas are not supersessionist in nature."

Yet, the sad truth is, Wright is a supersessionist, even if he doesn't realize it. He sees Judaism as subsumed in Christ and that there is not an ongoing, active role for Israel as the freely elected, irrevocably chosen people of God.

How does someone who understands Judaism so well and who writes some of the best historical sketches of Second Temple Judaism in all of academic literature wind up nonetheless being a supersessionist?

The very idea of supersessionism is just so darn hard to shake from within Christian theology…

R. Kendall Soulen's The God of Israel and Christian Theology is a book that stands out from the crowd of books on the subject. This is the singular most intelligent, constructive, and incisive treatment of the topic.

On pg. 29, Soulen cites one example of supersessionism, from Melito of Sardis, the second century church father:

> The people Israel was precious before the church arose, > and the law was marvelous before the gospel was elucidated.
> But when the church arose > and the gospel took precedence > the model was made void, conceding its power to the reality . . .
> the people was made void when the church arose.
> From On Pascha

This little theological poem is an example of economic supersessionism: the idea that Israel is subsumed and made obsolete under the new economy of Christianity (or New Covenant or however you would like to express the new economy brought to us in Christ).

Economic supersessionism need not be anti-Judaic. You can admire a fossil. You can write about its history, the beauty of the creature that became the fossil. You can even say charitable things about those who continue to exist according to the pattern of the fossilized creature. But you believe nonetheless that the being that gave arise to the fossil can only continue meaningfully by switching to the new economy.

Often hand in hand with economic supersessionism is punitive supersessionism: Israel's place is surrendered due to lack of faith in Christ. The "punitive" in punitive supersessionism does not always indicate that the church punishes Israel (though historically, this happened more often than not in numerous slaughters, burnings, pogroms, and eventually the ovens of the Nazi party). Rather, punitive indicates that the removal of Israel from its place as the covenant people of God is a punishment for failure to believe in and follow Christ. However, the church often took it upon itself to be the avenging agent of God against the Jews.

Melito of Sardis has a poem about this as well:

> Therefore, O Israel,
> you did not quake in the presence of the Lord,
> so you quaked at the assault of foes . . .
> you did not lament over the Lord,
> so you lamented over your firstborn;
> You did not tear your clothes when the Lord was hung,
> so you tore them over those who were slain. . .
> you did not accept the Lord,

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

you were not pitied by him. . .
-From On Pascha

You might possible eradicate economic supersessionism from your theology and expunge every trace of punitive supersessionism and still have a problem. You can say all day long, "I continue to believe Israel is God's chosen people," and yet be a supersessionist in a subtle and pervasive way.

How is this so?

The most pervasive, subtle, and sneaky form of supersessionism is structural supersessionism: reading the overarching narrative of the Bible in such a way that Israel is a footnote in history.

Soulen introduces a concept called the canonical narrative. It means the way you see the big story arc of the Bible, the metanarrative, the overarching tale.

The topic deserves its own blog post, but I'll briefly describe the standard canonical narrative of the church, which Soulen documents as a second century production. Many modern theologians have not progressed from the second century on this most important matter. The SCN or standard canonical narrative is as follows:

Creation

Fall

Redemption

Consummation (a fancy word for bringing top completion, perfection)

God created us. We fell away from him. He sent a redeemer to bring us back. The redeemer will return to consummate all things.

Consider how the SCN makes use of the Bible:

Creation – Genesis 1-2

Fall – Genesis 3

Redemption – Gospels and Epistles

Consummation – Revelation

The Bible of the SCN is greatly abridged. You could take your Christian Bible, cut out Genesis 4 through Malachi 4, and not lose a drop. Copies of the New Testament could be printed with Genesis 1-3 as an introduction and a selection of Messianic prophecies appended, and little would be lost.

The SCN is structural supersessionism because in the very structure of its understanding of the Bible, Israel is a footnote.

We would do well to ask ourselves, why didn't God bring the redeemer right away, before Abraham and Moses and all that inconvenient stuff?

At the very least, we need to embrace a canonical narrative that recognizes God sunk his presence into the "carnal soil" of history (the term was coined by Michael Wyschogrod, an Orthodox Jewish theologian, and is used by Soulen). Israel is the carnal soil into which God's presence was placed in human history. To make a long story short, in a foolproof manner, not dependent on complete faithfulness from Israel, God's presence on earth, his incarnation, was through the people Israel.

Ultimately the incarnation settled in its ultimate form in a son of Israel.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Our canonical narrative at the very least needs one more step, and creative ways of restructuring it should be thought out:

Creation

Fall

Covenant

Redemption

Consummation

So, if you want to develop a theology which rids itself of all supersessionism, which assumes that God did not waste anything in his economy of redemption, that nothing is purposeless in the Biblical story arc, you need not only to get rid of economic and punitive supersessionism, but also structural.

And this is a paradigm change in theology. I suggest Soulen's book as one great attempt on the way. I find his rebuilding of the canonical narrative persuasive. Others are possible.

Replacement/Fulfillment Theology, Supersessionism Debunked

http://slideplayer.com/slide/10109427/ (slideshow)

NT Wright and the Supersessionism Question: What did Paul do? (2013)

by Scot McKnight

http://www.patheos.com/blogs/jesuscreed/2013/10/15/nt-wright-and-the-supersessionism-question-what-did-paul-do/

Excerpt:

One of the distinguishing discussions today in Pauline studies is whether or not Paul was a "supersessionist," and the issue is Paul thought the church "replaced" Israel in such a way that now God no longer worked with Israel but with the church. To get ahold of this one means knowing how the whole Bible is to be read when we see that word "fulfillment." At the ground level it has to do with how Torah observant "messianic Christians" are to be and how "Jewish" Christianity ought to be… it goes back and forth. N.T. Wright, in his magisterial Paul and the Faithfulness of God, as he opens the second part of the book by examining Paul's worldview as it takes on and adapts and adjusts the worldviews of Judaism, paganism and empire, goes square at that issue without using the terms so many in the supersessionism debate use. He differs with those, like Bockmuehl and Nanos, who see the messianists carrying on their Judaism, or Paul continuing to be kosher as he had been as a Pharisee, but because this has all become a worldview issue and not simply a theology issue, the framework changes with Wright — he seems to be talking about the same issues but now from a new angle. He's asking What did Paul do with Judaism when he saw the resurrected Jesus?

In brief, I see in Wright a kind of Christian fulfillment theory that some will see as replacement theology and others as supersessionism and yet others (like Wright himself) will see as nothing of the sort. It is the Jewish Paul being completely Jewish under the Messiahship of Jesus. When Jesus is Messiah, nothing and everything chances at the same time: he's just as Jewish, perhaps more so, and yet different than what contemporaries, like Pharisees, saw as Jewish. His terms: everything gets reworked (monotheism, election, eschatology), everything gets revised, everything is taken on in new categories but it's the same old covenant in a messianic worldview.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

I once had a lengthy conversation with a Jewish scholar who told me I could not be Christian without being a supersessionist; sometimes one gets the impression the only way not to be supersessionist is to be a radical pluralist. Here are words NT Wright uses to describe how Paul revised the worldview of Judaism.

Like Temple:

The replacement of Temple with Jesus and, secondarily and derivatively, with his people remains one of Paul's central worldview-revisions, unnoticed in an earlier generation that chose to forget the significance of the Temple within Paul's ancestral symbolic universe. He developed it further: the Messiah's people, and the tasks they perform 'in the Messiah', are described in terms which reflect the people at the centre of Jerusalem and the Temple and the tasks they performed there. They were priests, offering sacrifices, indeed offering themselves as sacrifices, or, in Paul's case, bringing the gentiles themselves as a quasi-sacrificial offering, with a kind of heavy irony, to Jerusalem. And Jerusalem itself, the focus of the longed-for centripetal pilgrimage of the nations, has been replaced by Jerusalem as the centrifugal originating point of the world mission. The redeemer does not now come to Zion but from Zion, going out into all the world to 'gather the nations', not by their coming to the central symbol of ancient Judaism, but by their becoming the central symbol, as we shall see, of the transformed world- view" (358).

Like Torah and food laws:

> In the light of this, and of Paul's own insistence that he took what he calls the 'strong' position, I find myself in agreement with those who have maintained that Paul did not himself continue to keep the kosher laws, and did not propose to, or require of, other 'Jewish Christians' that they should, either (359).
>
> Paul's revising of the Jewish symbol of Torah in terms of food and table- fellowship, then, was clear, if necessarily complex. First, all those who belong to the Messiah, and are defined by Messiah-faithfulness and baptism, belong at the same table: this, as we shall see, is a constitutive part of his most central new positive symbol. Second, Messiah-followers are free to eat whatever they wish, with that freedom curtailed only (but strongly) when someone else's 'weak' conscience is endangered. Third, Messiah-followers are free to eat ordinary meals with anyone they like, but not with someone who professes to be one of the family but whose behaviour indicates otherwise. Fourth (an extra but important point), Messiah-followers are not free to go into a pagan temple and eat there. To do so would be to stage a contest with the lord himself. All this is not just 'ethics'. It is a matter of a freshly crafted symbolic universe (361).

Similar, and just as interesting, observations are made about circumcision and sabbath and prayer and land and zeal/the Battle (with the satan, et al) and Scripture itself. Supersessionism? No, I don't think. Fulfillment? Certainly. Revision? That's the key term here. Faith in Messiah turns the old inside out and makes the old new without abolishing it.

He turns then to briefer escapades into worldview and paganism and then worldview and empire, on the latter he opens with this reminder, something in need of saying because so many think anti-empire means anarchism too: "The answer to corrupt authorities is not anarchy" (381). But he returns to the implication of a confession by way of a denial:

> Jesus is 'son of God'; he is 'lord of the world'; he is 'saviour'; the worldwide revelation of his rule is 'good news', because through it 'justice' and 'peace' are brought to birth at last. He is the one who 'rises to rule the nations'. The announcement of all this is the key source, for Paul, of 'power', > and in Ephesians, which is either Paul's greatest summary of his own teach- ing or the work of a careful and close colleague and imitator, he speaks eloquently about the power of the one God at work in the Messiah, a power which has raised him above all rule, authority, power and dominion, and above every name that is named, both in the present age and in the age to come. Anyone who had seen the Eagle at work, and had heard its names and claims, would know what was being said. We must advance this case more fully later on (383).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

On countering the breathtaking power of the story at work in empire and Rome …

> Paul does not mention this story explicitly, any more than he speaks of the imperial claim made by coins, statues and other obvious imagery. Yet we should not ignore the subversive nature of the retold Jewish story which undergirds so much of his writing. If this – the story of Adam, Abraham and Israel, climaxing in the Messiah! – is the grand narrative of the creator's design for his world, then the grand narrative of Virgil, Horace and Livy, and the visual symbolism which went with those writings, cannot be true, or the ultimate truth. That is the dilemma which Paul posed to his readers. The extent to which they will have 'heard' that subversive note is a question to which we must return (383).

Put together then we are back to the anti-empire theme:

> When Paul said, 'Jesus is lord,' a good many of his hearers must have known at once that this meant, 'So Caesar isn't.' And that was the 'good news', the euangelion which Paul announced around the world. Was that a subversion of the symbolic world of the empire? How could it not be? How would that work out? (384)

Covenant Theology, Israel, and Supersessionism

https://puritanreformed.blogspot.com/2014/01/covenant-theology-israel-and.html

Excerpt:

…It does seem therefore that while we should oppose Dispensationalism and most definitely its religious form "Christian Zionism," [Jewish Virtual Library] yet in light of the blessing we have from the Jews, we should love the Jews and seek their salvation, so as to complete the circle of redemption. This seems to necessitate some weak version of secular "Zionism" [Jewish Virtual Library] in that we should desire to love and bless the Jews and not regurgitate lies about them.

[See also: GotQuestions] [Christian Zionism (Against)]

Conclusion:

Reformed Covenant Theology, rightly understood, is not supersessionism. We believe in expansion theology, not replacement theology. Nowhere is this more practical than in the way we deal with ethnic Jews and the modern state of Israel. We should not excuse their rebellion and unbelief, or their sins, and we should not glorify them either. Rather, we should seek to love the Jews and tell the truth about both the Jews and the modern state of Israel, while seeking their salvation. In God's plan and timing, He will bring about many of them to salvation, and thus God's salvific purposes will be fulfilled in time, to the praise of His glory and grace.

See also*: Israel and the Church

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Practical Christianity – Living, Lifestyle, Application, Virtues, Morality

(or Christian Praxis)

Contents

Life Application Videos – Gene Getz

The Problem with Good Morals

Why Anger Management Will Never Get It Done

Why Do Christians Worship

Francis Chan: Why He Left His Mega Church, Homosexuality,
Preaching in Front of John MacArthur

You Say vs God Says (chart)

Judging Others

Stewardship (Robert Morris: Beyond Blessed)

Free Indeed Series (Robert Morris: Influence of Demons including on Christians)

The Golden Triangle of Freedom (Dr. Oz Guinness, Eric Metaxas)

More Eric Metaxas (Everything You Wanted to Know…, Martin Luther)

Special Links: Andy Stanley: The "Mess" in the Mirror; Power of Mentoring; etc.

I Am Second; Walter Martin's Last Time on TBN

The Battle for the Mind (Dr. Martyn Lloyd-Jones sermon – audio)

Louie Giglio: Don't let the Enemy Sit at Your Table! How Great is Our God?

Marriage Builders: His Needs, Her Needs

The Five Love Languages (Introduction, Summary and Quizzes)

Forgiveness

Fasting

Prayer (How to Pray Like Jesus)

The Six Pillars of Biblical Power and Honest Politics (John C. Rankin)

My Identity – Who I Am In Christ

See also: Science, the Bible, and God ; Christians and Politics

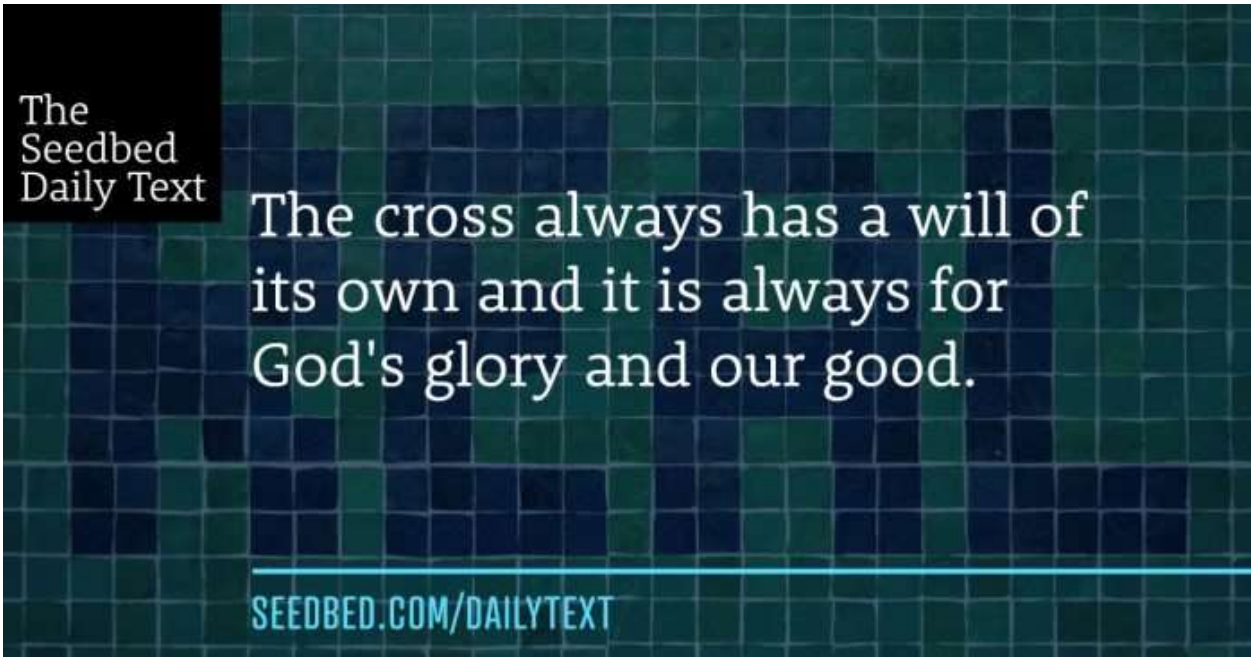
 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Life Application (Gene Getz) [Recommended]

https://bibleprinciples.org/

Dr. Gene Getz (bio) now serves as President of the Center for Church Renewal and has completed a 7-year Bible project using the Holman Christian Standard Bible. The "Life Essentials Study Bible" is the first Multi-Media Study Bible which contains 1,500 principles from Genesis to Revelation. Using QR codes associated with each biblical principle, the reader can access over 250 hours of video teaching on these principles by Dr. Getz. Gene also airs a 2-minute daily feature on numerous radio stations called "Bible Principles" which can also be accessed by going to www.bibleprinciples.org where you'll also discover information about Gene's Life Essentials Study Bible.

Note: Those same online principle teaching videos (for the entire Bible) are available for anyone directly via topic list and search. (Video Search)



The Problem with Good Morals (2017)

http://www.seedbed.com/the-problem-with-good-morals/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Why Anger Management Will Never Get It Done (2017)
http://www.seedbed.com/why-anger-management-will-never-get-it-done/

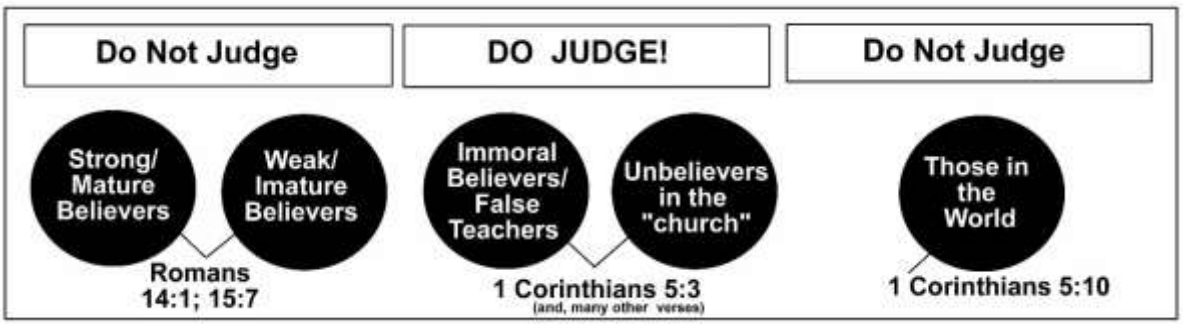
Why Do Christians Worship? (2013)
http://www.ministrymatters.com/all/entry/4416/why-do-christians-worship (link to video)

A few years ago I got the chance to interview J.D. Walt, now the current head of SeedBed.com. Previously, Walt held the position at Asbury Theological Seminary as the Dean of Chapel. Before moving on to new ventures, I asked him one question: What is worship? This is his response. I cannot tell you how much my view of worship and communion and community has changed over the past six months, so much now that I wonder how much I actually really believed this before. His words are a powerful reminder of what we often forget or, worse, what we are never taught…

Why Francis Chan Left His Megachurch
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=VyZx_SSOyfI

Francis Chan on Homosexuality
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=pJ82wVfO5qs&spfreload=5

When Francis Chan Preached In Front Of John MacArthur
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Jez3UL4kQqY



Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

You Say vs God Says

YOU SAY	GOD SAYS	BIBLE VERSES
You say: 'It's impossible'	God says: All things are possible	(Luke 18:27)
You say: 'I'm too tired'	God says: I will give you rest	(Matthew 11:28-30)
You say: 'Nobody really loves me'	God says: I love you	(John 3:1 6 & John 3:34)
You say: 'I can't go on'	God says: My grace is sufficient	(II Corinthians 12:9 & Psalm 91:15)
You say: 'I can't figure things out'	God says: I will direct your steps	(Proverbs 3:5- 6)
You say: 'I can't do it'	God says: You can do all things	(Philippians 4:13)
You say: 'I'm not able'	God says: I am able	(II Corinthians 9:8)
You say: 'It's not worth it'	God says: It will be worth it	(Roman 8:28)
You say: 'I can't forgive myself'	God says: I Forgive you	(I John 1:9 & Romans 8:1)
You say: 'I can't manage'	God says: I will supply all your needs	(Philippians 4:19)
You say: 'I'm afraid'	God says: I have not given you a spirit of fear	(II Timothy 1:7)
You say: 'I'm always worried and frustrated'	God says: Cast all your cares on ME	(I Peter 5:7)
You say: 'I'm not smart enough'	God says: I give you wisdom	(I Corinthians 1:30)
You say: 'I feel all alone'	God says: I will never leave you or forsake you	(Hebrews 13:5)

Judging Others

http://www.generationword.com/diagrams_and_charts.html

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Stewardship (Beyond Blessed)

Pastor Robert Morris
https://pastorrobert.com/

https://www.youtube.com/channel/UCOTbquXxZDFfMMc_R-TuAww

Series: Beyond Blessed (Stewardship)
Think this is a relevant series for us, family, etc. to listen (4 <30 min segments) https://www.youtube.com/playlist?list=PLcvtxCTYiflUKpL8LXSEN079OXGe8imj0

Living Beyond Blessed
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=JjSl54qQOyo

Stewardship

We get to give.

Give the first to God.

1. It takes two legs. (Generosity and Stewardship)

Gen. 12:2 I will make you a great nation; I will bless you and make your name great; And you shall be a blessing. [NKJV]

2. Why talk about money? (16 of 38 parables by Jesus talk about money.)

Matthew 6:21. For where your treasure is, there your heart will be also. [NKJV]

3. Being a blessing.

1 Chron. 4:9-10 Now Jabez was more honorable than his brothers, and his mother called his name Jabez,* saying, "Because I bore him in pain." And Jabez called on the God of Israel saying, "Oh, that You would bless me indeed, and enlarge my territory, that Your hand would be with me, and that You would keep me from evil, that I may not cause pain!" So God granted him what he requested. [NKJV]

Note: pastor uses "not cause pain" to mean an opposite: "be a blessing"

Jabez was more respected than his brothers. His mother had named him Jabez, for she said, "I experienced pain when I gave birth to him." Jabez called out to the God of Israel, "If only you would greatly bless me and expand my territory! May your hand be with me! Keep me from harm so I might not endure pain!" God answered his prayer. [NET]

Jabez was more honorable than his brothers, and his mother named him Jabez saying, "Because I bore him with pain." Now Jabez called on the God of Israel, saying, "Oh that You would bless me indeed and enlarge my border, and that Your hand might be with me, and that You would keep me from harm that it may not pain me!" And God granted him what he requested. [NET]

Example: Giving $100 bill, the reason I do this is, this $100 bill is to remind you that God knows where you are, that he loves you and he wants to change your life.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Who's the Owner?
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=AUF92PN8gAU

A blessed life is a life that blesses.

There is a foundation of stewardship, which is ownership.

1. It all belongs to God.

Psalm 24:1 The earth is the LORD's, and everything in it. The world and all its people belong to him. [NLT]

Psalm 50:10-12 For all the animals of the forest are mine, and I own the cattle on a thousand hills. I know every bird on the mountains, and all the animals of the field are mine. If I were hungry, I would not tell you, for all the world is mine and everything in it. [NLT]

2. The First Belongs to God.

Exodus 13:2 "Consecrate to Me all the firstborn, whatever opens the womb among the children of Israel, both of man and beast; it is Mine."

Exodus 23:19 "The first of the firstfruits of your land you shall bring into the house of the LORD your God. You shall not boil a young goat in its mother's milk. [NKJV]

Gen 4:3-5 In the course of time Cain presented some of the land's produce as an offering to the LORD. And Abel also presented an offering — some of the firstborn of his flock and their fat portions. The LORD had regard for Abel and his offering, but He did not have regard for Cain and his offering... [HCSB]

This was approx. 2500 years before the Law (Torah) was equal to Moses.

3. The tithe belongs to God. (i.e., the FIRST tenth).

Ex. Joshua 7, they stole / robbed from God

Lev. 27:30 And all the tithe of the land, whether of the seed of the land, or of the fruit of the tree, is the LORD'S: it is holy unto the LORD.

Good Stewards
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=A9Gzvu867UA

the LandLORD

Matthew 25:14-29 Parable of the Talents (What is a Talent?)

Talking about money

"Well done good and faithful servants" talking about good stewards

Stewardship: "The management of the property of another." Def. by Morris

1 Cor. 10:26 for the earth is the Lord's, and all that is in it. [HCSB]

1. I'm not the owner.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

2. I am a steward.

Adam started as a steward.

Satan convinced Eve->Adam that they could be owners like God.

Stewardship is to protect and expand the resources of another.

We are God's bank. He has deposited his money in us.

Luke 12:13-21 The Parable of the Rich Fool

I'm a steward of everything God gave to me so that I can be a blessing when He wants me to be a blessing to others.

The Ten Financial Commandments
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=oVugQch1gYs

We plan to fail, when we fail to plan.

If you don't have a goal, you will make it.

1. Put God first. (1 Kings 17:13…)

2. Don't worship material things.

3. Don't use God's name selfishly.

4. Be a good steward.

(Remember sabbath day. Resting is believing that God can do more in 6 days than you can do in 7 days. Tithing is believing that God can do more with 90% than you can do with 100%.)

All good stewards do the following:

- Spend Wisely
- Save diligently
- Give generously

5. Teach your children.

6. Live on a budget.

A budget helps you make financial decisions without emotion.

It's like a map – if you're lost financially, you're not using a map

7. Live below your means.

Do not commit adultery (if you do you're living above your means)

Telling God your're not content with God or His provisions

8. Don't buy now and pay later = it's stealing!

God wires you emotionally to hope

Delayed gratification…hope->joy

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Depression…loss of hope

9. Be a good witness (bear true witness of Himself to neighbors)

10. Be content.

(do not covet…what you covet of neighbor's becomes idol and your neighbor becomes your god)

See also: Purpose Driven Life

Pastor Robert Morris: Free Indeed Series

In this series, we'll learn about the different kinds of doors we leave open to the Enemy, how we can close them and what it means to be truly free.

Under the Influence
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=v7d7N7D4n5Q
Series Introduction

Beware of the Chaldeans
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=qn1iqZg8pzI
Pastor Robert continues the Free Indeed series with a message explaining the tactics demons use against people.

Permission Granted
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=WwufadBHXLo
Pastor Robert continues the Free Indeed series with a message explaining how leaning on our own strength, righteousness and wisdom can open doors to the Enemy.

Believers in Bondage
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=P2iXYuox3AM
Pastor Robert continues the Free Indeed series with a message explaining how believers can continue being in bondage and how to break free from it.

Daily Thoughts / Prayers:

Charlie Daniels
https://twitter.com/CharlieDaniels

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Golden Triangle of Freedom

If You Can Keep It: The Forgotten Promise of American Liberty Audiobook Excerpt by Author Eric Metaxas (2016)

(Introduction from book read by the author)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=U2H_BfkJKds [Audio] (5 min.)

Eric Metaxas: IF YOU CAN KEEP IT

(Good overview of book)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=UmtOdNtCTxg [Video]

At a special Socrates in the City event, host Eric Metaxas discusses the key themes of his book If You Can Keep It: The Forgotten Promise of American Liberty. Filmed at the Union League Club in New York City.

Discusses the "Golden Triangle of Freedom"

The Golden Triangle of Freedom

Other Reference
http://rzim.org/just-thinking/the-golden-triangle-of-freedom/

Dr. Os Guinness: "A Free People's Suicide" (2012) (mentioned in Metaxas' video above)

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=LlHFR3dxuIg [Video]

Eric Metaxas and Socrates in the City host an evening with author and social critic Os Guinness on the topic, "A Free People's Suicide: Sustainable Freedom and the American Future," September 13, 2012.

Eric Metaxas: The Golden Triangle of Freedom (in under 90 seconds)

http://www.dobsonlibrary.com/resource/audio/aafc15c7-f80f-45a8-802a-985546c8a488 [Audio]

Socialism is a Euphemism for…

http://blog.doodooecon.com/2013/03/socialism-is-euphemism-for.html

Excerpts:

Lately, this blog has strayed from economics. The reason for the straying is difficult to explain because the reasoning behind it is uncommon knowledge. Economics is not simply about money, it is about people.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Economics is the study of free markets (or Marx's derogatory term "Capitalism"). Economics does not explain communism or socialism or centralized control because such would be the study of power hungry princes, in other words, politics. The study of free markets boils down to the description of rational behavior in free individuals…

…

Paraphrased, free markets are based upon the belief that individuals have a unique perspective in life and can use that to provide value to others. Your unique person-hood, your soul, is the basis of your value to yourself and to others.

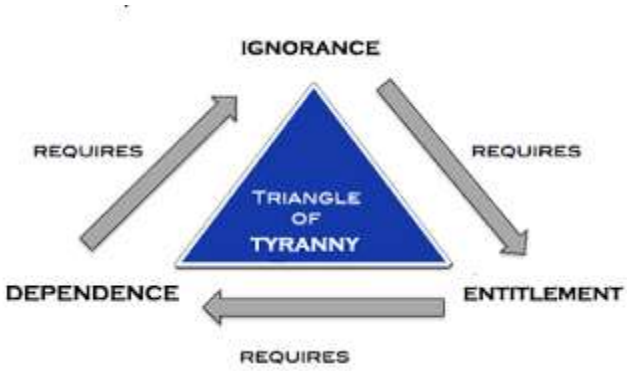
Gross Domestic Product

Many human cultures do not believe in the concept of a unique soul. For humanity in general, gross domestic product is a function of population. The more people, the more a society can produce. Like an ant colony, more ants under the control of a single queen is superior to fewer ants. This is the logical basis of human collectivism, detachment from individuality.

Free societies value the individual. Production is a function of freedom. Freedom is sustained by virtue.

Virtue is acquired through faith and wisdom. Faith and wisdom require freedom. This is known as the golden triangle of freedom.

It is all very puritanical, but was revolutionary is the late 1700's. This explains why America's founding fathers embraced the concept.



Through the last three hundred years, production from the world's free people has far exceeded the production of the collectivists. Innovation is a product of freedom, the wisdom of virtues, and the faith to persevere. Without freedom, no amount of determination, ability or faith can be focused upon that which the individual is exactly suited to pursue…

Socialism, a How To

From a colder, more scientific point of view, one might argue that the struggle is between the cumulative knowledge and the collective memory of humanity. Fundamentally, knowledge inspires imagination and creation. Memory is suited to incremental improvement and can resent opposing points of view.

Both knowledge and memory are imperfect so individuals rely upon a balance. Collectivist leaders must be portrayed as perfect to maintain power. The surer path is the critical detachment of collected memory. Inspirational leadership is rare and valuable, but unpredictable.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

All leaders are tempted by the easier, "more pragmatic" collectivist path. They are tempted by the proven path of tyranny over the individual.

Dividing individuals from freedom is simple. Use either force or deception.

Where free people are more powerful than the government, interrupt the golden triangle with wild promises and temptations.

Free health care, security, guaranteed food, shelter and income are proven temptations to humanity. Replace virtue with meaningless "feel-good" goals to misdirect productive efforts and then claim freedom has failed. Where virtue does not exist, free people ruin themselves, so emphasize the short-comings of those with faith. Discourage faith while diminishing the accomplishments of the risk-takers.

As more people ruin themselves, present yourself as a savior. Offer entitlement in place of self-reliance. Substitute freedom with dependence. Finally, teach fear and isolation with pseudo-wisdom like, "a man must accept his fate or be destroyed by it." Put the people in their place, below, ignorant of their own value.

A broken people is an unproductive people. So promise a reward for their allegiance. Faith promises a heaven for good works. So, promise a heaven on earth, utopia. Promise a reward in the end. Promise retirement.

You may be surprised to hear, there is no Hebrew word for retirement, at least not in the familiar sense. The closest biblical usage is re-vocationed.

Instead of doing the work in the Temple, they were to assist and provide their wisdom for the next generation of Levites.

Older, wiser people might impart virtues to young hearts yearning for freedom. Use the powerful promise of Utopian retirement. Sequester the retired away from the young. Promote division between young and old. Promote the ideal retirement as freedom from obligation. Finally, redistribute the collected wealth of the retired to further dependence upon the state.

Collectivism is simple. Entitlement requires the comfort of dependence. Dependence requires ignorance of opportunity. Ignorance requires the security of entitlement. Collectivism is subjugation…

Conclusion

Humanity's greatest attribute is adaptability We thrive in tribal societies, agrarian societies, empires, dark ages, ice ages, and more. We adapt to the environment and society. This is our greatest strength, but also our greatest weakness.

Slaves learn to survive enslaved. Masters learn to oppress. Free people must learn virtues and the faith to forge their own risky path. These are conflicting human fates separated by courage.

Leaders require character and courage to resist the temptation of tyranny, "character matters." Over time, our leaders have grown less courageous and less comfortable with citizens who are more wise and knowledgeable than the government. They have turned toward tyranny because they fear their rivals will exploit doubt in the minds of the people.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

A proven way to erase questioning and doubt is by promoting dependence, entitlement and ignorance. Instead of building us up, they tear us down to enable their lust for power. This is the triangle of tyranny. This is the path of the socialist. This is why socialism is a euphemism for evil.

...and this is why economics is not about money.

The Golden Triangle of Freedom (2016) (Includes same graphics as above, different text)
https://hpcmadison.com/2016/09/19/the-golden-triangle-of-freedom/

The Golden Triangle of Freedom
http://tennesseestar.com/2017/07/10/constitution-series-the-golden-triangle-of-freedom/

References this short video by Os Guiness:
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=pFXQbXZm1W4 [Video]

Eric Metaxas' golden triangle of freedom (Review)
http://blog.acton.org/archives/87127-eric-metaxas-golden-triangle-of-freedom.html
Sam Webb review of If You Can Keep It: The Forgotten Promise of American Liberty by Eric Metaxas (Viking, 2016)

See also my other separate reference resource*:
Christian Scholarship: Biblical – Theological – Philosophical

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

FYI: If you want to get a good idea about the thinking of Eric Metaxas…

"Everything You've Always Wanted To Know About God But Were Afraid To Ask" Eric Metaxas (C-Span-2 Book TV InDepth Interview) (3-Hours) [Recommended]
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=LpxGDSz_QMU

September 03, 2017, Author and radio host Eric Metaxas speaks about his life and career and responded to viewer calls and social media comments. He is the author of several books, including Bonhoeffer: Pastor, Martyr, Prophet, Spy, Amazing Grace: William Wilberforce and the Heroic Campaign to End Slavery and If You Can Keep It: The Forgotten Promise of American Liberty. (Note this is LONG (3-hours) and covers a lot of territory, but a great listen to better understand him and to learn.)

Note: The above interview was just before the availability of a new book (which he mentions), on Martin Luther. Here are some subsequent lectures in promotion of the book that the following month…

Martin Luther | Speaker: Eric Metaxas (Oct. 2, 2017) [Recommended]
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=gQD52TMgjnI [Video]

Grace Chapel Church (October 1, 2017) – Author/Speaker Eric Metaxas speaks on the significance and legacy of Martin Luther and the Protestant Reformation. Based on Metaxas' book Martin Luther: The Man Who Rediscovered God and Changed the World

A Conversation about Martin Luther with Eric Metaxas and Chuck Swindoll
(Oct. 31, 2017) (Stonebrier Community Church) (MetaxasTalk)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=uDkt8CetVr8 [Video]

This was his first major lecture on Martin Luther that was done PRIOR to the publishing of the book…

Eric Metaxas Discusses Life and Work of Martin Luther at Proclaim 17 (Feb. 2017)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=k8Xj8x-fzgo [Video] [Recommended]

Syndicated radio show host, popular author, and speaker Eric Metaxas talked about the life and work of Martin Luther on February 28, 2017, during a session for the Pastors Track of Proclaim 17, the NRB International Christian Media Convention, in Orlando, Florida. Metaxas, who will publish "Martin Luther: The Man Who Rediscovered God and Changed the World" in October, emphasized Luther's faithfulness to God's Word over all other things.

See also: Martin Luther

See also my other separate reference resource*:
Christian Scholarship: Biblical – Theological – Philosophical

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Special Links

I recently came across a video of a talk by Andy Stanley regarding the "mess" that we are, or that we find ourselves in, or we see in others. He states, "Whether we're religious or not, we've all been in, are in, or are one decision away from a mess. But there's a powerful connection between your messes and your relationship with God."

If you know of anyone who may be a "mess" or in a "mess", this may help with what our perspectives and actions should be in regard to the "mess".

Here's the link to the video (and also audio) of his talk (it's Part 1 in a series that just started this past week):

http://northpoint.org/messages/address-the-mess/the-mess-in-the-mirror/

Series link: http://northpoint.org/messages/address-the-mess/

Here are some additional related Andy Stanley links:

Andy Stanley – The Power of Mentoring [for the 40+]

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Q6YLbEYpVAo [Video] http://youllbegladyoudid.org/

http://yourmove.is/

Recent comment explained about small vs large churches:

http://www.christianitytoday.com/ct/2016/march-web-only/megachurch-pastor-andy-stanley-explains-controversial-remar.html

http://www.andystanley.com/

http://northpoint.org/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Came across this news item on the Internet regarding a Catalyst conference speech Andy Stanley made recently:

http://www.christianpost.com/news/andy-stanley-at-catalyst-cincinnati-dont-put-theology-above-ministry-let-cultural-issues-bump-people-out-162414/

I'm sure he's not talking about 'compromising' our theology, but at the same time not letting it hindering our ministering to people in the community.

At ths same time I came across this video by Andy, which I did not think would apply to me because I'm not a "preacher"... but it talks about developing Christian maturity in others and 'doing', i.e., application (NOT working for salvation) vs 'knowing'.

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=9GSVSfaCyf8 [Video]

BTW, here's a video about Christian pornography in an Interview by Andy:
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=BgBs5BNHYNQ [Video]

A Great Website featuring well known people sharing about "I Am Second":

I Am Second:
http://www.iamsecond.com

Walter Martin's Last Time on TBN - THEY KICKED HIM OFF! EXPOSING CHARLATANS
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=lFK6vcpeqzY

Return to*: Practical Christianity

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Battle for the Mind – Dr. Martyn Lloyd-Jones Sermon

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=7AQQwLLglPo [Video]

The battle for the mind; the problem of modern intellectualism; true freedom of the mind only through Christianity; slaves to sin.

1 Peter 1:13 Therefore, with minds that are alert and fully sober, set your hope on the grace to be brought to you when Jesus Christ is revealed at his coming.

David Martyn Lloyd-Jones (20 December 1899 -- 1 March 1981) was a Welsh Protestant minister, preacher and medical doctor who was influential in the Reformed wing of the British evangelical movement in the 20th century. For almost 30 years, he was the minister of Westminster Chapel in London.

Thank you to the Martyn Lloyd-Jones Recordings Trust for permission to use this audio sermon.
http://www.mljtrust.org/

Return to*: Practical Christianity

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Louie Giglio - Don't Let the Enemy Sit At Your Table !!

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=HimctQWGbm0 [Video]

Creative and very VIVID illustration from Louie Giglio of what we sometimes tend to believe the Enemy about ourselves and our life. This is something, I think, every Christian should remember and keep in mind going through life daily...

Those lies are too often rule our lives, shape our lives and destroy our lives!! Don't believe them and remember what the Bible says about it in 1 Peter 5:8.

Full Video: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=cXaSlz8-Rks [Video]

Louie Giglio – How Great is Our God? [Recommend]

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=azFFc20_Ub4 [Video] https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=EAzCP8SEKwc [Video] https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=sIBFm8FFkRw [Video]

Stars and Whales singing How Great is Our God - Louie Giglio - 9min edit for church worship opener

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=helxFeG-0n0 [Video]

Return to*: Practical Christianity

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Marriage Builders: His Needs, Her Needs – Building an Affair-Proof Marriage

http://www.marriagebuilders.com//graphic/mbi3550_summary.html

Excerpt:

A Brief Summary of Dr. William F. Harley's Basic Concepts

If you apply all of my Basic Concepts to your marriage, you will do what most couples want to do, but have failed to do -- fall in love and stay in love. And that's what ultimately saves marriage -- restoring the feeling of love. I've never counseled a couple in love that want to divorce.

When you are in love, your emotions help you meet each other's emotional needs. They provide instincts that you may not have even known you have -- instincts to be affectionate, sexual, conversational, recreational, honest and admiring. These all seem to come naturally when you are in love.

But life can throw roadblocks across your path to marital bliss. The demands of a job or even children can limit your opportunity to meet each other's emotional needs. When that happens, very innocently and without any intent, you stop caring for each other as you had in the past, and you fall out of love.

When you fall out of love, everything that had helped your marriage seems unnatural. Your instincts turn against marital recovery, and toward divorce. What had once seemed effortless, now seems awkward. How can you restore the love you once had for each other when you no longer feel like doing what it took to create that love?

I've created these Basic Concepts to help you answer that question -- to help you do what it takes to restore your love for each other when you are not in love, when you don't feel like doing any of them. And then once your love is restored, these concepts will help you stay in love for the rest of your lives.

Basic Concept #1: The Love Bank

In my struggle to learn how to save marriages, I eventually discovered that the best way to do it was to teach couples how to fall in love with each other -- and stay in love. So I created a concept that I called the Love Bank to help couples understand how people fall in and out of love. This concept, perhaps more than any other that I created, helped couples realize that almost everything they did affected their love for each other either positively or negatively. And that awareness set most of them on a course of action that preserved their love and saved their marriages.

Within each of us is a Love Bank that keeps track of the way each person treats us. Everyone we know has an account and the things they do either deposit or withdraw love units from their accounts. It's your emotions' way of encouraging you to be with those who make you happy. When you associate someone with good feelings, deposits are made into that person's account in your Love Bank. And when the Love Bank reaches a certain level of deposits (the romantic love threshold), the feeling of love is triggered. As long as your Love Bank balance remains above that threshold, you will experience the feeling of love. But when it falls below that threshold, you will lose that feeling. You will like anyone with a balance above zero, but you will only be in love with someone whose balance is above the love threshold.

However, your emotions do not simply encourage you to be with those who make you happy -- they also discourage you from being with those who make you unhappy. Whenever you associate someone with bad feelings, withdrawals are made in your Love Bank. And if you withdraw more than you deposit, your Love Bank balance can fall below zero. When that happens the Love Bank turns into the Hate Bank. You will dislike those with moderate negative balances, but if the balance falls below the hate threshold, you will hate the person.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Try living with a spouse you hate! Your emotions are doing everything they can to get you out of there -- and divorce is one of the most logical ways to escape.

Couples usually ask for my advice when they are just about ready to throw in the towel. Their Love Banks have been losing love units so long that they are now deeply in the red. And their negative Love Bank accounts make them feel uncomfortable just being in the same room with each other. They cannot imagine surviving marriage for another year, let alone ever being in love again.

But that's my job -- to help them fall in love with each other again. I encourage them to stop making Love Bank withdrawals, and start making Love Bank deposits. I created all of the remaining Basic Concepts to help couples achieve those objectives.

Basic Concept #2: Instincts and Habits

Instincts are behavioral patterns that we are born with, and habits are patterns that we learn. Both of them tend to be repeated again and again almost effortlessly. They are important in our discussion of what it takes to be in love because it's our behavior that makes deposits and withdrawals from Love Banks, and our instincts and habits make up most of our behavior.

Instincts and habits can make Love Bank deposits, so it is imperative to know how to create those habits because once they are learned, deposits are made repeatedly and almost effortlessly.

Unfortunately, many of our instincts and habits, such as angry outbursts, contribute to Love Bank withdrawals. Since they are repeated so often, they play a very important role in the annihilation of Love Bank accounts. If we are to stop Love Bank withdrawals, we must somehow stop destructive instincts and habits in their tracks. Instincts are harder to stop than habits, but they can both be avoided.

As we discuss the remaining concepts, keep in mind the value of a good habit, and the harm of a bad habit, because their effect on Love Bank balances are multiplied by repetition.

Basic Concept #3: The Most Important Emotional Needs

What's the fastest way to deposit love units into each other's Love Banks? I interviewed literally hundreds of couples trying to find the answer to this question when I was first learning how to save marriages. Eventually their answer became clear to me -- you must meet each other's most important emotional needs.

You and your spouse fell in love with each other because you made each other very happy, and you made each other happy because you met some of each other's important emotional needs. The only way you and your spouse will stay in love is to keep meeting those needs. Even when the feeling of love begins to fade, or when it's gone entirely, it's not necessarily gone for good. It can be recovered whenever you both go back to making large Love Bank deposits.

First, be sure you know what each other's most important emotional needs are (complete the Emotional Needs Questionnaire). Then, learn to meet the needs that are rated the highest in a way that is fulfilling to your spouse, and enjoyable for you, too.

It's likely that you and your spouse do not prioritize your needs in the same order of importance. A highly important need for you may not be as important to your spouse. So you may find yourself trying to meet needs that seem unimportant to you. But your spouse depends on you to meet those needs, and it's the most effective and efficient way for you make large Love Bank deposits.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Basic Concept #4: The Policy of Undivided Attention

Unless you and your spouse schedule time each week for undivided attention, it will be impossible to meet each other's most important emotional needs. So to help you and your spouse clear space in your schedule for each other, I have written the Policy of Undivided Attention:

Give your spouse your undivided attention a minimum of fifteen hours each week, using the time to meet the emotional needs of affection, conversation, recreational companionship and sexual fulfillment

This policy will help you avoid one of the most common mistakes in marriage -- neglecting each other.

But it goes beyond helping guarantee that you will meet each other's emotional needs. It also unlocks the door to the use of all the other basic concepts. Without time for undivided attention you will not be able to avoid Love Busters and you will not be able to negotiate effectively. Time for undivided attention is the necessary ingredient for everything that's important in marriage.

And yet, as soon as most couples marry, and especially when children arrive, couples usually replace their time together with activities of lesser importance. You probably did the same thing. You tried to meet each other's needs with time "left over," but sadly, there wasn't much time left over. Your lack of private time together may have become a great cause of unhappiness, and yet you felt incapable of preventing it. You may have also found yourself bottling up your honest expression of feelings because there was just no appropriate time to talk.

Make your time to be alone with each other your highest priority -- that way it will never be replaced by activities of lesser value. Your career, your time with your children, maintenance of your home, and a host of other demands will all compete for your time together. But if you follow the Policy of Undivided Attention, you will not let anything steal from those precious and crucial hours together.

It is essential for you to (a) spend time away from children and friends whenever you give each other your undivided attention (you need privacy); (b) use the time to meet the emotional needs of affection, conversation, recreational companionship, and sexual fulfillment when you are together (when met, these make the largest Love Bank deposit of all!); and (c) schedule at least fifteen hours together each week (that's how long it usually takes to meet the four needs). When you were dating, you gave each other this kind of attention and you fell in love. When people have affairs, they also give each other this kind of attention to keep their love for each other alive. Why should courtship and affairs be the only times love is created? Why can't it happen in marriage as well? It can, if you set aside time every week to give each other undivided attention.

Basic Concept #5: Love Busters

When you meet each other's most important emotional needs, you become each other's source of greatest happiness. But if you are not careful, you can also become each other's source of greatest unhappiness.

It's pointless to deposit love units if you withdraw them right away. So in addition to meeting important emotional needs, you must be sure to protect your spouse, and the Love Bank, from withdrawals. And paying attention to how your everyday behavior can make each other unhappy does that.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

You and your spouse were born to be demanding, disrespectful, angry, annoying, independent and dishonest. These are normal human traits that I call Love Busters because they destroy the feeling of love spouses have for each other. But if you promise to avoid being the cause of your spouse's unhappiness, you will do whatever it takes to overcome these destructive tendencies for your spouse's protection. By eliminating Love Busters, you will not only be protecting your spouse, but you will also be preserving your spouse's love for you.

Basic Concept #6: The Policy of Radical Honesty

If you and your spouse are to be in love with each other, you must give honesty special attention. That's because it plays such an important role in the creation of romantic love. It's one of the ten most important emotional needs, so when it's met, it can trigger the feeling of love. On the other hand, its counterpart, dishonesty, is a Love Buster -- it destroys love.

But there's another reason that honesty is crucial in creating love: Honesty is the only way that you and your spouse will ever come to understand each other. Without honesty, the adjustments that are crucial to making each other happy and avoiding unhappiness cannot be made.

It isn't easy to be honest. Honesty is an unpopular value these days, and most couples have not made this commitment to each other. Many marriage counselors and clergymen argue that honesty is not always the best policy. They believe that it's cruel to disclose past indiscretions and it's selfish to make such disclosures. While it makes you feel better to get a mistake off your chest, it causes your partner to suffer. So, they argue, the truly caring thing to do is to lie about your mistakes or at least keep them tucked away.

And if it's compassionate to lie about sins of the past, why isn't it also compassionate to lie about sins of the present -- or future? To my way of thinking, it's like letting the proverbial camel's nose under the tent. Eventually you will be dining with the camel. Either honesty is always right, or you'll always have an excuse for being dishonest.

To help remind couples how important honesty is in marriage, I have written the Policy of Radical Honesty:

Reveal to your spouse as much information about yourself as you know; your thoughts, feelings, habits, likes, dislikes, personal history, daily activities, and plans for the future

Self-imposed honesty with your spouse is essential to your marriage's safety and success. Honesty will not only bring you closer to each other emotionally, it will also prevent the creation of destructive habits that are kept secret from your partner.

Basic Concept #7: The Policy of Joint Agreement

Marital instincts do not lead to fair negotiation. They either lead to giving away the store or robbing the bank. And sometimes no one even feels like negotiating. Yet, in order to meet each other's most important needs and avoid Love Busters consistently and effectively, fair negotiation is crucial in marriage.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

You need a rule to help you override your shortsighted instincts. So I've created a rule to guarantee that no one gets hurt, and that's the ultimate goal in fair negotiation. I call this rule the Policy of Joint Agreement:

Never do anything without an enthusiastic agreement between you and your spouse

Almost everything you do affects each other. So it's very important to know what that effect will be before you actually do it. The Policy of Joint Agreement will help you remember to consult with each other to be sure you avoid being the cause of each other's unhappiness. It also makes negotiation necessary, regardless of your state of mind. If you agree to this policy, you will not be able to do anything without the enthusiastic agreement of the other, so it forces you to discuss your plans, and negotiate with each other's feelings in mind. Without safe and pleasant negotiation, you will simply not be able to reach an enthusiastic agreement.

But there is are exceptions to this policy: If the health or safety of a spouse is at risk, it should not be followed. For example, if physical abuse takes place in marriage, it should be reported to authorities by the abused spouse even though the offending spouse would not agree. Exposing infidelity is another example of an exception because the emotional health of a betrayed spouse is at risk by keeping it to him or herself. Some spouses try to use this policy to keep the other spouse from having any normal contact with the outside world. Marriage should provide a safe and healthy enviroment for both spouses. So if you feel that your health or safety is at risk by following this policy, you should not follow it.

The Policy of Joint Agreement, combined with the Policy of Radical Honesty, helps you create an open and integrated lifestyle, one that will guarantee your love for each other. They also prevent the creation of a secret second life where infidelity, the greatest threat to your marriage, can grow like mold in a damp, dark cellar.

Basic Concept #8: Four Guidelines for Successful Negotiation

If you and your spouse are in conflict about anything, I recommend that you do nothing until you can both agree enthusiastically about a resolution. But how should you go about coming to that agreement? I suggest you follow four essential guidelines.

Guideline 1: Set ground rules to make negotiation pleasant and safe.

> Ground rule 1: Try to be pleasant and cheerful throughout negotiations
>
> Ground rule 2: Put safety first. Do not make demands, show disrespect, or become angry when you negotiate, even if your spouse makes demands, shows disrespect or becomes angry with you.
>
> Ground rule 3: If you reach an impasse and you do not seem to be getting anywhere, or if one of you is starting to make demands, show disrespect or become angry, stop negotiating and come back to the issue later.

Guideline 2: Identify the problem from both perspectives with mutual respect for those perspectives.

Guideline 3: Brainstorm with abandon - give your creativity a chance to discover solutions that would make you both happy. Carry a pad and pencil with you to jot down ideas as you think of them throughout the day.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Guideline 4: Choose the solution that meets the conditions of the Policy of Joint Agreement best - mutual and enthusiastic agreement. Whenever a conflict arises keep in mind the importance of finding a solution that will deposit as many love units as possible, while avoiding withdrawals. And be sure that the way you find that solution also deposits love units and avoids withdrawals.

Basic Concept #9: The Giver and Taker

Have you ever thought that your spouse is possessed? One moment he or she is loving and thoughtful, and the next you are faced with selfishness and thoughtlessness. Trust me, it's not a demon you're up against, it's the two sides of our personalities. I call them the Giver and the Taker.

All of us want to make a difference in the lives of other. We want others to be happy, and we want to contribute to their happiness. When we feel that way, our Giver is influencing us. The Giver's rule is do whatever you can to make others happy and avoid anything that makes others unhappy, even if it makes you unhappy. It encourages us to use that rule in our relationships with other people.

But we also want the best for ourselves. We want to be happy, too. When we feel that way, our Taker is influencing us. The Taker's rule is do whatever you can to make yourself happy, and avoid anything that makes yourself unhappy, even if it makes others unhappy. If that rule ever makes sense to you, it's because your Taker is in control.

These two primitive aspects of our personality are usually balanced in our dealings with others. But in marriage they tend to take turns being in charge. And that leads to most of the problems that couples encounter. If we take the advice of our Giver, we are willing to suffer to make our spouse happy, and if we take the advice of our Taker, we are willing to let our spouse suffer to make us happy. In either case the advice we are given is short sighted because someone always gets hurt.

Basic Concept #10: The Three States of Mind in Marriage

The Giver and Taker create moods that I call states of mind. These states of mind have a tremendous influence on the way a husband and wife try to resolve conflicts. But in each of the three states of mind, negotiation is almost impossible. That's what makes negotiation, in general, so tough in marriage.

When we are in love and happy, we are usually in the State of Intimacy. That state of mind is controlled by the Giver, which encourages us to follow the Giver's rule: do whatever you can to make your spouse happy and avoid anything that makes your spouse unhappy, even if it makes you unhappy. That rule can lead to habits that may be good for our spouse, but can be disastrous for us because we are not negotiating with our own interests in mind.

Sadly, flawed agreements made in the state of Intimacy can lead to our own unhappiness, and that in turn wakes the slumbering Taker. As long as we are happy, our Taker has nothing to do, but when we start feeling unhappy, our Taker rises to our rescue and triggers the State of Conflict. With the Taker now in charge, we are encouraged to follow the rule: do whatever you can to make yourself happy, and avoid anything that makes yourself unhappy, even if it makes others unhappy. The Taker also encourages us to be demanding, disrespectful and angry in an effort to force our spouse to make us happy. Fighting is the Taker's favorite "negotiating" strategy.

When fighting doesn't work, and we are still unhappy, the Taker encourages us to take a new course of action that triggers the State of Withdrawal. Instead of trying to force our spouse to make us happy, our Taker wants us to give up on our spouse entirely. We don't want our spouse to do anything for us, and we certainly don't want to do anything for our spouse. In this state of mind we are emotionally divorced.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

How can couples work their way back to the state of Intimacy once they find themselves trapped in the state of Withdrawal? And once they are back, how can they stay there? The answers to those questions are found in Basic Concepts #7 and #8.

Would you like to learn more? Now that you've read a summary of my basic concepts, you may want to learn more about each of them. If so, go back to the beginning to my first, and most important concept that I created that help couples understand the rise and fall of romantic love. I call it the Love Bank.

The Most Important Emotional Needs

As soon as I realized that a large Love Bank balance triggered the feeling of love, I went to work trying to discover what spouses could do for each other that would make the largest Love Bank deposits. I would ask couples, "What could your spouse do for you that would make you the happiest?" That very question focused on a core issue in marriage -- the issue of care. I could have asked the question, "How would you like your spouse to care for you?" As it turns out, care in marriage is doing what it takes to make each other happy.

When you were married, you and your spouse both promised to care for each other, and you expected that care from each other. You were in love, and you were highly motivated to make each other happy. But it might not have occurred to you at the time that if you didn't care for each other the right way, you might lose your love for each other. And along with your loss of love, you might lose your willingness to care for each other.

At the time, you probably did not know what caring for each other the right way meant. You thought that your commitment to care for each other would be sufficient to sustain your love. Even today, you may still be in the dark as to what it takes to care for each other the right way.

If that's the case, let me explain to you what care in marriage is: To care the right way, you must make large Love Bank deposits. And I've found that the best way to make those deposits is to meet each other's most important emotional needs.

What is an emotional need? It is a craving that, when satisfied, leaves you with a feeling of happiness and contentment, and, when unsatisfied, leaves you with a feeling of unhappiness and frustration. There are probably thousands of emotional needs. A need for birthday parties, peanut butter sandwiches, Monday Night Football, I could go on and on. Some people have some of those needs while others have different needs. If you feel good doing something, or if someone does something for you that makes you feel good, an emotional need has been met.

But not all emotional needs are created equally. When some are met, you may only feel comfortable--they make small Love Bank deposits. There are others, however, that can make you feel downright euphoric. In fact they make you so happy that you're likely to fall in love with the person that meets them. I call those our most important emotional needs because they make the largest Love Bank deposits of all. And those are the very same emotional needs that a husband and wife expect each other to meet in marriage.

By now you can probably see where I'm headed. My first goal when counseling a couple is to help them identify their most important emotional needs. Once those needs are identified, I help them learn to meet those needs for each other. I want them to make the largest deposits possible into each other's Love Banks. If all goes well, they begin making those large deposits and eventually they are in love with each other.

When I first began using this approach to saving marriages, I didn't know what made people the happiest in marriage -- I didn't know what emotional needs would be the most important. So I had to ask hundreds of men and women that question, "What could your spouse do for you that would make you the happiest?"

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

As spouses explained what they wanted most, I classified their desires into emotional need categories. And almost all those I interviewed described one or more of only ten emotional needs as being most important to them (admiration, affection, intimate conversation, domestic support, family commitment, financial support, honesty and openness, physical attractiveness, recreational companionship and sexual fulfillment). Very few ever named a most important emotional need that was not included in this list of ten.

I also made a revolutionary discovery that helped me understand why husbands and wives tended not to meet each other's most important emotional needs. Whenever I asked couples to list their needs according to what they needed most, men would list them one way and women the opposite way. Of the 10 emotional needs, the five listed as most important by men were usually the five least important for women, and vice-versa.

What an insight! It is no wonder that husbands and wives have so much difficulty meeting each other's needs: They lack empathy. They are willing to do for each other what they appreciate the most, but it turns out that their efforts are misdirected. What they appreciate the most, their spouses appreciate the least!

Pay close attention to this next point I am about to make, because it is one of the most misunderstood aspects of my entire program.

Everyone is unique. While men on average pick a particular set of five emotional needs as their most important and women on average pick another set of five, any given man or woman can and do pick various combinations of the ten. So even though I know the most important emotional needs of the average man and woman, I don't know the emotional needs of any particular husband or wife.

I'm in the business of trying to save all marriages, not just average marriages, so I encourage each couple to ignore what I say about average male and female needs and identify those that are unique to them. That way each spouse's list of the most important emotional needs reflects what he or she appreciates the most. When they meet those needs for each other, they create the greatest happiness, and trigger a mutual feeling of love.

These conclusions are reflected in my book His Needs, Her Needs where I explain how couples build romantic love by learning how to meet each other's most important emotional needs. Readers are encouraged to identify these needs by using the Emotional Needs Questionnaire that I provide at the back of the book. Then I encourage them to become experts at meeting those needs. This questionnaire is also available to you on this website. Just click, Emotional Needs Questionnaire, to discover the most important emotional needs for you and your spouse. Be sure to print two copies so you and your spouse each have one.

Before you fill out the questionnaire read a short description of each need that I've provided for you so that you will be accurate in the choices you make.

- Affection
- Sexual Fulfillment
- Intimate Conversation
- Recreational Companionship
- Honesty and Openness
- Physical Attractiveness
- Financial Support
- Domestic Support
- Family Commitment
- Admiration

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Once you have identified each other's most important emotional needs, your next step is to learn how to meet them. I've written several Q&A columns to help you achieve that objective. Listed below are some of those columns.

Affection

How to Meet the Need for Affection

Sexual Fulfillment

How to Meet the Need for Sexual Fulfillment

Changing a Willingness to Make Love into a Desire to Make Love

How to Overcome Pain During Intercourse?

How to Overcome Sexual Aversion?

What to Do When Your Spouse Has an Addiction to Pornography

Conversation

What to do When Your Conversation Becomes Boring and Unpleasant

Recreational Companionship

Why Should a Couple Be Together When They Are the Happiest?(Part 1)

What to Do When Your Recreational Companionship Becomes Boring and Unpleasant (Part 1)

What to Do When Your Recreational Companionship Becomes Boring and Unpleasant (Part 2)

Before we leave the very important topic of how to make Love Bank deposits, I want you to understand how important it is for you to schedule enough time to meet each other's most important emotional needs. You simply will not do a very good job making each other happy while doing something else or in your spare time--you need to schedule quality time each week to give each other your undivided attention. I make this crucial point in the Policy of Undivided Attention.

Related information continued on next page…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

It's good to understand our different needs. (William F. Harley)

Men's Needs:
- Sexual fulfillment
- Recreational companionship
- An attractive wife
- A peaceful, quiet home
- Admiration

Women's Needs:
- Affection (1 Cor. 7:3-5)
- Conversation (Eph. 4:29)
- Openness and Honesty (Eph. 4:25, 15; also Prov. 24:26)
- Financial Support (1 Tim. 5:8)
- Commitment to Family (Eph. 6:4)

Communication is the Key: Practical Recommendations (Dr. Dennis Borg)

 Have a daily time to talk (Eccles. 3:7)

 Timing and Setting are Important

 Give Undivided Attention

 Really Listen (Jas. 1:19: 1. with ears, 2. with eyes, 3. with heart)

 Pay attention to listening signals

 Avoid interruptions

 Give sympathy, not solutions (Prov. 16:24, 1 Pet. 3:8)

 Respond first, Comment second

See also*: The Five Love Languages

Return to*: Practical Christianity

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Five Love Languages

http://www.5lovelanguages.com/

Wikipedia

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/The_Five_Love_Languages

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Understanding the Five Languages of Love

https://www.focusonthefamily.com/marriage/communication-and-conflict/learn-to-speak-your-spouses-love-language/understanding-the-five-love-languages

Excerpt:

My conclusion after many years of marriage counseling is that there are five emotional love languages — five ways that people speak and understand emotional love.

Words of affirmation

One way to express love emotionally is to use words that build up. Solomon, author of ancient Hebrew Wisdom Literature, wrote, "The tongue has the power of life and death" (Proverbs 18:21, NIV). Many couples have never learned the tremendous power of verbally affirming each other.

Verbal compliments, or words of appreciation, are powerful communicators of love. They are best expressed in simple, straightforward statements of affirmation, such as:

"You look sharp in that suit."

"Do you ever look incredible in that dress! Wow!"

"I really like how you're always on time to pick me up at work."

"You can always make me laugh."

Words of affirmation are one of the five basic love languages. Within that language, however, there are many dialects. All of the dialects have in common the use of words to affirm one's spouse. Psychologist William James said that possibly the deepest human need is the need to feel appreciated. Words of affirmation will meet that need in many individuals.

Quality time

By "quality time," I mean giving someone your undivided attention. I don't mean sitting on the couch watching television together. When you spend time that way, Netflix or HBO has your attention — not your spouse. What I mean is sitting on the couch with the TV off, looking at each other and talking, devices put away, giving each other your undivided attention. It means taking a walk, just the two of you, or going out to eat and looking at each other and talking.

Time is a precious commodity. We all have multiple demands on our time, yet each of us has the exact same hours in a day. We can make the most of those hours by committing some of them to our spouse. If your mate's primary love language is quality time, she simply wants you, being with her, spending time.

Receiving gifts

Almost everything ever written on the subject of love indicates that at the heart of love is the spirit of giving. All five love languages challenge us to give to our spouse, but for some, receiving gifts, visible symbols of love, speaks the loudest.

A gift is something you can hold in your hand and say, "Look, he was thinking of me," or, "She remembered me." You must be thinking of someone to give him or her a gift. The gift itself is a symbol of that thought. It doesn't matter whether it costs money. What is important is that you thought of him or her.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

And it is not the thought implanted only in the mind that counts but the thought expressed in actually securing the gift and giving it as the expression of love.

But what of the person who says, "I'm not a gift giver. I didn't receive many gifts growing up. I never learned how to select gifts. It doesn't come naturally for me." Congratulations, you have just made the first discovery in becoming a great lover. You and your spouse speak different love languages. Now that you have made that discovery, get on with the business of learning your second language. If your spouse's primary love language is receiving gifts, you can become a proficient gift giver. In fact, it is one of the easiest love languages to learn.

Acts of service

Michelle's primary love language was what I call "acts of service." By acts of service, I mean doing things you know your spouse would like you to do. You seek to please her by serving her, to express your love for her by doing things for her.

Consider actions such as cooking a meal, setting a table, emptying the dishwasher, vacuuming, changing the baby's diaper, picking up a prescription, keeping the car in operating condition — they are all acts of service. They require thought, planning, time, effort and energy. If done with a positive spirit, they are indeed expressions of love.

A willingness to examine and change stereotypes is necessary in order to express love more effectively. Remember, there are no rewards for maintaining stereotypes, but there are tremendous benefits to meeting the emotional needs of your spouse. If your spouse's love language is acts of service, then "actions speak louder than words."

Physical touch

We have long known that physical touch is a way of communicating emotional love. Numerous research projects in the area of child development have made that conclusion: Babies who are held, stroked and kissed develop a healthier emotional life than those who are left for long periods of time without physical contact.

Physical touch is also a powerful vehicle for communicating marital love. Holding hands, kissing, embracing and sexual intercourse are all ways of communicating emotional love to one's spouse. For some individuals, physical touch is their primary love language. Without it, they feel unloved. With it, their emotional tank is filled, and they feel secure in the love of their spouse.

Implicit love touches require little time but much thought, especially if physical touch is not your primary love language and if you did not grow up in a "touching family." Sitting close to each other as you watch your favorite television program requires no additional time but may communicate your love loudly. Touching your spouse as you walk through the room where he is sitting takes only a moment. Touching each other when you leave the house and again when you return may involve only a brief kiss or hug but will speak volumes to your spouse.

Once you discover that physical touch is the primary love language of your spouse, you are limited only by your imagination on ways to express love.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

"The Five Love Languages" by Gary Chapman

https://www.thespruce.com/five-love-languages-by-gary-chapman-2300513

Excerpt:

Dr. Gary Chapman is a Christian counselor and the author of The Five Love Languages. He writes about the importance of being able to express love to your spouse in a way that your spouse can understand. He calls this a type of communicating through the use of five "love languages."

Here is a brief summary of the five emotional love languages according to Chapman:

Words of Affirmation

This is when you say how nice your spouse looks, or how great the dinner tasted. This involves showing love through the use of verbally affirming statements toward your partner. These words will also build your mate's self-image and confidence.

Quality Time

Some spouses believe that being together, doing things together and focusing in on one another is the best way to show love. This includes emotional engagement in each other during whatever activity you may be doing together, even if it is just "hanging out." If this is your partner's love language, turn off the TV, ignore your cell phone and give one another some undivided attention.

Receiving Gifts

It is universal in human cultures to give gifts. They don't have to be expensive to send a powerful message of love. Spouses who forget a birthday or anniversary or who never give gifts to someone who truly enjoys gift giving will find themselves with a spouse who feels neglected and unloved.

This is not about materialism, it is about knowing that you are on someone's mind even when you are not together. Here is where the thought definitely counts!

Acts of Service

This is about how you can best do something for your spouse will require time and creativity. These acts of service like vacuuming, shoveling the snow, hanging a bird feeder, planting a garden, etc., need to be done with joy in order to be perceived as a gift of love.

For people who value acts of service, "actions speak louder than words" is their mantra.

Physical Touch

These people place a lot of importance on physical affection and touch. Not necessarily sex per se, but hugs, hand holding, an impromptu massage and so on. This physical contact is very reassuring and meaningful to someone with this love language.

Determining Your Own Love Language

Since you probably have been speaking what you need all along, you can discover your own love language by asking yourself these questions:

- How do I express love to others?
- What do I complain about the most?
- What do I request most often?

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

However, speaking in your partner's love language will most likely not be natural for you. Dr. Chapman cautions in his book, "We're not talking comfort. We're talking love. Love is something we do for someone else. So often couples love one another but they aren't connecting. They are sincere, but sincerity isn't enough." We must step out of our comfort zone meet each other's emotional needs.

Emotional Experiences

Dr. Chapman reports that the number one emotional experience people have is feeling the presence of God in their lives. The emotional high of falling in love is the second highest emotional experience that people reportedly have.

Therefore, it can be quite difficult to try and talk some sense into someone who is in the midst of falling in love. In fact, Dr. Chapman believes that obsessive love can render people mentally incompetent. He writes, "There's not much difference between being in love and being insane." Humans place a critical importance of having love in their lives, particularly the love that a romantic relationship brings.

Fading Tingle and Empty Love Tanks

After the first or second year of marriage, when the initial "tingle" is starting to fade, many couples find that their "love tanks" are empty. They may have been expressing love for their spouse, but in reality, they may have been speaking a different love language. The best way to fill your spouse's love tank is to express love in their love language.

Each of us has a primary love language. Usually, couples do not have the same love language.

Tank Check

Dr. Chapman recommends that you have a "Tank Check" 3 nights a week for 3 weeks. Ask one another "How is your love tank tonight?" If, on a scale from zero to ten, it is less than 10, then ask "What can I do to help fill it?" Then do it to the best of your ability.

Although the love language concept has not been scientifically proven, it makes a good amount of sense. The key is to remember to use this knowledge to be better at loving your partner. Because both loving and being loved so critical in our lives learning about each individual's "love language" can bring us closer to achieving this goal.

Dr. Gary Chapman Explains The 5 Love Languages

https://verilymag.com/2013/04/dr-gary-chapman-explains-the-5-love-languages

Excerpt:

What are the 5 Love Languages?

1. Words of Affirmation: Actions don't always speak louder than words. If this is your love language, unsolicited compliments mean the world to you. Hearing the words, "I love you," are important—hearing the reasons behind that love sends your spirits skyward. Insults can leave you shattered and are not easily forgotten.

2. Quality Time: In the vernacular of Quality Time, nothing says, "I love you," like full, undivided attention. Being there for this type of person is critical, but really being there—with the TV off, fork and knife down, and all chores and tasks on standby—makes your significant other feel truly special and loved. Distractions, postponed dates, or the failure to listen can be especially hurtful.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

3. Receiving Gifts: Don't mistake this love language for materialism; the receiver of gifts thrives on the love, thoughtfulness, and effort behind the gift. If you speak this language, the perfect gift or gesture shows that you are known, you are cared for, and you are prized above whatever was sacrificed to bring the gift to you. A missed birthday, anniversary, or a hasty, thoughtless gift would be disastrous—so would the absence of everyday gestures.

4. Acts of Service: Can vacuuming the floors really be an expression of love? Absolutely! Anything you do to ease the burden of responsibilities weighing on an "Acts of Service" person will speak volumes. The words he or she most wants to hear: "Let me do that for you." Laziness, broken commitments, and making more work for them tell speakers of this language their feelings don't matter.

5. Physical Touch: This language isn't all about the bedroom. A person whose primary language is Physical Touch is, not surprisingly, very touchy. Hugs, pats on the back, holding hands, and thoughtful touches on the arm, shoulder, or face—they can all be ways to show excitement, concern, care, and love. Physical presence and accessibility are crucial, while neglect or abuse can be unforgivable and destructive.

What inspired you to write a book on this subject?

During my early years of counseling it was obvious to me that couples were missing each other when one would say, "I feel like he/she doesn't love me." And the other would say, "I don't know what else to do. I try to show her that I love her." I heard this pattern over and over again. So, I went through 12 years of notes that I had made when counseling couples and asked the question: When someone said, I feel like my spouse doesn't love me, what did they want? What were they complaining about? Their answers fell into 5 categories. I later called them the 5 love languages.

Who benefits from understanding the 5 Love Languages?

In all my years of counseling, speaking, and writing about the 5 love languages, I've found that everyone benefits when they begin to apply them in all their relationships; obviously people are at different levels and depending on the current condition of their relationship most find they see an immediate response.

If I am unmarried, but in a romantic relationship with someone who has an opposite love language, should I jump ship and find someone who shares the same love language?

Rarely do couples share the same love language. I don't recommend giving up on a relationship because of this difference, however, it can create an atmosphere of frustration when you think you are doing a good job at expressing your love and yet the other person is not feeling loved. If you don't understand the love language concept, then you really "don't know what else to do." If however, you understand that they speak a different language, then you can learn to speak that language.

Here is an example:

One husband said,

"I mow the grass every Saturday after I wash the car. I vacuum every Thursday night. I do the dishes at least four nights a week. I help her with the laundry. I do all of this and she says that she 'does not feel loved.' I don't know what else to do."

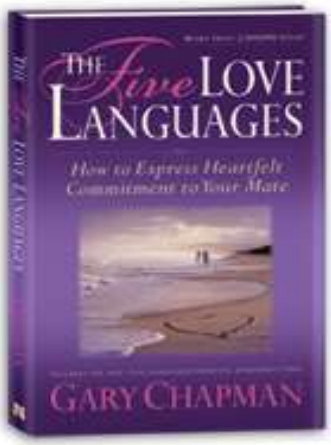
Her response was,

"He is right. He is a hard working man." Then she began to cry and said, "But we don't ever talk. We haven't talked in thirty years." She is dying for 'Quality Time' while he is speaking 'Acts of Service.'

Both are frustrated. When he finally got the picture he said, "Why didn't someone tell me this thirty years ago. I could have been sitting on the couch and talking to her instead of doing all this stuff." We can all learn to speak someone's love language.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

How do I communicate what my love language is to others?



I highly recommend taking the love languages profile in the back of the book or at the website, www.5lovelanguages.com. After taking the profile then share your results with your loved one(s) so they can know specifically what makes you feel loved and I recommend you encourage them to do the same.

The Five Love Languages Quiz

http://www.the-relationship-coach.com/relationship-quizzes.html

Excerpt:

""The Five Love Languages Quiz is a love test written by LJ - The Relationshp Coach - and based around the five love languages coined by Gary Chapman in The Five Love Languages.

This is one of those relationship quizzes that will prove its' weight in gold. You will discover your primary an secondary love languages.

By encouraging your partner or boyfriend to also do The Five Love Languages Quiz you will also gain extremely valuable insight into learning how to speak the language of love most effectively to them in a way that they understand and really treasure.

I hope you enjoy the Five Love Languages Quiz.

LJ

"Many marriages would be better if the husband and the wife clearly understood that they are on the same side."

~ Zig Ziglar (1926-), American author, salesperson & motivational speaker

Sometimes it can seem like the person we love most in this world is also our greatest frustration... like we're playing on different teams or actually trying to hurt each other. In actual fact, however, we're longing for closeness and love, but just can't seem to pull things together.

Instead of believing that we're on different "sides", let's just learn to celebrate our differences. Let's stop trying to make our partner more like us, and instead seek to enjoy and appreciate those differences and quirky things that we fell in love with in the first place.

The Five Love Languages Quiz does just that. It helps you understand the ways you most understand receiving love. This is valuable info for your partner. Why not both do this test and then share results with one another!

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

So, grab a pen and piece of paper. Read each of The Five Love Language Quiz questions with your boyfriend, partner or husband in mind (or if you haven't found that special someone yet, then just imagine you have).

The Five Love Languages Quiz

Write down the numbers 1-36 on a blank page - each number corresponds to that numbered question. Then, read each question and give it a score out of 5 according to the following scale:

5 = Extremely True
4 = Very True
3 = True
2 = No Very True
1 = Not At All True

(1) It makes me so happy when the cards I receive from you are filled with thoughtful and loving words that you have written yourself

(2) I really love the little things you do around the house to help me

(3) I love to receive hugs from you

(4) Hugs are such simple things, but they mean so much to me in my love relationship

(5) Spending time together just enjoying each other is an important way in which I feel loved

(6) I really feel loved when you tell me that you think I look attractive/handsome

(7) I feel really loved when you put yourself out for me

(8) I feel loved when you buy me little gifts

(9) I feel so loved when you say little things to encourage me

(10) I feel loved when you turn your mobile phone off and we can just enjoy each other

(11) I love it when you tell me how much you appreciate the everyday things I do

(12) I really enjoy it when you touch me on the arm affectionately

(13) I feel very special when you surprise me with flowers

(14) I feel so loved by the thoughtful things you do for me

(15) It's great to go out to a concert, for a meal or a walk… just where we can enjoy each other

(16) I love it when you make me breakfast

(17) Holding hands together is really important to me

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

(18) I feel loved when we have great conversations together

(19) The gifts you give me are very special to me

(20) It doesn't so much matter what we do, as long as we do it together

(21) Helping me do things makes me feel really loved

(22) I feel so loved when you give me your undivided attention

(23) I think that receiving gifts is a very important part of a loving relationship

(24) I really love when we can just talk and laugh together

(25) I really love it when you compliment me

(26) I really feel loved when you cook me a special romantic dinner

(27) I feel so loved when you spontaneously give me kisses

(28) Sitting close together with you makes me feel more loved than if we sat apart

(29) I feel so special when you buy me things you know I'd like

(30) I feel so loved when you write me little love notes

(31) Receiving tangible gifts from you make me feel loved

(32) I really appreciate and feel loved when you do little things that you know I don't enjoy doing

(33) Receiving presents are among my favourite things

(34) I feel so much closer when we touch more often

(35) Just calling me on the phone just to tell me you're thinking of me is really important to me

(36) The thing I'd most like you to do for my birthday would be to:

A. Take the day off work and organise to do something special together
B. Write me an original poem about how you feel about me
C. Buy me a special gift that you know I would really enjoy
D. Make me a special three course meal and organise to do some of my least favourite chores for the week
E. Make me 100 "hugs and kisses" coupons that are redeemable wherever and whenever I want STOP... Don't go past this point in The Five Love Langauges Quiz until you've graded each of the above questions with a score from 1-5 !!!

Don't cheat, as you want to get the most out of The Five Love Languages Quiz.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Five Love Languages Quiz Calculations...

Now add up the following to get your Five Love Language Quiz results:

1) Add together: 1, 6, 9, 11, 25, 30, 35 & 36B = /40

2) Add together: 2, 7, 14, 16, 21, 26, 32 & 36D = /40

3) Add together: 3, 4, 12, 17, 27, 28, 34 & 36E = /40

4) Add together: 5, 10, 15, 18, 20, 22, 24 & 36A = /40

5) Add together: 8, 13, 19, 23, 29, 31, 33, 36C = /40

The Five Love Languages Quiz Results...

1) = Words of Affirmation
You feel extremely loved when your partner compliments you on the way you look or on the things you have done. You love their encouragement and verbal support and save their cards and love notes as some of your most precious items. You are always filled with such love when you receive a card they've written that expresses their heartfelt love for you in their own litle way, little poems they might write, or if they ring you spontaneously during the day to say they love you.

2) = Acts of Service
You feel so loved when your partner does little things to help you. You always notice when they are thoughtful and put themself out to assist you, even if you could do those things yourself. There is such a sense of love and thankfulness you feel when they do this.

3) = Physical Touch
You feel especially loved when your partner touches you in loving ways. Whether it's a spontaneous kiss, playful cuddle, or gentle, loving touch on the arm, you feel that touch convey the love your partner feels. You don't understand why people would prefer to sit far apart on different chairs or couches, when they could be touching or in each other's arms. When walking together, you really enjoy your partner reaching out to hold your hand, and you'd never say no to them giving you a massage.

4) = Quality Time
There's nothing that makes your feel more loved than spending quality one-on-one time with the person you love. Great conversation and eye contact, flowing conversation, laughter and just being together. While fancy gifts and kindly spoken words are nice, you'd trade them any day for uninterrupted "together"

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

time. You love it when your partner's mobile phone is turned off or they sacrifice other important activities to spend time with you. Whether it's fancy restaurant or just cuddling up on the couch to watch a movie and laugh about it together, you're happiest when you can share experiences together.

5) = Gift Giving
There's nothing better than receiving a thoughtful gift to make you feel loved in a relationship. Whether it's a single flower or something much more expenisive, you love being fussed over, spoilt and thought of. The fact that your partner thought to give you something then organised it is very meaningful to you.

I hope you've enjoyed doing The Five Love Languages Quiz.

Why not start putting your findings to practice right away! Check out How To Be Romantic. This is a great article that gives you romantic ideas and suggestions under each of the love language headings. Once you know your partner's love language (after they do The Five Love Languages Quiz themself), then you'll have all the info you need to really "WOW" them and make them feel even more loved and appreciated

Return from The Five Love Languages Quiz to Relationship Quizzes

Return from The Five Love Languages Quiz to The Relationship Coach Home Page

The 5 Love Languages, 7 Days, 1 Couple https://www.webmd.com/sex-relationships/features/the-five-love-languages-tested#1
The best-selling relationship advice book gets put to the test.

The Quintessential Love Language Quiz! 30 Questions (Online/ Interactive)
https://www.proprofs.com/quiz-school/story.php?title=whats-your-love-langugae

See also: Marriage Builders: His Needs, Her Needs

Return to: Practical Christianity

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Forgiveness

C. FitzSimons Allison's Kitten Story

http://www.mbird.com/2010/04/c-fitzsimons-allisons-kitten-story/

Excerpt:

From 1962's Fear Love and Worship:

"One reason for the joy in heaven over a sinner's repentance is the unique power which comes with forgiveness. The repentant sinner, having been forgiven and having been taken back like the Prodigal Son, learns a lesson of love that the righteous do not know. On his return the Prodigal knows the power of the father's love much better than he did before he left. This curious and alarming spiritual fact, that a forgiven sinner has experienced a measure of God's love he did not know before he sinned, has upset many people…From the very beginning this fact led some to ask St. Paul, 'Then should we sin that grace may abound?' Of course not, but the alarming quality of this part of the Gospel has led the principle of forgiveness to be denied and the consequent power lost… Christ's burden is light and his yoke is easy only when we ourselves are carried by his forgiveness.

"A sergeant told a grim joke to his trainees during the Second World War, which shows the real flaw in the Pharisaic understanding of Christianity. a man stopped on a dirt road to help get another man's car our of the ditch. The latter was beginning to harness two small furry kittens to the bumper of this huge car when he was asked, 'Mister, you aren't going to try to get those kittens to pull that car out of the ditch, are you?' His reply was, 'Why not? I've got a whip.' The lash of the Law is used in similar spiritual situations. Without the principle of forgiveness our conscience acquires a quality of cruelty that makes the Gospel of Christ anything but the Good News.

"It is perfectly incredible how the unmistakably clear and simple fact of God's forgiveness of sinners has been so frequently denied throughout the history of Christianity. There is a story of a clergyman who had an argument with a vestryman about whether a woman of bad reputation should be made welcome in the church. Finally the minister said, 'Well, didn't the Lord forgive the woman taken in adultery?' 'Yes,' replied the old gentleman, 'but I don't think any more of him for having done it.' …the resistance is always so great that every age needs to discover anew the experience and power of God's free forgiveness which is continually available to all. We can generally assume, regardless of our tradition, that we have not been adequately 'let in on' this part of the Good News."

Walking in Forgiveness

http://www.focusonthefamily.com/lifechallenges/relationship-challenges/learning-to-forgive-others/walking-in-forgiveness

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

What Is Forgiveness?

https://www.jw.org/en/bible-teachings/questions/what-is-forgiveness/

The Bible's answer

Forgiveness is the act of pardoning an offender. In the Bible, the Greek word translated "forgiveness" literally means "to let go," as when a person does not demand payment for a debt. Jesus used this comparison when he taught his followers to pray: "Forgive us our sins, for we ourselves also forgive everyone who is in debt to us." (Luke 11:4) Likewise, in his parable of the unmerciful slave, Jesus equated forgiveness with canceling a debt.—Matthew 18:23-35.

We forgive others when we let go of resentment and give up any claim to be compensated for the hurt or loss we have suffered. The Bible teaches that unselfish love is the basis for true forgiveness, since love "does not keep account of the injury."—1 Corinthians 13:4, 5.

What forgiveness does not mean

- Condoning the offense. The Bible actually condemns those who claim that bad actions are harmless or acceptable.—Isaiah 5:20.
- Pretending that the offense never happened. God forgave King David of serious sins, but he did not shield David from the consequences of his actions. God even had David's sins recorded so that they are remembered today.—2 Samuel 12:9-13.
- Allowing others to take advantage of you. Suppose, for example, that you loan money to someone, but he wastes it and then cannot repay you as he had promised. He is very sorry and apologizes to you. You could choose to forgive him by not harboring resentment, not rehashing the matter with him continually, and perhaps even canceling the debt altogether. However, you might also choose not to loan him any more money.—Psalm 37:21; Proverbs 14:15; 22:3; Galatians 6:7.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

- Pardoning with no valid basis. God does not forgive people who are guilty of willful, malicious sin and who refuse to acknowledge their mistakes, change their ways, and apologize to those whom they have hurt. (Proverbs 28:13; Acts 26:20; Hebrews 10:26) Such unrepentant ones become God's enemies, and he does not require us to forgive those whom he has not forgiven.—Psalm 139:21, 22.

What if you are the victim of cruel mistreatment by someone who refuses to apologize or even admit to what he has done? The Bible advises: "Let go of anger and abandon rage." (Psalm 37:8) While not excusing the error, you can refuse to be consumed with anger. Trust that God will bring the person to account. (Hebrews 10:30, 31) You can also take comfort in knowing that God will bring a time when we will no longer feel the deep pain or hurt that may burden us now.—Isaiah 65:17; Revelation 21:4.

- "Forgiving" every perceived slight. Sometimes, rather than pardoning a so-called offender, we may need to admit that we had no valid cause for being offended in the first place. The Bible says: "Do not be quick to take offense, for the taking of offense is the mark of a fool."—Ecclesiastes 7:9, footnote.

How to forgive someone

1. Remember what forgiveness involves. You are not condoning the wrong or acting as if it never happened—you are simply letting it go.
2. Recognize the benefits of forgiving. Letting go of anger and resentment can help you to keep calm, improve your health, and increase your happiness. (Proverbs 14:30; Matthew 5:9) Even more important, forgiving others is a key to receiving God's forgiveness for your own sins.—Matthew 6:14, 15.
3. Be empathetic. All of us are imperfect. (James 3:2) Just as we appreciate being forgiven, we should likewise forgive the mistakes of others.—Matthew 7:12.
4. Be reasonable. When we have a minor cause for complaint, we can apply the Bible's counsel: "Continue putting up with one another."—Colossians 3:13.
5. Act quickly. Work to forgive as soon as you can rather than letting your anger fester.—Ephesians 4:26, 27.

Note: Above excerpt is from a Jehovah's Witness website…while not condoning their foundational theology, we think this is a good article, nevertheless.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Forgive One Another

STUDY / DISCUSSION GUIDE

MAIN TEXT: Ephesians 4:32

A corresponding sermon video: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=2WRINaOUTHk
Fellowship Alliance Chapel 10/05-06/2019 Services [select time] (Skip music and start at sermon)

SUMMARY: We will look into forgiving one another. In the Christian life, we get, give, and live forgiveness.

OTHER THOUGHTS

Read Luke 7:36-50 and meditate on God's forgiveness provided for you and His love for you.

GETTING STARTED

Watch the video and answer the following question below:
Discussion Video: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=D76taO603h4

Question: Is forgiveness a choice regardless of feeling, or a feeling that leads to a choice? Explain.

DISCUSSING THE WORD

Read Ephesians 4:32. According to this passage, how are we to forgive others?

What is so significant about the phrase "as God in Christ forgave you."? Read Matthew 18:21-35. How does this story make it's point?

What are we giving up when we forgive others? How does this remind you of what Jesus did for you? How does forgiveness become an easier choice to make when you remember this?

What makes forgiveness so essential in relationships?

RESPONDING TO GOD

Why is Paul's instruction important for the church body?

Write on a piece of paper a person that you need to forgive (or someone that you know that needs to experience God's forgiveness). You don't need to share this with anyone. Then take time to pray silently for a minute to God for this person.

Return to*: Practical Christianity See also in the "One Another" series*: Carry One Another

[Go to Index]
Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only [Go to Top - TOC]

Fasting

FASTING by Scot McKnight (Review) (2009)
http://englewoodreview.org/featured-fasting-by-scot-mcknight-vol-2-6/

Excerpt:

Just in time for the season of Lent, which starts on Ash Wednesday (this year February 25), Thomas Nelson has just released the newest book in its "Ancient Practices" series: Fasting by Scot McKnight. This volume offers both a deeply rooted theological case for fasting and a firm caution against the dangers that fasting poses to one's health, if done excessively or without an understanding of how the human body works.

Here at Englewood Christian Church, the only practice we have of fasting is to fast during the day on Good Friday, a fast which we promptly defame with our gigantic potluck dinner that follows our evening prayer service. I've tried fasting on my own a few times, particularly on retreats, but to paraphrase G.K. Chesterton, fasting is a practice that I've found difficult and therefore one that I've pretty much left untried. I recognize the biblical and historical significance of fasting, but have never really been part of a church community that valued fasting as a significant practice.

It seems to me that at least part of our hesitancy toward fasting here at Englewood is the ways that we've seen fasting being done in theologically appalling ways. At the book's outset, McKnight names one such erroneous and detrimental way that fasting is practiced, to which he will frequently return over the course of the book: viz., fasting in order to produce results. Such a practice of fasting, which McKnight calls an instrumental view of fasting, is not a healthy spiritual discipline, but rather a "manipulative device." McKnight argues instead that fasting is a responsive practice, saying that fasting is a body's natural response to grief. He does not deny that sometimes results do come from fasting, but he is adamant that for the people of God, the why of fasting should be a response to grief and not a means to an end – however good that end might seem. McKnight is also careful to point out that avoiding chocolate, coffee, television or some other enjoyable habit for Lent can be helpful as a sort of abstinence, but should not be called fasting.

Throughout this book, McKnight's approach to fasting is to examine it as a historical practice of the Church, and even more as a practice of the people of God that began in the Israelite people before the time of Christ's earthly ministry. One of the things that I deeply appreciate about McKnight's historical approach here is that he makes a seamless transition between the history of Israel and church history. In the first chapter, McKnight notes that fasting is a bodily practice and that many of our problems with fasting – both in not doing it and how it is done when we practice it – stem from our misconceptions of the body. Although in Western culture, we are inclined toward a dualism that severs the body and soul (or spirit). McKnight argues convincingly that we are biblically to understand the person as an "organic unity." He goes on to elaborate some destructive ways that we come to view our bodies as a result of making a sharp body/soul distinction: "a monster to be conquered," "a celebrity to be glorified," etc. He concludes this chapter by concisely stating his understanding of fasting:

[A] unified perception of body, soul, spirit, and mind creates a spirituality that includes the body. For this kind of body image, fasting is natural. Fasting is the body talking what the spirit yearns, what the soul longs for, and what the mind knows to be true. It is body talk – not the body simply talking for the spirit, for the mind or for the soul in some symbolic way, but for the person, the whole person, to express himself or herself completely (11).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The bulk of this book is spent on examining the variety of contexts in which fasting has been practiced throughout Scripture and church history. The first such context is that of "body talk," and here McKnight emphasizes again that fasting should be a response to a "grievous sacred moment," a way of communicating (or "talking") our grief through our whole person. The next context is that of "body turning," which McKnight notes is the most common form of fasting in the scriptures (24). Fasting in this context is a practice of repentance, individual and corporate. He notes here practices of fasting during Lent, during times when God seems absent, at times when we realize our complicity, and at the time of conversion and baptism. Two more contexts in which fasting occurs are those of "body plea," when fasting accompanies our prayers, and "body grief." Fasting has also been practiced throughout the history of God's people as a regular (often weekly) practice of "body discipline." Such routine, stationary fasts come in response to grief that is rooted in "consciousness of sin, consciousness of weakness, the need for God's empowering grace, the desire to cut back in life in order to find our center, and a yearning to grow morally in love and holiness" (64). He is quick to emphasize however that excessive body discipline can become "body battle," which is rooted in the "monster to be conquered" variety of dualism and is very unhealthy. Another context of the church's fasting is to remember seasons of the Christian year, particularly Lent and the Holy Week leading up to Easter. Perhaps the most striking context in which McKnight examines the practice of fasting – particularly for churches in urban places like Englewood – is that of "body poverty": i.e., as a response of grief to the injustices that occur around us. McKnight points out that fasting in this context should often be accompanied by the twin practices of generosity (given what we would have eaten in food to those who need it) and solidarity. The final two contexts in which McKnight examines fasting are as a form of worship or "body contact" – which comes as a grievous response to the realization of "the superficiality of [our] intimacy with God" (113) – and fasting as "body hope," a response to the deep longing for the full realization of God's kingdom.

The second part of this book is much shorter than the first and in it, McKnight looks at the problems with the ways in which we practice fasting (e.g., manipulation, cheating, legalism, hypocrisy, etc.) and the benefits of fasting (a very brief chapter with strong emphasis on the fact that we should not fast in order to receive these benefits). The book concludes with a chapter on the effects of fasting on one's body. I have read a few other books on fasting in the life of the church, and I've never seen another chapter like this one that pleads with the reader to understand how fasting works physiologically and to practice fasting with extreme caution. Indeed, this chapter is a refreshing one because it reminds us that God created us as beings with an organic unity of body, mind, soul and spirit and that one way of understanding the shalom that God intends is in terms of health in the most holistic sense. With God's shalom in mind, McKnight firmly warns us that fasting, if not done properly, can cause great damage to ourselves – and thus indirectly to others with whom we are in relationships – and possibly even death.

Fasting is a rich book that seeks to understand the practice of fasting in the contexts of Christian theology and of the history of God's people. I hope and pray that Englewood and other churches will read this book – perhaps during the season of Lent – and consider how fasting can be a part of their community's life together. Ultimately, fasting is primarily a practice of the church, and when I or anyone else undertake fasting as an individual practice, we are at a much greater risk of falling into one of the unhealthy patterns of fasting that McKnight names here.

Return to*: Practical Christianity

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Prayer

Since prayer is an integral part of the praxis of The Gospel and evangelism, it was decided to add at least a short section on the topic.

How to Pray

http://christianity.stackexchange.com/questions/2157/to-whom-should-we-pray-to-the-father-or-the-son-jesus-or-the-holy-spirit

http://www.bible.ca/ntx-praying-to-jesus.htm

http://www.biblefood.com/prayer.html

Prayer of Salvation (Example prayer to God):

"Father,
I know that I have broken your laws and my sins have separated me from you. I am truly sorry, and now I want to turn away from my past sinful life toward you. Please forgive me, and help me avoid sinning again. I believe that your son, Jesus Christ died for my sins, was resurrected from the dead, is alive, and hears my prayer. I invite Jesus to become the Lord of my life, to rule and reign in my heart from this day forward. Please send your Holy Spirit to help me obey You, and to do Your will for the rest of my life.
In Jesus' name I pray, Amen."

Prayer of Salvation - I've Prayed It; Now What?
If you've prayed this prayer of salvation with true conviction and heart, you are now a follower of Jesus. This is a fact, whether or not you feel any different. Religious systems may have led you to believe that you should feel something - a warm glow, a tingle, or some other mystical experience. The fact is, you may, or you may not. If you have prayed the prayer of salvation and meant it, you are now a follower of Jesus. The Bible tells us that your eternal salvation is secure! "that if you confess with your mouth the Lord Jesus and believe in your heart that God has raised Him from the dead, you will be saved" (Romans 10:9).

[Source: http://www.allaboutgod.com/prayer-of-salvation.htm]

http://www.salvationprayer.info/prayer.html

The Jesus Prayer (a Prayer of the Heart)

The Jesus Prayer is very simple:

"Lord Jesus Christ Son of God, have mercy on me a sinner," http://www.orthodoxprayer.org/Jesus%20Prayer.html

http://www.goarch.org/ourfaith/ourfaith7104

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Jesus_Prayer http://www.copticheritage.org/orthodoxy/tradition_of_the_jesus_prayer

http://gravitycenter.com/practice/breath-prayer/

http://www.peterkreeft.com/topics-more/jesus-prayer.htm

A.C.T.S.

Consider this acronym for prayer "A.C.T.S.": Adoration, Confession, Thanksgiving and Supplication.

So, ACTS means: Talk to him, telling him how much you love him; confess your sins; thank him for what he has done for you that you could never repay, and pray for supplying the needs of others.

The Lord's Prayer

http://www.jesuschristsavior.net/Prayer.html

Examples of Prayer by Jesus – Learning from the Prayer Life of Jesus

Why did Jesus pray?

One way we can learn to pray is by looking at the prayer life of Jesus. Although the Gospels don't provide a detailed biography of Christ, they do offer captivating glimpses into His prayer life. First, however, it will be helpful to answer the question, "Why did Jesus pray?" This is sometimes puzzling for Christians. After all, if Jesus is God, why did Christ need to pray?

Theologically speaking, there are at least three reasons that Jesus prayed. First, Jesus prayed as an example to his followers. This is an example we continue to learn from, as this article demonstrates. Second, the Incarnation consists of both divine and human natures. From His human nature, it was perfectly natural for a Jewish believer such as Christ to pray. Third, the nature of the Trinity allows for communication between its members. As God the Son, Jesus could pray to God the Father.

Jesus and Prayer

Jesus prayed for others. In Matthew 19:13, we read, "Then little children were brought to Jesus for him to place his hands on them and pray for them." Despite the fact that "the disciples rebuked those who brought them," Jesus said the children should not be hindered "for the kingdom of heaven belongs to such as these" (v. 14). In John 17:9 we read, "I [Jesus] pray for them. I am not praying for the world, but for those you have given Me, for they are Yours." This underscores the need for intercessory prayer.

Jesus prayed with others. Luke 9:28 reads, "[Jesus] took Peter, John and James with Him and went up onto a mountain to pray." Jesus prayed alone, as we'll read below, but He also knew the value of praying with others. Acts 1:14 underscores the importance of Christians praying with one another: "They all joined together constantly in prayer …"

Jesus prayed alone. Luke 5:16 reads, "But Jesus often withdrew to lonely places and prayed." As much as Jesus understood the value of praying with and for others, He also understood the need to pray alone. Psalm 46:10 reads, "Be still, and know that I am God." Sometimes it's important for us to "be still" before God, but the only way to do this, especially in our hectic culture, is to do so alone with God.

Jesus prayed in nature. Psalm 19:1 reads, "The heavens declare the glory of God; the skies proclaim the work of his hands." What better place to commune with our Creator than among the wonders of nature?

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Luke 6:12 says, "One of those days Jesus went out to a mountainside to pray ..." He could have gone to a home, a synagogue or if He were near Jerusalem he could have gone to the temple to pray. But there were times when Jesus made the decision to pray where He was, which often happened to be in nature. We are surrounded by so much that is "man made" that sometimes it's difficult for us to remember that this is not our world, but God's world (Genesis 1:1, Psalm 24:1) full of wonders for us to enjoy.

Jesus could pray as a sprinter or a marathon runner. The Lord's Prayer is full of wisdom, but it is short enough to be easily memorized and serve as an example of a sprint rather than a marathon prayer. But Jesus also knew how to dedicate long periods of time to prayer. As we read in Luke 6:12, Jesus "spent the night praying to God." We, too, need to be able to offer short prayers, as well dedicate long periods of our lives to prayer.

*Jesus prayed regularly.*This insight is gleaned from a passage cited earlier, Luke 5:16: "Jesus often withdrew to lonely places and prayed." The word "often" is not hidden, but makes it obvious that Jesus prayed regularly. Throughout the Gospels whenever we read of Jesus and prayer, it comes up regularly and naturally. It was simply a part of His worldview, integrated into every aspect of Christ's life. Can we say the same about prayer in our life?

*The prayers of Jesus were heartfelt.*Jesus did not pray in a cold, distant manner, but in heartfelt supplication, demonstrating empathy and a genuine love for God. This is demonstrated clearly in John 17, where Jesus prays for Himself, His immediate disciples, as well as for all believers.

*Jesus prayed based on His knowledge of God and His truths.*The prayers of Jesus were based on God's revealed truths and, as such, were in line with a solid biblical worldview. In John 4:24 Jesus said, "God is spirit, and His worshipers must worship in spirit and in truth." He also said, "the truth will set you free" (John 8:32), underscoring the importance of truth in the life of Jesus and, in turn, our lives. Proper prayer requires us to have a truthful understanding of God and what He has revealed to us through His Word.

Jesus taught persistence in prayer. "Then Jesus told his disciples a parable to show them that they should always pray and not give up" (Luke 18:1). The parable Jesus shared is not meant to depict a pestering disciple who finally bugs God enough that He chooses to respond, but about persistence in prayer and waiting on God and His timing.

Jesus knew that not all his prayers would be answered as expected. This is a difficult prayer lesson to learn, but the fact of the matter is that not all our prayers are answered in ways we expect. Even Jesus knew this hard lesson as he cried out to God the Father from Gethsemane (Matthew 26:36-44). Three times Jesus prayed for God to allow an easier path, but Jesus knew, "Yet not as I will, but as You will" (26:39). Unanswered prayer is such a challenge to the Christian life that we'll address the matter in more detail in another article in this series.

As You Will

When Jesus prayed in Gethsemane, "Yet not as I will, but as You will," He offered a tremendous but seemingly simple insight into prayer: God is in charge. As we learn from the prayer life of Jesus – and there is much to learn – we need to keep this overarching principle in mind. A disciple asked Jesus, "Lord, teach us to pray," (Luke 11:1) and in response was taught the Lord's Prayer. But by studying the prayer life of Jesus, we can learn not only the important truths of the Lord's Prayer, but so much more.

Robert Velarde is author of Conversations with C.S. Lewis (InterVarsity Press), The Heart of Narnia (NavPress), and primary author of The Power of Family Prayer (National Day of Prayer Task Force). He studied philosophy of religion and apologetics at Denver Seminary and is pursuing graduate studies in philosophy at Southern Evangelical Seminary.

[1] Unless otherwise noted all Scripture quotations are from the New International Version of the Bible.

[Source: http://www.focusonthefamily.com/faith/faith-in-life/prayer/learning-from-the-prayer-life-of-jesus]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

http://www.prayers-of-jesus.info/

http://www.religioustolerance.org/prayer.htm

10 Verses about the Power of Prayer:

http://www.whatchristianswanttoknow.com/10-awesome-bible-verses-about-the-power-of-prayer/

Prayers for People in Christ to Grow

Exchortations by Jesus and Paul involving prayer:

Matthew 26:41

"Watch and pray so that you will not fall into temptation. The spirit is willing, but the body is weak."

Luke 21:36

Be always on the watch, and pray that you may be able to escape all that is about to happen, and that you may be able to stand before the Son of Man."

John 17:6-26

6 "I have revealed you to those whom you gave me out of the world. They were yours; you gave them to me and they have obeyed your word. 7 Now they know that everything you have given me comes from you. 8 For I gave them the words you gave me and they accepted them. They knew with certainty that I came from you, and they believed that you sent me. 9 I pray for them. I am not praying for the world, but for those you have given me, for they are yours. 10 All I have is yours, and all you have is mine. And glory has come to me through them. 11 I will remain in the world no longer, but they are still in the world, and I am coming to you. Holy Father, protect them by the power of your name—the name you gave me—so that they may be one as we are one. 12 While I was with them, I protected them and kept them safe by that name you gave me. None has been lost except the one doomed to destruction so that Scripture would be fulfilled.

13 "I am coming to you now, but I say these things while I am still in the world, so that they may have the full measure of my joy within them. 14 I have given them your word and the world has hated them, for they are not of the world any more than I am of the world. 15 My prayer is not that you take them out of the world but that you protect them from the evil one. 16 They are not of the world, even as I am not of it. 17 Sanctify ? them by the truth; your word is truth. 18 As you sent me into the world, I have sent them into the world. 19 For them I sanctify myself, that they too may be truly sanctified.

20 "My prayer is not for them alone. I pray also for those who will believe in me through their message, 21 that all of them may be one, Father, just as you are in me and I am in you. May they also be in us so that the world may believe that you have sent me. 22 I have given them the glory that you gave me, that they may be one as we are one: 23 I in them and you in me. May they be brought to complete unity to let the world know that you sent me and have loved them even as you have loved me.

24 "Father, I want those you have given me to be with me where I am, and to see my glory, the glory you have given me because you loved me before the creation of the world.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

25 “Righteous Father, though the world does not know you, I know you, and they know that you have sent me. 26 I have made you known to them, and will continue to make you known in order that the love you have for me may be in them and that I myself may be in them.”

Acts 26:39

Paul replied, “Short time or long—I pray God that not only you but all who are listening to me today may become what I am, except for these chains.”

2 Corinthians 3:17

7 Now we pray to God that you will not do anything wrong. Not that people will see that we have stood the test but that you will do what is right even though we may seem to have failed.

2 Corinthians 13:8-9

8 For we cannot do anything against the truth, but only for the truth. 9 We are glad whenever we are weak but you are strong; and our prayer is for your perfection

Ephesians 1:15-22

15 For this reason, ever since I heard about your faith in the Lord Jesus and your love for all the saints, 16 I have not stopped giving thanks for you, remembering you in my prayers. 17 I keep asking that the God of our Lord Jesus Christ, the glorious Father, may give you the Spirit of wisdom and revelation, so that you may know him better. 18 I pray also that the eyes of your heart may be enlightened in order that you may know the hope to which he has called you, the riches of his glorious inheritance in the saints, 19 and his incomparably great power for us who believe. That power is like the working of his mighty strength, 20 which he exerted in Christ when he raised him from the dead and seated him at his right hand in the heavenly realms, 21 far above all rule and authority, power and dominion, and every title that can be given, not only in the present age but also in the one to come. 22 And God placed all things under his feet and appointed him to be head over everything for the church

Ephesians 3:14-21

14 For this reason I kneel before the Father, 15 from whom his whole family in heaven and on earth derives its name. 16 I pray that out of his glorious riches he may strengthen you with power through his Spirit in your inner being, 17 so that Christ may dwell in your hearts through faith. And I pray that you, being rooted and established in love, 18 may have power, together with all the saints, to grasp how wide and long and high and deep is the love of Christ, 19 and to know this love that surpasses knowledge—that you may be filled to the measure of all the fullness of God. 20 Now to him who is able to do immeasurably more than all we ask or imagine, according to his power that is at work within us, 21 to him be glory in the church and in Christ Jesus throughout all generations, for ever and ever! Amen.

Philippians 1:9 –12

9 And this is my prayer: that your love may abound more and more in knowledge and depth of insight, 10 so that you may be able to discern what is best and may be pure and blameless until the day of Christ, 11 filled with the fruit of righteousness that comes through Jesus Christ—to the glory and praise of God. 12 Now I want you to know, brothers, that what has happened to me has really served to advance the gospel.

Colossians 1:9-11

We have not stopped praying for you and asking God to fill you with the knowledge of his will through all spiritual wisdom and understanding. And we pray this in order that you may live a life worthy of the Lord and may please him in every way: bearing fruit in every good work, growing in the knowledge of God,

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

being strengthened with all power according to his glorious might so that you may have great endurance and patience

Colossians 4:12

Epaphras, who is one of you and a servant of Christ Jesus, sends greetings. He is always wrestling in prayer for you, that you may stand firm in all the will of God, mature and fully assured.

1 Thessalonians 3:10-13

10 Night and day we pray most earnestly that we may see you again and supply what is lacking in your faith. Now may the Lord make your love increase and overflow for each other and for everyone else, just as ours does for you. 13 May he strengthen your hearts so that you will be blameless and holy in the presence of our God and Father when our Lord Jesus comes with all his holy ones.

2 Thessalonians 1:11-12

11 With this in mind, we constantly pray for you, that our God may count you worthy of his calling, and that by his power he may fulfill every good purpose of yours and every act prompted by your faith. 12 We pray this so that the name of our Lord Jesus may be glorified in you, and you in him, according to the grace of our God and the Lord Jesus Christ.

Philemon 1:6

I pray that you may be active in sharing your faith, so that you will have a full understanding of every good thing we have in Christ.

1 John 5:16

If anyone sees his brother commit a sin that does not lead to death, he should pray and God will give him life.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Proactive Structure of the Lord's Prayer (John Rankin)

https://revjohnrankin.blogspot.com/2018/01/the-proactive-structure-of-lords-prayer.html

Excerpt:

There are four all-defining subjects within the prayer. Here they are, followed by each of the four lines of the prayer from the original Greek:

1. Family – Our Father in the heavens, holy is your Name.
2. Politics – Your kingdom come, your will be done, in heaven and on earth.
3. Economics – Give us today our daily bread, and forgive us our debts as we forgive our debtors.
4. Spiritual Warfare – And do not bring us into temptation, but deliver us from the evil one.

I teach a whole 2-3 hour seminar unpacking this prayer, and go into the reasons why I believe such a translation is accurate. For here, focusing on the clause in question, let me make these observations.

1. The prayer involves a) complete dependency on the goodness of God's kingship, b) calling for his kingdom to come, and thus c) acting in life accordingly.
2. If we do not know how this is the foundation for an overcoming proactive faith (e.g., the letters to the seven churches in Revelation, v. 2:7 and its repetitions), we can easily slip into a passive, defensive mode.
3. So whereas it is folly to seek to oppose the evil one on our own initiatives, it is folly not to take the authority, led by the Spirit, to drive out demons in personal and political contexts, as Jesus commissioned his disciples.
4. When Jesus is led by the Spirit into the testings/temptations of the devil, he is the One with the proactive power to defeat the evil one. We pray that God will not lead us into the same testing, but based on what Jesus has done, to take his victory his employ it actively in his Name.

The Prayer that Turned the World Upside Down (Albert Mohler)

https://albertmohler.com/2018/01/23/prayer-turns-world-upside/

Except:

This article is an excerpt from my new book, The Prayer that Turns the World Upside Down: The Lord's Prayer as a Manifesto for Revolution….

We long for revolution. Something within us cries out that the world is horribly broken and must be fixed. For centuries, the word revolution was scarcely heard, buried under ages of oppression. The word itself was feared and speaking it was treason. And then, revolutions seemed to appear almost everywhere.

Some historians have gone so far as to identify our modern epoch as "The Age of Revolution." Is it? Perhaps it is more accurate to refer to our times as "The Age of Failed Revolution." Looking across the landscape it becomes clear that very few revolutions produce what they promise. Arguably, most revolutions lead to a worse set of conditions than they replaced.

And yet, we still yearn for radical change, for things to be made right. We rightly long to see righteousness and truth and justice prevail. We are actually desperate for what no earthly revolution can produce. We long for the Kingdom of God, and for Jesus as King of Kings and Lord of Lords. We are looking for a kingdom that will never end and a King whose rule is perfect.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

This is why Christian's pray the Lord's Prayer. This is the very prayer that Jesus taught his own disciples to pray. So Christians pray this prayer as a way of learning how to pray and what to pray – as Jesus teaches us to pray.

The Lord's Prayer is the prayer that turns the world upside down. Are you looking for revolution? There is no clearer call to revolution than when we pray "Your kingdom come, Your will be done on earth as it is in heaven." But this is a revolution only God can bring … and He will.

This short prayer turns the world upside down. Principalities and powers hear their fall. Dictators are told their time is up. Might will indeed be made right and truth and justice will prevail. The kingdoms of this world will all pass, giving way to the Kingdom of our Lord, and of his Christ.

It all comes down to one of the shortest prayers found in the Bible. The Lord's Prayer takes less than 20 seconds to read aloud, but it takes a lifetime to learn. Sadly, most Christians rush through the prayer without learning it – but that is to miss the point completely.

Perhaps this is part of a larger problem. Gary Millar, who has written some enormously helpful resources on prayer, goes so far as to argue that "the evangelical church is slowly but surely giving up on prayer." The statement is shocking, but the truth of his assessment is even more shocking. Why are evangelicals giving up on prayer?

Millar suggests that life is easy for most evangelicals – perhaps too easy. Some of us lack the desperation that most Christians have experienced throughout church history. Desperation leads to prayer. We are also incredibly distracted and busy. Both are enemies of prayer. But giving up on prayer is not only a sign of evangelical weakness. It is disobedience.

Jesus did not only teach his disciples to pray – he commanded us to pray.

I think there is another big reason behind the fact that so many Christians do not pray. Many Christians simply do not know how to pray.

In the Lord's Prayer, Jesus teaches us how to pray.

We remember Martin Luther as the great Reformer, nailing his famous 95 theses to the door of the Castle Church in Wittenberg, Germany in 1517 and leading the Reformation of the church. What we do not so often remember is that Martin Luther was also a man who regularly needed a haircut. We should be very glad that he did.

Luther's barber, Peter Beskendorf once asked Luther for advice on how to pray. Luther responded by writing instructions on prayer he called "A Simple Way to Pray, for Master Peter the Barber."

Luther pointed his barber to the Lord's Prayer, and he offered this incredibly helpful advice:

"So, as a diligent and good barber, you must keep your thoughts, senses, and eyes precisely on the hair and scissors or razor and not forget where you trimmed or shaved, for, if you want to talk a lot or become distracted thinking about something else, you might well cut someone's nose or mouth or even his throat."

We get Luther's point immediately. We must learn to pray, and to resist distractions in prayer. Advice about cutting hair or shaving is easy to understand. A distracted barber is a dangerous barber. Luther applied the lesson well: "How much more does a prayer need to have the undivided attention of the whole heart alone, if it is to be a good prayer!"

We have much to learn about prayer, and the Lord's Prayer is the right place to start. This is no tame prayer for safe times. This is the prayer that turns the world upside down.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Praying in Public, Especially at Civic Events (must we end with the words, “In Jesus Name”?)

Point of View: http://www.patheos.com/blogs/markdroberts/series/praying-in-the-name-of-jesus/

Most conservative Christians tend to downplay Jesus' instruction (Matthew 6:5-6) about the importance of going off by oneself and pray alone and in secret. After all, if public prayer is not permitted, then just about every Christian service is seriously in error, with the possible exception of some by the Society of Friends (Quakers). Conservatives interpret Matthew 6:5 as not condemning public prayer. Rather, it criticizes only that prayer in public that is motivated by a desire to show off. Prayer "may be offered in any circumstances, however open, if not promoted by the spirit of ostentation..." [1]

[Source: http://www.religioustolerance.org/prayer.htm]

High Priestly Prayer

The high priestly prayer is a prayer spoken by Jesus Christ about himself, his disciples, and his later followers, as recorded in John 17. This prayer is the special prayer of the Lord, and may be regarded as the sole example furnished by the evangelists of our Lord's method of prayer. The thanksgiving in Matthew 11:25 is the only other instance of any extent in the report of the prayers of Jesus, but even that is brief compared to what is here furnished. The fullness of this prayer clearly shows that it was uttered in the hearing of the disciples.

Their relation to it is remarkable. Auditors, they yet could not share in it. At the same time, it was a profound revelation to them both of the relation of the Master to God, and the character of the work which He had come to perform, and the part which they were to take in it. John gives us no hint as to the place in which it was spoken; John 14:31 indicates a departure from the upper room. But apparently the prayer was offered where the discourses of John 15 and 16 were delivered.

[Source: http://www.religionfacts.com/library/isbe/high-priestly-prayer]

Q: #204. How many times did Jesus pray in the Bible?

A: The Bible tells us in (1 Th 5:17) to "pray without ceasing."
While I don't believe this literally means to never stop praying, I would say that Jesus probably came closer to never stopping than any person who has ever lived on this planet. He was continually in a prayer mode.

He is shown to pray:
alone (Mt 14:23)(Mk 1:35)(Lk 9:18)(Lk 22:39-41), in public (Jn 11:41-42)(Jn 12:27-30), before meals (Mt 26:26)(Mk 8:6)(Lk 24:30)(Jn 6:11), before important decisions (Lk 6:12-13), before healing (Mk 7:34-35),
after healing (Lk 5:16), to do the Father's will (Mt 26:36-44), among other things.

He also taught on the importance of prayer (Mt 21:22)(Mk 11:24-26)(Mt 7:7-11)(Lk 11:9-13)(Jn 14:13-14)(Jn 15:7,16)(Jn 16:23-24)(Mt 5:44)(Lk 6:27-28)(Mt 6:5-15: including the Lord's Prayer)(Lk 11:2-4)(Mt 18:19-20).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

If you take all of the places (in the Bible) that show Jesus praying, you will have a PERFECT outline of how to pray (check out Jn 17).

Below are all of the verses I could find in the Gospels that show Jesus praying.

(Lk 3:21-22) At His Baptism.

(Mk 1:35-36) In the morning before heading to Galilee.

(Lk 5:15) After healing people.

(Lk 6:12-13) Praying all night before choosing His 12 disciples.

(Mt 11:25-26) While speaking to the Jewish leaders.

(Jn 6:11) Giving thanks to the Father before feeding 5000.
(Also see: Mt 14:19, Mk 6:41, Lk 9:16)

(Mt 14:22) Before walking on water.
(Also see: Mk 6:46, Jn 6:15)

(Mk 7:31-37) While healing a deaf and mute man.

(Mt 15:36) Giving thanks to the Father before feeding 4000.
(Also see: Mk 8:6-7)

(Lk 9:18) Before Peter called Jesus "the Christ."

(Lk 9:28-29) At the Transfiguration.

(Lk 10:21) At the return of the seventy.

(Lk 11:1) Before teaching His disciples the Lord's Prayer.

(Jn 11:41-42) Before raising Lazarus from the dead.

(Mt 19:13-15) Laying hands on and praying for little children.
(Also see: Mk 10:13-16, Lk 18:15-17)

(Jn 12:27-28) Asking the Father to glorify His name.

(Mt 26:26) At the Lord's Supper.
(Also see: Mk 14:22-23, Lk 22:19)

(Lk 22:31-32) Prayed for Peter's faith when Satan asked to "sift" him.

(Jn 17:1-26) Prayed for Himself, His disciples, and all believers just before heading to Gethsemane.

(Mt 26:36-46) In Gethsemane before His betrayal. (He prayed 3 separate prayers.)
(Also see: Lk 22:39-46, Mk 14:32-42)

(Lk 23:34) Right after being nailed to the cross, Jesus prayed, "Father forgive them; for they know not what they do."

(Mt 27:46) While dying on the cross, Jesus cried out, "My God, My God, why hast thou forsaken me?"
(Also see: Mk 15:34)

(Lk 23:46) In His dying breath, Jesus prayed, "Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit.

(Lk 24:30) Prayed a blessing on the bread before He ate with others after His resurrection.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

(Lk 24:50-53) He blessed the disciples before His Ascension.

There are also verses outside of the Gospels that show us that even though Jesus is now in Heaven, He is still making intercession on our behalf (Rom 8:34)(Heb 7:25)(Heb 9:24)(1 Jn 2:1).

[Source: http://jesusalive.cc/ques204.htm]

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Prayer

http://www.generationword.com/diagrams_and_charts.html

Prayer

Human Influence & Responsibility

- "You do not have, because you do not ask God." -James 4:2
- "For no matter how many promises God has made, they are 'Yes' in Christ. And so through him the 'Amen' is spoken by us to the glory of God." - 2 Corinthians 1:20
- "Ask and it will be given to you; seek and you will find; knock and the door will be opened to you. For everyone who asks receives; he who seeks finds; and to him who knocks, the door will be opened." Matthew 7:7-8

Believer/Priest in Christ before God

- "I will do whatever you ask in my name, so that the Son may bring glory to the Father. You may ask me for anything in my name, and I will do it." John 14:13-14
- "Since we have confidence to enter the Most Holy Place by the blood of Jesus, . . . let us draw near to God." Heb. 9:19 (also 1 Pt.2:5, 9; Rev. 1:6)

Types of Prayer (Ep.6:18)

1. Confession-1 Jn.1:9; Daniel 9:5
2. Adoration/Praise-Ps.34:11; 103:1
3. Thanksgiving-Col.4:2; Phil.4:6
4. Petitions/Supplications/Requests-James 1:5-8; Ps.142:1; Heb.5:7
5. Intercession for Others- James 5:16; Acts 8:24; 2 Timothy 2:1

How To Pray

1. Persistence-Luke 11:5-9; 18:1; Ephesians 6:18
2. Boldness/Confidence - Heb. 4:16
3. Reverence-Is. 66:2;Ps.111:9; 89:7
4. Alert - Col.4:2; Luke 21:26
5. Forgiving - Mt.6:12-15; 18:21-35; Ephesians 4:32.

Steps to Prayer

1. Confession - Psalm 66:18
2. Thanksgiving - Ephesians 5:20
3. Intercession - Ephesians 6:18
4. Petition for Needs - Eph. 6;18

Hindrances to Prayer

1. Lack of Faith - Matt. 21:22; Mark 11:24; Phil.4:6 (anxious)
2. Wrong Motive - James 4:2-3
3. Sin - Psalm 66:18
4. Hard Heart to others - Prov. 21:13
5. Strife in home - 1 Peter 3:7
6. Pride - Job 35:12-13
7. Carnal/No Spirit - Eph. 6:18
8. Disobedience/Rebellion- Eph.6:18
9. Against God's General Will - 1 Jn. 5:14-15 (Must know God's Word)
10. Against God's Specific Will - 2 Cor.12:8-9 (Trust Unknown Plan)

Breakdown of the Lord's Prayer

Our Father - close, personal , familiar relationship with God in heaven - his abode and seat of sovereign rule is highest possible hallowed be your name - familiarity and sonship does not diminish our awe, fear and respect of our God your kingdom come - God's ultimate will is the coming of his Son's rulership and kingdom. You desire the fulfillment of this.

your will be done - You desire, first, that God's will be done on earth as it is in heaven - You desire God's will, not the will of man, nor your will, be done on earth in fullness and completion.

Give us today our daily bread - you also have your own will and desires that agree with God's but go beyond his general plan and will

Forgive us our debts, as we also have forgiven out debtors.-Forgive

Lead us not into temptation - Pray for your battle with sin & temptation deliver us from the evil one - reject the counter kingdom of darkness; ask for deliverance from situations

GENERATION WORD GW

www.generationword.com

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

A Warning Against Lazy Praying - Tim Conway
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=2To_M6z3Itk [Video]

See also: Gospel of Jesus the Messiah (Christ)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

For more about Prayer and developing a personal relationship with God the Father through Jesus, see my other separate reference resources*:

The Complete Sayings of Jesus – NKJV with Appendix

(Note: NKJV is primary text to make reading easier, except when it varies significantly from the original KJV or a different translation text is clearer and/or deemed more accurate.)

The Gospel, Salvation and Evangelism

Return to*: Practical Christianity

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Six Pillars of Biblical Power and Honest Politics (by John C. Rankin)

http://www.teii.org/biblical-theology-education/the-six-pillars-of-biblical-power-and-honest-politics/

The Six Pillars of Biblical Power

1. The power to give: We believe that the Creator, Yahweh Elohim, the Lord God Almighty, our heavenly Father, employs his unlimited power to give to and equally bless all people as image bearers of God. The power to give is modeled in the faithful marriage of one man and one woman, in parenthood, and is the basis for trust in human society.
2. The power to live in the light: We believe that the Lord God said, "Let there be light," and there was light. As darkness and the prince of darkness flee the light, we embrace the power to live in the light of God's presence, open and accountable to all people in all we believe, say and do. Jesus is the Light of the world.
3. The power of informed choice: We believe that the Lord God gives us all the power of informed choice, to say yes to the good of freedom and life, and no to the evil of slavery and death.
4. The power to love hard questions: We believe that the Lord God gives us the freedom and power to pose hard questions of him, and of one another, in Christian community. This is the power of sanctifying integrity.
5. The power to love enemies: We believe that the Lord Jesus loved the world when we yet enemies of the truth, drowning in a sea of broken trust. Now, as believers, we are empowered by the Holy Spirit to love those who are, at present, enemies of the Gospel.
6. The power to forgive: We believe that the power to give is restored to the broken world through the power to forgive, purchased in the life, death and resurrection of the Lord Jesus. Thus, we as believers are called to extend this forgiveness to the broken world, by the power of the Holy Spirit, in celebration of the mercy that triumphs over judgment in the second coming of Jesus.

The Six Pillars of Honest Politics

1. The power to give affirms that the unalienable rights given by the Creator belong to all people equally, and leaders in human government should serve such a gift.
2. The power to live in the light means leaders in human government at every level should be as fully transparent as possible.
3. The power of informed choice is rooted in an honest definition of terms in political debate, providing a level playing field for all ideas to be heard equally, apart from which political freedom is not possible.
4. The power to love hard questions is in place when political leaders honor and answer those who pose them the toughest questions.
5. The power to love enemies recognizes that even the harshest of political opponents share a common humanity and are to be treated with respect.
6. The power to forgive recognizes the need to address our individual and societal transgressions against one another, and to work toward justice and reconciliation.

Related links:

http://revjohnrankin.blogspot.com/

http://www.teii.org/

http://www.prepartisan.org/

Return to*: Practical Christianity

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Who I am in Christ

I am Accepted...

Jn. 1:12	I am God's child.
Jn. 15:15	I am Christ's friend.
Rom. 5:1	I have been justified.
1 Cor. 6:17	I am united with the Lord (one spirit).
1 Cor. 6:19-20	I am bought with a price; I belong to God.
1 Cor. 12:27	I am a member of Christ's Body.
Eph. 1:1	I am a saint.
Eph. 1:5	I have been adopted as God's child.
Eph. 2:18	I have access to God thru the Holy Spirit.
Col. 1:14	I have been redeemed and forgiven.
Col. 2:10	I am complete in Christ.

I am Secure...

Rom. 8:1-2	I am free forever from condemnation.
Rom. 8:28	I am assured all works together for good.
Rom. 8:31-34	I am free from any charge against me.
Rom. 8:35-39	I cannot be separated from the love of God.
2 Cor. 1:21-22	I am established, anointed, sealed by God.
Col. 3:3	I am hidden with Christ in God.
Phil. 1:6	I am confident that the good work God has begun in me will be perfected.
Phil. 3:20	I am a citizen of heaven.
2 Tim. 1:7	I have not been given a spirit of fear, but of power, love and a sound mind.
Heb. 4:16	I can find grace and mercy in time of need.
1 Jn. 5:18	I am born of God; the evil one cannot touch me.

I am Significant...

Matt. 5:13-14	I am the salt and light of the earth.
Jn. 15:1,5	I am a branch of the true vine, a channel of His life.
Jn. 15:16	I have been chosen and appointed to bear fruit.
Acts 1:8	I am a personal witness of Christ's.
1 Cor. 3:16	I am God's temple.
2 Cor. 5:17-21	I am a minister of reconciliation for God.
2 Cor. 6:1	I am God's co-worker (1 Cor. 3:9).
Eph. 2:6	I am seated with Christ in the heavenly realm.
Eph. 2:10	I am God's workmanship.
Eph. 3:12	I may approach God with freedom and confidence.
Phil. 4:13	I can do all things thru Christ who strengthens me.

My Identity

"Understanding your identity in Christ is absolutely essential for your success at living a victorious Christian life!"

Dr. Neil T. Anderson, Who I Am in Christ
(Gospel Light, 1993)

Satan's Lie	God's Truth
You are a sinner because you sin.	Your are a saint (one declared righteous by God) who sins.
Your identity comes from what you have done.	Your identity comes from what God has done for you.
Your identity comes from what people say about you.	Your identity comes from what God says about you.
Your behavior tells you what to believe about yourself.	Your belief about yourself determines your behavior.

Dr. Timothy Warner, Resolving Spiritual Conflicts and Cross-Cultural Ministry
(Freedom in Christ Ministries, 1993)

Bookmark Front:
Dr. Neil T. Anderson, Victory Over the Darkness
(Gospel Light, 1990)

All references used by permission.
Please do not reproduce. Not for individual sale.

FREEDOM IN CHRIST MINISTRIES

9051 Executive Park Drive • Suite 503
Knoxville, TN 37923
865.342.4000 | info@ficm.org

www.ficm.org
www.freedominchrist.com

Science, the Bible, and God

Socrates in the City – Introduction of N.T. Wright by Eric Metaxas (2011)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=91zvwcZCzwg [Video]

Socrates in the City: One of New York's Best Kept Secrets
https://ccithink.com/tag/greek-philosopher-socrates/

Socrates in the City – John Lennox: "Seven Days That Divide the World" (2013)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=0FmO2XKMe6g [Video]

The Genesis Files: The Meaning and Purpose of Creation – John Lennox, PhD

Keswick Convention: In The Beginning Part One https://www.premierchristianity.com/Old-Blog/Keswick-Convention-In-The-Beginning-Part-One

Based on a talk by John Lennox, at the Keswick Convention 2013. He is Professor of Mathematics at the University of Oxford and a lecturer at the Oxford Centre of Christian Apologetics.

Keswick Convention: In The Beginning Part Two https://www.premierchristianity.com/Old-Blog/Keswick-Convention-In-The-Beginning-Part-Two

Keswick Convention: In The Beginning Part Three https://www.premierchristianity.com/Old-Blog/Keswick-Convention-In-The-Beginning-Part-Three

Keswick Convention: In The Beginning Part Four https://www.premierchristianity.com/Old-Blog/Keswick-Convention-In-The-Beginning-Part-Four

Keswick Convention: In The Beginning Part Five https://www.premierchristianity.com/Old-Blog/Keswick-Convention-In-The-Beginning-Part-Five

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

AOG 2014 Faith & Science Conference

Session 1 - Science and the God Question – John Lennox
https://vimeo.com/103421911 [Video]

Session 2 - The Biology of Sin - Matthew Stanford
https://vimeo.com/103421913 [Video]

Session 3 - The Glory of Jehovah Will Be Revealed - Steve Krstulovich
https://vimeo.com/103421915 [Video] (Good info. as of 2014)

Steve Krstulovich (Note: Steve retired from Fermilabs in 2015)
The Bible Brief / Narrative 2008
http://2008biblebrief.com/

Some biblical corrections to the standard chronology shown in the Brief:

An extra 650 years after Noah's flood: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=VI1yRTC6kGE

Israel in Egypt 215 years (NOT 430 Years): https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=FF0F8YjT1og

Birth of Jesus in 1BC (NOT 4BC): https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=oGUlWa2r-bk&t=6s

How to Use Tools (Bible Brief Narrative) in English
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=pqnWC2tpr00 Firmilab News for Employees and Users
https://news.fnal.gov/fermilab-at-work/

Session 4 - Not Available

Session 5 - Skipped

Session 6 - The Genesis Files: The Meaning and Purpose of Creation - John Lennox
https://vimeo.com/103421918 [Video]

Answers in Genesis
https://answersingenesis.org/

Genesis File (Science = God's Handiwork In Living Color)
https://genesisfile.com/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Process Theology and the Bible:
How Science Has Changed Our View of God
http://www.religion-online.org/showarticle.asp?title=3361

Socrates in the City – Dr. David Berlinski: The Devil's Delusion: Atheism and Its Scientific Pretensions https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=0XIDykeZplU [Video]

Can a Scientist Trust the New Testament? (2014)
http://www.jamesgregory.org.uk/series-2/can-a-scientist-trust-the-new-testament/

Here is another lecture (that link has PDF transcript, audio and videos) that Wright as part of the "James Gregory public lectures on Science, Religion, and Human Flourishing" (Univ. of St. Andrews, Scotland)

Eric Metaxas: Science Increasingly Makes the Case for God (2014)
http://ericmetaxas.com/media/articles/science-increasingly-makes-case-god/

Can a Scientist Believe in the Resurrection? (2007)
http://www.jamesgregory.org.uk/series-1/can-a-scientist-believe-in-the-resurrection/

Here is a lecture (that link has PDF transcript, audio and videos) that Wright gave on the resurrection as part of the "James Gregory public lectures on Science, Religion, and Human Flourishing" (Univ. of St. Andrews, Scotland)

> N.T. Wright explains seven "mutations" caused by the resurrection
> https://winteryknight.com/2011/08/05/n-t-wright-explains-seven-mutations-caused-by-the-resurrection/
>
> Excerpt:
>
> N.T. Wright's historical case for the bodily resurrection of Jesus
>
> Wright basically argues that the resurrection cannot have been a myth invented by the early Christian community, because the idea of the Messiah dying and being bodily resurrected to eternal life was completely unexpected in Jewish theology, and therefore would not have been fabricated.
>
> In Judaism, when people die, they stay dead. At the most, they might re-appear as apparitions, or be resuscitated to life for a while, but then die again later. There was no concept of the bodily resurrection to eternal life of a single person, especially of the Messiah, prior to the general resurrection of all the righteous dead on judgment day.
>
> Wright's case for the resurrection has 3 parts:
>
> - The Jewish theological beliefs of the early Christian community underwent 7 mutations that are inexplicable apart from the bodily resurrection of Jesus
> - The empty tomb
> - The post-mortem appearances of Jesus to individuals and groups, friends and foes
>
> Here's the outline of Wright's case:

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

…the foundation of my argument for what happened at Easter is the reflection that this Jewish hope has undergone remarkable modifications or mutations within early Christianity, which can be plotted consistently right across the first two centuries. And these mutations are so striking, in an area of human experience where societies tend to be very conservative, that they force the historian… to ask, "Why did they occur?"

The mutations occur within a strictly Jewish context. The early Christians held firmly, like most of their Jewish contemporaries, to a two-step belief about the future: first, death and whatever lies immediately beyond; second, a new bodily existence in a newly remade world. 'Resurrection' is not a fancy word for 'life after death'; it denotes life after 'life after death'.

And here are the 7 mutations:

8. Christian theology of the afterlife mutates from multiples views (Judaism) to a single view: resurrection (Christianity). When you die, your soul goes off to wait in Sheol. On judgment day, the righteous dead get new resurrection bodies, identical to Jesus' resurrection body.
9. The relative importance of the doctrine of resurrection changes from being peripheral (Judaism) to central (Christianity).
10. The idea of what the resurrection would be like goes from multiple views (Judaism) to a single view: an incorruptible, spiritually-oriented body composed of the material of the previous corruptible body (Christianity).
11. The timing of the resurrection changes from judgment day (Judaism) to a split between the resurrection of the Messiah right now and the resurrection of the rest of the righteous on judgment day (Christianity).
12. There is a new view of eschatology as collaboration with God to transform the world.
13. There is a new metaphorical concept of resurrection, referred to as being "born-again".
14. There is a new association of the concept of resurrection to the Messiah. (The Messiah was not even supposed to die, and he certainly wasn't supposed to rise again from the dead in a resurrected body!)

    There are also other historical puzzles that are solved by postulating a bodily resurrection of Jesus.

8. Jewish people thought that the Messiah was not supposed to die. Although there were lots of (warrior) Messiahs running around at the time, whenever they got killed, their followers would abandon them. Why didn't Jesus' followers abandon him when he died?
9. If the early Christian church wanted to communicate that Jesus was special, despite his shameful death on the cross, they would have made up a story using the existing Jewish concept of exaltation. Applying the concept of bodily resurrection to a dead Messiah would be a radical departure from Jewish theology, when an invented exaltation was already available to do the job.
10. The early church became extremely reckless about sickness and death, taking care of people with communicable diseases and testifying about their faith in the face of torture and execution. Why did they scorn sickness and death?
11. The gospels, especially Mark, do not contain any embellishments and "theology historicized". If they were made-up, there would have been events that had some connection to theological concepts. But the narratives are instead bare-bones: “Guy dies public death. People encounter same guy alive later.” Plain vanilla narrative.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

12. The story of the women who were the first witnesses to the empty tomb cannot have been invented, because the testimony of women was inadmissible under almost all circumstances at that time. If the story were invented, they would have invented male discoverers of the tomb. Female discovers would have hampered conversion efforts.
13. There are almost no legendary embellishments in the gospels, while there are plenty in the later gnostic forgeries. No crowds of singing angels, no talking crosses, and no booming voices from the clouds.
14. There is no mention of the future hope of the general resurrection, which I guess they thought was imminent anyway.

To conclude, Wright makes the argument that the best explanation of all of these changes in theology and practice is that God raised Jesus (bodily) from the dead. There is simply no way that this community would have made up the single resurrection of the Messiah – who wasn’t even supposed to die – and then put themselves on the line for that belief.

And remember, the belief in a resurrected Jesus was something that the earliest witnesses could really assess, because they were the ones who saw him killed and then walking around again after his death. They were able to confirm or deny their belief in the resurrection of Jesus based on their own personal experiences with the object of those beliefs.

Wretched: An atheist professor converts to Christianity

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=d3jrcP-o6Vs [Video]

Alt. Link: https://www.doovi.com/video/wretched-an-atheist-professor-converts-to-christianity/d3jrcP-o6Vs

The Trinity Review: The Bible and the Idolatry of Science

http://www.trinityfoundation.org/journal.php?id=344 (Downloadable as a PDF)

Return to the beginning*: Science, the Bible and God

“Science, the Bible and God” continues on next page…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

John Lennox: Biblical Underpinning - What does it mean to be human? (2018) re: AI and Robotics

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=DRxp_gsSxA4 [Video]

A conference, especially for Christian leaders, to explore the theological, social and practical implications of advances in artificial intelligence (AI) and robotics. The conference was held in June, 2018 at the British Library with over 250 delegates including students, church leaders and leading experts in the field of Robotics & A.I. coming together to explore what these advances could mean for both the Church and society as a whole.

What does it mean to be human? - Dr Ravi Zacharias (at DUMC, Malaysia) (2013)

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=aRChfvNYEqI [Video]

Return to the beginning*: Science, the Bible and God

"Science, the Bible and God" continues on next page…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Socrates in the City – Michael Behe: Darwin Devolves https://socratesinthecity.com/watch/michael-behe-darwin-devolves/

Eric Metaxas interviews biochemist Michael Behe on “the new science about DNA that challenges evolution” as told in Behe’s book, Darwin Devolves.

Michael Behe is a Roman Catholic. He is married to Celeste Behe and the two have nine children who are homeschooled.

Irreducible Complexity and Michael Behe
http://www.talkorigins.org/faqs/behe.html

Socrates in the City – John Lennox: "The Question of Science and God Parts 1&2"
Part 1:
https://socratesinthecity.com/watch/john-lennox-the-question-of-science-and-god-part-1/

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=gDjNv-ea56E [Video]

https://socratesinthecity.com/listen/the-question-of-science-and-god-part-1/ [Audio]

Part 2:
https://socratesinthecity.com/watch/john-lennox-the-question-of-science-and-god-part-2/

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Tr3ghb6JG6A [Video]

https://socratesinthecity.com/listen/the-question-of-science-and-god-part-2/ [Audio]

Has Science buried God? Eric Metaxas tracks down Oxford’s John Lennox in France for answers, and the brilliant professor delivers! (2018)

Follow up to the above 2-parter…

Socrates in the City – John Lennox: "Has Science Buried God?" (2019)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=wBio3y0Rrbc [Video] https://socratesinthecity.com/listen/has-science-buried-god/ [Audio]

Host Eric Metaxas and Oxford professor John Lennox explore the question, "Has science buried God?" -- discussing the fine-tuned universe, evolution, logic, history, and more! "It's like we're an old Vaudeville team" says Metaxas, who eggs the legendary Lennox into retelling his equally legendary roast chicken anecdote. The interview was hosted by the Colson Center and took place in Washington D.C., in May 2019.

Return to the beginning*: Science, the Bible and God

“Science, the Bible and God” continues on next page…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Science Confirms the Bible

Science Confirms the Bible

(Bear in mind that the Bible was written 2,000–3,000 years ago)

THE BIBLE	SCIENCE NOW	SCIENCE THEN
The earth is a sphere (Isaiah 40:22).	The earth is a sphere.	The earth was a flat disk.
Incalculable number of stars (Jeremiah 33:22).	Incalculable number of stars.	Only 1,100 stars.
Free float of earth in space (Job 26:7).	Free float of earth in space.	Earth sat on a large animal.
Creation made of invisible elements (Hebrews 11:3).	Creation made of invisible elements (atoms).	Science was ignorant on the subject.
Each star is different (1 Corinthians 15:41).	Each star is different.	All stars were the same.
Light moves (Job 38:19,20).	Light moves.	Light was fixed in place.
Air has weight (Job 28:25).	Air has weight.	Air was weightless.
Winds blow in cyclones (Ecclesiastes 1:6).	Winds blow in cyclones.	Winds blew straight.
Blood is the source of life and health (Leviticus 17:11).	Blood is the source of life and health.	Sick people must be bled.
Ocean floor contains deep valleys and mountains (2 Samuel 22:16; Jonah 2:6).	Ocean floor contains deep valleys and mountains.	The ocean floor was flat.
Ocean contains springs (Job 38:16).	Ocean contains springs.	Ocean fed only by rivers and rain.
When dealing with disease, hands should be washed under running water (Leviticus 15:13).	When dealing with disease, hands should be washed under running water.	Hands washed in still water.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Veritas Forum – John Lennox at Harvard Med School (2014):
The Loud Absence - Where is God in Suffering?
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=MPm6Y-pANYI [Video]
Where is God in suffering? Oxford Professor of Mathematics, John Lennox, speaking at The Veritas Forum at Harvard Med School, 2014. Short lecture followed by Q&A

Veritas Forum – John Lennox at Texas Christian University (TCU) (2016): Where is God Amidst Suffering and Evil? (and the topic of "Well-being") https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=huw4cg_PYIA [Video] Oxford Mathematician John Lennox considers questions of faith in the context of suffering at The Veritas Forum: "The Loud Absence: Where is God Amidst Suffering and Evil?" at Texas Christian University, 2016.

Ravi Zacharias - The Mystery of Evil and the Miracle of Life (2012)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=wsIPrasmvAQ [Video]

Note: Theodicy is the study of evil in light of the existence of God.

Veritas Forum – Jon Lennox at UCLA (2011): Christianity and the Tooth Fairy https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=feqC_GNL2fw [Video] Children believe in the tooth fairy until their reasoning capabilities mature and they recognize this belief is neither grounded nor relevant. Does belief in Jesus Christ require a similar suspension of logic? Can Christianity be proven to be true? UCLA law professor Daniel Lowenstein interviews Oxford mathematician John Lennox with honest questions about Christianity and the grounds for faith. This will be followed by audience Q&A.

John Lennox at the "Why I am a Christian" Youth Event in Perth, Australia (2014): Why I Am A Christian (and "What Am I Made For?") https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=jGrbrKWZFJg [Video]
In August 2014 Professor John Lennox of Oxford University, who has debated atheists such as Richard Dawkins and the late Christopher Hitchens, explains why he is a Christian. Presented by Riverview Church, City Bible Forum, CREDO and the Christian Conventions of WA. This video includes his talk and his questions & answer time. For Dan Conway's performance at this event, please visit our channel.

RZIM : Life's Four Big Questions, Q and A – by Ravi Zacharias @ University of Kentucky (2016)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=DseIM5MlpS0 [Video]

Return to the beginning*: Science, the Bible and God

"Science, the Bible and God" continues on next page…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Galileo, Science and the Bible - Acta Philosophica
http://www.actaphilosophica.it/sites/default/files/pdf/carrol-19971.pdf [PDF]

Existentialism, Science, and the Scriptures:
The Mythological Christology of Rudolf Bultmann
http://www.biblicaltheology.com/Research/CarterJ05.html

Paul Tillich: Theism Rewritten for an Age of Science
http://www.godweb.org/Tillich.htm

Excerpt:

The theologian dies. His wife returns home and walks upstairs to his desk. Hannah Tillich describes what she discovered:

> I unlocked the drawers. All the girls' photos fell out, letters and poems, passionate appeal and disgust. Beside the drawers, which were supposed to contain his spiritual harvest, the books he had written and the unpublished manuscripts all lay in unprotected confusion. I was tempted to place between the sacred pages of his highly esteemed lifework those obscene signs of the real life that he had transformed into the gold of abstraction--King Midas of the spirit.

Hannah Tillich's autobiography contains a brief, brutally honest account of the theologian's personal life. It portrays the Paulus she knew as husband and lover; it shows in concrete detail the situation of passion in which many of Tillich's ideas were conceived and nurtured. Like no other record in western literature, From Time to Time reveals what it was like to be life's companion to a titan of the spirit.

Reading this book, many would discount Tillich as a theologian. After all, why is a teacher in the church of God defiant of so many of the rules in conventional morality? Why the extra-marital relationships, the menage-a-trois, the experimentation with drugs, the Marxism, and, most remarkable of all, the development of a theological system that rests upon the premise that God does not exist!

When Hannah's book is read alongside all the other Tillich books and, when the patterns of his whole life and work emerge from the immediate passions of their marriage, the answers to these questions become obvious. Hannah opened the desk containing Tillich's treasury of love letters nestled alongside his theological writings, and she has this fantasy. With a depth of conflicting emotion she imagines placing "between the sacred pages of his highly esteemed lifework those obscene signs of the real life that he had transformed into the gold of abstraction." These words are descriptive. It would not be far off the mark to say that Tillich did turn the deepest passions of life into the gold of abstraction. That is exactly what a theologian is supposed to do. The fire of religious feeling -- faith and doubt, wonder, and awe -- must be translated into an orderly pattern so that one may see and understand the fire's source. If one wants to learn from the religious experience of another person, one must have the instruments of thought necessary to discern what may be of value in a particular experience and what may not be of value.

Historically, the church has lost its way when its abstractions were no longer in touch with "real life" and no longer served a human need. Whenever the words of piety, sermons, or prayers are invoked in mindless repetition and whenever the words of the theologians no longer bear any relationship to the actual passions of a particular people, then it is time to mourn for the church of Christ.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

One of Tillich's greatest contributions to theology, far greater than his mastery of abstraction, was his demonstration of exactly how deeply religious passion is rooted in human life itself. Tillich would have considered it a compliment to say that he succeeded in making the deepest thoughts and feelings accessible to understanding. Of course, Hannah's comment was not meant to be complimentary. She was referring to the tragedy of Midas, suggesting exactly what many of Tillich's theological opponents have charged: that he transformed life itself into an abstraction; that he turned the reality of God into the deadly gold of fanciful theory.

Thus, in the bitterness of her mourning Hannah imagines placing the love letters in between the pages of his theology, and, ironically, that act would have been appropriate. For, as Tillich struggled with the many loves and lovers in his life, he also struggled with the deepest and most imponderable love of all, the love of God. Tillich's most formidable work, the weighty, three volumes of his Systematic Theology could be described as a thoughtful record of one man's exploration into the depths of love. What Hannah says of the love letters can also be said of the theology. In the papers contained within Tillich's secret desk she could see "the many-colored flow of emotions he had aroused and that had aroused him -- the red of passion, the sharp poisonous yellow of competition, the black of despair, the blue of devotion, and even the white of innocence he had not been able to destroy."(2) There were these and many other shades and hues of emotion represented in the letters and in the theology. For in his writings Tillich was able to discern the inner symmetry of the human spirit; he was able to explore the geography of human consciousness itself. In so doing he drew upon the newest of the life sciences, depth psychology. Almost single-handedly Tillich was able to separate the science of psychoanalysis from the atheism of its founder, Sigmund Freud, and to use its powerful tools of analysis in rebuilding the very faith which Freud so confidently assigned to oblivion. Though one may not find in Tillich a life one wants to emulate, one most certainly finds in his theology a number of insights indispensable to the renewal of religion in an age of science…

Banned TED Talk: The Science Delusion - Rupert Sheldrake at TEDx Whitechapel
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=1TerTgDEgUE

The debate about Rupert Sheldrake's talk https://blog.ted.com/the-debate-about-rupert-sheldrakes-talk/

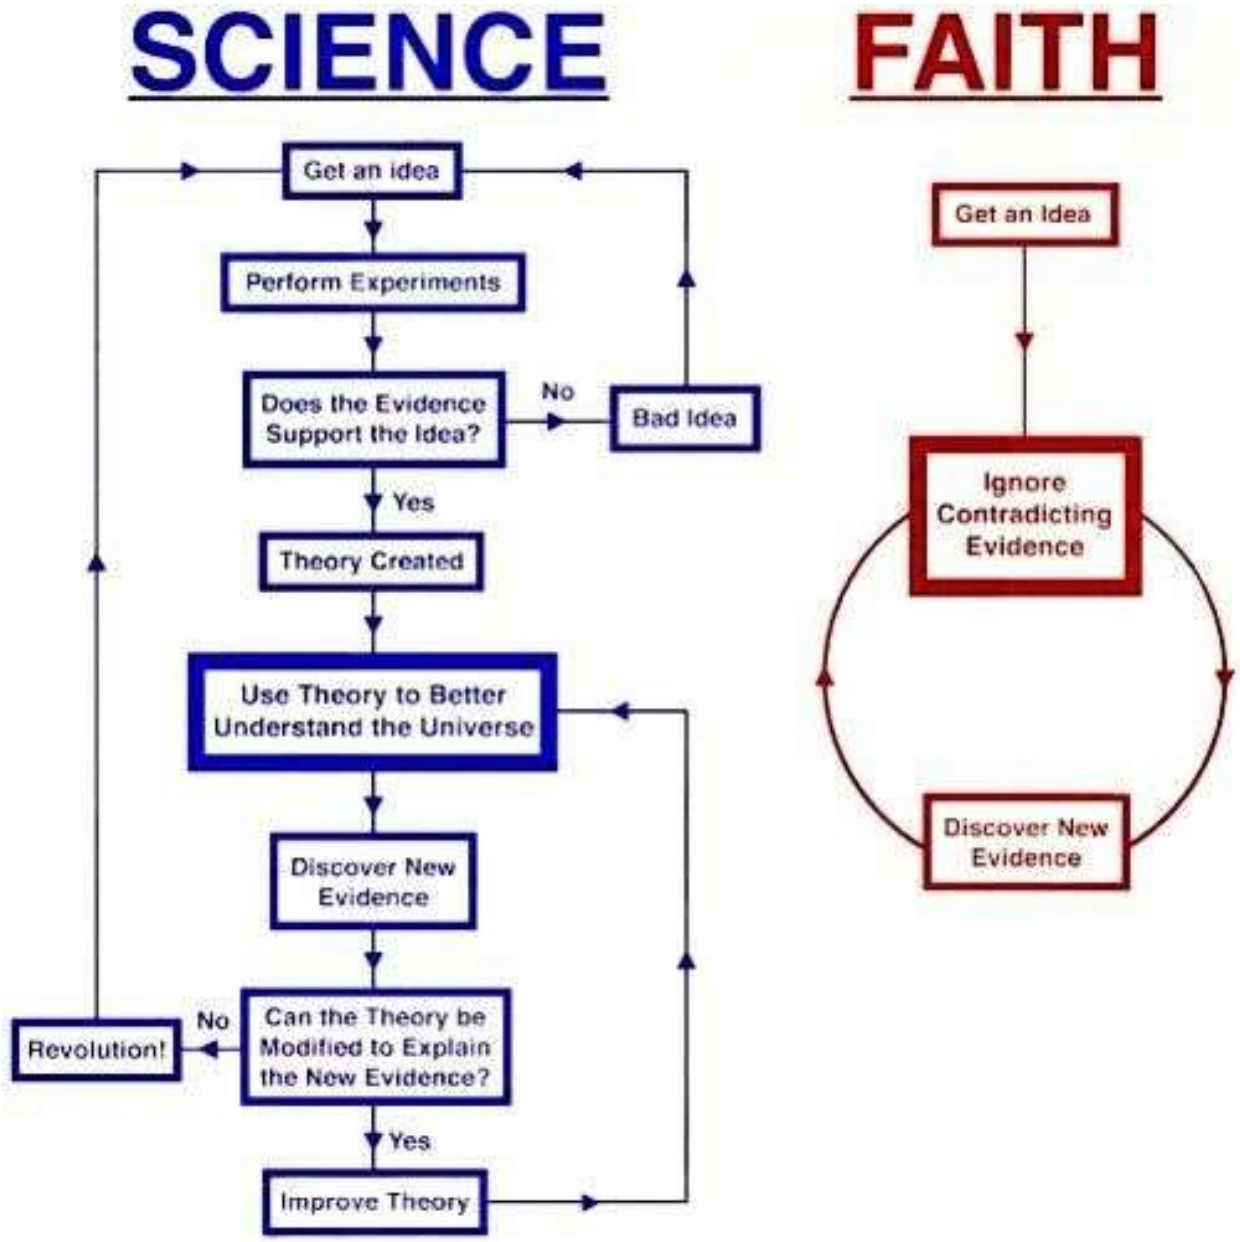
Challenges the "10 Dogmas" (or assumptions) of existing educated science worldview and discusses his hypothesis of "Morphic Resonance" (and references C.S. Pierce as the originator of the concept of "the irregularities of nature being habitual" and out of which Rupert has developed his hypothesis)



[Note: Not sure how this relates or is even valid but included here because of the list of 10 Dogmas at the very least.]

See also*: Worldviews

Return to the beginning*: Science, the Bible and God

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Here's How Most Atheists Compare Science to Faith

Breaking the Science-Atheism Bond (Alister McGrath)
http://www.beliefnet.com/news/science-religion/2005/08/breaking-the-science-atheism-bond.aspx

See also*: Worldviews

Faith

Return to the beginning*: Science, the Bible and God

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

N.T. Wright on Evolution and Creation and Related Topics

N.T. Wright on Genesis (2010)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=ffWo7nzL66o [Video]

N.T. Wright - Evolution (2011)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=_yPCTnGMRFM [Video]

N.T. Wright on Evolution, Deism, Separation of Church & State, & Heaven on Earth
http://www.patheos.com/blogs/thepangeablog/2012/04/29/n-t-wright-on-evolution-deism-church-and-state/

Links to video: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=_yPCTnGMRFM [Video]

N.T. Wright: If Creation is Through Christ, Evolution is What You Would Expect
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=wZ2qrkE-t00 [Video] (2017)

N.T. Wright: "Christ & Creation" (2017 BioLogos Conference)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=6h0yEpqDEI8 [Video]

NT Wright spanks RC Sproul and Al Mohler (MISLABELED / BAD TITLE) is really:
N.T. Wright on Creation and Evolution after a clip of Comments by RC Sproul and Al Mohler
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=jQ9_AFwnsWw

Can a Scientist Believe in the Resurrection? (2007)
http://www.jamesgregory.org.uk/series-1/can-a-scientist-believe-in-the-resurrection/

Here is a lecture (that link has PDF transcript, audio and videos) that Wright gave on the resurrection as part of the "James Gregory public lectures on Science, Religion, and Human Flourishing" (Univ. of St. Andrews, Scotland)

N.T. Wright explains seven "mutations" caused by the resurrection
https://winteryknight.com/2011/08/05/n-t-wright-explains-seven-mutations-caused-by-the-resurrection/

For an Excerpt from above article see*: Resurrection of Jesus the Messiah (Christ)

Return to the beginning*: Science, the Bible and God

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Doubt

When Doubt Becomes Unbelief by Alister McGrath

https://www.ligonier.org/learn/articles/when-doubt-becomes-unbelief/

Excerpt:

Doubt is not unbelief. But it can become unbelief. That basic principle should guide our reflections on this important issue. Doubt is natural within faith. It comes about because of our human weakness and frailty. We lack the confidence to trust fully in God and long for certainty in all matters of faith. But absolute certainty is hard to come by. You can be sure that 2 + 2 = 4, but is that going to change your life? Is that going to give you a reason to live and hope in the face of death? And it isn't just Christians who are in this situation. The atheist's belief that there is no God is just as much a matter of faith as your belief that there is! Doubt also comes about through our lack of humility. All of us are tempted to believe that because we haven't got the answers to the hard questions of faith, then there aren't any answers to those questions.

We need to learn to be relaxed about doubt. Doubt is like an attention-seeking child. The more attention you pay to it, the more attention it demands. By worrying about your doubts, you get locked into a vicious cycle of uncertainty.

So how does doubt become unbelief? Unbelief is the decision to live your life as if there is no God. It is a deliberate decision to reject Jesus Christ and all that He stands for. But doubt is something quite different. Doubt arises within the context of faith. It is a wistful longing to be sure of the things in which we trust. But it is not, and need not, be a problem. Just because I can't prove my faith in God doesn't mean that it is wrong.

But unbelief can creep in during those moments of doubt. How? Think of your faith as a lifeline to God. Think of it as being like an umbilical cord, linking you to God and providing a channel through which His life-giving grace can reach you. Sever that link and faith will wither, just as a branch which is broken off a vine shrivels and dies (John 15:1-6). Have you read C.S. Lewis' Screwtape Letters? If not, there is a real treat in store for you. But if you have, you will know how Lewis points out that Satan uses ploy after ploy to try to get Christians to break their links with God. Doubt is one of those ploys.

Think through what will happen if Satan can manage to get you obsessed with your doubts. You'll start becoming introverted, as you become preoccupied with your doubts. You'll look inwards, at yourself and your state of mind. And you will stop looking outwards, away from yourself and toward the promises of God, confirmed and sealed through the death and resurrection of Christ. The more you worry about your doubts, the less you will look to God. Gradually, those vital links with the life-giving grace of God will wither—and your spiritual life will wither and shrivel. Doubt will become unbelief—because you allowed it to. Feed your doubts and your faith will starve—but feed your faith, and your doubts will starve. Doubt initially becomes a problem, and finally becomes unbelief, if, and only if, you allow it.

Unbelief thus comes about through several possible routes. First, through an unrealistic attitude to faith. If you believe that you can, or need to, know everything with absolute certainty, your faith will be in difficulties very soon. But faith isn't like that! Faith is about being willing to live, trusting in the existence and promises of God, knowing that one day, that existence and those promises will be totally vindicated. But for the moment, we walk by faith, not by sight.

Second, unbelief may come through a morbid preoccupation with doubt, by which you become so obsessed with your own mental states and feelings that God is shut out of your life. Give Him some breaks! Look outward, not inward! Look to the promises of God; savor them; accept them. Stop allowing your doubts to dominate your life. Doubt, seen properly, is just the darker side of faith; rediscover the "sunnier side of doubt" (Tennyson)—the joy of faith itself.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

And third, unbelief may come through an immature faith—a faith which refuses to grow up. A weak faith is a vulnerable faith. The process of maturing as a Christian involves deepening our understanding of what we believe. As we grow older, we are meant to deepen our understanding of our faith. The things that bothered us when we were young in faith don't bother us quite so much. In fact, if I might speak from personal experience, I now realize that most of my own early doubts simply reflected my inadequate understanding of my faith. As I grew older, I grew wiser—through reading, thinking, and listening to or reading wise Christians. Reinforce faith with understanding, in much the same way as you would reinforce concrete with steel. Together, they can withstand far greater stress than they could ever withstand on their own.

When does doubt become unbelief? Answer: When you let it. When you cling to unrealistic ideas about faith, when you get hopelessly preoccupied with the doubts that are a natural part of the Christian life, or when you fail to allow your faith to grow. These pitfalls can all be avoided. Don't feel ashamed about your doubts. Talking them through with older and wiser Christians can be a vital safety valve which stops a head of doubting steam from building up—a head of steam which could eventually lead from normal doubt to the hopelessness of unbelief.

For for those questioning or experiencing doubt about Christianity, the follow publication is highly [Recommended]:

Evidence that Demands a Verdict (Revised, 2017 by Josh McDowell and his son, Sean, PhD)

See also*: Apologetics

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Paul and Apocalyptic Theology – Apocalyptic Paul (AP)

Paul and Apocalyptic Theology (Student Report) (2003)
http://www.oocities.org/w_travis_mc/writings/paulandapoc.pdf [PDF]

Paul's Apocalyptic Imagination: 'The Martyn School' https://cruciformtheologyblog.com/2013/10/15/pauls-apocalyptic-imagination-the-martyn-school/

N.T. Wright Responds to the Apocalyptic Paul School http://www.patheos.com/blogs/jesuscreed/2015/11/16/n-t-wright-responds-to-the-apocalyptic-paul-school/

Excerpt:

The major debate about the apostle Paul shifted in the 21st Century from a debate between the "old" and the "new" perspective of Paul to the new perspective vs. the apocalyptic Paul. In saying that, the tussle ends up being between NT Wright (a version of the NPP) and Lou Martyn and his followers (e.g., de Boer, Gaventa, Campbell). It is not that J.D.G. Dunn's work has fallen to the side, for it hasn't — though he is no longer as active in Pauline studies as he once was (as his 3d volume in Beginnings of Christianity is about to appear).

The debate, I say, is between new vs. apocalyptic, and this explains why in NT Wright's Paul and His Recent Interpreters there is a vigorous interaction with the apocalyptic school. The section — Part 2 of the book — is almost 100 pages. The following provides some of the emphases of Wright's interaction and criticisms.

First, the lineup of scholars: Ernst Käsemann, J.C. Beker, J. Louis Martyn, Martin de Boer, and Douglas Campbell — with a glance or two at Bev Gaventa. There is a trajectory and some very interesting differences (and tensions) between these scholars.

Second, the term "apocalyptic" becomes in the apocalyptic Paul (AP) a worldview and a theology rather than an a careful analysis of what apocalyptic means, of what books count as apocalypses, and a careful of Paul and how he fits or does not fit that more refined analysis of apocalyptic. What is called apocalyptic often enough has little to do with Jewish apocalypses. The only scholar in this group who has independently looked at apocalyptic is de Boer and his view, Wright contends, collapses in on itself (forensic vs. cosmic apocalyptic) yet has been used in reified ways by Martyn and Campbell. Käsemann did not examine Jewish apocalyptic, and we know so much more today about it than in his day.

Once Again, What is the "Apocalyptic" Paul?
http://www.patheos.com/blogs/jesuscreed/2016/05/03/once-again-what-is-the-apocalyptic-paul/

Paul and the Apocalyptic Imagination
http://fortresspress.com/product/paul-and-apocalyptic-imagination [links to intor. excerpt PDF]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Apocalyptic Paul: Campbell's Rereading of Romans 1–3
https://henrycenter.tiu.edu/2015/02/the-apocalyptic-paul-campbells-rereading-romans-1-3/

Campbell's most controversial move is his claim that Romans 1:18–32 does not contain the voice of Paul but, rather, of the Teacher.

Apocalyptic Paul – Cosmos and Anthropos in Romans 5-8 (Review) (2013)
https://www.hfsbooks.com/books/apocalyptic-paul-gaventa/

How does an apocalyptic reading of Paul differ from Wright's?
http://blog.christilling.de/2015/03/how-does-apocalyptic-reading-of-paul.html

Leon Morris's "Apocalyptic" as a PDF (1972)
http://andynaselli.com/leon-morriss-apocalyptic-as-a-pdf [links to PDF]

NOTE: Not sure if this relates to subject… parked here until vetted

The New Perspective on Paul, Ethnocentrism, and Judaism (2011)
https://www.jasonstaples.com/bible/the-new-perspective-on-paul-ethnocentrism-and-judaism/

Excerpt:

…Lest I take the easy way out and stop short of providing an alternative proposal of my own, I am convinced that Paul did not oppose his Jewish contemporaries because of legalism, self-righteousness, particularity, or ethnocentrism but over the question of how one becomes a righteous person (or rather, a part of a righteous people) who will justly be judged as righteous in the final judgment. He argues that no external law, facts of birth, or ritual practice can reliably be said to truly make a person (or people) righteous. Against this, he points to the power of the Spirit to transform a person from the inside out as the only means of true righteousness, asserting that the death and resurrection of the Messiah have provided for an outpouring of this Spirit for the transformation of his people (and ultimately the world itself). Paul's thinking was thoroughly apocalyptic—emphasizing God's righteous judgment—and thoroughly centered on God's restoration of his people through this transformation by the Spirit. This may not scratch modern itches to the degree that the Evangelical or academic multicultural Pauls do, but I am convinced that it is a more faithful reconstruction of what was truly at root in Paul's proclamation.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Apocalyptic Paul? (Review of lecture given by Michael Bird)

http://www.bibleexposition.net/2016/02/the-apocalyptic-paul.html

Excerpts:

In the contemporary study of the Apostle Paul, some scholars have stressed that Paul was a very "apocalyptic" thinker, believing that God had invaded the world to bring an end to "religion" by dramatically revealing salvation in Jesus Christ. Yet some have questioned whether this is really what "apocalyptic" means and whether Paul really posits such a rigorous discontinuity between Israel's "religion" and his own account of Christian faith. Accordingly, other scholars have contended that Paul had a theology informed by a continuous story called "salvation-history" in which salvation is not the negation of the old order, but its very fulfillment in Christ. The Book of Galatians has been the primary battleground in this debate between "apocalyptic" and "salvation-history" and is currently one of the more contentious contemporary debates in Pauline studies. The purpose of this lecture is to introduce this topic to a wider audience, to briefly evaluate both the apocalyptic and salvation-history approaches, and to propose a somewhat mediating position between them.

…and…

Bird began his talk by sketching out [four] common approaches to Pauline theology: Traditional, New Perspective, Radical Paul/Paul within Judaism, and Apocalyptic Paul.

…also…

One of the current debates in New Testament scholarship is whether Paul's theology was rooted in an apocalyptic worldview, whereby salvation was a punctiliar and even intrusive event, or whether it was part of an on-going story of promise and fulfillment called "salvation history." Using Galatians as a test case, the purpose of this lecture is to show how one can bring together both "apocalyptic" and "salvation historical" readings of Paul. Mike Bird (Dr. Michael Bird) argues that the invasive action of God declared in the gospel still stands within a promise-fulfillment scheme that Paul utilizes in his theological discourse.

"An Invasive Story: Paul's Theology Between Messianic Event and Salvation-History" Video of lecture: https://vimeo.com/159026113 [Video]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Messiah or Christ? Yeshua or Jesus?

http://empirenet.com/~messiah7/spl_ChristOrMessiah.htm

Many people in the Hebrew roots movement passionately reject the use of names such as "Christ" and "Jesus" and any word or practice that sounds to them as though it has a Greek rather than Hebrew origin. To them, anyone who uses any form of "Greek" name or practice must surely be wrapped up in worship of the sun god rather than of Yahweh and the Messiah of whom the Torah and prophets speak.

They offer a large variety of evidence to "prove" this, such as:

- Greeks, not followers of the Messiah, called him Christ(os) (Michael Rood, Jeremia Gordon)

- Greeks called all their gods christos, so Christ must not be used as a title for the Messiah (Michael Rood, Jeremia Gordon)

- Greeks, not Hebrews, first substituted the word "Lord" for "Yahweh"

- Zeus (a Greek god) was added to the name Yeshua to make the name "Jesus (Iesous in Greek); therefore following Jesus is the same as following the sun-god

- Greek name endings with sus, seus, and sous (which are phonetic pronunciations for Zeus) were attached by the Greeks to names and geographical areas as means to give honor to their supreme deity, Zeus." (J. C. J. Melford, page 126)

- it is gross error to transliterate Yeshua as Iesous (Jesus), in part because the "J" sound of Jesus does not match the "Y" sound of the Hebrew Yeshua

- "IHS" (a symbol used for Jesus in many churches) comes from the sun god, or is an acrostic with pagan or occultic meaning

- Dutch theologian named Desiderius Erasmus(1466-1536) in the year 1516 introduced the word "Lord" for Yahweh

- The "Name of blasphemy" christ' (Romans 5:6 KJV) ; was first introduced by the devil and "false apostle Paul" in his evil letter to The Romans

- all, or nearly all, of the New Testament was written in Hebrew or Aramaic, not Greek, so the authors could not have used the names Jesus or Christ

- the Vatican must be hiding original Hebrew or Aramaic texts of the New Testament which are older than any Greek texts

- Greek language and belief that practicing the Mosaic law is not mandatory or even beneficial to spiritual growth is a corruption

Some readers readily accept these kinds of claims uncritically, even though the claims often contradict each other. Who was at fault for introducing sun god worship into the church? Erasmus? The Roman Catholic church? Constantine? The council of Nicea? The false apostle Paul? Unidentified Greeks?

All these assertions have one thing in common- they do not identify actual evidence to back them up. For instance, they do not provide actual quotations from, and titles of, ancient sources such as historians of the first century. Radical claims such as these call for weighty, verifiable sources and evidence to back them up. But none is provided.

Here are verifiable facts that address these claims:

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

EXAMINING CLAIMS ABOUT THE ORIGIN OF "CHRIST" AND "LORD"

1. Hebrews, not Greeks, came up with the name Iesous and used it in place of "Yeshua" . About 150 years BC devout Hebrew men translated the Old Testament into Greek. This isn't just speculation, You can check this out for yourself. The Greek translation was called the Septuagint (abbreviated as "LXX" because LXX is the Roman number for 70, which reflected the Hebrew belief that 70 men translated it). The simplest way to verify this is to visit www.unboundbible.org You can have it print out Joshua 1:1 (or any other verse that mentions Joshua) with the English next to the OT Greek. It is obvious the Hebrews chose "Iesous" for "Joshua/Yeshua." That was Greek spelling that to them sounded most like the Hebrew "Yeshua," The Greek alphabet does not have either a "Y" or a "J," nor does it have a "sh" sound, so they could not have spelled it either "Yeshua" or "Jesus." You can also find "Septuagint" in Webster's dictionary (maybe not a pocket size, but the desk size will have it) because it is so important in understanding the Law and Prophets as well as the New Testament. The Hebrew world chose to use the word "Christ," not the Greeks This translation was widely in use among Hebrews in the first century, so many Jews called the Messiah "Christ." Both Hebrew and Gentile followers of Y'shua drew their faith vocabulary and thought from the bilingual Hebrew world, not from the Gentile Greek world.

2. The "ous" ending on "Jesus/Iesous" was not put there by sun god worshipers or by Greeks. The Hebrews first did it in the LXX, as noted above. They had to do this because of how the Greek language works. English is a word order language in which nouns and names are always spelled the same, and you understand what they mean by where they fall in the sentence. It makes a big difference whether you say "Jeff went to the store" or "The store went to Jeff."

Greek is not that way. Greek doesn't care what order the words are in. Instead, Greek changes how the names are spelled to help you understand what they mean. This is called "declining" words and giving the nouns "case." You can find definitions of these words in Webster, too. For instance, if the name "Jeff" was used in ancient (and modern) Greek, it would be spelled different ways depending on their use. A sentence would say "Jeffous (the subject of the sentence) sent Jeffov (the object of the sentence) to get the book of Jeffou ("Possessive"- Jeff's book)." You'll notice that "Jeff" always has an ending added to it. It has to have an ending, or the readers wouldn't understand the sentence, because word order means nothing.

The same thing happened with the name Yeshua/Joshua. Hebrews took the root of the name, "Yes" transliterated it to Greek letters "Ies" and added the case endings so that the name was spelled "Iesous," "Iesou" or "Iesov" depending on its use in the sentence. This wasn't an option. Greek speakers did this with every name and nouns, whether it was Simon, house, cow, table- whatever. The "ous" (or other word endings) weren't added because they indicated Greek gods. They were a natural part of talking Greek.

English does not decline nouns, except for the pronoun "he." We say, "He (nominative) drove him (accusative) to the store in his (genitive) car." It wouldn't make sense to us to instead say "He drove he to the store in he car," because you have to decline the word for it to make any sense. In the same way, Greek had to decline nouns in order for them to make any sense.

Adding "s" to the end of Christ (or Messiah) was necessary when the words were used by Greek speakers. Nouns in Greek (and some other languages, but not English) must be "declinable." That means that the last couple letters of the noun change with how they are used in the sentence. When "Christ" or "Messiah" is used as the subject, it is spelled with an "s" at the end (e.g.: Messias). When the noun is used as a genitive (as in "followers of Messiah") it is spelled with a "u" at the end (e.g.: Christou). English shortens it to the root, "Christ," because English doesn't decline nouns. Regardless of exactly how different languages spell it- as Messias, Messiah, Mashiyach, Christ, Christos, Y'shua, Yeshua, Jesus," etc, it is the same name or title. (Rood himself has used a variety of spellings of names for Messiah and YHWH, some not matching the spellings Gordon uses.)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

3. "Zeus" was not added to "Yeshua" to make "Iesous." In fact, "Zeus" is spelled with a Z, and there is no Z in Iesous. The article by J. C. J. Melford, page 126 ... is just plain silly: "It is known that the Greek name endings with sus, seus, and sous (which are phonetic pronunciations for Zeus) were attached by the Greeks to names and geographical areas as means to give honour to their supreme deity, Zeus." The "s" ending was applied to dogs, roaches, houses, dog piles, rotten meat- literally all masculine nouns. Giving honor has absolutely nothing to do with this. Plus, names were actually spelled with "u" and "n" endings, too, depending on the case (as noted above). It is just grammar, not Zeus. But check this out for yourself by looking at any Greek grammar. What Melford says is just totally ignorant of the Greek language.

4, The Greeks never used the word "Christ" for their gods, or in any sacred context, or as any kind of title of honor at all. The verb form of the word meant "to rub lightly, spread." It was used for spreading oil after a bath, poison on arrows (both of these are found in Homer), whitewash, paint or cosmetics. The Dictionary of New Testament Theology Vol. 2 (from which this information is taken) adds, "It is anything but an expression of honor. Where it refers to people, it even tends towards the disrespectful" (pp. 334-335). For example, the compound word neochristos meant "newly whitewashed" (see Diodorus Siculus). The Greeks certainly did not choose to use the word for the Hebrew Messiah- nor did the Christians.

On the surface, it may seem odd to some people that such a "secular" word as christos would be used for anointing Messiah, which people see as a very spiritual use. But the noun Messiah, also has a verb form, messah. Some of the Prophets use the verb in everyday ways- to rub (messah) a shield with oil (Isaiah 21:5), to paint (messah) a house (Jeremiah 22:14), and apply oil (messah) to a body (Amos 6:6). You can verify that the verb massah is used in these verses by checking a Hebrew text or Strong's concordance. This shows that the verb form of Messiah is sometimes used in the same nonreligious ways that the verb form of christos was used by the Greeks. This made christos a good match for translators to use, since they were looking for a Greek root that had both verb and noun forms which were used in much the same ways as the Hebrew words. Messah was used more often to describe anointing kings, prophets and priests, but it was clearly used in both secular and religious ways.

5. The Hebrews, not Greek or Christians, chose to use the word "Christ(os)" and "Messiah" interchangeably. The Hebrews themselves translated the Old Testament into Greek in about 150 B.C. in what is called the Septuagint They say that the High Priest himself chose 72 elders from Judea who were experienced in the law, beliefs and customs of the Torah and were able to translate from Hebrew to Greek. This means they were fluent in both languages, and used both Messiah and Christos, Throughout the LXX, "Christ" is used for the Anointed One, such as in Psalm 2:2. You can check this for yourself by looking it up in the Septuagint online at www.unboundbible.org or in a paper copy at a library.

The Apostle John himself used both words when he wrote, "(Andrew said,) we have found the Messiah, that is the Christ" (John 1:42), and "The woman said, 'I know that Messiah, called Christ, is coming" (John 4:24). John considered "Christ" and "Messiah" to be synonymous, and used Christ when speaking to Greek speakers, and Messiah when speaking to Hebrew speakers. (This article follows the Gospel's practice of using Messiah and Christ interchangeably, too.)

6. Hebrews roots proponents including Rood also condemn using the word "Lord" for YHWH (often spelled Yahweh). But the Hebrews, not Christians, introduced "Lord" (Greek- kurios) in the LXX just as it did "Christ." The LXX uses "Lord" (Greek- kurios) for YHWH and "God" for Elohim (eg: Genesis 3:14, Exodus 3:14)..

7. The only ancient author to suggest that any part of the NT was authored in Aramaic or Hebrew is Papias, and he said only that Matthew was, not the rest of the NT. Some writers claim that many ancient authors claimed the NT was written in Aramaic, but that is entirely false. I challenge you to find the name, book title, and chapter of even one ancient author or church leader (other than Papias) that said so. They absolutely do not exist.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

8. Many Hebrews of the first century B.C. who strictly observed the Torah spoke and wrote in Greek, not Hebrew. One example of this is the book of II Maccabees. Although this book is included in the Apocrypha found in Catholic Bibles, those books were written by Hebrews for Hebrews. II Maccabees records historical events which took place in Israel from 175 to 160 B.C. It is a condensation of a five volume history written by Jason of Cyrene, a strict observer of Torah written for other strict observers. It records how God's people faced torture and martyrdom rather than break the law of Moses. Yet, the book was authored in Greek, not Hebrew, and continued to be passed down to Hebrews in Greek. They considered it perfectly acceptable to strict observers of Torah to use the Greek language. The Greek Septuagint version of the Law and Prophets was used by Hebrews like these.

9. It is entirely imagination to speculate that the Vatican is hiding ancient Hebrew copies of the Gospels. No matter how logical it may seem to you, this is strictly fantasy until anyone produces a valid copy of such a thing. The fact is that we now have extremely early portions of the Gospels written in Greek, but absolutely none in Hebrew. The earliest portion is a copy of several verses of the Gospel of Matthew that dates to 60-62 A.D., which is within a few years of when Matthew authored his Gospel. Besides the physical evidence of the type of material and ink that was used, documents found with it pin down this very early date.

10. The book of Acts and the epistles were all written in Greek. Almost all the conversations in the book of Acts had to have taken place in Greek, not Hebrew. Think about it.

Luke, the author of Acts, was a Greek and he addressed it to another Greek, Theophilus (both names are Greek). Saul (Paul) and Luke accordingly used the Greek form Christos," because the vast majority of their hearers would have understood that, but would not have understood "Messiah," because they did not know Hebrew.

Acts 6 mentions the large body of Greek-speaking Hebrews in Jerusalem, the heart of Hebrew country (6:1). Phillip preached to the Samaritans, (who hated Hebrews, their language, religion and temple) and surely used Greek or Aramaic (Acts 8). The Gentile centurion Cornelius, some of his soldiers, and his whole household could not have understood Hebrew, yet understood Peter preaching- no doubt in Greek (Acts 10).

Paul, Barnabas and others taught the many Greeks who came to faith at Antioch (Acts 11,13). Paul persuaded the Roman proconsul on Cyprus, Sergius Paulus to believe (Acts 13:6-12). Many Gentiles at Iconium believed Paul, but he barely persuaded the crowds in Lystra (who spoke Lycaonian) not to sacrifice to them as gods (Acts 14). Acts never mentions a synagogue in most of the cities Paul visited. Paul could not have communicated in Hebrew to his own coworkers such as Timothy and Titus, who were raised as Greeks. In fact, most of Paul's coworkers had Greek names- Titus, Timothy, Apollos and Dionysius (names of Greek gods), Eutychus, the seven (Acts 6:6), the teachers at Antioch (Acts 13) and the long list of saints in Romans 16. Some names were Hebrew, such as Barnabas, which indicates that Luke wasn't trying to expunge everything Hebrew and replace everything with Greek- he was just factually reporting the prevalence of both Hebrew and especially Greek in the early church.

Paul spoke with the judges and jailer at Philippi, a Roman colony, though they surely did not know Hebrew. Paul's message to the Areopagus in Athens (Acts 17), and his defense when on trial before the Roman proconsul Gallio (Acts 18) were in Greek. The idolmakers in Ephesus (Acts 19) surely didn't riot in Hebrew. Paul spoke Greek to the Roman commander and centurion who arrested him in the temple (Acts 21:37, 22:25), as did Paul's nephew (23:19-21). Paul didn't need a translator. Paul made his own defense when on trial before Governors Felix (Acts 24) and Festus (Acts 25-26). Paul surely spoke Greek to the captain and everyone on the ship on his voyage to Rome (Acts 27) and to the superstitious islanders on Malta (Acts 28). Since Paul spoke Greek to them, he always had to use "Iesous Christos" with the Greek endings on the name in order to be understood.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

11. An Aramaic NT did not have to exist in order for the Greek NT to transliterate "Yeshua" into "Iesous." As I mentioned above, Paul and others spoke to many groups of people in Greek, using the "declined" word forms in order to be understood. Luke was quoting him.

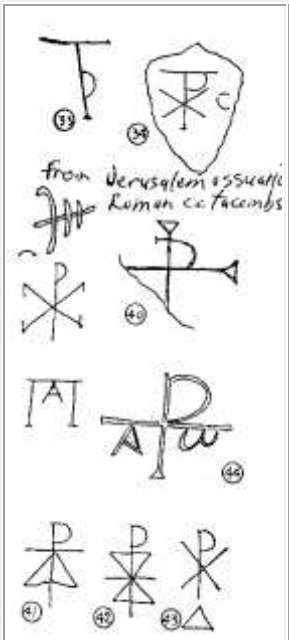
12. The New Testament sometimes uses a variety of spellings for names. The Greek form "Iesous" is used for Jesus in the NT, and is used for Joshua in the OT (you can check this in the Septuagint, as I mentioned above.) So every translator who sees "Iesous" in Hebrews has to guess by the context whether it refers to Jesus or Joshua, as in Hebrews 4. It's a fluke that people commonly translate the Iesous as either Joshua or Jesus. But it is not uncommon to have different spellings for the same name. For instance, Jude, Judah and Judas are all exactly the same name, and are spelled the same in Greek.. You can check this yourself by calling up Mat 1:2, 26:47 and Jude 1 in Greek at http://www.unboundbible.org . Matthew and Matthias are the same Greek name.

Why is the same Greek sometimes transliterated in different ways? It wouldn't have to be. But it saves some explaining- you don't have to tell every child, "no, Judas the betrayer didn't write a book of the Bible." Sometimes translators chop off the Greek "s" ending (like in Jude, Herod, etc) and other times leave it on (as in Judas, Jesus).

13. When people translate the Greek New Testament into English (and other languages), why don't the translators convert Greek forms of names like Iesous into Hebrew forms such as Yeshua? There are a few reasons for this. First, the Greek does not read Yeshua, it reads Iesous. Is it sound translation to write in sounds that don't actually exist in the Greek original? Second, in conversations recorded in the second half of the book of Acts, such as Paul's conversations in Ephesus, Philippi, etc, the speakers certainly used the Greek forms of the names (as noted above). To replace words that apostles actually said with Hebrew forms that they did not use is a stretch that translators think would be inappropriate or misleading.

14. The abbreviation "IHS" does not come from the sun god, and is not an acrostic with pagan or occultic meaning. "IHS" are the first 3 letters of "Yeshua" when it is transliterated into Greek. The Hebrews, not Greek, chose this spelling (see the Septuagint, Joshua 1). The abbreviation stops at the first three letters because they are the root of the word. The endings vary- Iesous, Iesov, Iesou, etc.-- depending on the word's place in the sentence, as mentioned above. Some ancient Christian writings abbreviate names by using the first and last letters of Iesous- IS- in place of the whole name (IHS may also be the first two, and the last, letters of Iesous). They also abbreviated Theos (God) to "THS" (which is just two letters in Greek).

This is similar to the English practice of using the first initials of our first, middle and last names, such as "JFK." Just as Americans know that "JFK" refers to Pres. John F. Kennedy, so followers of Iesous knew (and in many cases still know) that IHS refers to Yeshua (Jesus Christ).



We find the practice of abbreviating names in the Old Testament. The OT uses both YH and YHWH. The short version is most common in names like Jo-shua (Ya-shua; not Yahweh-shua/ Jehoweh-shua. It also appears in its simplest form in Psalm 68:4 "extol him by His name Yah." Elohim, another title for God, is also used in its shortened form, El, in the Law and the Prophets. People don't wonder what conspiratorial or occult meaning there is in the abbreviation YH or El, we know it is the name of the Lord, whether full length or shortened. Using IHS or XP follows the Hebrew (not Greek, Masonic or Roman Catholic) practice of using the shortened YH.
Abbreviating names and titles was well known in the Christian and Roman world as well, especially on coins in which space was very limited. Abbreviations of Christ's name, such as XP, is also very ancient. Some examples are in the Roman Catacombs, where believers gathered long before any semblance of Roman Catholicism or Masonry. When you scratch messages and tributes on stone walls, it's a lot easier to abbreviate names than to spell them out in full. There are many examples of both coins and Christian graffiti from the ancient world. (See pictures below.)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Some names have short and long forms, just as we do in English- Tom, Ths. and Thomas. We don't look for any mystical or occultic meaning if someone signs his name Tom or Ths. instead of Thomas. One example of a NT name in short and long form is Silvanus.. when he wrote the short form Silas, he wasn't trying to get across a deep or occultist meaning, he was just abbreviating it. The same is true of IHS and IHSOUS..

When we see abbreviations like "L (heart) G" carved in a pen knife on a tree, we don't wonder what occult or conspiratorial; meaning there may be in the abbreviation, we just know that it's a lot easier for two lovers to carve 2 letters in bark than 10 or 20. When we sign things with our initials or with our first name only, such as in letters or email, people don't wonder what pagan meaning there may be in the abbreviation of our names, we just know that those who read it know who we are. When the church uses abbreviations like IHS and XP, believers don't wonder, "who's IHS or XP" (unless they're really uninformed), they know who the initials refer to.

(Note: Before the ninth century, all Greek literary works were written in "uncial" script, which looks like capital letters, and are used as capital letters in Greek texts printed nowadays. After the ninth century, most manuscripts were written in "minuscule" script, which looks like small case letters, and are used as small case letters in today's Greek texts. But actually, neither uncial nor minuscule script had large and small case- all the letters were the same "case" and they normally did not put spaces between words. This fact means that the modern day speculation that "IHS" is an acrostic because it is all "capital" letters is false-- they are uncial letters. Nether Greek script had small case and capital letters. Even if you don't know Greek, you can verify this by looking at a reproduction of an ancient uncial manuscript-- all the letters look like "capital" letters. And if you look at a minuscule manuscript, all the letters look like small case.)

Examples of the first two letters of "Christ" (X,P) and the Hebrew Tetragrameton (YHWH) inscribed on first century ossuaries in Jerusalem

18. Bronze
Obv. Anchor; inscription: HPW[ΔOV] (Herod).
Rev. Within wreath, an inscription: EΘNA (Ethnarch).

35. Bronze
Obv. Head of Vespasian; inscription: IMPerator CAESar VESPASIAN AUGustus Pontifex Maximus TRibunicia Potestas Pater Patriae COnSul III.
Rev. Palm tree; on the left, a Jew standing, his hands tied behind his back, behind him a shield; on the right, a Jewess seated on a cuirass, weeping; inscription: IUDAEA CAPTA, in exergue: S. C. (Senatus consulto: With permission of the Senate).

examples of names abbreviated on first century coins

15. In most European languages a J has a Y sound, so "Jesus" sounds like "Yeshua." The "J" is pronounced like a Y in German, Norwegian, Swedish, Spanish, Slavic, etc. When "Jesus" was first spelled with a J (which was at least as early as Luther's German Bible, 1520) probably every language in Europe that used a "J" pronounced it like a "Y." The hard "J" sound in English (as in "judge") is a fluke, not the norm. English is derived from European languages, and America is populated primarily by immigrants from Europe. After moving to America and beginning to learn English, it made sense to them to continue to spell "Jesus" as it had been for many centuries, rather than make up a foreign spelling with a Y that was unfamiliar to them, and which would lead to confusion. Many Bibles continued to be printed in Europe and used in both Europe and the Americas, just as today.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

German, as one example, could not have used a "Y" because the German alphabet did not have a "Y." (At the end of the 20th century German began to use a Y, but only in a handful of foreign names and loan words such as Yates and yacht.) German, like Greek, declines nouns, so the spelling of "Jesus" changes with how it is used in a sentence- Jesus Christus (nominative), Jesu Christi (genitive), etc. If you know classical music and chorales (such as Bach), you may have recognized this already in songs such as "Jesu (pronounced "ya-su"), Joy of Man's Desiring.".

16. Why does "Yeshua" use a "sh" and Jesus an "s?" Hebrew has one consonant for both S and SH. It looks vaguely like our "W." But when you place a dot above the left arm, it's pronounced as an S, but if the dot is above the right arm it's pronounced as an SH. But ancient Hebrew manuscripts didn't use the dots at all, so some pronunciations were up to tradition. Greek, on the other hand, doesn't have an "SH" sound at all, so there is no way to spell Jesus with sh in the middle using Greek letters.

17. If the main goal is to avoid all association with the morning of the first day of the week, due to the sun god, then why was Yeshua so foolish as to arise at sunrise on the first day of the week (a Sunday)? The Gospels clearly say that the resurrection was "at dawn" (Matthew 28:10), "just after sunrise" (Mark 16:2; the word helios, or "sun," is used). If resurrection had taken place at the end of the Sabbath just after sundown, nonJews would have argued that He did not rise on the first day of the week, as He had said. By rising at sunrise, Christ made clear to Jews and Gentiles that he had risen on the third day as He had prophesied.

Early in the book of Revelation they sing the song of the redemption, the song of the Lamb. It honors the death and resurrection of the Messiah. Would it be worthy to honor the resurrection and redemption by worshiping on the day of the week on which that took place, just as the completion of creation was honored by worshiping on the day that took place?

The Law required special worship on Sundays- including the festival of Firstfruits and Feast of Weeks (Leviticus 23:9-21). (The image of the "eighth day" as a special day -- eg: Leviticus 23:36, 39-- is also a model for the honor given to the first/eighth day of the week by the Resurrection of Christ/Messiah.) The Apostle notes that the Messiah (Christ) rose on the first day of the week, the day of Firstfruits, to fulfill the intent of that observance (1 Corinthians 15:20-23). If the main goal is to avoid all association with the sun god, then why did Yahweh require these special worships on the first day of the week, then cause the Messiah to rise from the dead at Sunrise on the first day of the week?

18 The Roman Catholic Church and Emperor Constantine cannot be blamed to falsely causing Christians to worship on the first day of the week or used Greek terms such as Christ because these practices were typical in the Christian church hundreds of years before they existed. It is universally accepted that the RC church began in 1090 when Pope Gregory I became the single authority in the church, and began to require worship in Latin. Before this, there was no single authority, decisions were made in councils of church leaders, and most of them spoke and worshiped in Greek or other languages besides Latin. Yet, Roman historian Pliny wrote of how followers of the Messiah worshiped at dawn on the first day of the week in around 100 AD. This was 900 years before the start of the Catholic church... so how could the Catholic Church have forced this on Messiah's followers, since the RC did not exist until 900 years later?

19. Use of Greek language and concepts is a fulfillment, not a corruption, of the Messianic promise. Shortly after the Messiah commanded his followers to make disciples of all nations, the Lord himself miraculously set the pattern of how this should be done. On the Feast of Weeks (Pentecost), the disciples spoke of the Messiah to people who lived around the whole Mediterranean and middle eastern world. They were amazed that "each of us hears them in his own native language... we hear them declaring the wonders of God in our own tongues" (Acts 2:8, 11). Since they were visiting the Jerusalem temple to worship, they presumably knew at least some Hebrew. Nonetheless, the Lord miraculously caused them to hear the Gospel in their own languages, not in Hebrew.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Greek was used by the church because it was used around the world, in much the same way that English is used around the world today. The apostles wrote the Gospels and epistles in Greek because they knew people around the world could read them without needing it translated first. This tradition of putting God's Word into the languages of the people continues today, as parts of the New Testament have been translated into around 2,100 languages. God's desire was to bring the Gospel of forgiveness in the Messiah to all cultures, not to transform all culture into Hebrew culture.

WHY SO MANY MYTHS ABOUT "HEBREW ROOTS?"

Many of the false assertions found in Hebrew roots literature would not be promoted or believed if people had even the barest knowledge of Greek, ancient history, Hebrew use of the Septuagint, and modern languages. The problem is that people who are not knowledgeable about these things hear myths about "Christ" and other topics, get excited about these "new" and "little known" tidbits, and repeat them as fact without checking them out. Even worse, some continue to try to defend the myths after learning the facts we note above.

Many of them readily latch on to whatever radical theory they see, while making no serious effort to verify that "traditional" Christian teachings are, in fact, factual and true. Some people don't even make an effort to find the reason for the "traditional" view, because they don't want to find it. When I attended a Rood Awakening seminar, I was amazed at the attitude of most of the participants. When very radical and fantastic claims were made, most were thrilled about the new ideas, when they should have stepped back and judged them very carefully. (Just as with consumer advertising, the more fantastic the claim is, the less likely it is to be true.)

Many Hebrew roots followers also make the mistake of assuming that whatever they know about 21 st century English must apply to Greek of 2,000 years ago. Specularion about hidden, occultic meanings behind IHS, about "Christ" being a title of Greek gods, and about the "s" at the end of the name "Jesus" fall into this category. They think that because English does not decline nouns, then Greek must not either (in fact, they know so little about language, this does not even occur to them).

There is so much speculation floating around on the Internet, people accepting as gospel truth whatever "makes sense" to them, without having or even seeking basic facts of Greek and the ancient world. What makes this worse is the misguided attitude some people have that everyone who went to seminary or Bible college to learn about Greek, the Biblical world, the LXX and theology is by nature ignorant and false. They end up "learning" from people who speculate on the Internet based on what they've "heard" and what feeds their biases instead of on reputable works of scholarship. These aren't arguments about interpretation, they are plain, basic facts of Greek, the LXX, and the ancient world.
Unfounded speculation gets even worse with conspiracy theories. People speculate that the Vatican is doing everything from hiding a 1st century Hebrew manuscript of the Gospels to promoting paganism by using the initials IHS. Where is the evidence? There is none. One might as well say that the Vatican is hiding the original Gospel of John written in he first century because it has a line in it saying that Hillary Clinton or Saddam Hussein is the Messiah. But if they feel it must be true that the Vatican is hiding it, they believe it. Even worse, to some people the fact that no one has ever seen such a thing is proof that it must exist. (By the way, I'm not Roman Catholic or Masonic.)

In the end, it is not an important issue whether people pronounce his name Y'shua Messiah or Jesus Christ, because He answers to either whether spoken in faith. As Scripture says, "without faith it is impossible to please God," not "without learning how to pronounce names in Hebrew and obeying the Mosaic Law it is impossible to please God."

Dr. John Juedes, Messiah Lutheran Church, Highland CA, 2006

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

For information about Christian symbols, customs, terminology, naming conventions, etc., see my other separate references resource*:

The Complete Sayings of Jesus – NKJV with Appendix

(Note: NKJV is primary text to make reading easier, except when it varies significantly from the original KJV or a different translation text is clearer and/or deemed more accurate.)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Continuity and Discontinuity

Continuity and Discontinuity (2013)

Part 1: http://mydigitalseminary.com/continuity-and-discontinuity-introduction/ (Introduction)

Part 2: http://mydigitalseminary.com/continuity-and-discontinuity-systems/ (Systems)

Part 3: http://mydigitalseminary.com/continuity-and-discontinuity-hermeneutics/ (Hermeneutics)

Excerpt (from Introduction):

Continuity/Discontinuity may seem like an abstract topic, but the issue actually is central to discussion on how we put together the Bible and largely reflects where one lands theologically regarding Covenant Theology (CT) or Dispensational Theology (DT).

However, instead of focusing just on CT and DT, Feinberg has instead chosen to broaden the discussion and notes that, "the more one moves in the continuity direction, the more covenantal he becomes' and the more he moves in the discontinuity direction, the more dispensational he becomes" (xii). Taking this approach allows the issue to be as complex as it really is. There are not simply two monolithic positions with no variation within; in fact, not all those taking the discontinuity position in this book even fit in the Dispensationalist camp (e.g. Moo and Kaiser). Rather, there is a spectrum, with CT and DT on either ends. Seeing the issue this way allows each contributor to speak on their own terms. This broader focus accompanied by such a variety of scholarship results in a very unique book.

The Hermeneutics of Continuity and Discontinuity

https://expositorythoughts.wordpress.com/2011/05/31/the-hermeneutics-of-continuity-and-discontinuity/

Narrative and Ontology – On handling continuity and discontinuity between the Old and New Testament (2008)

http://narrativeandontology.blogspot.com/2008/08/on-handling-continuity-and.html

The Oath Against Modernism vs. the "Hermeneutic of Continuity" (Catholic) (2011)

http://www.cfnews.org/page10/page26/hermeneutic_of_continuity.html

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Sidenote:

In case you run across this, here is another look at the use of the phrase, “Continuity and Discontinuity”, with regard to heaven and life after death.

Randy Alcorn (author of the book, Heaven) video (with PowerPoint presentation slides in pdf) of Breakout Session he gave at The Gospel Coalition conference in 2015 [this is a good introductory overview/refresher for anyone interested in what Randy's perspectives are about heaven and our life/body before and after we die. His topic is in terms of "Continuity and Discontinuity" which will make sense when you listen to the video.]...

Here is his corresponding web page with youtube video of his Breakout Session presentation along with the PowerPoint links; plus more resources including videos and downloadable appendices from the book, related topics and more:

http://www.epm.org/resources/2015/Apr/14/alcorntgc/ [Recommended]

NOTE: For details about the above resource and other issues related to Heaven and life after death, as well as covering related topics and including different perspectives (including N.T. Wright) - see my separate “Reference Notes on Heaven” (based in part on the book, Heaven, by Randy Alcorn)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Reformed Theology vs Lutheranism vs Calvinism vs Wesleyanism vs Arminianism

What is Reformed Theology

http://dawningrealm.org/reign/

Excerpt:

Lutheran versus Reformed soteriology

For the purpose of this comparison, "Lutheran" designates the position confessed in the Book of Concord, and the wide range of views held by conservative churches descended from the Reformed tradition is represented by the Arminian and Calvinistic ends of the spectrum. Like Martin Luther, confessional Lutherans agree with some, but not all, of what have become known as "the five points of Calvinism" (TULIP).

	Yes	No	Cited as support
Do sinners cooperate with God to bring about their state of salvation? More precisely, is regeneration synergistic as opposed to monergistic?	Arminian	Lutheran Calvinistic	John 3:3-9 John 6:44-46 John 3:16-18
Is election conditional on the will of sinners?	Arminian	Lutheran Calvinistic	John 1:12-13 Romans 9:10-13 Revelation 22:17
Does God desire the salvation of all sinners enough to die for them?	Lutheran Arminian	Calvinistic	1 Timothy 2:1-6 John 10:3-11 2 Peter 2:1
Can a true believer temporarily lose faith and salvation?	Lutheran Arminian	Calvinistic	1 Corinthians 10:1-14 Romans 8:29-30 1 Corinthians 15:1-2
Do the teachings of the Bible on the above topics have apparent contradictions?	Lutheran	Calvinistic Arminian	Romans 11:28-36 Logical consistency Logical consistency

Another Reformed/Lutheran comparison chart (Lutheran affirmation of unconditional promises) | Calvinistic denial of unconditional promises

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Lutherans and the Reformed differ not only on soteriology, but also on sacramentology.

A Reformed critique of Lutheran theology

A Lutheran critique of Reformed theology

What is the gospel?	Arminianism	Calvinism	Lutheranism
The good news says Christ died for the sins of all people 1 Timothy 2:1-6; 1 John 2:2	✓		✓
The good news says all for whom Christ died have already been reconciled to God 2 Corinthians 5:18-19		✓	✓
The good news promises all who hear it, "Your sins are forgiven!" Mark 2:5,9; Luke 5:20; 7:48; John 20:21-23*			✓

From: http://dawningrealm.org/papers/absolve.pdf [PDF]

What is Reformed Theology?
https://www.gotquestions.org/reformed-theology.html

The Comparison Between Martin Luther and John Calvin
https://www.ukessays.com/essays/religion/the-comparison-between-martin-luther-and-john-calvin-religion-essay.php

Defining My Terms: Calvinist And Reformed
https://www.challies.com/articles/defining-my-terms-calvinist-and-reformed/

Reformed vs Calvinism (Forum)
https://www.christianforums.com/threads/reformed-vs-calvinism.873371/

Excerpt:

Of course, everyone who answers this will have a slightly different view, but I'll give it a shot, believing that I'm more or less qualified to do so. Here it is; most people think of the terms "Calvinist" and "Reformed" as virtual synonyms and use them interchangeably. Others, including myself, get a bit more technical. For instance, Calvinist is more broad and can apply to just about any group or individual (Presbyterian, Baptist, Charismatic, Dispensationalist etc.) that believes in sovereign grace, or the "5 points" of Calvinism as commonly understood. Reformed is narrower, and indicates a belief system much more in line with historic Scottish Presbyterianism and/or Puritans e.g. infant baptism, worship-particularly an adherence to the Regulative Principle, and amillennial or postmillenial eschatology among other things. But, like I said, a lot of people don't make these distinctions, and most 5-point Calvinists will insist they are Reformed, because to them it means the same thing. Hence "Reformed" Baptists and the like. Hope that helps a little anyway.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Main Difference Between Calvinist and Non-Calvinist Views of Saving Grace
https://www.monergism.com/thethreshold/articles/onsite/sufficient.html (Discussion)

A Calvinist Looks at Orthodoxy
http://www.opc.org/new_horizons/calvinist_on_orthodoxy.html

Two Major Streams of Reformed Theology (i.e., Dutch and Scottish traditions) https://www.thegospelcoalition.org/article/two-major-streams-of-reformed-theology

When Reformed Theology Isn't Calvinism
Part 1: http://aprilfiet.com/theology-culture/reformed-theology-isnt-calvinism-part-1

I'm Not That Kind of Reformed
https://thatreformedblog.com/2014/05/21/im-not-that-kind-of-reformed/

Part 2: http://aprilfiet.com/theology-culture/reformed-theology-isnt-calvinism-part-2

Reformed Theology Is Covenant Theology
http://www.ligonier.org/learn/articles/reformed-theology-covenant-theology/

Reformed Theology vs. Hyper-Calvinism https://wscal.edu/resource-center/reformed-theology-vs.-hyper-calvinism

http://www.ligonier.org/learn/articles/reformed-theology-vs-hyper-calvinism/

The New Perspective and "Works of the Law" (Gal. 2:16 and Rom. 3:20)
https://www.tms.edu/m/tmsj16j.pdf [PDF]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Reformation Is Not a Return to Pre-Reformation Positions

http://www.trinityfoundation.org/journal.php?id=334 (Downloadable as a PDF)

First of all, in this session, I want to call our attention to the fact that, contrary to what is being presented and promoted in our time, the Protestant Reformation is not, and cannot involve, a return to the pre-Reformation position of the church. But that is what is happening today. Even what would be viewed as some of the most conservative and theologically orthodox sectors of the church today are returning to the tragic condition of the church before the Reformation began. And so that will be the focus, God willing, of this session.

In our next session, I would like to focus our attention upon another phenomenon of our time that is most certainly a product of the ongoing Roman Catholic Counter-Reformation, and that is the evil falsehood of co-belligerence among all religions in an effort to combat the political and social evils of our time.

The Battle over the Identity of the True Catholic Church at the Time of the Reformation (Church History)

http://www.trinityfoundation.org/journal.php?id=327 (Downloadable as a PDF)

A Protestant View of Church History: The Early Church

http://www.trinityfoundation.org/journal.php?id=313 (Downloadable as a PDF)

Calvinism vs Lutheranism

https://theydiffer.com/difference-between-calvinism-and-lutheranism/

Calvinism	Lutheranism
Salvation is granted to only chosen ones	Anybody can get Salvation if he has Faith
The only religious authority is the Bible	There are “representatives” that have the authority
The blood and the body of Jesus Christ have only spiritual presence in bread and wine	The blood and the body of Jesus Christ have physical presence in bread and wine
Sovereignty of God is important	Sovereignty of God is not of utmost importance
A concept of Predestination	Predestination is not important

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Topic	Calvinism	Lutheranism	Arminianism
Human will	Total Depravity without free will permanently due to divine sovereignty	Total Depravity without free will until spiritual regeneration	Depravity does not prevent free will
Election	Unconditional election to salvation with those outside the elect foreordained to damnation (double-predestination)[39]	Unconditional predestination to salvation for the elect	Conditional election in view of foreseen faith or unbelief
Justification	Justification is limited to those predestined to salvation, completed at Christ's death	Justification of all people, completed at Christ's death.	Justification made possible for all through Christ's death, but only completed upon choosing faith in Jesus
Conversion	Monergistic, through the inner calling of the Holy Spirit, irresistible	Monergistic, through the means of grace, resistible	Synergistic, resistible due to the common grace of free will
Preservation and apostasy	Perseverance of the saints: the eternally elect in Christ will necessarily persevere in faith	Falling away is possible, but God gives assurance of preservation.	Preservation is conditional upon continued faith in Christ; with the possibility of a final apostasy.

http://www.thepinkflamingoblog.com/wordpress/wp-content/uploads/2012/08/Picture-111.png http://www.thepinkflamingoblog.com/2012/08/05/a-pink-flamingo-correction/

Classical and Reformed Arminianism vs Wesleyan Arminianism

http://imarc.cc/edit/harted_38.html

Calvinism vs Arminianism vs Evangelicalism

http://storage.cloversites.com/makinglifecountministriesinc/documents/Calvinism%20vs%20Arminianism%20vs%20Evangelicalism.pdf [PDF]

Many Evangelical Christians don't totally agree with either side but believe in a mixture of the two—agreeing with some points of Calvinism and some of Arminianism. (See the "Evangelical" chart beneath the Calvinism vs. Arminianism chart on next page)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The 5 Points of Calvinism	The 5 Points of Arminianism
Total Depravity Man is totally depraved, spiritually dead and blind, and unable to repent. God must initiate the work of repentance.	Free Will Man is a sinner who has the free will to either cooperate with God's Spirit and be regenerated, or resist God's grace and perish.
Unconditional Election God's election is based upon His sovereignty. His election is His own decision, and is not based on the foreseen response of anyone's faith and repentance.	Conditional Election God's election is based upon His foreknowledge. He chooses everyone whom He knew would, of their own free will, respond to the gospel and choose Christ.
Limited Atonement When Christ died on the cross, He shed His blood only for those who have been elected and no one else.	Unlimited Atonement When Christ died on the cross, He shed His blood for everyone. He paid a provisional price for all but guaranteed it for none.
Irresistible Grace Grace is extended only to the elect. The internal call by God's grace cannot be resisted and always results in conversion. Grace is not extended to the non-elect.	Resistible Grace Saving grace can be resisted because God won't overrule man's free will. Man is born again when he believes and receives God's grace.
Perseverance of the Saints God preserves the elect so they persevere to the end, so no chosen person will ever be lost.	Falling from Grace Those who are truly saved can lose their salvation by falling away from the faith. (Not all Arminians agree on this point. Some believe that believers are eternally secure in Christ and cannot be lost)

5 Points of Evangelicalism

Many Christians agree with parts of Calvinism and parts of Arminianism. The parts of agreement are highlighted in yellow.

The 5 Points of Calvinism	The 5 Points of Arminianism
Total Depravity Man is totally depraved, spiritually dead and blind, and unable to repent. God must initiate the work of repentance. Rom 3:10-11 "There is none righteous, not even one. There is none who understands, there is none who seeks for God." (It is true that man is totally unrighteous, but that doesn't mean he is unable to repent or call out to be saved.)	Free Will Man is a sinner who has the free will to either cooperate with God's Spirit and be regenerated, or resist God's grace and perish. 2 Pet. 3:9 "The Lord is . . . not wishing for any to perish, but for all to come to repentance." Rom. 10:13 "Whoever will call upon the name of the Lord will be saved." (God wants everyone to be saved, but will only save those who call out to Him of their own free will)
	Conditional Election God's election is based upon His foreknowledge. He chooses everyone whom He knew would, of their own free will, respond to the gospel and choose Christ. 1 Peter 1:1-2 ". . . who are chosen according to the foreknowledge of God the Father . . ." (God knows ahead who will call out to be saved, so he chooses them based on that foreknowledge)
	Unlimited Atonement When Christ died on the cross, He shed His blood for everyone. He paid a provisional price for all but guaranteed it for none. 1 John 2:2 "He Himself is the propitiation for our sins; and not for ours only, but also for the whole world." (Jesus died for everyone, but only those who believe in Him will receive His salvation)
	Resistible Grace Saving grace can be resisted because God won't overrule man's free will. Man is born again when he believes and receives God's grace. John 3:18 "He who believes in Him is not judged; he who does not believe has been judged already . . ." Matt. 22:14 "For many are called, but few are chosen." (Although God offers His grace to everyone, many people will refuse it)
Perseverance of the Saints God preserves the elect so they persevere to the end, so no chosen person will ever be lost. John 10:28 "And I give eternal life to them, and they shall never perish, and no one shall snatch them out of My hand." ("Eternal" and "never perish" means than no genuine child of God can lose or give up his salvation.)

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Christian Theology: 5 Ways Lutheranism Differs from Calvinism

http://www.newsmax.com/FastFeatures/christian-theology-lutheran-vs/2015/12/17/id/706109/

There are a variety of Christian denominations in the world today. They came into existence due in part to a conflict of issues that were perceived with biblical interpretations and practices. When taking Lutheranism and Calvinism beliefs into consideration, there are some glaring differences in the two sects of the Protestant Reformation.

Here are five ways that Lutheranism differs from Calvinism.

1. Different branches of Christianity started not because there was a deciding council that divided the religion up, but mostly because there were individuals who disagreed with some teachings.

Monk and theologian Martin Luther started Lutheranism as a protest against practices of the Catholic church, while the founder of the reformed theology movement known as Calvinism was John Calvin, a French theologian and son of an attorney.

2. Lutheranism has one of the largest followings of any Christian Protestant church denomination. According to the Lutheran World Federation, the Lutheran identity is tied to being "evangelical, sacramental, diaconal, confessional, and ecumenical."

The identity of a Calvinist is based on Christian ecclesiology, baptism of infants, and the five points of Calvinism of the TULIP doctrine, among other things.

The Calvinist Corner defines TULIP as (Total Depravity, Unconditional Election, Limited Atonement, Irresistible Grace, Perseverance of the Saints).

3. In observing the Holy Eucharist, the sacrament that began at the Last Supper, Lutherans have faith in the belief that the blood and body of Jesus Christ are physically present in the wine and bread during Holy Communion, whereas Calvinists maintain that Christ exists within the elements in spiritual form while he physically remains with the Heavenly Father.

4. Lutherans teach that salvation is possible for anyone through faith whereas Calvinists place high importance on the belief that only the people who are predestined by God can achieve salvation.

5. Lutheranism teaches that people have the ability to control certain facets of their lives while Calvinism believe that God has complete sovereignty over humanity and there is nothing that people can do nothing to change what happens.

Lutheran and Wesley Hermeneutics: A Comparison and Contrast http://globalchristiancenter.com/bible-and-theology/biblical-theology/24179-love-robert-a

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

What Is Wesleyanism?

(Wesley Center Online, Northwest Nazarene University, Church of the Nazarene) http://wesley.nnu.edu/what-is-wesleyanism/

Excerpt:

Wesleyanism or Wesleyan theology is the system of Christian theology of Methodism taught by John Wesley. At its heart, the theology of John Wesley stressed the life of Christian holiness: to love God with all one's heart, mind, soul and strength and to love one's neighbor as oneself. Wesley's teaching also stressed experiential religion and moral responsibility.

Wesleyanism, manifest today in Methodist and holiness churches, is named for its founders, John Wesley and, his brother, Charles Wesley. In 1736, these men traveled to the Georgia colony in America as missionaries for the Church of England; they left rather disheartened at what they saw. Both men then had "religious experiences", especially John in 1738, being greatly influenced by the pietist movement. They began to organize a movement within the Church of England to focus on personal faith and holiness, and they succeeded. John Wesley took the reformation churches to task over the nature of sanctification, the process by which a believer is made to conform to the image of Christ, and in many ways restored the New Testament teachings regarding the work of God and the believer in sanctification. The movement did well within the Church of England in Britain, but when the movement crossed the ocean into America, it took on a form of its own, finally being established as the Methodist Episcopal Church in 1784. The Wesleyan churches are very similar to Anglicanism, yet have added a strong emphasis on personal faith and personal experience.

Wesleyanism (Messiah College)

https://www.messiah.edu/info/20265/the_three_traditions_that_shape_our_mission_and_why/328/wesleyanism

Excerpt:

Wesleyanism is a Christian theological tradition calling believers to holiness in personal and social life.

The Wesleyan theological tradition traces its roots to the work of John Wesley, the founder of Methodism. Wesley, who was born in England in 1703, trained to become an Anglican minister. In the course of that training, he and a few of his close associates (including his brother Charles) formed a small group that met for Bible study, prayer, and careful spiritual examination. Due to their methodical approach to developing holy lives, the "Holy Club" participants gained the label "Methodists," a label that eventually stuck to the fast-growing ecclesiastical movement that Wesley founded and led.

After a missionary journey to America (1735–1737) and a powerful conversion experience (1738), Wesley became convinced that his work and that of his fellow Methodists must be empowered by the Holy Spirit. While he did not renounce the disciplined activities of the Holy Club, he realized that their effectiveness was ultimately dependent upon the power of God's Spirit. Much of Wesley's writing revolved around his conviction that the Holy Spirit could accomplish great things in the lives of believers.

In many ways, Wesley's theology was similar to other Protestant reformers, reflecting a strong emphasis on justification by faith. But while Wesley's writings on "justification" mirrored that of other Protestants, he developed a distinct understanding of "sanctification." According to Wesley, salvation is completed by a return to original righteousness, a return made possible by the power of the Holy Spirit. In other words, sanctification is more than the gradual spiritual growth that follows justification by faith. It is the deliverance from sin. In the Wesleyan tradition, this work of the Holy Spirit in this regard is often called "entire sanctification."

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

For many persons in the Wesleyan tradition (also called "the Holiness tradition"), the event of one's entire sanctification can be traced to a particular moment when an individual experiences a "second, definite work of grace." Others have not been so willing to identify sanctification with a certain place and time. Still, the emphasis on Spirit-empowered holy living is a hallmark of the Wesleyan/Holiness tradition. According to Wesleyan/Holiness writers, the "holy life" is characterized most fully by a pure love for God and neighbor, by following all of God's commands, and by doing everything for the glory of God.

Not surprisingly, the Wesleyan/Holiness tradition has been at the forefront of many social reform movements, endeavoring to bring healing to societies racked by social sin. Moreover, due to its strong emphasis on the work of the Holy Spirit—a work that clearly transcends gender—churches in the Wesleyan/Holiness tradition have often been more willing to ordain women to the ministry than have other Christian churches.

Many North American denominations find their roots in the Wesleyan tradition, including the Wesleyan Church, the Church of God (Anderson, Indiana), and the Church of the Nazarene. The Brethren in Christ Church, Messiah College's founding denomination, first encountered the Holiness movement in the late 19th century, and before long adopted John Wesley's formulation of entire sanctification. While the Brethren in Christ Church no longer refers to "entire sanctification" in its official documents, it continues to place a strong emphasis on holy living and, like many other churches in the Wesleyan/Holiness tradition, it ordains women to pastoral ministry.

Wesleyan Theological Society
http://www.wtsweb.org/?view=mobile

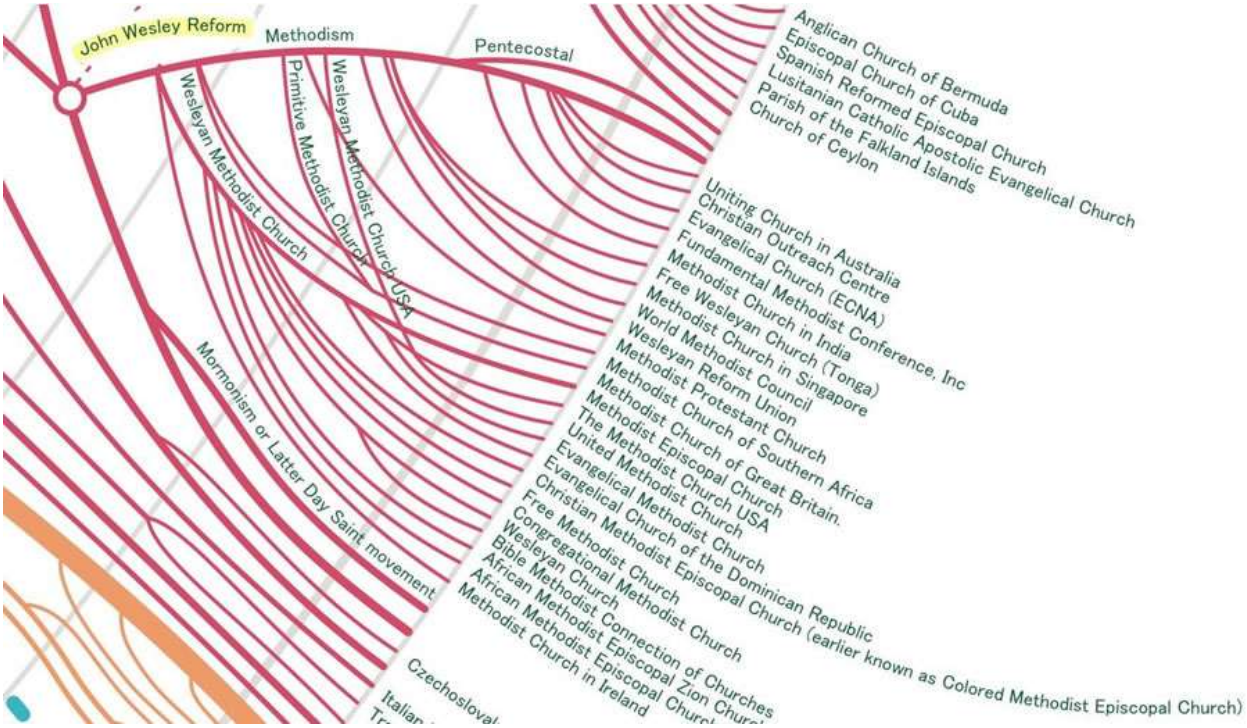
Wesleyan Church vs Methodist Church http://classroom.synonym.com/wesleyan-church-vs-methodist-church-7572.html

Wesleyan Theology
http://www.craigladams.com/page5/index.html (links to resource)



Wesleyan and Keswick Models of Sanctification https://bible.org/article/wesleyan-amp-keswick-models-sanctification

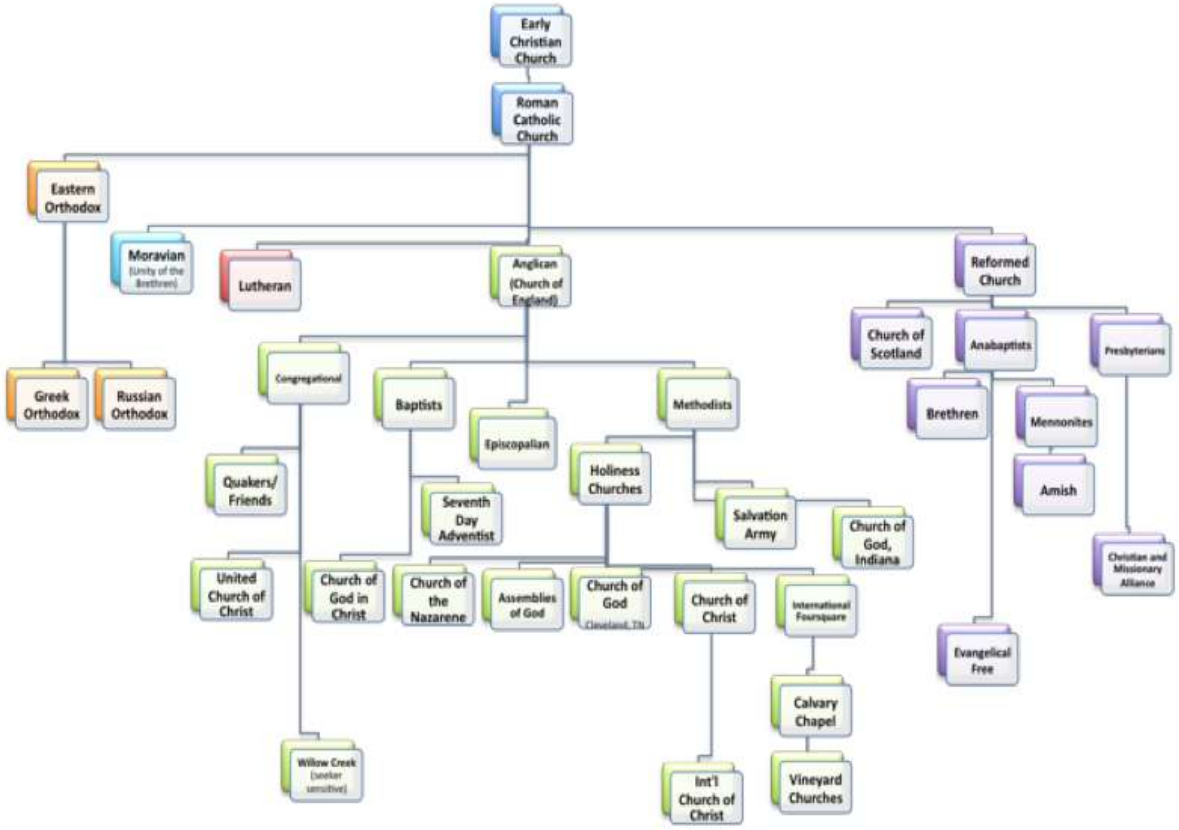
Why a Wesleyan Approach to Theology: Seven Minute Seminary (2013)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=6sG08YuAZEU [Video] Ben Witherington III

John Wesley – The Calvinist
http://www.drurywriting.com/keith/wesley.the.calvinist.htm

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Hacking Christianity :: Rev. Jeremy Smith | The Wesleyan Church Branches of the World Religions Tree
http://methoblog.com/2014/01/the-wesleyan-church-branches-of-the-world-religions-tree/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



This above (previous page) image is a section of the larger World Religion Tree

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Family Tree of Christian Denominations

https://wesleygospel.com/2011/12/26/the-family-tree-of-christian-denominations/

See also: Denominations / Branches of Christianity

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Five Points of Calvinism (TULIP) (by the "Calvinist Corner")

http://www.calvinistcorner.com/tulip.htm

Excerpt:

Basically, Calvinism is known by an acronym: T.U.L.I.P.

Total Depravity (also known as Total Inability and Original Sin)
Unconditional Election
Limited Atonement (also known as Particular Atonement)
Irresistible Grace
Perseverance of the Saints (also known as Once Saved Always Saved)

These five categories do not comprise Calvinism in totality. They simply represent some of its main points.

Total Depravity:
Sin has affected all parts of man. The heart, emotions, will, mind, and body are all affected by sin. We are completely sinful. We are not as sinful as we could be, but we are completely affected by sin.

The doctrine of Total Depravity is derived from scriptures that reveal human character: Man's heart is evil (Mark 7:21-23) and sick Jer. 17:9). Man is a slave of sin (Rom. 6:20). He does not seek for God (Rom. 3:10-12). He cannot understand spiritual things (1 Cor. 2:14). He is at enmity with God (Eph. 2:15). And, is by nature a child of wrath (Eph. 2:3). The Calvinist asks the question, "In light of the scriptures that declare man's true nature as being utterly lost and incapable, how is it possible for anyone to choose or desire God?" The answer is, "He cannot. Therefore God must predestine."

Calvinism also maintains that because of our fallen nature we are born again not by our own will but God's will (John 1:12-13); God grants that we believe (Phil. 1:29); faith is the work of God (John 6:28-29); God appoints people to believe (Acts 13:48); and God predestines (Eph. 1:1-11; Rom. 8:29; 9:9-23).

Unconditional Election:
God does not base His election on anything He sees in the individual. He chooses the elect according to the kind intention of His will (Eph. 1:4-8; Rom. 9:11) without any consideration of merit within the individual. Nor does God look into the future to see who would pick Him. Also, as some are elected into salvation, others are not (Rom. 9:15, 21).

Limited Atonement:
Jesus died only for the elect. Though Jesus' sacrifice was sufficient for all, it was not efficacious for all. Jesus only bore the sins of the elect. Support for this position is drawn from such scriptures as Matt. 26:28 where Jesus died for 'many'; John 10:11, 15 which say that Jesus died for the sheep (not the goats, per Matt. 25:32-33); John 17:9 where Jesus in prayer interceded for the ones given Him, not those of the entire world; Acts 20:28 and Eph. 5:25-27 which state that the Church was purchased by Christ, not all people; and Isaiah 53:12 which is a prophecy of Jesus' crucifixion where he would bore the sins of many (not all).

Irresistible Grace:
When God calls his elect into salvation, they cannot resist. God offers to all people the gospel message. This is called the external call. But to the elect, God extends an internal call and it cannot be resisted. This call is by the Holy Spirit who works in the hearts and minds of the elect to bring them to repentance and regeneration whereby they willingly and freely come to God. Some of the verses used in support of this teaching are Romans 9:16 where it says that "it is not of him who wills nor of him who runs, but of God who has mercy"; Philippians 2:12-13 where God is said to be the one working salvation in the individual; John 6:28-29 where faith is declared to be the work of God; Acts 13:48 where God appoints people to believe; and John 1:12-13 where being born again is not by man's will, but by God's.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

"All that the Father gives Me shall come to Me, and the one who comes to Me I will certainly not cast out," (John 6:37).

Perseverance of the Saints:
You cannot lose your salvation. Because the Father has elected, the Son has redeemed, and the Holy Spirit has applied salvation, those thus saved are eternally secure. They are eternally secure in Christ. Some of the verses for this position are John 10:27-28 where Jesus said His sheep will never perish; John 6:47 where salvation is described as everlasting life; Romans 8:1 where it is said we have passed out of judgment; 1 Corinthians 10:13 where God promises to never let us be tempted beyond what we can handle; and Phil. 1:6 where God is the one being faithful to perfect us until the day of Jesus' return.

See also:

Atonement (incl. Christus Victus / Penal Substitution)

Eternal Security of the Believer – Once Saved, Always Saved

Predestination, Election and Related Terms

Wright and Others on Predestination

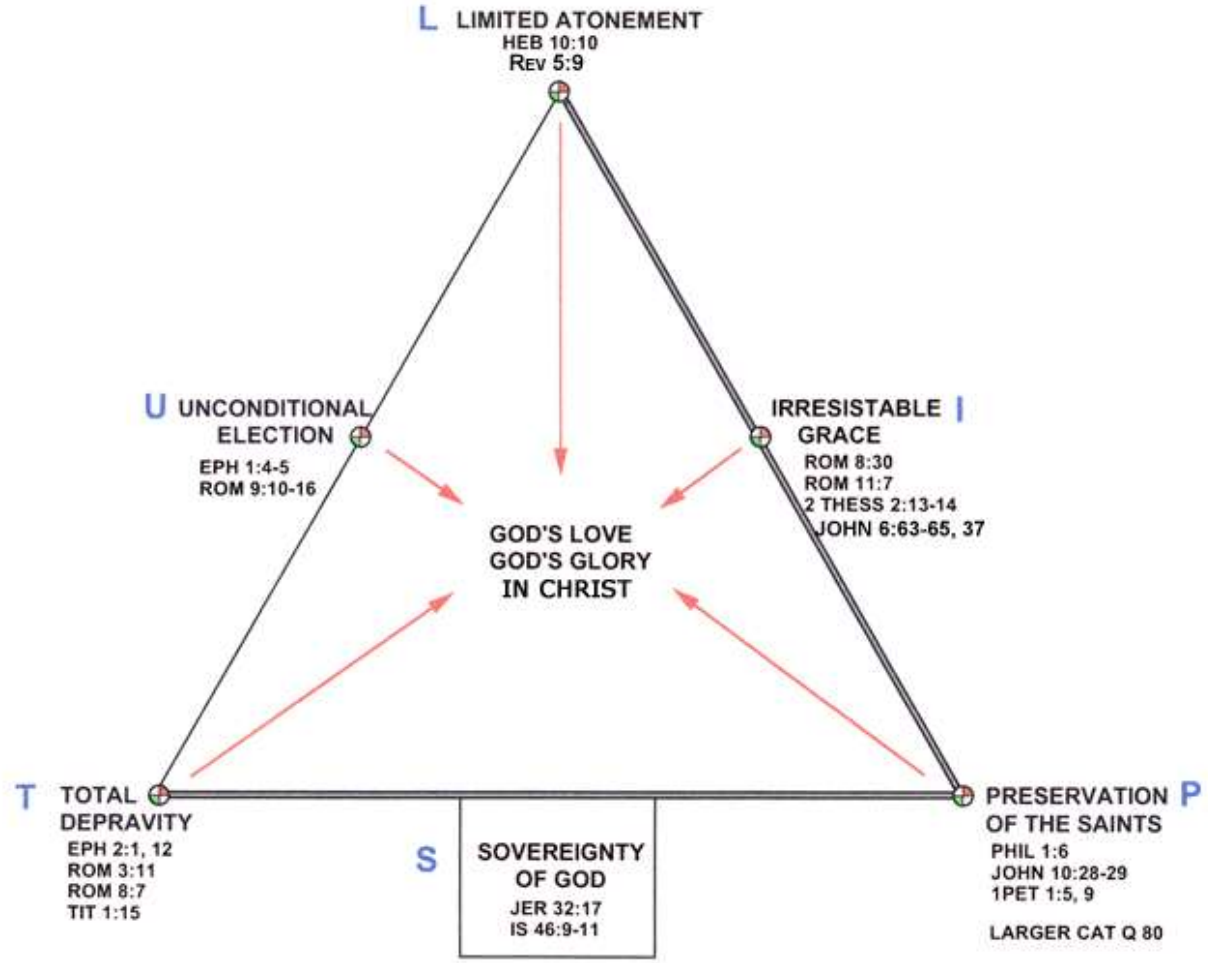
Monergism / Synergism

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

"TULIP" - Calvinism Compared to Wesleyan Perspectives

http://www.crivoice.org/tulip.html

	John Calvin* Foundation laid by Augustine	John Wesley Foundation laid by Arminius
T	Total Depravity - Human beings are so affected by the negative consequences of original sin that they are incapable of being righteous, and are always and unchangeably sinful; human freedom is totally enslaved by sin so we can only choose evil.	Deprivation - Human beings are sinful and without God, incapable (deprived) on their own of being righteous; however, they are not irredeemably sinful and can be transformed by God's grace; God's prevenient grace restores to humanity the freedom of will.
U	Unconditional Election - Since human beings can only choose evil, God by His eternal decree has chosen or elected some to be counted as righteous, without any conditions being placed on that election.	Conditional Election - God has chosen that all humanity be righteous by His grace, yet has called us to respond to that grace by exercising our God-restored human freedom as a condition of fulfilling election.
L	Limited Atonement - The effects of the Atonement, by which God forgave sinful humanity, are limited only to those whom He has chosen.	Unlimited Atonement - The effects of the Atonement are freely available to all those whom He has chosen, which includes all humanity, "whosoever will."
I	Irresistible Grace - The grace that God extends to human beings to effect their election cannot be refused, since it has been decreed by God.	Resistible Grace - God's grace is free and offered without merit; however, human beings have been granted freedom by God and can refuse His grace.
P	Perseverance of the Saints - Since God has decreed the elect, and they cannot resist grace, they are unconditionally and eternally secure in that election.	Assurance and Security - There is security in God's grace that allows assurance of salvation, but that security is in relation to continued faithfulness; we can still defiantly reject God.



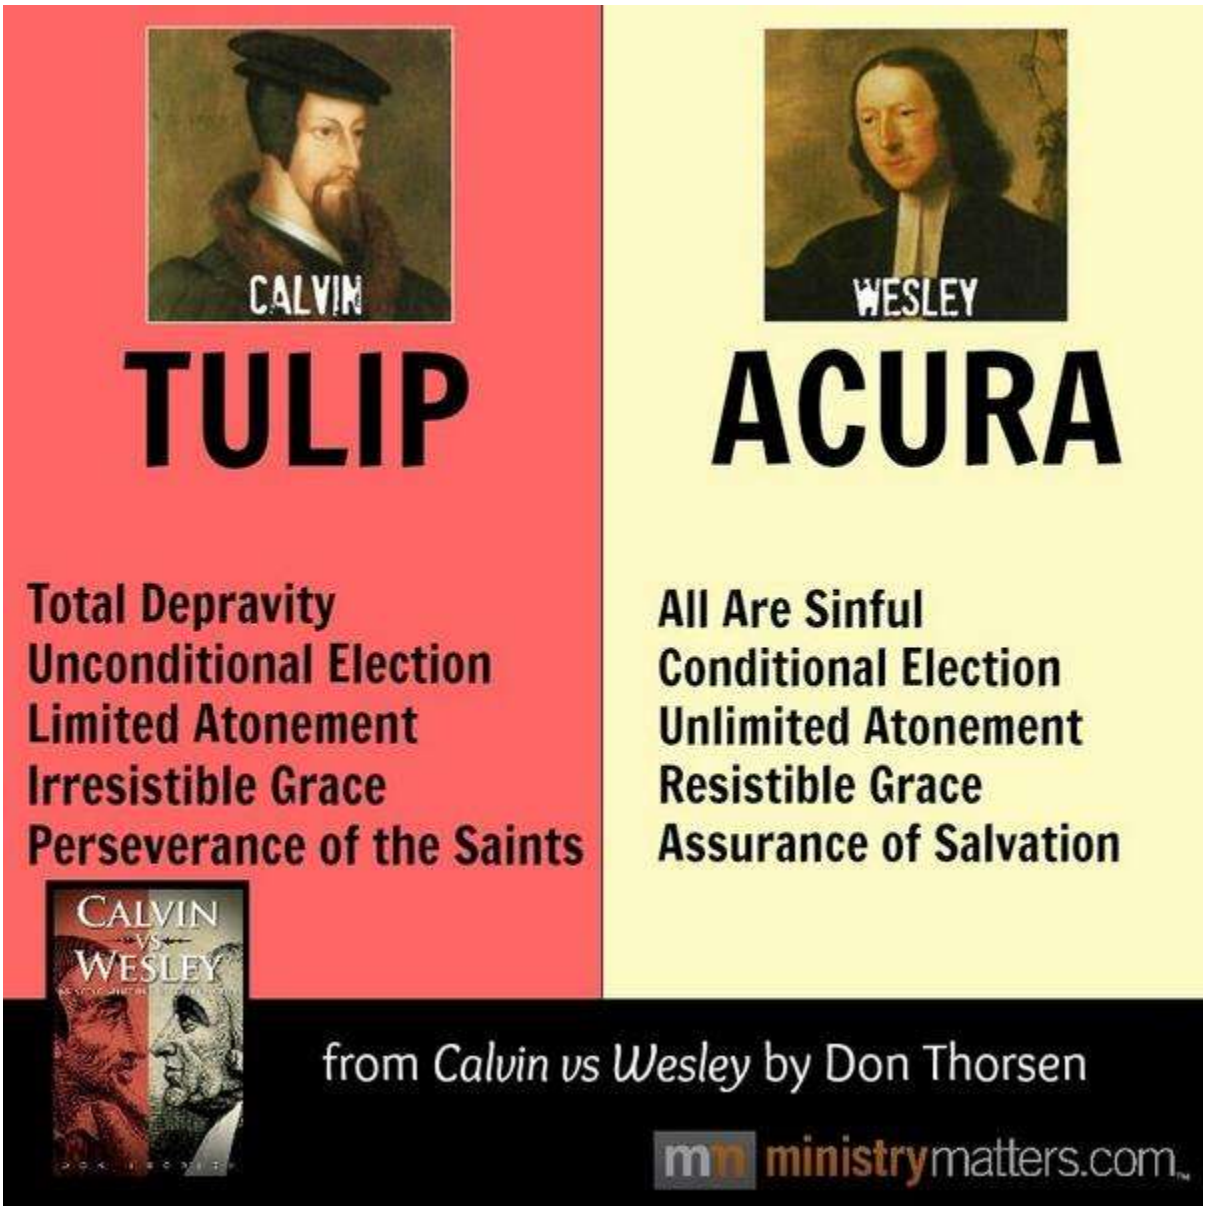
*These five points as the heart of Calvinism (Reformed Tradition) actually developed from the Synod of Dordtrecht in 1618-19 in response to the Remonstrants' (followers of James Arminius) five points that challenged Reformed orthodoxy, especially the double predestination of Theodore Beza, a follower of John Calvin. Calvin's theological system was broader ranging than these five points. However, these five points came to encapsulate the Calvinist/Reformed position against Arminius and later John Wesley. (See The Canons of Dordt).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Another perspective on TULIP:

The Christ-Centered Nature of the Doctrines of Grace

http://www.reformationtheology.com/2008/04/the_christcentered_nature_of_t.php#comments



A CHIASMIC VIEW OF CALVINISM

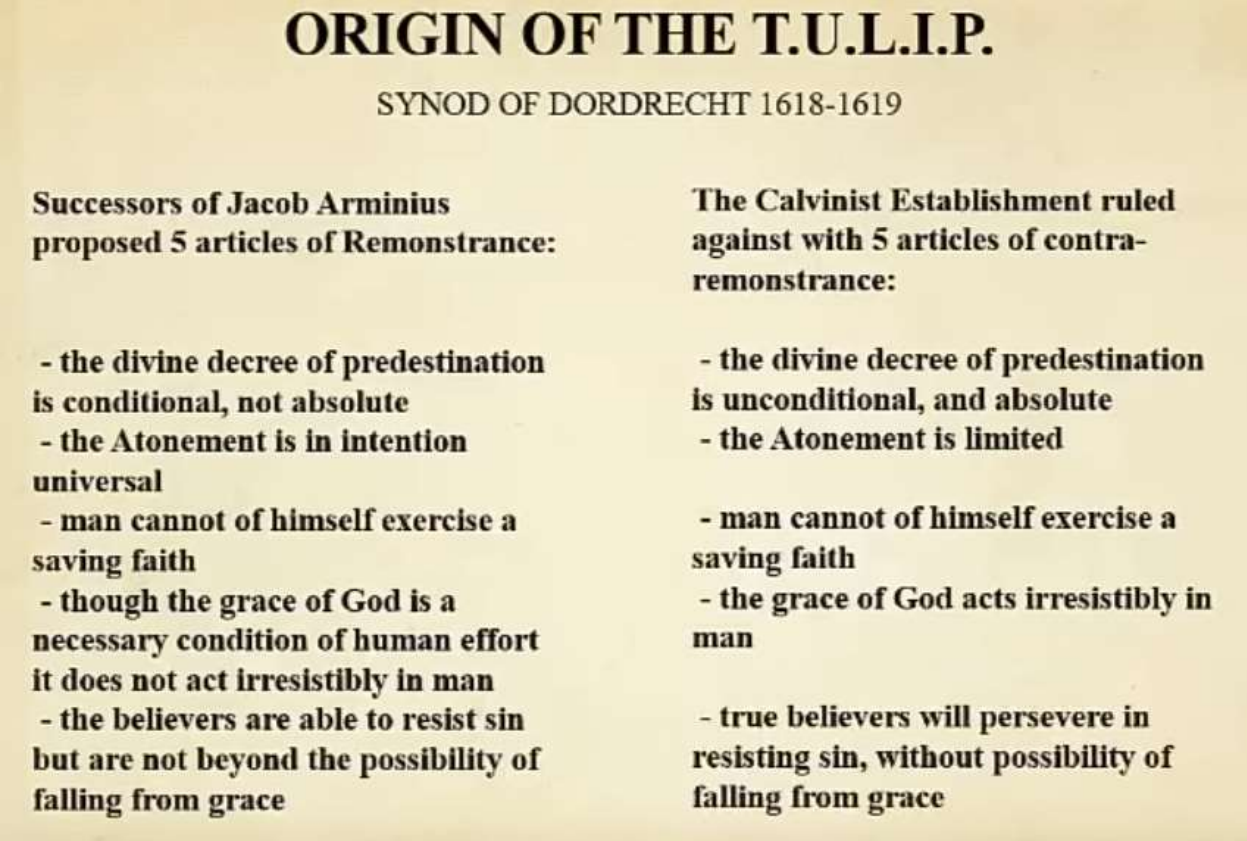
Errata: Note that "~~PRESERVATION~~" should be: "PERSEVERANCE"

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

TULIP (Calvin) and ACURA (Wesley)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

http://imgarcade.com/



Arminianism		Calvinism
Semi-Pelagian		Augustinian
Synergistic Salvation is accomplished as man and God cooperate. Divine Grace and the human will work together for salvation to happen.		Monergistic Salvation is wholly the work of the Holy Spirit in regeneration. Mankind possesses no inclination toward the Gospel in his natural state and needs Divine Grace to be enabled to believe.
Free Will or Human Ability Although human nature was seriously affected by the fall, man has not been left in a state of total spiritual helplessness. God graciously enables every sinner to repent and believe, but He does not interfere with man's freedom. Each sinner possesses a free will, and his eternal destiny depends on how he uses it. Man's freedom consists of his ability to choose good over evil in spiritual matters; his will is not enslaved to his sinful nature.	T Total Depravity	Total Inability or Total Depravity Because of the fall, man is unable of himself to savingly believe the gospel. The sinner is dead, blind, and deaf to the things of God; his heart is deceitful and desperately corrupt. His will is not free, it is in bondage to his evil nature, therefore, he will not--indeed he cannot--choose good over evil in the spiritual realm.
Conditional Election God's choice of certain individuals unto salvation before the foundation of the world was based upon His foreseeing that they would respond to His call. He selected only those whom He knew would of themselves freely believe the gospel. Election therefore was determined by or conditioned upon what man would do. The faith which God foresaw and upon which He based His choice was not given to the sinner by God (it was not created by the regenerating power of the Holy Spirit) but resulted solely from man's will.	U Unconditional Election	Unconditional Election God's choice of certain individuals unto salvation before the foundation of the world rested solely in His own sovereign will. His choice of particular sinners was not based on any foreseen response or obedience on their part, such as faith, repentance, etc. On the contrary, God gives faith and repentance to each individual whom He selected. These acts are the result, not the cause of God's choice. Election therefore was not determined by or conditioned upon any virtuous quality or act foreseen in man.
Universal Redemption or General Atonement Christ's redeeming work made it possible for everyone to be saved but did not actually secure the salvation of anyone. Although Christ died for all men and for every man, only those who believe on Him are saved. His death enabled God to pardon sinners on the condition that they believe, but it did not actually put away anyone's sins.	L Limited Atonement	Limited Atonement or Particular Redemption Christ's redeeming work was intended to save the elect only and actually secured salvation for them. His death was a substitutionary endurance of the penalty of sin in the place of certain specified sinners.
The Holy Spirit Can be Effectually Resisted The Spirit calls inwardly all those who are called outwardly by the gospel invitation; He does all that He can to bring every sinner to salvation. But inasmuch as man is free, he can successfully resist the Spirit's call. The Spirit cannot regenerate the sinner until he believes; faith (which is man's contribution) precedes and makes possible the new birth. Thus, man's free will limits the Spirit in the application of Christ's saving work.	I Irresistible Grace	Irresistible Grace or Effectual Calling In addition to the outward general call to salvation which is made to everyone who hears the gospel, the Holy Spirit extends to the elect a special inward call that inevitably brings them to salvation. The external call (which is made to all without distinction) can be, and often is, rejected; whereas the internal call (which is made only to the elect) cannot be rejected; it always results in conversion. By means of this special call the Spirit irresistibly draws sinners to Christ.
Falling from Grace Those who believe and are truly saved can lose their salvation by failing to keep up their faith, etc. All Arminians have not been agreed on this point; some have held that believers are eternally secure in Christ--that once a sinner is regenerated, he can never be lost.	P Perseverance of the Saints	Perseverance of the Saints All who are chosen by God, redeemed by Christ, and given faith by the Spirit are eternally saved. They are kept in faith by the power of Almighty God and thus persevere to the end.

See also: Monergism / Synergism (Theological)

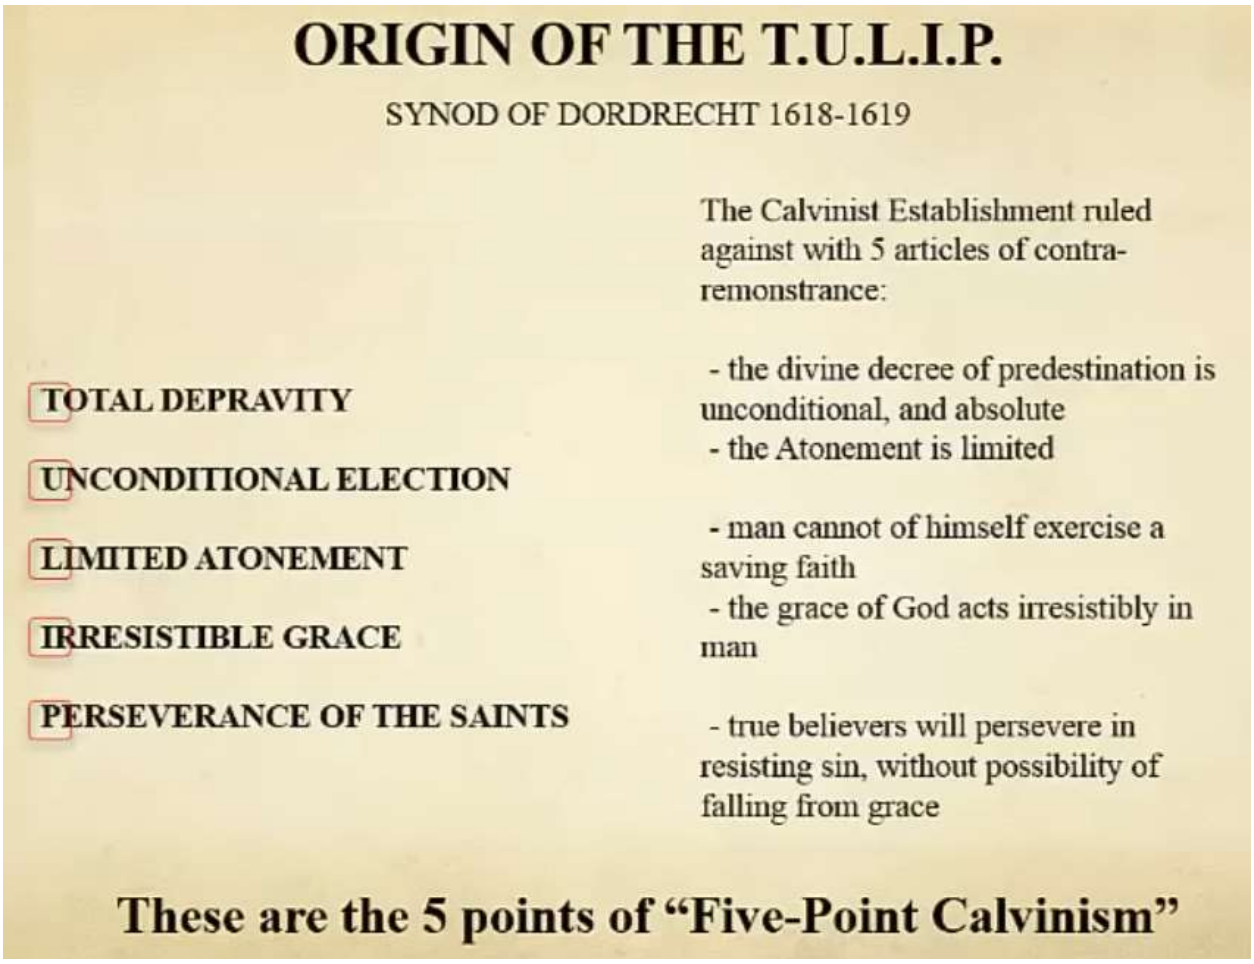
 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



Election, Calvinism, Predestination: Scripture vs. Calvinism
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=4gmOTHNFH0o

The following "Origin of the T.U.L.I.P." slides are from corresponding section in the above video…

Continued on next page…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Continued on next page…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

ORIGIN OF THE T.U.L.I.P.

TOTAL DEPRAVITY

UNCONDITIONAL ELECTION

LIMITED ATONEMENT

IRRESISTIBLE GRACE

PERSEVERANCE OF THE SAINTS

Many non-Calvinists will refer to themselves as 1-point or 2-point Calvinisists, etc… because they reject some of the points. However, this can only be done if the points are misunderstood. They are interwoven and ultimately cannot be separated.

TOTAL DEPRAVITY is accepted by many because they think it is synonymous with the idea that man is sinful and cannot save himself. However, the Calvinist definition actually means that a man is so depraved that he cannot respond to the gospel in any way unless he is supernaturally regenerated first. This, of course, is not scriptural and should be rejected.

Continued on next page…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

ORIGIN OF THE T.U.L.I.P.

TOTAL DEPRAVITY

UNCONDITIONAL ELECTION

LIMITED ATONEMENT

IRRESISTIBLE GRACE

PERSEVERANCE OF THE SAINTS

Many non-Calvinists will refer to themselves as 1-point or 2-point Calvinisists, etc… because they reject some of the points. However, this can only be done if the points are misunderstood. They are interwoven and ultimately cannot be separated.

PERSEVERANCE OF THE SAINTS has been conned off as "PRESERVATION OF THE SAINTS." Christian mistake it for "eternal security," the idea being that the "elect" are preserved by the Holy Spirit until the day of redemption.
However, the Calvinist point actually means that a truly "elect" individual will persevere in good works and resistance of sin throughout their life, and will never fall from grace. The other side of that coin, is that this doctrine is often used to tell people who sin that they were never God's elect to begin with.
In Armenianism, a person can fall from grace and not be saved. In Calvinism, a person can fall into sin, and never have been saved. PRACTICALLY, they are the same, and they are both wicked doctrines of Satan.

Continued on next page…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

ORIGIN OF THE T.U.L.I.P.

"Tip-toeing through the tulips" can mean several things. But with Calvinism, it refers to a preacher's diligence in carefully preaching all the doctrines of the TULIP, yet carefully avoiding certain terms that will clue in his "unwashed" audience that he is a Calvinist, or that he "believes in predestination" etc…

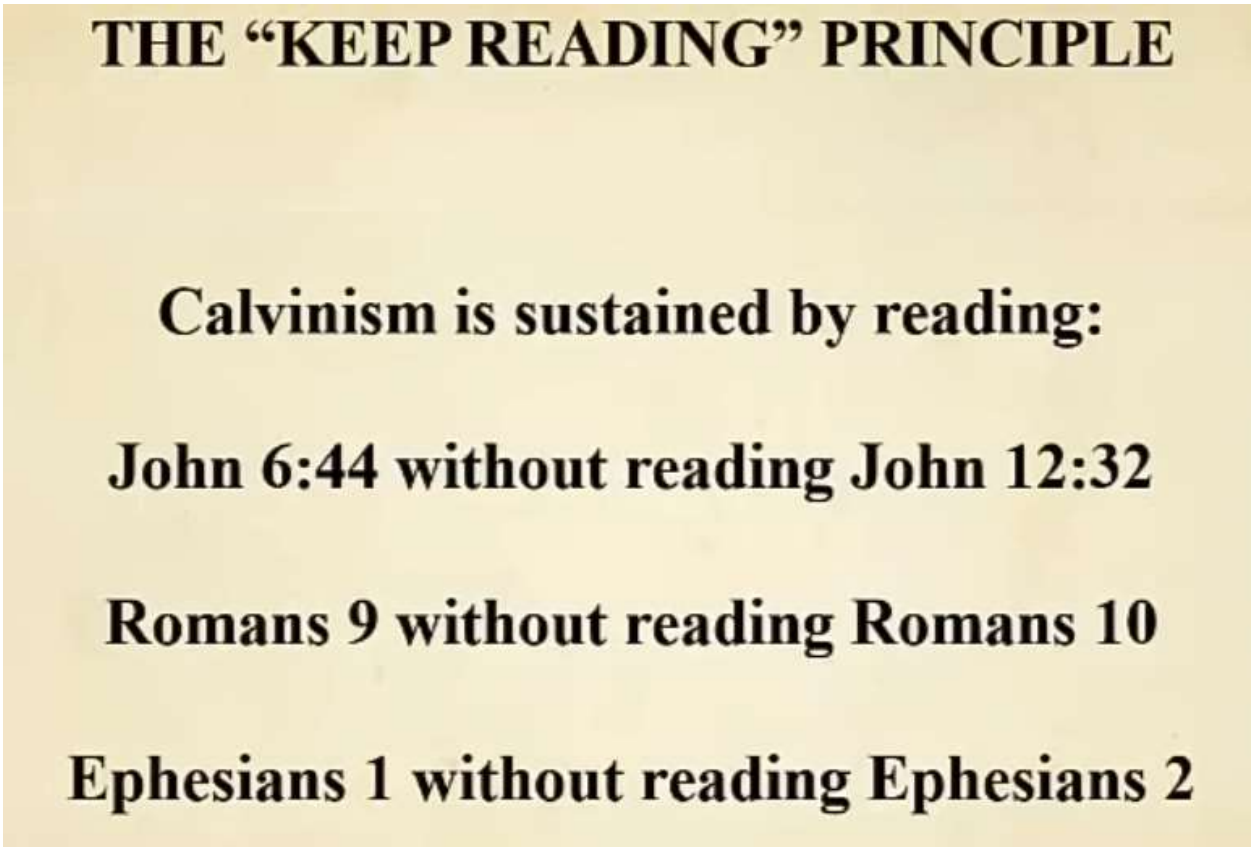
Some pastors even have very deliberate plans to slowly convert their congregations over a the course of a few years by preaching the loose ends of these doctrines with no attempt to correlate them. Once he feels that they've sunk in, and that he has the trust of the people, he'll start connecting the dots for them.

Christian college and seminary instructors manipulatively intimidate their young skulls full of mush into conceding "the doctrines of Grace" in order to be considered "intelligent."

ORIGIN OF THE T.U.L.I.P.

"Tip-toeing through the tulips" can mean several things. But with Calvinism, it refers to a preacher's diligence in carefully preaching all the doctrines of the TULIP, yet carefully avoiding certain terms that will clue in his "unwashed" audience that he is a Calvinist, or that he "believes in predestination" etc…

Some pastors even have very deliberate plans to slowly convert their congregations over a the course of a few years by preaching the loose ends of these doctrines with no attempt to correlate them. Once he feels that they've sunk in, and that he has the trust of the people, he'll start connecting the dots for them.



Christian college and seminary instructors manipulatively intimidate their young skulls full of mush into conceding "the doctrines of Grace" in order to be considered "intelligent."

"Reformed"
"Sovereign Grace"
"Doctrines of Grace"
"Biblical Doctrine of Election"
"Gifts of faith and repentance" Etc…

Average Joe Pewsitter has no idea that when he hears seemingly innocent phrases like this, that the speaker is a Hindu with a Christian façade who believes that most of his buddies are under an eternal decree of reprobation to go to hell.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

from “The Origins of TULIP”…

Continued on next page…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

from “The Origins of TULIP”…

A FALSE DICHOTOMY

To a typical Calvinist, every Christian is either a Calvinist or an Armenian. They see only two perspectives of the five points. They see two perspectives of free will, Sovereignty, etc… Unfortunately, many books written against Calvinism accept this premise and unwittingly bolster the Calvinist’s position, because the argument stays on his turf the entire time.

However, Calvinism and Armenianism are both wrong FOR THE SAME REASONS!

Their argument over whether salvation is based on predestination or foreknowledge is analogous to an argument over whether the sky is made of marble or saliva. The reason this debate persists is that the premise is flawed and unscriptural to begin with.

Both systems argue whether predestination or foreknowledge have to do with a person “getting saved.” Yet predestination never has anything to do with a lost person getting anything. It only has to do with future blessing of people who are ALREADY regenerated.

Likewise, foreknowledge is never a reference to God looking in to the future and knowing that a person will accept Christ, and predestinating him on that basis – not one time that it appears in Scripture.

Therefore, a sound rejection of both systems is appropriate, and a perspective that only sees these two possibilities is satanic.

Continued on next page…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

from “The Origins of TULIP”…

NAME CALLING AND MANIPULATION

A person may be deceived into Calvinism. A true Christian, who is a diligent Bible student will not spend a long time in this deception. It will be nothing more than a stepping stone of growth over a period of a few months.

However, those who tarry long at the lie do so either because they are taken captive the Devil and are at his disposal, or because God allows them to park there for a while because the thoughts and intents of their heart are rotten (Heb. 4:12).

Among the tools in the kitbag of these demonically influenced brethren is a tendency to become master manipulators. It is impossible to just disagree with a Calvinist in the arena of ideas. Any disagreement with Augustine makes you a “semi-Pelagian.” Any disagreement with Calvin makes you an “Armenian.” Believing clear scriptural passages indicates, according to them, that you “exalt the sovereignty of man over the sovereignty of God.”

All the while, Calvinists are less than even semi-Biblical in regards to this philosophy.

In 19 years of focused dealings with staunch Calvinists, I’ve noted a marked lack of the fruit of the Spirit, an inability to understand passages outside the Calvinist paradigm, and the despotic, manipulative characteristics of those who resort to doctrines and tactics of devils whenever convenient.

Whether saved or lost, these people are victims of sin, taken into the snare of the devil. While we should view them as a serious threat to the growth of new Christians, I encourage all mature Christians to continually engage these people in love with kind and continual admonishment and discussion of scripture (Rom. 10:17) with a sound biblical approach. Their usefulness for Christ may be just a few prayers and discussions away. Never quit.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

With Christ – The Journal – Entry 11/10.1/2006

http://withchrist.org/whatsnew06b.htm

The false notion continues to circulate that Calvinism and Arminianism are equally flawed theological systems. This view is part of the aberrant teachings of Chuck Missler, Bob George, and others. They seek to persuade followers that historical theological differences are "stupid" in essence. Understanding church history is of little value in their opinion. Nothing could be farther from the truth!

While Calvinism does have flaws; all the tenets of Arminianism are absolutely false! This view was held by Darby, Kelly, Newell, Chafer, Stanford, and scores of other dispensationalists and Bible scholars. I have put together, in legal size for easy printing, a comparison of the Five Points of Calvinism vs. the Five Points of Arminianism, together with associated colored notes. Click on the graphics below (or here) for the entire Adobe Acobat pdf file.

The Five Points of Calvinism	T or F		The Five Points of Arminianism	T or F
TOTAL DEPRAVITY: Because of the Fall, man is unable of himself to exercise saving faith and believe the gospel. The sinner is dead, blind, and deaf to the things of God; his heart is deceitful and desperately corrupt. His will is not free, but in bondage to his evil nature. Therefore, he will not—indeed cannot—choose good over evil in the spiritual realm. Saving faith is a gift from God, not the sinner's gift to God. Consequently, saving faith requires regeneration by which the Spirit makes the sinner alive and gives him a new nature. Because some Calvinists misunderstand the nature of the lost sinner being spiritually dead, blind, and deaf, passivity is introduced and the volitional dimension of saving faith is unintentionally undermined. Those who wish to emphasize the philosophical causality of regeneration prior to faith should also clearly state that both occur simultaneously. There is no Scriptural warrant to separate regeneration (the New Birth) from saving faith; it is a wholistic work of God. Further, despite the many examples from Scripture of God controlling the actions of unregenerates, Reformed soteriology demands an "initial infusion of the resurrection life of Christ into the human soul" to explain John 6:44a. Unfortunately, anyone who refuses to accept their monergistic salvation model is labeled a synergist--a pejorative term used historically by Protestants Reformers to describe the semi-Pelagian views of Roman Catholics. Further, some Calvinists erroneously require the truth of the believer's effectual calling also be made synonymous with the New Birth. Q. Cannot the Father supernaturally enable the sinner to believe the Word in order to accept the Savior and be born-again? Q. Cannot the Father's work of drawing unregenerate sinners to Christ be kept prior to the New Birth itself? Q. Could both monergism and synergism be Scripturally and philosophically defensible? Ans. Yes, to all three questions.	Largely True		FREE WILL OR HUMAN ABILITY: Although human nature was seriously affected by the fall, man has not been left in a state of total spiritual helplessness. God graciously enables every sinner to repent and believe, but He does not interfere with man's freedom. Each sinner possesses an autonomous free will, and his eternal destiny depends on how he uses it. Man's freedom consists of his ability to choose good over evil in spiritual matters; his will is not enslaved or in bondage. The sinner has the power to either cooperate with God's Spirit and be regenerated or resist God's grace and perish. The lost sinner needs the Spirit's assistance [Wesleyan], but he does not have to be regenerated by the Spirit before he can believe, for saving faith is always possible. Faith is the sinner's gift to God; it is man's contribution to salvation. Among Arminians, there are varying nuances regarding autonomous freedom and explanations of how it operates. However, the doctrine of unfettered human free will remains common. All Arminians believe that an individual's sins are only free if that person could always have chosen to do otherwise.	False
UNCONDITIONAL ELECTION: God's choice of certain individuals unto salvation before the foundation of the world rested solely on His own sovereign will. His choice of particular sinners was not based on any foreseen response or obedience on their part, such as faith, repentance, etc. On the contrary, God gives faith and repentance to each individual whom He selected. These acts are the result, not the cause of God's choice. Election therefore was not determined by or conditioned upon any virtuous quality or act foreseen in man. Those whom God sovereignly elected He brings through the power of the Spirit to a willing acceptance of Christ. Thus, God's choice of the sinner, not the sinner's choice of Christ, is the ultimate cause of salvation. While not conditioned upon mankind, election is not arbitrary. God's calling is sure (Rom 11:29). The fact of God's elective purpose does not negate man's volitional participation in the drama of redemption. We are not passive bystanders.	True		CONDITIONAL ELECTION: God's choice of certain individuals unto salvation before the foundation of the world was based upon His foreseeing that they would respond to His call. He selected only those whom He knew would of themselves freely believe the gospel. Election therefore was determined by or conditioned upon what man would do. The faith which God foresaw and upon which He based His choice was not given to the sinner by God (it was not caused by the regenerating power of the Holy Spirit) but resulted solely from man's will. Who would believe (and therefore who would be elected unto salvation) was left entirely up to man. God chose those whom He knew would, of their own free will, choose Christ. Thus the sinner's choice of Christ, not God's choice of the sinner, is the ultimate cause of salvation.	False
LIMITED ATONEMENT or PARTICULAR REDEMPTION: Christ's redeeming work was intended to save the elect only and actually secured salvation for them. His death was a substitutionary endurance of the penalty of sin in the place of certain specified sinners. In addition to putting away the sins of His people, Christ's redemption secured everything necessary for their salvation, including faith which unites them to Him. The gift of faith is infallibly applied by the Spirit to all for whom Christ died, therefore guaranteeing their salvation. In reaction to the Arminian's universalism, the Calvinist fails to see and acknowledge the global propitiation aspect of Christ's atonement. Because Christ's death is a propitiation for the whole world (1 John 2:2), God the Father is "just" in providing substitutionary atonement for His elect. Both Limited and Unlimited Atonement are true.	Partially True		UNIVERSAL REDEMPTION or GENERAL ATONEMENT: Christ's redeeming work made it possible for everyone to be saved but did not actually secure the salvation of anyone. Although Christ died for all men and for every man, only those who believe on Him (exercise their free will in favor of God) are saved. His death enabled God to pardon sinners on the conditions that they believe, but it did not actually put away everyone's sins. Christ's redemption becomes effective only if man chooses to accept it. The Arminian interprets all Scripture through the lens of his so-called "free will." He rejects the plain statement of Luke 14:18, "But they all alike began to make excuses" and believes he is different and makes no excuse to accept the invitation to eat at the "great banquet." He is in full agreement with the Jewish critics in John 8:31-47, "We are Abraham's descendants and have never been in bondage to anyone."	False
IRRESISTABLE GRACE or THE EFFICACIOUS CALL OF THE SPIRIT: In addition to the outward general call to salvation which is made to everyone who hears the gospel, the Holy Spirit extends to the elect a special inward call that inevitably brings them to salvation. The external call (which is made to all without distinction) can be, and often is, rejected, whereas the internal call (which is made only to the elect) cannot be rejected; it always results in conversion. By means of this special call the Spirit irresistibly draws sinners to Christ. He is not limited in His work of applying salvation by man's will. The spirit graciously causes the elect sinner to cooperate, to believe, to repent, to come freely and willingly to Christ. God's saving grace therefore, is invincible; it never fails to result in the salvation of those to whom it is extended.	True		THE HOLY SPIRIT CAN BE EFFECTUALLY RESISTED: The Spirit calls inwardly all those who are called outwardly by the gospel invitation. He does all that He can to bring every sinner to salvation. But inasmuch as man is free, he can successfully resist the Spirit's call. The Spirit cannot regenerate the sinner until he believes; faith (which is man's contribution) precedes and makes possible the new birth. Thus, man's free will limits the Spirit in the application of Christ's saving work. The Holy Spirit can only draw to Christ those who allow Him to have His way with them. Until the sinner responds, the Spirit cannot give life. God's grace, therefore, is not invincible; it can be, and often is, resisted and thwarted by man.	False
PERSEVERANCE OF THE SAINTS: All who are chosen of God, redeemed by Christ, and given faith by the Spirit are eternally saved. They are kept in faith by the power of Almighty God and thus preserved to the end. The Calvinist generally abhors to "presumption" and "perverse" the term "eternal security." His assurance of salvation focuses upon the visible "works of perseverance," rather than the clear statements of Scripture. This uncertainty has given rise to what is today called, "Lordship Salvation." If the Gospel you believed did not include the claims of the "Lordship of Christ" and you didn't accept Christ as Lord, then you probably are not "saved." Biblical assurance and security are based on the clear statements of Scripture. Inconsistent behavior can be a sign of carnality and immaturity, rather than absence of salvation.	Partially True		FALLING FROM GRACE: Those who believe and are truly saved can lose their salvation by failing to keep up their faith, etc. (All Arminians have not agreed on this point, some have held that believers are eternally secure in Christ.) The Arminian cannot logically and consistently hold to both "free will" and be "secure in Christ." However, some Arminians believe, without a shred of Scriptural support, that salvation removes free will from the believer.	False

(This is not vetted, just including as an example of what appears, at first glance, to show some of the arrogance and demagogy that exists on all sides.)

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Calvinism vs Arminianism – Comparison Chart

The following material from Romans: An Interpretative Outline (pp.144-147). by David N. Steele and Curtis C. Thomas, contrasts the Five Points of Arminianism with the Five Points of Calvinism in the clearest and most concise form that we have seen anywhere. It is also found in their smaller book, The Five Points of Calvinism (pp. 16-19). Both books are published by The Presbyterian and Reformed Publishing Co., Philadelphia.(1963). Messrs. Steele and Thomas have served for several years as co-pastors of a Southern Baptist church, in Little Rock, Arkansas.

- Living for God's Glory: An Introduction to Calvinism by Joel Beeke ★★★★★
- Five Points of Calvinism: Defined, Defended, and Documented ★★★★★
- The Five Dilemmas of Calvinism by Craig R. Brown
- Calvinism: Pure and Mixed by W.G.T. Shedd
- History and Character of Calvinism by John T. McNeill

THE "FIVE POINTS" OF ARMINIANISM	THE "FIVE POINTS" OF CALVINISM
Free Will or Human Ability Although human nature was seriously affected by the fall, man has not been left in a state of total spiritual helplessness. God graciously enables every sinner to repent and believe, but He does not interfere with man's freedom. Each sinner possesses a free will, and his eternal destiny depends on how he uses it. Man's freedom consists of his ability to choose good over evil in spiritual matters; his will is not enslaved to his sinful nature. The sinner has the power to either cooperate with God's Spirit and be regenerated or resist God's grace and perish. The lost sinner needs the Spirit's assistance, but he does not have to be regenerated by the Spirit before he can believe, for faith is man's act and precedes the new birth. Faith is the sinner's gift to God; it is man's contribution to salvation.	Total Inability or Total Depravity Because of the fall, man is unable of himself to savingly believe the gospel. The sinner is dead, blind, and deaf to the things of God; his heart is deceitful and desperately corrupt. His will is not free, it is in bondage to his evil nature, therefore, he will not — indeed he cannot — choose good over evil in the spiritual realm. Consequently, it takes much more than the Spirit's assistance to bring a sinner to Christ — it takes regeneration by which the Spirit makes the sinner alive and gives him a new nature. Faith is not something man contributes to salvation but is itself a part of God's gift of salvation— it is God's gift to the sinner, not the sinner's gift to God.
Conditional Election God's choice of certain individuals unto salvation before the foundation of the world was based upon His foreseeing that they would respond to	Unconditional Election God's choice of certain individuals unto salvation before fore the foundation of the world rested solely in His own sovereign will. His choice of

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

His call. He selected only those whom He knew would of themselves freely believe the gospel. Election therefore was determined by or conditioned upon what man would do. The faith which God foresaw and upon which He based His choice was not given to the sinner by God (it was not created by the regenerating power of the Holy Spirit) but resulted solely from man's will. It was left entirely up to man as to who would believe and therefore as to who would be elected unto salvation. God chose those whom He knew would, of their own free will, choose Christ. Thus the sinner's choice of Christ, not God's choice of the sinner, is the ultimate cause of salvation.

Universal Redemption or General Atonement
Christ's redeeming work made it possible for everyone to be saved but did not actually secure the salvation of anyone. Although Christ died for all men and for every man, only those who believe on Him are saved. His death enabled God to pardon sinners on the condition that they believe, but it did not actually put away anyone's sins. Christ's redemption becomes effective only if man chooses to accept it.

The Holy Spirit Can Be Effectually Resisted
The Spirit calls inwardly all those who are called outwardly by the gospel invitation; He does all that He can to bring every sinner to salvation. But inasmuch as man is free, he can successfully resist the Spirit's call. The Spirit cannot regenerate the sinner until he believes; faith (which is man's contribution) precedes and makes possible the new birth. Thus, man's free will limits the Spirit in the application of Christ's saving work. The Holy Spirit can only draw to Christ those who allow Him to have His way with them. Until the sinner responds, the Spirit cannot give life. God's grace, therefore, is not invincible; it can be, and often is, resisted and thwarted by man.

particular sinners was not based on any foreseen response or obedience on their part, such as faith, repentance, etc. On the contrary, God gives faith and repentance to each individual whom He selected. These acts are the result, not the cause God's choice. Election therefore was not determined by or conditioned upon any virtuous quality or act foreseen in man. Those whom God sovereignly elected He brings through the power of the Spirit to a willing acceptance of Christ. Thus God's choice of the sinner, not the sinner's choice of Christ, is the ultimate cause of salvation.

Particular Redemption or Limited Atonement
Christ's redeeming work was intended to save the elect only and actually secured salvation for them. His death was a substitutionary endurance of the penalty of sin in the place of certain specified sinners. In addition to putting away the sins of His people, Christ's redemption secured everything necessary for their salvation, including faith which unites them to Him. The gift of faith is infallibly applied by the Spirit to all for whom Christ died, therefore guaranteeing their salvation

The Efficacious Call of the Spirit or Irresistible Grace
In addition to the outward general call to salvation which is made to everyone who hears the gospel, the Holy Spirit extends to the elect a special inward call that inevitably brings them to salvation. The eternal call (which is made to all without distinction) can be, and often is, rejected; whereas the internal call (which is made only to the elect) cannot be rejected; it always results in conversion. By mean, of this special call the Spirit irresistibly draws sinners to Christ. He is not limited in His work of applying salvation by man's will, nor is He dependent upon man's cooperation for success. The Spirit graciously causes the elect sinner to cooperate, to believe, to repent, to come freely and willingly to Christ. God', grace. therefore, is invincible; it never fails to result in the salvation of those to whom it is extended.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

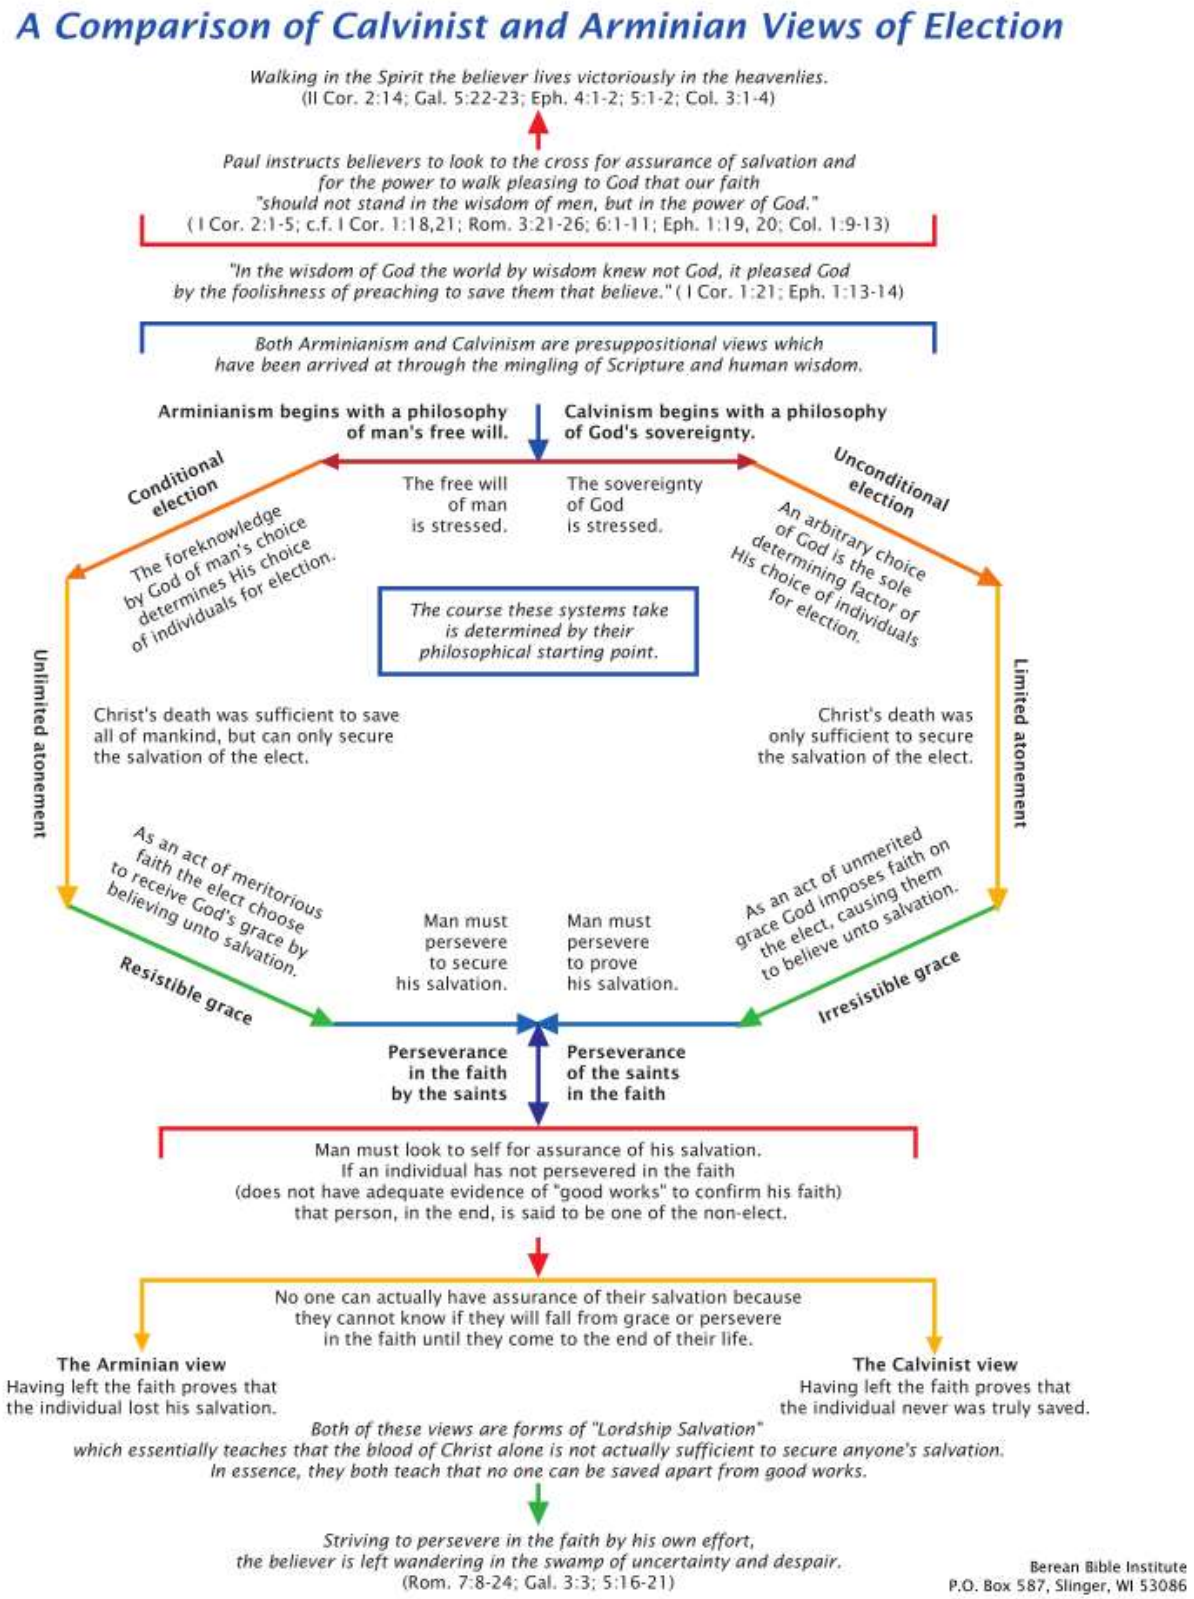
Falling From Grace

Those who believe and are truly saved can lose their salvation by failing to keep up their faith. etc. All Arminian, have not been agreed on this point; some have held that believers are eternally secure in Christ — that once a sinner is regenerated. he can never be lost.

Perseverance of the Saints

All who are chosen by God, redeemed by Christ, and given faith by the Spirit are eternally saved. They are kept in faith by the power of Almighty God and thus persevere to the end.



According to Arminianism: Salvation is accomplished through the combined efforts of God (who takes the initiative) and man(who must respond)—man's response being the determining factor. God has provided salvation for everyone, but His provision becomes effective only for those who, of their own free will, "choose" to cooperate with Him and accept His offer of grace. At the crucial point, man's will plays a decisive role; thus man, not God, determines who will be the recipients of the gift of salvation.REJECTED by the Synod of DortThis was the system of thought contained in the "Remonstrance" (though the "five points" were not originally arranged in this order). It was submitted by the Arminians to the Church of Holland in 1610 for adoption but was rejected by the Synod of Dort in 1619 on the ground that it was unscriptural.

According to Calvinism: Salvation is accomplished by the almighty power of the Triune God. The Father chose a people, the Son died for them, the Holy Spirit makes Christ's death effective by bringing the elect to faith and repentance, thereby causing them to willingly obey the gospel. The entire process (election, redemption, regeneration) is the work of God and is by grace alone. Thus God, not man, determines who will be the recipients of the gift of salvation.REAFFIRMED by the Synod of DortThis system of theology was reaffirmed by the Synod of Dort in 1619 as the doctrine of salvation contained in the Holy Scriptures. The system was at that time formulated into "five points" (in answer to the five points submitted by the Arminians) and has ever since been known as "the five points of Calvinism."

[Source: http://www.graceonlinelibrary.org/reformed-theology/arminianism/calvinism-vs-arminianism-comparison-chart/]

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

A Comparison of Calvinist and Arminian Views of Election (source)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Total Depravity

Chart: https://soundclear.files.wordpress.com/2008/05/totaldepravitymanchart.jpg?w=500&h=360

http://afellowtruthseeker.blogspot.com/2014/03/watch-yourselves-my-arminian-brothers.html

Quote:

It's quite disturbing to me how many Arminians do not accept Total Depravity. Even Jacob Arminius believed in Total Depravity (he just tacked on Prevenient Grace). Without Total Depravity, Arminianism is dangerously close to Pelagianism. Worse, there are dire effects of this teaching:…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Roger E. Olson on Calvinism and Arminianism (Book Review)

https://proregno.com/2010/12/10/roger-e-olson-on-calvinism-and-arminianism/

Video: http://agtv.ag.org/qa-olson

Also mentions Open Theists, modern day (New) Calvinists, supralapsarianism, etc.

Review Excerpt:

Here is some of my comments/questions (in brackets the approximate time in the interview the topic were discussed):

1. Olson pleads for both sides to 'understand' the other side first, before you say 'I disagree' (55/56min). I believe we can all 'agree' on that (Jam.1:19) ! Olson also mentions that one must read the best of the other side (on the Arminian side today: Olsen and Thomas Oden?, although the latter would not classify himself as an arminian, but is one, according to Oden), and not the 'folklore' (caricature?) views that are popular today in mass media.

He says that he has studied Calvinistic author's themselves thoroughly for decades, but the same could not be said of calvinists (Question: is this true or not – who is currently the foremost calvinistic scholar(s) today who have studied Arminius and the arminian theologians themselves through history, and then critiqued them, or do we only read secondary sources)?

2. Olsen in essence does a good job distinguishing between Calvinism and Arminianism, referring to the tulip acronym, and explains that the main differences are among:

– 'unconditional vs conditional election', – 'irresistable vs resistable grace' and – 'limited vs unlimited atonement'.

3. There are also differences within the calvinistic camp (for instance, supra vs infra, four points vs five points, etc), and so there are among the arminians: many accept or reject the label, whether they are really arminians or not. He distinguish between 'classical arminians' (Arminius, Wesley, himself, etc.) and 'extreme arminians' (pelagians/semi pelagians = Finney).

4. He does not see Open Theism as a heresy, but do mention that it does not have historical roots, and that 'he is not there'. He calls 'open theism' = arminianism on steriods ! … I had a good laugh here.

5. The essential difference between the two systems (25/27th min etc): it is all about the character of God – Calvinism focuses on sovereignty, Arminianism on the love of God (here I thought Oden was on his weakest, see below). He and the presenter argues that (as a critique against Calvinism): "how can a sovereign God who 'can' save all, actually do not in His power save all?" That, according to them is the foundational weakpoint of Calvinism, but they do acknowledge that Arminianism also have their problems/mysteries (41/42min).

Oden thinks Arminianism's main question/problem which they will not be able to answer in this life, is: "How God knows beforehand what people are going to do freely?" (The reason for this moral problem, I think, is: If God knows beforehand what all people would choose, did He then not also foreordained it by His sovereign will? And if He did, why did He not, in His love foreordained that all persons will freely chose Him?) By the way, he says Open Theism main problem/question they have to explain, is: what to do with the problem of evil ?

6. He believes modern day calvinists (like Piper, Sproul, 'restless and reformed' group, etc) represent (what I would call) 'moderate calvinism' whom he respects greatly although he of course disagree with them on the topic itself. I were glad to hear he acknowledges that the doctrine of predestination is not a reason for not doing evangelism and missions (because, like he explained, Calvinists believe: 1. God decrees the end (salvation) and the means (gospel preaching, missions, evangelism), and, 2. God commands the Gospel must be preach to all, and so we obey Him. To add to this, we Calvinists would say no evangelism or missions will be successful, if it were not for the doctrine of predestination (Acts 13:47,48). Oden do strongly reject 'extreme Calvinism', which in his eyes is 'double predestination = supralapsarianism' (he does not mention any names here). Here, it seems, is the main enemy of Arminianism for Olson, as he confirms it here :

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

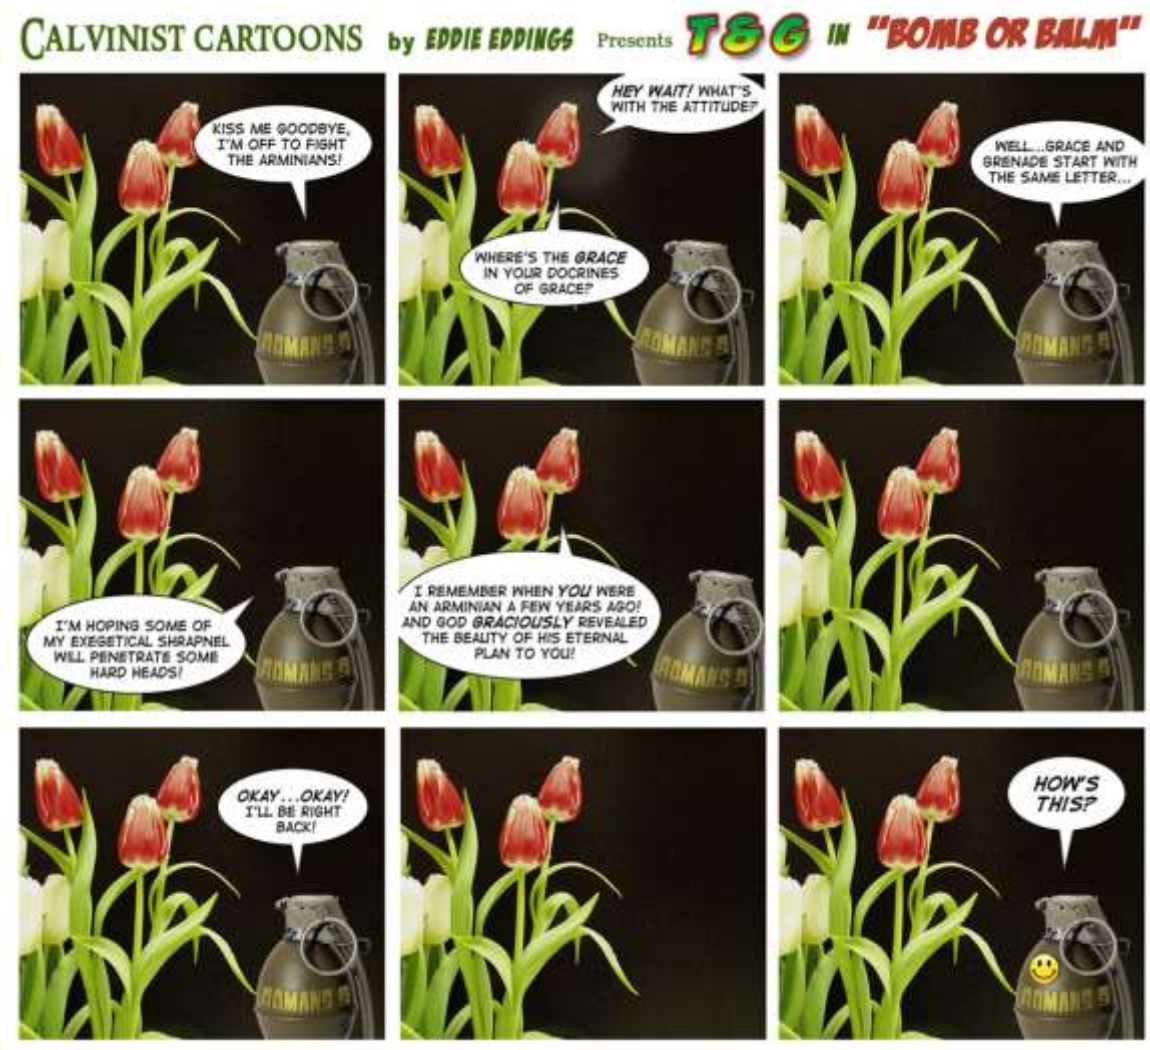
"Above all I want to make clear that I admire and respect my Calvinist friends and colleagues. We disagree strongly about some points of theology, but I hold them in high esteem for their commitment to the authority of God's Word and their obvious love for Jesus Christ and his church as well as for evangelism.

However, I do not admire or respect John Calvin. I have been told that he should not be held responsible for the burning of the heretic Servetus because, after all, he warned the Spanish doctor and theologian not to come to Geneva and he urged the city council to behead him rather than burn him. And, after all, Calvin was a child of his times and everyone was doing the same. Nevertheless, I still struggle with placing a man complicit in murder on a pedestal.

Furthermore, I find Calvin's doctrine of God repulsive. It elevates God's sovereignty over his love, leaving God's reputation in question. What I mean is that Calvin's all-determining, predestining deity is at best morally ambiguous and at worst morally repugnant."



My question/comment here, about the use of terms in the debate (which I acknowledge, are sometime confusing), is: ironically, if I read the sources correctly, Calvin himself (see Institutes, 3:24 and 'Calvin's Calvinism') and the likes of Beza, Perkins, Gomarus, Maccovius, Voetius, Comrie, Kuyper, Kersten, Steenblok, Hoeksema, etc. (Concise Reformed Dogmatics, Van Genderen & Velema, 2008: 228) were all supra's (could Owen, Zanchius and Rutherford also be added?), and are therefore in Olsen's eyes the 'extreme calvinists'.

Now, since Calvin's name is used for 'calvinism', and he were a supra, I think it would be better for Olsen in distinguishing between different groups within calvinism, to name the original calvinists (supra's?) plainly 'Calvinists' (the original historical confessional calvinists and Dordt and Westminster who followed), and call the later Calvinists, esp. of the 20 century (who maybe have watered down the original calvinism?) 'extreme calvinism' (in the sense of disagreeing or moving away from original calvinism?), or 'moderate' calvinism. (ps. Yes, I acknowledge that although many were supra's at Dordt, the Canons themselves were drawed up in a infra order and way (a argument which I think are not too convincing, in the light of chapter 1.7 and 15, but that is another article).

7. I must acknowledge, that although one could differ (even strongly) with Olsen (and the presenter), they were gracious in representing the calvinistic side, acknowledging their own 'arminian goggles' through which they view and discuss the topic. In answering one question on some 'nasty calvinists' (my own words), Olsen immediately said that one meets some arrogant folks in both camps, and therefore this in itself should not be a strong argument for or against a certain view. See this picture to explain it all : -)

Continued next page…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

8. Olsen's mentions many things both groups agrees on, like the Trinity, Scriptures are infallible, Jesus' Deity, etc., and acknowledge that both views have their problems and mysteries, but in his view Arminianism is the best or most biblical and logical of the two views, and also in line with the early church's views on salvation, as Oden confirms with his studies on the early church fathers, especially the Greeks (and which the calvinist would say about their own view too, see Van Til's and Spurgeon's comments in the line of 'Calvinism/Reformed Christianity being the truest and best expression of the Biblical faith').

God's Sovereignty vs. Free Will (Bible verses compared) http://www.dougledbetter.org/theology/sovereignty_vs_freewill.html

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

A.W. Tozer: Sovereign Decrees

http://www.cmalliance.org/devotions/tozer?id=1433

Another real problem created by the doctrine of the divine sovereignty has to do with the will of man. If God rules His universe by His sovereign decrees, how is it possible for man to exercise free choice? And if he cannot exercise freedom of choice, how can he be held responsible for his conduct? Is he not a mere puppet whose actions are determined by a behind-the-scenes God who pulls the strings as it pleases Him?

The attempt to answer these questions has divided the Christian church neatly into two camps that have borne the names of two distinguished theologians, Jacobus Arminius and John Calvin. Most Christians are content to get into one camp or the other and deny either sovereignty to God or free will to man. It appears possible, however, to reconcile these two positions without doing violence to either, although the effort that follows may prove deficient to partisans of one camp or the other.

Here is my view: God sovereignly decreed that man should be free to exercise moral choice, and man from the beginning has fulfilled that decree by making his choice between good and evil. When he chooses to do evil, he does not thereby countervail the sovereign will of God but fulfills it, inasmuch as the eternal decree decided not which choice the man should make but that he should be free to make it. If in His absolute freedom God has willed to give man limited freedom, who is there to stay His hand or say, "What doest thou?" Man's will is free because God is sovereign. A God less than sovereign could not bestow moral freedom upon His creatures. He would be afraid to do so.

The Difference Between Calvinists and Arminians (John Piper) (2017)

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=F-C33QrDxNc [Video]

Such Is The Nature of Choice (Calvinism vs Arminianism)

http://thecenterfortheologicalstudies.blogspot.com/2010/06/such-is-nature-of-choice.html

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Scrutinizing Calvinism: Divine Determinism and Free Will are Incompatible https://buckleherry.wordpress.com/category/christianity/calvinism-and-arminianism/

Four Views of Human Freedom

See also: Monergism / Synergism (Theological)

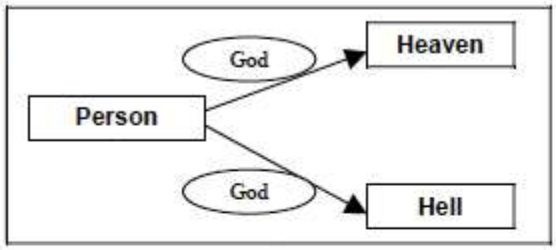
 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



Crucial Question:

Why do some go to heaven and others go to hell?

Two major positions have been advanced trying to answer this question.

1. Calvinism

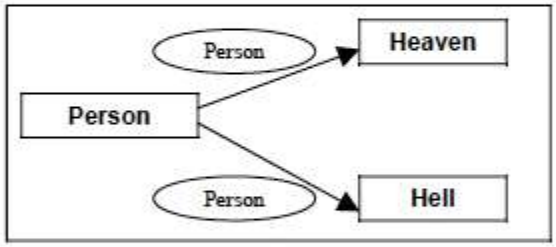
"God chooses some to go to heaven and some to go to hell."

Does this give you comfort?



Can a person ever be sure of going to heaven?

Biblical response:

1 Timothy 2:3–4 1 John 2:2

2. Arminianism

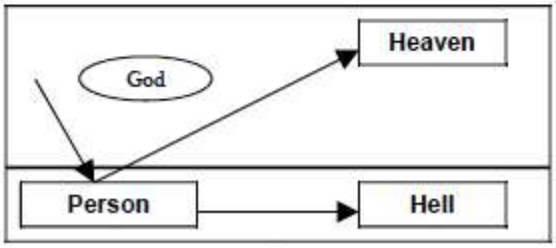
The person chooses to go to heaven or the person chooses to go to hell.

Does this give you comfort?

Can a person ever be sure of going to heaven?

Biblical response:

Ephesians 2:1



---

3. Biblical View

Can't be answered with one answer. Two questions:

Why do some go to heaven?

Why do some go to hell?

Biblical response:

John 3:18

Ephesians 2:1, 4–4, 8–9

Comfort of going to heaven: 1 John 5:11–13

Source: https://disciplingsmlc.files.wordpress.com/2011/08/predestination.png / https://disciplingsmlc.wordpress.com/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Calvinism vs. Arminianism: What Does the Bible Teach? [Recommended]

http://www.relevantbibleteaching.com/site/cpage.asp?cpage_id=140010258&sec_id=140001239

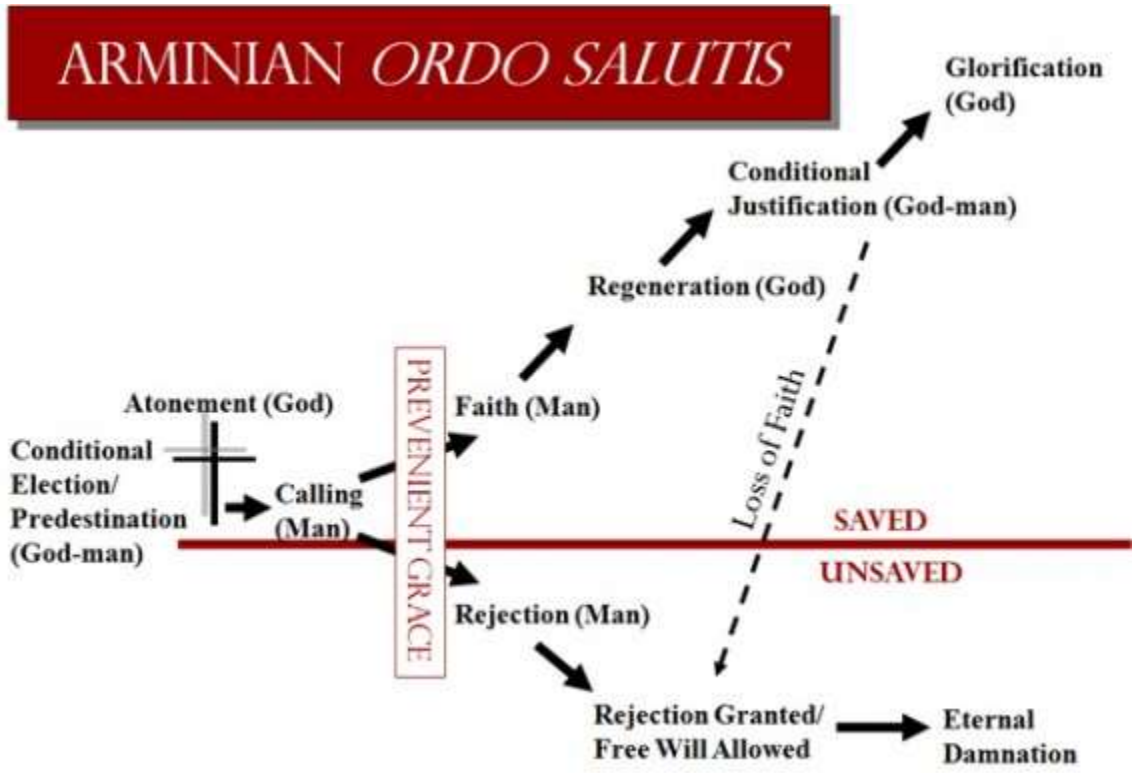
Excerpt:

Just as some of the Corinthian believers got distracted from the main issue by saying they were of Paul or Apollos rather than focusing on being of Christ, so too can we today if we get caught up by trying to solve the paradox of God's sovereignty and the free choice of man. The Bible clearly teaches that man has the ability and responsibility to choose, and it also just as clearly teaches that God is sovereign over all that happens, including our choices.

The question arises: "How can we freely choose something that God has predestined and foreordained?" In other words, if something is predestined, don't we have to choose it, thereby limiting our free choice? But the Bible does speak of both predestination and free choice. In our finite, fallen minds, we cannot comprehend how these two concepts can co-exist, yet neither can we fully comprehend the Trinity or eternity, for example. What is important is that we accept both the free will of man and the sovereignty of God because the Bible teaches both. To try to weasel out of this paradox using reason alone will fail us and lead us to the unbiblical conclusion that God forces the will of man to choose hell for himself. There is nothing about God's character to say that He would force somebody to go to hell without their own wicked will sending them there. God created men surely knowing what they would choose, but He does not make them choose what He knows. His omniscience does not eliminate their free will. Therefore, somehow, God's sovereignty, foreknowledge, and omniscience co-exist with our human responsibility.

We are not robots, for, as with Adam and Eve, we have choices to make and the capacity to do so. Neither would it be true to say, however, that God is reactive to what we choose. Some have suggested that God only knows the possibilities of our choices, not the exact choice. Obviously, this is foolishness because God knows all. Thus, we are left with a paradox of God's sovereignty, which includes predestination and the free will of man. Somehow both exist, and we must accept the tension. To veer to either extreme, which Calvinism and Arminianism in many ways are, without balancing it with the other will lead us to very unbiblical conclusions and behavior. We must balance God's sovereignty with man's responsibility.

Let's now look at Calvinism's teachings and Arminianism's teachings…



…

In doing this study, I arrived at some conclusions about the whole debate between Calvinists and Arminians. First, the debate will never end because neither side is right. Second, there is an alternative viewpoint which I have laid out. Third, we cause division and destruction when we let man-made doctrinal systems dictate our interpretation of the Bible. Both systems are convoluted enough to really distort our ability to understand Scripture, if we adhere to their basic assumptions. Fourth, I believe Calvinism puts too much emphasis on God's sovereignty while Arminianism puts too much emphasis on the ability and work of man. One camp would tend to gloat in its election while the other would fear that another sin would send them to hell with no chance at redemption. One might try to manipulate a conversion while another would be reluctant to even persuade the sinner. One might be preoccupied with fate and another with shaping their own destiny irrespective of seeking God's will. The reality is that either extreme creates dangers for practical Christian living.

We are not victims of blind fate; neither are we able to do anything unless God wills it. We must acknowledge God's sovereignty and omniscience and the free will of man. We must accept the tensions that such a position creates. May God make us those who rest in His providence and who are adamant about doing all that we can by His strength and grace to make a difference in this world.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Arminian Order of Salvation
https://redeeminggod.com/wp-content/uploads/2015/01/arminian-ordo-salutis-570x391.jpg

A Comparison of Systems – A.A. Hodge (Reformed)
http://old.thirdmill.org/newfiles/aa_hodge/aa_hodge.comparisonofsystems.pdf [PDF]

Studies in Theology – Warfield (Calvinism/Reformed)
http://hopecollege.hopechurchaustralia.com/wp-content/uploads/downloads/2014/12/Studies-in-Theology.pdf [PDF]

http://www.ntslibrary.com/PDF%20Books%20II/Warfield%20-%20Studies%20in%20Theology.pdf [PDF]

Dogmatic Theology – Shedd (Reformed)
http://docshare01.docshare.tips/files/17941/179419246.pdf [PDF]

Calvinism vs Arminianism
http://www.so4j.com/calvinism-vs-arminianism-compare

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Calvinism vs Biblicism vs Arminianism http://www.lostpinesbiblechurch.org/docs/1Peter/Calvinism_Biblicism_Arminianism.pdf [PDF]

What is Traditionalism?
https://soteriology101.wordpress.com/2017/08/27/summarize-traditionalism/

Regeneration: When Does New Life Begin?
https://soteriology101.wordpress.com/2017/08/10/regeneration-when-does-new-life-begin/

Sebastian Castellio – An important theologian of the Reformation http://evangelicalarminians.org/sebastian-castellio-an-important-theologian-of-the-reformation/

An Outline of the FACTS of Arminianism vs. the TULIP of Calvinism http://evangelicalarminians.org/an-outline-of-the-facts-of-arminianism-vs-the-tulip-of-calvinism/

Calvinism, Arminianism and Free Will Explained Clearly With 136 Verses http://jesussaidfollowme.org/CalvinismArminianism.htm

Ravi Zacharias Ministries Response to Free Will Question
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=_kSf3rNSTrA

Ravi Zacharias - Born to be good or born to be evil
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Dkp88KxhkG0

How could an all-powerful, all-loving God allow evil to exist?
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=NAm8iK8VhV0

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Randy Alcorn:

Where do you stand on the Calvinism and Arminianism debate?

http://www.epm.org/resources/2010/Jan/30/where-do-you-stand-calvinism-and-arminianism-debat/

Excerpt:

I came to Christ in a church that was Arminian, so that was naturally my early leaning. I went to a Bible college and seminary that were both middle of the road where neither hard core Calvinism nor Arminianism often surfaced in class, though on a continuum, some faculty would lean more toward one than the other.

As the years have gone on, I have come increasingly closer to a Calvinist position and further from the Arminian (though I dislike both labels). As I say in other articles on this website, I believe that Christ died for all, not just the elect, which is the one major tenet where I depart from Calvinism (not for logical reasons, but simply because after studying the passages they still seem to me to be saying Christ died for everyone.) So I am what might be called a four point Calvinist [i.e., believes in unlimited atonement, instead of limited atonement], though some 5 point Calvinists believe it's illogical, that it all stands or fall together…

What Is Your View on Limited Atonement?

http://www.epm.org/resources/2010/Feb/15/what-your-view-limited-atonement/

Micah Currado, A Review of Randy Alcorn's Book "Hand in Hand: The Beauty of God's Sovereignty and Meaningful Human Choice"

http://evangelicalarminians.org/micah-currado-a-review-of-randy-alcorns-book-hand-in-hand/

Excerpt:

In his recent book, Randy Alcorn has done a great job of being fair to both Calvinists and Arminians, especially in light of the fact he identifies himself as a 4-point Calvinist. In addition to being fair-minded, his book is also very easy to read. My brain was not tortured by convoluted arguments, nor were my intellectual hackles raised. In the beginning of the book, Alcorn writes, "Historically, Calvinism and Arminianism have each held to a belief in both God's sovereignty and meaningful human choice. But they've held those beliefs in different ways." This recognition sets the tone for what is a balanced tour of issues underlying the discussion of how Christians view the interplay of God's sovereignty and human choice in different ways.

Alcorn admits, "It's essential to go to Calvinists if you want to know what Calvinists believe and to Arminians if you want to know what Arminians believe. Even the best-intentioned critics often don't get their opponents' views correct." He is definitely seeking for peace and clarity in the discussion, writing, "We need to ask each other what we mean and not draw hasty conclusions." Amen to that.

The discussion questions in the back of the book are fair and well written, allowing the reader to explain his or her own view in a group setting. They are not designed to guide the reader to a particular outcome, which is refreshing.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Keeping the Main Thing - The main thing is Jesus Christ and His gospel. Book Review: hand in HAND by Randy Alcorn http://keepingthemainthing.blogspot.com/2014/12/book-review-hand-in-hand-by-randy-alcorn.html

Excerpt:

God's sovereignty and human choice are two truths taught in the Bible yet can be complicated. We have two groups of Christians who have debated about this for years. You have the Calvinists who believe that God is sovereign especially in the choosing of those who are saved. We have the Arminians who believe God is sovereign but man has the choice to accept God or not based on their free will.

Most books on this issue is usually written by one side or the other giving a defense for their beliefs. Usually the author is highly respected theologian on one side of the fence. I am happy to review this book by Randy Alcorn because he is an apologist who is respected by both Calvinists and Arminians. hand in HAND is a book that addresses the issue of God's sovereignty and the man's free will to choose in a way that those who are not familiar with the struggle this doctrine has brought to many Christians for years.

Alcorn does what he does best and that is giving the introductions to Calvinism and Arminism in a user-friendly style. He talks about the difference both sides have on doctrines of the Christian faith such as Predestination, Grace, and for whom Christ died for. Alcorn also gives different views besides Calvinists and Arminians on the sovereignty of God such as Libertarianism and Hyper-Calvinism.

The rest of the book deals with how God's sovereignty and human choice play hand in hand, hence the title of the book. Alcorn also addresses Open Theism and how it is contrary to God's sovereignty which is something Christians need to know. He also addresses God's sovereignty in working all things together for good.

I am really grateful that Alcorn addresses that Christians must always go to the Bible for what they believe. While it is important to study theological systems, they are not breathed out by God. The Bible is breathed out by God. We can quote our favorite theologians till we are blue in the face but if we miss out on what the Bible teaches, then we are people who no longer depend on God's word as the final authority.

This book was a breath of fresh air because Alcorn presented his writings in a way that anyone can read on the issue of God's sovereignty. This is a must read for every Christian regardless if you are a Calvinist or Arminian. There is a discussion guide in the back of the book which will be great for small group or one-on-one discipleship.

My latest book: “hand in Hand: The Beauty of God’s Sovereignty and Meaningful Human Choice”

http://www.epm.org/blog/2014/Oct/15/hand-in-hand

Spurgeon’s Theology: Embracing Biblical Paradox

http://www.epm.org/resources/2010/Mar/22/spurgeons-theology-embracing-biblical-paradox/

The Best Theological Label Is “Berean”

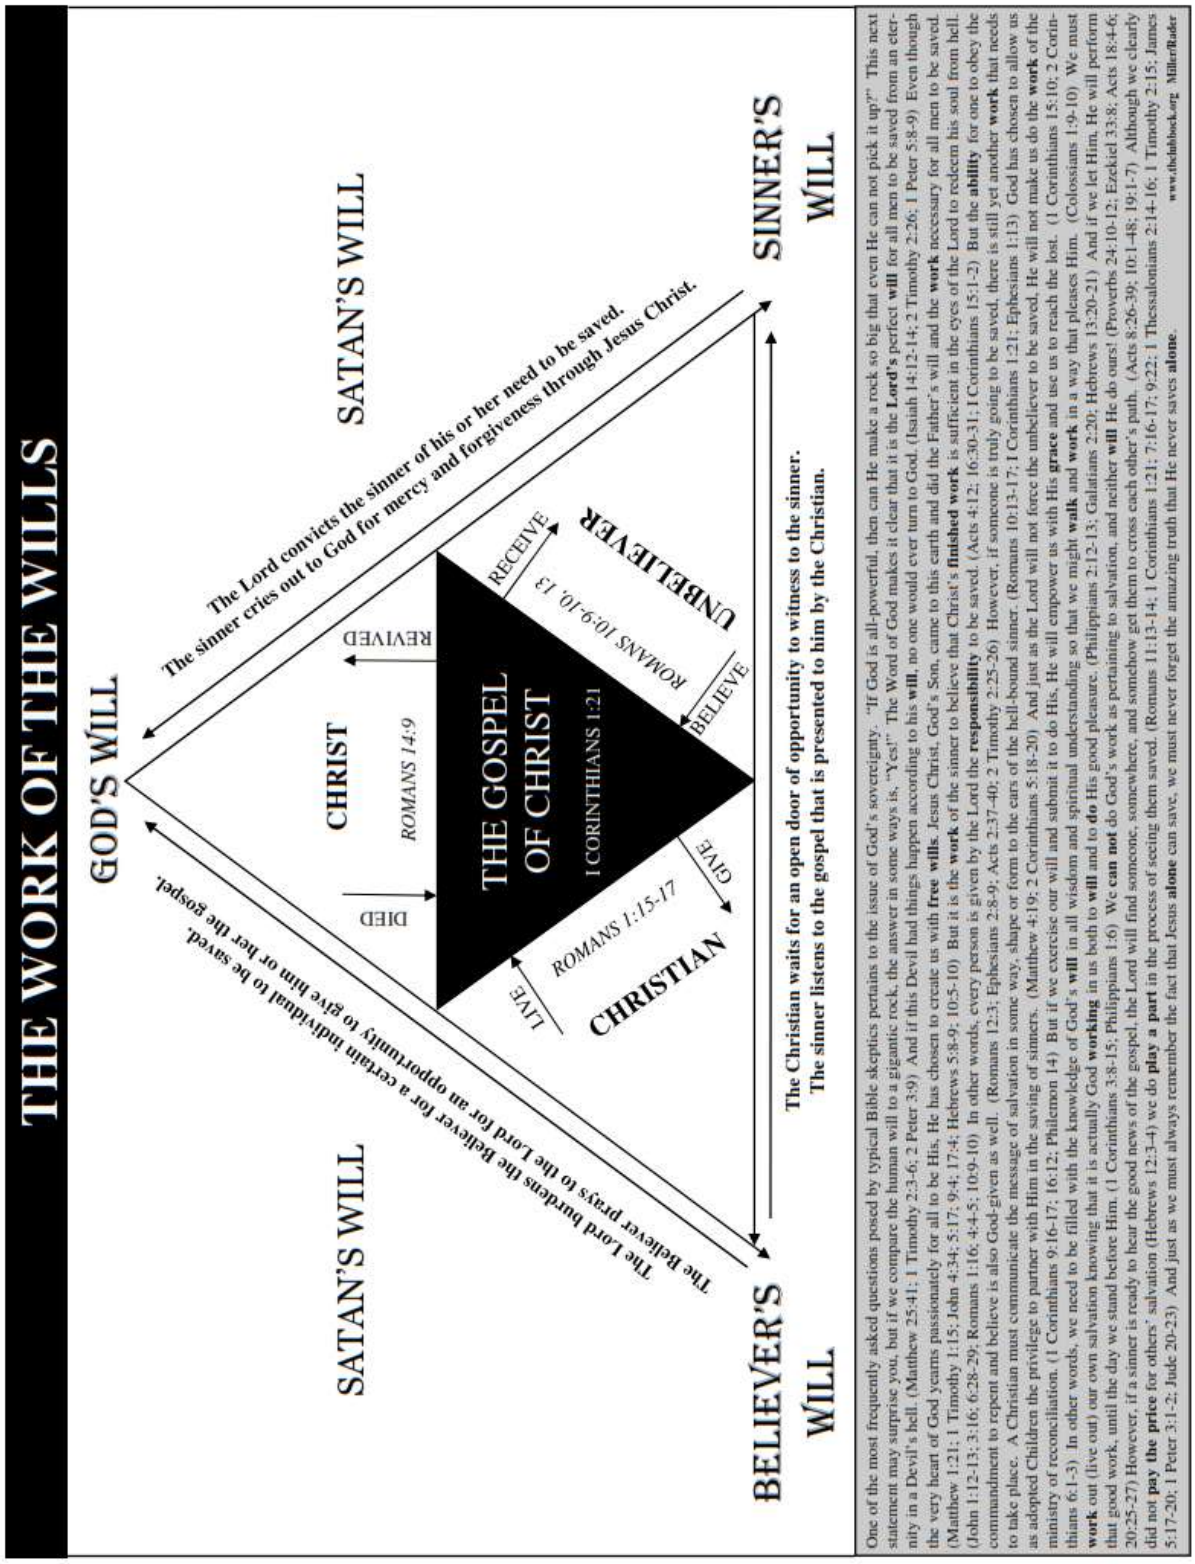
http://www.epm.org/blog/2014/Oct/17/label-berean

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Sovereignty of God vs Free Will

How does God's sovereignty work together with free will?

Answer: It is impossible for us to fully understand the dynamics of a holy God molding and shaping the will of man. Scripture is clear that God knows the future (Matthew 6:8; Psalm 139:1-4) and has total sovereign control over all things (Colossians 1:16-17; Daniel 4:35). The Bible also says that we must choose God or be eternally separated from Him. We are held responsible for our actions (Romans 3:19; 6:23; 9:19-21). How these facts work together is impossible for a finite mind to comprehend (Romans 11:33-36).



People can take one of two extremes in regard to this question. Some emphasize the sovereignty of God to the point that human beings are little more than robots simply doing what they have been sovereignly programmed to do. Others emphasize free will to the point of God not having complete control and/or knowledge of all things. Neither of these positions is biblical. The truth is that God does not violate our wills by choosing us and redeeming us. Rather, He changes our hearts so that our wills choose Him. “We love Him because He first loved us” (1 John 4:19), and “You did not choose me, but I chose you” (John 15:16).

What are we to do then? First, we are to trust in the Lord, knowing that He is in control (Proverbs 3:5-6). God’s sovereignty is supposed to be a comfort to us, not an issue to be concerned about or debate over. Second, we are to live our lives making wise decisions in accordance with God’s Word (2 Timothy 3:16-17; James 1:5). There will be no excuses before God for why we chose to disobey Him. We will have no one to blame but ourselves for our sin. Last but not least, we are to worship the Lord, praising Him that He is so wonderful, infinite, powerful, full of grace and mercy—and sovereign.

[Source: http://www.gotquestions.org/free-will-sovereign.html]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Work of the Wills - Chart

[Source: http://www.tbclubbock.org/Resources/Charts/The_Work_of_the_Wills.pdf]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

SOVEREIGNTY OF GOD VS FREE WILL OF MAN

INTRODUCTION

The best place to start here is with definitions.

SOVEREIGN – Possessing supreme dominion and power above all. God's absolute right to do all things according to His own good pleasure.

FREE WILL – Having both the ability and the will to make a free choice. Specifically in this context, the question is "does man have BOTH the ability and will to freely choose salvation from God?"

QUESTIONS – On a scale of 1 to 10, how much sovereignty does God have? If God is fully sovereign and ordains everything, can man truly have a free will? If God is not fully sovereign, can He truly know future things or make promises that cannot be broken? Respectfully, I'm not interested in the 1,001 opinions that are out there – I'm specifically concerned about what the Bible teaches on the subject.

To that end, this document lists verses that both implicitly and explicitly teach of God's sovereignty and man's free will on the question of salvation. It also lists a few verses that seem to negate God's sovereignty and negate man's free will. The verses are not exhaustive, but demonstrate Biblical thinking and consistency on these issues. If we bother to separate the explicit and implicit verses on this subject, we'll see a very consistent Biblical pattern emerge.

Continue with Chart on next page…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

CHART

	Implicit Positive	Explicit Positive		Implicit Negative	Explicit Negative
God's Sovereignty	Verses that imply God is sovereign Gen 18:14 Ex 4:11 Eccl 7:13-14 Jer 32:27 Lam 3:37-38 Amos 3:6 Rom 9:19	Verses that explicitly state God is sovereign Ex 4:11 Deut 32:39 2 Chr 20:6 Ps 103:19 Ps 115:3 Ps 135:6 Isa 45:5-7 Isa 46:10 Dan 4:35 Luke 1:37 Acts 4:27-28 Acts 17:26 Rev 17:17		Verses that imply God is not sovereign Gen 6:6 Ex 32:14 1 Sam 15:11 2 Sam 24:16 Jonah 3:10	Verses that explicitly state God is not sovereign (No verses!)
Man's Free Will	Verses that imply Man has free will Deut 30:19 Josh 24:15 John 3:16 John 5:40 Acts 2:21 Acts 3:19 Acts 16:31 Rev 22:17	Verses that explicitly state Man has free will (No verses!)		Verses that imply Man does not have free will Ex 10:1-2 Ex 12:36 Ex 14:17 Deut 2:30 Deut 29:4 Josh 24:19 2 Chr 25:20 Ps 105:25 Isa 44:28 Isa 63:17	Verses that explicitly state Man does not have free will Prov 21:1 Isa 6:10 Eze 36:26-27 Mark 4:11-12 John 6:44 John 6:65 John 8:43 John 10:26 John 12:39-40 Rom 6:17 Rom 8:7-8 Rom 9:18 Rom 11:8 Rev 17:17

Here are the verses listed in the above table…

Verses that imply God is Sovereign

Gen 18:14 Is anything too hard for the Lord? At the appointed time I will return to you, about this time next year, and Sarah shall have a son."

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Ex 4:11 Then the Lord said to him, “Who has made man’s mouth? Who makes him mute, or deaf, or seeing, or blind? Is it not I, the Lord?

Eccl 7:13-14 Consider the work of God: who can make straight what He has made crooked? In the day of prosperity be joyful, and in the day of adversity consider: God has made the one as well as the other, so that man may not find out anything that will be after him.

Jer 32:27 “Behold, I am the Lord, the God of all flesh. Is anything too hard for me?

Lam 3:37-38 Who has spoken and it came to pass, unless the Lord has commanded it? Is it not from the mouth of the Most High that good and bad come?

Amos 3:6 Is a trumpet blown in a city, and the people are not afraid? Does disaster come to a city, unless the Lord has done it?

Rom 9:19 You will say to me then, “Why does He still find fault? For who can resist His will?”

Verses that explicitly state God is Sovereign

Exod 4:11 Then the Lord said to him, “Who has made man’s mouth? Who makes him mute, or deaf, or seeing, or blind? Is it not I, the Lord?

Deut 32:39 See now that I, even I, am He, and there is no god beside me; I kill and I make alive; I wound and I heal; and there is none that can deliver out of my hand.

2 Chr 20:6 and said, “O Lord, God of our fathers, are you not God in heaven? You rule over all the kingdoms of the nations. In your hand are power and might, so that none is able to withstand You.

Ps 103:19 The Lord has established His throne in the heavens, and His kingdom rules over all.

Ps 115:3 Our God is in the heavens; He does all that He pleases.

Ps 135:6 Whatever the Lord pleases, He does, in heaven and on earth, in the seas and all deeps.

Isa 45:5-7 I am the Lord, and there is no other, besides Me there is no God; I equip you, though you do not know me, that people may know, from the rising of the sun and from the west, that there is none

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

besides Me; I am the Lord, and there is no other. I form light and create darkness, I make well-being and create calamity, I am the Lord, who does all these things.

Isa 46:10 Declaring the end from the beginning and from ancient times things not yet done, saying, 'My counsel shall stand, and I will accomplish all My purpose,'

Dan 4:35 All the inhabitants of the earth are accounted as nothing, and He does according to His will among the host of heaven and among the inhabitants of the earth; and none can stay His hand or say to Him, "What have you done?"

Luke 1:37 For nothing will be impossible with God.

Acts 4:27-28 For truly in this city there were gathered together against Your holy servant Jesus, whom You anointed, both Herod and Pontius Pilate, along with the Gentiles and the peoples of Israel, to do whatever Your hand and Your plan had predestined to take place.

Acts 17:26 And He made from one man every nation of mankind to live on all the face of the earth, having determined allotted periods and the boundaries of their dwelling place

Rev 17:17 For God has put it into their hearts to carry out His purpose by being of one mind and handing over their royal power to the beast, until the words of God are fulfilled.

Verses that imply God is not Sovereign

Gen 6:6 And the Lord was sorry that He had made man on the earth, and it grieved Him to His heart.

Exod 32:14 And the Lord relented from the disaster that He had spoken of bringing on His people.

1 Sam 15:11 "I regret that I have made Saul king, for he has turned back from following Me and has not performed My commandments." And Samuel was angry, and he cried to the Lord all night.

2 Sam 24:16 And when the angel stretched out his hand toward Jerusalem to destroy it, the Lord relented from the calamity and said to the angel who was working destruction among the people, "It is enough; now stay your hand." And the angel of the Lord was by the threshing floor of Araunah the Jebusite.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Jonah 3:10 When God saw what they did, how they turned from their evil way, God relented of the disaster that He had said He would do to them, and He did not do it.

Verses that explicitly state God is not Sovereign

(no verses found)

Verses that imply Man has Free Will

Deut 30:19 I call heaven and earth to witness against you today, that I have set before you life and death, blessing and curse. Therefore choose life, that you and your offspring may live.

Josh 24:15 And if it is evil in your eyes to serve the Lord, choose this day whom you will serve, whether the gods your fathers served in the region beyond the River, or the gods of the Amorites in whose land you dwell. But as for me and my house, we will serve the Lord.

John 3:16 For God so loved the world, that He gave His only Son, that whoever believes in Him should not perish but have eternal life.

John 5:40 Yet you refuse to come to me that you may have life.

Acts 2:21 And it shall come to pass that everyone who calls upon the name of the Lord shall be saved.

Acts 3:19 Repent therefore, and turn again, that your sins may be blotted out.

Acts 16:31 And they said, “Believe in the Lord Jesus, and you will be saved, you and your household.”

Rev 22:17 The Spirit and the Bride say, “Come.” And let the one who hears say, “Come.” And let the one who is thirsty come; let the one who desires take the water of life without price.

Verses that explicitly state Man has Free Will

(no verses found – except maybe Gen 2:16, but that was before the fall.)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Verses that imply Man does not have Free Will

Exod 10:1-2 Then the Lord said to Moses, "Go in to Pharaoh, for I have hardened his heart and the heart of his servants, that I may show these signs of mine among them, and that you may tell in the hearing of your son and of your grandson how I have dealt harshly with the Egyptians and what signs I have done among them, that you may know that I am the Lord."

Exod 12:36 And the Lord had given the people favor in the sight of the Egyptians, so that they let them have what they asked. Thus they plundered the Egyptians.

Exod 14:17 And I will harden the hearts of the Egyptians so that they shall go in after them, and I will get glory over Pharaoh and all his host, his chariots, and his horsemen.

Deut 2:30 But Sihon the king of Heshbon would not let us pass by him, for the Lord your God hardened his spirit and made his heart obstinate, that He might give him into your hand, as He is this day.

Deut 29:4 But to this day the Lord has not given you a heart to understand or eyes to see or ears to hear.

Josh 24:19 But Joshua said to the people, "You are not able to serve the Lord, for He is a holy God. He is a jealous God; He will not forgive your transgressions or your sins. (Note – this is 5 verses after "Choose this day whom you will serve…")

2 Chr 25:20 But Amaziah would not listen, for it was of God, in order that He might give them into the hand of their enemies, because they had sought the gods of Edom.

Ps 105:25 He turned their hearts to hate His people, to deal craftily with His servants.

Isa 44:28 Who says of Cyrus, 'He is My shepherd, and he shall fulfill all My purpose'; saying of Jerusalem, 'She shall be built,' and of the temple, 'Your foundation shall be laid.'"

Isa 63:17 O Lord, why do you make us wander from your ways and harden our heart, so that we fear you not? Return for the sake of your servants, the tribes of your heritage.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Verses that explicitly state Man does not have Free Will Prov 21:1 The king's heart is a stream of water in the hand of the Lord; He turns it wherever He will.

Isa 6:10 Make the heart of this people dull, and their ears heavy, and blind their eyes; lest they see with their eyes, and hear with their ears, and understand with their hearts, and turn and be healed. (Note – this is the 3rd most frequently quoted passage in the NT)

Ezek 36:26-27 And I will give you a new heart, and a new spirit I will put within you. And I will remove the heart of stone from your flesh and give you a heart of flesh. And I will put my Spirit within you, and cause you to walk in My statutes and be careful to obey My rules.

Mark 4:11-12 And He said to them, "To you has been given the secret of the kingdom of God, but for those outside everything is in parables, so that "they may indeed see but not perceive, and may indeed hear but not understand, lest they should turn and be forgiven."

John 6:44 No one can come to me unless the Father who sent me draws him. And I will raise him up on the last day.

John 6:65 And He said, "This is why I told you that no one can come to Me unless it is granted him by the Father."

John 8:43 Why do you not understand what I say? It is because you cannot bear to hear my word.

John 10:26 But you do not believe because you are not part of my flock.

John 12:39-40 Therefore they could not believe. For again Isaiah said, "He has blinded their eyes and hardened their heart, lest they see with their eyes, and understand with their heart, and turn, and I would heal them."

Rom 6:17 But thanks be to God, that you who were once slaves of sin have become obedient from the heart to the standard of teaching to which you were committed,

Rom 8:7-8 For the mind that is set on the flesh is hostile to God, for it does not submit to God's law; indeed, it cannot. Those who are in the flesh cannot please God.

Rom 9:18 So then He has mercy on whomever He wills, and He hardens whomever He wills.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Rom 11:8 As it is written, “God gave them a spirit of stupor, eyes that would not see and ears that would not hear, down to this very day.”

Rev 17:17 For God has put it into their hearts to carry out His purpose by being of one mind and handing over their royal power to the beast, until the words of God are fulfilled.

ANALYSIS

On the question of God’s Sovereignty vs Man’s Free Will, I think it’s critical to differentiate between verses that imply something and verses that explicitly teach something. I think it’s beneficial to break down our research into 8 distinct categories to see what the Bible teaches us on the issue as a whole:

A. Verses that imply God is sovereign
B. Verses that explicitly teach God is sovereign
C. Verses that imply God is NOT sovereign
D. Verses that explicitly teach God is NOT sovereign
E. Verses that imply Man has free will
F. Verses that explicitly teach Man has free will G. Verses that imply Man has NO free will
H. Verses that explicitly teach Man has NO free will

If we grant full weight to the verses that imply a conclusion and assume them to be of equal standing as the verses that explicitly teach a conclusion, we’ll run into contradictions and illogical paradoxes. Instead, we need our thoughts to be first shaped by explicit verses, and then use the implicit verses to flesh out “the rest of the story”.

Here’s why the distinction between explicit and implicit verses is so critical:

– There are a few verses (only a few) that say that God ‘repents’, ‘is sorry’, ‘changes His mind’, etc, and therefore imply that God is not sovereign (Gen 6:6; Exod 32:14; 1 Sam 15:11; 2 Sam 24:16; Jonah 3:10). These are the verses that fall into Category C. Christians (except people like Gregory Boyd) reject these verses as instructive on the nature and character of God for two reasons: 1. There are no verses that explicitly teach God is not sovereign (Category D), 2. Because if God is not fully sovereign, then He can't know the future, and can't make promises (because He can't control the future). In short, He is a small God, no bigger than the gods of the Egyptians, Canaanites, Babylonians, etc.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

– There are a number of verses (quite a lot) that explicitly teach, in no uncertain terms, that God is sovereign and that there is no one or no thing that is superior or even comparable. Category B, if you will. (this is only a short list: Exod 4:11; Deut 32:39; 2 Chr 20:6; Ps 103:19; Ps 115:3; Ps 135:6; Isa 45:5-7; Isa 46:10; Dan 4:35; Luke 1:37; Acts 4:27-28; Acts 17:26; Rev 17:17). With these verses in hand, the faithful Bible interpreter must therefore conclude that the few previous verses that imply God is not sovereign must give way to the plentiful verses that explicitly teach that God is sovereign and is therefore in complete control of the universe He created. Usually, we write off the former verses as 'anthropomorphic' and move on. If the former verses were explicit in teaching that God is not sovereign, then we'd have a real pickle on our hands. Thankfully, they only imply.

– There are a number of verses that say Man needs to choose God, and therefore many of us conclude that man is freely capable of doing so. It is my position that all of these verses in the Bible, without exception, only imply that man is free to choose, and do not explicitly teach, in no uncertain terms, that man is freely able to choose God. Every verse I can find corroborates that premise. If this is a deliberate recurring theme of the Biblical authors, then it begs the question: does man truly have free will to choose or reject God of his own volition?

– Lastly, there are a number of verses that explicitly teach, in no uncertain terms, that man, left to his own devices is incapable of choosing God or doing anything that pleases God, and furthermore, any time he does something that pleases God, it is God working in him to do those things (this is a short list: Prov 21:1; Isa 6:10; Ezek 36:26-27; Mark 4:11-12; John 6:44; John 6:65; John 8:43; John 10:26; John 12:39-40; Rom 6:17; Rom 8:7-8; Rom 9:18; Rom 11:8; Rev 17:17).

As with the question of God's sovereignty, explicit verses against man's free will cannot be brushed aside. Whatever our conclusion on the issue, these explicit verses must be prioritized over implicit verses in order for us to have a Biblical understanding of the topic at hand. To this end, the chart I gave out helps show the consistency of Biblical teaching on God's sovereignty vs man's free will.

I think the best way to harmonize these verses is to conclude that God saves whomsoever He wills regardless of their action/choice (Rom 9:11, 18), and He "borns them again" [sic] before they can have the sense to believe in Christ. This is, in a nutshell, Jesus' answer to Nicodemus's question about how a man can be born again. This idea is also taught by Moses (Deut 30:6), Ezekiel 11:19-20; Ezekiel 36:26-27, Jeremiah 32:39 and more. This is why Jesus said "What!? You're a teacher of the Jews yet you don't understand how the Holy Spirit works?" We would do well to take note.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

To make matters worse, this idea of God's sovereignty in DELIBERATELY limiting/rejecting man's choice is shown not only in Pharaoh, but in many other places as well: Deut 2:30, Deut 29:4, Josh 11:19, Isa 6:9-10 (the 3rd most frequently quoted passage in the NT!), Isa 29:9-10, Isa 63:17, Isa 29, Rom 11:7-10, 2 Cor 3:15, 2 Thess 2:10-12 (and there are plenty more). If we cling to the idea of man's free will, we're stuck in a pickle trying to explain why God continually deliberately hardens, blinds and deafens people (and their children/grandchildren! Isa 6:10). If we try to explain it by saying that they did it first so He's giving them more of what they asked for (which is what I used to say), then we're stuck explaining how He could then say that He wills that no human should perish. Interpreted as such, this one verse stating that God wills that no one should perish stands in stark opposition to the myriad of verses that say and demonstrate otherwise. (Clearly, it needs to be re-interpreted and understood in a way that is consistent with the rest of the Bible.) And what do we do about the children and grandchildren of those who have been deafened/blinded/hardened to God's Word? Is 6 says that Isaiah's message was to last till the Redeemer comes and stands alone. Best case scenario, that's 750 years (or longer, if you take v 13 to be a future event). But either way you slice it, that's an awful lot of hard hearts – hearts unable to "see/hear/believe God's Word lest they repent and I should heal them". Hearts that, in the final analysis, really don't have much of a choice.

On the flip-side, if we simplified the question into two lists (one about God's sovereignty vs one about man's free will), we'll look at verses that talk about God 'repenting', 'being sorry', 'changing His mind' and conclude that these verses teach us about the nature and character of God. We then become candidates for believing grave errors and heresies, much like Gregory Boyd, who teaches "Open Theism" – that God does not know all things of the future and that the future is subject to change w/o God's knowledge. This is patently ludicrous on the face of it, even without looking at the verses that explicitly negate this nonsense: how can God make promises based on His immutable character if He can't control the future? How can He claim that events are predestined if the future is subject to change beyond His control? (Imagine if God promised a plague in 3 days, but Pharaoh repented on the 2nd day. What then? Or imagine if a free-will Pilate had chosen to place his faith in the Truth of Christ, repented and snuck Jesus out of the praetorium so He wouldn't be handed over to the Jews to be crucified? Would Jesus then have to wait 7 years and then try again to be crucified? And if we say "if Judas/Pilate/Annas didn't do it, someone else would have", then we're only playing a mental shell game and dodging the real question of God's sovereignty.) The problems with Open Theism are myriad, and I'm saddened that so many people willingly follow the likes of Gregory Boyd. Thankfully, people of his ilk are not as popular as they were 10 years ago.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

So.. back to the question at hand: if we can find verses that, like the verses on God's sovereignty, explicitly teach, in no uncertain terms that man has free will on the question of salvation, I'm very interested. But so far, I can't find them. Until then, I'm convinced that, like Martin Luther taught, man's "free will" is in bondage: until the Holy Spirit rips us from death and plunges us into life, we remain slaves to our lusts, inescapably bound to sin (Rom 8:1-9; Heb 2:14-16).

But our pride convinces us we truly have free will.

[Source: http://www.linearconcepts.com/theology/sovereignty]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Sovereign Plan of God - an interesting perspective of history which takes into consideration both the will of God and the will of man.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

[Source: http://www.tbclubbock.org/Resources/Charts/The_Soverign_Plan_of_God.pdf]

Divine Sovereignty vs. Human Responsibility (also downloadable as a Word doc file) https://bible.org/article/divine-sovereignty-vs-human-responsibility

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Short Summary of Belief Systems:

https://www.reddit.com/r/Christianity/comments/2xcx2b/calvinism_vs_open_theism_vs_molinism_vs/

Calvinism--God ordained every future event before creation. God selected only certain individuals for salvation, based on nothing good or bad within the person. God changes the pre-selected people's hearts to love God. God's saving grace is irresistible. Jesus only died for the ones who had been pre-selected for salvation.

Hyper-Calvinism--In addition to the above, God also actively causes people to sin or go to Hell.

Moderate Calvinism/Arminianism--God sees the future. He knows who will respond to the Gospel and be saved. God enlightens sinners first, thus granting them the same freedom of choice that Adam had in the beginning. People can either accept or reject Jesus. Jesus died for all people, but it only applies to those who respond in faith.

Open Theism--It is impossible for God to know the future free will choices of humans in advance. God knows everything which can be known. But this simply cannot be known in advance. So this is why God tests people, to see how they will respond. When God prophesies, He is not looking to see the future, He is stepping in to actively cause those events to take place.

Selective Open Theism--God can choose to see any detail of the future that He desires. He has that ability. However, just as God chooses not to always use His full destructive power, God selectively chooses which things He wants to know about the future and which He does not.

Molinism--God knows every possibility of every circumstance and every different choice a human might make. God chooses to allow only one of these potential choices to occur. Or He knows which one is more likely to occur. God maneuvers people's circumstances to cause people to make certain choices.

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Calvinism vs. Arminianism vs. Open Theism vs. Molinism

Do you consider yourself a Calvinist, Hyper-Calvinist, Moderate Calvinist, Arminian, Open Theist, Molinist, or something different?

Short Summary of Belief Systems:

Calvinism--God ordained every future event before creation. God selected only certain individuals for salvation, based on nothing good or bad within the person. God changes the pre-selected people's hearts to love God. God's saving grace is irresistible. Jesus only died for the ones who had been pre-selected for salvation.

Hyper-Calvinism--In addition to the above, God also actively causes people to sin or go to Hell.

Moderate Calvinism/Arminianism--God sees the future. He knows who will respond to the Gospel and be saved. God enlightens sinners first, thus granting them the same freedom of choice that Adam had in the beginning. People can either accept or reject Jesus. Jesus died for all people, but it only applies to those who respond in faith.

Open Theism--It is impossible for God to know the future free will choices of humans in advance. God knows everything which can be known. But this simply cannot be known in advance. So this is why God tests people, to see how they will respond. When God prophesies, He is not looking to see the future, He is stepping in to actively cause those events to take place.

Selective Open Theism--God can choose to see any detail of the future that He desires. He has that ability. However, just as God chooses not to always use His full destructive power, God selectively chooses which things He wants to know about the future and which He does not.

Molinism--God knows every possibility of every circumstance and every different choice a human might make. God chooses to allow only one of these potential choices to occur. Or He knows which one is more likely to occur. God maneuvers people's circumstances to cause people to make certain choices.

http://www.reddit.com/r/Christianity/comments/2xcx2b/calvinism_vs_open_theism_vs_molinism_vs/

[Reformed view of Grace] You're dead at the bottom of the sea, lungs full of water. God jumps in, pulls you up, and makes you alive again — and he does so because of his great love. We are entirely at the mercy of God's grace to rescue us.

http://www.faithstreet.com/onfaith/2014/10/23/10-things-i-wish-everyone-knew-about-reformed-theology/34667

Molinism vs. Calvinism:

For example, the Westminster Confession (Sect. III) declares that God from all eternity did by the most wise and holy counsel of his own will, freely and unchangeably ordain whatsoever comes to pass; yet so as thereby neither is God the author of sin; nor is violence offered to the will of creatures, nor is the liberty or contingency of second causes taken away, but rather established.

Now this is precisely what the Molinist believes! The Confession affirms God's preordination of everything that comes to pass as well as the liberty and contingency of the creaturely will, so that God is not the author of sin. It is a tragedy that in rejecting middle knowledge Reformed divines have cut themselves off from the most perspicuous explanation of the coherence of this wonderful confession…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

…So why do so many intelligent and faithful Christian leaders buy into Calvinism? I think that the sort of Calvinism represented by the statement quoted above from the Westminster Confession is a fair summary of Scripture's teaching and therefore should be believed. It's only when one goes beyond it to try to resolve the mystery by embracing determinism and compatibilism that one gets into trouble. So insofar as these Christian leaders are content to remain with the mystery, I think theirs is a reasonable position. The vast majority of them have probably little understanding of Molinism and so are just insufficiently informed to make a decision.

http://www.reasonablefaith.org/molinism-vs-calvinism http://thoughtstheological.com/calvinism-molinism-arminianism-and-open-theism-monergismsynergism-at-the-macro-and-micro-levels/

Middle Knowledge
http://www.reasonablefaith.org/middle-knowledge

Middle knowledge is a form of knowledge first attributed to God by the sixteenth century Jesuit theologian Luis de Molina (pictured to the left). It is best characterized as God's prevolitional knowledge of all true counterfactuals of creaturely freedom. This knowledge is seen by its proponents as the key to understanding the compatibility of divine providence and creaturely (libertarian) freedom (see Free Will).

Middle knowledge is so named because it comes between natural and free knowledge in God's deliberations regarding the creative process. According to the theory, middle knowledge is like natural knowledge in that it is prevolitional, or prior to God's choice to create. This, of course, also means that the content of middle knowledge is true independent of God's will and therefore, He has no control over it. Yet, it is not the same as natural knowledge because, like free knowledge, its content is contingent. The doctrine of middle knowledge proposes that God has knowledge of metaphysically necessary states of affairs via natural knowledge, of what He intends to do via free knowledge, and in addition, of what free creatures would do if they were instantiated (via middle knowledge). Thus, the content of middle knowledge is made up of truths which refer to what would be the case if various states of affairs were to obtain.

http://www.iep.utm.edu/middlekn/

Middle Knowledge is that knowledge of God dealing with what individuals will do in a given set of circumstances. God has an infinite set of potential circumstances that could exist and knows all actual choices that would be made by individuals in each set.

https://carm.org/dictionary-middle-knowledge

Molinism, named after 16th Century Jesuit theologian Luis de Molina, is a religious doctrine which attempts to reconcile the providence of God with human free will. William Lane Craig and Alvin Plantinga are some of its best known advocates today, though other important Molinists include Alfred Freddoso and Thomas Flint. In basic terms, Molinists hold that in addition to knowing everything that does or will happen, God also knows what His creatures would freely choose if placed in any circumstance.

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Molinism

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Open Theism

Wikipedia: Open theism, also known as openness theology and free will theism, is a theological movement that has developed within evangelical and post-evangelical Protestant Christianity as a response to ideas related to the synthesis of Greek philosophy and Christian theology. It is typically advanced as a biblically motivated and philosophically consistent theology of human and divine freedom (in the libertarian sense), with an emphasis on what this means for the content of God's foreknowledge and exercise of God's power.

In short, open theism says that since God and humans are free, God's knowledge is dynamic and God's providence flexible. While several versions of traditional theism picture God's knowledge of the future as a singular, fixed trajectory, open theism sees it as a plurality of branching possibilities, with some possibilities becoming settled as time moves forward. Thus, the future as well as God's knowledge of it is open (hence "open" theism). Other versions of classical theism hold that God fully determines the future, entailing that there is no free choice (the future is closed). Yet other versions of classical theism hold that even though there is freedom of choice, God's omniscience necessitates God foreknowing what free choices are made (God's foreknowledge is closed). Open theists hold that these versions of classical theism are out of sync with:

1. the biblical concept of God
2. the biblical understanding of divine and creaturely freedom and/or result in incoherence. Open Theists tend to emphasize that God's most fundamental character trait is love, and that this trait is unchangeable. They also (in contrast to traditional theism) tend to hold that the biblical portrait is of a God deeply moved by creation, experiencing a variety of feelings in response to it.

Comparison of open and Reformed theism

The following chart compares beliefs about key doctrines as stated by open theists and Calvinists after "the period of controversy" between adherents of the two theisms began in 1994. During this period the "theology of open theism . . . rocked the evangelical world".

Doctrine	Open Theism	Calvinism
Scripture (the Bible). "In the Christian tradition, the Old and the New Testaments are considered Holy Scripture in that they are, or convey, the self-revelation of God."	"Committed to affirming the infallibility of Scripture"	Scripture is "the infallible Word of God".
God's Power. "God's power is limited only by God's own nature and not by any external force."	"God is all-powerful."	"God is all-powerful."
God's Sovereignty. "God's ultimate Lordship and rule over the universe".	Portraying God as ordaining whatever happens reduces "humans to robots".	"Nothing that exists or occurs falls outside God's ordaining will. Nothing, including no evil person or thing or event or deed."
God's Perfection. "God as lacking nothing and free of all moral imperfection".	Believes in "(because Scripture teaches) the absolute perfection of God."	Believes that, because "Scripture says" it, God "will always do what is right".

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

God's Foreknowledge. "God's knowing things and events before they happen in history".	"God is omniscient" about "settled" reality, but the future that God "leaves open" can be known only as open "possibility" without specific foreknowledge.	Classically Augustinian-Calvinist view: "God knows the future because he preordains it."
The Fall. "The disobedience and sin of Adam and Eve that caused them to lose the state of innocence in which they had been created. This event plunged them and all mankind into a state of sin and corruption."	God "does not unilaterally and irrevocably decide what to do". God's decisions are influenced by "human attitudes and responses".	"Ultimate reason" for the Fall was "God's ordaining will".
Free Will. "The term seeks to describe the free choice of the will which all persons possess. Theological debates have arisen over the ways and to the extent to which sin has affected the power to choose good over evil, and hence one's 'free will'."	Promotes incompatibilism, the doctrine that "the agent's power to do otherwise" is "a necessary condition for acting freely".	Promotes compatibilism, the doctrine that "freedom" of the will requires only "the power or ability to do what one will (desire or choose) to do" without constraint or impediment, even if what one wills is determined.
Free Will and God's Sovereignty. A "caustic debate" began about 1990 over "God's sovereignty and human free will".	Saying that God governs human choices reduces "angels or humans to robots in order to attain his objectives."	God governs "the choices of human beings", but without "cancelling [their] freedom and responsibility".
Theodicy issue. "The justification of a deity's justice and goodness in light of suffering and evil".	To meet the "conditions of love", God exercises "general rather than specific sovereignty, which explains why God does not prevent all evil". Also, God "does not completely control or in any sense will evil" because the world is "held hostage to a cosmic evil force".	Because "Scripture says" it, God "will always do what is right".

The term "open theism" was introduced in 1980 with theologian Richard Rice's book The Openness of God: The Relationship of Divine Foreknowledge and Human Free Will. The broader articulation of open theism was given in 1994, when five essays were published by Evangelical scholars (including Rice) under the title The Openness of God. Recent theologians of note espousing this view include: Clark Pinnock (deceased as of 2010), Greg Boyd, Thomas Jay Oord, John E. Sanders, Dallas Willard, Jürgen Moltmann, Richard Rice, C. Peter Wagner, John Polkinghorne, Hendrikus Berkhof, Adrio Konig, Harry Boer, Bethany Sollereder, Matt Parkins, Thomas Finger (Mennonite), W. Norris Clarke (Roman Catholic), Brian Hebblethwaite, Robert Ellis, Kenneth Archer (Pentecostal) Barry Callen (Church of God), Henry Knight III, Gordon Olson, and Winkie Pratney. A significant, growing number of philosophers of religion affirm it: Peter Van Inwagen, Richard Swinburne (Orthodox), William Hasker, David Basinger, Nicholas Wolterstorff, Dean Zimmerman, Timothy O'Connor, James D. Rissler, Keith DeRose, Richard E. Creel, Robin Collins (philosopher/theologian/physicist), J. R. Lucas, Vincent Brümmer, (Roman Catholic), Richard Purtill, A. N. Prior, Alan Rhoda, Jeffrey Koperski, Dale Tuggy, and Keith Ward. Biblical scholars Terence E. Fretheim, Karen Winslow, and John Goldingay affirm it. Others include writers Madeleine L'Engle and Paul C. Borgman, mathematician D.J. Bartholomew and biochemist/theologian Arthur Peacocke.

The dynamic omniscience view has been affirmed by a number of non Christians as well: Cicero (1st century BC) Alexander of Aphrodisias (2nd century) and Porphyry (3rd century). God's statement to Abraham "Now I know that you fear me" (Gen 22:12) was much discussed by Medieval Jewish theologians. Two significant Jewish thinkers who affirmed dynamic omniscience as the proper interpretation of the passage were Ibn Ezra (12th century) and Gersonides (14th century).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Philosophical arguments

Open theists maintain that traditional classical theists hold the classical attributes of God together in an incoherent way. The main classical attributes are as follows:

- All-good: God is the standard of moral perfection, all-benevolent, and perfectly loving.
- Simplicity: God has no parts, cannot be differentiated, and possesses no attribute as distinct from His being.
- Immutability: God cannot change in any respect.
- Impassibility: God cannot be affected by outside forces.
- Omnipresence: God is present everywhere, or more precisely, all things find their location in God.
- Omniscience: God knows absolutely everything: believes all truths and disbelieves all falsehoods. God's knowledge is perfect.
- Omnipotence: God can do anything because he is all-powerful and not limited by external forces.

Contradictions in the traditional attributes are pointed out by open theists and atheists alike. Atheist author and educator George H. Smith writes in his book Atheism: The Case Against God that if God is omniscient, meaning God knows the future, God cannot be omnipotent, meaning God can do anything, because: "If God knew the future with infallible certainty, he cannot change it – in which case he cannot be omnipotent. If God can change the future, however, he cannot have infallible knowledge of it". While this argument has historically been used by some Open Theists, currently most Open Theists affirm that God knows the future perfectly, but simply deny God believes the future is fixed. Such Open Theists would still use the argument if the referent of "the future" is that of a complete and unchanging future. Some traditional theists would respond to the above argument by pointing out that God is the author of the future, and thus there is no more contradiction in saying God knows the future and is sovereign over it than in saying "Shakespeare was free to make Romeo and Juliet as he would, but having made it he is not free to make it different from how he had." However, this response is only available to classical theists who believe God determines the entirety of the future. A traditional theist would also postulate that since God is omniscient, God would also know every possible future. But while this response is available to traditional theists who reject determinism, it creates a problem for traditional freewill theists who think God knows the future to be linear and static, because there would be a mismatch between God's linear understanding of the future and the dynamic, branching future itself.

Open theism also answers the question of how God can be blameless and omnipotent even though evil exists in the world. H. Roy Elseth gives an example of a parent that knows with certainty that his child would go out and murder someone if he was given a gun. Elseth argues that if the parent did give the gun to the child then the parent would be responsible for that crime. However, if God was unsure about the outcome then God would not be culpable for that act; only the one who committed the act would be guilty. This position is, however, dubious, as a parent who knows his child was probable, or likely, or even possibly going to shoot someone would be culpable; and God knew that it was likely that man would sin, and thus God is still culpable. An orthodox Christian might try, on the contrary, seek to ground a Theodicy in the Resurrection, both of Christ and the general Resurrection to come, though this is not the traditional answer to evil. Another position put forth by Orthodox Christians is to point out that God is the ultimate law giver and thus there exists no objective standard of good or evil above God regulating God. Therefore, the so-called problem of evil, which presupposes such an independent standard, is not an objection that a Bible believing Christian has to respond to. (For example, see Gordon Clark "God and Evil Problem Solved")

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Another claim made by open theists is that the traditional understanding of providence is incompatible with a real love relationship with God. It is claimed that for someone to have a real love relationship, it must be give and take. Each member opens themselves up and becomes vulnerable. They point out that God, throughout the Bible, is shown as grieving over Israel's rebellion. They claim that if the future was known to be fixed, then Israel could not have freely chosen to rebel and God could not be genuinely grieving, knowing that this was the only possibility. Israel's actions would have been set in stone millennia before they were ever born. They would have been compelled by fate or providence to take those actions. This would be the same as a relationship between a programmer and computer. Open theists, such as John Sanders, claim that the only way a relationship can be real is if there is freedom to choose.

It should be noted that open theists believe God's infinite intelligence affords him an infinite understanding of all possibilities in the universe. God, therefore, is never caught off-guard by any event which comes to pass, but is perfectly prepared.

Varieties of open theists

Philosopher Alan Rhoda has described several different approaches several open theists have taken with regard to the future and God's knowledge of it.

- Voluntary Nescience: The future is alethically settled but nevertheless epistemically open for God because he has voluntarily chosen not to know truths about future contingents. William Lane Craig holds this position, as did (it is thought) Dallas Willard.
    - William Lane Craig Does Not Like Open Theism
      https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=jmJZLa8LaPI [Video]
    - William Lane Craig – Molinism and Open Theism
      https://www.scribd.com/document/23501343/William-Lane-Craig-Molinism-and-Open-Theism
    - Postmodernism, Open Theism, and Philosophy
      https://www.reasonablefaith.org/media/reasonable-faith-podcast/postmodernism-open-theism-and-philosophy/
- Involuntary Nescience: The future is alethically settled but nevertheless epistemically open for God because truths about future contingents are in principle unknowable. William Hasker, Peter Van Inwagen,[1] and Richard Swinburne espouse this position.
- Non-Bivalentist Omniscience: The future is alethically open and therefore epistemically open for God because propositions about future contingents are neither true nor false. J. R. Lucas and Dale Tuggy espouse this position.
- Bivalentist Omniscience: The future is alethically open and therefore epistemically open for God because propositions asserting of future contingents that they 'will' obtain or that they 'will not' obtain are both false. Instead, what is true is that they 'might and might not' obtain. Greg Boyd and Arthur Prior hold this position."

Criticism

Open theism has been strongly criticized by some Protestant, especially Calvinist, theologians and ministers. Opponents include Bruce A. Ware, Tom Schreiner, John Frame, John Piper, Millard Erickson, and Norman Geisler. Geisler, in his book Creating God in the Image of Man? argues against open theism and in favor of a view which includes all the traditional attributes of God. He quotes Exodus 3:14 ("I am who I am") and claims that it establishes God's aseity. From there, Geisler deduces Simplicity, Necessity, Immutability, Impassibility, Eternity, and Unity. While Open Theists would affirm God's aseity, they would derive this attribute on other grounds, and deny that it entails all the attributes Geisler thinks it does. Geisler also addresses the claims that the Classical attributes were derived from the Greeks with three observations:

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

1. The quest for something unchanging is not bad;
2. The Greeks did not have the same concept of God;
3. Philosophical influences are not wrong in themselves.

An open theist might respond that all such criticisms are misplaced. As to #1, it is not characteristic of open theists to say that the quest for something unchanging is bad. Indeed, open theists believe God's character is unchanging. As to #2, open theists do not characteristically say traditional forms of classical theism have exactly the same concept of God as the Greeks. Rather, they argue that they imported only some unbiblical assumptions from the Greeks. They also point to theologians of the Christian tradition who, throughout history, didn't succumb so strongly to Hellenistic influences. As to #3, open theists don't argue that philosophical influences are bad in themselves. Rather, they argue that some philosophical influences on Christian theology are unbiblical and theologically groundless. Consider John Sanders' statement in The Openness of God: "Christian theology, I am arguing, needs to reevaluate classical theism in light of a more relational metaphysic (not all philosophy is bad!) so that the living, personal, responsive and loving God of the Bible may be spoken of more consistently in our theological reflection..."

Opponents of open theism, both Arminians, and Calvinists, such as John Piper, claim that the verses commonly used by open theists are anthropopathisms (see anthropopathy). They suggest that when God seems to change from action A to action B in response to prayer, action B was the inevitable event all along, and God divinely ordained human prayer as the means by which God actualized that course of events.

They also point to verses that suggest God is immutable, such as:

- Malachi 3:6: For I, the Lord, have not changed; and you, the sons of Jacob, have not reached the end.[54]
- Numbers 23:19: God is not a man that He should lie, nor is He a mortal that He should relent. Would He say and not do, speak and not fulfill?[55][56][57]
- 1Samuel 15:29: And also, the Strength of Israel will neither lie nor repent, for He is not a man to repent."
- Isaiah 46:10: [I] tell the end from the beginning, and from before, what was not done; [I] say, 'My counsel shall stand, and all My desire I will do.'

Those advocating the traditional view see these as the verses that form God's character, and they interpret other verses that say God repents as anthropomorphistic. Authors who claim this can be traced back through Calvin, Luther, Aquinas, Ambrose, and Augustine. Open theists note that there seems to be an arbitrary distinction here between those verses which are merely anthropopathic and others which form God's character. They also note that the immediate sense of the passages addressing God's inalterability ought to be understood in the Hebrew sense of his faithfulness and justice.

Open Theism

http://drjohnsanders.com/open-theism/

Excerpt:

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Open theism is a model of God emphasizing divine love and responsiveness to creatures. The term "open" is used in two important ways: (1) God is open to what creatures do and (2) the future is open in that there is more than one possible future. What we call "the" future is not an already determined blueprint of what will happen—it is not set in stone. Rather, it is like a create your own story book.

It resonates with the spirituality of many Christians throughout the history of the church especially when it comes to prayer. Many Christians feel that our prayers or lack of them can make a difference as to what God does. It also addresses questions about how we should understand God's role in suffering and evil in our lives.

God gives freedom to humans and does not micromanage what happens. God enters into genuine give-and-receive relations with creatures. For example, God truly responds to our prayers. God responds to contingencies and adjusts divine plans, if necessary, in response to our prayers and actions. Though the divine nature does not change, God does have changing emotions, plans, and actions. Also, because God chooses to elicit our free collaboration in divine plans God takes risks that we will act in ways contrary to the divine intentions.

The model arises out of theological traditions that affirm human freewill but modifies them on two key points. First, open theism holds that God is temporal and everlasting rather than timeless (atemporal). Second, because the future exists as possibilities of what might happen God possesses what is called dynamic omniscience in which God has exhaustive knowledge of the past and present and understands "the future" as what might happen. Divine omniscience is dynamic in that God constantly acquires knowledge of which possible future actions creatures select to actualize. The so-called "future" does not exist as a reality and since God knows reality as it is, the future is not known. God is not caught off-guard-since God knows the possibilities and anticipates what we will do. Open theists reject other accounts of divine knowledge such as simple foreknowledge or middle knowledge.

The affirmation of divine temporality and dynamic omniscience are the most controversial elements in this proposal. However, the watershed issue in the debate is not whether God has exhaustive definite foreknowledge of future events but whether God is ever affected by and responds to what we do. This is the same watershed that divides theological determinism (such as Calvinism) from traditional freewill forms of Christianity such as Eastern Orthodoxy, Wesleyanism, and Arminianism.

The name open theism was coined in the 1990's by a group of theologians and philosophers though the view actually existed prior to the time of Jesus and there are Jewish and Islamic varieties as well. Support for the view utilizes reasons from sources such as the Bible, theology, philosophy, and life experiences. Though proponents believe a strong case for open theism can be made, they do not claim that it is the only rational position that Christians can affirm.

Why I Am an Open Theist | Open Theism Series | Part 1 | Jesse Morrell

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=-9fhwaF4p0Y [Video]

Greg Boyd on Open Theism (the open view of the future)

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=SyZQySJeg4g

(Talks about his progression from Calvinism for a couple years, in 1980's then move to Open Theism)

What is Open Theism? (Greg Boyd) (2012) [Recommended]

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=gApXDGjyksw [Video] (< 4 min.)

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Q&A w/ Greg Boyd & Bruxy Cavey - Open Theism, Social Activism/Politics (2016)

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=FDhHwfVwMwc (<9min; Good quick OT explanation in 1st half) [Video]

What Do You Think About Greg Boyd? (Response by Wayne Grudem) (2016)

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=YPgFnvku7qE

Open Theism

https://butbyhisgrace.files.wordpress.com/2011/04/opentheism.pdf [PDF]

Excerpt:

Open Theism is a theological movement that offers a new conception of God and related doctrines. Its proponents consider themselves to be evangelical and are from an Arminian background; however, they move beyond classical Arminianism in certain key doctrinal areas. Open Theism significantly modifies traditional concepts of God as it reexamines and redefines certain key aspects of God's nature and God's relationship with the world.

Defining Open Theism

Where does the term open come from? In what respect is Open Theism "open?" Open Theists have two things in mind when they speak of openness: God is open to the future and the future is open to God. Clark Pinnock explains:

> God rules in such a way as to uphold the created structures and, because he gives liberty to his creatures, is happy to accept the future as open, not closed, and a relationship wit the world that is dynamic, not static. We believe that the Bible presents an open view of God as living and active, involved in history, relating to us and changing in relation to us…. God's openness means that God is open to the changing realities of history, that God cares about us and lets what we do impact him.

More specifically, as Bruce Ware puts it, Open Theism is essentially a model of God and the world "in which the doctrine of divine foreknowledge (i.e., particularly knowledge of future free human choices) is denied so as not to preclude (as they see it) the genuineness of future contingencies and future free human choices. Hence, the future is 'open….'" In other words, the Open model, human free will requires the future's being to a certain extent open, or In other words, on unknowable, which in turn requires God's being open to, or not knowing, certain aspects of the future. God must be open to the future, because the future must be open to God, because man must be free in relation to God. This explains why Open Theism is also known as Free Will Theism, because a certain understanding of human free will figures so prominently in the model…

…

Open Theism offers, against Calvinist and Arminian brands of Classical Theism as well as Process Theism, a provocative model of God, the world, and God's relation to the world. At the heart of Open Theism is a logic that runs something like this:

1. God must be open to the future—that is, He must not know all of it.
2. The previous is true because the future must be open to God—that is, it must not all be knowable, even to God.
3. The previous is true because man must be free in the libertarian sense—that is, in his free choices he must be absolutely autonomous from God's unilateral control.
4. The previous is true because genuine reciprocity of relationship demands it.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

It truly all comes down then, in my opinion, to the principle of reciprocity: the great divine project—that which God wants more than anything else out of this world—is the formation of personal, loving, reciprocal relationships with His creatures. Reciprocity demands libertarian freedom; libertarian freedom demands an unknowable future; and an unknowable future demands a God who cannot know it.

Open Theism – A Review of the Issues

https://adventistbiblicalresearch.org/sites/default/files/pdf/Open%20Theism.pdf [PDF]

Excerpt:

One of the controversies that have created a bit of a stir in evangelical theological circles in recent times is the debate over what has come to be called, among others, "open theism." The term "open theism" is noted to have been introduced in 1980 with the publication of Seventh-day Adventist theologian Richard Rice's Openness of God. The issue was not broadly discussed, however, until 1994 when five essays were published by five Evangelical scholars, including Rice, under the title TheOpenness of God.

The Opennes of God Controversy (by Ligon Duncan) (2001) (Cricitical)

http://old.thirdmill.org/newfiles/jl_duncan/jl_duncan.OpennessofGod.pdf [PDF] [Recommended]

The Opennes of God – Review (2005) [PDF]

https://faculty.gordon.edu/hu/bi/ted_hildebrandt/otesources/02-exodus/text/articles/barrick-opennesofgod-tmsj.pdf

"For those who are thoroughly familiar with the doctrine of God as taught in classical, Reformed orthodoxy and the arguments for it, we recommend the The Openness of God unreservedly as a source of information about open theism."

The Theological Problems with Open Theism

https://pastorbrianchilton.wordpress.com/2014/09/08/the-theological-problems-with-open-theism/

FYI: Series: Examining Jesus by the Historical Method (2016)

https://bellatorchristi.com/series-examining-jesus-by-the-historical-method/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

An Introduction to the Open Theism Controversy (2004)
http://www.spiritandtruth.org/teaching/documents/articles/13/13.pdf [PDF]

See also, "Process Theology & Open Theism: What's the Difference?", in the Process Theology section.

A Critique of Open Theism
http://www.evidenceunseen.com/theology/god/a-critique-of-open-theism/

Includes arguments for and against open theism.

Molinism is not Open Theism: A Critique of Dr. McMahon's Assessment
https://jmatthanbrown.wordpress.com/2009/09/01/molinism-is-not-open-theism-a-critique-of-dr-mcmahon%E2%80%99s-assessment/

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Opennes of God – Does Prayer Change God? (2001)

https://www.tms.edu/m/tmsj12g.pdf [PDF]

A proper understanding of two OT prayers, one by Hezekiah and one by Moses, helps in determining whether prayer is the means by which God gets His will done on earth or the means by which the believer's will is accomplished in heaven. A chronological arrangement of the three records of Hezekiah's prayer in 2 Kings, 2 Chronicles, and Isaiah reveals the arrogance of Hezekiah in his plea for God to heal him. Because Hezekiah missed the opportunity to repent of his self-centered attitude, God revealed that his descendants would become slaves in Babylon, but Hezekiah's arrogance kept him from being concerned about his children and grandchildren. His pride further showed itself in his inability to trust God for defense against the Assyrians. God healed Hezekiah, not so much because of his prayer, but because of the promises that God had made to Hezekiah's ancestors about sustaining the Davidic line of kings. Hezekiah's prayer changed Hezekiah, not God. Moses' prayer in Exodus 32 sought a change from God's expressed intention of putting an end to Israel and starting over again with just Moses. This suggestion was not something that the Lord ever intended to occur; such a course would have voided His expressed purpose for the twelve tribes of Israel (Genesis 49). God did not change His mind regarding His plan for the twelve tribes; He rather altered His timing in order to keep His promises to them. What He did in response to Moses' prayer cannot be taken as normative action. His "change of mind" was a tool to elicit a change of response in Moses. Moses' prayer changed Moses, not God.

McCormack's Barth & Open Theism

Intro: https://anopenorthodoxy.wordpress.com/2014/04/19/mccormack-barth-and-open-theism/

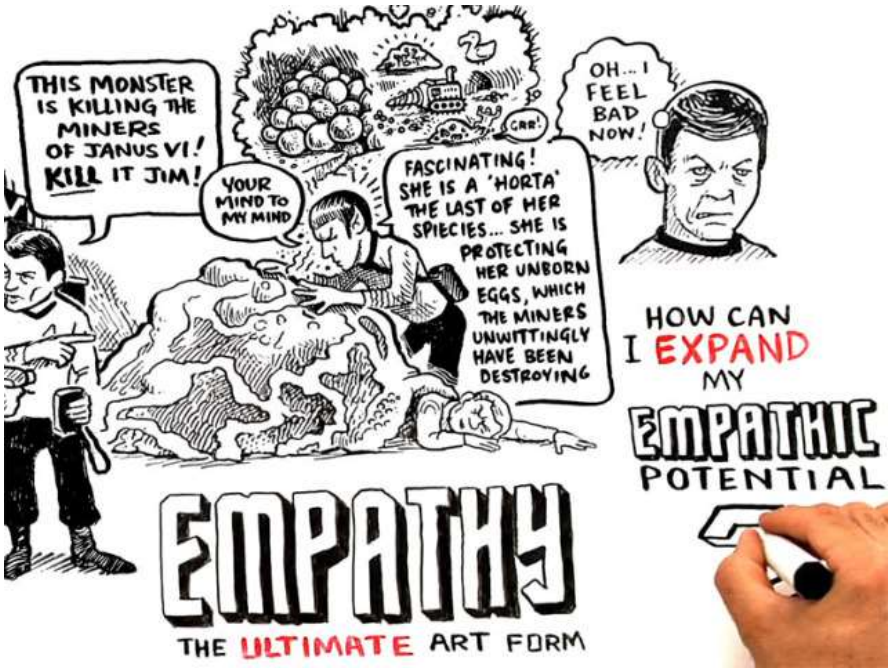
Provides a shortend/summarized form of McCormack's book (Ch. 10) to be covered in Parts 1-3.

Part 1: https://anopenorthodoxy.wordpress.com/2014/04/23/mccormacks-barth-open-theism-part-1/

Summary and highlighting of McCormack's Ch. 10 "The Actuality of God: Karl Barth in Conversation with Open Theism" (in Engaging the Doctrine of God: Contemporary Protestant Perspectives [Baker, 2008])

Part 2: https://anopenorthodoxy.wordpress.com/2014/05/01/mccormacks-barth-open-theism-part-2/

We previously boiled the chapter down to 21 core points which as we understand them essentially reduce to the claim that Christology is why open theism is false. We'll consider McCormack's essential argument.



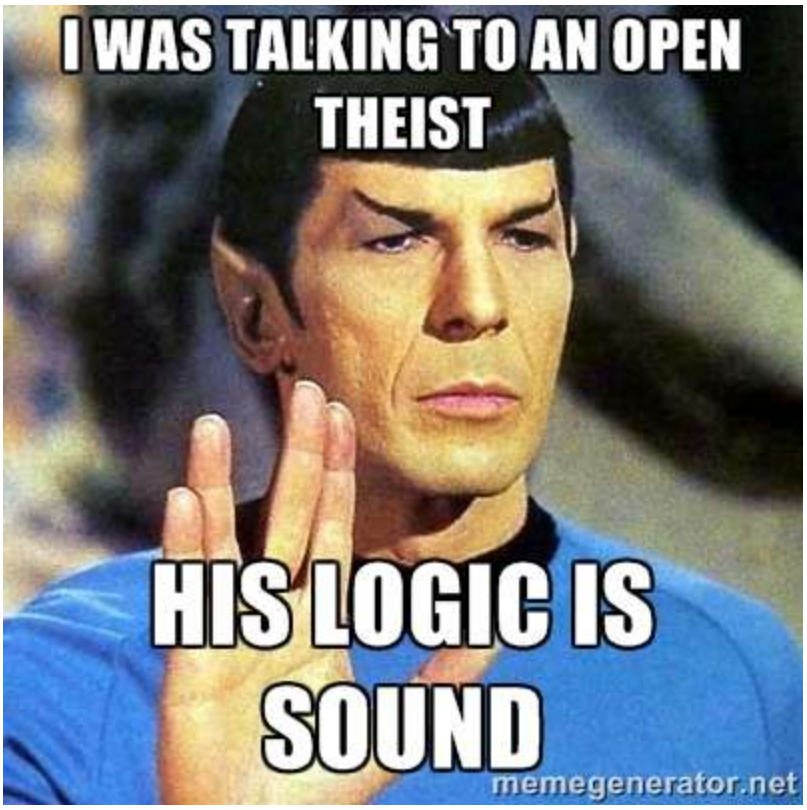
Part 3: https://anopenorthodoxy.wordpress.com/2014/05/01/mccormacks-barth-open-theism-part-2/

Some further comments, explanations and final thoughts.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Experimental Open Theism?—Part 1

Part 1: https://anopenorthodoxy.wordpress.com/2014/05/20/experimental-open-theism-part-1/



Part 2: https://anopenorthodoxy.wordpress.com/2014/05/20/experimental-open-theism-part-2/

Part 3: https://anopenorthodoxy.wordpress.com/2014/05/21/empathetic-open-theism-part-3/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Source: https://openairoutreach.wordpress.com/2014/11/23/funny-christian-bible-memes-calvinism-arminianism-pelagianism-open-theism-etc/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Marvelous Omnipotence of Love

http://www.jesusjazzbuddhism.org/the-marvelous-omnipotence-of-love-john-coltrane-open-theism-and-process-theology.html

Some theological jazz riffs on openness, Influenced by process theology and open theism, In appreciation of the life and music of John Coltran [includes Audio]

Bibliography of Works on Open Theism (2001)

http://www.spiritandtruth.org/teaching/documents/articles/13/13.pdf [PDF]

Jumping Ships from Open Theism to Compatibilism

https://stanrock.net/2015/04/01/jumping-ships-from-open-theism-to-compatibilism/

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Process Theology

Process Theology & Open Theism: What's the Difference? (answer by Greg Boyd) http://reknew.org/2014/03/process-theology-open-theism-whats-the-difference/

Excerpt:

I wrote my doctoral dissertation on Process thought (Trinity and Process) where I critiqued the metaphysics of Charles Hartshorne and tried to demonstrate that one can adopt a system that has all the explanatory power of Process Thought (PT) without its unorthodox implications. The unorthodox implications are these.

- In PT, God exists eternally in relation to a non-divine world. So PT denies "creation ex nihilo"
- In PT, God is bound to metaphysical principles that govern both God and the world. So God isn't able to really interact with the world as a personal being. God must always, of necessity, respond in ways that the metaphysics of the system stipulate. This means…
- In PT God can't intervene in unique ways, like personally answering prayer
- In PT God can't intervene and perform miracles
- In PT God can't become uniquely embodied, as he is in Christ.

These are pretty serious shortcomings. I hope it's clear that PT has got little in common with Open Theism other than that we both believe the future is partly comprised of possibilities. But even here there is a major difference. In Open Theism, God chooses to create a world with an open future, while in PT God has created of necessity.

I am very concerned that so many progressive thinking evangelicals are flirting with Process Thought. It's really not a friendly home for anything like orthodox Christianity. While many find the dynamic and relational ontology of process thought, compelling—I can see how this is attractive— the intrinsic nature of the system is hostile to the Christian faith.

If you want to go deeper on this topic, my book Trinity and Process seeks to clarify all that's positive with PT while avoiding all that's negative. For a succinct summary of some of the shortcomings of PT, see chapter 9 in my book Satan and the Problem of Evil.

Open Theists and Inerrancy Clark Pinnock on the Bible and God (Norman Geisler)
http://normangeisler.com/category/process-theology/

Process Theology in the Church (Homebrewed Christianity; Audio) https://homebrewedchristianity.com/2012/07/14/process-theology-in-the-church/

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Providence Chart: Process Theology and Openness Theology (or Free Will Theism)

MODELS OF PROVIDENCE*

Theology I — J.Q. Martini

Model	Bible	Providence & Freedom	Distinctives	Relation to Future	Evil, Suffering & Prayer	Proponents
Process Theology "Process thought, with its different understanding of perfection, sees the divine creative activity as based upon responsiveness to the world. Since the very meaning of actuality involves internal relatedness, God as an actuality is essentially related to the world. Since actuality as such is partially self-creative, future events are not yet determinate, so that even perfect knowledge cannot know the future, and God does not wholly control the world. Any divine creative influence must be persuasive, not coercive."[1]	N/A (Process is a philosophical theology, based on the philosophy of A.N. Whitehead. As such, biblical support is not foundational to the view. Many, however, have claimed some compatibility with portions of the Bible, including God's changeableness and relation to creation (as in Openness, below) and those suggesting the eternality of matter (e.g., Gen 1[1-2]).	Human freedom is emphasized and imperative to shaping the events of history. God has an aim he is moving history toward and works by persuading people to adopt his plan. He is also moving toward His own end, as a being in process. Providence is very risky. God has insufficient power to control all events so risks the very real possibility of rejection and His plans thwarted.	• All reality (including God) is in process and involved in creative self-determination. • God is essentially related to His creation, which is necessary for Him to be what He is as a creative loving God. • Matter is co-eternal with God	The future is not knowable because it is as yet an undetermined and non-existent reality based on the decisions of free beings (including God). God experiences time and is affected by the events which transpire within time so that the future is both unknowable to God and also not wholly determined by Him.	Evil and suffering are the result of natural causes (in which case, not really evil) and human irresponsibility. Prayer affects God's decisions, but mostly affects the person praying, making them disposed to God's working in their lives.	John B. Cobb, Jr. Charles Hartshorne David Ray Griffin Norman Pittenger Alfred North Whitehead
Openness Theology or Free-Will Theism "Process thought holds that God can't predetermine or foreknow with certainty anything about the distant future. Open theists rather maintain that God can and does predetermine and foreknow whatever he wants to about the future. Indeed, God is so confident in his sovereignty, we hold, he does not need to micromanage everything. He could if he wanted to, but that would demean his sovereignty. So he chooses to leave some of the future open to possibilities, allowing them to be resolved by the decisions of free agents."[2]	Num 14[11-19] Luke 15[7] 1 Kings 20[5] Gen 6[6] 1 Sam 15[10, 35] Jer 3[6-7] An emphasis on verses showing that God experiences change and is affected by His creation, on the conditional nature of predictive prophecy, and that the future is partially open.	God restricts His power in order to enter into relationship with libertarianly free beings (i.e., beings free to do otherwise). God has a plan for creation, and is capable of bringing that plan about, but chooses to do so in relationship with His creation. Free beings (including the angelic realm) are capable of resisting God's will making God's providential care risky. God is infinitely resourceful to bring His plan about despite resistance, and while respecting His creation's libertarian freedom.	• Rejection of both Calvinist determinism and Arminian foreknowledge. • Humans are libertarianly free. • The future is partly unknown to God—God knows what He will do, but cannot know what free beings will do before they choose. • Emphasis on the conditional nature of much predictive prophecy • God experiences time.	The future is partially open, based on the decisions of free beings (including God). This does not limit God's omniscience: the future is not there so is not logically knowable. Knowing the future would undermine the freedom of God's creatures because they would not then be free to do otherwise.	Evil and suffering can be often attributed to human sin and natural causes. It is also caused by demonic powers, which are waging war against God. Prayer very much affects God's decisions so that by our prayers we can contribute to changing not only our own circumstances, but also God's mind and intention on certain issues.	Clark H. Pinnock John Sanders Gregory Boyd William Hasker Hendrikus Berkhof A logical trajectory of free-will thinkers from church history.

1

Process Theology (in upper half) vs Opennes Theology (in lower half)

See larger view on next page…

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Theology I

MODELS OF PROVIDENCE*

J.Q. Martini

Model	Bible	Providence & Freedom	Distinctives	Relation to Future	Evil, Suffering & Prayer	Proponents
Process Theology "Process thought, with its different understanding of perfection, sees the divine creative activity as based upon responsiveness to the world. Since the very meaning of actuality involves internal relatedness, God as an actuality is essentially related to the world. Since actuality as such is partially self-creative, future events are not yet determinate, so that even perfect knowledge cannot know the future, and God does not wholly control the world. Any divine creative influence must be persuasive, not coercive."[1]	N/A (Process is a philosophical theology, based on the philosophy of A.N. Whitehead. As such, biblical support is not foundational to the view. Many, however, have claimed some compatibility with portions of the Bible, including God's changeableness and relation to creation (as in Openness, below) and those suggesting the eternality of matter (e.g., Gen 1^{1-2}).	Human freedom is emphasized and imperative to shaping the events of history. God has an aim he is moving history toward and works by persuading people to adopt his plan. He is also moving toward His own end, as a being in process. Providence is very risky. God has insufficient power to control all events so risks the very real possibility of rejection and His plans thwarted.	• All reality (including God) is in process and involved in creative self-determination. • God is essentially related to His creation, which is necessary for Him to be what He is as a creative loving God. • Matter is co-eternal with God	The future is not knowable because it is as yet an undetermined and non-existent reality based on the decisions of free beings (including God). God experiences time and is affected by the events which transpire within time so that the future is both unknowable to God and also not wholly determined by Him.	Evil and suffering are the result of natural causes (in which case, not really evil) and human irresponsibility. Prayer affects God's decisions, but mostly affects the person praying, making them disposed to God's working in their lives.	John B. Cobb, Jr. Charles Hartshorne David Ray Griffin Norman Pittenger Alfred North Whitehead
Openness Theology or Free-Will Theism "Process thought holds that God can't predetermine or foreknow with certainty anything about the distant future. Open theists rather maintain that God can and does predetermine and foreknow whatever he wants to about the future. Indeed, God is so confident in his sovereignty, we hold, he does not need to micromanage everything. He could if he wanted to, but that would demean his sovereignty. So he chooses to leave some of the future open to possibilities, allowing them to be resolved by the decisions of free agents."[2]	Num $14^{12,20}$ Luke 15^{7} 1 Kings 20^{6} Gen 6^{6} 1 Sam $15^{10,35}$ Jer 3^{6-7} An emphasis on verses showing that God experiences change and is affected by His creation, on the conditional nature of predictive prophecy, and that the future is partially open.	God restricts His power in order to enter into relationship with libertarianly free beings (i.e., beings free to do otherwise). God has a plan for creation, and is capable of bringing that plan about, but chooses to do so in relationship with His creation. Free beings (including the angelic realm) are capable of resisting God's will making God's providential care risky. God is infinitely resourceful to bring His plan about despite resistance, and while respecting His creation's libertarian freedom.	• Rejection of both Calvinist determinism and Arminian foreknowledge. • Humans are libertarianly free. • The future is partly unknown to God—God knows what He will do, but cannot know what free beings will do before they choose. • Emphasis on the conditional nature of much predictive prophecy • God experiences time.	The future is partially open, based on the decisions of free beings (including God). This does not limit God's omniscience: the future is not there so is not logically knowable. Knowing the future would undermine the freedom of God's creatures because they would not then be free to do otherwise.	Evil and suffering can be often attributed to human sin and natural causes. It is also caused by demonic powers, which are waging war against God. Prayer very much affects God's decisions so that by our prayers we can contribute to changing not only our own circumstances, but also God's mind and intention on certain issues.	Clark H. Pinnock John Sanders Gregory Boyd William Hasker Hendrikus Berkhof A logical trajectory of free-will thinkers from church history.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

What is process theology?

https://carm.org/what-is-process-theology

> Process theology is the theological position that God is changing as is our knowledge about God, God is not immutable, Jesus is not God in flesh, and the Bible is not God's inerrant Word.

Process theology is the philosophical and theological position that God is changing, as is the universe. Therefore, our knowledge of God must be progressing as we learn more about him and it can never rest in any absolutes, which is why process theologians deny the absolutes of God's immutability and truth. Furthermore, this would mean that absolute knowledge of God would not be achievable, and a self-revelation of God (in the person of Jesus Christ and the Bible) would also not be possible. This would open the door for humanistic philosophy and/or false theological systems to be "rationalized" by process theologians.

Logically speaking, if process theology maintains that God is progressing and changing, then given an infinite amount of time in the past, God may not have actually been God. Also, it could be argued from this perspective that there is something outside of God that works upon him, bringing him into a greater knowledge and increased greatness. This would be problematic because it would need to study what that "something" is.

In process theology, God does not know the future exhaustively. He can guess at what may or may not happen, but absolute knowledge is not attainable until events actually occur.

Process theologians deny that Jesus Christ is God in flesh and therefore mankind has no need for salvation.

Process theology denies the Scriptures which teach that God has always been God (Psalm 90:2) and that God is unchanging (Malachi 3:6; Hebrews 13:8). Of course, it denies and contradicts God's word regarding the necessity of the Savior and the deity of Christ (John 1:1, 14; Colossians 2:9).

https://www.gotquestions.org/process-theology.html

Process theology is based on the philosophy that the only absolute which exists in the world is change. Therefore, God, too, is constantly changing. The Bible clearly states that process theology is false. Isaiah 46:10 is unequivocal regarding God's sovereignty and unchanging nature: "Declaring the end from the beginning, and from ancient times the things that are not yet done, saying, 'My counsel shall stand, and I will do all my pleasure.'" Jesus Christ, the second Person of the Trinity, is equally unchanging: "Jesus Christ is the same yesterday and today and forever" (Hebrews 13:8). The Bible is clear that His plans do not change according to the whims of mere men (Psalm 33:11). He "does not change like shifting shadows" (James 1:17). But process theology does not consider the Bible to be inspired or to be our final authority.

The Bible expresses many attributes, qualities, and characteristics of God. These include His holiness (Isaiah 6:3; Revelation 4:8); sovereignty (1 Chronicles 29:11; Nehemiah 9:6; Psalm 83:18; Isaiah 37:20); unity (Deuteronomy 6:4); omnipresence (Psalm 139:7-10); omniscience (Job 28:24; Psalm 147:4-5); omnipotence (Job 42:1-2); self-existence (Exodus 3:14; Psalm 36:9); eternality (Psalm 90:2; Habakkuk 1:12); immutability (Psalm 33:11; James 1:17); perfection (Deuteronomy 32:3-4); infiniteness (Job 5:9; 9:10); truth (Deuteronomy 32:4; Psalm 86:15); love (1 John 4:8, 16); righteousness (Psalm 11:7; 119:137); faithfulness (Deuteronomy 7:9; Ps. 89:33); mercy (Psalm 102:17); graciousness (Exodus 22:27; Nehemiah 9:17, 31; Psalm 86:15; 145:17); justice (Psalm 111:7; Isaiah 45:21); and freedom (Job 23:13; Proverbs 21:1). God uses these in the world and actively exercises all of these today. God transcends all of His creation, yet He is personal and knowable.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Process theology denies the deity of Jesus Christ, saying that Jesus has no intrinsic difference from any other man. Additionally, the humanistic philosophy of process theology teaches that mankind does not require salvation, while the Bible is clear that without Christ, man is hopelessly lost and doomed to hell for eternity. Scripture teaches that Jesus Christ is God (Isaiah 9:6-7; Matthew 1:22-23; John 1:1, 2, 14; 20:28; Acts 16:31, 34; Philippians 2:5-6; Colossians 2:9; Titus 2:13; Hebrews 1:8; 2 Peter 1:1) and that without His death on the behalf of sinners (Romans 3:23; 6:23; 2 Corinthians 5:21) no one could ever be saved (John 1:12; 3:18; 3:36; 14:6; Acts 4:10-12; 16:30-31).

Theopedia: Process Theology
http://www.theopedia.com/process-theology

Wikipedia: Process Theology
https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Process_theology

SEP: Process Theism
https://plato.stanford.edu/entries/process-theism/

What is Process Theology?
https://processandfaith.org/wp-content/uploads/2015/07/what-is-process-theology.pdf [PDF]

Online: https://beliefinstitute.com/article/process-theology

Online Foreword (by Stephen Pirie):

In having learned of the field of "Process Physics" and that "Process Physics is at the same time deeply bio-logical - reality is revealed as a self-organising, evolving and competitive information processing system", I've also learned of a parallel approach in ... theology.

The article reproduced below and with permission, gives a holistic, congruent perspective to many traditional religious beliefs. In particular Marjorie's Q 18. and her answer spells out a very holodynamic-systems view: For these reasons it is included at this website, along with similar articles that help bridge traditional religious beliefs with emerging holodynamic-systems world-views.

It's all Process, Baby, all the way down https://anopenorthodoxy.wordpress.com/2013/05/02/its-all-process-baby-all-the-way-down/

Process Theology and the Bible:
How Science Has Changed Our View of God
http://www.religion-online.org/showarticle.asp?title=3361

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

What is process theology?
https://carm.org/questions-process-theology

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Process_theology

http://www.theopedia.com/process-theology

http://www.dtl.org/article/process.htm

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Process Thought

What is Process Thought?
http://www.ctr4process.org/about/what-process-thought

Excerpt:

With a foundation in the metaphysical system of Alfred North Whitehead (among others), and a methodology that integrates both speculation and empirical verification, process thought brings its unique metaphysical perspective to bear on many fields of reflection and action.

Ultimately, process thought seeks to integrate and reconcile the diverse facets of human experience (i.e. ethical, religious, aesthetic, and scientific intuitions) into one coherent explanatory scheme. The most common applications of process thought are in the fields of philosophy and theology. However, process has also found a meaningful foothold in many other discussions, including ecology, economics, physics, biology, education, psychology, feminism, and cultural studies…

What is Process Thought?
http://www.jesusjazzbuddhism.org/what-is-process-thought.html

(Introduction to Process Thought and A. N. Whitehead via synopsis with corresponding links to 22 teaching videos)

An Examination of Open Theism
https://bible.org/article/examination-open-theism

The Opennes of God – A Critical Assessment
http://learntheology.com/the-openness-of-god-a-critical-assessment.html

Excerpt:

Open Theism: What Is It? – Two Key Components

…As already stated open theism attempts to chart a middle course between classical or traditional theism and some version of a finite or process God. There are two main components of the proposal, which take us to the heart of the view.

First, there is a very strong emphasis on divine love and the relationality of God as the supreme characteristic of God. Richard Rice states it this way:

From a Christian perspective, love is the first and last word in the biblical portrait of God. According to 1 John 4:8: "Whoever does not love does not know God, for God is love." The statement God is love is as close as the Bible comes to giving us a definition of the divine reality…. Love is not something God happens to do, it is the one divine activity that most fully and vividly discloses God's inner reality. Love, therefore, is the very essence of the divine nature. Love is what it means to be God.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Given this emphasis on God's love and relationality, open theists contend that we should view God's relation to the world in more dynamic ways, that is, in a give-and-take relationship. They insist that classical theism has left us with a static, non-relational deity who "never experiences novelty, adventure, spontaneity, or creativity," an "aloof monarch, removed from the contingencies of the world, unchangeable in every aspect of his being, as an all-determining and irresistible power, aware of everything that will ever happen and never taking risks." But, as open theists contend, this is not the relational and loving God of Scripture. In Scripture, we see a God who not only influences us, but one that we influence as well; indeed a God who responds to our responses, a God who takes risks. Thus, in contrast with classical theism, open theism does not believe that God controls all things. Instead God, like us, learns and grows in his knowledge and experience as history unfolds.

A second key component of open theism is their embrace of libertarian human freedom. In the current philosophical literature there are two basic views of human freedom which are primarily discussed and adopted—an indeterministic notion referred to in various ways such as incompatibilism or libertarian freewill, and a deterministic notion referred to as compatibilism or soft determinism. The view of incompatibilism maintains that a person's act is free if it is not causally determined. For incompatibilists this does not mean that our actions are random or arbitrary. Reasons and causes play upon the will as one chooses, but none of them is sufficient to incline the will decisively in one direction or another. Thus, a person who acts freely could always have chosen otherwise than he did. In contrast to libertarianism is the view of compatibilism. This position maintains that human actions are causally determined, yet free as long as the agent is not forced to act contrary to his desires.

It cannot be emphasized enough that open theism's embrace of libertarian freewill is not a minor point but rather it is central to its very proposal. In fact, open theists, in my view, are quite consistent (i.e., logically, not biblically) in noting two major entailments that result from their acceptance of libertarian free will: a reduced view of divine sovereignty and a redefined view of divine omniscience.

Because God has chosen to create free human creatures, he has voluntarily chosen to limit himself in order to invite human beings to have dominion over the world as fellow-partners with him. However, since God has delegated power to his creatures, he has chosen to make himself vulnerable—i.e., a risk-taker. The entailment of this for divine sovereignty is that God cannot guarantee that nothing can go contrary to his will, but rather that "God is able to deal with any circumstances that may arise"—not unless he intervenes, in such a way as to take away our freedom. Open theists believe that God has the capacity to intervene in this way to "keep things on track." However, they deny that God could consistently and pervasively exercise his power to intervene in this manner given his commitment to create and uphold libertarian freewill. So, in the end, God must respond and adapt to surprises and to the unexpected. Clark Pinnock states it this way: "God sets goals for creation and redemption and realizes them ad hoc in history. If Plan A fails, God is ready with Plan B."

In addition, given libertarian freewill, open theists maintain that God is omniscient (i.e., knowing all that can be known), but his knowledge does not include the future free actions of human beings since it is not logically possible to know those actions before they are chosen. For open theists, God's knowledge includes all things past and present as well as the range of future possibilities, but even God cannot know what will actually happen in the future until it happens. Hence, to a large extent, reality is "open" rather than closed. As Pinnock reminds us,

Genuine novelty can appear in history which cannot be predicted even by God. If the creature has been given the ability to decide how some things will turn out, then it cannot be known infallibly ahead of time how they will turn out…. I stand against a classical theism which has tried to argue that God can control and foresee all things in a world where humans are free.[21]

Even in this brief description of open theism, it should be quite obvious that open theism is a major departure from historic Christianity's understanding of God. With its denial of God's ability to know future free human choices; its presentation of an ad hoc deity viewed either as the "master chess player" or "ultimate psychoanalyst" working out his intentions for the world in response to our actions; its over-emphasis on divine love at the expense of God's holiness, majesty, and glory; open theism, if adopted, presents a serious challenge to Christian theology. But what are the arguments given for such a radical view? And especially what are the Scriptural arguments? Let us now briefly turn to four main arguments for the view under the following categories: biblical, philosophical, historical, and practical…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

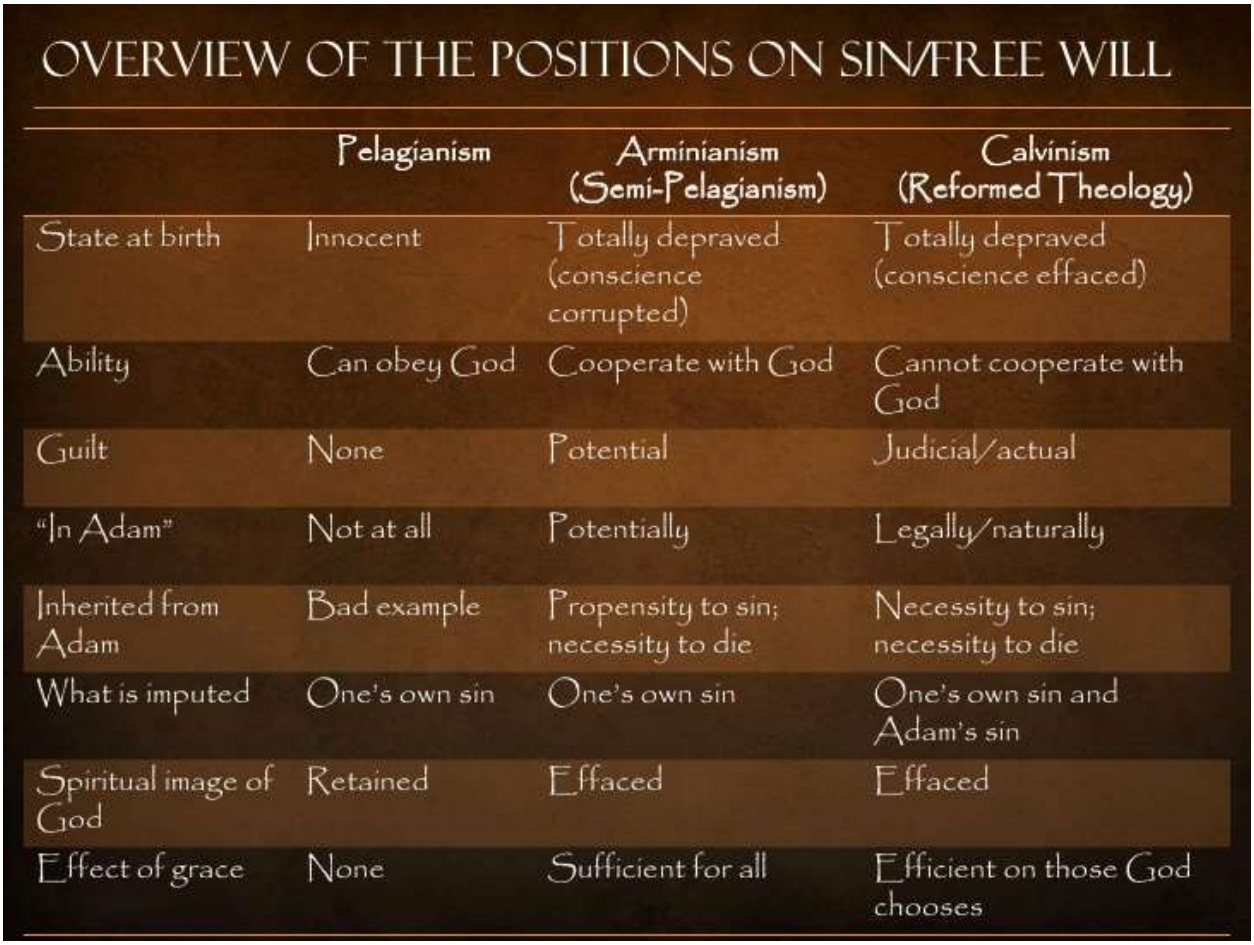
 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

3 Ways Arminians are Calvinists, Deists or Open Theists (by a pro-Calvinist)

http://yuriystasyuk.com/3-ways-arminians-are-either-calvinist-deist-or-open-theist/



Excerpt:

	GODS KNOWLEDGE	GODS POWER	GODS INVOLVEMENT	OUR WORLD	WHY?
OPEN THEISM	DOES NOT KNOW ALL He doesn't know when evil will happen	NOT ALL POWERFUL is limited in knowledge and power	IS HERE Cares about people and what happens here	Evil happens	God didn't know when it would happen, so he couldn't stop it. He limits himself so people can have free will. God is limited.
DEISM	KNOWS ALL, including when each evil will happen	ALL-POWERFUL has power to stop each individual evil.	NOT HERE Has left, doesn't care, or refuses to get involved.	Evil happens	God doesn't get involved.
CALVINISM	KNOWS ALL, including when each evil will happen	ALL-POWERFUL has power to stop each individual evil	IS HERE Cares about people and what happens here	Evil happens	God specifically permits evil to happen, for a greater good. Though we may not understand why, we can trust that Him. God is all-powerful, all-knowing, and ordains evil to ultimately end evil.
ARMINIANISM	KNOWS ALL, including when each evil will happen	ALL-POWERFUL has power to stop each individual evil	IS HERE Cares about people and what happens here	Evil happens	While having the exact same beliefs about God as Calvinists do, Arminians offer a range of answers that include all three opposing views.

The Bible says that God is all-powerful and all-knowing. He can do literally anything and he knows literally everything. I would argue that in light of these two attributes, Arminianism is unfair. It accuses Calvinism of making God the author of evil, accuses Deism of making God uncaring, and accuses Open Theism of making God weak. Yet different statements by Arminians appear to be coming from each of those same views. All of those views contradict each other, yet Arminianism states all of them at different times. And it much choose only one to avoid contradictions. There is really only those three positions. A fourth is not permitted by the laws of reason.

Arminianism or semi-pelagianism does not have a full and consistent answer to the question of "why did this specific evil to happen?" Rightly so, they will point to the agents of evil, satan, demons, or sinners. But then, when asked "where was God? Is he not powerful enough to stop those agents?" their answers diverge, and they borrow one from either Calvinists, Open Theists, or Deists. One of the reasons for this is because many would first override God's supreme sovereignty, or his involvement, rather than human free will…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

OVERVIEW OF THE POSITIONS ON SIN/FREE WILL

	Pelagianism	Arminianism (Semi-Pelagianism)	Calvinism (Reformed Theology)
State at birth	Innocent	Totally depraved (conscience corrupted)	Totally depraved (conscience effaced)
Ability	Can obey God	Cooperate with God	Cannot cooperate with God
Guilt	None	Potential	Judicial/actual
"In Adam"	Not at all	Potentially	Legally/naturally
Inherited from Adam	Bad example	Propensity to sin; necessity to die	Necessity to sin; necessity to die
What is imputed	One's own sin	One's own sin	One's own sin and Adam's sin
Spiritual image of God	Retained	Effaced	Effaced
Effect of grace	None	Sufficient for all	Efficient on those God chooses

Source: https://image.slidesharecdn.com/sfs-introduction-101217174154-phpapp01/95/gods-sovereignty-free-will-and-salvation-introduction-34-728.jpg?cb=1293002451

Calvinism - Arminianism - and Proportion Theology
https://www.raptureforums.com/forums/threads/calvinism-arminianism-and-proportion-theology.82353/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Molinism

Wikipedia: Molinism
https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Molinism

Molinism, named after 16th Century Spanish Jesuit theologian Luis de Molina, is a religious doctrine which attempts to reconcile the providence of God with human free will. William Lane Craig and Alvin Plantinga, despite not being Roman Catholic, are some of its best known advocates today, though other important Molinists include Alfred Freddoso and Thomas Flint. In basic terms, Molinists hold that in addition to knowing everything that does or will happen, God also knows what His creatures would freely choose if placed in any circumstance.

Question: "What is Molinism and is it biblical?"
https://www.gotquestions.org/molinism.html

Answer: Molinism is named for the 16th-century Jesuit, Luis de Molina. Molinism is a system of thought that seeks to reconcile the sovereignty of God and the free will of man. The heart of Molinism is the principle that God is completely sovereign and man is also free in a libertarian sense. Molinism partly seeks to avoid so-called "theological determinism": the view that God decrees who will be saved or damned without any meaningful impact of their own free choice. Today's highest-profile defenders of Molinism are William Lane Craig and Alvin Plantinga.

The primary distinctive of Molinism is the affirmation that God has middle knowledge (scientia media). Molinism holds that God's knowledge consists of three logical moments. These "moments" of knowledge are not to be thought of as chronological; rather, they are to be understood as "logical." In other words, one moment does not come before another moment in time; instead, one moment is logically prior to the other moments. The Molinist differentiates between three different moments of knowledge which are respectively called natural knowledge, middle knowledge and free knowledge.

1. Natural Knowledge – This is God's knowledge of all necessary and all possible truths: all things which "can be." In this "moment" God knows every possible combination of causes and effects. He also knows all the truths of logic and all moral truths. This knowledge is independent of God's will, a point few if any theologians would dispute.

2. Middle Knowledge – This is God's knowledge of what a free creature would do in any given circumstance. This knowledge consists of what philosophers call counterfactuals of creaturely freedom. These are facts about what any creature with a free will would freely do in any circumstance in which it could be placed. This knowledge, like natural knowledge, is independent of God's will.

3. Creative command – this is the "moment" where God actually acts. Between His knowledge of all that is or could be, and all that actually comes to be, is God's purposeful intervention and creation.

4. Free Knowledge – This is God's knowledge of what He decided to create: all things that "actually are." God's free knowledge is His knowledge of the actual world as it is. This knowledge is completely dependent on God's will.

Using middle knowledge, Molinism attempts to show that all of God's knowledge is self-contained, but it is ordered so as to allow for the possibility of man's free will. In other words, man is completely free, but God is also completely sovereign—He is absolutely in control of all that happens, and yet humanity's choices are not coerced.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

According to Molinism, God omnisciently knows what you would have been like had you lived in Africa instead of Australia, or had a car accident that paralyzed you at age 9. He knows how the world would have been changed had John F. Kennedy not been assassinated. More importantly, He knows who would choose to be saved and who would not, in each of those varying circumstances.

Accordingly, it is out of this (middle) knowledge that God chooses to create. God has middle knowledge of all feasible worlds, and He chooses to create the world that corresponds to His ultimate desires. Therefore, while a person is truly free, God is truly in control of who is or is not saved. Molinists differ on how God defines His underlying desires. For example, some believe God is seeking the maximum number of people to be saved. Others believe God creates in order to maximize some other divine goal.

Is Molinism biblical?

Molinists point to various texts to establish that God has "middle knowledge." For example, Matthew 11:21–24 where Jesus denounces Chorazin and Bethsaida. Here, Jesus tells those cities that "if the miracles done in you had been done in Tyre and Sidon, they would have repented long ago in sackcloth and ashes." This type of "if-then" is an example of divine knowledge of what would happen given a different set of circumstances. As such, Molinism sees this verse as evidence that the doctrine of middle knowledge is true.

Strictly speaking, Molinism is a view that cannot be rebutted or defended wholly on biblical grounds. The same is true of other philosophical-theological systems such as Calvinism or Arminianism. Middle knowledge is a philosophical concept that attempts to uphold both the sovereignty of God and the free will of man. At the same time, it can be evaluated on multiple levels, including biblically and philosophically.

Molinism is often criticized by both Calvinists and Arminians. Calvinists claim that holding to human free will denies God's absolute sovereignty. Arminians claim that, if God is in control of who is or is not saved, then free will is merely an illusion. Molinists would argue that both sovereignty and free will are biblically represented and real, and that middle knowledge allows both a God who is completely in control and a humanity who is completely free.

Not all people feel Molinism is the best way to think about God's sovereignty and human free will. The Bible teaches that God is sovereign over all things (Proverbs 16:33; Matthew 10:29; Romans 11:36; Ephesians 1:11), even human decisions (Proverbs 20:24; 21:1). Although God does not stir men to sin (James 1:13), He is still working everything, from individuals to nations, to the end that He has willed (Isaiah 46:10–11). God's purposes do not depend upon man (Acts 17:24–26). Nor does God discover or learn (1 John 3:20; Job 34:21–22; Psalm 50:11; Proverbs 15:3). All things are decreed by God's infinitely wise counsel (Romans 11:33–36).

That being said, it should be noted that Molinism would agree with everything said in the above paragraph. It is not on this level where Calvinists and Molinists disagree. Where Calvinism, Arminianism, and Molinism disagree most is in interpreting doctrines such as total depravity and limited atonement, in light of these other ideas.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Molinism 101

http://www.ligonier.org/blog/molinism-101/

Excerpt:

In conclusion, we may say that there is much that is interesting and puzzling about Molinism, but the Reformed response to it has been—and should continue to be—that not only are there unresolved difficulties in the idea of middle knowledge itself, it is also an unnecessary speculation. Scripture scarcely mentions anything that may be thought to give support to Molinism, while teaching perfectly clearly that God works all things, even the evil actions of people who act with full responsibility, after the counsel of His own will. As Peter said on the Day of Pentecost, Jesus was “delivered up according to the definite plan and foreknowledge of God” and lawless men crucified and killed him (Acts 2:23).

What is molinism and is it biblical?

https://carm.org/what-molinism

Molinism is named after the 16th century Jesuit theologian named Luis de Molina (1535-1600). It deals with what is called "Middle Knowledge" and is an attempt to harmonize the sovereign omniscience of God and the position known as the libertarian free will of man. Libertarian free will is the teaching that fallen man is still sufficiently free to be able to equally choose or reject God if only presented with the right information. Middle knowledge is best understood when compared with other issues pertaining to God's knowledge.

1. Natural Knowledge - God knows all things that are possible and logically necessary. He knows all the possible combinations of all events and human choices. It is natural for God to know such things as logical truths, how many stars there are, and all potential events that might occur in different circumstances.

2. Middle Knowledge - God knows what any free will choice would be of any person at any time in any circumstance. This means that God's knowledge pertaining to people is contingent on human free will choices. Another name for Middle Knowledge is 'scientia media.' Two verses used to support Middle Knowledge are Matt. 11:21-24 and 1 Cor. 2:8. This is dealing with 'counterfactuals,' things that would have happened if circumstances were different but have not actually occured.

3. Free Knowledge - God necessarily knows in totality all that actually exists that He has freely chosen to create.

Basically, we can see Molinism as the teaching that God knows what the potential free will choices of people will be and chooses who will be saved based on that knowledge. In other words, God sovereignly predestines and saves those whom He knows will choose Him.

The problems here are multifaceted. First, it means that God looks into the future to see what people will do and saves them based on their choices. Therefore, God reacts to man's choices, and God saves a person based on some quality (the ability to make a right choice) that the person possesses. But this is showing partiality (favoring one person over another based on a quality in/of that person)--something that God condemns (Rom. 2:11). Also, Molinism does not answer why one person chooses God and another does not when it is God who makes the person and puts him in that place and time. In other words, what is it about the human free will that God has made that enables him to choose God or not? Just saying it is up to the individual doesn't answer the question. The hard-core Molinist cannot answer this question adequately.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Second, Middle Knowledge means that God learns what the actual choices of people will be only when they occur. God would then be ignorant about man's future choices. This violates the scripture that says God knows all things (1 John 3:20)--not just all things that actually happen. In fact, the very verses used by Molinists to support Middle Knowledge (Matt. 11:21-24 and 1 Cor. 2:8) can be used to show that God's knowledge is absolute when it comes to potential events, not developing. He doesn't learn. He knows!

Third, Middle Knowledge (as it relates to human freedom) fails to properly understand the depravity of man. The scriptures do not say that the unregenerate can freely choose God. In fact, the contrary is taught. It is man who is deceitful (Jer. 17:9), full of evil (Mark 7:21-23), loves darkness (John 3:19), does not seek for God (Rom. 3:10-12), is ungodly (Rom. 5:6), dead in his sins (Eph. 2:1), by nature a child of wrath (Eph. 2:3), cannot understand spiritual things (1 Cor. 2:14), and a slave of sin (Rom. 6:16-20). Therefore, what is important here is understanding that an unbeliever is incapable of understanding and accepting Christ given the condition of his nature in a fallen, unregenerate state. This is why the Bible says such things as it is God who appoints people to believe (Acts 13:48), chooses who is to be holy and blameless (Eph. 1:4), calls according to His purpose (2 Tim. 1:9), chooses us for salvation (2 Thess. 2:13-14), grants the act of believing (Phil. 1:29), grants repentance (2 Tim. 2:24-26), causes us to be born again (1 Pet. 1:3), draws people to Himself (John 6:44, 65), predestines us to salvation (Rom. 8:29-30) and adoption (Eph. 1:5) according to His purpose (Eph. 1:11), makes us born again not by our will but by His will (John 1:12-13), and works faith in the believer (John 6:28-29).

Though God does know all things actual as well as potential, He also knows exactly what choices we will make at any time and not because God is a good guesser but because God has predestined and ordained whatsoever comes to pass (Acts 4:27-28; Eph. 1:11).

Theopedia: Molinism

http://www.theopedia.com/molinism

Excerpt:

Molinism is an attempt to provide a solution to the classic philosophical problems associated with God's providence, foreknowledge and the freedom of humanity. This view may be traced to the 16th century Jesuit theologian Luis de Molina - hence, the name Molinism. Specifically, it seeks to maintain a strong view of God's sovereignty over creation while at the same time preserving the belief that human beings have self-determined freedom, or libertarian free will.

"Molina's doctrine is called scientia media, or middle knowledge, because it stands in the middle of the two traditional categories of divine epistemology as handed down by Aquinas, natural and free knowledge. It shares characteristics of each and, in the logical order of the divine deliberative process regarding creation, it follows natural knowledge but precedes free knowledge."^ [1]^

"Luis de Molina's solution to the freedom/foreknowledge dilemma has had a revival of sorts in the latter half of the twentieth century, most notably through the efforts of William Lane Craig, Alfred Freddoso, Jonathan Kvanvig, Thomas Flint, and Alvin Plantinga. In short, these thinkers have followed the Jesuit Counter-Reformer in postulating a middle knowledge between God's natural and free knowledge."

Explain Thomist vs Molinist predestination (reddit forum) Catholic Perspective

https://www.reddit.com/r/Catholicism/comments/7fndj0/explain_thomist_vs_molinist_predestination/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Luis de Molina: The Life and Theology of the Founder of Middle Knowledge (Review)

https://faithalone.org/journal-articles/book-reviews/luis-de-molina-the-life-and-theology-of-the-founder-of-middle-knowledge/

Excerpt:

Kirk MacGregor has written a tour de force on the life and theology of Luis de Molina. Luis de Molina, the originator of Molinism or "Middle Knowledge" was a Spanish Jesuit priest who lived and developed his theology in the late 1500's, during the era of the Reformation and Counter-Reformation. He died in Madrid in 1600.

Middle Knowledge seeks to adequately explain and reconcile scriptures which express God's decrees and sovereignty over the affairs of man with scriptures that equally reflect the libertarian free will and choice of individual men. Molina's views were rejected by a large portion of the Catholic church at the time when written. They found acceptance, for the most part, only within Jesuit circles for centuries, until "re-discovered" by evangelical thinkers in the mid-1970's. Over the last 40 plus years, Middle Knowledge has emerged and become a very popular view to explain the tension between the free-will of man and the sovereignty of God across many diverse theological systems within evangelicalism.

MacGregor's book is the most comprehensive work written to date on Molina and his views. It reflects original work in Molina's writings never before done to the knowledge of modern scholarship. And while it thoroughly develops and reflects the theological teachings of Molina, it does so within the historical context of his life and doctrinal development within the church. Readers will enjoy and come away with a better understanding of key people and issues and the doctrines that surfaced as a result from the early beginnings of church history until the time when Molina wrote.

Free Grace readers do need to be aware, however, that both Molina and MacGregor hold to Lordship salvation, and this surfaces at a few places in the book. Similarly, Molina held that any "believer" that fell away from the faith was really not a believer at all and had not surrendered his life to Christ. But as long as the Free Grace reader is discerning, the book will be enlightening and helpful for their theological growth. Many individuals within Free Grace circles embrace Middle Knowledge as a rational way of harmonizing sovereignty and free will.

I heartily recommend reading Luis de Molina for a better understanding of Middle Knowledge and personal growth in the theological doctrines of God's sovereignty and man's free will!

Middle Knowledge

http://www.reasonablefaith.org/middle-knowledge

Middle knowledge is a form of knowledge first attributed to God by the sixteenth century Jesuit theologian Luis de Molina (pictured to the left). It is best characterized as God's prevolitional knowledge of all true counterfactuals of creaturely freedom. This knowledge is seen by its proponents as the key to understanding the compatibility of divine providence and creaturely (libertarian) freedom (see Free Will).

Middle knowledge is so named because it comes between natural and free knowledge in God's deliberations regarding the creative process. According to the theory, middle knowledge is like natural knowledge in that it is prevolitional, or prior to God's choice to create. This, of course, also means that the content of middle knowledge is true independent of God's will and therefore, He has no control over it. Yet, it is not the same as natural knowledge because, like free knowledge, its content is contingent. The doctrine of middle knowledge proposes that God has knowledge of metaphysically necessary states of affairs via natural knowledge, of what He intends to do via free knowledge, and in addition, of what free creatures would do if they were instantiated (via middle knowledge). Thus, the content of middle knowledge is made up of truths which refer to what would be the case if various states of affairs were to obtain.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

http://www.iep.utm.edu/middlekn/

See also*: Calvinism vs. Arminianism vs. Open Theism vs. Molinism

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Compatibilism

Wikipedia: Compatibilism

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Compatibilism

Excerpt:

Compatibilism is the belief that free will and determinism are compatible ideas, and that it is possible to believe in both without being logically inconsistent.[1] Compatibilists believe freedom can be present or absent in situations for reasons that have nothing to do with metaphysics. They define free will as freedom to act according to one's motives without arbitrary hindrance from other individuals or institutions.

For example, courts of law make judgments, without bringing in metaphysics, about whether an individual was acting of their own free will in specific circumstances. It is assumed in a court of law that someone could have done otherwise than they did—otherwise no crime would have been committed.

Similarly, political liberty is a non-metaphysical concept. Statements of political liberty, such as the United States Bill of Rights, assume moral liberty, i.e. the ability to choose to do otherwise than one does

History

Compatibilism was championed by the ancient stoics and medieval scholastics (such as Thomas Aquinas), and by Enlightenment philosophers (like David Hume and Thomas Hobbes). More specifically, the scholastics, including Thomas Aquinas, rejected what would now be called "incompatibilism"—they held that humans could do otherwise than they do, otherwise the concept of sin is meaningless. As for the Jesuits, their concern was to reconcile the claim of God's foreknowledge of who would be saved with moral agency. The term "compatibilism" itself was coined as late as the 20th century.

During the 20th century, compatibilists presented novel arguments that differed from the classical arguments of Hume, Hobbes, and John Stuart Mill. Importantly, Harry Frankfurt popularized what are now known as Frankfurt counterexamples to argue against incompatibilism, and developed a positive account of compatibilist free will based on higher-order volitions. Other "new compatibilists" include Gary Watson, Susan R. Wolf, P. F. Strawson, and R. Jay Wallace.

Contemporary compatibilists range from the philosopher and cognitive scientist Daniel Dennett, particularly in his works Elbow Room (1984) and Freedom Evolves (2003), to the existentialist philosopher Frithjof Bergmann. Perhaps the most renowned contemporary defender of compatibilism is John Martin Fischer.

Theopedia: Compatibilism

https://www.theopedia.com/compatibilism

Excerpt:

Compatibilism, sometimes called soft determinism, is a theological term that deals with the topics of free will and predestination. It seeks to show that God's exhaustive sovereignty is compatible with human freedom, or in other words, it claims that determinism and free will are compatible. Rather than limit the exercise of God's sovereignty in order to preserve man's freedom, compatibilists say that there must be a different way to define what freedom really means.

Basic beliefs

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Compatibilism, in contrast to Libertarian free will, teaches that people are free, but defines freedom differently. Compatibilism claims that every person chooses according to his or her greatest desire. In other words, people will always choose what they want-- and what they want is determined by (and consistent with) their moral nature. Man freely makes choices, but those choices are determined by the condition of his heart and mind (i.e. his moral nature). Libertarian free will maintains that for any choice made, one could always equally have chosen otherwise, or not chosen at all.

The problem of Free Will – Compatibilism versus Determinism

https://broganocallaghan.wordpress.com/2013/01/03/the-problem-of-free-will-compatibilism-versus-determinism/

Question: "What is compatibilism?"

https://www.gotquestions.org/compatibilism.html

Excerpt:

Answer: Compatibilism is an attempt to reconcile the theological proposition that every event is causally determined, ordained, and/or decreed by God (i.e., determinism, not to be confused with fatalism)—with the free will of man. Promulgated originally from a philosophical viewpoint by the Greek Stoics and later by numerous philosophers such as Thomas Hobbes and David Hume, and from a theological viewpoint by theologians such as Augustine of Hippo and John Calvin, the compatibilist concept of free will states that though the free will of man seems irreconcilable with the proposition of determinism, they both do exist and are “compatible” with one another.

The foundation of the compatibilistic concept of free will is the means by which “will” is defined. From a theological viewpoint, the definition of the will is viewed in light of the revealed, biblical truths of original sin and the spiritual depravity of man. These two truths render the definition of “will” in regard to fallen man as “captive to sin” (Acts 8:23), a “slave of sin” (John 8:34; Romans 6:16-17) and subject only to its “master,” which is sin (Romans 6:14). As such, although the will of man is “free” to do as it wishes, it wishes to act according to its nature, and since the nature of the fallen will is sinful, every intent of the thoughts of the fallen man’s heart is “only evil continually” (Genesis 6:5, cf. Genesis 8:21). He, being naturally rebellious to that which is spiritually good (Romans 8:7-8; 1 Corinthians 2:14), “is bent only on rebellion” (Proverbs 17:11). Essentially, man is “free” to do as he wishes, and he does just that, but man simply cannot do that which is contrary to his nature. What man “wills” to do is subject to and determined solely by his nature.

Here is where compatibilism makes the distinction between man having a free will and being a “free agent.” Man is “free” to choose that which is determined by his nature or by the laws of nature. To illustrate, the laws of nature prohibit man from being able to fly, but this does not mean that man is not free. The agent, man, is only free to do that which his nature or the laws of nature allow him to do. Theologically speaking, though the natural man is unable to submit himself to the law of God (Romans 8:7-8) and unable to come to Christ unless the Father draws him to Him (John 6:44), the natural man still acts freely in respect to his nature. He freely and actively suppresses the truth in unrighteousness (Romans 1:18) because his nature renders him unable to do otherwise (Job 15:14-16; Psalm 14:1-3; 53:1-3; Jeremiah 13:23; Romans 3:10-11). Two good examples of Jesus’ confirmation of this concept can be found in Matthew 7:16-27 and Matthew 12:34-37.

With the distinction between free agency and free will defined, compatibilism then addresses the nature of the free agency of man in respect to the theological proposition known as determinism and/or the biblical truth of the omniscient nature of God. The foundational issue is how man can be held accountable for his actions if his actions were always going to occur (i.e., the future is not subject to change) and could not have been anything other than that which occurred. Although there are numerous passages of Scripture that address this issue, there are three primary passages to examine…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Compatibilism

https://www.monergism.com/topics/free-will/compatibilism

Excerpt:

Compatibilism (also known as soft determinism), is the belief that God's predetermination and meticulous providence is "compatible" with voluntary choice. In light of Scripture, human choices are believed to be exercised voluntarily but the desires and circumstances that bring about these choices about occur through divine determinism (see Acts 2:23 & 4:27-28). It should be noted that this position is no less deterministic than hard determinism - be clear that neither soft nor hard determinism believes man has a free will. Our choices are only our choices because they are voluntary, not coerced. We do not make choices contrary to our desires or natures. Compatibilism is directly contrary to libertarian free will. Therefore voluntary choice is not the freedom to choose otherwise, that is, without any influence, prior prejudice, inclination, or disposition. Voluntary does mean, however, the ability to choose what we want or desire most. The former view is known as contrary choice, the latter free agency. (Note: compatibilism denies that the will is free to choose otherwise, that is, free from the bondage of the corruption nature,for the unregenerate, and denies that the will is free from God's eternal decreee.)

"The fact that no man can choose to live a sinless life is proof positive that he has no free will. He is held captive under the yoke of sin and thus he sins willingly and of necessity ... and he cannot do otherwise."
- John Hendryx

Christ dwells within us not for the purpose of sinking our being into His being, nor of substituting Himself for us as the agent in our activities; much less of seizing our wills and operating them for us in contradiction to our own immanent mind; but to operate directly upon us, to make us good, that our works, freely done by us, may under His continual leading, be good also.
- B.B. Warfield

The Nature of Compatibilism

http://thecenterfortheologicalstudies.blogspot.com/2010/06/nature-of-compatibilism.html

Jumping Ships from Open Theism to Compatibilism

https://stanrock.net/2015/04/01/jumping-ships-from-open-theism-to-compatibilism/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

What is Compatibilism and Is It Biblical?

https://carm.org/what-is-compatibilism-and-is-it-biblical

Excerpt:

Compatiblism is the position that human free will is compatible with God's absolute divine sovereignty.

"The term indicates that absolute divine sovereignty is compatible with human significance and real human choices." (Grudem, Wayne A.; Grudem, Wayne A.. Systematic Theology: An Introduction to Biblical Doctrine, Making Sense of Series, p. 1238)

Theologians and philosophers sometimes debate about how compatibilism is possible. Generally speaking, people claim that for a person to be morally responsible, he must be able to act freely. If his choices are determined, then how can he be morally responsible? Those who hold to libertarian free will seek to answer the question by saying that unbelievers act in a manner consistent with their nature and that their choices are truly free but not determined in any way by God. Compatibilists, on the other hand, would say that human free will choices are consistent with the sovereign providence of God.

Compatibilism not only states that that human free will and God's sovereign providence are compatible with each other, but it also states that people act in according to their natures and desires. Their desires are consistent with their fallen, immoral nature. Since people are fallen, they act in a manner consistent with their fallenness. Therefore, unbelievers will never freely choose to receive Christ. This is because they are slaves to sin (Rom. 6:14-20), are full of evil (Mark 7:21-22), cannot accept spiritual things (1 Cor. 2:14), do not seek for God and can do no good (Rom. 3:10-12). Therefore, God must intervene for anyone to be saved.

Nevertheless, the debate continues because some will say that if unbelievers can do nothing but evil because they are restricted by their fallen nature to do so, then how they morally responsible? They object and say that for a person to be morally responsible, he must be able to choose between good and bad. But if it is true that a person's fallen nature does not allow him to choose between good and bad, then libertarians argue that they cannot be held morally responsible.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Philosophy 2010 Exam Notes http://phi2010.blogspot.com/2014/07/final-exam-summer-b-mwf-1025am.html

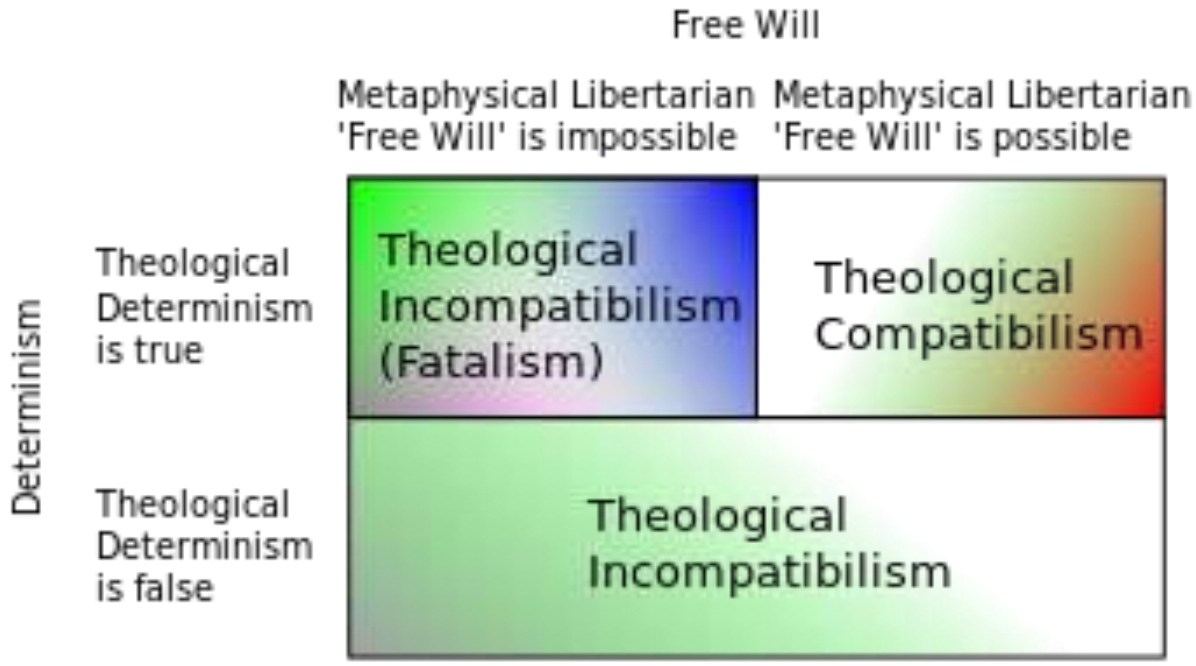
Excerpt:

3.1
Causal Determinism (every event has a cause that makes it happen + laws of nature) and Hard determinism (the doctrine that there are no free actions). Hard determinism assumes that if CD is true, then there are no free actions because as our bodies made up of matter, we must be subjects to the same laws of causation. In class we discussed an argument to problematize HD. If HD is true, then there is no human responsibility: i.e., if we are not free, we cannot be responsible for our actions (since one is responsible if and only if one can make choices).

3.2
Compatibilism is the belief that free will and determinism are not mutually exclusive.

Soft determinism: Determined actions can nevertheless be free. One "soft" theory is Traditional Compatibilism (Free actions are 1- caused by one's will and 2- not externally constrained). The reasoning is this:

> Principle of alternative possibilities: one can be held responsible for doing something only if one could have done otherwise. "could have done otherwise" means "if you had chosen otherwise, then you would have done otherwise." Think of our "fork-example" of a student being late for class. He chooses (A) "having coffee with lots of traffic," instead of (B) "not having coffee and no traffic." For Traditional Compatibilism the student is responsible for being late since "if he had choosen (B) instead of (A), he would have been on time for class.



"Hierarchical Compatibilism: First and Second Order Desires; Second Order Volitions. Remember: A first order desire is directed to an object or state of affairs, a second order desire is a desire about a desire, a second order volition is a second order desire one decisely acts upon. Harry Frankfurt's three drug addicts:

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

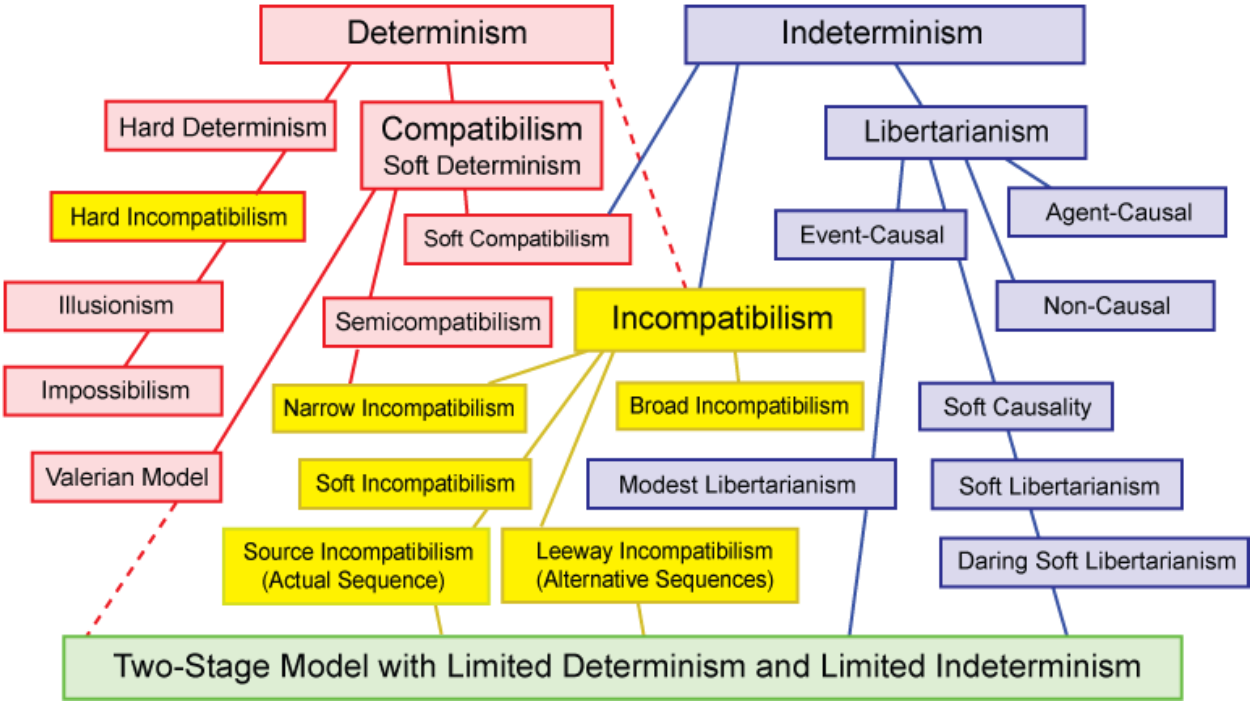
> (Let's call a first order desire: FOD, a second order desire: SOD, a second order volition: SOV); So we get the following:
>
> > Wanton addict: FOD, not SOD, not SOV, not free.
> > Happy Addict: FOD, SOD, SOV, free.
> > Unwilling Addict: FOD, SOD (only this desire is against his taking the drug, not SOV, not free).C/E to Hierarchical Compatibilism: Slote's Hypnotized patient and The Willing Bank Teller. One proves that SOV can be manipulated from the inside. The other shows rthat SOV can be manipulated beyond our control.



Punishment: How do compatibilists see punishment? p. 203. Punishment cannot be retributive (eye-for-an-eye). The only legitimate way of punishment is rehabilitation and deterrence. Criminal actions are dictated by genes and habits (nature and nurture). Retributive punishment makes sense if it's deserved. But nothing people do is up to them.

Source: https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Free_will

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The "family tree" of determinism shows how determinism is not black and white.

Source: https://relevancy22.blogspot.com/

http://revjimc.blogspot.com/2015_03_01_archive.html

Compatibilistic Determinism

http://www.reformationtheology.com/2007/08/compatibilistic_determinism.php

Calvinistic Compatibilism: A Discussion of Divine Causation, Human Freedom and Moral Responsibility

http://theoparadox.blogspot.com/2013/05/calvinistic-compatibilism-discussion-of.html

Excerpt:

Calvinistic Compatibilism: A Discussion of Divine Causation, Human Freedom and Moral Responsibility

Below is an excerpt addressing the subject of divine causation and compatibilism. This has been adapted from a series of responses I recently shared with some non-Calvinist Christians who have taken an incompatibilist position (i.e. their belief is that God's pre-determination of everything is incompatible with human freedom of choice and moral responsibility). I argue here for the opposite view, that God's sovereign pre-determination of everything is perfectly compatible with human freedom of choice and moral responsibility for our actions. This is excerpted from an ongoing conversation in the comments at the following blog post:

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

http://atheologyintension.wordpress.com/2013/03/21/2376/

Dear Non-Calvinist friends:

You present an interesting argument. The main thrust seems to be that Reformed theology makes God the author of evil, and in so doing removes man's freedom and moral responsibility. This objection is not new; it has been a common challenge faced by Calvinistic thinkers for centuries. I believe the argument is flawed, and I will explain why in detail. First, here is a summary:

1. The argument fails to distinguish between hyper Calvinism and mainstream Calvinism
2. The argument is based on a faulty understanding of mainstream Calvinism, which affirms compatibilism rather than mere determinism.
3. The argument is based on a faulty understanding of compatibilism, which affirms human freedom and responsibility in addition to determinism.
4. The argument groundlessly assumes compatibilism is impossible and self-contradictory.
5. The argument is based rationalism rather than a sound, Biblical epistemology (theory of knowledge)
6. The argument gives undue credit to the human mind's ability to peer into the unrevealed.
7. The Argument fails to present a Biblically and logically sound alternative to the Reformed approach, which it rejects based on multiple misunderstandings.

Historically, Calvinists have taken a variety of positions, from a VERY SOFT compatibilism to a VERY HARD determinism. You have quoted from several examples of this diversity. A.W. Pink (depending on the day of the week), Vincent Cheung and Gordon Clark are in the line of the more hyper brand of Calvinists, who are most likely to espouse the hardest form of determinism without apology. You extol this as being somehow more “consistent.” Others like Piper, Packer and Frame are more likely to express a compatibilism that affirms human freedom as a mystery within (and even upheld by) divine ordination. I have read Calvin’s discussion of free will in the Institutes; he is a textbook compatibilist, at least in that part of his writings.

So I think it is a bit unfair for you to say Calvinistic ordination always “collapses into causal determinism” and then disparage the softening statements of compatibilism offered by the more moderate voices in the group. This would be akin to me saying that an Arminian view of free will collapses into Pelagianism (or perhaps Open Theism), while ignoring the Classical Arminian’s affirmation of Total Depravity (which strongly inhibits – or rather, kills – libertarian freedom), and Prevenient Grace (which ackowledges the deadness and – gratefully – affirms our need for divine grace). I prefer to view the more moderate/mainstream Calvinists’ softening statements as evidence of a commitment to Biblical balance, preventing them from falling into the philosophical trap of hard determinism (the kind hypers veritably revel in). I do not see the softening statements as logical contradictions, but an attempt to be consistent with Scripture, grounded in the humility that confesses God’s ways are superior to our highest intellect…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Theological Compatibilism: A Case of Faith Seeking Understanding (Paul Helm)

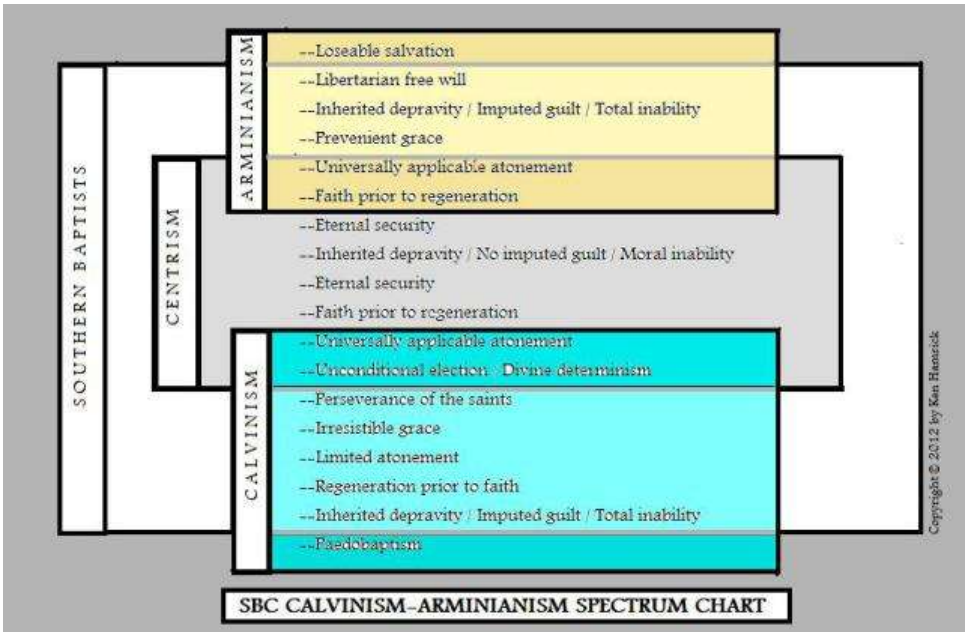
http://paulhelmsdeep.blogspot.com/2009/05/theoogical-comptibilism-case-of-faith.html

Excerpt:

In 'Helm's God and the Authorship of Sin' (a Chapter in Reason, Faith and History: Essays for Paul Helm, ed. M.W.F Stone (Aldershot, Ashgate, 2008)) Peter Byrne considers two arguments that I have used in defending God against the charge that he is the author of sin, and finds both of them seriously wanting. The arguments were advanced in Eternal God and The Providence of God respectively.

[The] first argument has to do with the defence of theistic compatibilism (as it might be called) against the charge of secular compatibilists such as Antony Flew, that given theistic compatibilism God must be the author of sin. I respond by arguing that if secular, atheistic compatibilism preserves human responsibility, (as Flew claims) then theistic compatibilism may also preserve human responsibility. The second argument has to do with my claim that, with respect to the moral character of God, compatibilist theism is in no better or worse case than free will theism of various stripes. This is because if, on the view of theistic compatibilism, God is the author of evil, then he is compromised in a parallel way by the supposition that evil is the consequence of the exercise of libertarian free choices with which our Creator has endowed us. As Byrne notes, each of these arguments is defensive, and one of them is an explicitly ad hominem argument. I shall consider the two arguments in order…

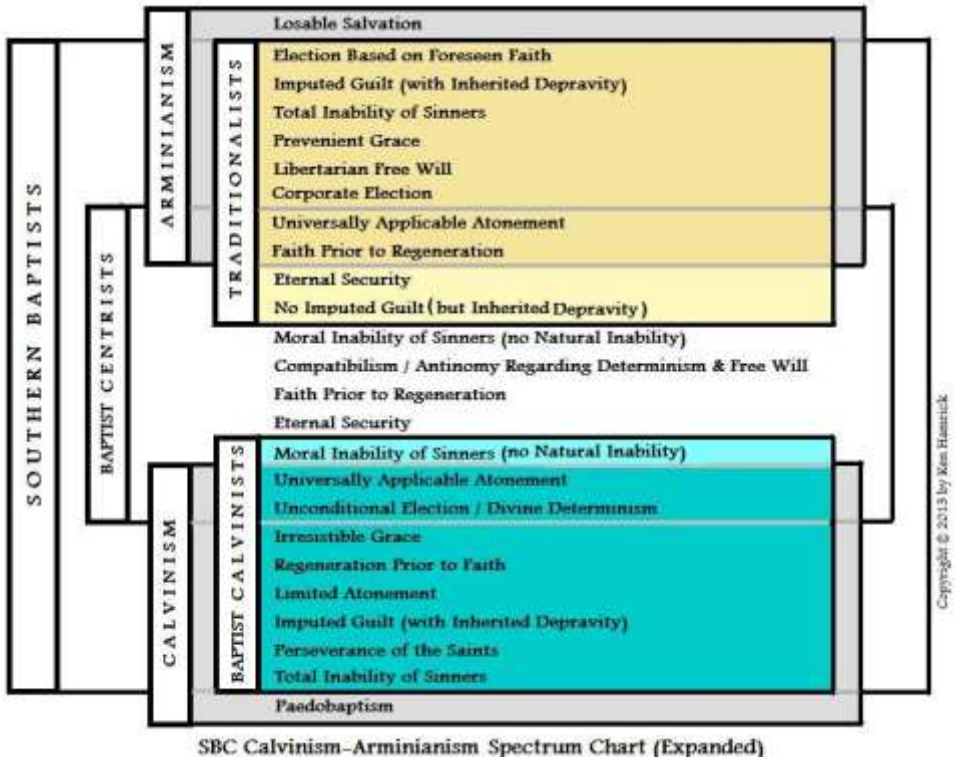
Theological Compatibilism: A Case of Faith Seeking Understanding



http://paulhelmsdeep.blogspot.com/2009/06/theological-compatibilism-two-counter.html
(Byrne's First Counter-Argument)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Southern Baptist Convention (SBC)



SBC Calvinism-Arminianism Spectrum Chart

https://sbcopenforum.com/2013/02/27/sbc-calvinism-arminianism-spectrum-chart/

Expanded SBC Calvinism-Arminianism Spectrum Chart

https://sbcopenforum.com/2013/03/06/expanded-sbc-calvinism-arminianism-spectrum-chart/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Luther vs Calvin vs Reformed vs Lutheran

Calvin vs Luther: Similarities and Differences http://sbcvoices.com/john-calvin-vs-martin-luther-similarities-and-differences/

Reformed vs Calvinism (Forum)
https://www.christianforums.com/threads/reformed-vs-calvinism.873371/

Lutheran and Calvinism ([PDF]
http://users.clas.ufl.edu/bron/PDF--Christianity/Santmire--Lutheranism%20and%20Calvinism%20%5Btemp%5D.pdf

Was Luther a Calvinist?
https://www.thegospelcoalition.org/article/was-luther-a-calvinist

5 Views of the Eucharist
http://christianityinview.com/eucharist.html

Lutherans vs the Reformed
http://beggarsallreformation.blogspot.com/2012/12/lutherans-vs-reformed.html

Excerpt:

Luther and Calvin were two men that God used mightily in the Protestant Reformation. Both men loved the Lord, both men held to the 5 Sola's, Christ Alone, Faith alone, Scripture Alone, Grace Alone, and everything to The Glory of God Alone. But they did have their differences. Today's post in a just a brief survey of some of those differences…

10 Differences Between Martin Luther and John Calvin http://evangelicalfocus.com/magazine/1085/10_differences_between_martin_luther_and_john_calvin

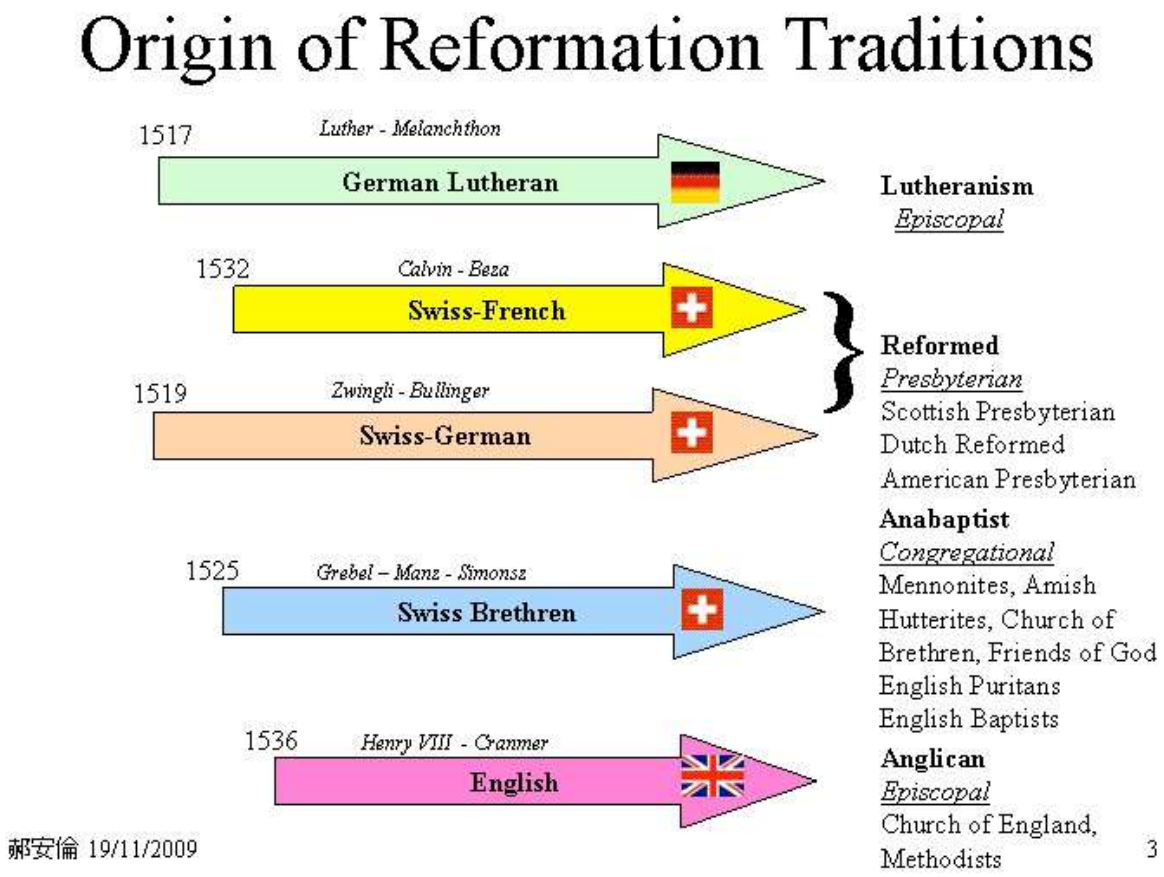
Why Wesley and Not Calvin
http://www.catalystresources.org/why-wesley-and-not-calvin/

What were the main doctrinal disagreements between Luther and Calvin? (Forum)
https://christianity.stackexchange.com/questions/6050/what-were-the-main-doctrinal-disagreements-between-luther-and-calvin

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Reformation Timeline



Detailed Chronology/Timeline of the Reformation http://christiantimelines.com/reformation.htm

A Reformation Timeline
http://lutheranreformation.org/history/reformation-timeline/

See next page: Reformed Denominations

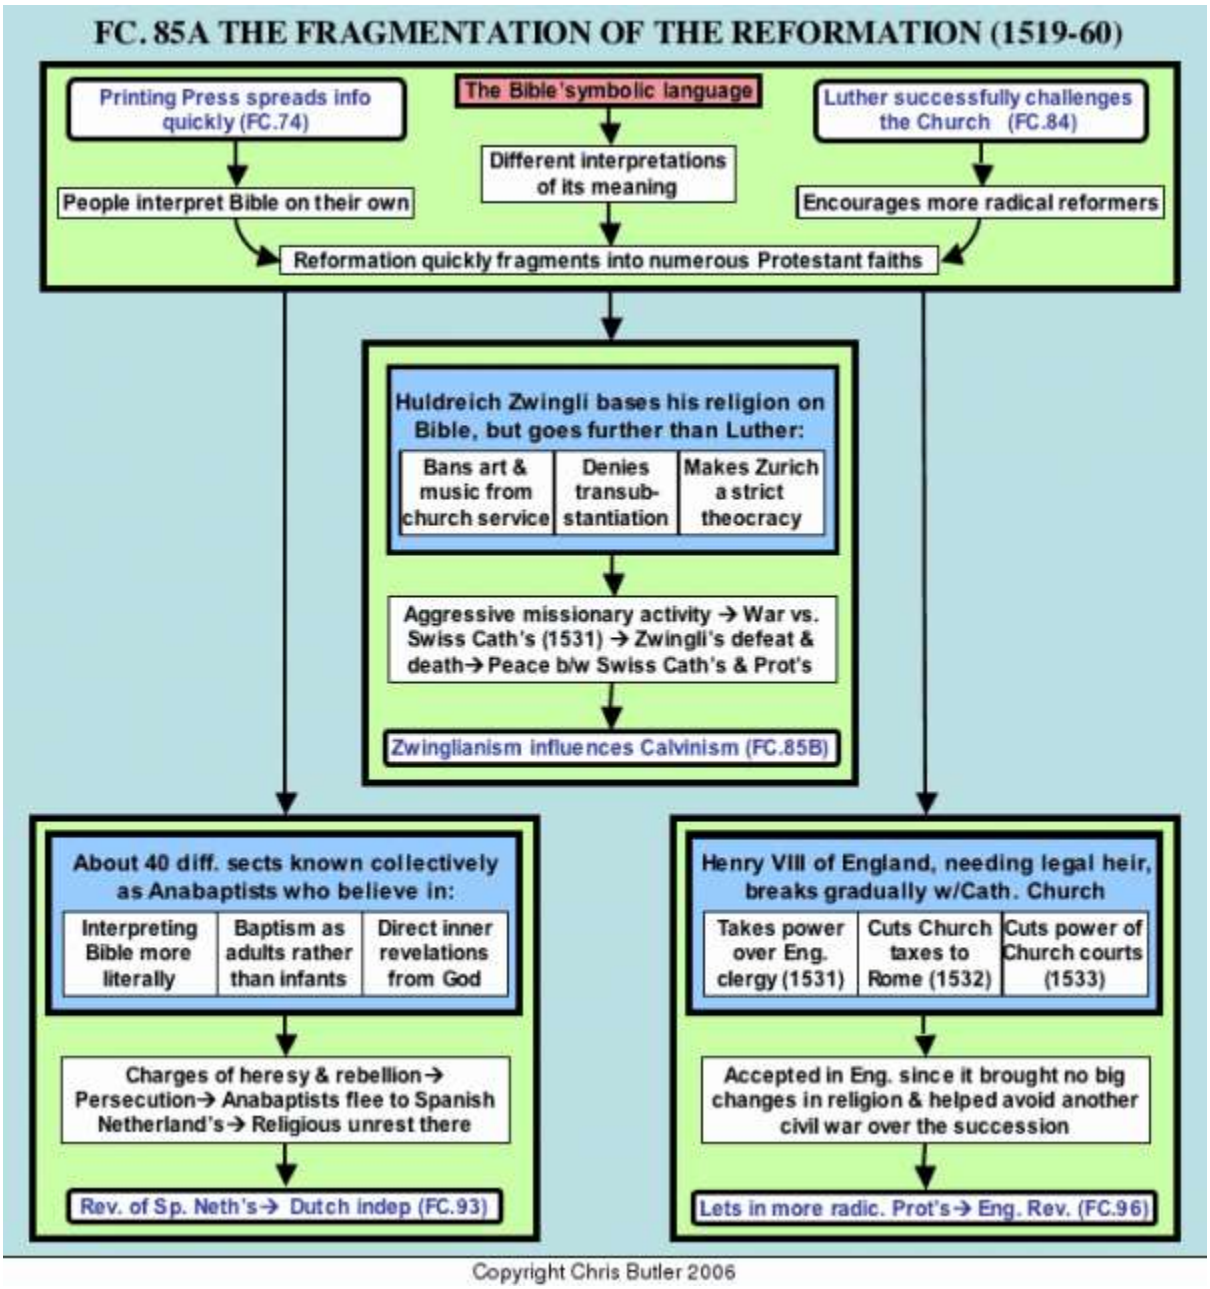
 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Reformed Denominations



Source: http://haudenschild-com.blogspot.com/2011/02/calvin-zwinglis-stepchildren_19.html

See also: Denominations / Branches of Christianity

Reformation Timeline

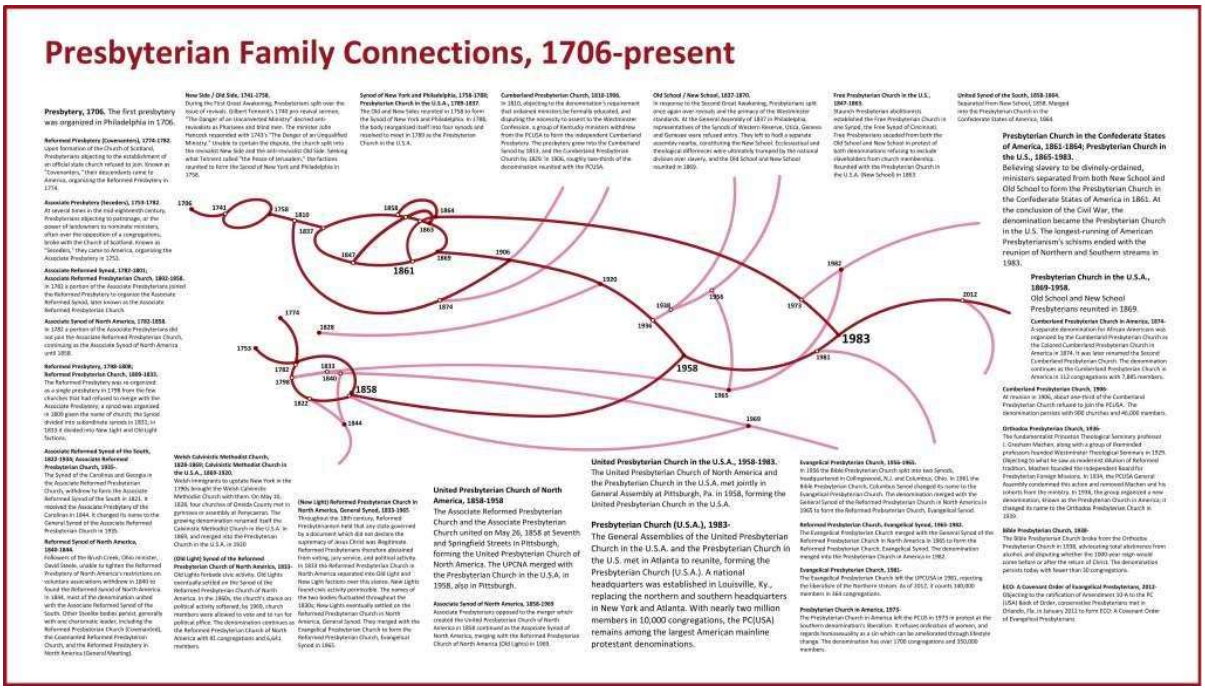
 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Source: http://www.flowofhistory.com/node/592

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

List of Presbyterian denominations in North America

http://history.pcusa.org/history-online/presbyterian-history/family-tree-presbyterian-denominations



See updated vesion on next pages…

See also: Denominations / Branches of Christianity

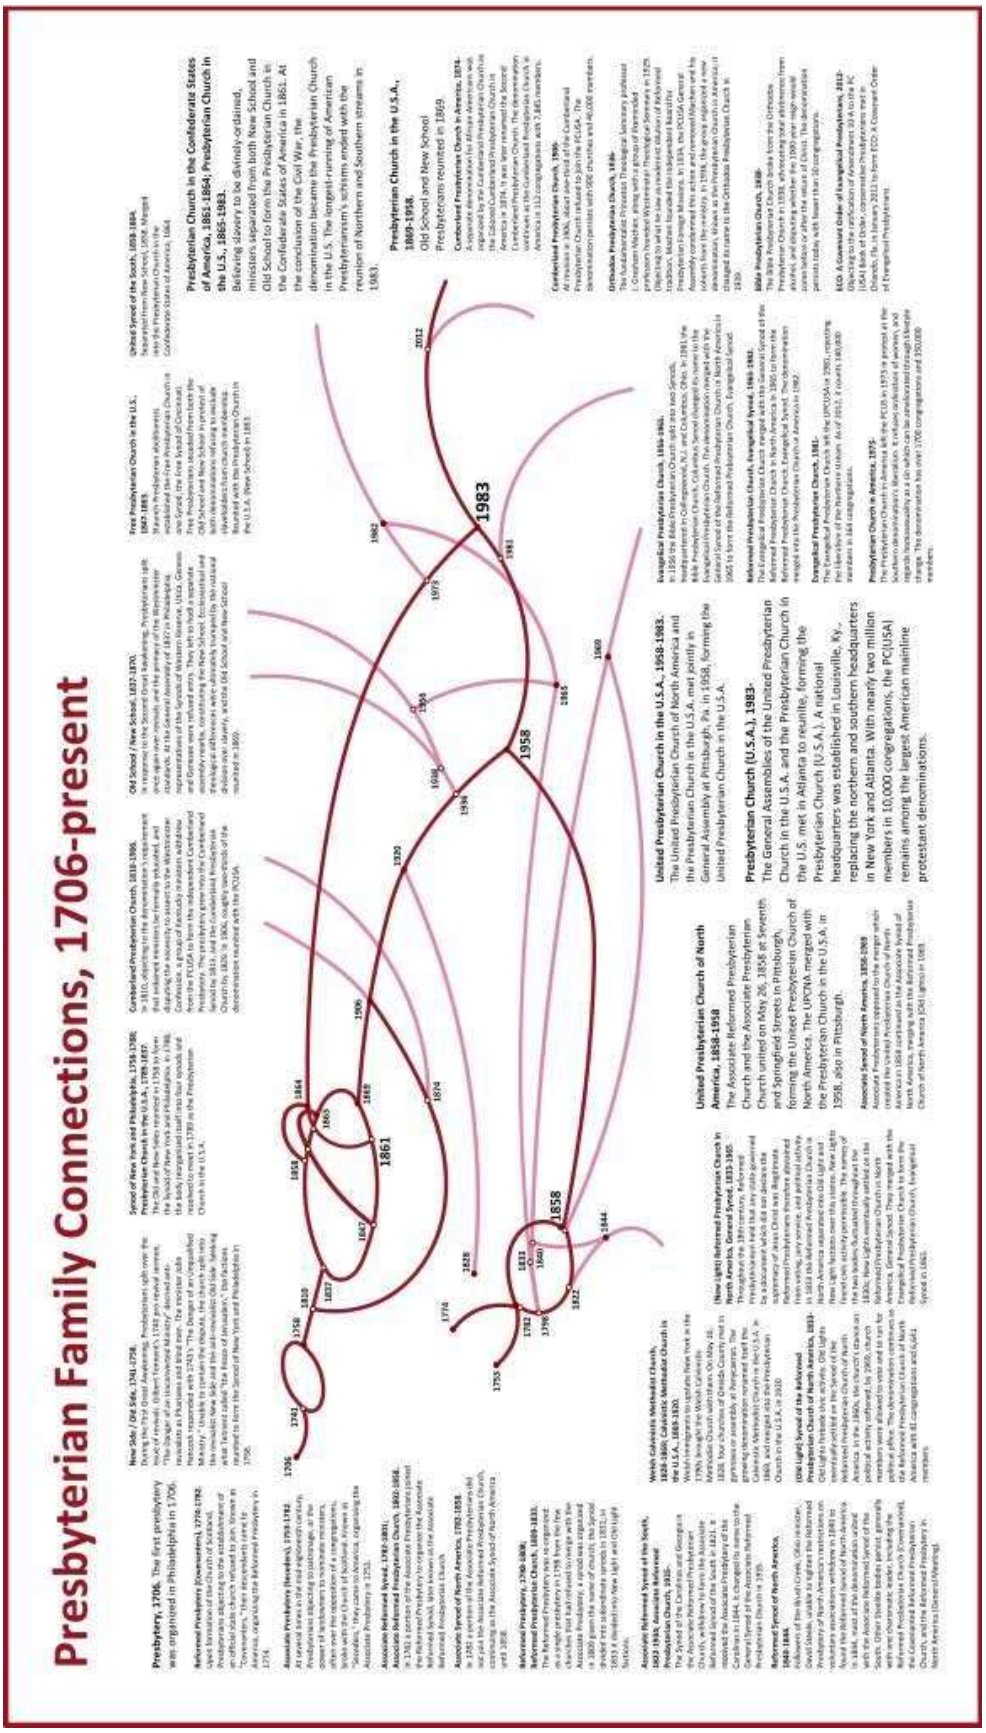
 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Family Tree of Presbyterian Denominations



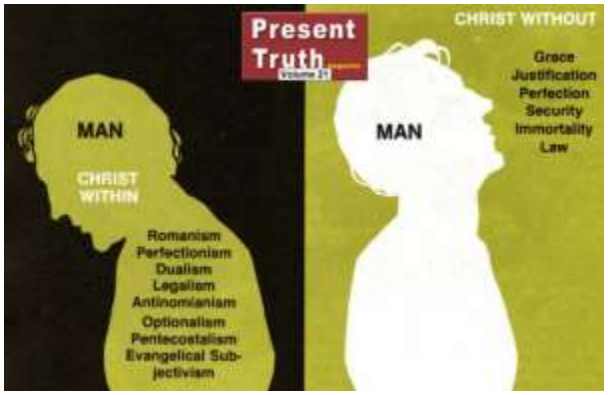
http://history.pcusa.org/history-online/presbyterian-history/family-tree-presbyterian-denominations

(Above downloadable as JPG or PDF)

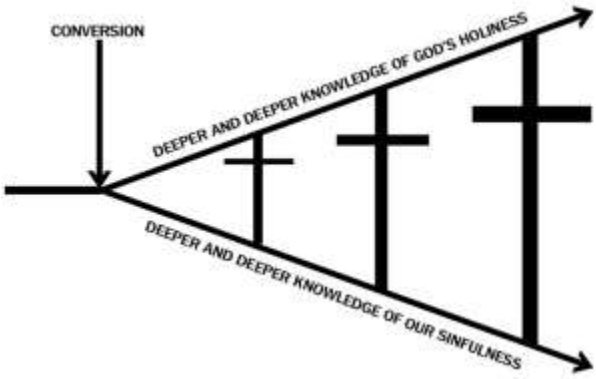
See larger view on next page…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



Following is anti-Reformed and anti-Calvinist…



The Magnum Opus of the Reformation: Martin Luther's Heidelberg Disputation, Part 7: Martin Luther's Unveiling of the Bondage of the Will https://paulspassingthoughts.com/tag/the-false-reformation-gospel/

Excerpts:

…So, if you look at two slides on the program slide show, you see two contemporary illustrations published by the Reformed camp that explain where we have come to this point. The two man chart explains the metaphysics, and the cross chart explains the application as stated in this thesis by Luther: "For as much as we accuse ourselves, so much God pardons us…" His use of Isaiah 43:26 pretty much puts it in a nutshell: confession of sin leads to ongoing justification which can only be found in the institutional church. If we believe man has no will to choose good, and that everything we do is sin, we qualify to be forgiven for purposes of ongoing justification. It's not complicated.

…So, what is the biblical view of the will? Romans chapter 6. Before one is saved, they are enslaved to sinful desires and free to do good works. Slavery indicates the type of wages that the slave gets—only wages for death. Unsaved people are also indifferent to the law that they will be ultimately judged by. They do not love God's law. But, they definitely have a free will to follow their God-given conscience and receive rewards for doing so. A person who lives a good common sense life will of course suffer fewer calamities than the foolish. But in the end, this only means less condemnation.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The saved person also has a free will. They are enslaved to righteousness, but unfortunately free to commit sin. However, they do not receive wages of death because they are no longer under the condemnation of the law. They can only receive wages for life. They are no longer indifferent to the law, but love God's law and its truth. The chart below may help:

The new birth is a reversal of sin and slavery resulting in a change of direction. No one sins perfectly, and no one loves perfectly. It's a direction, not perfection. But if you look at the Reformed cross chart again, neither is it a downward direction of sinful perfection resulting in making the cross bigger.

From another article:

…The Reformers believed that reality is a narrative written by God in which mankind is written into the script. Reformers such as Jonathan Edwards believed that man has no will per se, but God preordains every thought that precedes every act of man which makes it seem as if man has a will...

Sola fide. The assumption is faith alone for salvation/justification. By far, this is the one that the Reformers get the most mileage out of. Using this assumption, they continually talk about sanctification in a justification way. Eventually, sanctification becomes justification. Eventually, the Christian life becomes perpetual re-justification which is the Reformation gospel in a nutshell.

Protestantism is truly the super-cult of the ages.

And the institutional church finds itself in a huge dilemma. Traditional institutional worship beginning with the Reformation was tailored for perpetual re-justification down to the alter call routine. The Lord's Table is a solemn ceremony where additional grace is imparted through repentance. In reality, the first century assemblies met for dinner, and the fellowship meal was supposed to remind them of their fellowship with God and His Son. It was all very informal and not for the purpose of imparting additional grace.

The gatherings were an extension of worshipful living specifically designed for private homes and nothing more. The institutional version is an extension of two pillars of Reformed theology: the doctrine of progressive justification, and the politics of church-state. Hence, traditional institutional worship necessarily circumvents the original intent of Christ's mandate for His assemblies...

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Antinomianism

Wikipedia: Antinomianism

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Antinomianism

Excerpts:

In Christianity, an antinomian is one who takes the principle of salvation by faith and divine grace to the point of asserting that the saved are not bound to follow the Law of Moses.

The distinction between antinomian and other Christian views on moral law is that antinomians believe that obedience to the law is motivated by an internal principle flowing from belief rather than from any external compulsion.

The term antinomianism emerged soon after the Protestant Reformation (c. 1517) and has been used as a pejorative against Christian thinkers and sects who carried their belief in justification by faith further than was customary. Theologically, antinomianism is the belief that there are no moral laws God expects Christians to obey. This makes antinomianism an exaggeration of justification by faith alone.

Examples of antinomians being confronted by the religious establishment include Martin Luther's critique of antinomianism and the Antinomian Controversy of the 17th century Massachusetts Bay Colony. The term originated in the 16th century, but the topic has its roots in Christian views on the old covenant extending back to the 1st century. It can also be extended to any individual who rejects a socially established morality. Few groups explicitly call themselves antinomian, other than Christian anarchists…

Christianity

Antinomianism has been a point of doctrinal contention in the history of Christianity, especially in Protestantism, given the Protestant belief in justification through faith alone versus justification on the basis of merit or good works or works of mercy. Most Protestants consider themselves saved without having to keep the commandments of the Mosaic law as a whole; that is, their salvation does not depend upon keeping the Mosaic law. However, salvific faith is generally seen as one that produces obedience, consistent with the reformed formula, "We are justified by faith alone but not by a faith that is alone," in contrast to rejecting moral constraint.

The term antinomianism was coined by Martin Luther during the Reformation to criticize extreme interpretations of the new Lutheran soteriology. In the 18th century, John Wesley severely attacked antinomianism.

A general consensus has been historically reached as to which laws of the Old Testament Christians are still enjoined to keep. These moral laws, as opposed to civil or ceremonial laws, are derivative of what St. Paul indirectly refers to as natural law (Rom. 2.14–15). Mosaic law has authority only insofar as it reflects the commands of Christ and the natural law. Christian sects and theologians who believe that they are freed from more moral constraint than is customary are often called "antinomian" by their critics. Thus, classic Methodist commentator Adam Clarke held, "The Gospel proclaims liberty from the ceremonial law, but binds you still faster under the moral law. To be freed from the ceremonial law is the Gospel liberty; to pretend freedom from the moral law is Antinomianism." Contemporary evangelical theologian J. I. Packer states that antinomianism, "which means being anti-law, is a name for several views."

Gnosticism

The term antinomian came into use in the sixteenth century, but the doctrine itself can be traced in the teaching of earlier beliefs.[9] Early Gnostic sects were accused of failure to follow the Mosaic Law in a manner that suggests the modern term "antinomian". Most Gnostic sects did not accept the Old Testament moral law. For example, the Manichaeans held that their spiritual being was unaffected by the action of matter and regarded carnal sins as being, at worst, forms of bodily disease.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Old Testament was absolutely rejected by most of the Gnostics. Even the so-called Judaeo-Christian Gnostics (Cerinthus), the Ebionites (Essenian) sect of the Pseudo-Clementine writings (the Elcesaites), take up an inconsistent attitude towards Jewish antiquity and the Old Testament. In this respect the opposition to Gnosticism led to a reactionary movement. If the growing Christian Church, in quite a different fashion from Paul, laid stress on the literal authority of the Old Testament, interpreted, it is true, allegorically; if it took up a much more friendly and definite attitude towards the Old Testament, and gave wider scope to the legal conception of religion, this must be in part ascribed to the involuntary reaction upon it of Gnosticism.

Marcion of Sinope was the founder of Marcionism which rejected the Hebrew Bible in its entirety. Marcion considered the God portrayed in the Bible to be a lesser deity, a demiurge, and he claimed that the law of Moses was contrived. Such deviations from the moral law were criticized by proto-orthodox rivals of the Gnostics, who ascribed various aberrant and licentious acts to them. A biblical example of such criticism can be found in Revelation 2:6–15, which criticizes the Nicolaitans, possibly an early Gnostic sect.

Theopedia: Antinomianism

http://www.theopedia.com/antinomianism

Excerpts:

Antinomianism comes from the Greek meaning lawless. In Christian theology it is a pejorative term for the teaching that Christians are under no obligation to obey the laws of ethics or morality. Few, if any, would explicitly call themselves "antinomian," hence, it is usually a charge leveled by one group against an opposing group.

Antinomianism may be viewed as the polar opposite of legalism, the notion that obedience to a code of religious law is necessary for salvation. In this sense, both antinomianism and legalism are considered errant extremes.

Antinomianism among Christians

In the case of Christianity, the controversy arises out of the doctrine of grace, the forgiveness of sins and atonement by faith in Jesus Christ. If God forgives sins, what exactly is the disadvantage in sinning, or the reward of obedience?

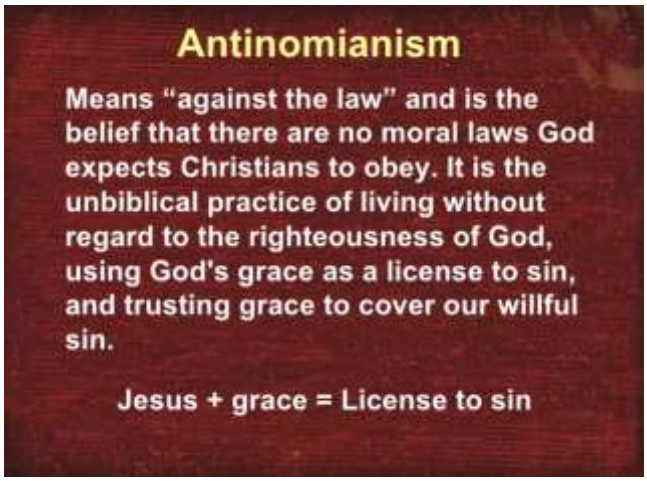
There are several issues that are addressed by the charge of antinomianism. The charge may represent the fear that a given theological position does not lead to the edification of the believer or assist him in leading a regenerate life. Doctrines that tend to erode the authority of the church and its right to prescribe religious practices for the faithful are often condemned as antinomian. The charge is also brought against those whose teachings are perceived as hostile to government and established authority.

The first people accused of antinomianism were found, apparently, in Gnosticism; various aberrant and licentious acts were ascribed to these by their orthodox enemies; we have few independent records of their actual teachings. In the Book of Revelation 2:6-15, the New Testament speaks of Nicolaitans, who are traditionally identified with a Gnostic sect, in terms that suggest the charge of antinomianism might be appropriate.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Roman Catholicism tends to charge Protestantism with antinomianism, based in part on the distinctively Protestant doctrine of _sola fide_, salvation by faith alone, and the typical Protestant rejection of the elaborate sacramental liturgy of the Roman church, and its body of canon law. Within Roman Catholicism itself, Blaise Pascal accused the Jesuits of antinomianism in his Lettres provinciales, charging that Jesuit casuistry undermined moral principles. Charges of antinomianism have also been bandied about within the Protestant camp as well; Martin Luther accused Johannes Agricola of antinomianism and rejecting the notion of a moral law; other Protestant groups that have been so accused include the Anabaptists and Mennonites. Calvinists have also drawn charges of antinomianism. In the history of American Puritanism, Roger Williams was accused of antinomian teachings by the Puritan leadership of New England.

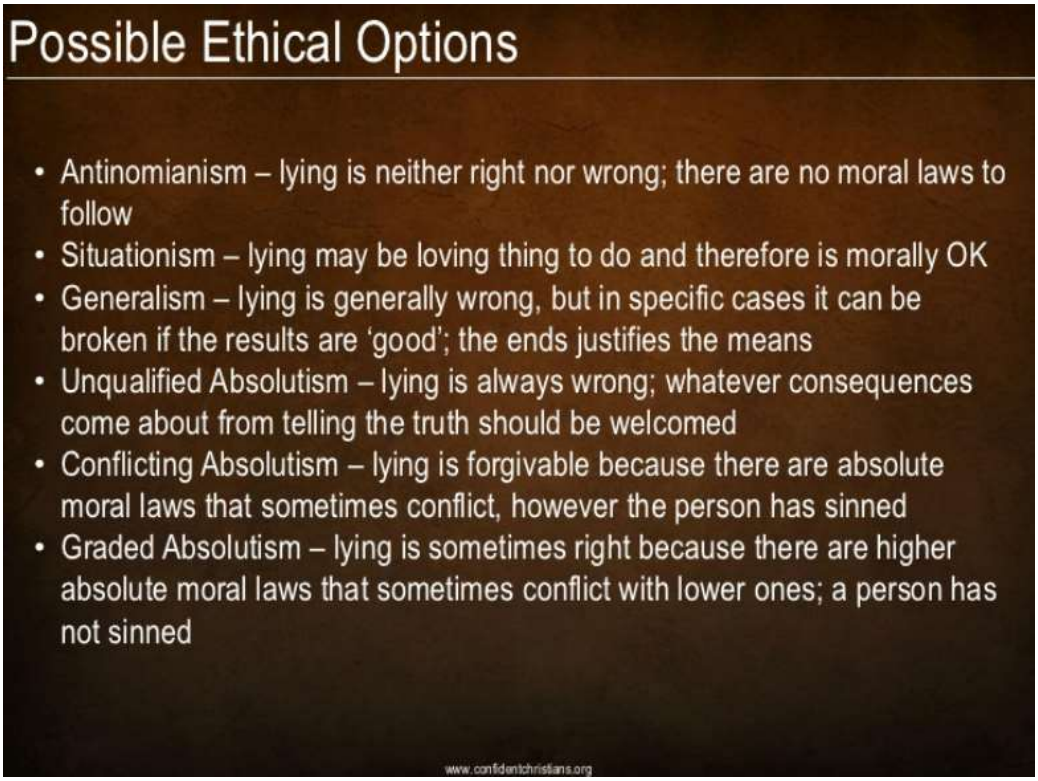
Theological charges of antinomianism typically imply that the opponent's doctrine leads to various sorts of licentiousness, and imply that the antinomian chooses his theology in order to further a career of dissipation. The conspicuous austerity of life among surviving groups of Anabaptists or Calvinists suggests that these accusations are mostly for rhetorical effect.



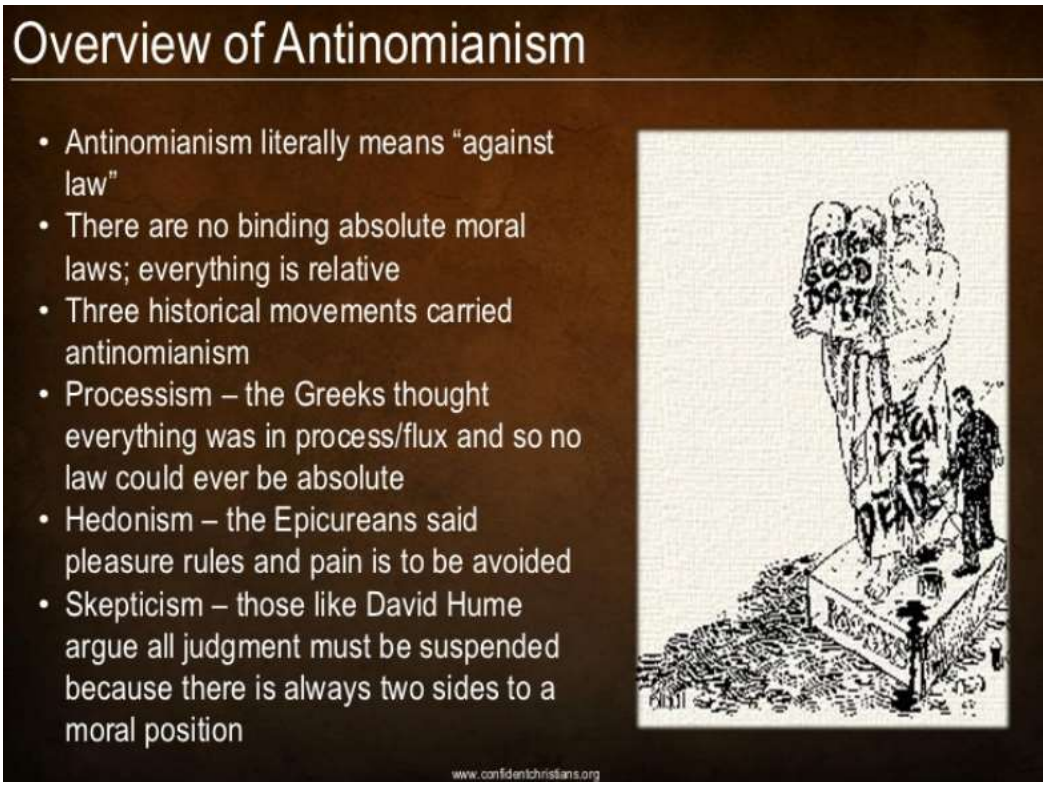
CARM: Antinomianism

https://carm.org/dictionary-antinomianism

Excerpt:

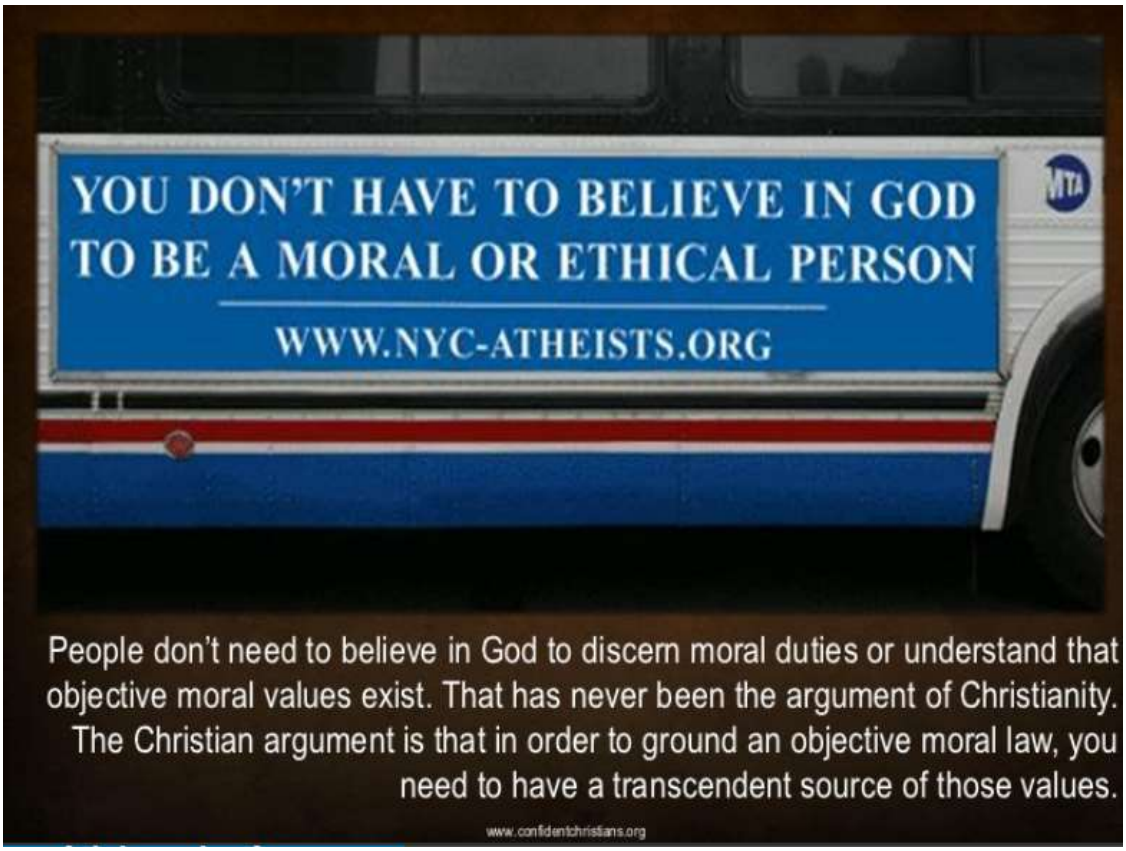


The word antinomianism comes from the Greek anti, against, and nomos, law. It is the unbiblical practice of living without regard to the righteousness of God, using God's grace as a license to sin, and trusting grace to cleanse of sin. In other words, since grace is infinite and we are saved by grace, then we can sin all we want and still be saved. It is wrong because even though as Christians we are not under the Law (Rom. 6:14), we still fulfill the Law in the Law of love (Rom. 13:8, 10; Gal. 5:14; 6:2). We are to love God with all our heart, soul, strength, and mind, and our neighbor as ourselves (Luke 10:27) and, thereby, avoid the offense of sin which cost God His only begotten Son. Paul speaks against the concept of antinomianism in Rom. 6:1-2: "Are we to continue in sin that grace may abound? May it never be! How shall we who died to sin still live in it?" We are not to use the grace of God as a means of sin. Instead, we are to be controlled by the love of God and in that way bear the fruit of the Holy Spirit (Gal. 5:22-25).



https://www.slideshare.net/godswillromania/01-why-the-gospel-is-important

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



Antinomianism – Got Ethics – Ethical Questions (Slideshow)
https://www.slideshare.net/schumacr/got-ethics-ethical-options

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

What is the Nicolaitan spirit or doctrine? Who are they? (Revelation 2:6 & 15)

http://www.wordoftruthradio.com/questions/38.html

Excerpt:

Nicolaitans: One of the heretical sects that plagued the churches at Ephesus and at Pergamum, and perhaps elsewhere. Irenaeus identifies the Nicolaitans as a Gnostic sect: “John, the disciple of the Lord, preaches this faith (the deity of Christ), and seeks, by the proclamation of the Gospel, to remove that error which by Cerinthus had been disseminated among men, and a long time previously by those termed Nicolaitans, who are an offset of that “knowledge” falsely so called, that he might confound them, and persuade them that there is but one God, who made all things by His Word” (see Irenaeus Against Heresies iii 11. 1; ANF vol. 1, p. 426) There is also historical evidence of a Gnostic sect called Nitolaitans a century or so later.

The doctrine of the Nicolaitans appears to have been a form of antinomianism. (Antinomianism: A belief that is based upon a recognition of the mercy of God as the ground of salvation, but it makes the fatal mistake that man can freely partake in sin because the Law of God is no longer binding. It held the truth on the gratuitous reckoning of righteousness; but supposed that a mere intellectual “belief” in this truth had a saving power. The Apostle James refuted this error in James 2:19 with the admonition, "The devils also believe, and tremble"; reminding us that true faith is an active principle which works by love and it goes beyond a profession of belief. "But wilt thou know, O vain man, that faith without works is dead?" (James 2:20) The Bible teaches us that salvation is a free gift, based upon God's grace alone (Ephesians 2:8-9) However, the very next verse tells us that "we are created in Christ Jesus unto good works, which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them." (Ephesians 2:10) True faith produce action, as well as a desire for holiness and obedience. (1 John 3:18, Titus 2:11-15, 1 Peter 1:15-16, Revelation 14:12)

Nicolaitans of the 2nd century seem to have continued and extended the views of the 1st century adherents, holding to the freedom of the flesh and sin, and teaching that the deeds of the flesh had no effect upon the health of the soul and consequently no relation to salvation. On the other hand, the Bible teaches that Christians are supposed to "die" to sin and the deeds of our "flesh": "What shall we say then? Shall we continue in sin, that grace may abound? God forbid. How shall we, that are dead to sin, live any longer therein?" (Romans 6:1-2) "Likewise reckon ye also yourselves to be dead indeed unto sin, but alive unto God through Jesus Christ our Lord. Let not sin therefore reign in your mortal body, that ye should obey it in the lusts thereof. Neither yield ye your members as instruments of unrighteousness unto sin: but yield yourselves unto God, as those that are alive from the dead, and your members as instruments of righteousness unto God." (Romans 6:11-13)

Today, the doctrine is now largely taught that the gospel of Christ has made God's law of no effect: that by “believing” we are released from the necessity of being doers of the Word. But this is the doctrine of the Nicolaitans, which Christ so unsparingly condemned in the book of Revelation. "But be ye doers of the word, and not hearers only, deceiving your own selves." (James 1:22)

Source: https://www.theopedia.com/nicolaitans

Wikipedia: Nicolaism: https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Nicolaism

Conservapedia: Nicolaitans: Irenaeus relates Nicolaitanism to Gnosticism: "John, the disciple of the Lord, preaches this faith (the deity of Christ), and seeks, by the proclamation of the Gospel, to remove that error which by Cerinthus had been disseminated among men, and a long time previously by those termed Nicolaitans, who are an offset of that 'knowledge' falsely so called, that he might confound them, and persuade them that there is but one God, who made all things by His Word.".

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Calvinism

Theopedia: John Calvin

N.T. Wright vs. John Piper (Soteriology101, Leighton Flowers)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=piWSvMIIUn0 [Video]

For the latest blog articles in which Prof. Flowers refutes prominent Calvinist apologists, or if you have any questions, please go to: https://soteriology101.wordpress.com/

Looking Back - The History of the Calvinism Debate https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=ctC7K7TIrbk [Video]

Amazing Grace (1 of 3) The History and Theology of Calvinism (Pro-Calvinist) https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=oCtrOqYXekE [Video]

Soteriology 101: Former Calvinistic Professor discusses Doctrines of Salvation http://directory.libsyn.com/shows/view/id/soteriology101/

Did Augustine Corrupt The Church With Gnostic Doctrine? Beyond Augustine Documentary - Jesse Morrell https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=mhLF-llpFX0 [Video]

Beyond Augustine is a church history and theological documentary that examines the free will debate in light of the Early Church and the Gnostics. Did Augustine corrupt the church with Manichean or Gnostic doctrine? Is Calvinism or Reformed Theology really orthodox and historic Christianity, as Calvinists claim? Or are the Calvinists and Augustinians the spiritual descendants of the Gnostics and Manicheans? Were the Pelagians really the heretics in their free will debate with Augustine? These are the type of controversial questions Jesse Morrell examines in this documentary. www.OpenAirOutreach.com

Soteriology 101
https://soteriology101.wordpress.com/

Why Ravi Zacharias 'Rejects' Calvinism
https://soteriology101.wordpress.com/2017/06/16/why-ravi-zacharias-rejects-calvinism/

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=v4FYaKbRxno [Video]

Why I'm Not a "Calvinist" by a KJV Bible Believer (see KJV section) https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Kqpa4SaHBxg [Video]

Freewill as Taught in Scripture
https://soteriology101.wordpress.com/2017/07/24/freewill-as-taught-in-scripture/

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Calvinism Debate
http://www.calvinismdebate.com/
(Links to more resources about pro/con about Calvinism)

Three Common Misconceptions of Calvinism http://gospelrelevance.com/2015/12/06/3-common-misconceptions-calvinism-theology/

PostBarthian.com: Calvinism
http://postbarthian.com/tag/calvinism/

Regeneration: When Does New Life Begin?
https://soteriology101.wordpress.com/2017/08/10/regeneration-when-does-new-life-begin/

A Primer on Hyper-Calvinism
http://www.romans45.org/articles/hypercal.htm

You Might Be a Hyper-Calvinist If…
http://teampyro.blogspot.com/2008/11/you-may-be-hyper-calvinist-if.html

Why Are People So Offended by Calvinism? – Reblog
https://thomcole.wordpress.com/2013/04/26/why-are-people-so-offended-by-calvinism-reblog/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

See also:

Pathogenicity of Rationalistic Calvinism (part of: Lapsarianism)

Predestination Revisited (discusses problems with Calvinism)

Why I'm Not a Calvinist Ben Witherington III (2013)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=KjUYw6Vg0bQ [Video]

Dr. Norman Geisler: 5 Reasons Why I Am Not a 5-Point Calvinist
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=fPpkSiO1Ci4 [Video] (Note: Low Quality)

Why I Stopped Being a Calvinist [Recommended] Part 1 (Calvinism presents a dehistoricized Bible):
https://blogs.ancientfaith.com/orthodoxyandheterodoxy/2014/01/09/why-i-stopped-being-a-calvinist-part-1-calvinism-presents-a-dehistoricized-bible/

Part 2 (Calvinism Destroys God's Justice):
https://blogs.ancientfaith.com/orthodoxyandheterodoxy/2014/01/10/why-i-stopped-being-a-calvinist-part-2-calvinism-destroys-gods-justice/

Part 3 (Calvinism Dislocates God From our Experience of Him):
https://blogs.ancientfaith.com/orthodoxyandheterodoxy/2014/01/21/why-i-stopped-being-a-calvinist-part-3-calvinism-dislocates-god-from-our-experience-of-him/

Part 4 (The Heresy of Monergism):
https://blogs.ancientfaith.com/orthodoxyandheterodoxy/2014/01/22/why-i-stopped-being-a-calvinist-part-4-the-heresy-of-monergism/

Part 5 (A Deformed Christology):
https://blogs.ancientfaith.com/orthodoxyandheterodoxy/2014/01/23/why-i-stopped-being-a-calvinist-part-5-a-deformed-christology/

What Love is This? - Dave Hunt – Calvinism's Misinterpretation of God
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=u8rVNF-e7rI

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Kevin Thompson: Beyond the Fundamentals:

Calvinist Ideologue Part 1
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=5wOwMsfYkeA
This video is part 1 of 2 of discussion about Calvinistic ideologues. Being possessed with an ideology is compared to being demon possessed. The similarities are uncanny.

Calvinist Ideologue Part 2
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=obuKi1x29VU
This session explores tactics and phrases that give Calvinists away as being an ideologue, and possessed by an ideology.

Predestination Revisited (discusses problems with Calvinism)

What Biblical Error Leads to Calvinism? (< 10 min.)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=SokD9Bpzhro
What biblical mistake led to the theological disaster of Calvinism?

Book Review: 13 Books About Calvinism
https://www.webtruth.org/essential-books/book-review-13-books-about-calvinism/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

New Calvinism

New Calvinism. Explaining And Exposing This Latest Ecumenical and Apostate Movement Which Is Taking The Church By Storm

http://watchmanforjesus.blogspot.com/2011/11/new-calvinism-explaining-and-exposing.html

Excerpt:

What Is New Calvinism?

New Calvinism (aka new reformation) is recycled Calvinism (ie reformed theology) but with many extras. It retains its links with older "reformed theology" but also joins forces with the New Apostolic Reformation" (NAR), ecumenism, worldliness and the "Dominion" mandate. From first appearances it seems to be supportive of the seeker sensitive approach to evangelism and has joined forces with the emerging church. Although it holds the name "Calvinist" it is rather loosely held by most of those associated with this movement. Today's leaders are extremely enthusiastic in reaching out to the younger generation with an attractive style of preaching the message which appeals to the youth of today and gets them motivated into action. Francis Chan is one such person with a dynamic personality who is getting a big following.

There are wide ranging new Calvinists. Not all of them hold to one specific area of Calvinism. This section will not debate the Calvinist view of election, pre-destination etc. because there is a MUCH bigger area of concern which is mainly why this article is being written. It is in the area of their "DOMINION" teachings which is ultimately ecumenical in practice.

Many New Calvinists lean towards the Dominion teachings of global conquest of the planet. Some take the "spiritual" conquest view that the Church is/should be reigning now spiritually (which ultimately will result in a physical reality) and some take on a much more active participation in the Rushdoony's more visible physical reign on Earth scheme. Both of these are a-millennial view which effectively means that they do not believe in a literal thousand years but a "figurative" long period of time in which the Church reigns BEFORE Jesus returns to Earth.

Some NC's join in with the New Apostolic Reformation's (NAR), global dominion approach (which has major similarities with Rushdoony). They take on the post-millennial position of a literal thousand years which is similar to a-millennial because they both preach that Christ will not return until AFTER the "millennium" is completed.

Peter Masters of London Metropolitan Tabernacle (Charles Spurgeon's old church) who is a staunch Calvinist (reformed theologian) is of the opinion that most neo-Calvinists are not dominionists. I would have to disagree with him because reformed theology (including Spurgeon, Whitfield etc) has always previously stated to be of the a-millennial camp WHICH IS Dominionistic in nature (although they may not use that word) and because many ARE following Rushdoony Dominionism . Of course Masters would be biased towards the "purity" of his theology so will inevitably defend Calvinism against criticism.

Anyway, even Masters has criticised the New Calvinism movement (ie criticism of the movement – not Calvinism), but for different reasons than because of "dominionism". You can read what he says here: Worldly Calvinism

He also wrote these words to me (by email):
"do not treat the new Calvinism as a cohesive movement, for it is not. Although certain prominent names regularly share platforms with each other, they do not surrender their distinctives. As far as I know most 'new Calvinists' are opposed to Dominion theology, even if some of them have spoken at their conferences. Certainly most new Calvinists are very strongly opposed to Catholic teaching and ecumenism, even though John Piper speaks at deeply compromised Lausanne. New Calvinism has no adequate separation from worldliness, no Lord's Day, and a number of other deficiencies, mostly in the areas of Christian worship and conduct. There appears to be a huge gulf between doctrine and conduct.".

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The rest of this article will go on to show that (according to much evidence) Peter Masters is wrong in his assertion that Calvinists are opposed to "dominionism" and opposed to the Catholic church and ecumenism. In reality there is much Catholic influence amongst Calvinists. There always has been! The reformation was never about pulling away from the Catholic Church. It was all about trying to reform the Catholic Church back to the Catholic Augustine's theology. More on this later…

The New Calvinists - Characteristics

http://www.newcalvinist.com/

The New Calvinists – Parts 1 & 2

Part 1: http://www.newcalvinist.com/who-are-the-new-calvinists-part-1/

Part 2: http://www.newcalvinist.com/who-are-the-new-calvinists-part-2/

John Piper: 12 Features of the New Calvinism

https://www.challies.com/quotes/john-piper-12-features-of-the-new-calvinism/

Excerpt:

Here then, in brief, are John Piper's 12 features of the New Calvinism.

1. The New Calvinism, in its allegiance to the inerrancy of the Bible, embraces the biblical truths behind the five points of Calvinism (TULIP), while having an aversion to using the acronym (or any other systematic packaging) along with a sometimes-qualified embrace of Limited Atonement. The focus is on Calvinistic soteriology but not to the exclusion or the appreciation of the broader scope of Calvin's vision.

2. The New Calvinism embraces the sovereignty of God in salvation and all the affairs of life and history, including evil and suffering.

3. The New Calvinism has a strong complementarian flavor (as opposed to egalitarian) with an emphasis on the flourishing of men and women in relationships where men embrace a call to robust, humble, Christ-like servant-leadership.

4. The New Calvinism leans toward being culture-affirming, as opposed to culture-denying, while holding fast to some very culturally-alien positions on issues like same-sex practice and abortion.

5. The New Calvinism embraces the essential place of the local church: it is led mainly by pastors; it has a vibrant church-planting bent; it produces widely-sung worship music; and it exalts the preached Word as central to the work of God both locally and globally.

6. The New Calvinism is aggressively mission-driven, including missional impact on social evils, evangelistic impact on personal networks, and missionary impact on the unreached peoples of the world.

7. The New Calvinism is inter-denominational, with a strong (some would say oxymoronic) Baptistic element.

8. The New Calvinism includes both charismatics and non-charismatics.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

9. The New Calvinism places a priority on pietism or piety in the Puritan vein, with an emphasis on the essential role of the affections in Christian living, while esteeming the life of the mind and being very productive in it, and embracing the value of serious scholarship.

10. The New Calvinism is vibrantly engaged in publishing books, and, even more remarkably, in the world of the Internet, with hundreds of energetic bloggers and social media activists, with Twitter as the increasingly-default way of signaling things new and old that should be noticed and read.

11. The New Calvinism is international in scope, multi-ethnic in expression, and culturally-diverse. There is no single geographic, racial, cultural, governing center. There are no officers, no organization, nor any loose affiliation that would encompass the whole. (As an aside, he adds: I would dare say there are outcroppings of this movement that no one in this room has ever heard of.)

12. The New Calvinism is robustly gospel-centered, cross-centered, with dozens of books rolling off the presses coming at the gospel from every conceivable angle and applying it to all areas of life, with a commitment to seeing the historic doctrine of justification finding its fruit in sanctification both personally and communally.

See also: https://reformedforum.org/john-pipers-twelve-features-new-calvinism/

The New Calvinism is not the Old Calvinism
https://oldlife.org/2014/03/17/new-calvinism-old-calvinism/

The New Calvinism: A Critical Assessment
http://www.freereformedchurchlangley.org/the-new-calvinism-a-critical-assessment

Gospel-Centered New Covenant Theology, Calvinism
http://jesussaidfollowme.org/

What's New about Calvinism? with Rob Congdon (Part 2)
https://www.thebereancall.org/content/what-s-new-about-calvinism-rob-congdon-part-2

The New Calvinists by Dr. Gary Gilley, Parts 1 & 2

Part 1: https://thenarrowingpath.com/2015/05/31/new-calvinism-part-1-by-dr-gary-gilley/

Part 2: https://thenarrowingpath.com/2015/05/31/new-calvinism-part-2-by-dr-gary-gilley/

Two Hour Crash Course on Calvinism (Link to Video) [Anit-Calvinist]
https://paulspassingthoughts.com/2015/05/04/two-hour-crash-course-on-calvinism/

See also: New_Covenant_Theology

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

What to Call the So-Called New Calvinists?

http://www.patheos.com/blogs/jesuscreed/2014/05/28/what-to-call-the-so-called-new-calvinists/

Excerpt:

In response to the rise of the new Calvinists, we need to make sure we know who we are talking about.

For the past five years, there has been a lot of discussion about the rise of a new group of Calvinists. Groups like The Gospel Coalition are encouraging and celebrating how a new generation of believers seem to be embracing Reformed theology. In a recent lecture at the bastion of "Old Calvinism," Westminster Seminary, John Piper defined the New Calvinism.

As this new Calvinism has become more prominent, there have also arisen critics. For some in the Old Calvinism camp, the predominance of Baptists (John Piper, D.A. Carson, Albert Mohler) in the New Calvinism has raised questions about the concept of Covenant: the Baptists don't practice paedobaptism. Also, the New Calvinism holds what they call the "Complimentarian" view of women, while Old Calvinism has moved toward egalitarianism.

The Missional movement, which is largely Arminian, has also criticized the New Calvinism.

Scot McKnight is a former professor of mine at TEDS while I was also studying under one of the key leaders of the New Calvinism, Don Carson. Scot has written some scathing critiques of the New Calvinism's insistence that the Gospel must be defined primarily by the salvation of individuals.

Jonathan Merritt just wrote a piece at Religion News Service ("The troubling trends in Americaís Calvinist revival") saying,

"Theyíve been called the young, restless, and reformed or neo-Calvinists, and they are highly mobilized and increasingly influential. Their books perform well in the marketplace (see John Piper or Paul David Tripp), their leaders pepper the lists of the most popular Christian bloggers (see The Gospel Coalition and Resurgence), and theyíve created vibrant training grounds for raising new recruits (see Reformed Theological Seminary, Westminster Theological Seminary, and The Southern Baptist Theological Seminary).

This brand of Calvinists are a force with which to reckon. But as with any movement, America's Calvinist revival is a mixed bag from where I sit, there are several troubling trends that must be addressed if this faithful faction hopes to move from a niche Christian cadre to a sustainable and more mainstream movement.

Notice that Merritt called them the young, restless, and reformed orneo-Calvinists*.

The young, restless, and reformed refers to the best-selling book written by Collin Hansen, Editorial Director for The Gospel Coalition and is a good identifying tag for this group.

But what are we to make of this identification of them as neo-Calvinists?

Well, that is a misnomer. What Merritt and others are addressing is not Neo-Calvinism, but Neo-Puritanism.

I Know Neo-Calvinism, and that's not Neo-Calvinism

I think these New Calvinists should not be called "Neo-Calvinists," but rather "Neo-Puritans."

Back in 2009, I wrote a series of posts at my blog Vanguard Church on the nuanced differences between Neo-Puritanism and Neo-Calvinism.... (see chart on next page)…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

	NEO-PURITANISM	NEO-CALVINISM
Progenitor	Jonathan Edwards	Abraham Kuyper
Gospel Focus	Personal sin and salvation; personal piety; the glory of God	Cosmic redemption; the Lordship of Christ over all things
Also Very Important to the Gospel	Cosmic redemption; the Lordship of Christ over all things	Personal sin and salvation; personal piety; the glory of God
The Key Storyline	Sin and Salvation	Creation, Fall, Redemption, Consummation
Primary Theological Emphases	Total Depravity Unconditional Election Limited Atonement Irresistible Grace Perseverance of the Saints	Creation Order/ Cultural Mandate Christian Worldview Common Grace Antithesis Sphere Sovereignty
God's Sovereignty	The sovereignty of God over salvation	The sovereignty of God over all creation
Mission	The local church as the center of mission; pastors act as the main leaders	Affirmation of all vocations as callings from God; Christians embrace their Christian mission in all their life contexts
Sample Educational Institution	Southern Baptist Theological Seminary	Calvin College and Seminary
Sample Leaders	John Piper Mark Driscoll David Platt	Tim Keller Ray Pennings Gideon Strauss Anthony Bradley James W. Skillen
Sample Theological Leaders	D. A. Carson Albert Mohler Wayne Grudem	Albert Wolters Richard Mouw James K. A. Smith Cornelius Plantinga, Jr. Michael Wittmer Vincent Bacote
Sample College Ministries	Cru Navigators	Coalition for Christian Outreach (CCO) Reformed University Fellowship (RUF) InterVarsity Christian Fellowship
Young Adult Conference	Passion	Jubilee

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

What's the Difference? — Neo-Calvinist vs. Neocalvinist (2012)

https://www.thegospelcoalition.org/article/whats-the-difference-neo-calvinist-vs-neocalvinist/

Excerpt:

What is a neo-Calvinist?

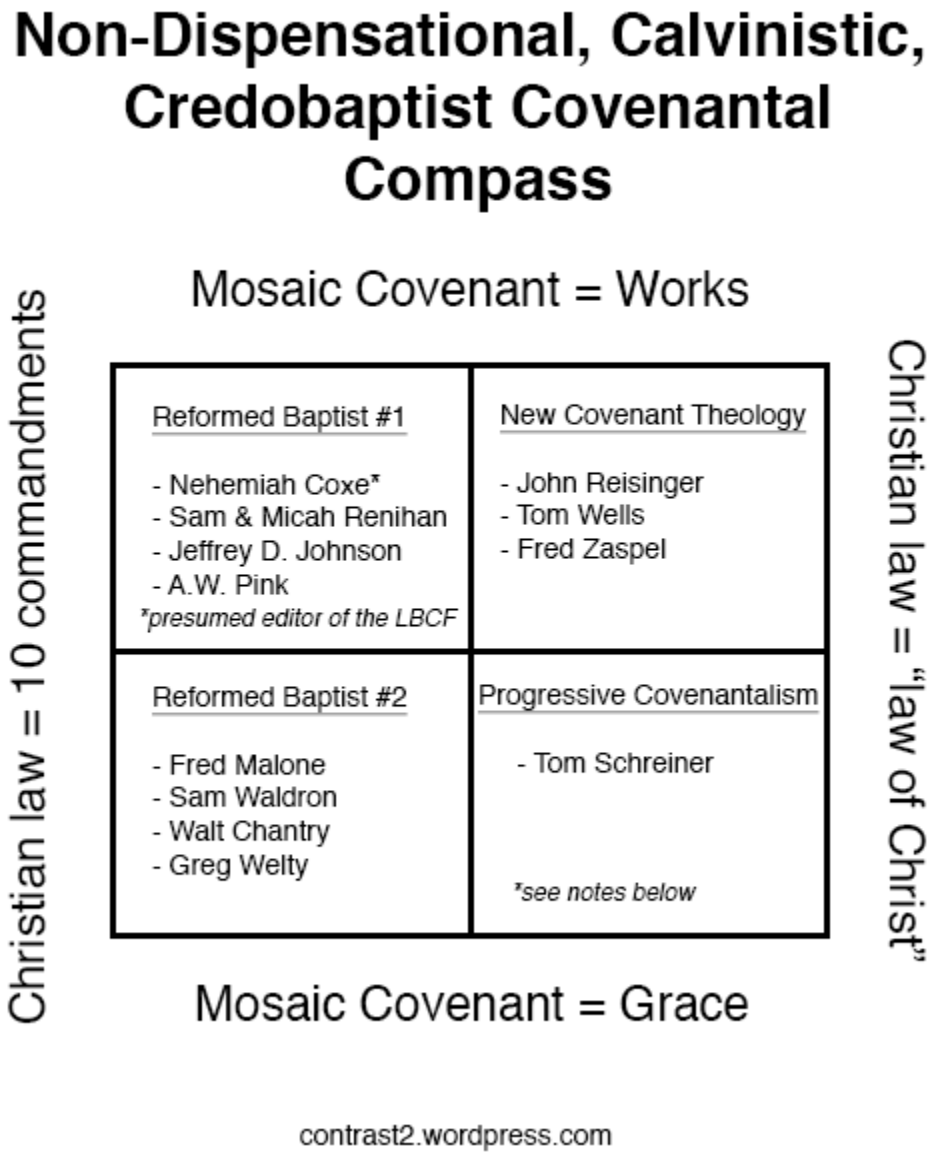
In 2009, Time magazine included "The New Calvinist" in their list of "10 Ideas Changing the World Right Now." The author of the feature, David Van Biema, used the phrase "Neo-Calvinist ministers and authors" to refer to such figures as John Piper, Mark Driscoll, Al Mohler, and Justin Taylor. Although the "new Calvinist" movement wasn't exactly new (TGC's Collin Hansen had written the book on the movement—-Young, Restless, Reformed: A Journalist's Journey with the New Calvinists—-the year before), the term neo-Calvinist was pushed into the popular lexicon.

Some folks who refer to themselves as neocalvinists (the other kind, which we'll get to next) believe the New Calvinists movement is better represented by the term "Neo-Puritanism." (Puritan in the positive Jonathan Edwards sense, not in denigratory H.L. Menken meaning.) As Ray Pennings wrote in the Canadian neocalvinist journal Comment:

> . . . while both movements affirm similar truths and appeal to the same sources regarding the application of the entire range of biblical data in the contemporary context, neopuritanism is slanted more towards individual piety and churchly revival, and neocalvinism is slanted more towards corporate activism and cultural renewal.

What is a Neocalvinist?

Although the Greek prefix neo, means "new, young, recent", the original use of the label "neocalvinist" dates back to the nineteenth century (which, for Calvinism, is still relatively new). The term refers to a Dutch Calvinist movement associated with the theologian and former Dutch prime minister Abraham Kuyper. The defining credo of neocalvinism is often summarized by Kuyper's claim that, "There is not a square inch in the whole domain of human existence over which Christ, who is sovereign over all, does not cry: 'Mine!'"



Although neo-Calvinists (aka New Calvinists) and neocalvinists (aka Kuyperians) tend to share a broad range of theological positions, the differences often arise in their emphases and language. While New Calvinists tend to focus on renewal of the local church and use terms associated with traditional Calvinism, the Kuyperians generally aim at cultural renewal and use jargon whose connotations are specific to the movement (e.g., sphere sovereignty).

[Note: Both terms are often spelled the same way, which adds to the terminological confusion.]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Non-Dispensational, Calvinistic, Credobaptist Covenantalism Compass https://contrast2.wordpress.com/2012/08/07/non-dispensational-calvinistic-credobaptist-covenantalism-compass/

New Calvinist Flow Charts
https://paulspassingthoughts.com/2012/02/20/new-calvinist-flow-charts/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Cage Stage Calvinism

http://speedydeletion.wikia.com/wiki/Cage_Stage_Calvinism

Excerpt:

Cage Stage Calvinism is a [humorous] colloquial term used by Calvinist Christians to describe proselytes who have recently converted from a generically Arminian theology to Calvinism. It suggests that the new Calvinist would be best placed in a cage rather than cause undue offense to other Evangelicals due to their zealous promotion of the distinctives of Reformed Protestant theology, what Calvinists often refer to as the "doctrines of grace" or the doctrine of the "sovereignty" of God.

The term has been used by well-known authors such as Doug Wilson, R.C. Sproul, Jr. and C.J. Mahaney.

See also: Theopedia

Cage-Stage Calvinism: What Is It and What Causes It?

http://christchurchreformed.com/cage-stage-calvinism-what-is-it-and-what-causes-it/

http://christchurchreformed.com/cage-stage-calvinism/

Cage-Stage Calvinism Cartoon Strip

http://adam4d.com/cage-stage/

Cage-Stage Calvinism

http://www.ligonier.org/blog/cage-stage-calvinism/

My friend Michael Horton often comments on the phenomenon of “cage-stage Calvinism,” that strange malady that seems to afflict so many people who have just seen the truth of the Reformed doctrines of grace. We’ve all known one of these “cage-stage Calvinists.” Many of us were even one of them when we were first convinced of God’s sovereignty in salvation.

Cage-stage Calvinists are identifiable by their insistence on turning every discussion into an argument for limited atonement or for making it their personal mission to ensure everyone they know hears—often quite loudly—the truths of divine election. Now, having a zeal for the truth is always commendable. But a zeal for the truth that manifests itself in obnoxiousness won’t convince anyone of the biblical truth of Reformed theology. As many of us can attest from personal experience, it will actually push them away.

Roger Nicole, the late Swiss Reformed theologian and colleague of mine for several decades, once remarked that all human beings are by nature semi-Pelagian, believing that they are not born as slaves to sin. In this country, particularly, we have been indoctrinated into a humanistic understanding of anthropology, especially with respect to our understanding of human freedom. This is the land of the free, after all. We don’t want to believe that we are burdened by negative inclinations and outright enmity toward God, as the Bible teaches us (Rom. 3:9–20). We think that true freedom means having the ability to come to faith without the vanquishing power of saving grace. When we realize that this is not true, that Scripture paints a bleak picture of the human condition apart from grace that it says it is impossible for us to choose rightly, we want to make sure that everybody else knows it as well. Sometimes we are even angry that no one told us about the true extent of our depravity and the majesty of God’s sovereign grace before.

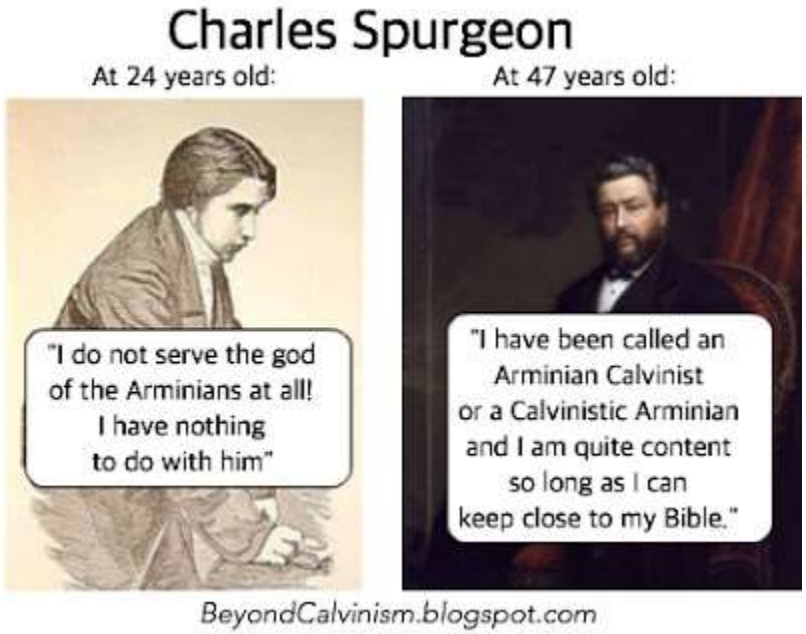
 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

This gives birth to cage-stage Calvinists, those newly minted Reformed believers who are so aggressive and impatient that they should be locked in a cage for a little while so that they can cool down and mature a little in the faith. At times, someone who becomes convinced of the biblical doctrines of grace finds himself in conflict with friends and family because of his discovery of Reformed theology. More than once I've been asked how one should handle hostility from loved ones regarding Reformed theology. If Reformed convictions are causing problems, should one just drop the subject altogether? Are we responsible for convincing others of the truth of the doctrines of grace?

The answer is…

How To Tell If You Are A Cage Stage Calvinist
https://thereforegodexists.com/tell-cage-stage-calvinist/

You Might still be in the Caged Calvinist Stage If…
https://fulltulip1689.wordpress.com/2013/04/21/the-cage-stage/



New Calvinist who got into an argument with his wife last night...
https://www.reddit.com/r/Reformed/comments/5occ41/new_calvinist_who_got_into_an_argument_with_his/

Enabling the Cage-Stage Calvinist
http://evangelicalarminians.org/enabling-the-cage-stage-calvinist/

See also: Predestination Revisited (discusses problems with Calvinism and that Predistination is NOT a Doctrine and it can't be supported directly from the Bible)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

From Cage-stage to "Arminian Calvinist or a Calvinistic Arminian": Charles Spurgeon's theological journey http://evangelicalarminians.org/from-cage-stage-to-arminian-calvinist-or-a-calvinistic-arminian-charles-spurgeons-theological-journey-election/

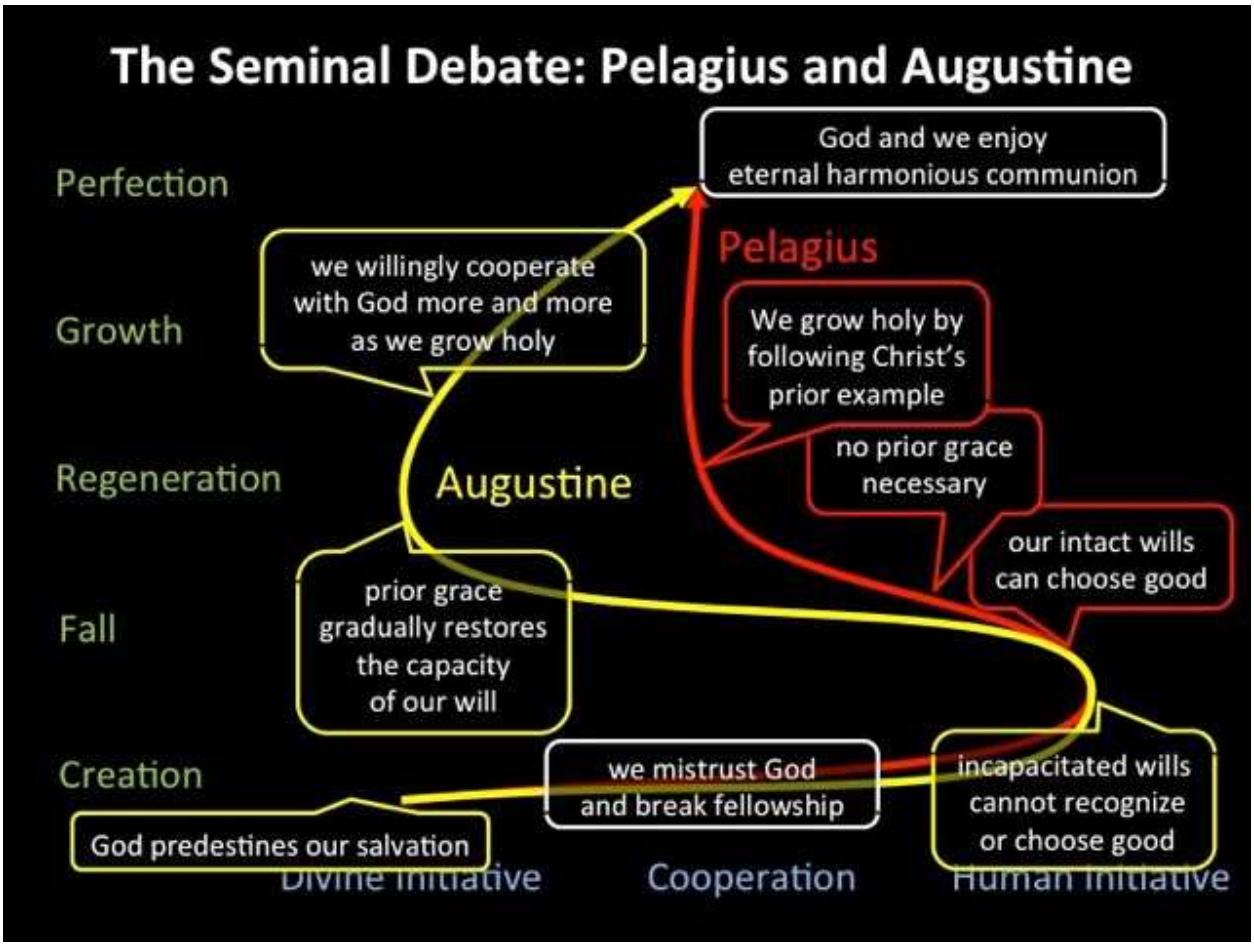
Calvinism – Southern Baptist Perspectives
http://www.sbclife.net/Articles/2010/10/SLA13

Cage-Stage Calvinism
http://www.ligonier.org/blog/cage-stage-calvinism/

Anti-Calvinist No More: I Repented
http://jaredmoore.exaltchrist.com/discernment-christian/anti-calvinist-no-more-i-repented/



See also: Predestination Revisited (discusses problems with Calvinism and that Predistination is NOT a Doctrine and it can't be supported directly from the Bible)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Predestination, Election and Related Terms

See also*: Ephesians: Predestination

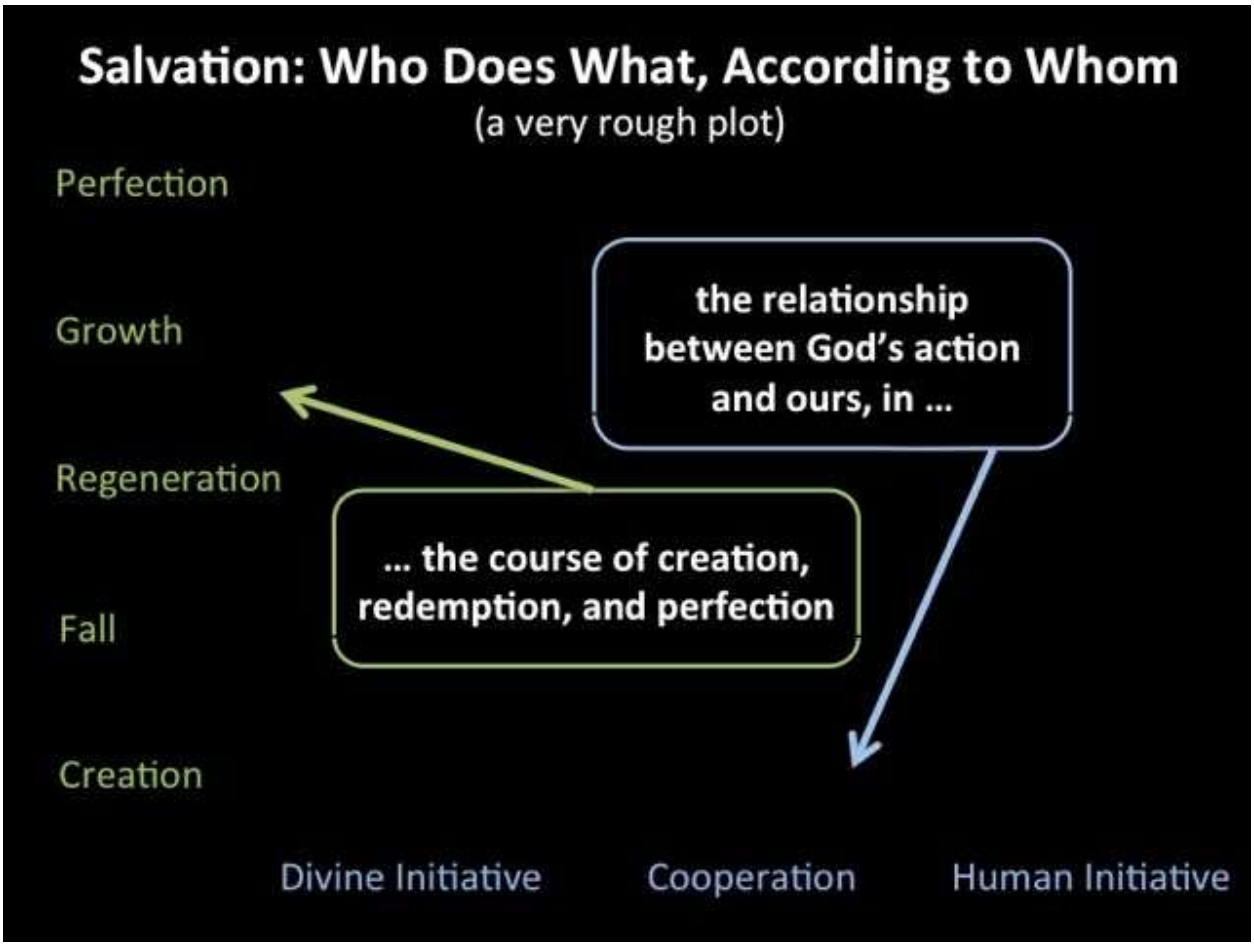
Predestination: History, Legacies, and Prospects
https://www.telfordwork.net/classes/doctrine/election.html

(See details on following page)

Pelagianism in the Formation and Reformation of the Church (Reformed) (CR Biggs)
http://www.reformationtheology.com/2007/07/pelagianism_in_the_formation_and_reformation_of_the_church-_c_r_biggs.php



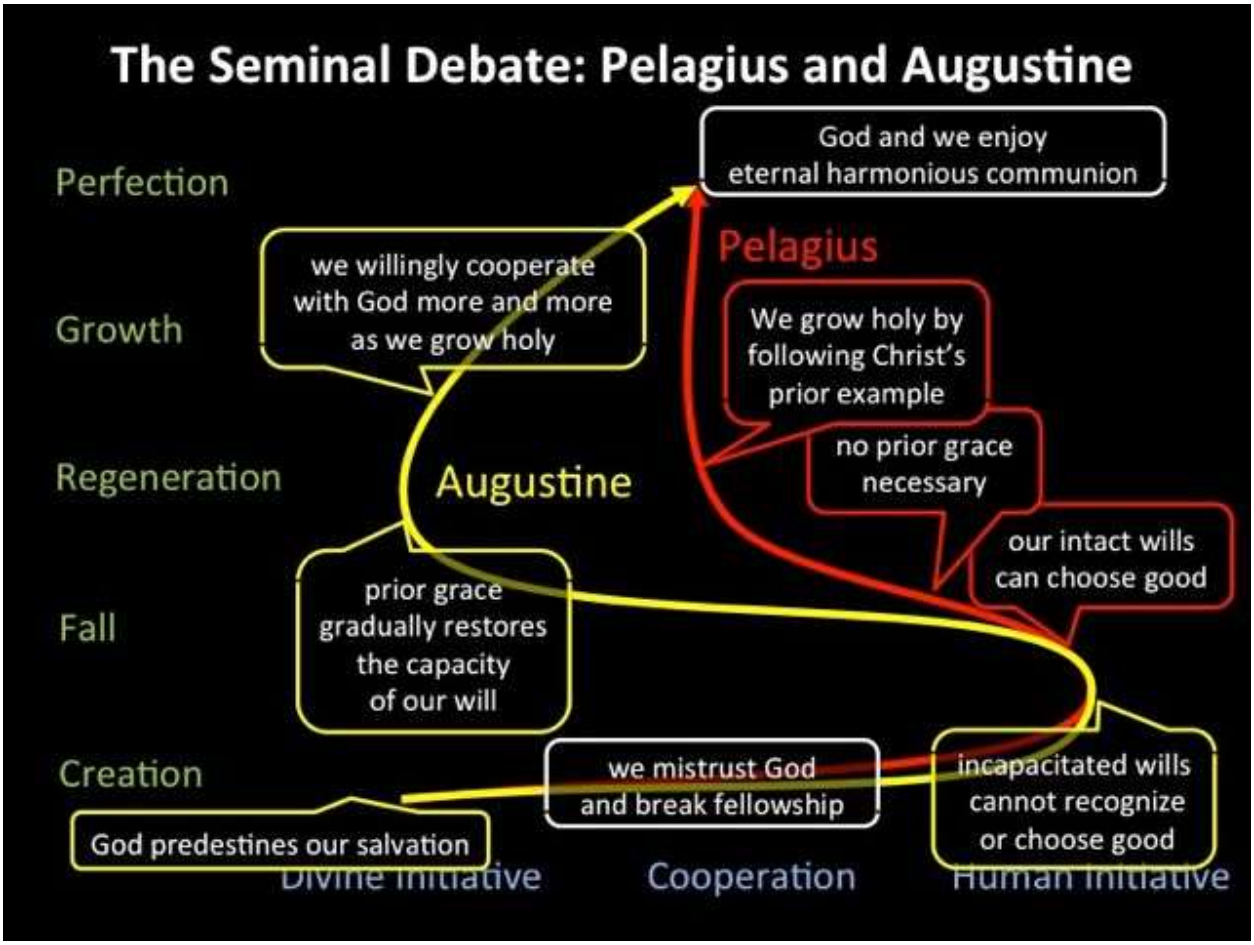
(alternate souce: https://truthplace.wordpress.com/)

Did AUGUSTINE corrupt the church with gnostic doctrine? (Yes)
https://bjorkbloggen.com/2013/01/25/did-augustine-corrupt-the-church-with-gnostic-doctrine-yes/

Augustine's View of Predestination: St. Augustine, Part 9
http://www.reasons.org/blogs/reflections/top-ten-things-augustine-contributed-to-philosophy-part-ii-2

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Predestination: History, Legacies, and Prospects



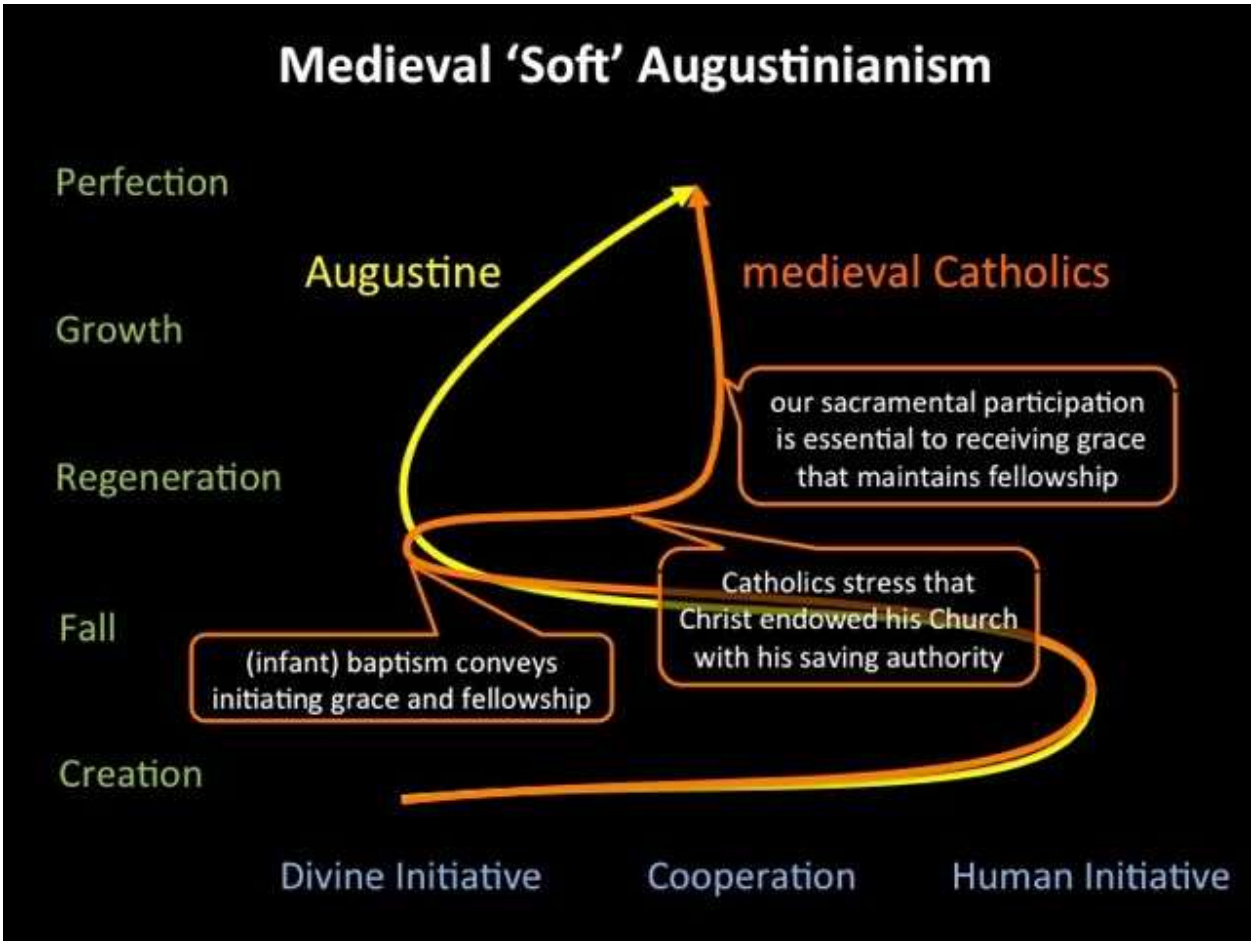
Continued next page….

See also: Predestination Revisited (discusses problems with Calvinism and that Predistination is NOT a Doctrine and it can't be supported directly from the Bible)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Augustine, against Pelagius and Julian, treats election as double-predestination.

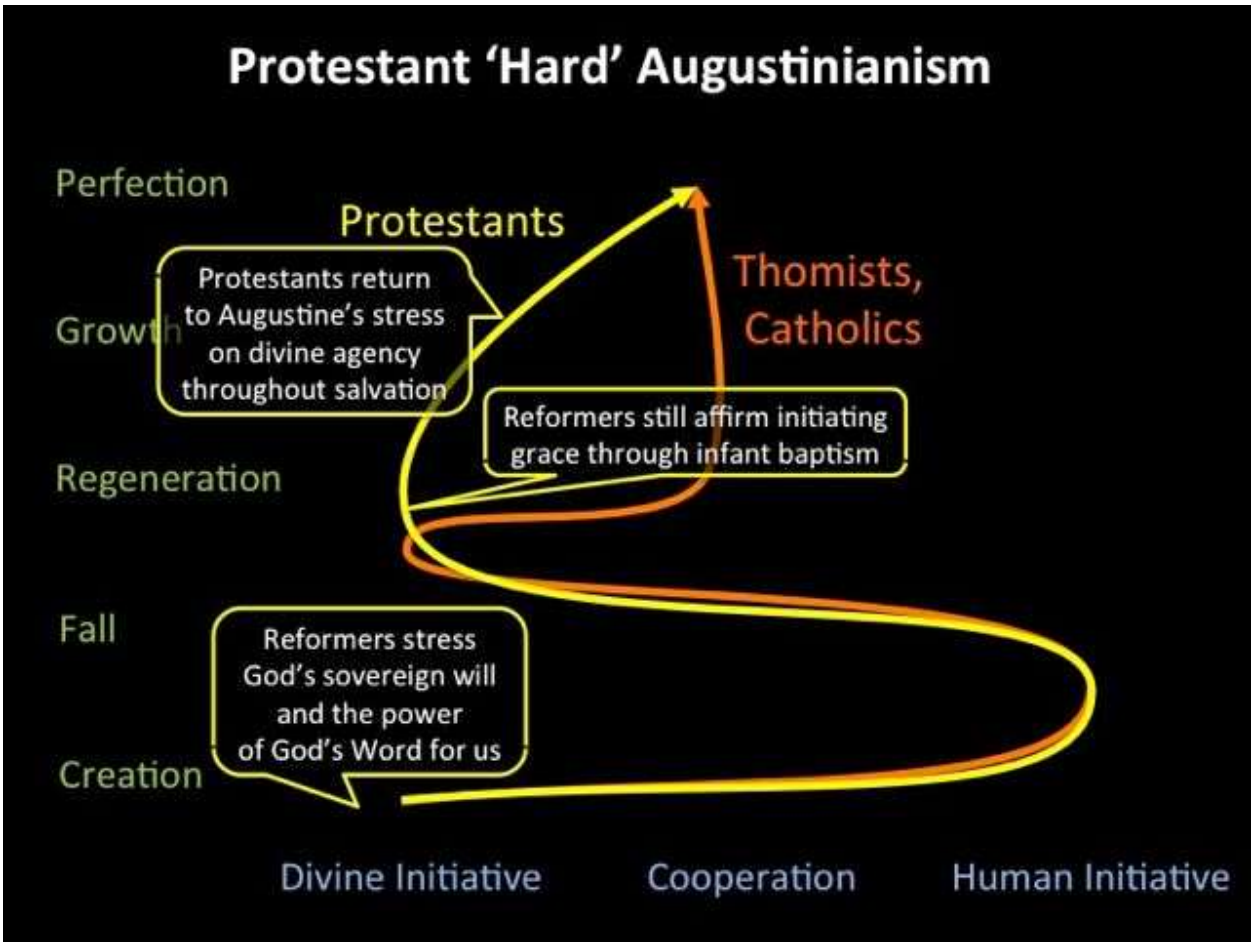
(Enchiridion: Human salvation restores heaven's perfect number of worshippers.)



Councils of Ephesis 431 and Orange 529 repudiate Pelagius.

Continued next page…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



Thomas Aquinas reworks predestination, as mediated through sacramental infusions of grace.

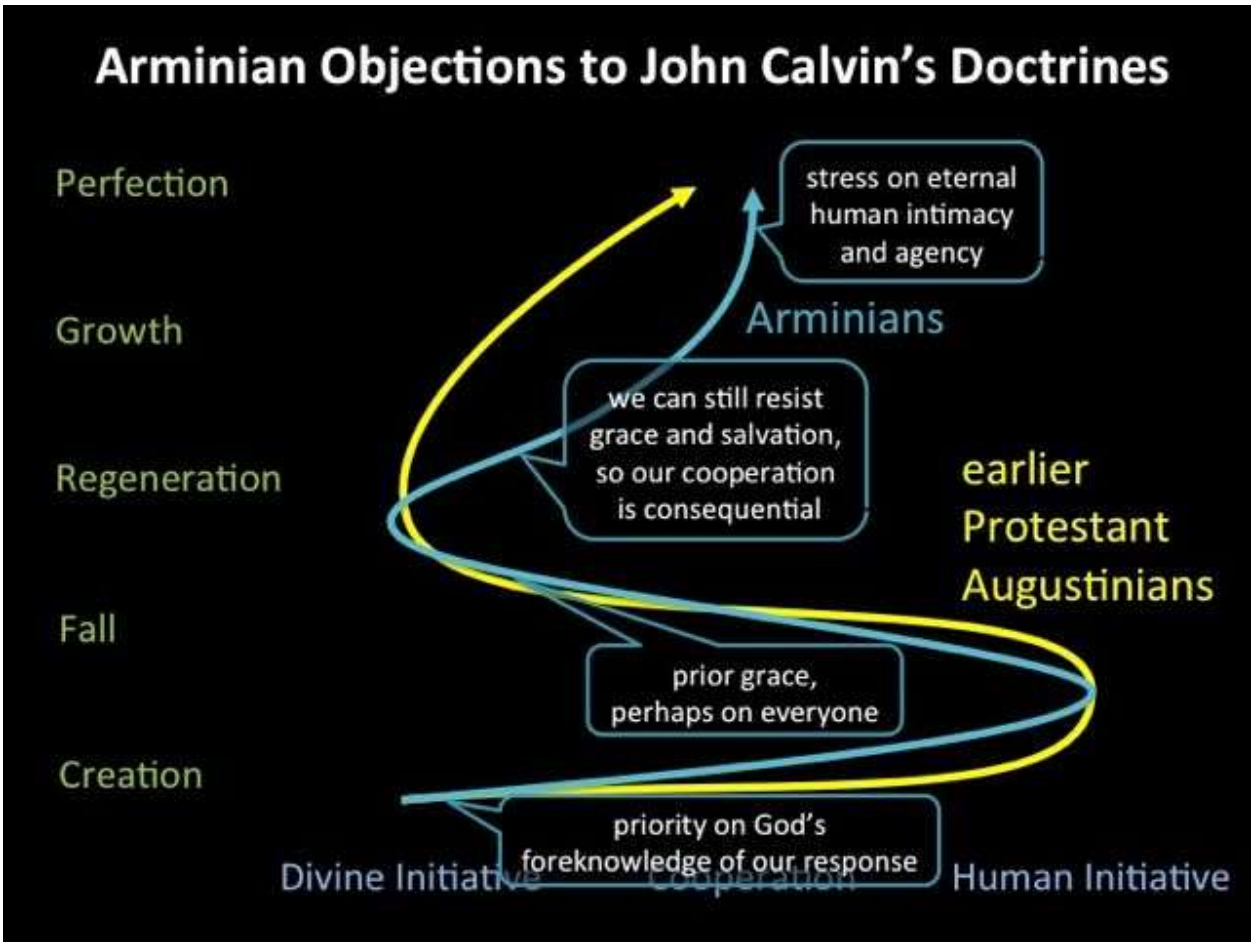
Continued next page…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Luther and Calvin affirm and even sharpen Augustinianism.

Continued next page…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



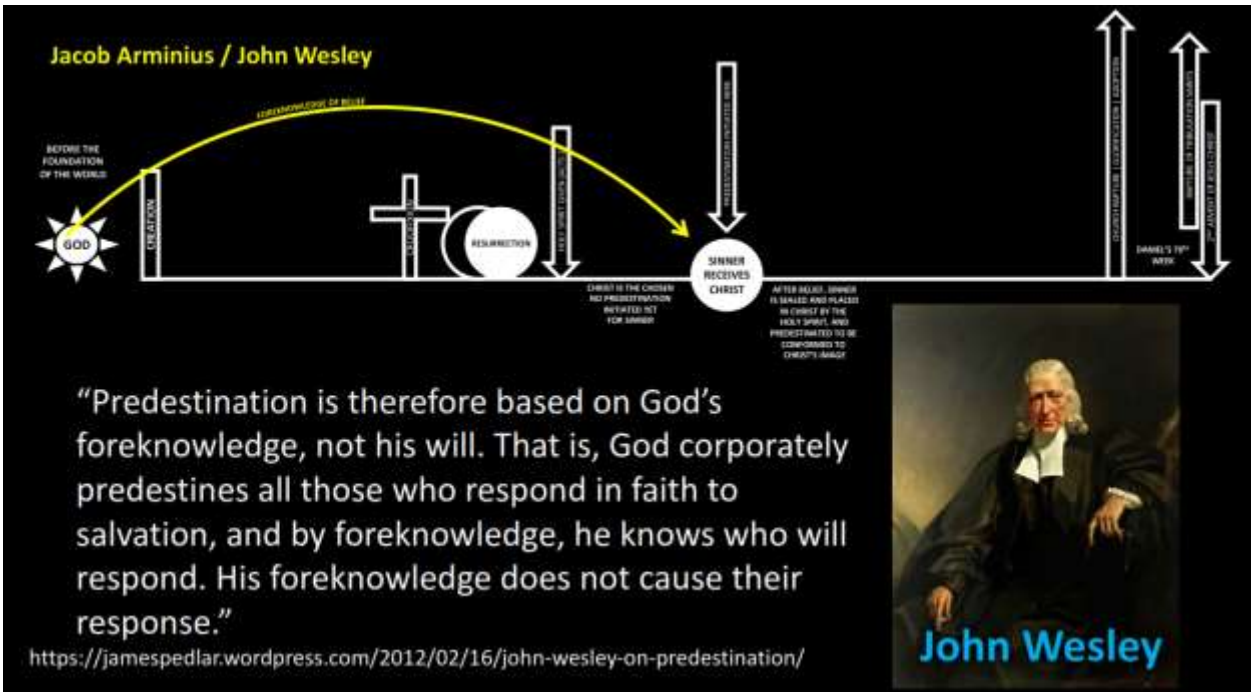
Slide from Predestination: It's Nothing Like You Were Told

Continued next page…

See also: Predestination Revisited (discusses problems with Calvinism and that Predistination is NOT a Doctrine and it can't be supported directly from the Bible)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Arminianism rejects or questions five Calvinist doctrines in the "Semi-Augustinian" Remonstrance, 1610.



Continued next page…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Slides from [Predestination: It's Nothing Like You Were Told]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Synod of Dort, 1619, reaffirms the five Calvinist claims ("the TULIP").

English-speaking Protestants inherit Thomist, Lutheran, Calvinist, and Arminian traditions.

Calvinist Sleight of Hand: A Brief Arminian Interaction With Wayne Grudem's Arguments Against the Compatibility of Foreknowledge And Conditional Election
https://arminianperspectives.wordpress.com/2017/06/07/calvinist-sleight-of-hand-a-brief-arminian-interaction-with-wayne-grudems-arguments-against-the-compatibility-of-foreknowledge-and-conditional-election/

See also: Predestination Revisited

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

I. A Brief History of the Doctrine in the West (election/predestination)

https://www.telfordwork.net/classes/doctrine/election.html

Excerpt:

How are God's agency and human agency interrelated?
Augustine, against Pelagius and Julian, treats election as double-predestination.

(Enchiridion: Human salvation restores heaven's perfect number of worshippers.)

Councils of Ephesis 431 and Orange 529 repudiate Pelagius.
Thomas Aquinas reworks predestination, as mediated through sacramental infusions of grace.
Luther and Calvin affirm and even sharpen Augustinianism.
Arminianism rejects or questions five Calvinist doctrines in the "Semi-Augustinian" Remonstrance, 1610.
The Synod of Dort, 1619, reaffirms the five Calvinist claims ("the TULIP").
English-speaking Protestants inherit Thomist, Lutheran, Calvinist, and Arminian traditions.

II. Children of Pelagius: Predestination's Legacies

Fatigue: Lasting dissatisfaction with the common positions and the whole debate.
Common ground: All orthodox positions affirm the original priority, mixed outcomes, and ultimate cooperativeness of grace.
Neglect: The terms of the debate, set in the fourth century, sideline Israel, God's chosen people, and Israel's Messiah.
Restlessness: Revisions of the doctrine proliferate, such as:

Universalism: Election is unconditional and atonement is unlimited.
Barth: Jesus is the elect one (with universalist consequences?).
Liberation theology: God necessarily favors the poor, or some other oppressed group(s) with whom Jesus shows solidarity.
Newbigin: Election pertains to mission, not necessarily salvation. (Leslie Newbigin Reading Room)

III. Election in Scripture: Not Exactly Arminian, Not Exactly Calvinist
Observations on scripture in view of the topic's legacy:

Election is ordered toward the blessing of others (Gen 12, Isa 42:1-6, Luke 9:28-36, John 15:16, Eph 1:3-14, Rom 9:21-23).
Election favors the weak, to glorify God and express God's heart (Gen 21, Deut 7:6-8, 1 Sam 16, Isa 53, Matt 20:15-16, Rom 9:17, 9:25-26).
Israel's fellowship remains central as both instrument and beneficiary (Isa 65:17-19, Rev 7, John 4:22, Rom 1:16, 9:1-5, 11:1-29).
Election centers conflict on salvation and greater glory rather than reprobation or symmetry (Isa 53, Ex 9:16 and Mal 1:2-5 in Rom 9:10-18, 11:30-32, John 17:12 and 17:20-23, Eph 3:4-6, 4:12-16).

IV. Annunciation as Election

Mary personifies Israel (Luke 1:26-33, 2:34-35).
Mary personifies the Church (Luke 1:48, Acts 1:14).
Mary's role is Christocentric (Christ-centered) rather than abstractly theocentric, narrowly Christomonist, or anthropocentric.

The Annunciation and Magnificat (Luke 1:46-55) model election.

Roman Catholic immaculate conception as predestination?

A Marian 'TULIP':

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Total human need (i.e., capacity) for receiving God's free saving gifts.
Purposeful divine favor, notably (i.e., gloriously) on the humble and excluded.
Sufficiency of God's saving acts in Christ, entrusted to Christ's empowered designates.
Unrivalled power of God's varied mercies to accomplish God's purpose.
Eternal faithfulness in fulfilling God's covenant promises.

See*: Annunciation as Election

See also: Predestination Revisited

Calvinism

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Predestination

http://www.christians.eu/predestination/

Excerpt:

1 Various Interpretations

The word "predestination" occurs several times in the Bible, but there are two main lines of thought about the understanding of this term.

- The first is predestination on the basis of foreknowledge. Predestination is the eternal decision of God, arising from love, by which he sets out a historical plan of salvation giving every person the possibility to receive eternal salvation. God predestined Jesus to be the only and absolute mediator between Himself and mankind.
- The second is the belief that God is sovereign and decides everything that will happen regardless of the will of man and that what God determines no man can change. Within this line of thought there are two directions of understanding: "single predestination", which some Lutherans believe in and "double predestination", which the Calvinists believe in. Single predestination means that God elects in advance who will go to heaven. Double predestination means that God determines in advance who will be in heaven and who will go to hell.

In the rest of this article the word "predestination" will be used for this second line of thought.

Within this second stream of understanding of predestination there are three important advocates:

1.1 Augustine (354–430)

Augustine was the first person to develop a systematic teaching of predestination. The compulsion he felt to defend the undeserved, arbitrary nature of grace led him to develop the doctrine of predestination. In "Ad Simplicianum" he developed his teaching explaining Romans 5:12 and Romans 9.

> So that the purpose of God does not stand according to election, but election is the result of the purpose of God. (Ad Simplicianum I,2,6)[1]

Moreover, he declares that God predestines as many men for heaven as there were angels who deserted the faith. (Faith, Hope and Charity /Enchiridion de fide, spe et caritate/ 9,29)

1.2 Luther (1483–1546)

Martin Luther, himself a monk of the order of Augustine, adopted and further developed this teaching more than thousand years later. In his most famous work "On the Bondage of the Will" he writes:

> For if we believe it to be true, that God fore-knows and fore-ordains all things; that he can be neither deceived nor hindered in his prescience[2] and predestination; and that nothing can take place but according to his will, (which reason herself is compelled to confess;) then, even according to the testimony of reason herself, there can be no Free-will—in man,—in angel,—or in any creature![3]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

1.3 Calvin (1509–1564)

John Calvin's teaching gained a lot of influence when it was discussed and developed at the Synod of Dort (1618-1619 in the Netherlands) and became the official teaching of the Reformed Church in the Netherlands.

> By predestination we mean the eternal decree of God, by which he determined with himself whatever he wished to happen with regard to every man. All are not created on equal terms, but some are preordained to eternal life, others to eternal damnation.
>
> (Institutio Christianae Religionis 3.21.5)

…

4 Consequences of This Teaching

- People who believe in predestination deny that man has a free will to accept or reject God's offer of salvation.
- They also believe that man is totally depraved, because if a man is able to do good, he can choose the good and seek God.

For when Gentiles, who do not have the law, by nature do what the law requires, they are a law to themselves…. (Romans 2:14)

- Furthermore if you are predestined to live an eternal life with God, it is impossible to go away from God, so if someone teaches predestination, he also has to deny the possibility of apostasy.

- Moreover someone who is elected cannot resist the "grace", because those who are predestined will come to God with certainty.

You stiff-necked people, uncircumcised in heart and ears, you always resist the Holy Spirit. As your fathers did, so do you. (Acts 7:51)

- Predestination annuls the importance of deeds. The Bible speaks very clearly of the fact that "faith without deeds is dead" and that faith alone cannot save a person.

> What good is it, my brothers, if someone says he has faith but does not have works? Can that faith save him? …Do you want to be shown, you foolish person, that faith apart from works is useless? (James 2:14,20)

This teaching, by stripping the deeds of their significance, maintains that it is not possible to see according to the fruits of a person whether he is a Christian or not.

This is a contradiction to Matthew 7:16 which tells us that we will recognize a tree by its fruit.

> You will recognize them by their fruits. Are grapes gathered from thorn bushes, or figs from thistles? (Matthew 7:16)

Real faith is followed by deeds of devotion.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

- "Church" loses its meaning because it is not clear anymore who belongs to the church and who does not. Within local "church" assemblies today there are many unbelievers, although it is clearly stated in 2 Corinthians 6:14–7:1 that believers and unbelievers can not be yoked together and fight for the same kingdom.

> Do not be unequally yoked with unbelievers. For what partnership has righteousness with lawlessness? Or what fellowship has light with darkness?
> What accord has Christ with Belial? Or what portion does a believer share with an unbeliever?
> What agreement has the temple of God with idols? For we are the temple of the living God; as God said, "I will make my dwelling among them and walk among them, and I will be their God, and they shall be my people.
> Therefore go out from their midst, and be separate from them, says the Lord, and touch no unclean thing; then I will welcome you, and I will be a father to you, and you shall be sons and daughters to me, says the Lord Almighty." Since we have these promises, beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from every defilement of body and spirit, bringing holiness to completion in the fear of God. (2 Corinthians 6:14–7:1)

Therefore a distinction has been made between the local "visible" church assemblies (where there are also unbelievers) and the "invisible church" made up of true believers independent of place and time. But this artificial distinction does not have any biblical basis.

- Predestination also means that even if someone wants to repent today, he cannot, because he has to wait till God "converts" him. This means that he cannot start to live a holy life pleasing to God, although in Hebrews 3:7–8 and Psalm 95:7–8 it is written: "Today if you hear his voice, do not harden your hearts as when they provoked me." This is a disastrous deception, which brings about passivity in people.
- False Image of God: If God predestined men regardless of their will, it would mean that God's wrath is upon those he does not save and that he would punish people whom he does not want to save in reality. It is not righteous to punish someone for something he is not responsible for; it is not his fault.
- Predestination states that everything happens according to the eternal plan of God. This would mean that God not only wants good, but also evil. This makes God the author of sin.
- There may be different teachings about predestination: single and double predestination. In the end there is no decisice difference. Both teachings exclude the free will of man. If God "only" chooses those who will go to heaven, then the others will automatically go to hell. In this way God's own nature is the reason for the condemnation of people.
- Whoever teaches predestination should be conscious of the fact that he understands and defines the nature of man in a wrong way. He deprecates the value of human being as a person. For being a person means being able and obliged to act out of liberty and reason, following certain motives and goals. It means being able to gain access to the sense of life and experiencing the effects that one's chosen way of life brings.

See also: Predestination Revisited

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

PREDESTINATION Revisited | Q&A (2023) [Recommended]
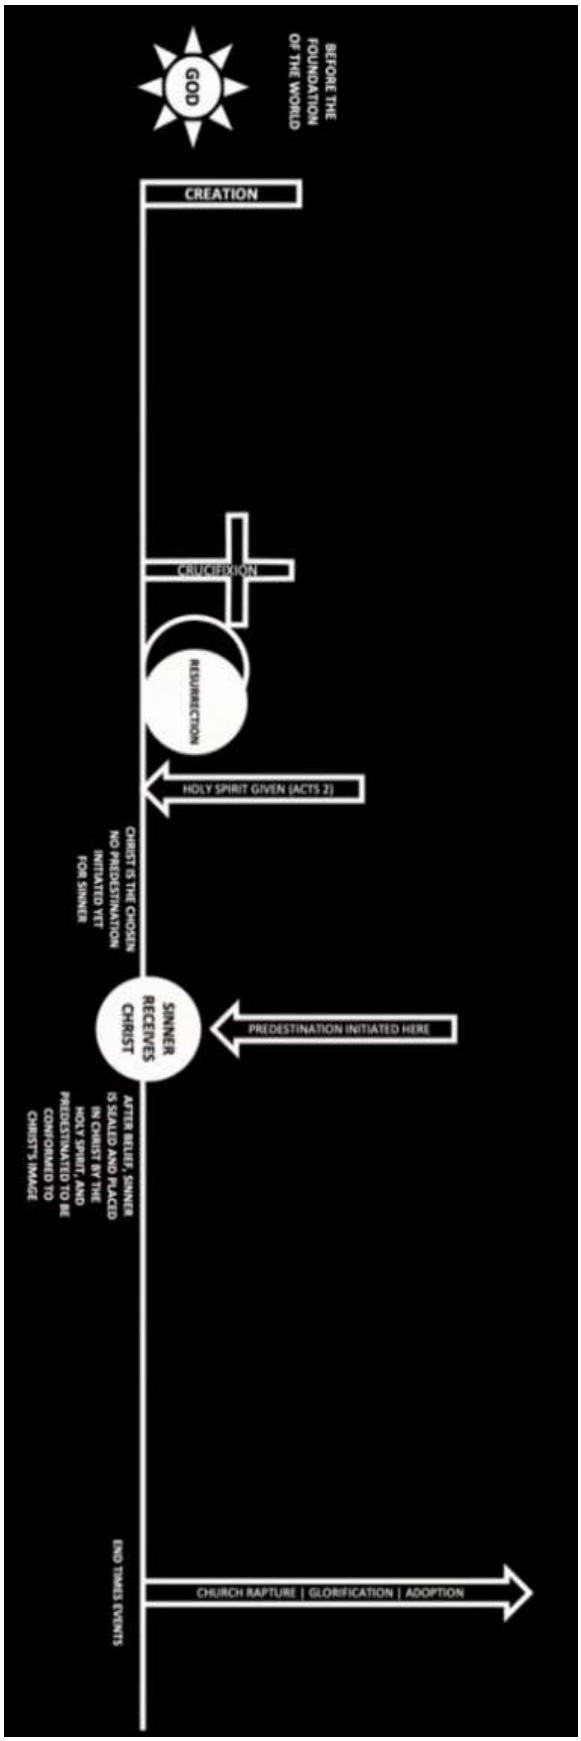
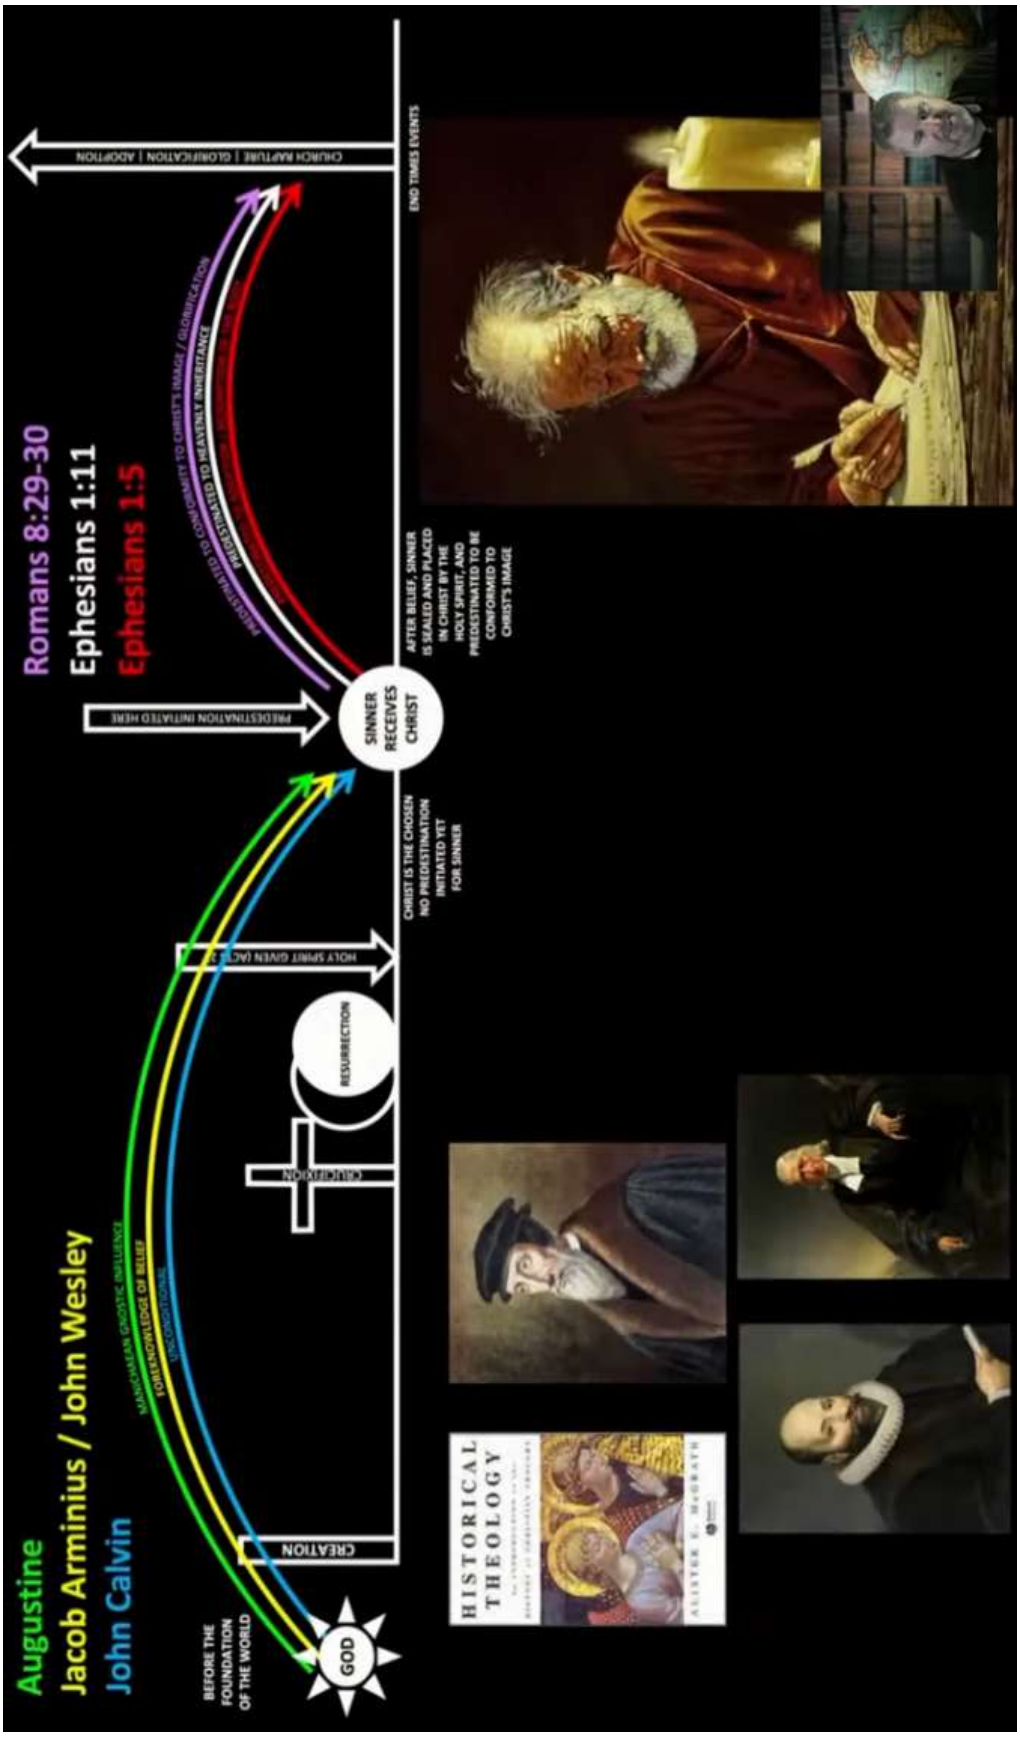
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=JcMg9I8TnGc

Kevin Thompson dedicates a full session to the concept of predestination and takes live questions from the live chat. (Updaing the 2017 video which is covered in the following section.)

(Web site: https://www.beyondthefundamentals.com/)



Here are some of the Main slides from this video:



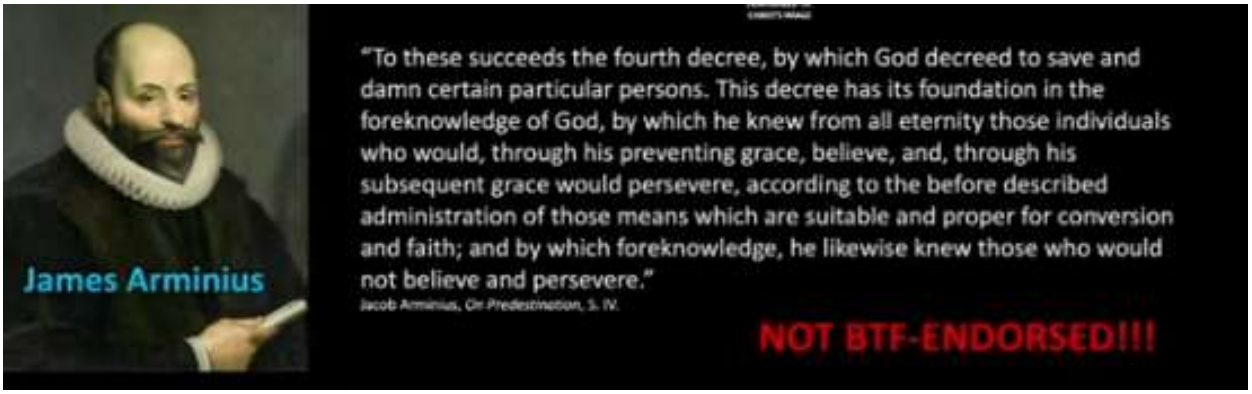
See next 2 pages for larger views of above 2 images…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Augustine



John Calvin

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

James Arminius

John Wesley

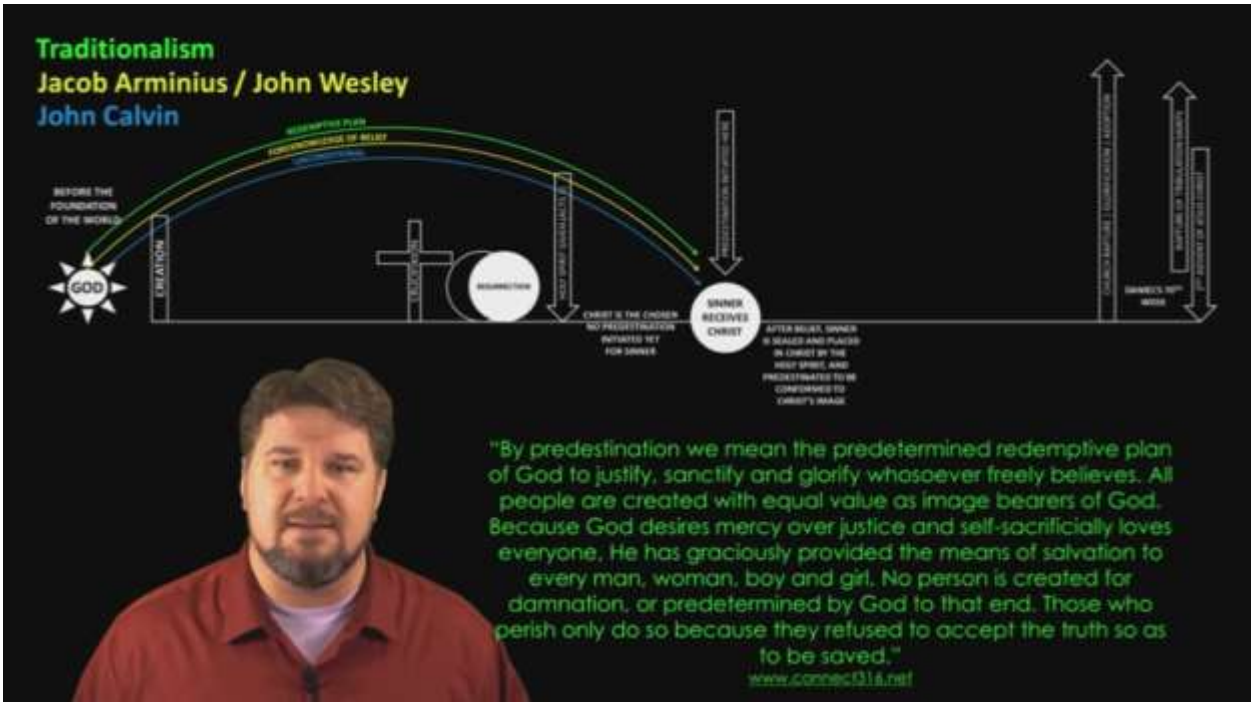
Adoption = the redemption of our body Gal. 4:6 …into your hearts, crying, Abba…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

NOTE: The following pages (slides/comments) come from the 2017 video and is suberseded by the above 2023 video (slides)… (see: Predestination Revisited)

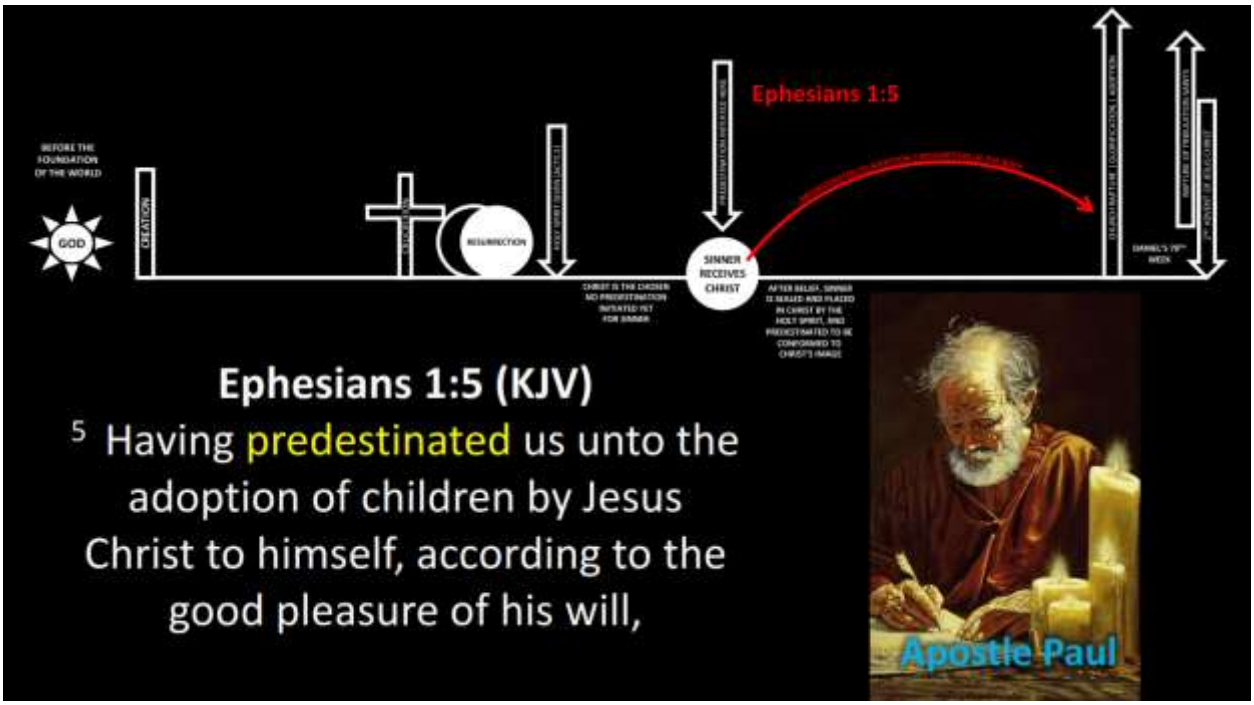
(See above note)

Predestination: It's Nothing Like You Were Told (2017)

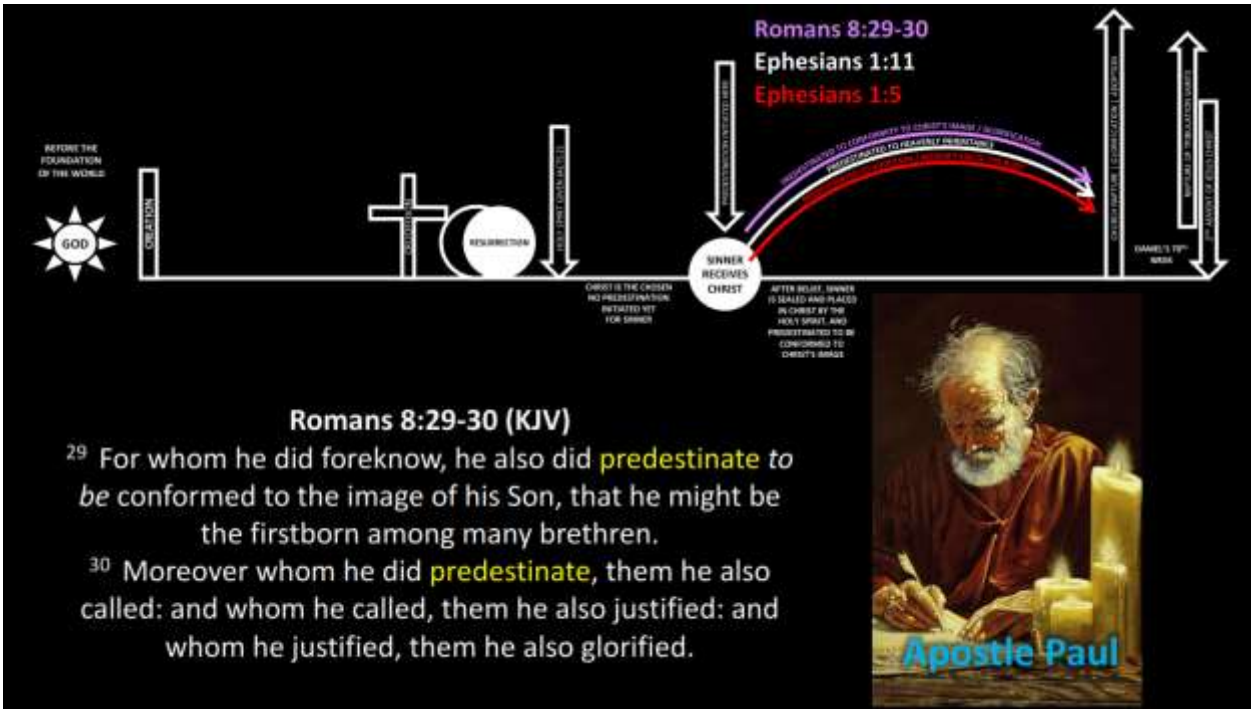


https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=7jTf58y5ZKg [Video] See also*: Ephesians: Predestination

The concept of "predestination" is one of the most misunderstood subjects in scripture. It is famously associated with Calvinism, but even non-Calvinists are largely tainted with Calvinist premises of this concept. The goal of this video is to quickly and easily equip the viewer to break away from the false premises and presuppositions and deal clearly and plainly with exactly what scripture says about the matter. After viewing this video, any honest Bible believer will be able to confidently employ scripture to explain this topic soundly, while avoiding doctrinal error.



http://www.beyondthefundamentals.com/download/predestination_presentation.pdf [PDF]
[NOTE: I have copies of these files -LY]



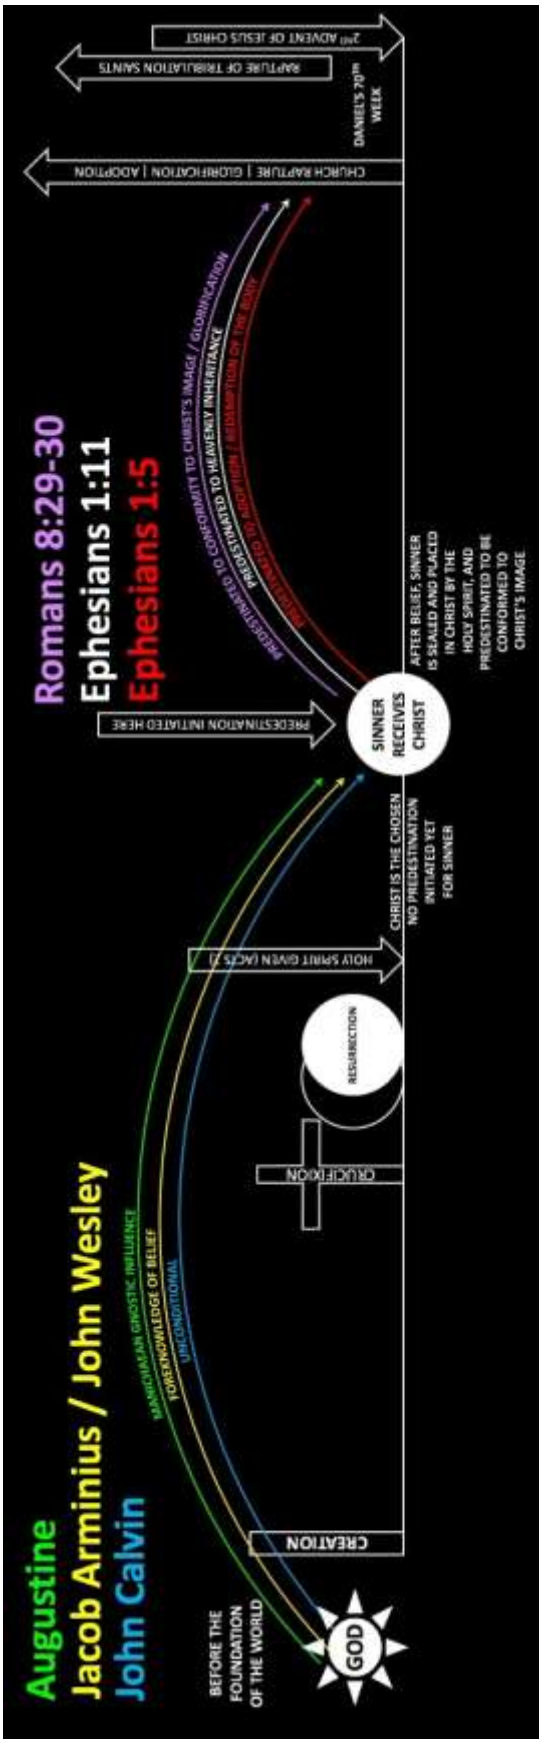
http://www.beyondthefundamentals.com/download/predestination_presentation_pwd.pptx [PPT]
(Note: Password Protected)
[See Legacy Documents: https://www.beyondthefundamentals.com/legacy-documents.html]

Web site:
https://www.beyondthefundamentals.com/

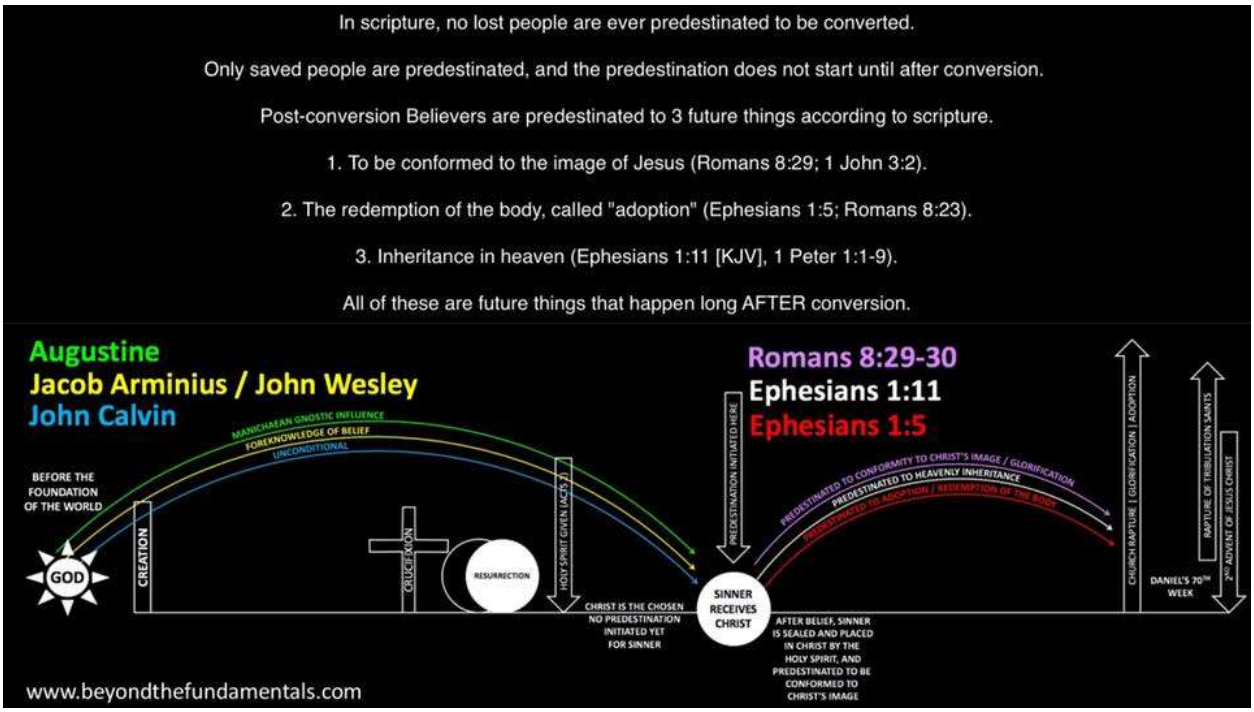
 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Scriptual Occurances of the word (Greek: proorizō) for predestinate/-ed…



Strongs: g4309. προορίζω proorizō; from 4253 and 3724; to limit in advance, i.e. (figuratively) predetermine: — determine before, ordain, predestinate.



See larger view on next page….

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

See larger view on next page…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Predestination Definitions:

See also*: Predestination Definitions

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

CHOSEN [CENSORED] - What They've Been Hiding From Ephesians 1:4
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=kmHgZLHjKpU [Video] [Out of Date see video below]

See also: http://www.beyondthefundamentals.com/

[See Legacy Documents: https://www.beyondthefundamentals.com/legacy-documents.html]

"CHOSEN" - Ephesians 1:4 and The Inductive Method
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=3a17ghWvaz0

Eternal Security – Biblical Reasons Why the Believer Cannot Lose Salvation
http://www.beyondthefundamentals.com/download/eternal-security.pdf [PDF] [Prelim. Notes (PDF)]

Calvinism Defeated - Playlist
http://www.beyondthefundamentals.com/calvinism-defeated.html

Baptism; Jews to Gentiles; The Gospel – Transitional Perspectives
http://www.beyondthefundamentals.com/download/transitional_perspective_-_notes.pdf [PDF]

Romans 9 – De-Calvinized
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=GFbKeIbrDWw [Video]

See also: Predestination Revisited

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Faith of God's Elect by John F. Parkinson [Referenced in Predestination Revisited]

Reviewed in the United States on September 17, 2010 on Amazon

"The Faith of God's Elect" Parkinson, John F. (Gospel Tract Publications, Glasgow, 1999)

The aim of the "The Faith of God's Elect" is to compare the election of Scripture with the election of theology. I seek to show that they are incompatible, contradictory, and materially different.

In Chapter1 we look at what the scriptures mean by election and predestination. All of God's purposes are centred in His Son. The Elect of God is His own beloved Son, our Lord Jesus Christ. Those who are in Him are chosen in Him. We share in His chosenness. The church is God's heavenly election, chosen in Christ before the foundation of the world, for blessings which are heavenly, spiritual and eternal. Election is not to salvation, but to blessings and purposes which follow salvation. Election applies exclusively to the redeemed, having no relevance to the unbeliever. Such is the election of Scripture.

The election of theology, on the other hand, presents a very different picture. In Chapter 2 we trace the origin of the election of theology. We are asked to believe that God has elected by an unchangeable decree those persons whom He will save and those whom He will reject. We observe that this unscriptural idea had its origin in the ideas of Augustine of Hippo. The later Reformed school, considering this dogma to be orthodox doctrine, adopted Augustine's views of double predestination as the foundational premise of their system. They superimposed this misconception on the Scriptures and by a chain of deductive syllogisms arrived at five-point Calvinism. We argue that the technique of syllogistic logic comes from Aristotle and is a totally inappropriate method for the formulation of Christian doctrine.

In Chapter3 we offer a critique of the 5 points of Calvinism and also critically appraise the methodology used in their formulation. We argue that the 5 points are not derived by sound inductive Bible exposition, but are the result of faulty deductive reasoning.

In Chapter 4 we have appealed for an approach to Scripture which will neither add to, nor take away from, the sacred text.

The conclusion of the book is that Calvinist theology seriously misrepresents the Scriptural themes of election and predestination. But by far the most serious outcome of this defective system is its implications for the gospel message. It is noted that on the last great day of the Feast of Tabernacles, the Lord Jesus stood up and cried in the temple : "If any man thirst, let him come unto me, and drink" (John 7:37). The temple would have been crowded with men from all parts of Israel, and from `every nation under heaven'. Let us, for a moment, allow the Calvinist his assumption that God has eternally and unchangeably decreed the choices and destinies of all men. What implications would that have for the Lord's offer to those men in His hearing whom He had excluded from His election, and to whom He would deny the gift of faith? The implications are unthinkable. It would mean that the Lord was inviting non-elect men to Himself in bad faith. We submit that there must be something very wrong with a theology which could put such a shocking construction on the Lord's words, while distorting and removing the element of grace from the gospel message. Some have tolerated the obvious contradictions by appealing to imaginary parallel lines which are supposed to accommodate the contradictions. We are asked to believe that the contradictions are only apparent and will be resolved in eternity. But the contradictions and tensions are caused when we impose the misconceptions of theology on the Scriptures. When we keep to the Scriptures there are no contradictions. We agree with the advice of Sir Robert Anderson, quoted at the commencement of the book, that the Scriptural truth of election must be kept apart from the Augustinian doctrine.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Many Christians assume without question that election refers to God's choice of certain sinners to life. Some have got locked in an argument between Calvinism and Arminianism as if there were no alternative. It is vital to realise that the election of Scripture does not relate to the salvation of the sinner, but to the saints and their blessings in Christ which follow salvation.

The book concludes with the following: "When I am asked if I believe in God's election, I reply that I most certainly do. But lest there should be some misunderstanding between the questioner and myself, I hasten to add that I believe in the election of Scripture, not in the election of theology. The Scriptural truth of election does not limit or prejudice the gospel message in any way. The gospel is a genuine invitation to all men everywhere. Salvation is of the LORD and woe betide the person who would try to limit it according to human logic. It is the Spirit's work to convince the world of sin, righteousness and judgment. Salvation is entirely God's work, but rather than limiting the scope of the gospel, this glorious truth liberates it. Any person can become a vessel of mercy (Rom 9:23); one of Christ's sheep (John 10:9); one of the Father's given ones (John 6:37); one of those who shall believe on Him (John 17:20); and, gloriously true, one of God's elect (Titus 1:1). God is sovereign, and because of Calvary, He is free to save whom He pleases. The gospel message is that He is pleased to save those who believe. Let us shed our theological baggage and grasp this truth afresh with both hands. It is vital that the trumpet gives no uncertain sound on this note. Paul told Timothy to pray for all men, because God will have all men to be saved, and because the man Christ Jesus gave Himself a ransom for all (1 Tim 2:1-6). Who would dare put a limit on the ministry of the Holy Spirit? Who would limit the vastness of the love of God? Or like the clay dictating to the potter, who would dare to limit the sufficiency of Christ's death? We conclude our study by quoting again the great gospel truth which flows from the heart of a loving, gracious, and sovereign God to a world of lost and perishing sinners:

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

"For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life. For God sent not his Son into the world to condemn the world; but that the world through him might be saved" (John 3:16-17).

Submitted by John Parkinson (Author)

Biblical Election: The Election of Scripture Part 1 - Br. John Parkinson
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=sd6c27NVuyk
Br. John Parkinson answers an essential question of what does the Bible mean by Election and Predestination? With the aid of foundational texts, he clarifies common misconceptions about these concepts and gives a straightforward definition for both. He concludes by defining Biblical adoption and clearing up some confusion.

Biblical Election: The Election of Scripture Part 2 - Br. John Parkinson
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=KDa3jx_7Bqk
Br. John Parkinson begins the sermon by citing interesting quotes by writers on this subject. Following that, he clarifies all the misconceptions about John 5 and Romans 9, which are the Calvinist proof texts. Finally, he revisits the previously defined meaning of biblical election and predestination.

Biblical Election: The Election of Theology - Br. John Parkinson
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=KPC53bz004I
In this sermon, Br. John Parkinson gives an overview of the Election of Theology. He examines the teachings of Augustine, Calvin, Arminius, and Beza and points where they went wrong. He describes what a Syllogism is and explains how the deductive methodology is misused in this area, culminating with the 5-point Calvinist approach, abbreviated as TULIP.

Biblical Election: Adding to the Scriptures - Br. John Parkinson
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=xEyZ25vG6NQ
In the fourth part of this series Br. John Parkinson takes a deep dive into the Five-point Calvinism. He examines the abbreviation TULIP, Total depravity, Unconditional election, Limited atonement, Irresistible grace and Perseverance of saints.

Biblical Election: Keeping to the Scripture - Br. John Parkinson
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=SWAk3zpIHvE
Br. John Parker concludes this series, he looks at the true meaning of the gospel and contrasts it with the false definitions common to Calvinists. He then discusses seven important principles for believers as they approach studying the Bible. As a final note, he finishes with an assessment of recent trends and arguments in Calvinism, as well as some good sources to delve further into this topic.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Biblical Election (5 video series, playlist) (see previous page for details)
https://www.youtube.com/playlist?list=PLsB2z1C1cJxB2wodkNcypt_VheGwRnvXR Playlist of sermons on Biblical Election and Predestination by Br. John Parkinson

Book Review: 13 Books About Calvinism (See also: Calvinism)
https://www.webtruth.org/essential-books/book-review-13-books-about-calvinism/

The Bible Validates Itself – John Parkinson
https://www.webtruth.org/scientific-issues/the-bible-validates-itself/

Book title currently owned by UK publisher:
https://www.ritchiechristianmedia.co.uk/

https://www.ritchiechristianmedia.co.uk/product/the-faith-of-gods-elect

Other books:
https://www.gospelfolio.com/?s=john+parkinson&post_type=product

John Parkinson, Christian Author

Wednesday, February 10, 2016

The Necessity of Biblical Discernment (Posted by Eli G)

“Prove all things; hold fast that which is good.” - 1 Thessalonians 5:21 KJV

“Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth.” - 2 Timothy 2:15 KJV

The Harbringer? Four Blood Moons? Do these book names sound familiar? Since being back in America I have continued to notice an increasing flow of ‘Christian’ media that attempt to appeal to our sensibilities with some amazing, yet not necessarily biblical ideas. Books such as these almost always tend to make the appeal that they are indeed biblical, and are therefore reliable sources for spiritual insight. The word biblical has become a catch phrase to attempt to reassure the Christian reader to lower his guard and accept the contents of said material as legitimate. At one time the term biblical indicated that the material in question had undergone the necessary scrutiny and is generally in line with sound doctrine. However in recent times it appears to be more of a label to make the content seem to be what it may not actually be, I.E. - doctrinally-sound, biblically-responsible information. Given the information overflow available to us today through various venues of technology it has become even more necessary that God's people develop biblical discernment. My personal concern is that we not lower our guard and accept any material as biblical without putting the said material through certain tests to determine if it is indeed biblical.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

So, consider these testing measures taken from the book, The Faith of God's Elect by John F. Parkinson, when using 'Christian' media forms that quote scriptures to help develop a discerning mind:

1) Observe what the verse actually says. What is the verse in question actually talking about? Does the verse in question have anything to do with what the author is trying to say it means?

2) Consider the context. Is the verse taken out of the context of the passage in order to prove a pre-supposed point rather than faithfully teaching what passage is talking about?

3) Do not add to the scriptures. Are modern concepts or logical inferences added to the verse to prove a point? Is a non-faithful bible version that adds to scriptures being used to derive a new conclusion about a verse?

4) Do not take away from the scriptures. Are modern concepts or logical inferences used to remove from the verse to prove a point? Is a non-faithful bible version that takes away from scriptures being used to derive a conclusion about a verse?

5) Compare scripture with scripture. Is the material in question being taught derived from being compared with other scriptures as a coherent whole, or is it taken out of the flow of consistent scriptural reasoning to support a new idea?

6) Be silent when the scriptures are silent. Does the material in question try to project ideas on to the scriptures when the scriptures are silent about them?

7) Use scriptural language and terms. Does the material in question apply modern word use to biblical terminology? Does the material in question redefine commonly accepted biblical terminology?

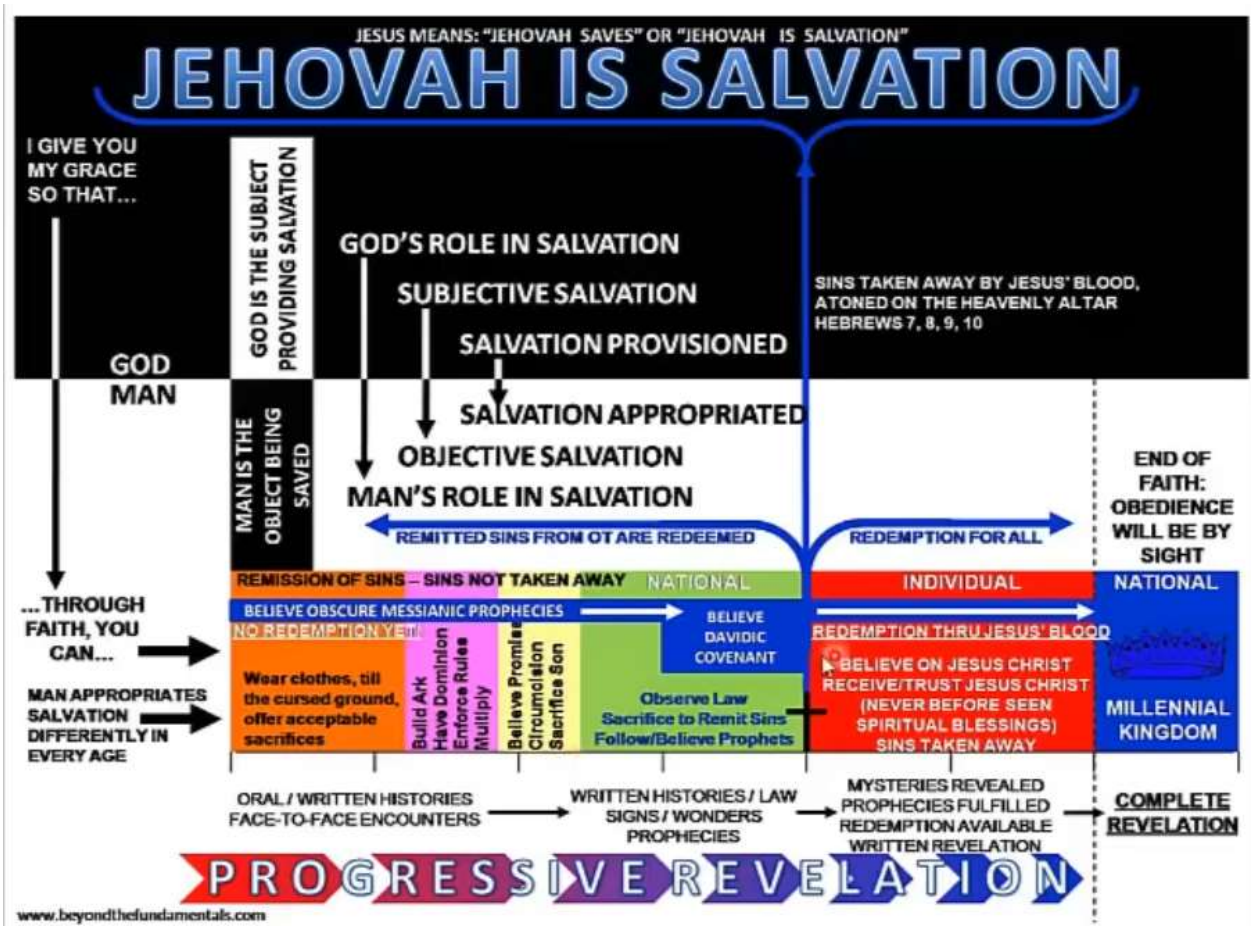
Properly discerning scripture takes time. Lord willing with the aid of the scriptures, a strong's concordance, a good dictionary, help from a reliable biblically discerning teacher, and prayer we can put in the necessary effort to gain biblical discernment.

Posted by Eli G at 3:23 PM

See also: Predestination Revisited

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Election, Calvinism, Predestination: Scripture vs. Calvinism



https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=4gmOTHNFH0o [Video]

Continued on next page…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

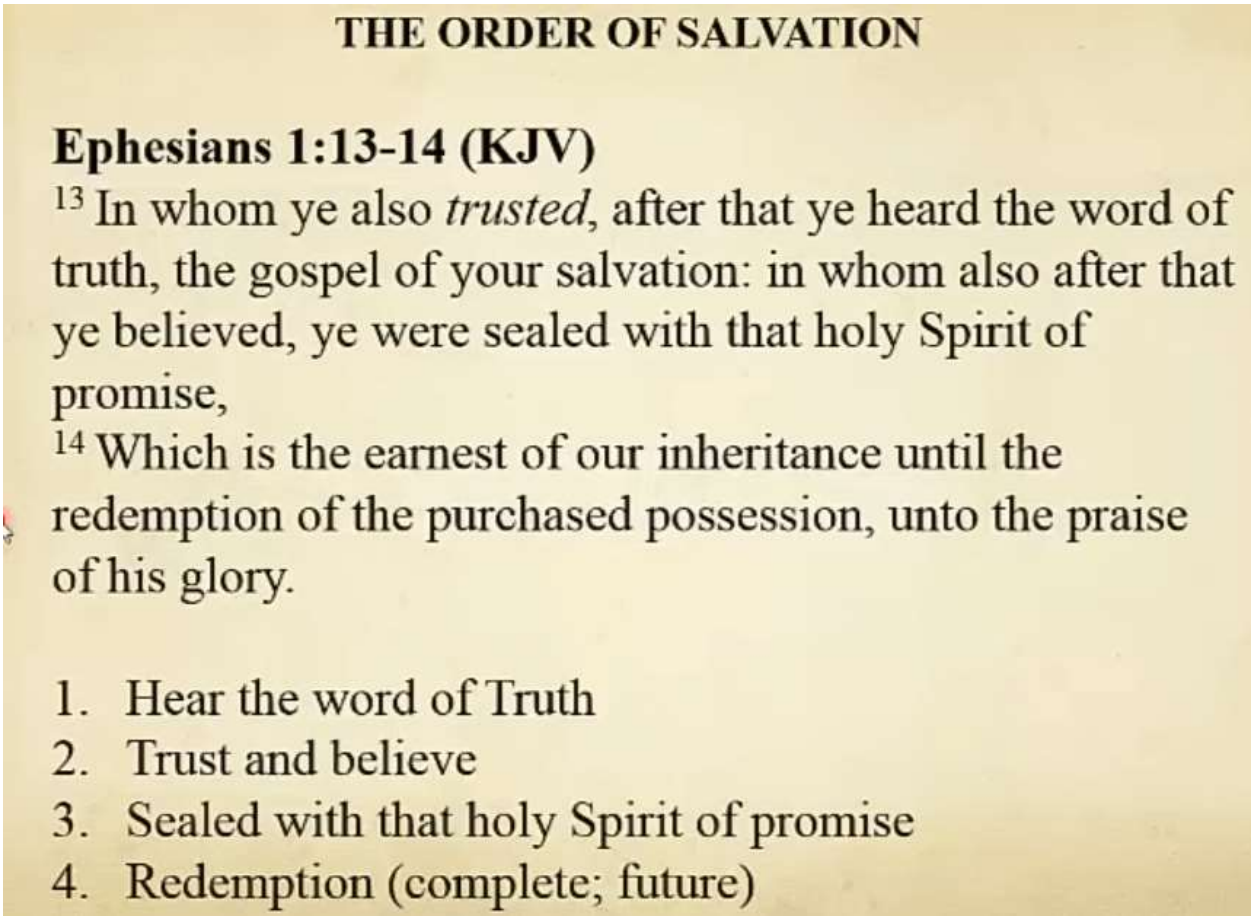
Progressive Revelation…

Continued on next page…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The 4 As of Salvation from Genesis to Revelation

Application: The Blood of Jesus Christ is applied to the Sinner's life and sins. This Justifies them in the sight of God. No one in any age can ever work to earn this. (Subjective Salvation: God's role in salvation) (1 Pet. 3:19; Eph. 4:8-10)



Appropriation: What a person DOES in order to be considered a faithful believer (Law, sacrifices, belief in promises, receive Jesus Christ). This unquestionably changes throughout the Bible. Daniel's 70th Week and the Millennial Kingdom have some changes yet to come. (Objective Salvation: Man's role in salvation)

Accession: The time when a person is securely and finally sealed into the family of God (Matt. 24:13 vs. Eph. 1:13). This changes under the different covenants throughout scripture.

Accessorization: That with which the believer is equipped or outfitted in order to aid them in accomplishing God's purpose for their service while on earth. (53 examples for the church age: http://www.biblebelievers.com/Doege1.html)

Continued next page…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

THE ORDER OF SALVATION

Ephesians 1:13-14 (KJV)

13 In whom ye also trusted, after that ye heard the word of truth, the gospel of your salvation: in whom also after that ye believed, ye were sealed with that holy Spirit of promise, 14 Which is the earnest of our inheritance until the redemption of the purchased possession, unto the praise of his glory.

1. Hear the word of Truth
2. Trust and believe
3. Sealed with that holy Spirit of promise
4. Redemption (complete; future)

Continued on next page…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Continued on next page…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

ELECT ACCORDING TO FOREKNOWLEDGE

1 Peter 1:2-5 (KJV)
2 Elect according to the foreknowledge of God the Father, through sanctification of the Spirit, unto obedience and sprinkling of the blood of Jesus Christ: Grace unto you, and peace, be multiplied.
3 Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which according to his abundant mercy hath begotten us again unto a lively hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead,
4 To an inheritance incorruptible, and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for you,
5 Who are kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation ready to be revealed in the last time.
1 Peter 1:9 (KJV)
9 Receiving the end of your faith, even the salvation of your souls.

Election is based on foreknowledge. The Christian is sealed for it upon Salvation (Eph. 1:13-14; 4:30; 2 Cor. 1:22) and its effectiveness has to do with FUTURE blessings for which the believer is predestinated AFTER he is in Christ. (Note the future aspect of vs. 4-9)

Continued on next page…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Election Word Occurrence Analysis
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=9CBfPjjVnzE
This video covers every occurrence of the Greek and Hebrew words that are translated as "chosen" and "elect" and related words. This is designed to equip the Bible believer to stave off onslaughts of Calvinism both individually, and in religious support groups.

Purchase the MS PowerPoint file on Etsy: https://www.etsy.com/listing/69694404...

Purchase the MS Excel Spreadsheet on Etsy: https://www.etsy.com/listing/68162788...

Video – Why 2 Thessalonians 2:13 does not support Calvinism:
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=5P58kq3WMK0&t=0s

Video – Predestination: It's nothing like you were told:
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=7jTf58y5ZKg&t=0s

Video – Election [CENCORED] – What They've been hiding from Ephesians 1:4:
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=kmHgZLHjKpU&t=0s

Video – Why John 15:16 does not support Calvinism:
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=fNkYHSxgTCI&t=0s

Video – Romans 9 and Calvinist Deception:
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=AApBbNXeU24&t=0s

Video – 1 Tim. 1:9, 2:10, 25-26 De-Calvinized:
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=APw1rEWPCPU&t=0s

ELECTION: It's Nothing Like You Were Told https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=S0TUH60Cd78

Election to Salvation?
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=sy2SmUpZsjs

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

John 6:44 – Preparing to Converse with a Calvinist

https://www.youtube.com/watch?time_continue=868&v=NTu6aFsroqs [Video]

Presentation slides: http://www.beyondthefundamentals.com/download/john_6-44_slides.pdf [PDF]

Excerpt (p. 46):

NOTE: Above Information (on this and the previous pages) is from BeyondTheFundamentals by Kevin Thompson – a KJO advocate

(See also: Calvinism)

Foreknowledge, Predestination and Election

http://www.jesus-is-savior.com/Basics/predestination.htm

http://www.thecambroninstitute.org/library/Foreknowledge,_Predestination,_and_Election.pdf [PDF]

https://heritagebbc.com/wp-content/uploads/2015/03/foreknowledgepredestinationandelection.pdf [PDF]

Excerpt:

The Foreknowledge of God

"For whom he did foreknow, he also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of his Son, that he might be the firstborn among many brethren." (Romans 8:29)

Foreknowledge means to have knowledge of things to be. Foreknowledge is an attribute of God, while

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Predestination and Election are acts of God. Only God knows the future. He wouldn't be God if He didn't, but the fact that He knows who is going to be saved, and who isn't going to be saved, does NOT determine who is going to be saved and who is going to be lost. Someone may ask, "If God does know who is and who isn't going to be saved, how then, can the sinner get out of it?"

Foreknowledge, in Scripture, never determines what is to be-- foreknowledge is only the knowledge of things to be beforehand. It is the same with our scientists, they can tell when there is to be an eclipse of the sun or of the moon: on a certain day at a certain hour, minute and second; but the scientists do not bring about the eclipse. God has foreknowledge, and by this foreknowledge knows the future, but that is where it ends.

Of course God knows everything! He knows the very number of the hairs of our heads. He knows the number of stars and calleth them by name. God knows everything, including the future. And, not only that, but God knows what would have happened if things had happened that didn't happen. He knows the results of all possibilities. The same is illustrated when David inquired of the Lord concerning his enemy. If he should go to one place, would the enemy be there? God said they would. So David went in another direction. Foreknowledge simply means to possess knowledge of things to be.

The Predestination of God

Here is where many saints falter in their witnessing. They read something or other in the Word about predestination and then they reason that God predestinates some people to be saved, and thus predestinates some people to be lost. This is not the case. To begin with, predestination is never for the lost man; but rather, predestination is for the saved men. We have only to read our Bibles, and read the context where it is speaking of predestination, to clearly understand that Salvation is, indeed, a personal matter based upon the "whosoever wills"…

Election

"According as he hath chosen us in him before the foundation of the world, that we should be holy and without blame before him in love:" (Eph. 1:4)

The New Testament words "chosen, choose, and election" are the same. The Old Testament word is simply "chosen." From the above Scripture many have felt that God chooses some to be saved and some to be lost. Again I want to point out that predestination and election (choosing) have nothing to do with the lost, but are for the saved…

Context Retreat Diagrams – Eternity, Foreknowledge, Election; Systems

http://lifeonthehill.server300.com/wp-content/uploads/2014/06/Context%20Retreat%20Diagrams.pdf [PDF]

Election, Predestination and Foreknowledge

http://www.christian-moral.net/pdf/election-predestination-and-foreknowledge.pdf [PDF]

The False Predestination and the Fifth Commandment

http://bibleserralta.com/PredestinationFifthCommandment.html

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Warehouse of Souls Before Birth (and Circumstantial Predestination) http://bibleserralta.com/WarehouseOfSouls.html

Foreknowledge, Then Election and Predestination
http://interpretingscriptures.com/_pdf/foreknowledge.pdf [PDF]

Foreknowledge and Predestination
http://www.nelsonprice.com/foreknowledge-and-predestination/

The Order of Salvation and Divine Foreknowledge
http://ronleigh.com/bible/ordersal/index.htm

Predestination, Salvation and Damnation - Calvinism and Catholicism Contrasted
http://www.biblicalcatholic.com/apologetics/num21.htm (a Catholic Perspective)

NOTE: Predestination is used six times in the scriptures, all in the New Testament (Ac 4:28, Ro 8:29, Ro 8:30, 1 Co 2:7, Eph 1:5, Eph 1:11). The Greek word (proorizo) can be translated as decreed, predestined, foreordain, decided beforehand or destined. Different translations use different English words, but they all are the same Greek word.
http://foundationsforfreedom.net/Topics/Theology/Election-Predestination-Romans08_28-30.html

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Greek Word Studies: προορίξω 'proorizo' meaning 'predestine' (Strong's 4309)

https://www.logosapostolic.org/greek-word-studies/4309-proorizo-predestine.htm

This is a word study about the meaning of the Greek word προορίξω, 'proorizo' meaning 'predestine' Strong's 4309 in the New Testament. It gives every verse where the 'proorizo' appears. To obtain a true understanding of this word these scriptures need to be meditated on and notes made of their meaning in different contexts. This requires putting scriptures together where they seem to have a similar meaning, and then meditating even more. The truth will be revealed by the Holy Spirit, who has been given to guide us into all truth (John 16:13). Wherever this word proorizo appears in the Greek, the translation of it is highlighted with yellow. If the word is in italics then there is no equivalent word for it in the Greek. Every blessing be to those who seek the truth of God's word.

#2.1 Scriptures for προορίξω 'proorizo' meaning 'predestine' Strong's 4309

Acts 4:28 For to do whatever your hand and your counsel predestined to be done.
[KJV: determined; NET and NIV: decided]

Romans 8:29 For whom he foreknew, he also predestined to be conformed to the image of his Son, that he might be the firstborn among many brothers.

8:30 Furthermore whom he predestined, them he also called: and whom he called, them he also justified: and whom he justified, them he also glorified.

1 Corinthians 2:7 But we speak the wisdom of God in a mystery, the hidden wisdom, which God pre-ordained before the ages for our glory:
[KJV: ordained; NET: determined; ESV: decreed; NIV: destined]

Ephesians 1:5 Having predestined us to the adoption of children by Jesus Christ to himself, according to the good pleasure of his will,

1:11 In whom also we have obtained an inheritance, being predestined according to the purpose of him who works all things after the counsel of his own will:

The Bible on Predestination (Three Short Articles)

http://users.adam.com.au/bstett//BPredestination12.htm

Can you explain this Free Will / Predestination illustration? (Forum)

https://christianity.stackexchange.com/questions/6820/can-you-explain-this-free-will-predestination-illustration

Illustration: Free Will and Predestination are like a door. The side of the door toward us says, "Free Will." Once you go through the door you turn around and see that the other side says, "Predestination."

(Linked page discusses this and also includes additional analogies.)

The Four Views of Divine Foreknowledge

http://www.graceline.net/Articles/The%20Four%20Views%20of%20Divine%20Foreknowledge.pdf [PDF]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Billy Graham: "The Love of God Is Absolute" http://www.christianuniversalism.com/2012/06/billy-graham-the-love-of-god-is-absolute/

Arguments Against Calvinism and Predestination http://people.cs.ksu.edu/~bbp9857/calvinism.html

17 Bible Verses that Support Predestination (& The Doctrine of Election) http://www.swordwalk.com/17-verses-that-support-predestination-election/

Predestination (More Reformed Links on Subject)
http://www.the-highway.com/predestination_index.html

What is Predestination? (Q&A) http://christianity.net.au/questions/what_is_predestination

Predestination vs. Free Will - Is It One or the Other? [Recommended] http://godandscience.org/doctrine/predestination.html

Excerpt:

Introduction

One of the major controversies among Christians is the extent of predestination that God has ordained. At the extremes are those who claim that God uses only one to the exclusion of the other. Either extreme is wrong, since the Bible clearly indicates that both predestination and free will are in operation.

Predestination

In order to fulfill His prophecies, God must predestine history to a certain degree. The Bible clearly indicates that God predestined redemptive history, specifically, the coming of the Messiah. Jesus clearly indicated that His coming was planned, including His death:

- But He said to them, "I must preach the kingdom of God to the other cities also, for I was sent for this purpose." (Luke 4:43)
- "Now My soul has become troubled; and what shall I say, 'Father, save Me from this hour'? But for this purpose I came to this hour. (John 12:27)

Redemptive history

Other verses indicate that the crucifixion of Jesus Christ was "predetermined" and "foreknown" by God [1] and fulfilled part of God's eternal purpose.[2]

The Bible indicates that God's role in redemptive history extends beyond the Messiah to God's role in the redemption of Israel. Isaiah and Jeremiah claim that God used foreign rulers to alter history and free the Jews from Babylonian captivity:

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

- Declaring the end from the beginning And from ancient times things which have not been done, Saying, 'My purpose will be established, And I will accomplish all My good pleasure'; Calling a bird of prey from the east, The man of My purpose from a far country. Truly I have spoken; truly I will bring it to pass. I have planned it, surely I will do it. (Isaiah 46:10-11)
- Sharpen the arrows, fill the quivers! The LORD has aroused the spirit of the kings of the Medes, Because His purpose is against Babylon to destroy it; For it is the vengeance of the LORD, vengeance for His temple. (Jeremiah 51:11)

People chosen by God for salvation

The Bible indicates that certain people are chosen by God for His purposes. Examples include King David,[3] the Levites as the priests of God,[4] Abraham,[5] and the tribe of Judah.[6]

The New Testament says that God has elected or chosen people for salvation. Jesus used the Greek word eklektos[7] to refer to those who were chosen by God during the end times.[8] Jesus indicated that He chose the apostles for God's work and that it was not their own choice.[9]

Paul also uses the term "elect" to describe those who follow Jesus Christ.[10] Paul tells us that we were chosen "before the foundation of the world,"[11] which is reaffirmed by John in the book of Revelation.[12] Paul also tells us that we were predestined by God to follow Jesus Christ.[13] In addition, good works were prepared for us "that we might walk in them."[14] Jesus Himself indicated that He had chosen Paul as a minister of the gospel.[15] James indicates that God has chosen the poor people of the world for salvation.[16]

Evil people chosen to fulfill God's purposes

Some Christians claim that God predestines people for hell. This concept is never stated directly, although the Bible indicates that God does use evil people to accomplish His purposes.[17] Paul indicates in the book of Romans that evil Pharaoh was "raised up" to demonstrate God's power.[18] Paul goes on to say that God chose Jacob over his brother Esau,[19] and that He chooses to have mercy on some people over others.[20] John says that God will give the kingdom of Israel to the beast to fulfill His word.[21]

Jesus indicated that He chose the apostles, including the one who would betray Him.[22] Even Judas, as a worker of evil, was fulfilling part of the redemptive purpose of God. Luke, in the book of Acts indicates that evil Herod and Pontius Pilate, who condemned Jesus, were serving God's purposes.[23]

Presumably, evil people who are predestined to serve the purposes of God through their evil will eventually go to hell. However, they still possessed free will and would have done evil under any circumstances. So, the Bible indicates that God placed them in history to fulfill His purposes, knowing that they would do evil. God did not cause them to do evil, since God is not the author of evil. James says not to blame God for temptation:

Let no one say when he is tempted, "I am being tempted by God"; for God cannot be tempted by evil, and He Himself does not tempt anyone. (James 1:13)

Free will

There are many verses that specifically state that people have free will to execute their own choices. In the book of Deuteronomy, God Himself tells the people to choose to follow Him to receive His blessings:

"I call heaven and earth to witness against you today, that I have set before you life and death, the blessing and the curse. So choose life in order that you may live, you and your descendants, (Deuteronomy 30:19)

Joshua tells the people to choose to serve God or the idols of their neighbors.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

"And if it is disagreeable in your sight to serve the LORD, choose for yourselves today whom you will serve: whether the gods which your fathers served which were beyond the River, or the gods of the Amorites in whose land you are living; but as for me and my house, we will serve the LORD." (Joshua 24:15)

Many other Old Testament verses tell us to choose to follow the Lord.[24] Obviously, choice is not possible if everything is predestined.

Besides the verses that tells us directly to make choices, there are hundreds of verses that tell us how we are to live. Obviously, following this advice requires free will and the ability to choose. So, the Bible indicates pretty clearly that we are to make choices. If everything is predestined, then choice is not possible.

Christ died for some?

Some in the radical predestination camp claim that Jesus Christ died only for the elect. However, the Bible teaches quite clearly that Jesus Christ died for the sins of all people and wants all people to come to repentance. This does not mean that Jesus' death provides salvation for those who resist God's call.

- "For God so loved the world, that He gave His only begotten Son, that whoever believes in Him should not perish, but have eternal life. (John 3:16)
- "And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men to Myself." (John 12:32)
- For the death that He died, He died to sin, once for all; but the life that He lives, He lives to God. (Romans 6:10)
- For as in Adam all die, so also in Christ all shall be made alive. (1 Corinthians 15:22)
- For the love of Christ controls us, having concluded this, that one died for all, therefore all died; and He died for all, that they who live should no longer live for themselves, but for Him who died and rose again on their behalf. (2 Corinthians 5:15)
- For it is for this we labor and strive, because we have fixed our hope on the living God, who is the Savior of all men, especially of believers. (1 Timothy 4:10)
- For the grace of God has appeared, bringing salvation to all men, (Titus 2:11)
- The Lord is not slow about His promise, as some count slowness, but is patient toward you, not wishing for any to perish but for all to come to repentance. (2 Peter 3:9)
- For Christ also died for sins once for all, the just for the unjust, in order that He might bring us to God, having been put to death in the flesh, but made alive in the spirit; (1 Peter 3:18)
- Heb 7:26-27, 9:11-12, 10:10 and I Pet 3:18

Conclusion

I have tried to present a balanced examination of the issues regarding free will and predestination. It is obvious that the Bible teaches both concepts. Ultimately, I believe that God directs history. However, I do not believe that He micro-manages history. In other words, I think God places people in history so that His will is accomplished. This includes putting His followers, in addition to those who oppose Him, at strategic points in history. The Bible encourages us to use our free will to choose good over evil.

...as for me and my house, we will serve the LORD." (Joshua 24:15)

See notes on next page…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Footnotes for above article:

1. this Man, delivered up by the predetermined plan and foreknowledge of God, you nailed to a cross by the hands of godless men and put Him to death. (Acts 2:23)
2. This was in accordance with the eternal purpose which He carried out in Christ Jesus our Lord, (Ephesians 3:11)
   but we speak God's wisdom in a mystery, the hidden wisdom, which God predestined before the ages to our glory; the wisdom which none of the rulers of this age has understood; for if they had understood it, they would not have crucified the Lord of glory; (1 Corinthians 2:7-8) but with precious blood, as of a lamb unblemished and spotless, the blood of Christ. For He was foreknown before the foundation of the world, but has appeared in these last times for the sake of you. (1 Peter 1:19-20) the one who practices sin is of the devil; for the devil has sinned from the beginning. The Son of God appeared for this purpose, that He might destroy the works of the devil. (1 John 3:8)
3. So David said to Michal, "It was before the LORD, who chose me above your father and above all his house, to appoint me ruler over the people of the LORD, over Israel; therefore I will celebrate before the LORD. (2 Samuel 6:21)
   'Since the day that I brought My people Israel from Egypt, I did not choose a city out of all the tribes of Israel in which to build a house that My name might be there, but I chose David to be over My people Israel.' (1 Kings 8:16)
   'Nevertheless I will not take the whole kingdom out of his hand, but I will make him ruler all the days of his life, for the sake of My servant David whom I chose, who observed My commandments and My statutes; (1 Kings 11:34)
   "Yet, the LORD, the God of Israel, chose me from all the house of my father to be king over Israel forever. For He has chosen Judah to be a leader; and in the house of Judah, my father's house, and among the sons of my father He took pleasure in me to make me king over all Israel. (1 Chronicles 28:4)
   He also chose David His servant, And took him from the sheepfolds; (Psalm 78:70)
4. Then David said, "No one is to carry the ark of God but the Levites; for the LORD chose them to carry the ark of God, and to minister to Him forever." (1 Chronicles 15:2)
5. "Thou art the LORD God, Who chose Abram And brought him out from Ur of the Chaldees, And gave him the name Abraham. (Nehemiah 9:7)
6. But [God] chose the tribe of Judah, Mount Zion which He loved. (Psalm 78:68)
7. Thayer's Greek Definition:
   eklektos eklektox (Strong's G1588)
8. picked out, chosen
   a. chosen by God
      i. to obtain salvation through Christ
         1. Christians are called “chosen or elect” of God
      ii. the Messiah in called “elect”, as appointed by God to the most exalted office conceivable
      iii. choice, select, i.e. the best of its kind or class, excellence preeminent: applied to certain individual Christians
9. Part of Speech: adjective
   A Related Word by Thayer’s/Strong’s Number: from G1586
   Citing in TDNT: 4:181, 505
10. "And unless those days had been cut short, no life would have been saved; but for the sake of the elect those days shall be cut short. (Matthew 24:22)
    "For false Christs and false prophets will arise and will show great signs and wonders, so as to mislead, if possible, even the elect. (Matthew 24:24)
    "And He will send forth His angels with A GREAT TRUMPET and THEY WILL GATHER TOGETHER His elect from the four winds, from one end of the sky to the other. (Matthew 24:31)
    "And unless the Lord had shortened those days, no life would have been saved; but for the sake of the elect whom He chose, He shortened the days. (Mark 13:20) for false Christs and false prophets will arise, and will show signs and wonders, in order, if possible,

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

to lead the elect astray. (Mark 13:22)
"And then He will send forth the angels, and will gather together His elect from the four winds, from the farthest end of the earth, to the farthest end of heaven. (Mark 13:27)
now shall not God bring about justice for His elect, who cry to Him day and night, and will He delay long over them? (Luke 18:7)

11. Jesus answered them, "Did I Myself not choose you, the twelve, and yet one of you is a devil?" (John 6:70)
"You did not choose Me, but I chose you, and appointed you, that you should go and bear fruit, and that your fruit should remain, that whatever you ask of the Father in My name, He may give to you. (John 15:16)
12. Who will bring a charge against God's elect? God is the one who justifies; (Romans 8:33)
13. just as He chose us in Him before the foundation of the world, that we should be holy and blameless before Him. In love He predestined us to adoption as sons through Jesus Christ to Himself, according to the kind intention of His will, (Ephesians 1:4-5)
Therefore do not be ashamed of the testimony of our Lord, or of me His prisoner; but join with me in suffering for the gospel according to the power of God, who has saved us, and called us with a holy calling, not according to our works, but according to His own purpose and grace which was granted us in Christ Jesus from all eternity, (2 Timothy 1:8-9)
14. And all who dwell on the earth will worship him [the beast], everyone whose name has not been written from the foundation of the world in the book of life of the Lamb who has been slain. (Revelation 13:8)
"The beast that you saw was and is not, and is about to come up out of the abyss and to go to destruction. And those who dwell on the earth will wonder, whose name has not been written in the book of life from the foundation of the world, when they see the beast, that he was and is not and will come. (Revelation 17:8)
15. For whom He foreknew, He also predestined to become conformed to the image of His Son, that He might be the first-born among many brethren; and whom He predestined, these He also called; and whom He called, these He also justified; and whom He justified, these He also glorified. (Romans 8:29-30) also we have obtained an inheritance, having been predestined according to His purpose who works all things after the counsel of His will, (Ephesians 1:11)
16. For we are His workmanship, created in Christ Jesus for good works, which God prepared beforehand, that we should walk in them. (Ephesians 2:10)
17. 'But arise [Paul], and stand on your feet; for this purpose I have appeared to you, to appoint you a minister and a witness not only to the things which you have seen, but also to the things in which I will appear to you;' (Acts 26:16)
18. Listen, my beloved brethren: did not God choose the poor of this world to be rich in faith and heirs of the kingdom which He promised to those who love Him? (James 2:5)
19. The LORD has made everything for its own purpose, Even the wicked for the day of evil. (Proverbs 16:4)
20. For the Scripture says to Pharaoh, "FOR THIS VERY PURPOSE I RAISED YOU UP, TO DEMONSTRATE MY POWER IN YOU, AND THAT MY NAME MIGHT BE PROCLAIMED THROUGHOUT THE WHOLE EARTH." (Romans 9:17)
21. for though the twins were not yet born, and had not done anything good or bad, in order that God's purpose according to His choice might stand, not because of works, but because of Him who calls, it was said to her, "THE OLDER WILL SERVE THE YOUNGER." Just as it is written, "JACOB I LOVED, BUT ESAU I HATED." (Romans 9:11-13)
22. For He says to Moses, "I WILL HAVE MERCY ON WHOM I HAVE MERCY, AND I WILL HAVE COMPASSION ON WHOM I HAVE COMPASSION." So then it does not depend on the man who wills or the man who runs, but on God who has mercy. (Romans 9:15-16)
23. "For God has put it in their hearts to execute His purpose by having a common purpose, and by giving their kingdom to the beast, until the words of God should be fulfilled. (Revelation 17:17)
24. Jesus answered them, "Did I Myself not choose you, the twelve, and yet one of you is a devil?" (John 6:70)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

25. "For truly in this city there were gathered together against Thy holy servant Jesus, whom Thou didst anoint, both Herod and Pontius Pilate, along with the Gentiles and the peoples of Israel, to do whatever Thy hand and Thy purpose predestined to occur. (Acts 4:27-28)
26. Who is the man who fears the LORD? He will instruct him in the way he should choose. (Psalm 25:12)
    Because they hated knowledge, And did not choose the fear of the LORD. (Proverbs 1:29)
    Do not envy a man of violence, And do not choose any of his ways. (Proverbs 3:31)
    "He will eat curds and honey at the time He knows enough to refuse evil and choose good. (Isaiah 7:15)
    For thus says the LORD, "To the eunuchs who keep My sabbaths, And choose what pleases Me, And hold fast My covenant, (Isaiah 56:4)
    I will destine you for the sword, And all of you shall bow down to the slaughter. Because I called, but you did not answer; I spoke, but you did not hear. And you did evil in My sight, And chose that in which I did not delight." (Isaiah 65:12)
    So I will choose their punishments, And I will bring on them what they dread. Because I called, but no one answered; I spoke, but they did not listen. And they did evil in My sight, And chose that in which I did not delight." (Isaiah 66:4)

Does John 6:37 Teach Calvinist "Predestination"?

https://christiancourier.com/articles/does-john-6-37-teach-calvinist-predestination

It is commonly alleged that Jesus, in John 6:37, endorsed the idea of "predestination" as popularized by John Calvin in the 16th century. Did he? Study this question with us.

Does the Bible Teach Predestination?

http://www.westfieldchurchofchrist.com/study/articles/2019/12/10/does-the-bible-teach-predestination

Yes and no, depending on what one means by "predestination." Let me explain.

"He predestined us to adoption as sons through Jesus Christ to Himself, according to the kind intention of His will" (Eph. 1:5). "For those whom He foreknew, He also predestined to become conformed to the image of His Son, so that he would be the firstborn among many brethren" (Rom. 8:29). Other passages speak of people being chosen or part of an elect group, similar to being predestined (see Eph. 1:4; 2 Thess. 2:13; 1 Pet. 1:1-2). Clearly the Bible affirms some way in which God pre-selects or chooses someone even before the beginning of time.

When most people refer to predestination or election they are thinking of one of the main tenets of Calvinism, namely "Unconditional Election" in the acronym TULIP. Calvinism is a tightly-knit doctrinal system, carefully ordered and reasoned from the assumption that God's sovereign will overrides man's free will in eternal salvation (and in some cases, regarding everything that happens). The whole system falls or stands together.

In other words, Unconditional Election is primarily built on the tenets and assumptions that come before it, most importantly that man's will is totally and inherently depraved, thus completely unable to seek God or respond in any way to His call without God himself acting sovereignly and directly on a person to liberate them from bondage and choose faith over unbelief.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

We should mention in passing that the Bible speaks of several kinds of election depending on the context. Sometimes God chooses people, not to salvation but to service. Moses (Ps. 106:23), David (Ps. 78:70), and Pharaoh (Rom. 9:17) are example of individuals who God used as servants to help move his redemptive purposes forward. Other times God chooses groups (as opposed to individuals), as when he selected the nation of Israel to carry the Abrahamic promises until Messiah would come (Deut. 10:15). Other times, election does result in eternal salvation, as in Ephesians 1 or Romans 8. We must look at the context of each passage to determine the exact kind of election being discussed.

Now to our question. Does the Bible teach that God's election of Christians is unconditional and completely dependent on God's sovereign choice? No – and here's why.

First, it flies in the face of the way the gospel was preached in the beginning. Read the gospels and Acts and you will see Jesus and the apostles urging people to choose belief and obedience. Even Ephesians 1, a hotbed of Calvinism, emphasizes the free will of those that responded to the message: "In Him, you also, after listening to the message of truth, the gospel of your salvation—having also believed, you were sealed in Him with the Holy Spirit of promise" (v. 13). The salvation of Jew and Gentile in Christ is conditioned on the hearing and receiving the gospel by faith, repentance, and baptism.

Secondly, unconditional election necessarily implies two things about God which are wholly incompatible with what he has revealed about himself. First, that God unconditionally and arbitrarily excluded those who will be lost. If God chose some to be saved, regardless of their choices, he also (whether actively or passively doesn't make much difference) condemned the rest to eternal destruction, regardless of their choices. Some Calvinists would disagree, but this conclusion is logically inescapable. This leads to the second implication, that God sovereignly wills some to be saved and some to be lost.

This is not the God I read about in passages like 1 Timothy 2:4, where God "desires all men to be saved and to come to the knowledge of the truth." And that he is "not wishing for any to perish but for all to come to repentance" (2 Pet. 3:9). God does not exercise his sovereignty to arbitrarily save and condemn. Instead, he, in his sovereign love of the whole world, willed to send his only Son to die and rise for our sins so that no one would perish but all who believe would enjoy eternal life (John 3:16).

God did not predestine our choices but the means by which everyone who is in Christ will be eternally saved. In this way we who believe are the elect, predestined to salvation. He foreknew us and our choices (Rom. 8:29). However, God's foreknowledge does not cause your or my choice to do what we will with Jesus. He knows the end from the beginning. And right now, our choices are working toward that end – whether by faith or disbelief in his eternal plan.

What I believe about Predestination

https://redeeminggod.com/on-predestination/

I believe that predestination does not refer to God's choice of which people get to go to heaven, but refers instead to God's determination to bring into glory all those who receive eternal life by faith in Jesus. In other words, predestination teaches us about who gets glorified, *not who gets justified.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Does the Bible Teach Predestination? (Restored Church of God / Armstrong)
https://rcg.org/books/dtbtp.html

Bible Verses About/Associate With Predestination
https://www.openbible.info/topics/predestination

A Book of Bible Study: Predestination
https://www.abookofbiblestudy.net/predestination/

Predestination – What Is the Truth About It? (Church of God)
https://www.bethelcog.org/doctrinal/predestination-what-is-the-truth-about-it/

Bible verses that support and oppose predestination
https://www.interfaith.org/community/threads/11605/

How does free will fit with the doctrine of predestination? (Calvinist Perspectives)
https://christianity.stackexchange.com/questions/4236/how-does-free-will-fit-with-the-doctrine-of-predestination [Forum]

How does predestination work as described by scripture? (Is the Calvinist/Reformed Tradition correct? What does the Bible say about predestination?) [Forum]
https://ebible.com/questions/265-how-does-predestination-work-as-described-by-scripture

False Doctrine: Calvin's Doctrines of Unconditional Election (Predestination) http://www.biblestudyguide.org/topical/unconditional-election.htm

Predestination Explained
http://everything.explained.today/Predestination/

Predestination of the Saints: Biblical "Double-Predestination": Unbiblical!
http://www.ukapologetics.net/predestination.html

See also: http://www.ukapologetics.net/deceivedornot.htm

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Is Calvinism Biblical?
http://bible-truth.org/IsCalvinismBiblical.html#0035

A biblical examination of Calvinism and its teachings concerning salvation, election and predestination.

PDF: http://bible-truth.org/Election.pdf

Word Doc: http://bible-truth.org/Election2.doc

Note: This site is a KJO advocate.

Why I Disagree With All 5 Points of Calvinism
http://jesus-is-savior.com/False%20Doctrines/Calvinism/calvinism-hutson.htm
Note: This site is a KJO advocate.

How Do You Attempt To Explain Predestination & Election?
http://www.charlesspecht.com/how-do-you-attempt-to-explain-predestination-election/

Predestination: Letting God Be God
http://www.icstc.com/bg/will/Predestination.pdf [PDF]

Doesn't the Bible teach predestination?
http://behindthebadge.net/apologetics/discuss190.html

The Biblical Solution to Christianity's Predestination Paradox
http://christianityshardestquestionssolved.com/?p=89&gclid=EAIaIQobChMIz93Lz5X01QIVUzRpCh3sAg-8EAAYASAAEgLFRfD_BwE

My Understanding of the Biblical Doctrine of Election (Daniel B Wallace)
https://bible.org/article/my-understanding-biblical-doctrine-election [Recommended]

Note re: Total Depravity: Total depravity does not mean that we are as bad as we could be. Rather, it means that (1) sin has tainted every aspect of our being--our hearts, bodies, and minds; (2) we would be as bad as we could be if it were not for God's common grace (by which he protects humans in general from becoming as wicked as possible); and (3) there is no spark of the divine within us, nothing good that moves God toward that person, as though he or she deserves to be saved.

(See also: Calvinism)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Adrian Rogers: Predestined to Hell? Absolutely Not!

[Video] https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=vYxo0025Bzg
Alt: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=1Dz9to1DcR0 https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=WRS_ULKek0U
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=WnePHmftB-g [clip, 1 of 4]

[Audio] https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=_XajNJOFTJw

Adrian Rogers v. James White on Calvinism (Radio Free Geneva)

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=oQENcj_kRcg [Audio]

This is the second edition of Radio Free Geneva on Youtube. In this edition, Dr. James White critiques a sermon presented by Dr. Adrian Rogers that gives many of the fallacies and inconsistencies those who do not hold to the Reformed faith usually commit. These errors include believing that the word "foreknow" is a noun, taking out words from Scripture like Matt. 23:37 to defend one's tradition, and thinking that unless a man's will is free, they are robots. This has been touted as very helpful by several people who have heard it because of Dr. White's refutations then explanations. The listener call-in section at around the last half hour or so is helpful, too. There was another part to this that was in a later episode of RFG. This should be posted soon.

Adrian Rogers Refutes Total Depravity & Destroys Calvinism. Without the T, TULIP Collapses

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=3bgcF0ZMJ40 [Video]

Talks about God creating Satan, Free Will, etc.

Dr. J. Vernon McGee Refutes Calvinism - Doctrine of Election and Free Will (Part 1)

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=P9EqEcApnJo

Dr. McGee calls Calvinism's Doctrine of Election a dangerous and frightful view of God. He also said, if he believed in this doctrine, he'd never attempted to preach the word of God and never try to lead anyone to Christ because there'd be no need of it.

1 Timothy 4:1 ¶Now the Spirit speaketh expressly, that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits, and doctrines of devils;

2 Peter 2:1 ¶But there were false prophets also among the people, even as there shall be false teachers among you, who privily shall bring in damnable heresies, even denying the Lord that bought them, and bring upon themselves swift destruction.

2 Corinthians 11:4 For if he that cometh preacheth another Jesus, whom we have not preached, or if ye receive another spirit, which ye have not received, or another gospel, which ye have not accepted, ye might well bear with him.

http://www.thruthebible.org/
Thru the Bible Radio Network - Thru The Bible is a 30-minute Bible study radio program that takes the listener through the entire Bible in just 5 years, going back and forth between the Old and New Testaments. This Bible study program has been aired on radio stations in the U.S. since 1967, and is now being produced in over 100 languages around the world.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Thanks to http://www.youtube.com/peaceradio.com for having Dr. McGee's video series on Youtube.

John 6:44 Does not Prove Calvinism - Response to James White

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=dn7QrwpSfpo [Video]

Austin Fischer vs. James White on Unbelievable with Justin Brierley

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=4Yxod_YbXJQ [Video]

Austin Fischer and James White discuss Fischer's book, "Young, Restless, No Longer Reformed," with Justin Brierley on Unbelievable (March 1,2014). Austin makes some strong points against Calvinism. However, you can also check out the post-debate review by David Martinez on the Society of Evangelical Arminians website, which more directly addresses much of Dr. White's Calvinist rhetoric: http://evangelicalarminians.org/david...

Answering James White's Critique of Austin Fischer (see above)

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=LUwyNvcOGvg [Video]
This is a fantastic refutation of Dr. James White's critique of Austin Fischer. Professor Flowers combats Dr. White's false Calvinist assumptions with sound Biblical doctrine. This podcast was originally aired on December 17, 2014.

Calvinism Debate Video: Romans 9, James White vs. Leighton Flowers (2015)

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=zbEnNillujw [Video]

This is the full debate video over which soteriological view is taught in Romans 9. Professor Leighton Flowers defends a non-Calvinistic Southern Baptist perspective and Dr. James White defends the Calvinistic perspective.

Dr. White's main argument against Professor Flowers is that he "doesn't exegete the text." Yet, according to the agreement (approved by both presenters before the debate) the goal was to present a positive explanation of the intention of the author. No agreement was ever made that both parties would give a full exegesis (however that is defined) of the entire chapter, and neither party did provide exegetical commentary on every verse in the chapter. Unfortunately, Dr. White fails to engage with Professor Flowers' arguments under the guise of "it wasn't exegetical." Calvinists accuse non-Calvinists of not talking about the subject of Romans 9 on the basis that the non-Calvinist believes the subject of Romans 9 is different than they think it is. It is a question begging game to assume someone is not addressing the subject of the text simply on the basis that they disagree on that subject.

For example, the Pro-Life advocate could argue for the value of human life in order to promote banning abortion and the "Pro-Choice" advocate could reply by saying, "This isn't about the value of life, it is about the value of women's rights." The Pro-Choice (pro-abortion) advocate is reframing the debate and accusing his opponent of not dealing with the subject at hand when in reality the Pro-Life advocate is focused upon the correct subject all along. The debate is over which subject must be in focus.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The same is true in this debate. Prof. Flowers focuses his attention upon what he believes is the true intention of the author given the historical context of Israel's judicial hardening in bringing about God's redemptive plan and fulfillment of His promise. Dr. White doesn't engage with this point, but resorts to question begging by accusing Prof. Flowers of not exegeting the text properly (i.e. supposedly defined by White as "reading each verse in order and giving commentary that fits his interpretation.")

During White's rebuttal, he accused Flowers of only addressing Total Inability and a couple of verses in Romans 9. And in a post debate show, Dr. White accused Flowers of not even addressing Romans 9 in his opener until 8 minutes into the presentation. Watch for yourselves and see if these are accurate statements.

AOMIN alt link: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=_wuDloSP-VU [Video]

Response to AOMIN on Romans 9 Debate (see above) (2016)

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=StunSSdy4JU [Video] BTW, includes good explanation of exegetical commentary vs hermeneutical work, also "judicial hardening" and "mercying".

Deadness and Total Inability: Rebuttal of Dr. White (2017)

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=2OS6lqOezfg [Video] Recently Dr. White took up Dr. Flowers challenge to biblically establish the Calvinistic doctrine of Total Inability. This is Dr. Flowers, albeit lengthy, point by point rebuttal from the scripture.

Notice that Dr. White never does answer the passages that Dr. Flowers brought up in his original challenge. He doesn't even attempt to explain the passages where 'deadness' is clearly not used to connote moral inability.

(Note: The original title was meant to be a humorous play on words, but was becoming a distraction away from the more important matters, so it was changed with apologies to those offended)

To read Dr. Flowers article on this topic click here: https://soteriology101.wordpress.com/

See also: Predestination Revisited

(See also: Calvinism)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

James White's Fallacies regarding "Synergism." (2017)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Jppho7YU1Aw [Video]

This is part one of Dr. Leighton Flowers rebuttal to Dr. James White's misrepresentation of Southern Baptist Traditionalism.

Dr. Leighton Flowers critiques White's recent Dividing Line Program in which White straw-man's "synergism." Dr. Flowers goes point by point through White's commentary to reveal the fallacies and answer the arguments.

In future broadcasts, Flowers will cover White's debate with Trent Horn and Michael Brown over the ability to lose one's salvation...so stay tuned.

Dr. Michael Brown vs. Dr. James White on Predestination, Election, and the Will of God (2012)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=dmeMOo4nINA [Video]

Debunking Calvinism —Michael L. Brown (20 min. clip of above debate) (2012)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Lad8FlMI-Xo [Video]

Day 1 - Arminianism (Dr. Michael Brown) vs Calvinism (Dr. James White) (2012)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=nNcvYs-xjOI (Audio)

Why I Am A Calvinist---Brief Response to Michael Brown (2016)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=sD28rswkfpo [Video]

Dr. Brown's web site: http://thelineoffire.org/

Dr. Michael Brown with Leighton Flowers on Soteriology101 (2015)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=gVuT2FkxE1w [Video] Discusses relevance of OT to Christian faith and salvation, election, etc.

John MacArthur on Romans 9 contrasted with Traditionalism (2017)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=TG8ourHD9IM [Video]
Dr. John MacArthur goes verse by verse through Romans 9 and Dr. Leighton Flowers gives the Traditional perspective as a contrast to MacArthur's Calvinistic reading of this hotly contested passage.

Romans 9 – De-Calvinized
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=GFbKeIbrDWw [Video]

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Genuine Historical Calvinism
http://www.calvinism.us/feeds/posts/default

Definition: Imputation
http://www.biblestudytools.com/dictionary/imputation/

See also: Calvinism

See also: Predestination Revisited

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

How to Approach the Election Dispute

http://ronleigh.com/bible/approach-election/index.htm

Excerpt:

There is a spread of views concerning the subjects of election, predestination, foreknowledge, etc. Even though the following continuum is an oversimplification, it provides a general picture of the situation.

If none of the views is correct, it would be idiotic to try to integrate a bunch of wrong views in order to come up with the right view.

Even if two views were close to being correct, such as Calvinism and Arminianism, we should not try to find a view that is right in the middle between them, as though that would be the "balanced" view. Such a procedure is based on compromise, not on biblical research. It is dangerous to try to balance any two views because:

- One view may be correct and the other incorrect. In this case, the more you try to compromise, the further you end up from the true biblical view.
- Or, the true biblical view may be to the left of Calvinism, or to the right of Arminianism. Again, the more you try to compromise, the further you end up from the true biblical view.

The only sane approach is to base your study of election squarely on the Bible, without mentally dragging any particular view or views into your study, but letting the Bible speak for itself…

One in Jesus: N.T. Wright on Presdestination

http://oneinjesus.info/2015/12/n-t-wright-on-predestination/ [Links to his video]

The main purpose for including this is not for link to video (as it is included elsewhere in these reference notes), but for the comments section that shows a good/respective/reasoned give and take by opposing views on the topic.

Theological Journeying: N.T. Wright re: Ephesians, Predestination, Justification

https://stevenedwardharris.com/category/theology-biblical/n-t-wright/

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Leslie Newbigin: 1976 Bible Study on Romans 8 (Predestination)

http://newbiginresources.org/1976-bible-study-on-romans-8/ [downloadable as a PDF]

Excerpt:

> Romans 8:29-30. For those whom he foreknew he also predestined to be conformed to the image of his Son, in order that he might be the first-born among many brethren. And those whom he predestined he also called; and those whom he called he also justified; and those whom he justified he also glorified. [RSV]

We have been thinking of the present as it is filled with the promise of the future. Now, with dramatic suddenness, we are asked to turn round and to remember that we are speaking about a cosmic purpose which had its origins before time began. Perhaps Paul's thought is turned in this direction because of the phrase which he has just used: "those who love God". This is not a common phrase in Paul or in the Bible as a whole, for the stress is always on God's love for us rather than upon our love for God. It is his love, the love of one who 'first loved us' which is the great primal reality. From start to finish the Bible is, concerned with God's initiative. His love is the origin and source of everything that is, and our love for him can only be something secondary and derivative. 'It is his decision for us which is the presupposition and basis of our decision for him. Predestination – God's decision for us before all time began is basic to the whole biblical story. If we are Christians, it is not because we decided for him, but because he decided for us – and this decision is 'before the foundation of the world'. Even creation itself is within this decision that 'God is for us', and therefore the liberation of creation itself is involved in the fulfilment of God's primal decision. The purpose of this decision is that Jesus should be 'the first-born among many brethren'. The being of the Godhead has from all eternity both Fatherhood and Sonship as its reality, and to bring many sons to the glory which was revealed in 'the only begotten Son' (John 1: 1 4) in and through the glorifying of the Son: on the Cross, this is the decision of God before all time.

The doctrine of predestination has been misrepresented and misunderstood in such a way as to make it abhorrent to many Christians. If it is truly understood it will be seen to be utterly central and essential to the whole of the Gospel. Predestination is not (as the Westminster Confession seems to say) something before and apart from Christ. The New Testament explicitly teaches that predestination is only in Christ. Man was predestined for sonship in Christ before he was created through Christ. And as Christ is not for himself but for all men, the Saviour of the world, so those who are predestined in Christ are predestined not for themselves but for witness and service to Christ's universal purpose. The biblical teaching has been monstrously misconstrued to imply that those who are chosen are chosen for themselves; in truth they are chosen to share in Christ's universal purpose, for the salvation of all. And what of those who are not chosen; who are rejected – is the unbelieving Jews of Paul's time seemed to be? It is precisely to this deeply perplexing question that Paul immediately turns in the following chapters (9-11). One should read them continuously with this 8th chapter. The end of that long argument is this: that even the rejection of the Jews is for their ultimate salvation. Why this must be so must be the subject of another bible study, but the outcome is clear. 'God has shut up all under disobedience that he might have mercy on all.'

Predestination is the ground of God's calling. We are called, summoned to become that which we are not yet. He who summons us is he who raised Jesus from the dead and 'calls the things that are not as though they were'. That is the ground of our hope; the hope is implicit in the calling. God is faithful who calls you. 'He who calls also justifies. He who raises the dead to life can also put the unrighteous in the right, and that is what he has done in Christ. And the end is glory – the glory of sonship, a participation in the glory of the only begotten Son (John 17: 22f). This is the end for which all creation waits – 'the glorious liberty of the children of God'. What God has determined before all time, he can and will complete.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Predestination: Biblical and Theological Paths (by Matthew Levering) (2011)

http://www.thedivineconspiracy.org/Z5272S.pdf [PDF]

Chapter One (Sample) of Book: The Biblical Roots of the Doctrine of Predestination

VIIa.5. Please Define "Predestination" in Ephesians 1:5

https://heritagebbc.com/bible-question-and-answer-archive-5/viia-5-please-define-predestination-in-ephesians-1-5/

Excerpt:

Question*: Would you explain Ephesians 1:5 concerning the meaning of the word "predestination.

Answer: The word "predestination" comes from the Greek verb "proorizo." It means, according to Vine's Expository Words on the Greek New Testament, to "mark out beforehand, to determine before, foreordain." In essence, "predestination" means that something has been predicted by God and it must and will come to pass. The word "predestinate" as translated in the KJV is found only twice; that being in Romans 8:29 and 30. "Predestinated is found only twice and that is in Ephesians; once in Ephesians 1:5 and once in 1:11. These two words do not appear in the Old Testament. We shall examine WHO is predestinated, WHAT event is predestined and WHEN it will take place.

5. Let us begin with Ephesians 1:5.

"Having predestinated us unto the adoption of children by Jesus Christ to Himself, according to the good pleasure of his will."

Notice who is predestinated. It can only be one of two groups. The saved or the lost. Paul identifies the children of God as the object of being predestinated, "Having predestinated us (plural pronoun)." This is Paul and every saved person. God did not predestinate anyone to be saved; but this teaches He predestinated something for those who are already saved.

What did God predestinate for the Christian? The Scriptures are pure and simple. The Christian is predestinated unto the adoption of children (Greek, HUIOTHESIA, meaning sonship). When we trust Christ as our Savior, we become His children:

"But as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons (Greek, teknon, meaning—"a child") of God, even to them that believe on his name." (John 1:12).

When? We are positioned in Heaven as a son now; but we do not come to the realization of our Sonship until the Rapture.

The Jewish Bar Mitzvah may aid in understanding adoption and Sonship. Bar Mitzvah means "a son of the commandments, or the placing of a son." When a Jewish boy reaches the age of 13, he is then considered as an adult. He is expected to accept adult religious responsibilities. It is a joyful occasion accompanied by gifts from friends and family. He is no longer considered a child; but an adult son.

The word "adoption" is from the Greek word "huiothesia," from "huios;" meaning "a son," and "thesis," "a placing." Therefore..."the placing of a son." Just as a Jewish boy is placed as an adult son on the day he reaches 13, we Christians also experience our Sonship when we are placed in Heaven at the day of the Rapture. This is when we have our physical bodies redeemed for a new glorified body. It could be no clearer than stated in Romans 8:23:

"And not only they, but ourselves also, which have the first fruits of the Spirit, even we ourselves groan within ourselves, WAITING FOR THE ADOPTION, TO WIT, THE REDEMPTION OF OUR BODY."

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

IN SUMMARY:

WHO: Negative: nowhere are the lost said to be predes-tinated to be saved

WHAT: Positive: the saved are predestinated to receive something.

WHEN: At the Rapture. 1 Thessalonians 4:17, 1 Corinthians 15:50-54.

The false teaching of predestination for salvation is nothing more than a subtle, Satanic attack against God's character. John 3:16 says that,

"For God so loved the WORLD, that he gave his only begotten Son, that WHOSOEVER, believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life."

How could God love the world and then pick only a few to predestinate to salvation and let the rest go to Hell? Christ's death and Resurrection paid for the sins of all humanity and whosoever believeth in him has everlasting life!

See also*: Ephesians: Predestination

Predestination: Thomas Aquinas and Calvin

http://www.faith-theology.com/2006/04/predestination-thomas-aquinas-and.html

Excerpt:

In popular books, and even in some theological text books, it is sometimes said that the idea of predestination was invented by John Calvin. Anyone who can say such a thing must never have read Augustine, or Anselm, or Duns Scotus, or Luther—or even Calvin himself (since part of Calvin's aim is to prove that his doctrine of predestination was also the teaching of the Fathers).

In fact, even Thomas Aquinas has a detailed doctrine of predestination, which is, in many material respects, nearly identical to that of Calvin.

Here's one quote from Thomas's Summa theologiae (1a.23.5):

> "The reason for the predestination of some and reprobation of others (praedestinationis aliquorum, et reprobationis aliorum) must be sought for in the divine goodness.... God wills to manifest his goodness in those whom he predestines, by means of the mercy with which he spares them; and in respect of others whom he reprobates, by means of the justice with which he punishes them. This is the reason why God chooses some (quosdam eligit) and reprobates others (quosdam reprobat).... Yet why he chooses some for glory and reprobates others has no reason except the divine will (non habet rationem nisi divinam voluntatem)."

Certainly I think the notion of double predestination should be subjected to theological criticism. But let's not pretend that the idea was invented by Calvin!

Aquinas and Calvin on Predestination: Is There Any Common Ground?

http://journal.rts.edu/article/aquinas-and-calvin-on-predestination-is-there-any-common-ground/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Dr. N.T. Wright on Predestination, Election, Chosen (2014) re: Romans 8:23-29, Ephesians 1:3-14, Romans 9-11
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=qKwIijhZW-M [Video]

N.T. Wright on Election (PFG Review) (2013)
http://www.patheos.com/blogs/euangelion/2013/10/n-t-wright-on-election-in-pfg/

N.T. Wright, Calvinism and Scripture (2012)
https://rachelheldevans.com/blog/wright-calvinism-scripture?rq=wright

A correction (and confession) about NT Wright and Calvinism...
https://rachelheldevans.com/blog/nt-wright-calvinist?rq=wright

N.T. Wright on the Enlightenment, postmodernism, and common misreadings of scripture
https://rachelheldevans.com/blog/wright-common-misreadings-scripture?rq=wright

Ask N.T. Wright
https://rachelheldevans.com/blog/ask-nt-wright-response?rq=wright

Predestination and Freewill: N. T. Wright https://pursuingveritas.com/2015/01/07/predestination-and-freewill-n-t-wright/

Monergism: Predestination (Links) [See also: Monergism/Synergism]
https://www.monergism.com/topics/predestination

GotQuestions: Predestination
https://www.gotquestions.org/predestination.html

Calvinist Corner: Predestination
http://www.calvinistcorner.com/predestination.htm

Theopedia: Predestination
http://www.theopedia.com/predestination

Catholic Encyclopedia: Predestination
http://www.newadvent.org/cathen/12378a.htm

Catholic Answers: Predestination
https://www.catholic.com/encyclopedia/predestination

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

WOW: Predestination (Overview)
http://www.wow.com/wiki/Foreknowledge_of_God

Comparison between Protestants

This table summarizes the classical views of three different Protestant beliefs:

Topic	Lutheranism	Calvinism	Arminianism
Election	Unconditional election to salvation only	Unconditional election to salvation only, with reprobation (passing over)	Conditional election in view of foreseen faith or unbelief

R.C. Sproul: Predestination
http://www.ligonier.org/learn/series/predestination/what-is-predestination/

Wikipedia: Predestination
https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Predestination

Election and Predestination in Scripture https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=bKKjeJpy2x0 [Video]

The key to understanding election & predestination correctly: Nations not random individuals!
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=jCrQp1YL_FM [Video]

Questions the Calvinist Cannot Answer https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=nnsdDNQl7MM [Video]

The Error of Calvinism (2015)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=U6p0PgzoFZU [Audio]

Calvinism Debate (Part 1 of 11) (2015)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=PiwsT1keqAg [Video]

See also: Reformed Theology vs Lutheranism vs Calvinism vs Weslyanism / Calvinism

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Jerry Walls: What's Wrong with Calvinism (Part 1) [Weslyan Perspective]
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Daomzm3nyIg [Video]

Jerry Walls: What's Wrong with Calvinism (Part 2) https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=1IBUtF8EtAo [Video]

Jerry Walls: What's Wrong with Calvinism (Part 3) – Why it matters https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=cJf_ks-6lkk [Video]

Dr. Norman Geisler: 5 Reasons Why I Am Not a 5-Point Calvinist
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=fPpkSiO1Ci4 [Video] (Low Quality)

Koine: The Formula the Solves Calvinism/Arminianism Debates https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=0Tej_wptT1o [Video] https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=O7MQbrt_XM4 [Video]

The False Doctrines of Calvinism and Arminianism - What's the Truth?
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=eYhNzAZrvnc [Audio]

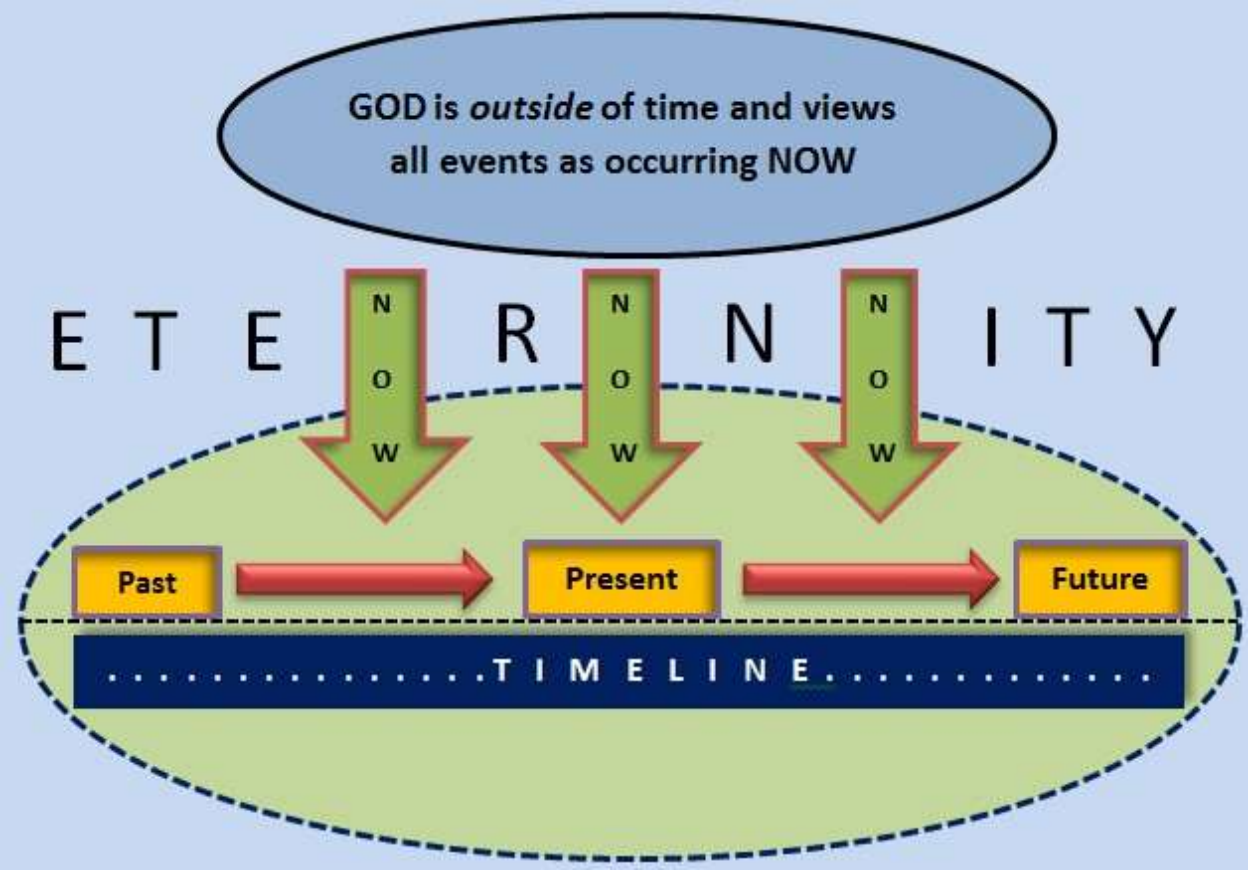
Greg Boyd: Calvinism Refuted in 10 Minutes
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=JASX8g6sWkw [Video]

Why Collectivism contradicts Calvinism: NT Wright and Johnathan Pritchett
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=RaipIMVYb34 [Video] (Soteriology101.com)

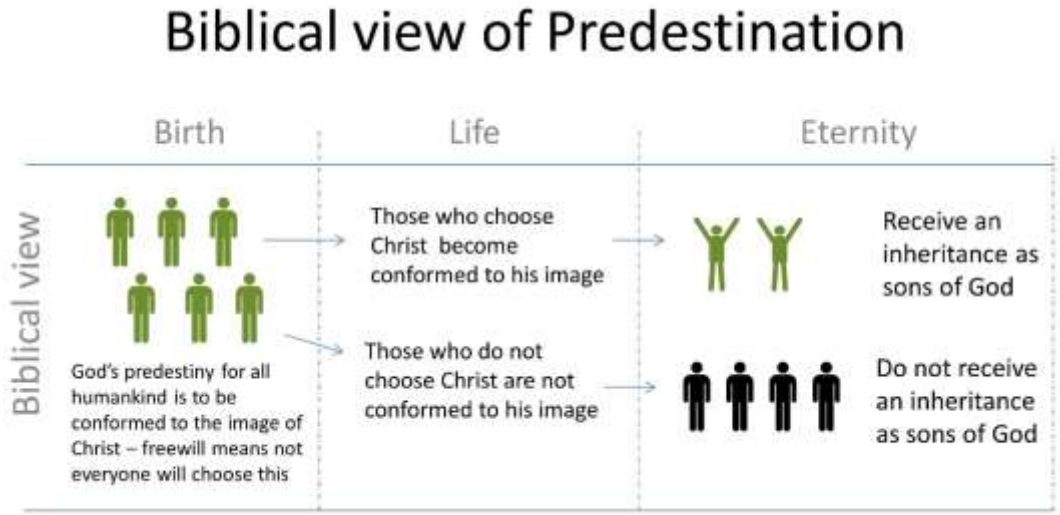
Drs. Leighton Flowers and Johnathan Pritchett (along with a video from NT Wright) discuss the first century tribal or collectivist culture as it relates to our hermeneutic in approaching controversial passages regarding soteriology.

Dr. James Leo Garrett, an esteemed Southern Baptist scholar, wrote of a "Westernized hyper individualization" of certain biblical doctrines:

> "From Augustine of Hippo to the twentieth century, Western Christianity has tended to interpret the doctrine of election from the perspective of and with regard to individual human beings. During those same centuries the doctrine has been far less emphasized and seldom ever controversial in Eastern Orthodoxy. Is it possible that Augustine and later Calvin, with the help of many others, contributed to a hyper individualization of this doctrine that was hardly warranted …?"



Let's just be honest. We, as American Westerners, do tend to think everything is about us, the individual. We tend to read the text with an ego-centric bent. If someone tells the story of David slaying the giant, we see ourselves as the hero in that story and feel as if it is a lesson is about how we can slay the "giants" in our lives too. However, it's much more likely that we are better represented by the Israelites hiding in fear while Christ, the actual hero of the story, slays our "giants."



And when we read of God setting certain people apart for noble tasks, we can tend toward a self-aggrandizing interpretation of those text by assuming God must have set us, as individuals, apart in a similar manner. For instance, how often have you heard someone quote, "You did not choose me, but I chose you and appointed you so that you might go and bear fruit" (Jn. 15:16) to prove that they were individually chosen to be effectually saved?

See also: Reformed Theology vs Lutheranism vs Calvinism vs Weslyanism / Calvinism

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Doctrine.org: Predestination
http://doctrine.org/predestination/

http://www.pushpublishing.co.uk/wordpress/wp-content/uploads/2015/04/BiblicalViewOfPredestination.jpg

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Biblical Doctrine of Election and Predestination

http://www.gsbaptistchurch.com/elect/election_predest_man.html

Excerpt:

Nowhere in Scripture is an individual elected to be in Christ. But those that are in Christ are elect. Once 'in' they are the elect for special service in this world. One does not enter the kingdom of God because he was elected to enter (Eph 2:8-9 says “for by grace are ye saved” not by election), but one becomes the elect because he is born into the kingdom. (Eph 2:10 says “For we are his workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works, which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them.”) One does not get in by election (John 3:14-19), but once 'in', one is elect and tasked to service. Again examine Col 3:12 as it clarifies that election is for work not for justification; “Put on therefore, as the elect of God, holy and beloved, bowels of mercies, kindness, humbleness of mind, meekness, longsuffering; Forbearing one another, and forgiving one another, if any man have a quarrel against any: even as Christ forgave you, so also do ye.” Now that we are in the kingdom of God, 'whosoever wills' that are installed by grace through faith, and that not of election, we are to behave as elect ones with work to do. Again, how does one get 'in'? You must make an individual decision of your will to accept Christ as your Lord and Saviour. “For whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved.” (Rom 10:13) Once 'in' you are elected to service for your Lord, as you walk here in this life. Ergo election is to service, not to salvation.

A table of Old Testament election and New Testament election helps clarify that election is always for service and not for an eternal destiny. It also points out the parallels in the two elections.

Old Testament Elections	New Testament Elections
To be the seed by which the Messiah would be brought into the world. Gen 12	To be the witness to a lost dying world that the Christ has come. Acts 1:8
To Deliver the written Word of God to the world. Rom 3:1-2	To be a manifestation of The Word, the Christ, in this world John 17
To show the world that “The LORD our God is one LORD” Deut 6:4, Mar 12:9	To be the temple of the Holy Spirit of God in this world. 1Cor 6:19-20

Desiring God (Piper): Predestination

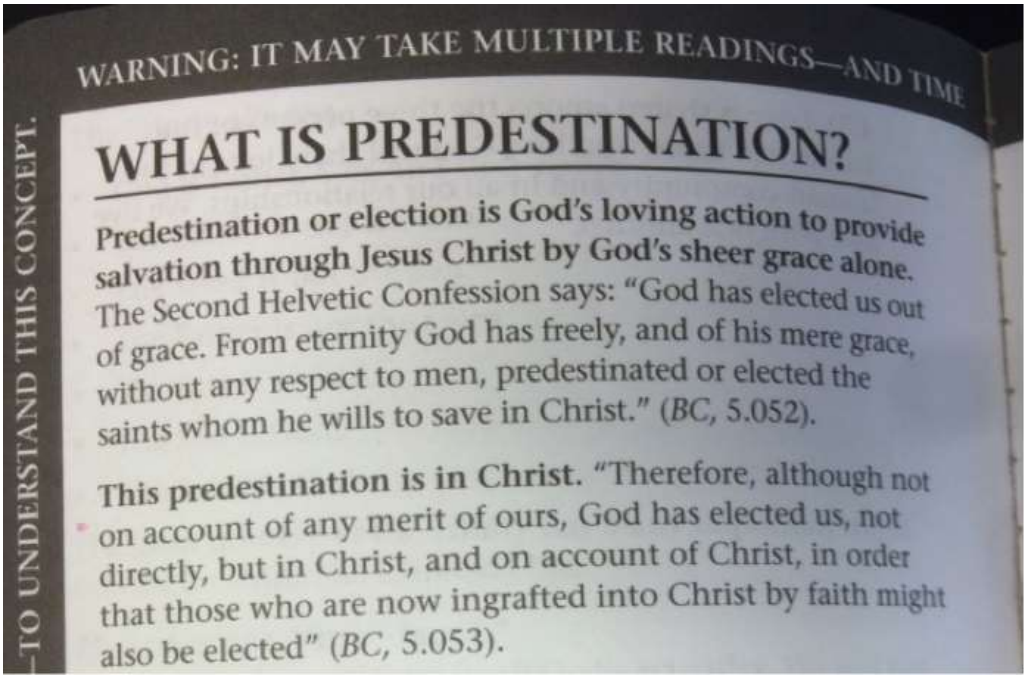
http://www.desiringgod.org/topics/predestination

Foreknowledge, Predestination, and Election

http://www.jesus-is-savior.com/Basics/predestination.htm

https://heritagebbc.com/wp-content/uploads/2015/02/foreknowledgepredestinationandelection.pdf [PDF]

Predestination, Election and Foreknowledge



http://kenbirks.com/bible-studies/Predestination.pdf [PDF]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Predestination & the artist as God

Prebyterians and Predestination:
http://kekovacs.blogspot.com/2015/07/presbyterians-predestination.html

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

What Do Christians Believe?: Predestination

http://www.christians.eu/predestination/ [PDF] [ePUB]

Excerpt:

1.3 Calvin (1509–1564)

John Calvin's teaching gained a lot of influence when it was discussed and developed at the Synod of Dort (1618-1619 in the Netherlands) and became the official teaching of the Reformed Church in the Netherlands.

By predestination we mean the eternal decree of God, by which he determined with himself whatever he wished to happen with regard to every man. All are not created on equal terms, but some are preordained to eternal life, others to eternal damnation. (Institutio Christianae Religionis 3.21.5)

Predestination: Christian Doctrine or Heresy?

http://bibleserralta.com/Predestination_Ingles_11_My_11.pdf [PDF]

The Biblical Doctrine of Predestination, Foreordination and Election

https://www.apologeticspress.org/rr/reprints/Biblical-Doctrine-of-Predestina.pdf [PDF]

A Concise Summary of the Corporate View of Election and Predestination

http://evangelicalarminians.org/a-concise-summary-of-the-corporate-view-of-election-and-predestination/

See also: Predestination Revisited

Calvinism

See also: Reformed Theology vs Lutheranism vs Calvinism vs Weslyanism

Ephesians: Predestination

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Predestination – Foreknowledge – Predetermination – Free Will

Predestination - Wikipedia
https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Predestination
(includes overview of different types/forms/degrees of predestination in Christianity and other religions)

Foreknowledge and Free Will (Secular perspective)
http://www.iep.utm.edu/foreknow/

Excerpt:

> Historically, the tension between foreknowledge and the exercise of free will was addressed in a religious context. According to orthodox views in the West, God was claimed to be omniscient (and hence in possession of perfect foreknowledge) and yet God was supposed to have given humankind free will. Attempts to solve the apparent contradiction often involved attributing to God special properties, for example, being "outside" of time.
>
> However, the trouble with such solutions is that they are generally unsatisfactory on their own terms. Even more serious is the fact that they leave untouched the problem posed not by God's foreknowledge but that of any human being. Do human beings have foreknowledge? Certainly, of at least some events and behaviors. Thus we have a secular counterpart of the original problem. A human being's foreknowledge, exactly as would God's, of another's choices would seem to preclude the exercise of human free will.
>
> In this article, various ways of trying to solve the problem---for example, by putting constraints on the truth-conditions for statements, or by "tightening" the conditions necessary for knowledge---are examined and shown not to work. Ultimately the alleged incompatibility of foreknowledge and free will is shown to rest on a subtle logical error. When the error, a modal fallacy, is recognized and remedied, the problem evaporates…

see also
http://plato.stanford.edu/entries/free-will-foreknowledge/

Freewill and Predestination
http://www.peterkreeft.com/topics-more/freewill-predestination.htm

Predestination & Free Will is Debatable – But Election is Clear http://www.swordwalk.com/predestination-free-will-is-debatable-but-election-is-clear/

What is predestination and election?
https://carm.org/predestination-and-election

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Predestination vs. Free Will - Is It One or the Other?
http://www.godandscience.org/doctrine/predestination.html

Excerpt:

> …I have tried to present a balanced examination of the issues regarding free will and predestination. It is obvious that the Bible teaches both concepts. Ultimately, I believe that God directs history. However, I do not believe that He micro-manages history. In other words, I think God places people in history so that His will is accomplished. This includes putting His followers, in addition to those who oppose Him, at strategic points in history. The Bible encourages us to use our free will to choose good over evil.

Predestination
http://www.apttoteach.org/Theology/Salvation/pdf/704_Sal._Predestination.pdf [PDF]

Key Question: Has God predestined all that takes place including the salvation of some and not others?

Covers Calvinism, Arminian positions; Order of the Decrees; Views of Election and Predestination; etc.

Doctrine of the Election
http://so4j.com/doctrine-of-election

What is the Doctrine of Election? Is Predestination & being Chosen Biblical?
Does God Elect & Choose certain people to be Saved and/or go to Hell?
Videos, Articles, Scriptures - John MacArthur, Cross TV

Does the Bible Teach Predestination?
http://ed5015.tripod.com/BPredestination12.htm

Christian Denominations: Beliefs and Theology (see Predestination Column)
http://www.religionfacts.com/charts/denominations-beliefs

Predestination, Salvation and Damnation - Calvinism and Catholicism Contrasted
http://www.biblicalcatholic.com/apologetics/num21.htm (Catholic Viewpoint)

Predestination (@ Doctrine.org)
http://doctrine.org/predestination/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

for more context…

http://www.icstc.com/bg/will/fore.html

http://www.monergism.com/thethreshold/articles/onsite/foreknew.html

http://helpmewithbiblestudy.org/1God/OmniscienceWhatDoesForeknowMean.aspx

http://www.reformationtheology.com/2006/11/the_question_of_gods_foreknowl.php

Even if the Arminian does not accept that 'foreknow' means 'forelove', he must at least agree that the idea of predestination by foreknowledge is, at best, superfluous. Why would God predestine something to happen if He already knows it will happen? Such an act would have no effect on the outcome of the future.
http://www.reformationtheology.com/2006/05/two_views_on_foreknowledge_by.php

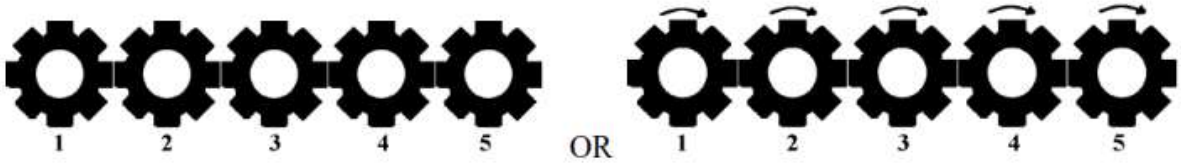
Analogies

One analogy that makes the idea clearer puts God on a hilltop above a stream of all the events in time. God's vision encompasses the whole stream at once, but He himself is not part of it (cf. Nash 75).

http://dwickingson.yolasite.com/excerpt-phil-rel.php

By analogy, knowing what will happen does not mean that we are preventing or causing that thing to happen. The sun will rise tomorrow. I am not causing it to rise nor am I preventing it from rising by knowing that it will happen. Likewise, if I put a bowl of ice-cream and a bowl of cauliflower in front of my child, I know for a fact which one is chosen--the ice cream. My knowing it ahead of time does not restrict my child from making a free choice when the time comes. My child is free to make a choice and knowing the choice has no effect upon her when she makes it.

https://carm.org/if-god-knows-our-free-will-choices-do-we-still-have-free-will



What Edwards has in mind may be illustrated by conceiving of the earth as if it were a giant billiards table. Any single human volition or deed is akin to a cue ball hitting fifteen colored balls and scattering them across the table. In turn, each of the fifteen then becomes another cue ball which strikes yet another fifteen, which in turn become cue balls hitting yet another fifteen, and so on, ad infinitum. This is not to suggest that the universe is an impersonal and mechanistic collision of cause and effect. Rather the point is that for every thought or emotion or resolution or act or word or choice there is set in motion a multitude of diverse effects, each of which has the potential to become a cause of yet innumerable other diverse effects, ad infinitum. [Regarding EDF]

http://www.samstorms.com/all-articles/post/edwards-on-foreknowledge---part-i

(Romans 8:29-30) If these exegetical problems did not pose enough problem for the view of predestination by foreknowledge, there is also a logical reason why this view is an unacceptable

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

interpretation of Paul's doctrine. This is where the gear illustration will be most helpful. As has been said earlier, the five-fold chain of events that takes place is an exclusive, causal chain that allows for no variance of persons from one step to the next. The common analogy is that of a tunnel, but for clarity and specificity, a gear analogy will be used here. If Paul's five-fold chain of events could be visualized, there are two possible options at this point:

In these diagrams, the numbered gears represent the five steps listed in the scriptural argument: (1) foreknowledge, (2) predestination, (3) calling, (4) justification, and (5) glorification. The first gear turns all the other gears in turn. No one gear can turn without all the others turning.

Notice that one set of gears turns while the other set is stationary. The purpose of the predestination by foreknowledge view is to explain the reason behind God's decision to turn one set of gears and not the other. The view says that God predestines because he knows that the person will respond positively to the call, thereby being justified. If this is to be translated into the language of the gear analogy, it would say that the reason the gear turner turns the first gear is because he foresaw that the fourth gear would turn. So in this view, the gear turner looks ahead to the fourth gear, and depending on what he foresees that gear doing, he may or may not decide to turn the first gear.

The problem with this view should be evident. If the gear turner foresees the turning of gear number four, then he would certainly know that the only way for gear number four to turn is for gear number one to be turned by himself. Another way of saying this is that the cause of gear number four's turning is gear number three's turning. Gear number three only turns because of gear number two. Gear number two turns because of gear number one. And the basis of the system is that gear number one turns because gear number four does. The process begins again, and then again with a never-ending circle. The problem here is that there is no real causal starting point. The view ends up saying that the gear turner turned the first gear because he knew that he himself would turn the first gear.

Applied to the five-fold chain of events listed in Rom 8:29-30, this logic shows again the absurdity of the predestination by foreknowledge view. The view says that God foreknows that someone will be justified, so he is predestined. But God also knows that justification is only caused by calling. And calling is only caused by predestination. And that predestination is only caused by his foreknowing. This view makes justification both the cause and the effect of God's foreknowledge, thereby reducing it to circular reasoning.

Both exegetical and logical arguments have shown that the predestination by foreknowledge view is not supported by the text of Rom 8:29-30. In fact, the view is rendered impossible by Paul's language and argument through the passage. First, the word "foreknowledge" does not refer to events, but people. Second, the idea that God's eternal prescience is all that the idea of foreknowledge conveys renders the Apostle's idea meaningless in verse 29. Third, the view holds no water when held up to even a mild amount of logical criticism.

The predestination by foreknowledge view is a necessary view in the Arminian system, which seeks to argue against an unconditional election. The system tries to make God's election conditional by basing it on man's choice. Scripture will have none of that, as the text in view has shown. The foreknowledge in the passage must be “the act of cognition or recognition, the fixing, so to speak, the mind upon, which involves the idea of selection.” the eternal mind of God, not merely a passive knowledge of all things future, but an active knowledge by his setting his mind on certain members of his creation.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

http://www3.dbu.edu/Naugle/pdf/pew_papers/2003_brent_hobbs.pdf

[Arminian] Concerning election and predestination, we might use the analogy of a great ship on its way to heaven. The ship (the church) is chosen by God to be his very own vessel. Christ is the Captain and Pilot of this ship. All who desire to be a part of this elect ship and its Captain can do so through a living faith in Christ, by which they come on board the ship. As long as they are on the ship, in company with the ship’s Captain, they are among the elect. If they choose to abandon the ship and Captain, they cease to be part of the elect. Election is always only in union with the Captain and his ship. Predestination tells us about the ship’s destination and what God has prepared for those remaining on it. God invites everyone to come aboard the elect ship through faith in Jesus Christ.

http://evangelicalarminians.org/a-concise-summary-of-the-corporate-view-of-election-and-predestination/

Freewill and Predestination
http://www.peterkreeft.com/topics-more/freewill-predestination.htm

See also: Predestination Revisited

NOTE: See prior sections re: Calvinism vs Arminianism, etc. for additional references

See also*: Sovereignty of God vs Free Will

Predestination, Election, Chosen, and Related Terms

Calvinism

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Atonement and Christus Victor vs Penal Substitution

(Penal Substitution explained)

Tom Wright on The Atonement Debate (2009)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=IA8CY5iC_ww [Video]

N.T. Wright on the Atonement – Review and Summarization (2003) http://hornes.org/theologia/mark-horne/n-t-wright-on-the-atonement

N.T. Wright and a Genuine Penal Substitutionary Atonement Theory (2014) https://www.ravenfoundation.org/n-t-wright-genuine-penal-substitutionary-atonement-theory/#dialog

NT Wright: Christus victor vs penal substitution atonement (2009) https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=qfnV69nIOrw [Video]

Wikipedia: Christus Victor
https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Christus_Victor

Penal Substitution (Satisfaction Doctrine) vs Christus Victus http://therebelgod.com/cross_intro.shtml (links to Parts 1 – 3, also automatically downloads full PDF)

http://therebelgod.com/CrossPaper.pdf (direct link to [PDF])

Penal Substitution v "Christus Victor" https://agardenofgrace.wordpress.com/penal-substitution-v-christus-victor/

Excerpt:

… Many Christians believe in the doctrine of Penal Substitution – that we broke God's law (which we're told is impossible to keep anyway), so God took his wrath out on his Son because his standards of perfection mean that he must have blood for law-breaking before he can forgive, and also because humans are so despicably wicked that they deserve the worst possible punishment there is. So God poured his anger out on Jesus instead of us, thereby fulfilling the necessary legal requirements.

This view seems to be based on reason rather than revelation – it says that Jesus came to earth basically to die, to act as a sinless and perfect death-sacrifice so God can be appeased and therefore forgive the rest of us. In other words, that God demands a payment for transgression, and there is no forgiveness without the Cross.

But the early church did not have a clear doctrine of the Cross. This view came about in around 1000AD through St Anselm of Canterbury, during a time when reason and logic were seen as more valuable than relational matters of the heart, and judicial systems were highly valued. It sees God primarily as a court-room judge, who must judge sin and administer punishment – everything is interpreted through the law, salvation included. Salvation is basically about forgiveness of guilt – forgiveness of our wrongdoing – dealing with sin on a superficial level. It also focuses on Christ's death rather than the Resurrection, and to a large extent ignores the actual life he lived.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The notion of sacrifice to appease the gods is not Hebrew, but pagan. The pagans would offer sacrifices to appease their gods to stop them being in a bad temper and doing horrible things to them. But from a Jewish perspective sacrifices were for the people, for their cleansing, and their communion with God. Penal Substitution basically sees the sacrifice of Christ from a pagan view – as a requirement by God to spare the rest of us. It is based on a medieval – not a Biblical – view of justice, when rationalistic theories and judicial systems were valued, and relational issues considered weak and 'feminine'.

People who are not sure what they believe sometimes suggest that God must be really cruel and sadistic, a bloodthirsty tyrant, and they want nothing to do with him. Teaching this doctrine does not draw them near to his heart. Those who are aware of God's love, somehow know that the cross is way more than this, it is about the heart of God.

The early church saw the Cross in terms of "Christus Victor" – Christ's victory over sin, death and the devil. It also viewed Christ's whole life, death and resurrection as the sacrifice he paid as a ransom to free the captives from bondage.

The Penal Substitution view starts with a legal view through justification, then shifts to a relational one with sanctification. A better way would be to view the entirety through a relational framework – where justification means being brought out of darkness and into light, which is God's family. This means not erroneously being declared innocent but instead declared loved by God, and justified and sanctified through his Love.

Penal Substitution vs Christus Victor

https://www.reddit.com/r/Christianity/comments/v8c7l/penal_substitution_vs_christus_victor/ [Forum]

Jesus and the Identity of God, NT Wright

http://ntwrightpage.com/2016/07/12/jesus-and-the-identity-of-god/

A Christus Victor AND Penal Substitution View of the Atonement?

http://reknew.org/2008/10/a-christus-victor-and-penal-substitution-view-of-the-atonement/

"Christus Victor" vs. "Penal Substitutionary Atonement"

http://www.wiebefamily.org/CV_vs_PSA.htm

Penal Substitution vs. Medical-Ontological Substitution: A Historical Comparison

http://nagasawafamily.org/article-penal-substitution-vs-ontological-substitution-historical-comparison.pdf [PDF]

Excerpt:

… But scholarly opinion weighs against these authors. Most theologians and historians of the early church believe that the early church was united in upholding the broad christus victor theory for over a millennium. The varied language of Jesus as a healer, ransom, deliverer, and conqueror was used to denote Jesus being victorious over human sinfulness, death, and the devil. Substitution, but not penal substitution, was clearly taught, for Jesus was victorious on our behalf and for our salvation. I am calling this view 'ontological substitution,' or 'medical substitution,' although Eastern Orthodox theologian Stephen Freeman prefers 'therapeutic substitution', and Reformed theologian T.F. Torrance calls it 'total substitution.' It was only Anselm of Canterbury who first articulated an atonement theory that positioned Jesus as a 'satisfaction' of 'an attribute' of God. In Anselm's theory, Jesus satisfied God's honor, which contributed to the idea that Jesus stored up a 'treasury of merit' others could access. Anselm could therefore leave the question of the scope of the atonement open, and genuinely open to human free will to choose Jesus. However, Anselm paved the way for John Calvin and others to position Jesus as satisfying God's retributive justice, which became a broader category that was extended across people and across time, and which was understood in such a way that Jesus exhausted God's wrath at one time, upholding God's retributive justice on their behalf. Unlike Anselm's theology where Jesus satisfied God's honor in a personal way, giving others access, person by person, to his achievement, Calvin's theology positioned Jesus against God's justice in a categorical way, on behalf of the elect, all at once. This left no logical place for genuine human free will…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

A Better Atonement: Christus Victor

http://www.patheos.com/blogs/tonyjones/2012/02/29/a-better-atonement-christus-victor/

Excerpt:

In 1930, a relatively unknown Swedish bishop and theologian revived an understanding of the atonement that had largely been forgotten for 1,000 years. Gustaf Aulén's book, Christus Victor: An Historical Study of the Three Main Types of the Atonement was translated into English the next year, and it's stayed in print ever since.

The Christus Victor (CV) model, Aulén argues, was the predominant theory for the first millennium of the church, and it was held by the majority of the church fathers whom we still revere. Along came Anselm and changed the game — for reasons I've written about before and will discuss in an upcoming post — and CV was relegated to history's rubbish bin. Until Aulén.

Today, CV has had something of a resurgence. That's been led by Greg Boyd — who's personal brand was called, until recently, Christus Victor Ministries — and others.

CV falls under a broader umbrella called the Ransom Theory. In this understanding, the original sin of Adam and Eve placed all of humanity under subjugation to Satan. Christ, the second person of the Trinity, came to Earth and died, giving his life as a ransom for many.

At this point, CV may sound like the penal substitution model that many of us grew up with. But that's where Aulén said we're wrong. The early church did not understand the death of Christ as paying a penalty in some transactional sense that only God's son could pay. The crucifixion is not, in that sense, cosmically necessary to reconcile God and humanity.

Instead, Christ's death is God's victory over sin and death. God conquers death by fully entering into it. God conquers Satan by using the very means employed by the Evil One.

Thus, the crucifixion is not a necessary transaction to appease a wrathful and justice-demanding deity, but an act of divine love.

God entered fully into the bondage of death, turned it inside out by making it a moment of victory, and thereby liberates humanity to live lives of love without the fear of death.

It's a beautiful thing, the crucifixion, in this view. And, for those of us who are robustly trinitarian, it maintains an egalitarian view of the Trinity — one in which the Son and Spirit are not junior partners in the atonement.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

What Makes a Full Atonement Full? (by Gospel Coalition) https://www.thegospelcoalition.org/article/what-makes-a-full-atonement-full/

Excerpt:

I can illustrate the relationship between the theories with a cake. Christus Victor is the cake itself—the thing that Jesus was doing on the cross. Penal substitution supplies the ingredients, the flour and sugar. And moral influence and example are the frosting, the lingering sweetness of our great salvation. The cross assures us that we are loved, and it motivates us to love others as God has loved us.

Christus Victor explains why Jesus died, penal substitution explains how his death worked, and the double-sided moral influence and example theories explain what we should do in response.

No Christus Victor Here – Atonement According to the Apostolic Fathers https://holyspiritactivism.com/2014/04/07/no-christus-victor-here-atonement-according-to-the-apostolic-fathers/

Penal Substitution in Church History
https://www.tms.edu/m/tmsj20i.pdf [PDF]

Penal Substitution and Church History https://www.tms.edu/preachersandpreaching/penal-substitution-in-church-history/

The Problem with Christus Victor?
Part 1: http://www.covenantoflove.net/theology/the-problem-with-christus-victor-part-1/

Part 2: http://www.covenantoflove.net/theology/the-problem-with-christus-victor-part-2/

Penal Substitution in Perspective:
Re-Evaluating the Articulation and Application of the Doctrine http://www.mcmaster.ca/mjtm/pdfs/vol10/articles/MJTM_10.2_FranklinPenal.pdf [PDF]

Question: "What are the various theories on the atonement?"
https://www.gotquestions.org/atonement-theories.html

Theopedia: Governmental theory of atonement http://www.theopedia.com/governmental-theory-of-atonement

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

John Finney's Lectures on God's Moral Government
http://www.gospeltruth.net/mg/mg.htm

Nathan Taylor's Lectures on the Moral Government of God
http://www.gospeltruth.net/ntmg/vol1/ntmg_toc.htm

The Governmental Theory of the Atonement http://truthinheart.com/EarlyOberlinCD/CD/4/Miley/miley.htm

Wikipedia: Atonement in Christianity
https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Atonement_in_Christianity

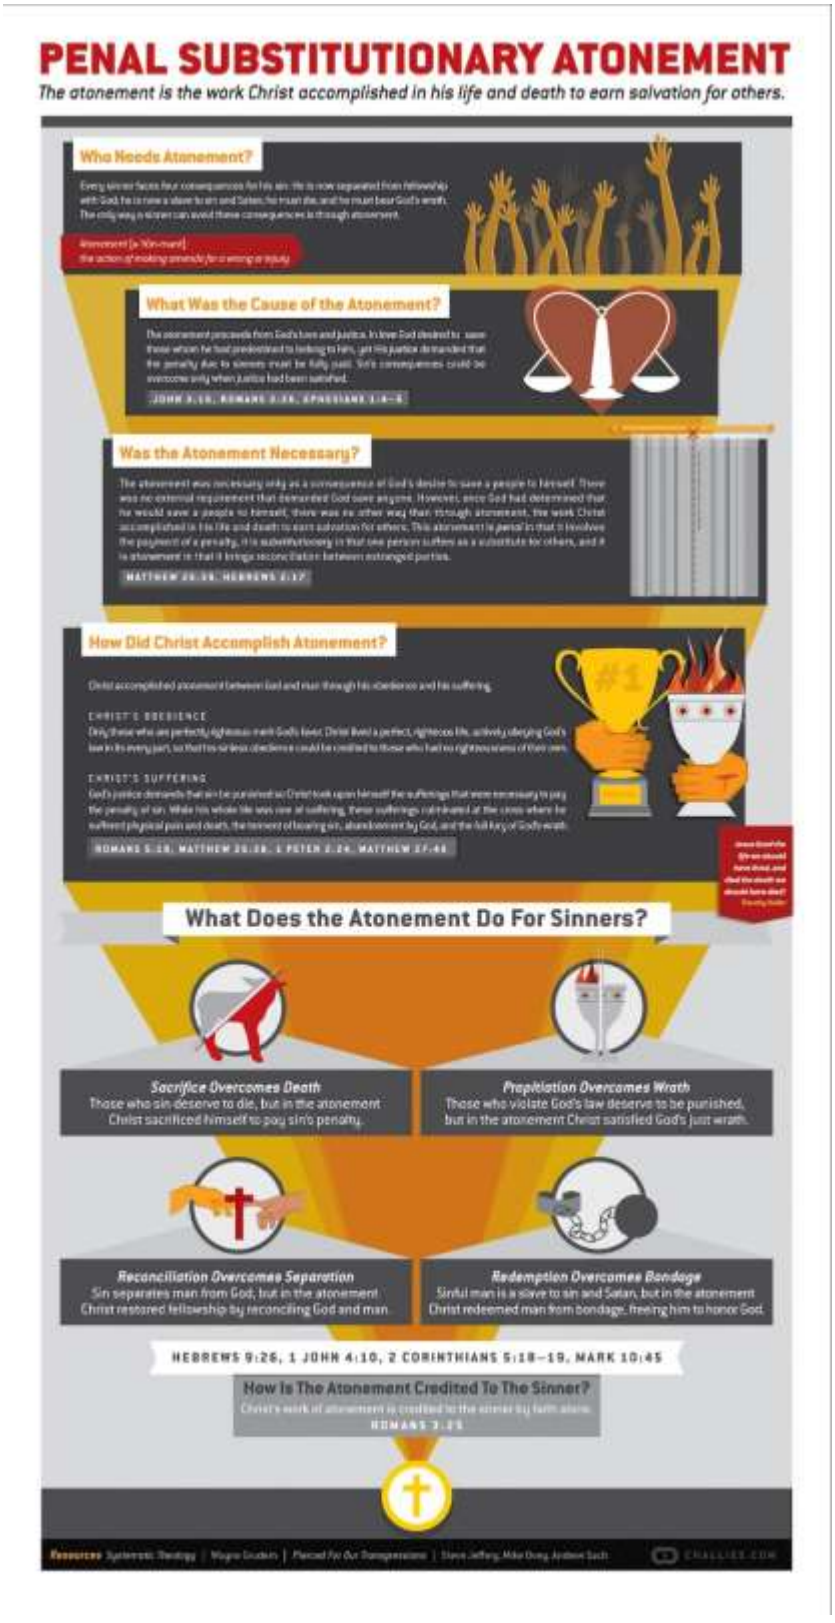
N.T. Wright on Penal Substitution https://derekzrishmawy.com/2012/09/11/n-t-wright-on-penal-substitution/

Excerpt:

The moral of the story is that N.T. Wright affirms penal substitutionary atonement. Sorry uber-conservative Reformed guys, he actually does get the Cross. Sorry, lefty, anti-PSA types, your Kingdom-minded hero says some really old-school Evangelical stuff about the atonement.

For everybody else, you're welcome.

Soli Deo Gloria



Small Update: For more vindication of this point, John Piper has a statement in his critical book The Future of Justification (pp. 46-53) affirming the Wright, indeed, does affirm PSA.

Atonement continued on next page…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Visual Theology – The Atonement

https://www.challies.com/visual-theology/visual-theology-the-atonement/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Eternal Security of the Believer – Once Saved, Always Saved

Let's see how Paul says that those who tasted the heavenly gift and were partakers of the Holy Spirit, later went astray (Hebrews 6:4-6)

http://bibleserralta.com/PaulOnceSaved.htm

Hebrews 6:4-9

These verses have been commandeered into service of the most amazing variety of theological positions. Arminians (named after their supposed founder, Jacobus Arminius (1560-1609)) take them as proof that it is possible for someone who has once been a believer to fall away from faith irretrievably. Calvinists (after John Calvin (1509-1564)) interpret them in such a way as to make that a practical impossibility. The dispute between them has fueled many fires, but often forgotten is the author's purpose, which is not to deal abstractly with the "eternal security of the believer," but specifically with his readers' concern that unless the Levitical sacrifices required by the Five Books of Moses are offered their sins remain unforgiven. Whether they had in fact reintroduced sacrifices on their own cannot be determined from the evidence of this book. But it is obvious that they were fixated on the sacrificial system; and it becomes the author's task to show them that Yeshua's atoning death and his elevation to the office of cohen gadol has brought about "a transformation of Torah " (7:12) which alters the sacrificial system and priesthood.

Here is a review of the author's argument in these verses. He speaks of people who have

1. once been enlightened , so that they know who Yeshua is and what he has done;

2. tasted the heavenly gift of God's forgiveness;

3. become sharers in the Ruach HaKodesh , the Holy Spirit whom God gives only through his Son Yeshua (this terminology makes it impossible that the author is referring to pseudo-believers, because only true believers become sharers in the Ruach HaKodesh);

4. tasted the goodness (compare Psalm 34:8) of God's Word and

5. tasted the powers of the *'olam haba , which is interesting terminology for the gifts of the Holy Spirit as enumerated in 1C 12:8-10

When people who have experienced salvation in such a deep way and then have fallen away from faith by trusting not in Yeshua's own sacrificial death and high-priestly office but in animal sacrifices and the system of cohanim which the Torah set up to administer them—then it is impossible to renew them so that they turn from their sin, as long as for themselves they keep on executing the Son of God on the stake all over again . The reason is that they ignore what his death on the stake means, as proved by their trusting in animal sacrifices instead of his sacrifice. Thus they keep holding him up to public contempt by not glorifying his death as an atoning death but seeing it as having no special significance, so that his execution as a criminal becomes the dominant fact about it.

I am indebted to Jerome Fleischer, a Messianic Jew with a ministry in the San Francisco area, for pointing out to me that the author's purpose in these verses was not to provide fuel for the Calvinist-Arminian controversy of 1500 years later, but to turn his readers' concern away from animal sacrifices and toward the significance of Yeshua's final sacrifice. This is clear from the context of the following four chapters, which deal with precisely this question and which constitute the heart of the book.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

However, it is possible to make a midrash on these verses which does deal with the Calvinist-Arminian controversy. Calvinism teaches the eternal security of the believer. It is possible to define "believer" tautologically, in such a way that no one so defined ever falls away; but then no one could be certain he is a "believer" until his life had ended. For it is manifestly possible for a person to trust the Messiah as fully as he knows how, by any imaginable subjective or objective measure of his ability to trust, and to experience subjectively all the benefits of faith, and still at some point later to fall away. If that happens, it is impossible, so long as he remains in such a state, to renew him again so that he turns from his sin. Why? Because God has given him everything he can give, yet he now refuses to accept his status as righteous with God, along with the implied responsibility of living a holy life. In vv. 7-8 these good gifts of God are compared to rain, intended to make a good crop grow; but if an evil crop comes, it is in due course burned—a reminder of the fate of the wicked on the Day of Judgment. But the New Testament's way of dealing with the security of the believer is different. Yochanan [James] articulates it well: "The way we can be sure we know him is if we are obeying his commands" (1 Yn 2:3-6 &N).

Some, insisting on the eternal security of one who has confessed the Messiah, understand this passage to say that carnal believers will be deprived of rewards (1C 3:8-15 &N), or that they will spend the Millennial Age (Rv 20:2-7 &N) in Outer Darkness (see Mt 22:13-14 &N) instead of ruling with the Messiah.

9 The hellfire-and-brimstone of vv. 4-8 is balanced by a positive and comforting word: we are confident that you do not fall in the category of those who have fallen away and are close to being burned, but that you have the better things that come with being delivered.

[Source: Jewish New Testament Commentary]

Eternal Security – Biblical Reasons Why the Believer Cannot Lose Salvation

http://www.beyondthefundamentals.com/download/eternal-security.pdf [PDF] [Prelim. Notes (PDF)]

Saved, Always Saved…Doesn't Matter What You Do?

http://bibleserralta.com/once_saved_english.pdf [PDF]

Once Saved, Always Saved…A Biblical Discussion

http://behindthebadge.net/osas/index.html

Free For All Q&A - Can I lose my salvation? (Greg Boyd and Paul Eddy) (2009)

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=jkCMS8BJwGY [Video]

See also: Predestination Election and Related Terms

Ephesians 2:1-10 (re: Eternal Security)

For more about salvation and eternal security see my other separate references resource*: The Gospel, Salvation and Evangelism

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Monergism / Synergism (Theological)

Monergism is the position in Christian theology that God, through the Holy Spirit, works to bring about the salvation of an individual through spiritual regeneration, irrespective of the individual's cooperation. Monergism is most often associated with Calvinism (such as Presbyterianism and the Dutch Reformed Church) and its doctrine of irresistible grace, and particularly with historical doctrinal differences between Calvinism and Arminianism.

This position contrasts with Arminian synergism: the belief that God and individuals cooperate, to bring individuals salvation.

Lutheranism holds to the soteriological position of monergistic salvation and synergistic damnation, rejecting Calvin's monergistic damnation and Arminius' synergistic salvation; Lutheranism teaches that God predestines some to salvation but does not predestine others to damnation as God wills that all might be saved (1 Tim 2:3-6, Rom. 11:32, etc.). The Scriptural basis for man's justification by faith alone is summarized in the Epitome of the Formula of Concord under Free Will and The Righteousness of Faith, and fully discussed in the Solid Declaration of the Formula of Concord under Free Will and The Righteousness of Faith. Likewise the Defense of the Augsburg Confession discusses the Scriptural basis of man's Justification. Lutherans thus confess that salvation is monergistic, saving faith being the work of the Holy Spirit alone while man is still the uncooperative enemy of God (Rom. 5:8,10), but man's damnation is synergistic - Scripture states repeatedly that man participates in and bears the responsibility for resisting God's grace of the free gift - not enforced gift - of salvation (ex: Matt. 23:37, Heb. 12:25, Acts 7:51, John 16:9, Heb. 12:15, etc.). Thus, you will see Calvinists incorrectly accuse Lutherans of Arminianism and Arminians incorrectly accuse Lutherans of Calvinism. Lutherans view their stance not as having one foot in Calvinism and one foot in Arminianism, but having both feet firmly planted in scripture.

Wikipedia: https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Monergism

Monergism

https://www.monergism.com/

Excerpt:

What is Monergism? The term "monergism" is a theological term in which the prefix "mono" means "one" and the suffix "ergism" (ergon) means "to work". Or together they mean, "the work of one", or salvation is of the Lord alone, not a cooperation of man and God. If anyone is to be saved Jesus must grant everything we need for salvation, including a new heart to believe. (Deut 29:4, 30:6: Ezek 36:26; John 6:63, 65, 37). The Trinity works in harmony to bring about the salvation of his elect. The Father elects us in Christ, the Son redeems the same, and the Holy Spirit applies regeneration to the all those the Father has given the Son. The gospel indeed goes out to all people who hear it, but in the stubbornness of people's hearts no one, left to themselves, responds to this outward call (1 Cor 1:23, 24; 2:14), so in love God extends mercy to a multitude of ill-deserving rebel sinners by opening their blind eyes, unstopping their deaf ears and turning their heart of stone to a heart of flesh, that they might believe and live (Rom 9:15, 16). If anyone is to be saved, it is not because someone naturally had a good will, was more humble, was more wise, and someone else did not, but because Christ saved them, If someone trusts in Christ it is because He (Christ) gave them a good will that they might believe the gospel call. No one believes the gospel apart from effectual working of the Holy Spirit. (1 Cor 12;3; 1 Thess 1:4-5)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

A Defense of Monergistic Regeneration
https://www.monergism.com/thethreshold/articles/onsite/Murphy01.html

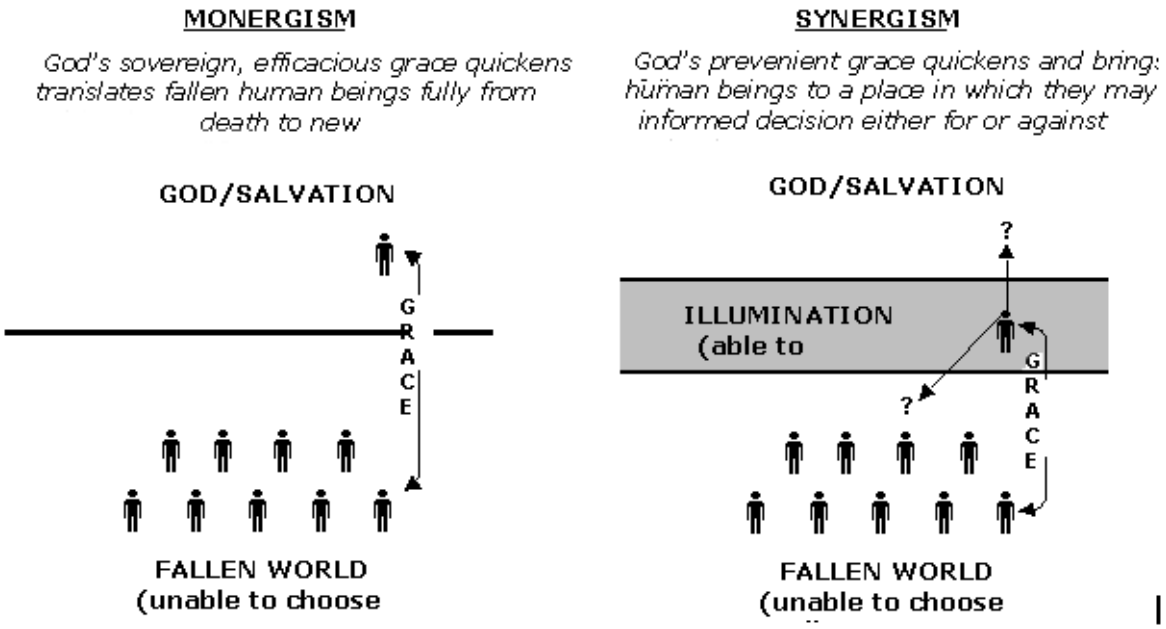

Figure 1: Monergism and Synergism Contrasted

Synergism (Theology)
https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Synergism_%28theology%29

Monergism vs. Synergism
https://www.monergism.com/thethreshold/articles/onsite/whatismonergism2.html

https://www.monergism.com/thethreshold/articles/onsite/twoviews.html

Two Views of Regeneration
[Note: From Point of View of Monergism]

Monergism: In theol., The doctrine that the Holy Spirit is the only efficient agent in regeneration - that the human will possesses no inclination to holiness until regenerated, and therefore cannot cooperate in regeneration. The Holy Spirit, who joins us to Christ, quickens us through the outward call cast forth by the preaching of His Word, disarms our innate hostility, removes our blindness, illumines our mind, creates understanding, turns our heart of stone to a heart of flesh. Only then do we apprehend the beauty and excellency of Christ. This gracious Spirit wrought work in the heart gives rise to a delight in His Word -- all that we might, with our renewed affections, willingly & gladly embrace Christ. Monergism is when

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

God conveys that power into the fallen soul whereby the person who is to be saved is enabled to receive the offer of redemption. It refers to the first step (regeneration) which has causal priority over, and gives rise to, the moral and spiritual desire/ability to comply with all the other aspects of the process of being united to Christ, (i.e., the ability to apprehend the Redeemer by a living faith, to repent of sin and to love God and the Mediator supremely) It does not refer to the whole process that it gives rise to (justification, sanctification), but only the granting of the spiritual capacity to comply with the terms of the covenant of grace. As Michael Haykin says, "The Reformation was not merely about justification through faith alone but, more importantly, it considered "...whether sinners are wholly helpless in their sin, and whether God is to be thought of as saving them by free, unconditional, invincible grace, not only justifying them for Christs' sake when they come to faith, but also raising them from the death of sin by His quickening Spirit in order to bring them to faith."

Synergism: "...the doctrine that there are two efficient agents in regeneration, namely the human will and the divine Spirit, which, in the strict sense of the term, cooperate. This theory accordingly holds that the soul has not lost in the fall all inclination toward holiness, nor all power to seek for it under the influence of ordinary motives." The synergistic doctrine of prevenient grace does not resolve this issue, but only pushes it back, for if all have grace and only some believe the gospel, then what makes them to differ? Jesus Christ or something else in them? According to the synergist, something other than grace makes men to differ. This unscriptural view is the greatest threat to a true understanding of salvation in the Church today.

The following chart highlights some of the major points of difference in these systems:

Synergism	Monergism
Cause of Regeneration
Regeneration is the work of Christ plus the good will of unspiritual man. What makes men to differ from one another is not the grace of Jesus alone, but Jesus plus the good will of unspiritual man.	Regeneration is the work of the Holy Spirit alone applying the the effectual crosswork of Christ to the unspiritual man. What makes men to differ is Jesus Christ alone.
Faith is the cause that triggers regeneration	Regeneration has causal priority to faith (Just as a person must have eyes before they see and ears prior to their ability to hear, so one must first have a new heart in order to understand spiritual truth)
Faith and affections for God are produced by the old nature.	Faith is not produced by our unregenerated human nature. It is the immediate and inevitable product of the new nature. The new heart (by nature) loves Christ.
God and Man work together to produce the new birth. God's grace takes us part of the way to salvation, man's unregenerate will must determine the final outcome. In other words belief in Christ gives rise to the new birth.	God, the Holy Spirit, alone produces regeneration with no contribution from the sinner (A work of God). The new birth is never spoke of in the imperative (not commanded), rather man must be born again by God.
God is eagerly awaiting the sinner's will.	God effectually enables the sinner's will.
The persons of the Trinity have conflicting goals in accomplishing and applying salvation: The Father elects a particular people; The Son dies for a general people and the Holy Spirit applies the	The persons of the Trinity work in harmony - The Father elects a particular people (Eph 1:3-5), Christ dies for those the Father has given Him (John 17:9, 15; Rev 5:9) and the Holy Spirit likewise applies the benefits of the atonement to

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

atonement conditionally on those who exercize their autonomous libertarian free will.	the same. (Regeneration is one of the redemptive benefits of Christ's work)
Restoration of spiritual faculties comes after the man without the Spirit exercizes faith with his natural (innate) capacities. Has the ability to see spiritual truth even before healed. (see 1 Cor 2:14). Has spiritual capacity/desire to receive the truth, prior God's granting any spiritual ability.	"Light" itself is not enough for a blind man to see, his vision must first be restored. (John 3:3,6). Needs spiritual ability to receive truth prior to receiving it (1 Cor 2:12; John 6:63-65 & 37).
View of Humanity
The fallen sinner has the ability and potential inclination to believe even prior to the new birth	The fallen sinner has no understanding, moral ability or inclination to believe prior to the new birth. (1 Cor 2:14).
There is enough good left in fallen man to turn his affections toward Christ.	Fallen Man has a mind at enmity with God; loves darkness, hates the light and does not have the Holy Spirit. "There is no one who seeks God" (Rom 3:11); Sinner would never turn to God without divine enablement and new affections.
Sinner needs help, is spiritually handicapped.	Spiritually dead sinner needs new nature (mind, heart, will), regeneration.
Natural man is sick and disabled like a drowning man so God would be uncaring if He didn't help by casting a rope.	Natural man is spiritually impotent and morally culpable for sin. Our moral inability is not like a physical handicap or a drowning man for which we would not be culpable but, rather, it is like a man who cannot repay a squandered financial debt. Inability to repay, therefore, does not relieve us of the moral responsibility to do so. God, in His mercy, does not merely throw us a rope, He dives in to make certain we do not drown.
Needs salvation from the consequences of sin - unhappiness, hell, psychological pain.	Needs salvation to remove the offense we've made against a holy God and from the power and bondage of sin.
The natural man is sovereign over his choice to accept or reject Christ - God conditionally responds to our decision. God's love for the sinner is, therefore, conditional.	The natural man can contribute nothing towards his salvation. Faith is a response rendered certain following the efficacious work of the Holy Spirit. We respond to God's unconditional love. (Acts 13:48; John 6:37)
Those fallen men who are saved, either created a right thought, generated a right affection, or originated a right volition that led to their salvation while some others did not have the natural wherewithal to come up with the faith that God required of them to obtain salvation. Therefore salvation is dependent on some virtue or capacity God sees in certain men. Not Jesus alone, but Jesus PLUS...	No Fallen man will create a right thought, generate a right affection, or originate a right volition that will lead to his salvation. We would never believe unless the Holy Spirit came in and disarmed our hostility to God. Therefore salvation is dependent on God's good pleasure alone (Eph 1:4, 5, 11), not some virtue or goodwill He sees in us.
Man's nature & affections do not determine or give rise to their choices. Even without the Holy Spirit	Man's nature determines his desires/affections and give rise to the choices he makes. Jesus

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

working change in his heart, the sinner can still make a saving decision to believe the gospel. In this scheme God gives enough grace to place man in a neutral position which can swing either for or against Jesus. (An act of chance?)	bears witness to this: "No good tree bears bad fruit, nor does a bad tree bear good fruit." Luke 6:43 Only Christ can "make a tree good and its fruit will be good." (Also see John 8:34, 42-44; 2 Pet. 2:19).
View of the Gospel
The Gospel is an invitation	The Gospel is not merely an invitation, but a command (1 John 3:23)
Christ died for all our sins except unbelief	Christ died for all our sins including unbelief
Sinners have the key in their hands. Man's will determines whether or not Christ's death is efficacious.	God has the key in his hand. God's eternal counsel determines to whom the benefits of the atonement apply.
It would be unjust of God to not give everyone an equal chance.	If God exercized His justice then none of us would stand, since each of us is in active rebellion against an infinitely holy God. He owes us nothing and is under no obligation to save any person. Regeneration is, therefore, an act of pure, undeserved mercy because the justice we deserved, He poured out on His Son (thereby turning His wrath away from us).
After God makes one's heart of stone into a heart of flesh the Holy Spirit's call to salvation can still be resisted.	After God makes one's heart of stone into a heart of flesh, no person wants to resist. By definition our desires, inclinations and affections have changed so we willingly and joyfully turn in faith toward Christ.
Salvation is given to fallen sinners (unregenerate) who choose and desire Christ of their free will.	Apart from grace, there is no fallen sinner (unregenerate) who fits that description. A desire for God is not part of the old nature.
The grace of God is conferred as a result of human prayer	It is grace itself which makes us pray to God (Rom 10:20; Isa. 65:1)
God has mercy upon us when we believe, will, desire, strive, labor, pray, watch, study, seek, ask, or knock, apart from his regenerative grace.	To desire and seek God prior to the new birth is an impossible supposition. (Rom 3:11; 1 Cor 2:14) It is the infusion and quickening of the Holy Spirit within us that we even have the faith or the strength to will, desire, strive, labor, pray, watch, study, seek, ask, or knock and believe in the finished work of Christ.
Commands to repent and believe the gospel imply the ability of the sinner to do so.	The Command toward sinners to repent and believe does not imply ability. Divine intent of the Law, according to Scripture, is to reveal our moral impotence apart from grace (Rom 3:20, 5:20, Gal 3:19,24). The Law was not designed to confer any power but to strip us of our own.
God helps those who help themselves.	God only helps those who cannot help themselves. (John 9:41)

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Unregenerate man contributes his little bit.	Nothing in my hands I bring, simply to Thy Cross I cling.
Repentance is considered a work of man.	Repentance is a gift of God. (2 Tim 2:25)
One of the greatest gifts God gives humans is to never interfere with their free will.	The greatest judgment which God can inflict upon a man is to leave him in the hands of his own free-will. If salvation were left in the hands of the unregenerate sinners, we would indeed despair of all hope that anyone would be saved. It is an act of mercy, therefore, that God awakens the dead in sin to life since those without the Spirit cannot understand the things of God at all. (1 Cor 2:14)
With Man's will salvation is possible.	With man's will salvation (repentance and faith) is impossible, but with God all things are possible. (Matt 19:26; Rom 9:16; John 6:64,65) "Flesh gives birth to flesh, but the Spirit gives birth to spirit." John 3:6

Note: God acts unilaterally, taking the sole initiative in a free act of sovereign grace toward the sinner—grace that is altogether prior to, and effectually produces, justifying faith. The response of faith from the sinner is penultimate as it stands next to the ultimate sovereign grace of God in monergism. As the first act of a newborn baby is to breathe, so the act of faith is the first act of the regenerated sinner, in his/her new birth in Christ.

Synergism (and Monergism)
http://mb-soft.com/believe/txc/synergis.htm

Phillip Cary on Monergism and Synergism https://alastairadversaria.com/2006/11/02/phillip-cary-on-monergism-and-synergism/http://romereturn.blogspot.com/2009/11/more-from-carys-essay.html

http://romereturn.blogspot.com/2009/11/augustine-and-varieties-of-monergism.html

http://phillipcary.blogspot.com/2011/01/this-blog-is-for-people-with.html

Monergism and synergism: some ecumenical suggestions http://www.faith-theology.com/2006/11/monergism-and-synergism-some.html

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Five Important Biblical Doctrines Related to Predestination in Salvation

Five Important Biblical Doctrines Related to Predestination in Salvation
Semi-Pelagian		Augustinian
Synergistic Salvation is accomplished as man and God cooperate. Divine Grace and the human will work together for salvation to happen.		Monergistic Salvation is wholly the work of the Holy Spirit in regeneration. Mankind possesses no inclination toward the Gospel in his natural state and needs Divine Grace to be enabled to believe.
Man is naturally able to understand and believe the Gospel apart from Divine enablement.	Natural Ability	Natural Inability	Man is naturally unable to understand and believe the Gospel apart from Divine enablement.
The condition for salvation is faith which man exercises of his own ability. God chooses those who choose Him.	Prescient Election	Sovereign Election	The condition for salvation is the Sovereign electing will of God alone.
Christ's redeeming work made it possible for everyone to be saved but did not actually secure the salvation of anyone.	Universal Redemption	Particular Redemption	Christ did in fact secure the salvation of His Church individually and definitely.
Man's will is free and he can successfully resist the Spirit's call.	Human Resistance	Effectual Calling	The calling of God to the elect does effect salvation infallibly.
Because faith is the necessary condition for Salvation, it can be lost when man discontinues his faith.	Falling from Grace	Eternal Security	The nature of saving faith is eternal and cannot be reversed.

http://heavenslight.org/wp-content/uploads/2013/12/fiveimportantdoctrines.jpg

See also: Predestination

See also: Reformed Theology vs Lutheranism vs Calvinism vs Weslyanism

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

A Conversation About Calvinism and Arminianism

https://restorethegospel.wordpress.com/2009/11/19/a-conversation-about-calvinism-and-arminianism/

https://restorethegospel.files.wordpress.com/2009/11/calvin-armin-chart2.jpg

See also: Reformed Theology vs Lutheranism vs Calvinism vs Weslyanism

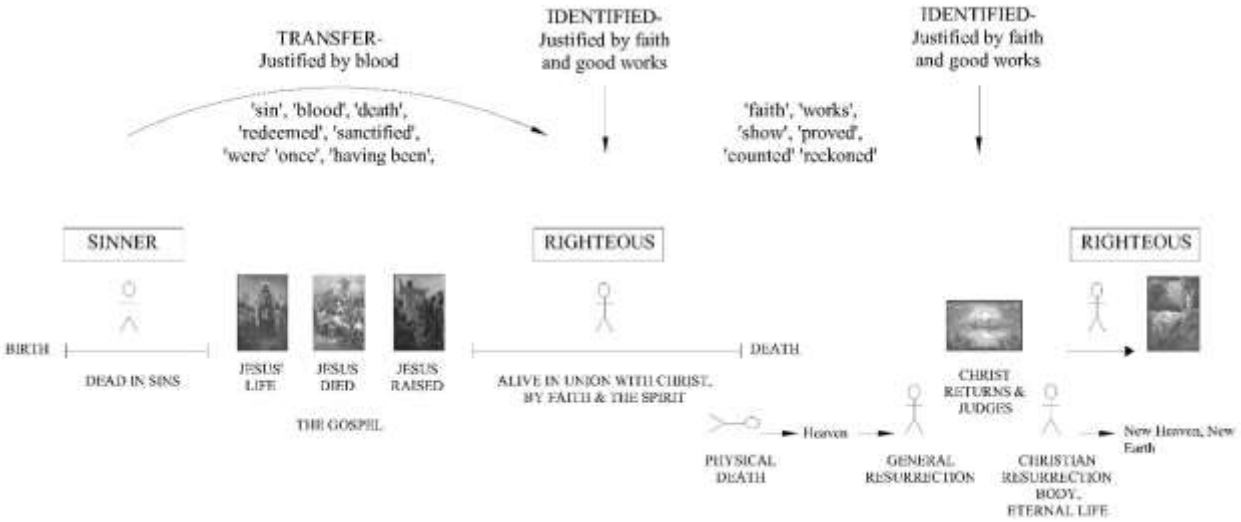
 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Role of Works in the Final Judgement

https://coggle.it/diagram/V5F5eENht0Q0YxVz/2195df738dffe19270cff4ce41f5908aef959a3b0470413d77407b9519c0212a

Interrelation of theological concepts:



As referenced in:
https://thescripturesays.org/2016/08/07/book-review-wilkin-schreiner-dunn-barber-four-views-on-the-role-of-works-at-the-final-judgment/

Book Review – Wilkin, Schreiner, Dunn, Barber, Four Views on the Role of Works at the Final Judgment

https://thescripturesays.org/2016/08/07/book-review-wilkin-schreiner-dunn-barber-four-views-on-the-role-of-works-at-the-final-judgment/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

http://69.195.124.130/~thescrk2/wp-content/uploads/2016/06/000-justified-mindset.jpg

Regeneration: When Does New Life Begin?

https://soteriology101.wordpress.com/2017/08/10/regeneration-when-does-new-life-begin/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Popular Heresies about Jesus and Doctrine during the Early Church Period that Still Surface in Various Forms Today

See also*: Heresies and Systems Compared

What is the definition of heresy?
http://www.gotquestions.org/heresy-definition.html

List of Christian Heresies
https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/List_of_Christian_heresies

Major Christian Heresies
http://pages.ucsd.edu/~dkjordan/xy/xydocs/XnHeresies.html

A Short Guide to Ancient Heresies http://www.ignatiusinsight.com/features2005/kwhthd_ancntheresies_july05.asp

Heresies: Then and Now
http://www.watchman.org/articles/other-religious-topics/heresies_then-and-now/

Which Early Christian Heresy are You? (Online Quiz)
https://uquiz.com/jyoHiC

Quiz: Can you name the Christian Heresies of the Church?
http://www.sporcle.com/games/Hbizzle/Christianheresies

Quiz - Christian Heresies
http://www.funtrivia.com/trivia-quiz/Religion/Christian-Heresies-148799.html

Early Church Heresies – The Second Century
http://www.churchhistory101.com/early-church-heresies.php

List of Heresies the Roman Church Rejected http://catholicbridge.com/catholic/list_of_heresies.php

Christological Heresies
http://www.fromdeathtolife.org/chistory/heresies.html

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Heresy in the Early Church: Christian History Timeline
http://www.ctlibrary.com/ch/1996/issue51/5136.html

Medieval History – The Rise of Popular Heresies
http://www.vlib.us/medieval/lectures/heresies.html

Heretics, Heresies and the Church – Lectures in Ancient and Medieval European History http://www.historyguide.org/ancient/lecture27b.html

Heresy in Earliest Christianity
http://www.bibleinterp.com/articles/2015/07/roy398027.shtml

Early Christian Heresies
http://webspace.ship.edu/cgboer/heresies.html

Excerpt:

A heresy is a belief that deviates from some standard, official belief. When religious authorities decide that a belief is heretical, they usually take active efforts to eradicate the belief, usually including the removal of the offending believers (by excommunication or worse). Of course, one man's orthodoxy is another man's heresy!

Most Christian heresies centered around the twin issues of the nature of the trinity and, more specifically, the nature of Jesus Christ. The official stand on these issues (according to all the Catholic, Orthodox, and Protestant churches) are as follows: God is a trinity, three persons but one essence; Jesus Christ was one person, simultaneously human and divine. That these two statements are not particularly rational was considered irrelevant. The trinity was seen as mysterious and a matter of faith, not reason.

Question: Did the Christians burn/destroy all the classical literature?
http://christianthinktank.com/qburnbx.html

Heresies: Then and Now
http://www.watchman.org/articles/other-religious-topics/heresies_then-and-now/

Excerpt:

Heresy is not new to the Church. The book of Colossians is Paul's response to the syncretistic heresies present in the 1st century church in Colossae. Colossians 1:15-20, known as the “Christ Hymn”, is one of the best responses to the heresies that attack the deity and work of Christ.

Christians are commanded by God to earnestly contend for the faith which was once delivered unto the saints (Jude 3). One of the most effective ways to contend for the faith is to know the various ways in which the faith is attacked, and to know the biblical response to these attacks.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

CARM: Heresies
https://carm.org/heresies

CARM: What is a Heresy?
https://carm.org/what-is-heresy

Major Christian Heresies
http://pages.ucsd.edu/~dkjordan/xy/xydocs/XnHeresies.html

Not My Jesus: A Survey of Christological Heresies
https://intelligentchristianfaith.com/2016/05/27/not-my-jesus-a-survey-of-christological-heresies/

Excerpt:

Jesus of Nazareth is the most disputed character in all of history.

Most of the world's religions incorporate him into their teaching, whether as a morally perfect prophet (Islam), a divine manifestation (Baha'i), or a reincarnated god (Hiduism). Buddhists believe he is a grace-giving demigod or even a Buddha. Christian cults like Jehovah's Witnesses and the Mormon Church readily incorporate Jesus as a partial divine, more than man but less than the dull deity of Father God. Almost all of Judaism rejects Jesus as a false prophet, a mere mortal, and a failed messiah. Meanwhile Atheists and skeptics tend to see Jesus as a liar or a lunatic. Mythicists debate his very existence with skeptical weapons set on 11. Clearly, Jesus of Nazareth is a contentious character, and so we should not be surprised that Christian history has held many theological battles in the theatre of Christology. The church has fought hard to answer, "Who is Jesus?" If He is, indeed, "the way the truth and the life" and "salvation is found in no other name" then we should make sure we aren't dealing with a distorted pseudo-Jesus (John 14:6; Acts 4:12). Theological integrity is a matter of ultimate importance here. Heresies about Jesus (a.k.a., christological heresies) make for an important study because Jesus just might be the most important person there is.

Correcting False Views of Christ (Review by Dr. William Lane Craig) https://www.reasonablefaith.org/media/reasonable-faith-podcast/correcting-false-views-of-christ/

Cults, Heresies, and Heterodoxies
http://www.faithfacts.org/world-religions-and-theology/cults-and-heresies

Christianism.com
http://www.christianism.com/
This site contains scholarship, blasphemy, heresy, freethought, rationalism, atheism, history, psychology, sociology, theology, anthropology, etc.

See also*: Heresies and Systems Compared

Heresies continued on next page…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Historic Heresies Related to God the Father

Historic Heresies Related to God the Father

www.ColdCaseChristianity.com

Marcionism (2nd Century)
Marcionites believed the God of the Old Testament was a God of Wrath and judgment who could not be reconciled with the God of mercy described in the New Testament. They rejected all the Gospels but the Gospel of Luke.

Leader(s) in the Heresy:
Marcion of Sinope at Rome (110 – 160AD)
Corrector(s) of the Heresy:
Tertullian wrote a five-book treatise against the heresy called, "Adversus Marcionem"

Monarchianism (2nd and 3rd Century)
Monarchianism taught either (1) the Father was God and the Jesus was only a man (Dynamic), or (2) the Father, the Son, and the Spirit were different "modes" of the same God (Modal).

Leader(s) in the Heresy:
Theodotians (190 AD) and Paul of Samosata (260AD) taught Dynamic Monarchianism, and Praxeas (200AD) taught Modal Monarchianism
Corrector(s) of the Heresy:
Tertullian wrote against this heresy in his tract, "Adversus Praxean" (213AD)

Sabellianism (3rd Century)
This heresy, a form of modalistic Monarchianism, taught the Father, Son and Holy Spirit were different modes of one God (in relationship to man), rather than three distinct persons (in objective reality). Jesus Christ and God the Father were two aspects or offices of one person.

Leader(s) in the Heresy:
Sabellius, a Roman priest and theologian (215AD?)
Corrector(s) of the Heresy:
Tertullian and Demetrius (Patriarch of Alexandria) wrote against the heresy

Manichaeism (3rd Century)
This heresy merged a number of world religious systems. Much like Gnosticism, it claimed the "gnosis" (hidden, esoteric knowledge) could be discovered intellectually or when revealed by messengers like Buddha, Jesus and Mani (the founder of the heresy). Jesus was not God in this system, but just another source of gnosis.

Leader(s) in the Heresy:
Mani, of Babylon (210 – 276AD)
Corrector(s) of the Heresy:
Roman Emperor Theodosius I declared it to be heretical and Augustine of Hippo (who was once himself a Manichaean), wrote against it.

Socinianism (16th and 17th Century)
This heresy denied the Triune nature of God. It claimed God was one and the Holy Spirit was simply God's power. It denied the pre-existence of Jesus, His incarnation and Deity (it taught Jesus was just a man who was later deified as a "lower" god). Socinites did not believe Jesus saved us on the cross, but rather provided us an example of self-sacrifice.

Leader(s) in the Heresy:
Laelius Socinus (died 1562AD) and Faustus Socinus (died 1604AD)
Corrector(s) of the Heresy:
A form of Psilanthropism (a heresy advocating Jesus was merely a man), heresies similar to Socinianism were condemned in the First Council of Nicaea in 325AD

COLD-CASE CHRISTIANITY:
A Homicide Detective Investigates the Claims of the Gospels

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Docetism

Wikipedia: Docetism

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Docetism

In Christian terminology, docetism (from the Greek δοκεῖν/δόκησις dokeîn (to seem) dókēsis (apparition, phantom), is the doctrine that the phenomenon of Christ, his historical and bodily existence, and above all the human form of Jesus, was mere semblance without any true reality. Broadly it is taken as the belief that Jesus only seemed to be human, and that his human form was an illusion. The word Δοκηταί Dokētaí (illusionists) referring to early groups who denied Jesus' humanity, first occurred in a letter by Bishop Serapion of Antioch (197–203), who discovered the doctrine in the Gospel of Peter, during a pastoral visit to a Christian community using it in Rhosus, and later condemned it as a forgery. It appears to have arisen over theological contentions concerning the meaning, figurative or literal, of a sentence from the Gospel of John: "the Word was made Flesh".

Docetism was unequivocally rejected at the First Council of Nicaea in 325 and is regarded as heretical by the Catholic Church, Orthodox Church, and Coptic Church.

(Not to be confused with Donatism.)

Docetism is broadly defined as any teaching that claims that Jesus' body was either absent or illusory.[11] The term 'docetic' is rather nebulous. For Robert Price "docetism", together with "encratism", "Gnosticism" and "adoptionism", has been employed "far beyond what historically descriptive usage would allow".[14] Two varieties were widely known. In one version, as in Marcionism, Christ was so divine that he could not have been human, since God lacked a material body, which therefore could not physically suffer. Jesus only appeared to be a flesh-and-blood man; his body was a phantasm. Other groups who were accused of docetism held that Jesus was a man in the flesh, but Christ was a separate entity who entered Jesus's body in the form of a dove at his baptism, empowered him to perform miracles, and abandoned him upon his death on the cross.

Docetism's origin within Christianity is obscure. Ernst Käsemann controversially defined the Christology of St John's Gospel as "naïve docetism" in 1968. The ensuing debate reached an impasse as awareness grew that the very term "docetism", like "gnosticism", was difficult to define within the religio-historical framework of the debate. It has occasionally been argued that its origins were in heterodox Judaism or Oriental and Grecian philosophies. The alleged connection with Jewish Christianity would have reflected Jewish Christian concerns with the inviolability of (Jewish) monotheism.[19][20] Docetic opinions seem to have circulated from very early times, 1 John 4:2 appearing explicitly to reject them.[21] Some 1st century Christian groups developed docetic interpretations partly as a way to make Christian teachings more acceptable to pagan ways of thinking about divinity.

In his critique of the theology of Clement of Alexandria, Photius in his Myriobiblon held that Clement's views reflected a quasi-docetic view of the nature of Christ, writing that "[Clement] hallucinates that the Word was not incarnate but only seems to be." (ὀνειροπολεῖ καὶ μὴ σαρκωθῆναι τὸν λόγον ἀλλὰ δόξαι.) In Clement's time, some disputes contended over whether Christ assumed the "psychic" flesh of mankind as heirs to Adam, or the "spiritual" flesh of the resurrection. Docetism largely died out during the first millennium AD.

The opponents against whom Ignatius of Antioch inveighs are often taken to be Monophysite docetists. In his letter to the Smyrnaeans, 7:1, written around 110 AD, he writes:

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

They abstain from the Eucharist and from prayer, because they confess not the Eucharist to be the flesh of our Saviour Jesus Christ, which suffered for our sins, and which the Father, of His goodness, raised up again. They who deny the gift of God are perishing in their disputes.

While these characteristics fit a Monophysite framework, a slight majority of scholars consider that Ignatius was waging a polemic on two distinct fronts, one Jewish, the other docetic; a minority holds that he was concerned with a group that commingled Judaism and docetism. Others, however, doubt that there was actual docetism threatening the churches, arguing that he was merely criticizing Christians who lived Jewishly or that his critical remarks were directed at an Ebionite or Cerinthian possessionist Christology, according to which Christ was a heavenly spirit that temporarily possessed Jesus.

Theopedia: Docetism

http://www.theopedia.com/docetism

Docetism is the belief that Jesus Christ did not have a physical body; rather, that his body was an illusion, as was his crucifixion.

This belief is most commonly attributed to the Gnostics, who believed that matter was evil, and hence that God would not take on a material body. This sort of statement, however, is rooted in the idea that a divine spark is imprisoned within the material body and that the material body is in itself an obstacle that prevents man from seeing his divine origin. Humanity is in essence asleep. It could be further explained as this — the human body is temporary, and the spirit is eternal—therefore, to say that the body of Jesus was an illusion and that his crucifixion was as well, could be compared to the same way a Buddhist speaks about illusion: illusion is everything that is temporary, not everything that is not real. Even so, saying that the human body is temporary has a tendency to undercut the importance of the belief in resurrection of the dead and the goodness of created matter, and is in opposition to the orthodox view.

Early Christian History: Docetism

http://www.earlychristianhistory.info/docet.html

Excerpt:

Heresies: Docetism

Docetism is not really a single heretical movement. It is, rather, a doctrinal point intrinsic to a number of early Christian heresies and even some contemporary Christian (or Christ-related) denominations. I've found it useful, therefore, to explain it in one location, rather than describing it several times over.

The Meaning of Docetism

Docetism is easily explained: It is a belief that Jesus Christ did not actually die, and therefore was never resurrected bodily. A number of Christian theologies have arrived at this conclusion, in different ways, so Docetism comes in a number of forms.

Gnostic Docetism

As I explained in my essay on Gnosticism, one of the tenets of Gnosticism is that Christ had not actually had a physical existence. What the apostles had interacted with, and what had been killed by the Romans, had actually been an illusion. This was necessitated by Gnostic dualism, which posited that matter, or the physical, was evil, and only light was good. Since they believed Christ to have been "good," then logically, the Gnostics were forced to assert that he had not actually had a physical form.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Samosatene/Arian Docetism

Some of the adherents of the Samosatene Doctrine (championed by Arius) were also Docetists, but for different reasons. They believed that Jesus Christ was not actually God, but rather, a man, in whom lived a divine spirit which inspired and guided Him. When Christ died, that spirit fled from Him, since nothing divine can die. (Hence, Jesus's famous dying words, Eli, Eli, lama sabacthani?) Thus, according to this model, it was only Jesus-the-man who actually died.

Not all Arians were Docetists. In fact, the majority tried to avoid taking such a stance. After all, simply asserting that Christ was less than fully divine got them in enough trouble, as it was! Many of the more intellectual Arianists, however, could not help but come to this conclusion, based on the logic of the basic Samosatene premise, as well as scriptural support (cited).

Other Appearances of Docetism

Docetism has cropped up in a number of Christian belief systems, and even has some adherents still. The main reason that it keeps coming up, is that, in one form or another, it rationally answers the question, How could God be human? How could God have died? The Docetist answer, of course — whatever the reasoning might be — is that God never was human and never actually died.

More orthodox Christians consider Docetism to be among the most severe threats to their beliefs, since it denies the resurrection, which they consider to be the most important facet of Christianity. Without it, one might as well not believe in Christ at all!

Thus, there will always be some Docetist theology popping up here or there, and there'll always be some orthodox "enforcers" trying to suppress or debunk it.

What is Docetism and why did Christianity fear it?

http://www.sullivan-county.com/id2/gnostic_files/docetism.htm

In Christianity, Docetism (from the Greek [dokeo], "to seem") is the belief that Jesus' physical body was an illusion, as was his crucifixion; that is, Jesus only seemed to have a physical body and to physically die, but in reality he was incorporeal, a pure spirit, and hence could not physically die. This belief has historically been regarded as heretical by most Christian theologians.

This belief is most commonly attributed to the Gnostics, who believed that matter was evil, and hence that God would not take on a material body. This statement is rooted in the idea that a divine spark is imprisoned within the material body, and that the material body is in itself an obstacle, deliberately created by an evil lesser god (the demiurge) to prevent man from seeing his divine origin. Humanity is, in essence, asleep.

Docetism could be further explained as the view that, because the human body is temporary and the spirit is eternal, the body of Jesus therefore must have been an illusion and his crucifixion as well. It could be compared to how a Buddhist speaks about illusion: illusion is everything that is temporary, not everything that is not real. Even so, saying that the human body is temporary has a tendency to undercut the importance of the belief in resurrection of the dead and the goodness of created matter, and is in opposition to this orthodox view.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Docetism was rejected by the ecumenical councils and mainstream Christianity, and largely died out during the first millennium A.D. Catharism, and other surviving gnostic movements, incorporated docetism into their beliefs, but the movement was destroyed by the Albigensian Crusade, though its teachings still exist today. See Catherism

Islam also teaches that Jesus's crucifixion was an illusion. The Qur'an says, "They did not kill him and they did not crucify him, but it was made to seem so to them..."(4:157) Ref. Wikipedia

N.T. Wright - Beyond Evangelical | The Blog of Frank Viola (Interview)

http://frankviola.org/2012/01/23/ntwright/

http://www.patheos.com/blogs/frankviola/ntwright/

Excerpt:

Frank: What are the three main objections (or misrepresentations) of your work among evangelical Christians, and what are your responses to those objections or misrepresentations?

N.T. Wright: People have sometimes said, ridiculously, that I don't believe in the second coming, because I insist that in the New Testament a reference to 'the son of man coming on the clouds' is to Jesus' vindication (in resurrection, ascension, and not least in the destruction of the Jerusalem that had opposed and rejected him) rather than to his return. The second coming is taught all over the place, and I have expounded it, I hope biblically, in Surprised by Hope.

Second, people have sometimes said that I downplay the divinity of Jesus (someone once accused me even of denying the virginal conception). This is a serious misunderstanding. I have done my best, rather, to oppose modern forms of Docetism (the view that Jesus wasn't really human, but only 'seemed' to be). Some modern Docetists, not surprisingly, see this as a denial of Jesus' divinity. I hope the present book, and its sequel How God Became King, will put the record straight on this one.

Third, many have been puzzled at my embrace of (one form of) what has been called the 'New Perspective' on Paul. Actually, one of the key things about the NP, at its best, is that it take seriously the larger vision of God's purposes for his people and for the whole creation that we find precisely in the four gospels. Often evangelicals have offered a would-be 'Pauline' gospel which not only doesn't do justice to Paul but leaves no room for the four gospels. That has to be wrong, and I've tried to show how.

e.g., N. T. Wright on the Divinity of Jesus
http://jollyblogger.typepad.com/jollyblogger/2006/07/n_t_wright_on_t_1.html

Docetism

http://sussle.org/t/Docetism

Excerpt:

> In Christian terminology, docetism (from the Greek δοκεῖν/δόκησις dokeîn (to seem) /dókēsis (apparition, phantom), according to Norbert Brox, is defined narrowly as "the doctrine according to which the phenomenon of Christ, his historical and bodily existence, and thus above all the human form of Jesus, was altogether mere semblance without any true reality." Broadly it is taken as the belief that Jesus only seemed to be human, and that his human form was an illusion. The word Δοκηταί Dokētaí (illusionists) referring to early groups who denied Jesus' humanity, first occurred in a letter by Bishop Serapion of Antioch (197–203), who discovered the doctrine in the Gospel of Peter, during a pastoral visit to a Christian community using it in Rhosus, and later condemned it as a forgery. It appears to have arisen over theological contentions concerning the meaning, figurative or literal, of a sentence from the Gospel of John: "the Word was made Flesh".

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Docetism was unequivocally rejected at the First Council of Nicaea in 325 and is regarded as heretical by the Catholic Church, Orthodox Church, and Coptic Church.

Definitions

Docetism is broadly defined as any teaching that claims that Jesus' body was either absent or illusory. The term ‘docetic’ should be used with caution, since its use is rather nebulous. For Robert Price "docetism", together with "encratism", "Gnosticism" and "adoptionism", has been employed "far beyond what historically descriptive usage would allow". Two varieties were widely known. In one version, as in Marcionism, Christ was so divine he could not have been human, since God lacked a material body, which therefore could not physically suffer. Jesus only appeared to be a flesh-and-blood man; his body was a phantasm. Other groups who were accused of docetism held that Jesus was a man in the flesh, but Christ was a separate entity who entered Jesus's body in the form of a dove at his baptism, empowered him to perform miracles, and abandoned him upon his death on the cross.

Christology and theological implications

Docetism's origin within Christianity is obscure. Ernst Käsemann controversially defined the Christology of St John’s Gospel as "naïve docetism" in 1968. The ensuing debate reached an impasse as awareness grew that the very term "docetism", like "gnosticism", was difficult to define within the religio-historical framework of the debate. It has occasionally been argued that its origins were in heterodox Judaism or Oriental and Grecian philosophies. The alleged connection with Jewish Christianity would have reflected Jewish Christian concerns with the inviolability of (Jewish) monotheism. Docetic opinions seem to have circulated from very early times, 1 John 4:2 appearing explicitly to reject them. Some 1st century Christian groups developed docetic interpretations partly as a way to make Christian teachings more acceptable to pagan ways of thinking about divinity.

In his critique of the theology of Clement of Alexandria, Photius in his Myriobiblon held that Clement's views reflected a quasi-docetic view of the nature of Christ, writing that "[Clement] hallucinates that the Word was not incarnate but only seems to be." (ὀνειροπολεῖ καὶ μὴ σαρκωθῆναι τὸν λόγον ἀλλὰ δόξαι.) In Clement’s time, some disputes contended over whether Christ assumed the "psychic" flesh of mankind as heirs to Adam, or the "spiritual" flesh of the resurrection. Docetism largely died out during the first millennium AD.

The opponents against whom Ignatius of Antioch inveighs are often taken to be Monophysite docetists. In his letter to the Smyrnaeans, 7:1, written around 110 AD, he writes:

> They abstain from the Eucharist and from prayer, because they confess not the Eucharist to be the flesh of our Saviour Jesus Christ, which suffered for our sins, and which the Father, of His goodness, raised up again. They who deny the gift of God are perishing in their disputes.

While these characteristics fit a Monophysite framework, a slight majority of scholars consider that Ignatius was waging a polemic on two distinct fronts, one Jewish, the other docetic, while a distinct minority holds that he was concerned with a group that commingled Judaism and docetism. Other possibilities are that he was merely opposed to Christians who lived Jewishly, or denied that docetism threatened the church; or that his critical remarks were directed at an Ebionite or Cerinthian possessionist Christology, in which God descended and took possession of Jesus' body.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Islam and docetism

The Qur'an has a docetic Christology, viewing Jesus as a divine illuminator rather than the redeemer (as he is viewed in Christianity). However, the Islamic docetism is not focused on the general life and person of Jesus or the Christ. In Islam "the Christ" (al-masīḥ) is not generally viewed as distinct from humanity nor a special spirit being as in docetism or some gnosticisms. Islamic docetism focuses on a denial of the crucifixion of Jesus. Sura 4:157–158 reads:

And because of their saying: We slew the Messiah, Jesus son of Mary, Allah's messenger — they slew him not nor crucified him, but it appeared so unto them; and lo! those who disagree concerning it are in doubt thereof; they have no knowledge thereof save pursuit of a conjecture; they slew him not for certain. But Allah took him up unto Himself. Allah was ever Mighty, Wise.

Docetism and Christ myth theory

Since Arthur Drews published his The Christ Myth (Die Christusmythe) in 1909, occasional connections have been drawn between the modern idea that Christ was a myth and docetist theories. Shailer Mathews called Drews' theory a "modern docetism". Frederick Cornwallis Conybeare thought any connection to be based on a misunderstanding of docetism. The idea recurred in Classicist Michael Grant's 1977 review of the evidence for Jesus, who compared modern scepticism about an historical Jesus to the ancient docetic idea that Jesus only seemed to come into the world "in the flesh". Modern theories did away with "seeming".

Texts believed to include docetism

Non-canonical Christian texts

• Gospel of Phillip

• Second Treatise of the Great Seth

• Gnostic Apocalypse of Peter

• Gospel of Judas

• In the Contra epistulam fundamenti (Against the Fundamental Epistle), Augustine of Hippo makes reference to the Manichaeans believing that Jesus was Docetic.

• Gospel of Peter

• Acts of John

• Gospel of Basilides

Docetae (Catholic Encyclopedia – New Advent) (good early church history overview)

http://www.newadvent.org/cathen/05070c.htm

Excerpts:

A heretical sect dating back to Apostolic times.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

…Docetism is not properly a Christian heresy at all, as it did not arise in the Church from the misunderstanding of a dogma by the faithful, but rather came from without. Gnostics starting from the principle of antagonism between matter and spirit, and making all salvation consist in becoming free from the bondage of matter and returning as pure spirit to the Supreme Spirit, could not possibly accept the sentence, "the Word was made flesh", in a literal sense…

… This heresy, which destroyed the very meaning and purpose of the Incarnation, was combated even by the Apostles. Possibly St. Paul's statement that in Christ dwelt the fullness of the Godhead corporaliter (Colossians 1:19, 2:9) has some reference to Docetic errors. Beyond doubt St. John (1 John 1:1-3, 4:1-3; 2 John 7) refers to this heresy; so at least it seemed to Dionysius of Alexandria (Eusebius, Church History VII.25) and Tertullian (De carne Christi, xxiv). In sub-Apostolic times this sect was vigorously combated by St. Ignatius and Polycarp…

What are Docetism, Apollinarianism, Ebionism, and Eutychianism http://www.gotquestions.org/Docetism-Apollinarianism-Ebionism-Eutychianism.html

Excerpt:

Docetism, Apollinarianism, Ebionism, and Eutychianism (also known as Monophysitism) are all false views of the relationship between Jesus' deity and humanity. Each of these views was rejected by the early church in the various early church councils. It is impossible for us to fathom how Jesus Christ can be both 100 percent God and 100 percent man at the same time. That is the mystery of the hypostatic union. Each of these false views fails in that it overemphasizes or underemphasizes Jesus' deity or humanity.

…Docetism is the view that Jesus was God, but not human. Docetists essentially taught that Jesus only appeared to be human, but He in fact was not. Docetism contradicts many Scriptures, with John 1:14 and 1 John 4:1-3 being the most clear refutations of Docetism. Apollinarianism is the view that Jesus was God, but not fully human. Apollinarians taught that Jesus' human spirit was replaced by a divine spirit, that Jesus had a human body and soul, but not a human spirit.

…Ebionism is the view that Jesus was fully human, but not divine. Ebionites denied the deity of Christ. Ebionism viewed Jesus as a normal human being who was simply empowered by God

…Yet another early church heresy in relation to Christ's nature is Nestorianism. Nestorianism held that Jesus had two natures—human and divine—and that the two natures were entirely separate. Jesus was God, and Jesus was man, but essentially in two separate persons.

Human, Body and Soul. Are You a Docetist? (Greg Johnson)

http://gregscouch.homestead.com/files/docetism.htm

"I'm convinced that many Christians today are practical Docetists, and they don't ... Chew over these facts and find out if the humanity of Christ makes you nervous…"

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Marcionism

Marcionites (Catholic Encyclopedia – New Advent)

http://www.newadvent.org/cathen/09645c.htm

Excerpt:

> Heretical sect founded in A.D. 144 at Rome by Marcion and continuing in the West for 300 years, but in the East some centuries longer, especially outside the Byzantine Empire. They rejected the writings of the Old Testament and taught that Christ was not the Son of the God of the Jews, but the Son of the good God, who was different from the God of the Ancient Covenant. They anticipated the more consistent dualism of Manichaeism and were finally absorbed by it. As they arose in the very infancy of Christianity and adopted from the beginning a strong ecclesiastical organization, parallel to that of the Catholic Church, they were perhaps the most dangerous foe Christianity has ever known. The subject will be treated under the following heads:
>
> I. Life of Marcion;
> II. Doctrine and Discipline;
> III. History;
> IV. Mutilation of the New Testament;
> V. Anti-Marcionite Writers.

What is Marcionism?

http://www.gotquestions.org/marcionism.html

The only groups of people from the Early Church that took the Moral Laws away from the New Covenant, were the Nicolaitans, and later Macionism.

Marcionism

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Marcionism

Modern-Day Marcionism

http://billmuehlenberg.com/2012/02/27/modern-day-marcionism/

Excerpt:

> If you are not up on your Marcionism, I encourage you to get with the program. More specifically, I encourage you to learn about Marcion and his teachings. And while you are at it, also look into Santayana. The latter is a Spanish philosopher of last century who once famously stated, “Those that fail to learn from history, are doomed to repeat it.”
>
> Thus if a Christian does not know his history – or particularly his church history – he will likely repeat the mistakes of Marcion. So who was he and what was his error? He was a second century bishop who was condemned for his heretical teachings, including his views on God and the Old Testament.

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

In brief, he regarded the God of the Old Testament as a vengeful, harsh, vindictive and judgmental God, who in fact was not the same as the God of the New Testament. On the other hand, he taught, the God of the NT was a loving, compassionate and gracious God.

He not only posited a radical disjunction between God as found in the two Testaments, but between the OT and the NT itself, and between Israel and the church. His utter rejection of Judaism and the OT was just part of his heresy. He was a major proponent of Paul – or as one historian put it, he had an "exaggerated Paulinism" – so much so that he chopped the NT canon down to just 11 books: ten epistles of Paul and part of Luke.

In his view the OT God was simply a demiurge, an inferior God, who created the world, and the evil in it. Such a God had to be rejected for the good God of the New, the Father of Jesus Christ. His teaching was denounced as heresy, and was opposed by many, most notably, Tertullian. His five-volume treatise Adversus Marcionem (Against Marcion), written about 208, is where we learn the most about Marcion and his teachings.

His teachings were not unlike some forms of Gnosticism, although he differed in some points from them. Because of his many serious theological errors, he was eventually disfellowshiped in 144. He was not the first heretic the early church had to contend with, nor was he the last.

Modern-Day Marcionism

http://www.firstthings.com/web-exclusives/2012/04/modern-day-marcionism

Excerpt:

> Bettany Hughes, an expert in ancient history, was quoted recently in London's Daily Telegraph as saying that Christianity "was originally a faith where the female of the species held sway. To oppose the ordination of women bishops in the Church of England is to deny the central role women played in the faith's founding." She added: "Who knows whether God is a girl, but mankind has turned to the female of the species for good ideas."
>
> It is not clear from the report whether Ms. Hughes was speaking as a Christian or as an expert in ancient history, but it doesn't really matter, for she is wrong on both counts. In fact, though, her remarks can be connected loosely with two very old Christian heresies, Marcionism and Montanism, which seem to have undergone something of a revival among trendy religion pundits.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The 10 Most Deadly Heresies Affecting American Churches in These Last Days

http://truthreallymatters.com/wordpress/?page_id=84

Excerpt:

> One of the distinguishing marks of a follower of Jesus Christ is a love for the truth. The believer's testimony should be (Psalm 119:128): "Therefore I esteem all thy precepts concerning all things to be right; and I hate every false way." The Lord Jesus called Himself "the truth" (John 14:6) and the apostle whom He loved most dearly proclaimed (3 John 4), "I have no greater joy than to hear that my children walk in truth."
>
> The new believer must be diligent to add to faith, virtue, and to virtue, knowledge (etc., 2 Peter 1:5-10) to insure that he doesn't fall from service. I believe it is far more profitable for a Christian to know a very few true things than to know much, with errors mixed in. The most deadly heresies afflicting American churches today are listed below, along with a very brief assessment of the damage done by each to the saving Gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ. Since each heresy properly warrants a book-length treatment to analyze and refute it, I have included a suggested reading list. I have restricted my recommended authors to those that tend to be sound in areas other than the topic in question. Other books on these subjects can be helpful, but some authors are guilty of heresies in other areas, and so I decline to recommend them.
>
> The purpose of this article is to very briefly summarize the key elements of these damnable heresies. The Christian that understands them in light of Biblical truth will both save himself and his family from great trouble, and will be equipped to help those that have fallen into the snare of the devil (1 Tim 4:16 and 2 Tim 2:23-26).
>
> How many of the heresies below do you embrace? Do you think that you are immune because you know that you are born again, you love the Lord, and work to serve Him? Consider that you know some "good, solid" Christians who have some peculiar errors. Is it just possible that you also have a blind spot? Satan is deceptive and has more experience that you or me. If you are a young believer (in your twenties, and raised up in a conservative church, for example), you likely have built your theology from pulpit and Sunday School teaching. You very likely don't know your Bible as well as you think. How many times have your read the Bible through carefully? Have you even memorized 1000 verses yet? (What – do you think that's unimportant?) It takes much work to construct your theological foundations directly from the word of God, while treating the teaching from your elders as the Bereans rightly treated the apostle Paul. Please consider these points with all humility…

Cults, Heresies, and Heterodoxies

http://www.faithfacts.org/world-religions-and-theology/cults-and-heresies

Galileo, Science and the Bible - Acta Philosophica

http://www.actaphilosophica.it/sites/default/files/pdf/carrol-19971.pdf [PDF]

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Historic Heresies Related to God the Father

www.ColdCaseChristianity.com

Marcionism (2nd Century)
Marcionites believed the God of the Old Testament was a God of Wrath and judgment who could not be reconciled with the God of mercy described in the New Testament. They rejected all the Gospels but the Gospel of Luke.

Leader(s) in the Heresy:
Marcion of Sinope at Rome (110 – 160AD)
Corrector(s) of the Heresy:
Tertullian wrote a five-book treatise against the heresy called, "Adversus Marcionem"

Monarchianism (2nd and 3rd Century)
Monarchianism taught either (1) the Father was God and the Jesus was only a man (Dynamic), or (2) the Father, the Son, and the Spirit were different "modes" of the same God (Modal).

Leader(s) in the Heresy:
Theodotians (190 AD) and Paul of Samosata (260AD) taught Dynamic Monarchianism, and Praxeas (200AD) taught Modal Monarchianism
Corrector(s) of the Heresy:
Tertullian wrote against this heresy in his tract, "Adversus Praxean" (213AD)

Sabellianism (3rd Century)
This heresy, a form of modalistic Monarchianism, taught the Father, Son and Holy Spirit were different modes of one God (in relationship to man), rather than three distinct persons (in objective reality). Jesus Christ and God the Father were two aspects or offices of one person.

Leader(s) in the Heresy:
Sabellius, a Roman priest and theologian (215AD?)
Corrector(s) of the Heresy:
Tertullian and Demetrius (Patriarch of Alexandria) wrote against the heresy

Manichaeism (3rd Century)
This heresy merged a number of world religious systems. Much like Gnosticism, it claimed the "gnosis" (hidden, esoteric knowledge) could be discovered intellectually or when revealed by messengers like Buddha, Jesus and Mani (the founder of the heresy). Jesus was not God in this system, but just another source of gnosis.

Leader(s) in the Heresy:
Mani, of Babylon (210 – 276AD)
Corrector(s) of the Heresy:
Roman Emperor Theodosius I declared it to be heretical and Augustine of Hippo (who was once himself a Manichaean), wrote against it.

Socinianism (16th and 17th Century)
This heresy denied the Triune nature of God. It claimed God was one and the Holy Spirit was simply God's power. It denied the pre-existence of Jesus, His incarnation and Deity (it taught Jesus was just a man who was later deified as a "lower" god). Socinites did not believe Jesus saved us on the cross, but rather provided us an example of self-sacrifice.

Leader(s) in the Heresy:
Laelius Socinus (died 1562AD) and Faustus Socinus (died 1604AD)
Corrector(s) of the Heresy:
A form of Psilanthropism (a heresy advocating Jesus was merely a man), heresies similar to Socinianism were condemned in the First Council of Nicaea in 325AD

COLD-CASE CHRISTIANITY:
A Homicide Detective Investigates the Claims of the Gospels

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Heresies and Systems Compared

A Survey of Heresies

http://www.solasisters.com/2012/07/survey-of-heresies.html

A SURVEY OF HERESIES

	Date	Heart of the Error	Chief Historical Proponents	Character	Modern Proponents
The Judaizers	1st century	Soteriological, adding works to grace as grounds of justification	A group of former Pharisees in the Jerusalem church	Legalistic, blending Old Testament Judaism with Christian ideas	Roman Catholics, 7th Day Aventists
The Gnostics	2nd century	Christological, denying the reality of the incarnation	Various early heretics	Mystical, blending paganism with Christian ideas	Most New Age religions, Mormonism
The Arians	4th century	Christological, denying the deity of Christ	Arius, several bishops	Unitarian, denying the full deity of Christ and the Trinity	Jehovah's Witnesses
The Pelagians	5th century	Soteriological, denying the supremacy and sufficiency of divine grace	Pelagius, Coelestius	Anthropocentric, denying human fallenness, elevating free will above divine sovereignty; making the sinner responsible for his/her own salvation	Charles Finney and his heirs
The Socinians	16th century	Soteriological/ Christological	Lelius and Faustus Sozzini	Rationalistic, absorbing the worst elements of all heresies	Unitarians, Theological liberals, Open Theists

http://www.thegracelifepulpit.com/Sermons.aspx?code=PJ-CDA04

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

HERESIES ABOUT JESUS 0 - 500 AD

© 2010 Mark Barry | visualunit.me | Please do not republish without permission, but feel free to copy for personal use.

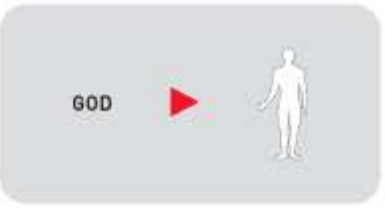
EBIONISM →

1st C. AD

Ebion?

JESUS = FULLY HUMAN, NOT DIVINE
Jesus was a normal human being, who was naturally born (i.e. not by virgin birth). He was not divine but was empowered by the Spirit of God.

There is only one God, who is distinct from his chosen Messiah.



DOCETISM →

1st-2nd C. AD

Unknown

JESUS = DIVINE, NOT HUMAN
Jesus only seemed to be human in his incarnation, suffering and death.

God cannot suffer or be corrupted by human flesh and therefore the divine Jesus could not be truly human.

ADOPTIONISM →

2nd C. AD

Theodotus of Byzantium?

JESUS = HUMAN, NOT ETERNALLY DIVINE
Jesus was born human, united with God's spirit in his baptism, and adopted into God's being in his resurrection.

There is only one pre-existent creator God. Therefore for Jesus to be God, he had to become divine.

MODALISM →

2nd C. AD

Unknown

JESUS = DIVINE MODE, NOT HUMAN PERSON
The Father, Son and Spirit are not three discrete persons, but are three modes or aspects of the one God.

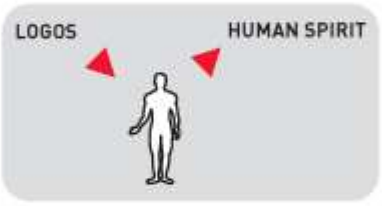
There is only one God. God can only be three persons in appearence, not in actuality.

timeframe teacher big idea argument

HERESIES ABOUT JESUS 0 - 500 AD

© 2010 Mark Barry | visualunit.me | Please do not republish without permission, but feel free to copy for personal use.

APOLLINARIANISM →



4th C. AD

Apollinaris the Younger

JESUS = DIVINE, BUT NOT FULLY HUMAN

Jesus' human spirit / soul was replaced by the divine 'logos' (the Word) in his incarnation.

Jesus could not sin and so could not have a human spirit, i.e. the source of human sin.

ARIANISM →

4th C. AD

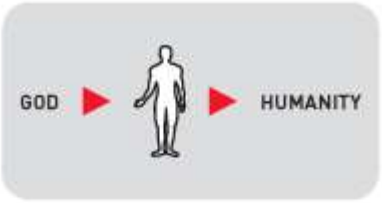
Arius

JESUS = HUMAN, NOT DIVINE

The 'Logos' (the Word) was 'the firstborn' of creation, taking on human flesh in the incarnation. 'There was a time when the Son was not.'

The divine and transcedent Creator cannot share his being with another. Therefore Jesus must have been created.

MONOPHYSITISM →



4-5th C. AD

Eutheches

JESUS = DIVINE, NOT HUMAN

Jesus has only one nature: divine. Jesus' human nature was virtually absorbed by his divinity in his incarnation, leaving only a 'cladding' of humanity.

Jesus is incorruptable and so could not be truly human.

NESTORIANISM →

5th C. AD

Nestorius

JESUS = DIVINE AND HUMAN (BUT SEPARATE)

Jesus' divine and human natures were completely separate in the incarnation. Mary was the 'Christ-bearer', not the 'God-bearer'.

The divine and human natures cannot be mixed.

timeframe teacher big idea argument

See also*: Nestorianism (Nestorius)

What is Arianism?

https://www.gotquestions.org/arianism.html

Excerpt:

Answer: Arianism is named for Arius, a teacher in the early 4th century A.D. One of the earliest and probably the most important item of debate among early Christians was the subject of Christ's deity. Was Jesus truly God in the flesh or was Jesus a created being? Was Jesus God or just like God? Arius held that Jesus was created by God as the first act of creation, that Jesus was the crowning glory of all creation. Arianism, then, is the view that Jesus was a created being with divine attributes, but was not divine in and of Himself.

Arianism misunderstands references to Jesus' being tired (John 4:6) and not knowing the date of His return (Matthew 24:36). Yes, it is difficult to understand how God could be tired and/or not know something, but relegating Jesus to a created being is not the answer. Jesus was fully God, but He was also fully human. Jesus did not become a human being until the incarnation. Therefore, Jesus' limitations as a human being have no impact on His divine nature or eternality.

A second major misinterpretation in Arianism is the meaning of "firstborn" (Romans 8:29; Colossians 1:15-20). Arians understand "firstborn" in these verses to mean that Jesus was "born" or "created" as the first act of creation. This is not the case. Jesus Himself proclaimed His self-existence and eternality (John 8:58; 10:30). John 1:1-2 tells us that Jesus was "in the beginning with God." In Bible times, the firstborn son of a family was held in great honor (Genesis 49:3; Exodus 11:5; 34:19; Numbers 3:40; Psalm 89:27; Jeremiah 31:9). It is in this sense that Jesus is God's firstborn. Jesus is the preeminent member of God's family. Jesus is the anointed one, the "Wonderful Counselor, Mighty God, Everlasting Father, Prince of Peace" (Isaiah 9:6).

After nearly a century of debate at various early church councils, the Christian church officially denounced Arianism as a false doctrine. Since that time, Arianism has never been accepted as a viable doctrine of the Christian faith. Arianism has not died, however. Arianism has continued throughout the centuries in varying forms. The Jehovah's Witnesses and Mormons of today hold a very Arian-like position on Christ's nature. Just as the early church did, we must denounce any and all attacks on the deity of our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Manichaeism

"What is Manichaeism?"

https://www.gotquestions.org/Manichaeism.html

Excerpt:

Answer: Manichaeism (also known as Manichaeanism and Manicheanism) is an ancient religion that arose several centuries after Christ. The faith was a purposeful blend of Zoroastrianism and Christianity, borrowing concepts and terminology from both. Manicheans believed that the universe was dominated by two competing forces of good and evil, represented by light and darkness, respectively. While the religion of Manichaeism did not survive very long, historically speaking, its reputation has endured. The term Manichean is used today mostly to criticize a viewpoint for being too black-and-white, or overly simplified.

Manichaeism arose in Persia in the middle of the 3rd century. Like other early heresies, such as Gnosticism, it taught that the physical world was inherently evil and that salvation is obtained primarily through knowledge. The founder of Manichaeism is known only as Mani, which is actually a title meaning something like “King of Light” or “Shining One.” His teachings particularly criticized Christianity. Mani took specific issue with the Bible for suggesting that some truths in the universe might not be easily understood by human beings.

This criticism is somewhat ironic, since Manichaeism is one of the most complex and convoluted faiths in history. The faith is an intricate story of the battle between two competing forces, one of goodness and light, the other of evil and darkness. This includes at least three distinct “creations,” all based on the details of these cosmic battles. Mani’s intent was to create a universal religion, combining many of the basic ideas of Zoroastrianism with the terminology of Christianity. To that end, Mani often claimed to be the reincarnation of religious figures such as Jesus or Buddha.

Manichaeism has far more in common with faiths such as Zoroastrianism than with Christian theology. Other than certain words and phrases, there is little connection between the Bible and the teachings of Mani. As a result, Manichaeism was much more successful in the East. As paganism faded out, it was replaced mostly by Christianity in the West. Manichaeism, briefly, was the primary competitor to the Christian gospel. This was a relatively short era, however, and, within a few centuries, Manichaeism was practically extinct.

Manichaeism’s legacy comes in two primary ways: historical and rhetorical. Some of the earliest Christian theological works were composed specifically to point out errors and heresies in Manichaeism. In fact, one of the first major Christian apologists, Augustine, was a convert from Manichaeism. Prior to committing to Christ, Augustine was part of Manichaeism as a “hearer,” or someone who participated without making any overt vows toward the faith.

In modern times, Manichaeism is mostly used as a derogatory term. When some particular viewpoint is being criticized for ignoring shades of gray or for taking a strong “us-versus-them” mentality, it is often referred to as “Manichaean” or as “Neo-Manichaeism.” This usage of the word is often applied to sects that have borrowed ideas from Mani and his teachings, particularly in early Christian history. As used today, though, the term typically has little to do with religion and much more to do with politics and philosophy.

Recommended Resource: The Kingdom of the Cults, revised and updated edition

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Wikipedia: Manichaeism

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Manichaeism

Manichaeism (/ˌmænɪˈkiːɪzəm/; in Modern Persian آیین مانی Āyin-e Māni; Chinese: 摩尼教; pinyin: Móní Jiào) was a major religious movement that was founded by the Iranian prophet Mani (in Persian: مانی, Syriac: ܡܢܝ , Latin: Manichaeus or Manes; c. 216–276 AD) in the Sasanian Empire.

Manichaeism taught an elaborate dualistic cosmology describing the struggle between a good, spiritual world of light, and an evil, material world of darkness. Through an ongoing process that takes place in human history, light is gradually removed from the world of matter and returned to the world of light, whence it came. Its beliefs were based on local Mesopotamian gnostic and religious movements.

Manichaeism was quickly successful and spread far through the Aramaic-Syriac speaking regions. It thrived between the 3rd and 7th centuries, and at its height was one of the most widespread religions in the world. Manichaean churches and scriptures existed as far east as China and as far west as the Roman Empire. It was briefly the main rival to Christianity in the competition to replace classical paganism. Manichaeism survived longer in the east than in the west, and it appears to have finally faded away after the 14th century in southern China, contemporary to the decline in China of the Church of the East during the Ming Dynasty. While most of Manichaeism's original writings have been lost, numerous translations and fragmentary texts have survived.

An adherent of Manichaeism is called, especially in older sources, a Manichee, or more recently Manichaean.

An Introduction to Manichaeism

https://www.thoughtco.com/manichaeism-a-christian-heresy-249506

Excerpt:

Manichaeism is an extreme form of dualistic gnosticism. It is gnostic because it promises salvation through the attainment of special knowledge of spiritual truths. It is dualistic because it argues that the foundation of the universe is the opposition of two principles, good and evil, each equal in relative power. Manichaeism is named after a religious figure named Mani.

Who Was Mani?

Mani was born in southern Babylon around the year 215 or 216 CE and received his first revelation at the age of 12.

Around the age of 20, he seems to have completed his system of thought and began missionary work around the year 240. Although he found some support early on from Persian rulers, he and his followers were eventually persecuted and he appears to have died in prison in 276. His beliefs had, however, spread as far as Egypt and attracted a great many scholars, including Augustine.

Manichaeism and Christianity

It can be argued that Manichaeism was its own religion, not a Christian heresy. Mani didn't start out as a Christian and then start adopting new beliefs. On the other hand, Manichaeism appears to have played an important role in the development of many Christian heresies — for example, the Bogomils, Paulicians, and Cathars. Manichaeism also influenced the development of orthodox Christians — for example, Augustine of Hippo started out as a Manichaean.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Manichaeism and Modern Fundamentalism

Today it is not uncommon for extreme dualism in fundamentalist Christianity to be labeled as a form of modern Manichaeism.

Modern fundamentalists obviously haven't adopted the Manichaean cosmology or church structure, so it's not as though they are followers of this faith. Manichaeism has become more of an epithet than a technical designation.

Early Christian History: Manichaeism

http://www.earlychristianhistory.info/mani.html

Excerpt:

Also known as Manicheism or Manicheanism, this is the pseudo-Christian religion which was established in the mid-third century by a Babylonian named Mani. While not precisely a Christian heresy, as it diverged from other forms of Christianity in several ways, it did represent competition for the hearts of Christians, and was repressed by them, wherever possible.

Mani of Babylon

Mani was born in Babylon, the son of expatriate Jewish-Christian parents. The sect to which they belonged was known as Elkasaite. Elkasaites were vegetarians and baptists, and many lived an ascetic lifestyle. Overall they were not unlike the sect to which John the Baptist had belonged.

At a young age, Mani believed himself to have had visions, presumably from the Paraclete promised to believers by Jesus Christ. He took to wandering, traveling far and wide, and learning much. Along the way he determined a great number of things and built a following.

Persian Politics

At that time, the older Persian dynasty had failed, and the Parthian had assumed control of the land. While Mani wandered in Persia, he converted a brother of the new Shah, and gained the favor of the royal house. At the same time, the Shah also encouraged the rebuilding of the older Zoroastrian faith, providing support to the Zoroastrian magi.

While Mani taught many things which were Zoroastrian in origin — particularly the duality of the world, marked by light and darkness, good and evil, spirit and matter, etc. — the older priesthood saw the Manicheans as upstarts.

When a new Shah came to power late in the third century, the magi prevailed on him to do something about the wandering sage Mani. He was imprisoned, and later died.

Manicheanism Lives On

The new faith did not die out, at that point. Mani's disciples were far-flung, for he had traveled extensively, and many were out of the reach of the vengeful magi and their benefactor the Shah. Also, Mani had left behind writings of his own, which were copied and spread about, especially in Syria, Egypt, and Libya.

Manicheanism had a steady stream of support for the next few centuries. As the Shahs came and went, its fortunes at home in Persia rose and fell. But even at the height of persecution, it did not die out there.

Just how the figure of Jesus Christ fit into Manicheanism, isn't clear. Mani didn't have much to say about him, naming him simply as a prophet. Even so, Manicheans adopted a number of Jesus' sayings. Later Manicheans seem to distance themselves from Christianity — which would appear to agree with what

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Mani wrote. Christians, however, considered Manicheanism to be an errant version of their own faith. Some Christians of the time compared it with the various Gnostic movements, with which it does share some points in common.

It's for this reason that I stated that Manicheanism wasn't a Christian heresy, per se. What makes it important for Christian history, is that Christians of the time thought of it as heresy. Also, Manicheanism came under occasional repression; for instance, the infamous persecutions of Diocletian began by targeting Manicheans. Only later did Christians become targets.

Augustine, the Most Famous Manichean

Perhaps the most famous Manichean adherent was none other than the Church Father, St. Augustine. As a young man, he was a Manichean for nine years. This distressed his Christian mother, however, it satisfied his intellect (for at the time, he considered Christianity to be a simple-minded religion). Also, it did not prevent him from "living in sin" with a lover, with whom he had a child.

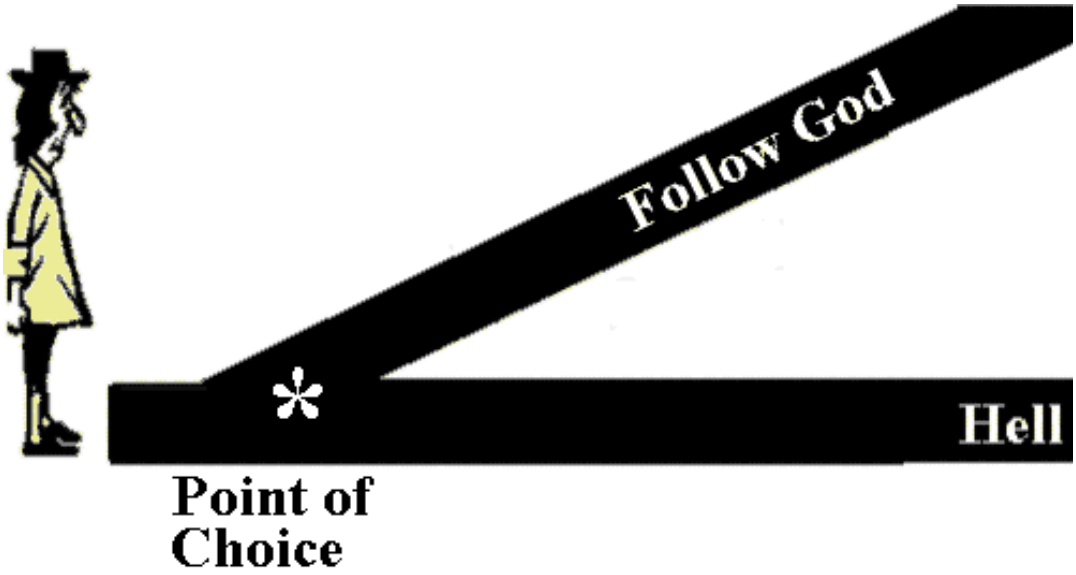
Augustine, who made a living as a teacher of rhetoric, happened to study Platonism in northern Italy. There, he met St. Ambrose, who eventually converted him to Christianity.

Quite thoughtfully, Augustine provided an account of his time as a Manichean, in his autobiography Confessons. It is from him that we know as much as we do, about the Manichean movement in the centuries after Mani.

The Way Of All Heresy

Manicheanism in Egypt, Libya and Syria went the way of all heresies — that is, it was stamped out, by the end of the sixth century. It lingered a bit longer in Mesopotamia and Persia, where it was wiped out when Islam rolled in.

Theopedia: Manichaenism



https://www.theopedia.com/manicheanism

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Pelagianism

PELAGIANISM

http://roarnomore.blogspot.com/2011/02/introducing-semi-pelagian.html

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Pelagianism (Wikipedia)

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Pelagianism

Pelagianism is the belief that original sin did not taint human nature and that mortal will is still capable of choosing good or evil without special divine aid. This theological theory is named after the British monk Pelagius (354–420 or 440), although he denied, at least at some point in his life, many of the doctrines associated with his name. Pelagius was identified as an Irishman by Saint Jerome.[1] Pelagius taught that the human will, as created with its abilities by God, was sufficient to live a sinless life, although he believed that God's grace assisted every good work. Pelagianism has come to be identified with the view (whether taught by Pelagius or not) that human beings can earn salvation by their own efforts.

Pelagius rejected the Augustinian concept of grace. According to his opponents, Pelagius taught that moral perfection was attainable in this life without the assistance of divine grace through human free will. Augustine contradicted this by saying that perfection was impossible without grace because we are born sinners with a sinful heart and will. The Pelagians charged Augustine with departing from the accepted teaching (e.g.: John 8:11) of the Apostles and the Bible, demonstrating that the doctrine of original sin amounted to Manichaeism, which taught that the flesh was in itself sinful (and thus denied that Jesus came in the flesh). This charge would have carried added weight since contemporaries knew that Augustine had himself been a Manichaean layman before converting to Christianity. Augustine also taught that a person's salvation comes solely through a free gift, the efficacious grace of God, but that this was a gift that one had no free choice to accept or refuse.

Pelagianism was attacked in 415 at the Council of Diospolis (also known as Lydda or Lod), which found Pelagius to be orthodox. But it was later condemned at the Council of Carthage (418) and this condemnation was ratified at the Council of Ephesus in 431. The strict moral teachings of the Pelagians were influential in southern Italy and Sicily, where they were openly preached until the death of Julian of Eclanum in 455, and in Britain until the coming of Saint Germanus of Auxerre c 429.

In De causa Dei contra Pelagium et de virtute causarum, Thomas Bradwardine denounced Pelagianism in the 14th century, as did Gabriel Biel in the 15th century.

Pelagianism (Theopedia)

https://www.theopedia.com/pelagianism

Excerpt:

Pelagianism views humanity as basically good and morally unaffected by the Fall. It denies the imputation of Adam's sin, original sin, total depravity, and substitutionary atonement. It simultaneously views man as fundamentally good and in possession of libertarian free will. With regards to salvation, it teaches that man has the ability in and of himself (apart from divine aid) to obey God and earn eternal salvation. Pelagianism is overwhelmingly incompatible with the Bible and was historically opposed by Augustine (354-430), Bishop of Hippo, leading to its condemnation as a heresy at Council of Carthage in 418 A.D. These condemnations were summarily ratified at the Council of Ephesus (A.D. 431).

Multimedia

- Pelagianism (QuickTime), by Ron Nash

Discussion

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Pelagius was a monk from Britain, whose reputation and theology came into prominence after he went to Rome sometime in the 380's A.D. The historic Pelagian theological controversy involved the nature of man and the doctrine of original sin.

Pelagius believed that the consequences of Adam and Eve's sin (the Fall) were restricted to themselves only; and thereby denied the belief that original sin was passed on (or transferred) to the children of Adam and thus to the human race. Adam's sin merely "set a bad example" for his progeny and Jesus "set a good example" for mankind (thus counteracting Adam's bad example). Pelagianism teaches that human beings are born in a state of innocence with a nature that is as pure as that which Adam was given at his creation.

As a result of his basic assumption, Pelagius taught that man has an unimpaired moral ability to choose that which is spiritually good and possesses the free will, ability, and capacity to do that which is spiritually good. This resulted in a gospel of salvation based on human works. Man could choose to follow the precepts of God and then follow those precepts because he had the power within himself to do so.

The controversy came to a head when Pelagian teaching came into contact with Augustine. Augustine did not deny that man had a will and that he could make choices. But, Augustine recognized that man did not have a free will in moral issues related to God, asserting that the effects original sin were passed to the children of Adam and Eve and that mankind's nature was thereby corrupted. Man could choose what he desired, but those desires were influenced by his sinful nature and he was unable to refrain from sinning.

Pelagius cleared himself of charges, primarily by hiding his real beliefs; however, at the Council of Carthage in 418 A.D., his teachings were branded as heresy. The Council of Ephesus in 431 A.D., again condemned Pelagian doctrine and it was banished in the Greek portion of the church. However, in the West, the teachings held on, primarily in Britain and Gaul.

Pelagian teaching was replaced with Semi-Pelagianism which sought a middle ground between Pelagianism and Augustinianism, but it too was condemned at the Second Synod of Orange in 529 A.D. However, elements of Semi-Pelagianism continued in the Western (Roman) church. It emerged again after the Reformation in modified form in Arminianism which was rejected by the Reformed churches at the Synod of Dort in 1618-1619 A.D.

What is Pelagianism?

https://www.gotquestions.org/Pelagianism.html

Excerpt:

Pelagianism is the unbiblical teaching that Adam's sin did not affect future generations of humanity. According to Pelagianism, Adam's sin was solely his own, and Adam's descendants did not inherit a sinful nature passed down to them. God creates every human soul directly, and therefore every human soul starts out in innocence, free from sin. We are not basically bad, says the Pelagian heresy; we are basically good.

Pelagianism is named after Pelagius, a monk who lived in the late 300s and early 400s AD. Pelagius began teaching the doctrine associated with his name in an effort to promote holy living among Christians. When people sinned, Pelagius grew weary of hearing the excuse of "I can't help it. It's in my nature to do wrong." To counter that excuse, Pelagius stressed the freedom of the human will, essentially teaching that all sin is the result of a conscious choice of evil over good; everyone has the ability to freely choose to do good all the time. And, since there is no such thing as original sin or an inherited sin nature, then we cannot blame Adam. God created us good, so no one ever has an excuse for sinning. If you're not living a holy life, it's because you're not trying hard enough.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Pelagianism contradicts the Bible in many places.

Romans 5 solidly refutes the notion that Adam's sin had no effect on us:

- "Sin entered the world through one man, and death through sin, and in this way death came to all people, because all sinned" (verse 12).
- "Many died by the trespass of the one man" (verse 15).
- "The judgment followed one sin and brought condemnation" (verse 16).
- "By the trespass of the one man, death reigned through that one man" (verse 17).
- "One trespass resulted in condemnation for all people" (verse 18).
- "Through the disobedience of the one man the many were made sinners" (verse 19).

Further, the Bible tells us that we are sinful from the moment of conception (Psalm 51:5). All human beings die as a result of sin (Ezekiel 18:20; Romans 6:23).

While Pelagianism says that human beings are not born with a natural inclination toward sin, the Bible says the opposite (Romans 3:10–18). Anyone who has raised children can attest to the fact that infants do not have to be taught how to sin; on the contrary, they must be carefully and consistently taught how to avoid sin and behave wisely, prudently, and righteously.

Pelagianism's underlying fault is its reliance on human freedom and willpower instead of the grace of God. In saying that we all possess an inherent power to choose holiness for ourselves, Pelagius made the grace of God of no effect. The Bible says that, before the grace of God saves us, we are "dead" in our sins (Ephesians 2:1); Pelagianism says it's not so bad as all that. We can choose to obey God's commands, and, if we only knew our true nature, we could please God and save ourselves.

Pelagius and his false doctrine were fought by Augustine and condemned by the Council of Carthage in AD 418, the same year that Pelagius was excommunicated. The doctrine did not disappear, however, and had to be condemned again by the Council of Ephesus (431) and later church councils. Pelagianism survives to this day and shows up in any teaching that says following Christ is primarily a choice we make apart from any supernatural intervention of God's grace. In any age and in any form, Pelagianism is unscriptural and should be rejected.

Pelagianism - Wrong as Ever (2000)

https://www.americamagazine.org/issue/277/article/pelagianism-wrong-ever

Excerpt:

The recent spate of self-help books has spilled over into self-help theology. We are exhorted to "have faith." We are invited to "make a decision for Christ." We are encouraged to "accept Jesus Christ as Lord and savior." We are asked if we have "found Christ."

Such self-help theology is Pelagianism redivivus. Pelagius was a fifth-century monk who taught that you could will belief. His teaching was branded a heresy. Why? Because belief cannot be willed. If it could, then God would not be God. If we can self-help our way to God, then we do not need God.

"You must be born again," Jesus said (Jn. 3:3). Faith is something done for us rather than by us. It is a gift, not a choice. "By grace you have been saved through faith," St. Paul writes, "and this is not your own doing, it is the gift of God" (Eph. 2:8). If faith were a choice, the religious game would be up. Faith cannot be one more achievement of the heroic ego.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The bumper stickers of 15 years ago trumpeting "I found it!" were classic Pelagianism. The believer had not found a thing. He or she had been found, "I would not seek thee," Pascal said, "hadst thou not already found me."

Churches all across America are rife with Pelagianism. They have taken faith into their own hands. "We can do it. We can build a bigger church. We can raise a bigger budget. We can attract a bigger membership." But it may be that God doesn't want a bigger church. God may want a smaller church, in which all members are active, instead of the typical church in which one-third are committed, one-third are peripheral and one-third are invisible.

Church boards everywhere convene without praying, leap immediately into parliamentary procedure and spend no time at all trying to discern the mind of Christ. It is virtually inconceivable that a church board in America would spend as much time in prayer as it spends on "church business." Such a thought would never enter a board member's head. And if it ever entered a pastor's head, the pastor would be too timid to voice it. The secular invasion of the church with its can-do corporate mind-set is rank Pelagianism…

The Doctrines of Will and Grace: The Essence of the Pelagian Debate http://www.erfm.org/pelagianism.html

Pelagias and Pleagianism (references of publications)
https://earlychurch.org.uk/pelagius.php

A Heretic Reconsidered Pelagius, Augustine, And 'Original Sin' http://digitalcommons.csbsju.edu/cgi/viewcontent.cgi?article=1001&context=sot_papers [PDF]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

A Comparison of Systems: Pelagianism, Semipelagianism, and Augustinianism https://www.monergism.com/comparison-systems-pelagianism-semipelagianism-and-augustinianism

A Historical Overview of Heresies (Chart)
http://www.oodegr.com/english/ekklisia/chart_of_heresies.htm

Differences between Pelagianism, its derivatives and Christianity http://www.angelfire.com/falcon/ddd_chc82/theology/arminianism_chart.html

Augustine and Monergism
http://www.breakwaterfamily.com/pastors-papers/augustine-and-monergism.html

The Differences: Semi-Pelagianism, Rome, Orthodoxy, Arminianism, and Calvinism http://ancientchristiandefender.blogspot.com/2011/03/differences-semi-pelagianism-rome.html

Semipelagianism
https://www.revolvy.com/topic/Semipelagianism&item_type=topic

Differences between Semi-Pelagianism and Arminian Beliefs https://www.monergism.com/thethreshold/articles/onsite/Arm_Semi_Differences.html

Excerpt:

[Semi-Pelagianism]
While not denying the necessity of Grace for salvation, Semi-Pelagianism maintains that the first steps towards the Christian life are ordinarily taken by the human will and that Grace supervened only later.

[Arminianism]
In contrast to semi-pelagianism, Arminianism teaches that the first steps of grace are taken by God. This teaching derives from the Remonstrance of 1610, a codification of the teachings of Jacob Arminius (1559-1609). Here are the 3rd and 4th articles of five to show how close it actually approaches traditional Calvinism, but still leaves man with a small island of righteousness, as it affirms that, unregenerate man can think spiritual thoughts, perceive the beauty and excellency of Christ, create affections for Him and thus turn in faith to Him, apart from the quickening of the Holy Spirit. They affirm that God's grace is always resistible, therefore, when one believes, it is not grace which makes one to differ from another person, but naturally produced faith:

III.That man has not saving grace of himself, nor of the working of his own free-will, inasmuch as in his state of apostasy and sin he can for himself and by himself think nothing that is good--nothing, that is, truly good, such as saving faith is, above all else. But that it is necessary that by God, in Christ and through his Holy Spirit he be born again and renewed in understanding, affections and will and in all his faculties, that he may be able to understand, think, will, and perform what is truly good, according to the

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Word of God [John 15:5].

IV.That this grace of God is the beginning, the progress and the end of all good; so that even the regenerate man can neither think, will nor effect any good, nor withstand any temptation to evil, without grace precedent (or prevenient), awakening, following and co-operating. So that all good deeds and all movements towards good that can be conceived in through must be ascribed to the grace of God in Christ. But with respect to the mode of operation, grace is not irresistible; for it is written of many that they resisted the Holy Spirit [Acts 7 and elsewhere passim].

Reformed Theology by contrast teaches that the natural men may have common grace, common illuminations, and common affections that are from the Spirit of God. Natural men have sometimes the influences of the Spirit of God in His common operations and gifts, and therefore God's Spirit is said to be striving with them, and they are said to resist the Spirit, (Acts 7:51;) to grieve and vex God's Holy Spirit, (Eph. 4:30; Isaiah 63:10;) While indeed fallen men resist grace every day when the gospel is presented to them, for that is their nature and desire. But it is important to note that God can and does make His grace effectual or irresistible at a time of His sovereign merciful choosing (John 6:37, 39, 44, 63-65; John 3:8; Matt 11:27; 1 Corinthians 1:9; Paul's conversion in Acts 2:39, Acts 9; Rom 8:30 ROM 9:11-24; 1 Cor. 1:9-26; Gal. 1:6-15; 1 Thess. 1:5, 6; 1 Thess. 2:12; 5:24; 2 Thess. 2:14; Eph. 1:18; 4:1-4, 5; 2 Tim. 1:9; Heb. 3:1; 1 Pet. 2:9; 5:10; 2 Pet. 1:3-10). If this kind of effectual grace can be resisted, as Arminians claim, then faith is understood as a natural preparation for saving grace, as the fulfillment of a condition for receiving supernatural grace by the performance of something that is within man's natural capacity/desire to do. Man, in this scheme, cooperates with God's prevenient grace according to his native ability. But the Scripture teaches that salvation is not a faith-contribution or a principle standing ultimately independent of God's action of grace. Rather, it does not owe exclusively to man's natural endowment with a free will and does not arise out of an inherent capacity of the natural man, as Arminians teach. Rather, God acts unilaterally and exclusively, taking the sole initiative in a free act of sovereign grace—grace that is altogether prior to, and productive of, justifying faith. As such. the grace of Christ is not only necessary but sufficient to save us to the uttermost. Salvation is of the Lord since God was entirely responsible for it and, as such, we thank God for our entire salvation. This stips us of all of our self-righteousness and boasting since we cannot attribute even our faith to our own natural wisdom or sound judgment, or better understanding than our neighbor, but only to God.

Cult Comparison Chart

http://aycce.org/wp-content/uploads/2013/10/CULT_COMPARISON_CHART.pdf [PDF]

CARM Comparison Chart (similar)

https://carm.org/cult-comparison-chart

Eating Ignatius (re: Eucharist – Transubstantiation)

http://www.whitehorseblog.com/2014/07/27/eating-ignatius/

See also: Heresies That Were Popular and Still Effecting Church Today

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Gnosticism

http://southernorderspage.blogspot.com/2013/07/pope-francis-bashes-two-extremes-in.html

Gnosticism

- Ultimate transcendent God
- Salvation by gnosis, knowledge
- Cosmic dualism: light/darkness, matter/spirit
- Docetic or adoptionist christologies
- Complicated ontologies of Æons, Ogdoads, etc.
- Redeemer myth in which divine messenger comes to awaken individual humans to their innate divinity
- Ambivalent about women/femininity

Now since it has been said that you are my twin and true companion, examine yourself that you may understand who you are, in what way you exist, and how you came to be.
Book of Thomas the Contender

[Wisdom], having engaged in an impossible and impracticable attempt, brought forth an amorphous substance, such as her female nature enabled her to produce. When she looked upon it, her first feeling was one of grief, on account of the imperfection of its generation, and then of fear lest this should end her own existence.
Valentinus, according to Irenæus 1.2,3

THEOLOGY CARDS #41 V 0.95

Tom Wright on Gnosticism – Discusses the Popularity of Gnosticism https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=wOzQnDRIp7s [Video]

Gnosticism and its influence on Christianity (FULL) - UNLEARN https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=zcBD_P5qH74 [Video]

See also related information in*: Antinomianism

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

What is Gnostocism?
http://amazingdiscoveries.org/S-deception-media_Gnostic_Satan_Eden

Excerpt:

As we can see, Satan's first interaction with humanity opened doors to the false religions deceiving humanity today:

Satan's Lies

Deception in Eden (Genesis 3:1-5)	Deception Today
Ye shall not surely die	Spiritualism
your eyes shall be opened	Eastern Religions ye shall be as gods	New Age Movement knowing	Gnosticism
good and evil	Paganism

The serpent's lies in Eden have permeated spirituality throughout history....

A Historical Overview of Heresies (Chart)
http://www.oodegr.com/english/ekklisia/chart_of_heresies.htm

Ancient Christian Witness: Gnosticism
http://ancientchristiandefender.blogspot.com/2009/12/gnosticism.html

The Challenge of Gnosticism (Part 1) Origins of Christianity, Dr. Kyle Harper https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=_w6jU32IEd4 [Video]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Monergis: Gnosticism (Links)
https://www.monergism.com/topics/cults-heresy/gnosticism

Question: "What is the definition of the term Gnostic?"
https://www.gotquestions.org/gnostic-definition.html

Early Christian History: Gnosticism
http://www.earlychristianhistory.info/gnostic.html

Excerpt:

Movements: Gnosticism

The most important “heresies” that the early Church faced, were a collection of sects now labelled “Gnosticism.” It was less common in the western half of the Roman Empire, and found more often in the major urban centers of the east. As such it was a threat to the “proto-orthodox” or literalist Christians, and they resolved to put an end to it by the beginning of the 4th century. It was all but dead by the end of the 5th century, in spite of the contributions it made to the growth of Christianity.

The Problem of Understanding Gnosticism

In trying to understand Gnosticism, we face a serious problem: the fact that the Church eradicated all traces of Gnosticism, after wiping it out. For a long time, we had little to go on, aside from what some of the Church Fathers said about it — what’s worse, most of them were quite hostile to it, and for all we know, misrepresented it.

A source for knowledge of Gnosticism, aside from the Church Fathers, was found in the 1940’s at Nag Hammadi in Egypt. In a buried jar, were found a number of rolled-up manuscripts. Scholars have determined them to have been at least partially Gnostic in nature, dated to about the turn of the 5th century. The jar may have been left behind by a small, secluded Gnostic community, trying to avoid persecution; they may have had to bury their texts to keep them from prying eyes, but for some reason, never got back to them.

At any rate, while the Nag Hammadi discovery is helpful, those documents are enigmatic, and may not fully present the “secret” doctrines of the Gnostics. The best we can do, is to collect clues from many sources, and like the pieces of an incomplete jigsaw puzzle, put them together, reconstructing, as best can be arranged, those pieces which are missing.

Ancient Roots of Gnosticism

Gnosticism was merely the last “incarnation” of a very old belief system, going back at least to the 6th century BCE and probably much further even than that. That belief system was known as Orpheanism, after the Greek hero Orpheus. Orpheus was a son of Zeus, and an incredibly skilled musician. When his wife, whom he loved immeasurably, died, he followed her shade to the River Styx. She went across, while he remained on its earthly side, mourning her. He played on his flute such stirring laments, that even Hades, in his halls, heard it, and was moved to tears. He allowed Orpheus to come across the Styx and visit her, for only one day; he had to return by nightfall.

Unfortunately, the majority of Orphean beliefs are lost to us. This is not merely because of later Christian eradication of any record of them, but because they did not generally put any of their teachings in writing.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The earliest Orpheans used music, songs and poetry, via oral tradition, to convey their teachings. They appear to have depended on songs, thereafter.

Another problem with understanding Orpheanism is, that it manifested in several different ways that we know of and probably others that we don't. For example, the Pythagoreans were, very likely, an Orphean movement, founded by Pythagoras (or perhaps his mentor). Other Orphean communities and/or academies popped up throughout the Hellenistic world. Most were in the Aegean islands or in western Anatolia, the district known as Ionia.

Some Orphean communities were not well-received, for they were viewed as a collection of useless outcasts. Still, they tended to be very scholarly, and a number of Orpheans established schools or academies which taught a "conventional" Greek curriculum.

Basic Orphean Beliefs

Intrinsic to all Orphean communities, up to and including Gnosticism, was a belief in a dualistic universe — made up of matter and light. Matter was considered evil by nature, the purview of an evil god, gods, or demons. Light was considered good by nature, the realm of the divine, that god being a solitary, aloof being. That god, called "the divine unknowable," "the immeasurable," etc. had created the universe, but the lesser beings had corrupted it by meddling with matter.

Humanity, like the universe as a whole, had a dual nature: an evil side, grounded in the physical body, and a good side, anchored in the soul. These two natures warred with one another, in the heart of each and every person. Moreover, because people tended to fall back on their physicality, the evil side tended to "win out," which explains the sorry state of the human condition.

For Orpheans, then, life was a constant effort to minimize the physical, in order to release the light, or good side, which was by nature divine. Only by expressing this "light of the soul" could one hope to have even the most meager understanding of the divine.

Toward that end, Orpheans tended to be reclusive. Some Orphean communities were ascetic, and lived by what today might be called a monastic lifestyle. Some were not as reserved, though, and these tended to be found in or near major cities.

In this regard, all of the many manifestations of Orpheanism owe a good deal to Zoroastrianism. That religion had been founded somewhere between 1,200 BCE and 750 BCE in western Persia. It taught that the world was basically the battleground of two beings, Ahura Mazda, the god of light, creation, goodness and life, and Ahriman, the god of darkness, destruction, corruption, and death. This dualistic notion permeated almost every major ancient religious movement.

Orpheanism Moves Ahead

When Rome seized control over the Hellenistic world, many Orphean groups vanished. This is not due to persecution, per se, but because under the Roman regime, it was considered a frivolous and eccentric belief system; it attracted fewer followers. Furthermore, other "mystery religions" had become more sophisticated, and grew in size, capturing many of the same people who might have been attracted to an Orphean community.

One of these was Mithraism, which really blossomed in the Empire just prior to the turn of the first century. While it was named for a Persian sun-deity, and apparently taught a dualistic system, Mithraism had little other Persian influences, and was primarily a Greco-Roman religion, as well as being a "secret society." By the middle of the first century, nearly all the Roman legionaires were members, and they carried it to all parts of the Empire.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Another well-known "mystery religion" was that of Herakles (Hercules in Latin), which was prominent among ethnic Greeks and in places where ethnic Greeks lived. It also had many followers among Romans, particularly in southern Italy (where the Greeks had had a number of colonies, hence its ancient name Magna Graeca).

Precisely what happened to Orpheanism, in light of all of this competition, is uncertain. Records of Orpheans in the last century BCE are all but non-existent. Again, this may be explained by the Orpheans' own reticence to put anything in writing. From the accounts of others, though, we know that some small groups did manage to live on.

Lighting the "Fire of Faith"

Around the turn of the first century, the "fire of faith" flared anew, throughout the Roman Empire, especially in the east. A number of mystery religions exploded in numbers. Christianity was only one of them. Another was Mithraism, which had already gotten a foothold in the Roman world when Pompey, erstwhile collaborator of Julius Caesar, joined Mithras, around 63 BCE. Other similar movements sprang to life, some of them brand-new, others founded on older movements.

Orphean-inspired people were, apparently, among the first to latch on to the young Christian movement. They saw Jesus Christ as an embodiment of the "divine knowledge," or λογος (Logos), to whom the "divine wisdom" or σοφια (Sophia) had given birth. They considered the ancient Hebrew God, YHWH, the Demiurge, or the author of the woes of the material. To them, Jesus represented deliverance from the enslavement of the Demiurge, as well as the architect of spiritual advancement. Furthermore they believed that Jesus had taught the apostles things which were never put in writing, and which should not be put in writing, which they, themselves, were privy to; these were their "secret doctrines," open only to the initiated, and only after the "outer mysteries" or publicly-acknowledged teachings, had been mastered.

Of course, all of this did not happen overnight. The Orpheans were mingled in with the rest of the Christian community. Because Christianity was young, there was no "established" sole doctrine, so individual interpretations of Christ's message were not frowned upon.

Gnosticism Emerging

The Orphean version of Christianity did not emerge as a distinct Christian movement, until the late second century CE. By this time it went by the name "Gnostic," from the Greek word γνωσις (gnosis) meaning "knowledge, to know" (referring to its quest for knowledge of the divine).

Although it had a label, Gnosticism was not a comprehensive package of doctrines, but rather, simply a mystical, Orphean-inspired approach to Christianity. As such, not all Gnostics were actually "heretical" or teaching things that other Christians didn't.

Perhaps the greatest issue [dividing] Gnosticism from mainstream Christianity, in addition to the "secret doctrines," was Docetism, which is to say, the belief that Jesus did not actually die. Gnostics claimed that Jesus had never actually come in true physical form — for if he had, he'd have been corrupted by the inherent evil of the physical — but that his bodily existence had been merely an illusion. When he was crucified, his spirit fled, so that he never actually died.

Note that many Christians even of the mainstream variety were Docetists. Among them was Origen, a Church Father whose writings show a good deal of Gnostic inspiration — though at the time, he was not known as a Gnostic. Other Church Fathers, and even later Christian theologians and religious figures, have taken the stance that Jesus had not actually physically manifested.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Docetism, however, proved ultimately to be Gnosticism's undoing. While not all Gnostics agreed on everything — in fact, there was a good deal of variance among the Gnostic congregations — they all did believe that the material, the physical was inherently evil, and therefore they all agreed that Jesus could not actually have lived in physical form.

In a series of synods in the east, in the middle of the third century, Docetism was denounced, several times over. It became a severe point of contention for many mainstream Christians.

Gnosticism Reacts — or Rather, Doesn't!

The Gnostics didn't take seriously the denunciation of Docetism. Largely educated, and somewhat elitist in their views, they viewed the mainstream Christians as simple-minded buffoons. Their denunciation carried no weight, with them. Besides, they had no use for bishops or their pronouncements. In fact, they disliked the idea of a hierarchy. While they observed several levels of doctrinal initiation, they didn't look to any single person as a spiritual authority. What mattered was one's spiritual knowledge, not one's rank in a strictly-human organization.

Moreover, the idea of doctrinal disputes was one that Gnostics simply didn't care about. They believed in individuals learning to understand the divine, by themselves. One person's understanding might not be the same as another's. So they did not care about cohesiveness of doctrine, and again, considered the mainstream's efforts at establishing a single doctrine, to be tilting at windmills.

The Gnostics went their merry way, and in fact, possibly due to their elitist ideas, they attracted a good number of educated followers. Mainstream Christianity saw this as a threat — the Gnostics were taking away the most erudite and desirable believers! They found more grounds on which to attack Gnosticism — mainly by calling them polytheists (because of their beliefs in a God, a Demiurge, in a separate Jesus, etc.), which the Gnostics did not understand. The subordinate deities of their belief system, they equated with angels and demons, in which the mainstream Christians believed.

The division among the Christians grew, until Emperor Constantine, in 325, called a general Council, in order to heal the rifts. He had invited some Gnostics to attend, however, they did not take the Council seriously. If any did attend, we don't know about it. Thus, with no Gnostics present, the Council immediately, with little debate, denounced it as heresy.

Over the next century, the mainstream Christians became an organized Church with considerable political influence, and they used it to go after the Gnostics, with all the methods at their disposal. Gnosticism lingered in some out-of-the-way places for another two centuries or so, but it died out. Ironically, the mainstream Christians used against their fellow Christians, the Gnostics, many of the same mechanisms that early Rome had used, to persecute them! After the Gnostics had vanished, the Church made every effort to obliterate any record of them. Gnostic writings were destroyed, or else distorted.

Thus, we have little to go on, in order to understand the Gnostics.

Gnosticism Re-Emerges

Gnosticism re-emerged, sometime in the 9th or 10th century, in Dacia, or modern-day Bulgaria. How this happened, is unknown, since we have no records of it. The movement was very small and may have been lurking, unnoticed, in the wilds of Dacia, possibly for centuries. In any event, the Byzantine Empire came down hard on this movement in the 10th century. At this time they were known as Cathari.

The Byzantine oppression dispersed this small community, which went north into what is now Hungary and Poland, and west into what is now Yugoslavia. They were continually opposed, wherever they went.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

They spent another two centuries or so, wandering central Europe, in relative obscurity, until they rooted themselves in what is now southern France and northern Italy.

In the 13th century, they became more numerous, to the point where harassing them by the local population was no longer enough to dislodge them. They were known, by this time, as Albigensians, for the town of Albi, in which they were dominant. The Church could no longer ignore this threat to their authority (the Albigensians rejected the need for the clergy or the Church hierarchy). Pope Innocent III called a "crusade" against the Albigensians. While the Albigensians mounted a spirited defense, defeating the Church forces several times in the first two decades of this crusade, ultimately, the Church won, and the Albigensians were destroyed.

Dominican friars, considered experts in handling heretics, were called in, to re-convert the Albigensians who had been taken prisoner. It was here that the Inquisition was born.

Modern Gnosticism

During the 20th century, scholars strived to "recover" whatever Gnostic knowledge they could find. They did this by reviewing Christian writings, both in favor of Gnosticism and opposed to it. They also looked for Gnosticism-inspired passages in the Bible and other documents. The Nag Hammadi discovery confirmed some of their suppositions, and added to their knowledge.

This effort is still underway. Some scholars even claim to know what the Gnostics' "secret doctrines" were, while others argue that it should be impossible to do so. In any event, the best one can come up with, now, is supposition. It may be well-grounded supposition, or not, but at best it is nothing other than supposition.

See also: Heresies That Were Popular and Still Effecting Church Today

Gnostocism references from Dr. Peter Jones continued on next page…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Dr. Peter Jones - The Gnostic Gospel

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=CI4FGPhXQtA [Video] https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=VZic4LngKis [Video] http://www.ligonier.org/learn/conferences/christless-christianity-2010-west-coast/a-gnostic-gospel/http://saltshakers.com/main/kesherweb/dr-peter-jones-gnostic-gospel

https://www.rightnowmedia.org/Training/Post/Preview/236370

https://vimeo.com/24565309 [Video]

Americans are incurably "spiritual," but this spirituality expresseshttps://vimeo.com/24565309 itself in ways that are incompatible with biblical Christianity. It expresses itself in ways that are essentially Gnostic. The American church has not been immune to the influence of this American Gnosticism. In this message, Dr. Peter Jones compares this private, mystical, and inward religious mentality with the corporate, doctrinal, and visible faith of orthodox Christianity.

2010 West Coast Conference - Session 5 - Peter Jones

http://www.ligonier.org/blog/2010-west-coast-conference-session-5-peter-jones/

The Paganization of Christian Studies

http://www.crossroad.to/articles2/007/Jones-paganization.htm

Discusses also: Bultmann, Heidegger, Tillich, Jung, Robinson, Borg, Funk, etc.

The Gnostic Empire Strikes Back – Study Guide

http://pcabookstore.com/samples/3693.pdf [PDF]

Facebook: https://www.facebook.com/DrPeterJones

Paganism: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=0C5caA2Q13Q [Video]

The God of Sex - How Spirituality Defines Your Sexuality
http://christendom-awake.org/pages/jones/godofsex/godofsex.htm

Introduction: Gay Identity and the Gospel
https://vimeo.com/231583795

Why I, Peter Jones, signed the Nashville Statement on Sexuality https://truthxchange.com/2017/09/peter-jones-signed-nashville-statement-sexuality/

The Gnostic Gospel - Summary

http://www.endtimeanswers.org/the-gnostic-gospel-peter-jones/

Excerpt:

According to Peter Jones, Gnosticism is public enemy #1 today, and I am compelled to agree. Peter Jones has studied Gnosticism and its effect on today's western society for over 20 years, and he backs up his observations with many examples, both historical and current.

Gnosticism is closely intertwined and deeply rooted in paganism – a connection few seem to make. On its surface, Gnosticism commonly takes the form of mysticism. Today we hear a lot about the 'emerging church' or 'emergent Christianity' – regardless of the term used, the fact is, mysticism is being used in the church to bring in the old Gnostic ways. For example, Biblical prophecy is being replaced by 'prophetic imagination' which isn't prophetic at all.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

In his message, Peter Jones mentions two points that define Gnosticism:

Mysticism – a willingness to accept anyone of any creed, in order to share a common 'experience'

Social Justice – the outworking of the Gnostic / Pagan movement

The United Nations is (as you might imagine) heavily involved in this. They are founded on the basis of bringing all peoples together, and religion is not exempt from that. The meditation room at UN HQ is maintained by the Lucis Trust, formerly the Lucifer Trust. The name pretty much says it all, and yet that is the foundation of this 'coming together'.

Truth and Lies – Peter Jones – Notes from the Exchange Conference

http://www.bloggingtheologically.com/2010/06/18/truth-and-lies-dr-peter-jones-speaking-the-gospel-in-a-one-ist-world/

Excerpt:

Dr. Peter Jones is one of the world's foremost experts on paganism and founder of Truth Xchange. Interestingly enough, Jones also grew up with John Lennon.

When Jones came to America in 1964, he was shocked—he'd never seen a culture so impregnated with the Christian faith.

Jones believes that the real American Revolution happened not in 1776, but in 1966—because there you see a massive change about how people think deeply about everything.

He says that while the rising generation of Christians is optimistic, and there is a genuine revival of solid Christian faith, we continue to be unaware of the spiritual revolution. Too much optimism can blind us to the opposition, and we can sometimes be seduced by the "progress" proposed by today's version of "the Lie."

That brings us to the real issue:

Are we regressive or progressive in our beliefs?

Christians today are called "regressive" because of so-called old fashioned values; the modern spin seeks to intimidate people to keep them from speaking the old story of Christian faith.

The problem according to Jones is not one of outmoded values, but that we are in the context of two worldviews in profound conflict with the other. And neither can be called progressive.

There is nothing new: These worldviews are as old as the hills.

What has been is what will be, and what has been done is what will be done, and there is nothing new under the sun. Is there a thing of which it is said, "See, this is new"? It has been already in the ages before us. (Eccl. 1:9-10)

"Everyone goes backwards—even the people doing yoga are going backwards to the Buddhist practices from the 6th Century B.C.," he said.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

We tend to be very self-critical. We see the unpopularity of Christianity as our fault. And if we can fix it, maybe we can be more popular again. The culture sees Christians as inept and unloving, deserving of their bad reputation. And if we were nicer, then the culture would like us (maybe).

The other problem is bad fundamentalism:

- The self-righteous "God-hates-fags" Fundies
- Hard-nosed Christian rationalists
- Ghettos and "holy huddles"
- Christian materialists and money-obsessed TV televangelists who are unconcerned for the poor
- Impersonal, program-dominated Megachurches

These things are part of our history and maybe we've been guilty of them. And from these, Jones pleads, O Lord deliver us!

What have been our solutions?

Solution 1: Change our Image. So we find the right program. Use non-offensive discourse and tweak witness techniques. We update our vocabulary, take better care of the earth, and have more compassion on the poor. This will make people like us.

Solution 2: Change the message. According to men like Steve Chalke in The Lost Message of Jesus, the modern church as the Gospel all wrong. We need to avoid unpopular ideas like sin, the cross or personal salvation ("Have these ever been popular?" quips Jones.) In this case, social justice is our message.

Solution 3: Change the Experience. Here, we replace sola scriptura with spiritual enlightenment (sola experientia). A chilling example:

> I cannot say exactly what we believe except that experience is a higher authority than Scripture. I do not believe that the Bible is the Word of God, I believe Jesus is…Scripture has no hierarchy over other books, it is inspired and inspiring the way a quantum physics book is. (Danielle Shroyner of The Journey Church, Dallas TX)

Solution 4: Change the focus. Fundamentalism is modernist. Either/or thinking creates antagonism. We respond by adopting mutually affirming dialogue with other religions. The gospel turns into a "big dreams" social agenda for "human flourishing." It's "deeds, not creeds." So we dig wells, but don't talk about the well of salvation found in the atoning work of Christ.

Solution 5: Change the Subject. It's suggested that religious relativism will end racial and cultural tensions. Anyone who claims to know the truth is a religious terrorist, and Christian beliefs about God, morals and sexuality in particular, breed malice, bigotry and hate. So we see evangelical student ministries threatened and intimidated. Christians adopt a mindset of survival and clear, open speech about the Christian gospel is no longer possible.

But who is the real enemy? "Fundamentalist" fathers or the Father of all lies with his age old deception? (Col 2: 1-15) And rulers always hate being put to shame by the cross. (Psalm 2) There is enmity between the two worldviews.

History is going backwards.

"I'm convinced all roads lead to Rome, to the pre-Constantine Rome," says Jones. Pagan Rome outlawed

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

and persecuted Christians; they've often been unpopular, especially in the first three hundred years of the faith.

Roman Christians were (falsely) accused

- Cannibalism
- Disruption of business
- Gross immorality (even incest!)
- Poverty
- Atheism
- Introduction of novelties
- Lack of patriotism
- Antisocial behavior
- causes of disasters

They were even called "haters of humanity" because of their beliefs.

The world wanted us to say Caesar is Lord, but we continue to say "Jesus is Lord!" That's the enmity—The world hates that message. So we can change that message. The world will love us, but Jesus won't.

Why has Christianity become so unpopular in America?

The culture is hostile to Gospel values. Western culture is torn from its biblical values:

- People rely on their feelings; there's been a subjectivist turn of modern Western culture
- The turn from life as "established roles" and "given orders of things" to states of consciousness
- Focus on the unconscious leads through imagination and mysticism into the occult
- Era of Carl Gustav Jung—studied consciousness and ended in the grip of the occult
- Era of Pagan Apocalypse Now
- An era of imagination for a Mythical Utopia
- Dawning of the Age of Aquarius
- Jewish Kabbalah
- Second Coming of the Goddess
- Eschatological Sodom
- Mayan Calendar
- "Deep Shift," "The Great Emergence" (Brian McLaren, Phyllis Tickle)

All of the issues can be summed up in what Jones calls "One-ism." One-ism is the belief that "all is one" and that everything shares the same essential nature. It's the consubstantiality of all things (meaning "with substance").

Two-ism, the opposing view, is the belief that while all of creation shares a certain essence (everything other than God is created), the Creator Himself, namely God, is the only uncreated being, whose will determines the nature and function of all created things. There are basic theological and anthropological implications to one-ism and two-ism. The source of the conflict:

They are two antithetical views of meaning.

What is the Christian response? Speak Truth

> All I want is the truth now. Just gimme some truth now (John Lennon)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Don't retreat: Fearful of the culture some Christians withdraw from the world to wait for the second coming

Don't reclaim: Christians are not called to take back the culture, the "reclaim" the America fo the 1950s by force of political action

Don't conform: Revival by a renewed mind. (Rom. 12:2)

And live out two-ism for the sake of God's glory.

Speaking the Gospel in a One-ist World (with slides) (Dr. Peter Jones)
https://vimeo.com/22274251 [Video]

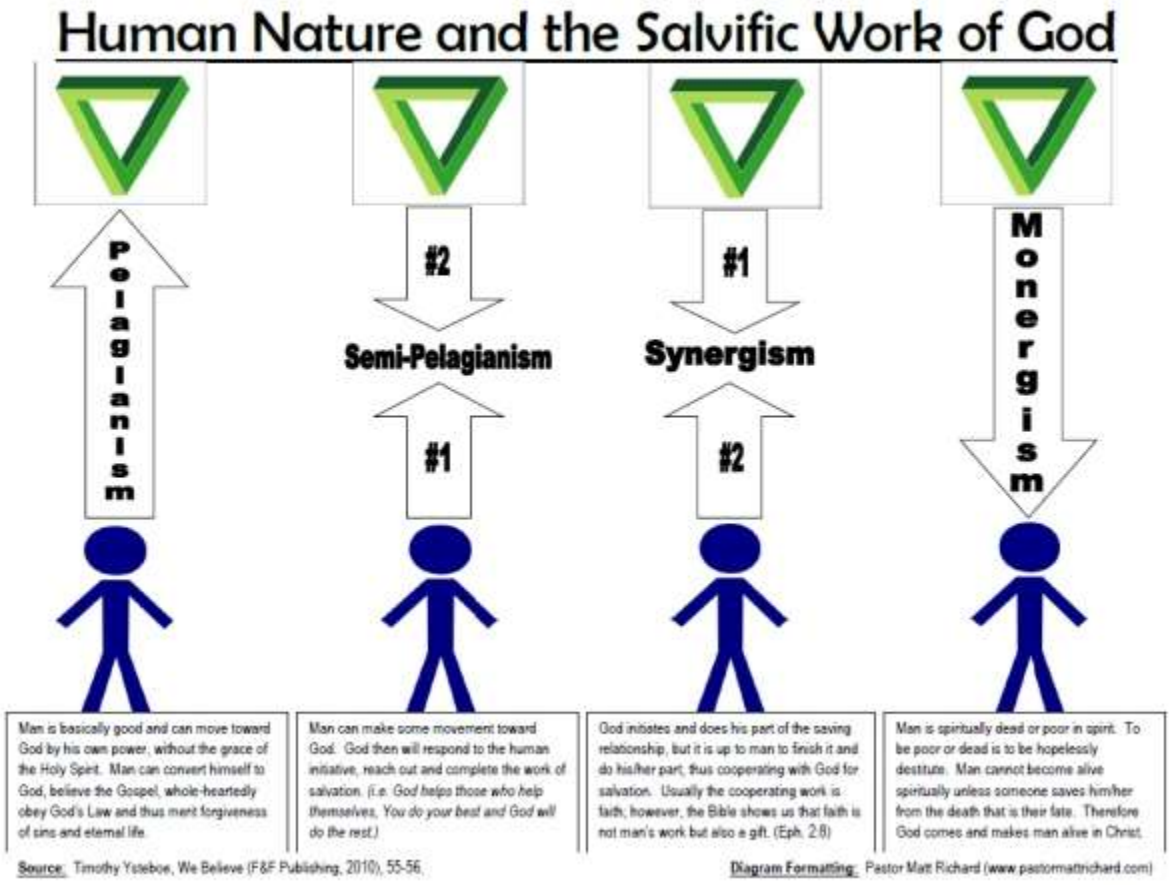
Beyond Belief: A "Pagan" Read of Early Church History (Book Review by P. Jones)
https://truthxchange.com/2003/10/04-beyond-belief-a-pagan-read-of-early-church-history/

Sacred Canopy (Dr. Peter Jones)
https://truthxchange.com/2017/07/sacred-canopy/

Gnostic Christian – A Blatant Oxymoron
http://www.logosapologia.org/gnostic-christian-a-blatant-oxymoron/

Speaking Binary Truth (Dr. Peter Jones)
https://truthxchange.com/speaking-binary-truth-by-dr-peter-jones/ [Audio]

Jubilee – Summer 2015: Babylon Strikes Back – The Syncretistic Movie of Modern Culture – Not Good to Be Alone: Rob Bell and Scripture (Peter Jones)
https://d1nwfrzxhi18dp.cloudfront.net/uploads/resource_library/attachment/file/330/20150703_Jubilee14_Gnosticism.pdf [PDF]



Gnosis: the Main Expression of Secular Pagan Religion in the New Age http://patriotsandliberty.com/lindas-latest/2013/4/1/gnosis-the-main-expression-of-secular-pagan-religion-in-the-new-age

The Gospel First and Last (Dr. Peter Jones)
http://theresolved.com/resources/sermons/the-gospel-first-and-last/ [Video and Summary]

The Gnostic Jesus, a Gnostic Christianity
http://www.letusreason.org/Latrain18.htm

The Gnostic Jesus, a Gnostic Christianity - CORE SPIRIT
http://www.corespirit.com/gnostic-jesus-gnostic-christianity/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

http://steadfastlutherans.org/2012/09/is-joel-osteens-anthropology-hyper-pelagian/

See next page for larger view…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Lapsarianism [logical ordering of the 5 elective decrees of the overall Divine Decree]

Dictionairy: Lapsarianism (sourced from Wikipedia)
http://dictionary.sensagent.com/LAPSARIANISM/en-en/

Lapsarianism is the set of Calvinist doctrines describing the theoretical order of God's decree (in his mind, before Creation), in particular concerning the order of his decree for the fall of man and reprobation. The name of the doctrine comes from the Latin lapsus meaning fall.

Supralapsarianism (also antelapsarianism) is the view that God's decrees of election and reprobation logically preceded the decree of the fall while infralapsarianism (also called postlapsarianism and sublapsarianism) asserts that God's decrees of election and reprobation logically succeeded the decree of the fall. The words can also be used in connection with other topics, e.g. supra- and infralapsarian christology.

See*: Divine Decree(s) of God (before proceeding, then return to this section)

The Doctrine of Lapsarianism
http://www.wenstrom.org/downloads/written/doctrines/theology_proper/lapsarianism.pdf [PDF]

Excerpt:

Definition and Description

Lapsarianism means lapse. It refers to the doctrine that mankind is a fallen being. Lapsarianism refers to the 5 elective decrees of eternity past. It deals with the logical order of these 5 decrees, which were all simultaneous in the mind of God in eternity past. Lapsarianism is a technical theological term that deals with logical order* of the decrees in eternity past but doesn't deal with any chronological order in time.

Importance of Lapsarianism

Lapsarianism provides the logical environment as well as the logical order of the Elective Decrees: (1) Decree to create mankind. (2) Decree to permit the Fall as the extension of the Angelic Conflict. The whole order of the 5 elective decrees is sorted out through the understanding of the true as over against the false lapsarian principles. [This author states that] Only Infra-Lapsarianism is correct biblically.

Four Interpretations of Lapsarianism

Lapsarianism has 4 schools of interpretation: (1) Supra-Lapsarianism (2) *Sub*Lapsarianism (3) Infra-Lapsarianism (4) Arminian-Lapsarianism.

Why Did God Create The Tree Of Good And Evil If He Knew Adam And Eve Would Eat From It? (http://calvarybible.org/)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=5T6qKHDMxjw [Video]

Bible does not tell us, but there are three main (Larpsarian) views:
Supralapsarianism, Intralapsarianism, Sublapsarianism

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The order of the 5 elective decrees - lapsarianism; Part 2 John 15:16.

http://www.cgtruth.org/print.php?tid=323

Logical order of God's decrees (Larpsarianism – Wikipedia)

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Logical_order_of_God%27s_decrees

Excerpt:

The logical order of God's decrees is the study in Calvinist theology of the logical order (in God's mind, before Creation) of the decree to ordain or allow the fall of man in relation to his decree to save some sinners (election) and condemn the others (reprobation). Several opposing positions have been proposed, all of which have names with the Latin root lapsus meaning fall.

Supralapsarianism (also called antelapsarianism, pre-lapsarian or prelapsarian) is the view that God's decrees of election and reprobation logically preceded the decree of the fall while infralapsarianism (also called postlapsarianism and sublapsarianism) asserts that God's decrees of election and reprobation logically succeeded the decree of the fall. The words can also be used in connection with other topics, e.g. supra- and infralapsarian Christology. The difference between the two views are minute; supralapsarianism, by virtue of its belief that God creates the elect and reprobate, is a suggestion or provides an inference that at some level, God is the author of sin (because he creates sinners to condemnation). Infralapsarianism teaches that all men are sinful by nature (due to The Fall), are thereby condemned through our own sin (freewill), and that God had foreknowledge of whom he would rescue from condemnation. The infralapsarianist view follows Ephesians 1:4-6, "... even as he chose us in him before the foundation of the world, that we should be holy and blameless before him. In love he predestined us for adoption to himself as sons through Jesus Christ, according to the purpose of his will, to the praise of his glorious grace, with which he has blessed us in the Beloved" (ESV). That is, some are chosen to be elect (foreknowledge) but not created elect.

Many Calvinists reject both lapsarian views for various reasons. Herman Bavinck rejected both because he sees the entire system of God's plan of salvation as organic with each part mutually dependent and determinative, rather than some parts "causing" others. Other Calvinists (and many non-Calvinists) reject the lapsarian views because they perceive any particular ordering of the decrees as unnecessary and presumptive speculation. Critics of lapsarianism often argue that it is impossible to conceive of a temporal process by which God, in eternity, issued decrees, and it is impossible to know the mind of God without direct, scriptural documentation.

Lapsarian views
	Supralapsarianism Antelapsarianism Pre-lapsarian or prelapsarian	Infralapsarianism Sublapsarianism Postlapsarianism
Decree to:	Save some and condemn others
Decree to:	Create the elect and the reprobate	Create human beings
Decree to:	Authorize the Fall (by which all deserve to be condemned)
Decree to:		Save some from condemnation and leave others condemned
Decree to:	Provide salvation only for the elect	Provide salvation only for the elect

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Doctrine of Lapsarianism

http://gracebiblechurchwichita.org/?page_id=256

Excerpt:

A. What is Lapsarianism?

1. Of all the decrees in eternity past, five are related to the purpose of God in election, so that lapsarianism deals with the logical order of these five decrees.

2. Lapsarianism, from the word "lapse," refers to the fact that man is a fallen being.

3. Under lapsarianism the five decrees of eternity past are related to the purpose of God in election. Therefore, the five concepts of lapsarianism are often called the five elective decrees.

4. Lapsarianism, then, deals with the order of the five elective decrees. It deals with the logical rather than with the chronological order of the decrees. By logical is meant that although the entire decree is one thought in the mind of God, the principle of cause and effect is involved.

5. The sovereignty of God and the free will of man coexist by divine decree. The omniscience of God decreed everything simultaneously, and not by stages. The input into the decrees includes two categories of decision and self-determination.

a. The decisions of the sovereignty of God exist in two categories ("on a ROM chip programmed in heaven in eternity past"):

(1) Category efficacious, or those things directly wrought by God.

(2) Category permissive, where God appointed certain things to be done by secondary causes or the volition and actions of man, (entered on a prom chip). Man's thoughts, actions, motives, and decisions are read by God, but never altered by God. No event is directly effected or caused by the decrees. For the decree itself provides in every case that the events shall be effected by causes acting in a manner consistent with the nature of the event in question. …

See*: Divine Decree(s) of God

What are infralapsarianism, sublapsarianism, and supralapsarianism?

https://www.gotquestions.org/lapsarianism.html

Excerpt:

Answer: These three theological terms, discussed among Calvinist thinkers, deal with God's predestination of certain individuals to be saved. The term lapsarian is related to the English word lapse; mankind's fall into sin was a "lapse" in that it was a "slip" or a "falling" from their original state of innocence. The focus of infralapsarianism (infralapsarian), sublapsarianism (sublapsarian), and supralapsarianism (supralapsarian) is sequence—the order in which God determined things to happen. In what order did God create humanity, allow the fall, elect some to salvation, and provide salvation for humanity? Ultimately, these are issues that we are incapable of fully grasping. It does not truly matter what order God decreed what to occur. What truly matters is that God created humanity, humanity sinned, and God has provided salvation through Jesus Christ.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Infralapsarianism ("after the lapse") puts God's decrees in the following order: (1) God decreed the creation of mankind, (2) God decreed mankind would be allowed to fall into sin through their own self-determination, (3) God decreed to save some of the fallen, and (4) God decreed to provide Jesus Christ as the Redeemer. Infralapsarianism focuses on God allowing the fall and providing salvation. This is by far the majority Reformed (or Calvinistic) view.

Sublapsarianism ("under the lapse") is very similar to infralapsarianism, putting God's decrees in the following order: (1) God decreed to create human beings, (2) God decreed to permit the fall, (3) God decreed to provide salvation sufficient to all, and (4) God decreed to choose some to receive this salvation. The only difference between infralapsarianism and sublapsarianism is whether God first decreed to provide salvation through Jesus Christ and then chose some to be saved, or vice-versa.

Supralapsarianism / antelapsarianism ("before the lapse") puts God's decrees in the following order: (1) God decreed the election of some and the eternal condemnation of others, (2) God decreed to create those elected and eternally condemned, (3) God decreed to permit the fall, and (4) God decreed to provide salvation for the elect through Jesus Christ. Supralapsarianism focuses on God ordaining the fall, creating certain people for the sole purpose of being condemned, and then providing salvation for only those whom He had elected.

GotQuestions finds infralapsarianism to be the most biblical position. We do not believe the Bible portrays God as decreeing the fall and creating people for the sole purpose of eternal condemnation. Ultimately, though, the answers to the lapsarian issue are best left up to God. Instead of worrying or arguing over when God decreed what, our concern should be on proclaiming the gospel of Jesus Christ to all who need to hear it.

Recommended Resources: Chosen But Free, revised edition: A Balanced View of God's Sovereignty and Free Will by Norm Geisler and The Potter's Freedom by James White

Lapsarian view & Problem of Evil (Discussion Forum)

https://www.puritanboard.com/threads/lapsarian-view-problem-of-evil.80138/

See*: Divine Decree(s) of God

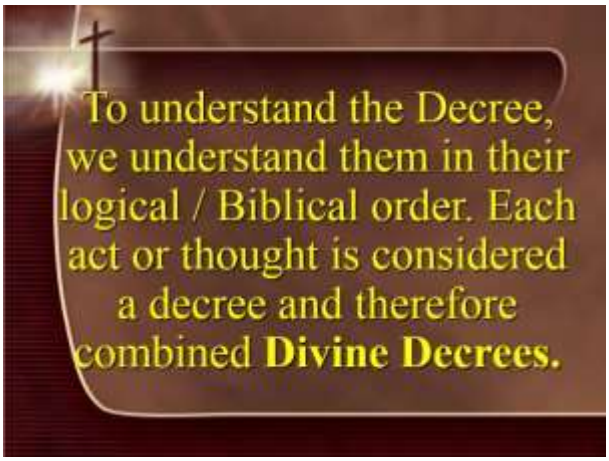
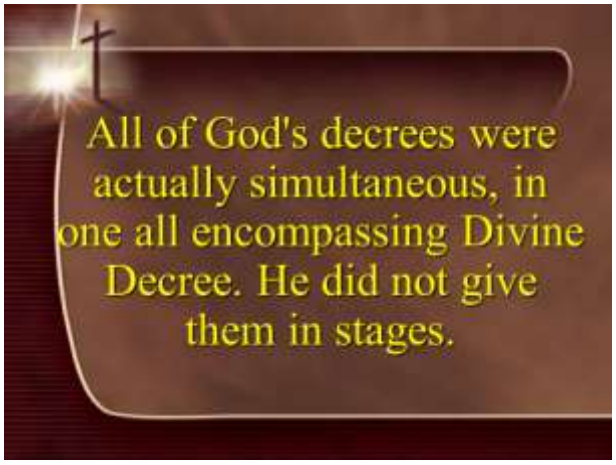
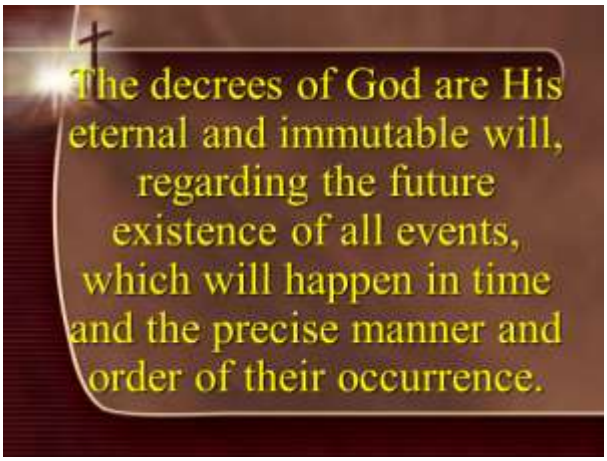
 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



The Divine Decree of God



http://www.gracedoctrine.org/Audio%20Tapes/08-049.ppt [PPT]



Excerpt: (read left-to-right and then down)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Note: Depending on your perspective, there are three main or as many as six views regarding the order of the decrees.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Doctrine of Divine Decree(s)

http://dikaosune.com/documents/TheDoctrineoftheDivineDecree2.pdf [PDF]

Excerpt:

The Divine Decree of God refers to his eternal [always existed], holy [having perfect integrity], wise [application of omniscience to creation] and sovereign purpose. God simultaneously comprehended all things that ever were or ever would be. He comprehended every event that would ever take place, along with its causes and interaction with other events, and he knew in eternity past every decision mankind would ever make.

God knew simultaneously in eternity past everything that would happen in human history [the thoughts, actions, and decisions of each and every person]. Because our understanding is limited, we perceive these things only in partial aspects and logical relations that come from Scripture. Therefore, mankind classifies the Decree as being plural [Decrees], but in reality, there is only one Decree.

The term 'Divine Decree' is an attempt to gather into one designation that which the Scriptures refer to by various designations, such as Divine purpose, Ephesians 1:11, determinate counsel, Acts 2:23, foreknowledge, 1 Peter 1:2 cf 1:20, election, 1 Thessalonians 1:4, predestination, Romans 8:30, Divine will, Ephesians 1:11, and Divine good pleasure, Ephesians 1:9.

This is a very technical study, but it is very important to understand because it is a reminder that before man existed, God had us all personally in mind. This principle is discussed in Ephesians 1:3-6, Blessed [be] the God and Father of Our Lord Jesus Christ, Who has blessed us with every spiritual blessing in the heavenly [places] in Christ, just as He chose us in Him before the foundation of the world, that we would be holy and blameless before Him. In love, He predestined us to adoption as sons through Jesus Christ to Himself, according to the kind intention of His will, to the praise of the glory of His grace, which He freely bestowed on us in the Beloved.

…

The Decree is the all-inclusive will and purpose of God concerning all that ever was or ever will be – all of which originates totally within Himself. God is omniscient, so in one moment of time He knew everything that would ever take place. Our life hangs by a very fine thread; it exists for His glory and for His satisfaction, and this should cause all believers to take their calling and their election seriously.

The Decree of God was simultaneous and not determined in stages. However, due to the finite understanding of man, we must perceive aspects of the Decree in a logical and chronological progression. The Decree of God is efficacious, meaning that it determines all that ever was, all that is, and all that ever will be.

However, the Decree is viewed by man from two standpoints:

1. It is viewed from the standpoint of the word 'efficacious', which refers to that which is directly brought about by God from His sovereignty.

2. It is viewed from the standpoint of permissiveness, which refers to that which is appointed by God to be accomplished by secondary causes, or by the free will and action of agents [volition of man]. From this comes the concept that the sovereignty of God and the free will of man coexist in human history by Divine Decree.

…

The Decree of God is His eternal purpose according to the counsels of His own wisdom and sovereign will. He has programmed into the Divine Decree all that will ever come to pass regarding the function of the human race in history. In the Decree, the sovereignty of God and free will of man coexist in human history.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

There is another principle that comes out of this doctrine – the principle of precreation reality. All aspects of the Divine Decree were simultaneously known by the omniscience of God, and God also simultaneously decreed them. To appreciate the Divine Decree, one must understand the nature of omniscience as part of Divine essence. There are five aspects of the Divine Decree that are related to the purpose of election, and that were known simultaneously by the omniscience of God. In theology, these five aspects are known as the 'Five Elective Decrees'. From these comes the concept of Lapsarianism.

Lapsarianism is a theological term for a subject that deals with the logical order of the Divine Decree, a subject that is practical as well as phenomenal. Lapsarianism provides the logical environment as well as the logical order for the Five Elective Decrees. It also provides a place for the insertion of escrow blessings in each believer's portfolio of invisible assets. Remember that all aspects of the Divine Decree occurred simultaneously in the mind of God, but we need to sort them out logically in order to explain the invisible assets and their relationship to the predesigned plan of God for each one of us as Church-age believers. Logical order means that although the entire Decree is one thought in the mind of God, the principle of cause and effect is involved in human perception and human understanding.

The term Lapsarianism refers to the doctrine of the Divine Decree from the standpoint that man is a fallen being or creature. There are five schools of interpretation in the order and arrangement of the Five Elective Decrees…

The Doctrine of the Divine Decree(s)

https://gbible.org/tree-of-life-post/doctrine-divine-decree-lapsarianism/ (also downloadable as a PDF)

https://gbible.org/doctrines-post/doctrine-divine-decree/ (also downloadable as a PDF)

https://gbible.org/daily-message/doctrine-divine-decrees-part-11/ (also downloadable as a PDF)

Excerpts:

The principle of the pre-creation reality and lapsarianism. They are called in theology the five elective decrees.

Lapsarianism provides the logical environment as well as the logical order for the five elective decrees. It provides the place for the insertion of escrow blessings for every believer in the portfolio of invisible assets.

The term lapsarian refers to the doctrine of divine decrees from the standpoint that man is a fallen being or creature. There are five schools of interpretation in the order and arrangement of these five elective decrees. …

We are looking at the Doctrine of the Divine Decree.

First was our Definition:

The decree of God is His eternal (always existed), holy (perfect integrity), wise (the application of omniscience to creation), and sovereign purpose, comprehending simultaneously all things that ever were or will be in their causes, conditions (status), successions (interaction with others that leads to certain decisions), relations, and determining certain parts of their future.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The term decree of God appears in the singular, since God has but one all-inclusive plan. He sees all things at a glance. For convenience, the separate features of this plan may be called the decrees of God; but there should be no implication in this that the infinite understanding of God advances by steps. There is no possibility that the one plan, the decree, will be altered by omissions or additions. Nor is it true that God can have a particular purpose and have something go on in His universe that is unrelated. God sustains a distinct purpose concerning each aspect of His one intention.

…

Point 2. The decree of God is His eternal (always existed), holy (perfect integrity), wise (the application of omniscience to creation), and sovereign purpose, comprehending simultaneously all things that ever were or will be in their causes, conditions (status), successions (interaction with others that leads to certain decisions), relations, and determining their certain futurition.

As already stated the decree of God was simultaneously designed by Him, yet because of our own limitations we logically put His design in a logical order. This is the doctrine of lapsarianism.

Point 3: The order of the divine decrees (lapsarianism).

Of all the decrees, five of them are related to the purpose of God in election – the five elective decrees:

a. The decree to create.
b. The decree to permit the fall.
c. Unlimited atonement.
d. The decree to motivate through the deposit of escrow blessings.
e. The simultaneous decrees of election and predestination, and to apply salvation to those who believe in Christ.

Theologians, who have unfortunately had quite an influence on many Christians, have formulated other orders to lapsarianism. At first one thinks why study what is false? The false doesn't prove the truth. God does not attempt to prove Himself. The Bible says In the beginning God, period! But the false brings out more of the beauty of the truth. God's decree is a blinding bright light of brilliant beauty and the false concepts of man only make us appreciate it more.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Doctrine of Divine Decree

https://www2.gracenotes.info/topics/divine-decree.pdf [PDF]

Excerpt:

The Divine Decree.

1. This is the sum total of the expression of divine sovereignty in human history.

2. The classic definition comes from R.B. Thieme, Jr.: "The decree of God is His eternal (always existed), holy (perfect integrity), wise (the application of omniscience to creation), and sovereign purpose, comprehending simultaneously all things that ever were or will be in their causes, conditions (status), successions (interaction with others that leads to certain decisions), relations, and determining their certain futurition.

> a) This definition begins by expressing the source of the decrees. "Comprehending" refers to divine omniscience.
>
> b) The definition also expresses the attributes of God in terms of divine will in human history.
>
> c) The definition emphasizes that the omniscience of God knew simultaneously in eternity past everything that would happen in human history (the thought, action, and decision of every person in his life), furthermore, everything in relation to all of the things pertaining to it.

3. But has God given all the events in human history certain futurition? That is, did He decree everything beforehand? And if so, then how can man ever have free will? This is a very ancient question indeed, and one we will answer fully below.

4. Note this distinction: God has given the conditions of human history certain futurition. Not the events.

Divine Decree Effects

http://gracedoctrine.org/divine-decree-effects/

Excerpt:

We note the Doctrine of Positional Truth and the differences between our Retroactive Positional Truth [P.T.] and our Current Positional truth.

Retroactive P.T. is the backward looking analogy of our identification with our Lord Jesus Christ in relation to His completed work on the Cross. i.e., We have died to Sin and our Sin Nature.

Current P.T. is the forward looking analogy of our identification with our Lord Jesus Christ in relation to His Session, being seated at the right hand of the Father. i.e., By the Baptism of the Holy Spirit, we are royalty in the family of God with all of its privileges.

Both have been made possible because of the great Plan of God the Father, which is called in theology His Divine Decree. It is singular, because it is one all comprehensive thought and plan that has been with the Father for all of eternity. It means there is one comprehensive plan in which all things have their place and by which they proceed.

Yet, given our finite minds, it has been revealed to us in scriptures by the Spirit in logical order, which we then call Divine Decrees.

…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

But getting back to the order in which God Planned for man and His salvation, we need to rightly understand the Biblical order of God's great and gracious design. The order is found in what is called in theology "lapsarianism" which simply means, "one who believes in the fall of man."

Lapsarian includes five main points which are also called the Five Points of Calvinism. The order of these five points has been debated over the centuries, resulting in many having false doctrines and has settled into four camps, Supra, Infra, and Sub Lapsarianism along with Arminianism.

Infralapsarianism is the right order, which Scripture tells us, as we have just seen in Rom 8:29-30, by which God planned for the creation and salvation of all men.

…

The Correct Biblical Order of Lapsarianism is:

- God decreed the creation of all mankind with free will in the status of perfection to resolve the prehistoric angelic conflict.
- God decreed to permit the fall of mankind, through the function of his own self-determination, his own volition, as the extension of the angelic conflict into human history.

Angels had a fall, therefore man must have a fall to resolve the conflict. This duplicates Satan's fall and the subsequent existence of fallen angels.

- God decreed to provide eternal salvation for all mankind, under the doctrine of Unlimited Atonement.
- God is fair and provides judgment for sin for all members of the human race. God does not arbitrarily assign creatures to hell.

What is meant by unlimited atonement is that all sins in human history were imputed to Jesus Christ on the Cross and judged, so that Christ is the issue and not sins, 2 Cor 5:19; 1 Tim 4:10; Titus 2:11; 2 Peter 2:1; 1 John 2:2.

1 Tim 4:10, "For it is for this we labor and strive, because we have fixed our hope on the living God, who is the Savior of all men, especially of believers."

Titus 2:11, "For the grace of God has appeared, bringing salvation to all men."

1 John 2:2, "And He Himself is the propitiation for our sins; and not for ours only, but also for those of the whole world."

In Rom 5:6; 2 Cor 5:14-15; Heb 2:9, there is a Greek idiom used in these passages that means, "as a substitute for everyone without exception."

2 Cor 5:14-15, "For the love of Christ controls us, having concluded this, that one died for all, therefore all died; [15]and He died for all, so that they who live might no longer live for themselves, but for Him who died and rose again on their behalf."

Heb 2:9, "But we do see Him who was made for a little while lower than the angels, namely, Jesus, because of the suffering of death crowned with glory and honor, so that by the grace of God He might taste death for everyone."

- God decreed to leave the reprobate (Those who remain in spiritual death, because they reject Christ as Savior.) to their just condemnation.

All people who reach the point of volitional responsibility have equal opportunity to hear the gospel and believe in Jesus Christ; John 15:22; Rom 1:20ff; 11:22; Gal 3:22.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Rom 1:20, "For since the creation of the world His invisible attributes, His eternal power and divine nature, have been clearly seen, being understood through what has been made, so that they are without excuse."

- God decreed simultaneously in eternity past both election and predestination for believers only, Rom 8:29-30; Eph 1:4-6; John 15:16, 19; Mark 13:20.

Eph 1:4-6, "Just as He chose us in Him before the foundation of the world, that we would be holy and blameless before Him. In love [5]He predestined us to adoption as sons through Jesus Christ to Himself, according to the kind intention of His will, [6]to the praise of the glory of His grace, which He freely bestowed on us in the Beloved."

- The unbeliever is never predestined to hell, as signified by their names being blotted out of the book of life, Psa 69:28 Cf. Rev 3:5; 20:11-15

Psa 69:28, "May they be blotted out of the book of life and may they not be recorded with the righteous."

Rev 20:15, "And if anyone's name was not found written in the book of life, he was thrown into the lake of fire."

- God decreed to apply salvation to everyone who believes in Christ, as such, the decree to save the elect through faith alone in Jesus Christ alone, Eph 2:8-9.

Rom 5:1-21 also supports our understanding of God's Divine Decrees.

This is a complex chapter, so read it over several times and use a modern translation, too. Here Paul is explaining how it came to be that all men are sinners, and how it came to be that one Man's death could give an ungodly sinner a right standing before God.

- Please note, the repetition of the word "one" (12, 15-19 – eleven times).
- Also note the use of the word "reign" in (14, 17, 21).

When God looks upon the human race, He sees but two men, Adam and Christ.

Every human being is either "in Adam" and lost, or "in Christ" and saved; there is no middle ground.

When Paul says in vs. 12 that "all have sinned," he means that all of us sinned in Adam when he sinned. We are identified with him as the "head" of the human race, and his sin is our sin, his death is our death.

Paul's argument in vs. 12-14 goes like this: "We all know that a man dies if he disobeys God's law. But there was no law from Adam to Moses, yet men died! We know that Adam died because he disobeyed a divine law; but the generations from Adam to Moses did not have such a law to disobey. Then death must be from another cause, and that cause is Adam's sin. Because we are born "in Adam," we inherit his sin and condemnation. But in His grace, God has given a "Last Adam," a new "Head" who has by His life and death undone all that Adam did in his sin."

In verses 15-20, we have several interesting comparisons:

Vs. 15-16 – The Offense vs. the Free Gift:

Adam's offense brought condemnation and death, while the free gift of God's grace brings justification and life.

Vs. 17 – Death vs. Life:

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Death reigned as king because of Adam, but now believers reign in life, (right now, not only in the future), through Christ, and have abundant life!

Vs. 18 – Condemnation vs. Justification:

Adam's sin plunged the human race into condemnation; Christ's death brings right standing with God. Adam hid from God; in Christ we have free access to God!

Vs. 19 – Disobedience vs. Obedience:

Adam disobeyed God and made us all sinners; Christ obeyed God, and through faith in Him, we are made righteous.

Vs. 20 – Law vs. Grace:

God did not give the Law to save mankind, but rather to reveal sin. But God's super-abounding grace met the demands of the Law when Christ died, and then supplied what the Law could not supply; salvation from sin.

The whole transaction is summarized in vs. 20; in the new creation, 2 Cor 5:17, being "in Christ."

- Sin no longer reigns, grace does!
- Death does not reign, life does!

And we reign in life! "Christ…has made us kings and priests to God," Rev 1:5-6.

Rev 1:5-6, "And from Jesus Christ, the faithful witness, the firstborn of the dead, and the ruler of the kings of the earth. To Him who loves us and released us from our sins by His blood— [6]and He has made us to be a kingdom, priests to His God and Father—to Him be the glory and the dominion forever and ever. Amen."

Now, the important question is this: Am I "in Adam" or "in Christ"?

If I am "in Adam," then sin and death reign over my life and I am under condemnation.

If I am "in Christ," then grace reigns and I can reign in life through Christ, and sin no longer has me in its slavery, the theme of Romans chapter 6.

In Rom 5:6-11, Paul teaches substitution, Christ died for us on the cross. But in 5:12-21, he goes further and teaches identification, believers are in Christ and can live in victory over sin.

And all of this was made possible because of God the Father's Divine Decree.

The Two Adams Contrast as Follows:

- The first Adam was made from the earth, but the Last Adam (Christ) came from heaven, 1 Cor 15:47.
- The first Adam was the king of the old creation, Gen 1:26-27, while the Last Adam is King-Priest over the new creation, 2 Cor 5:17.
- The first Adam was tested in a perfect garden and disobeyed God, while the Last Adam was tested in a terrible wilderness and obeyed God; and in the Garden of Gethsemane, He surrendered His will to God.
- The disobedience of the first Adam brought sin, condemnation, and death upon the human race, but the obedience of the Last Adam brought righteousness, salvation, and life to all who will believe.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

- Through the first Adam, death and sin reign in this world, 14, 17, 21; but through the Last Adam, grace reigns, vs. 21, and believers can "reign in life," vs. 17.

The OT is "the book of the generations of Adam", Gen. 5:1-2, and ends with the word "curse," Mal. 4:6.

The NT is "the book of the generation of Jesus Christ," Mat 1:1, and ends with "no more curse," Rev 22:3.

The paradise of Genesis that Adam lost is restored in Revelation through the Cross of Christ.

The Doctrine of Divine Decrees

http://makarios-online.org/notes/doctrine/Divine%20Decrees%202-08.doc [MS Doc]

The Doctrine of Divine Decree(s)

http://www.lakeeriebiblechurch.org/doctrine/html/DIVINE_DECREE.htm

John MacArthur: Does the Doctrine of the Divine Decrees Eliminate Human Will?

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=r2cIofN67U8 [Video] (2010)

https://www.ligonier.org/learn/conferences/tough-questions-christians-face-2010-national/does-the-doctrine-of-the-divine-decrees-eliminate/ [Video]

https://www.gty.org/library/sermons-library/GTY163/Does-the-Doctrine-of-Divine-Decree-Eliminate-Human-Will [Text]

The Eternal Decrees of God - Dr. Martyn Lloyd-Jones Sermon

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=3M0El7VawdU [Audio]

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Theopedia: Order of Decrees

(Note: This is referencing the “God’s Order of Decrees” charts by B. B. Warfield on the following pages) http://www.theopedia.com/order-of-gods-decrees

Excerpt:

The order of God's decrees, according to the Westminster Shorter Catechism, is "...His eternal purpose, according to the counsel of His will, whereby, for His own glory, He has fore-ordained whatsoever comes to pass." In discussing the order of decrees, we are referring to the logical relationship of the various aspects of God's one eternal purpose regarding the creation, predestination and salvation of man. The primary interest in the decrees of God usually relates to the understanding of divine predestination or divine election and its place in God's plan of redemption.

A discussion of the logical relation of divine decrees is valuable because it helps clarify and distinguish various theological positions regarding God's plan of redemption. It is especially helpful in understanding the differences between Calvinism, Arminianism, and Pelagianism, as well as the variations thereof.

First, it should be emphasized that the decrees of God are understood as one single eternal intention; not an order of succession in His plan either in time or deliberation. As A. A. Hodge has stated, "The question as to the Order of Decrees is not a question as to the order of acts in God decreeing, but it is a question as to the true relation sustained by the several parts of the system which He decrees to one another," (Outlines, p. 230). In other words, it has to do with the logical relationship between creation, predestination, and redemption established by the eternal purpose of God?

The chart below presents five selected schemes and their respective differences regarding the order of decrees, (adapted from Plan, p. 23). The subsequent discussion will proceed from right to left, beginning with the Pelagian view.

The Order of Decrees

Views: Supralapsarian Infralapsarian Amyraldian Arminian Semi-Pelagian Pelagian

To create mankind To elect some to eternal life and the rest to eternal separation To permit the fall of man To permit the fall of man - physical and moral deterioration Gift of free will whereby each may do all that is required of him To permit the fall of man To elect some to eternal life, leaving the rest to their just deserts The atonement of Christ - where all men are made savable, with salvation conditioned on individual faith. The atonement of Christ - where satisfaction is made for all men and all are given sufficient grace to believe, if they will The atonement of Christ - to make possible the gift of sufficient grace and give this grace to all Gift of the law and gospel to illuminate the way and persuade men to walk in it. The atonement of Christ - where satisfaction is made for the elect thus securing their redemption To elect some to receive moral ability and the necessary grace to believe To predestine to eternal life those whom He foresaw would believe of their own free will Salvation of all who freely cooperate with this grace Gift of Christ to (expiate past sin and) set a good example The gift of the Holy Spirit to regenerate and sanctify the redeemed The gift of the Holy Spirit to sanctify believers Sanctification of all who cooperate with the sufficient grace Sanctification by cooperation with God's grace Acceptance of all who walk in the right way.

Pelagian view

This view is basically a naturalistic view of salvation as opposed to a supernaturalistic view. The primary issue between the naturalist and the supernaturalist may be summed up in one question: Does man save himself or does God save him? In its purity, Pelagianism affirms that all the power exerted in saving man is native to man himself. It is basically a salvation by works mentality that continues to show up in various forms today.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Pelagianism denies that human nature has been corrupted by sin, and hence maintains that every infant comes into the world in the same condition as Adam before the Fall. Man thus has a free will and the ability to justify himself before God. St. Augustine was successful in having Pelagianism condemned by the church at the council of Ephesus in the year 431.

Semi-Pelagian view

Semi-Pelagianism is only a mild improvement over blatant Pelagianism. Like Pelagianism, it is a naturalistic view of salvation that has man saving himself with God's help. According to this view, man is not by nature totally depraved, but does suffer a physical and moral deterioration resulting from the Fall. In this view, man has retained his natural free will and the ability to improve on the grace God has provided to all.

Like Pelagianism before it, Semi-Pelagianism was condemned at the Council of Orange in 529 in favor of a moderate Augustinian view. Even though the sovereignty of God's grace in salvation was upheld by Augustinianism to this point, compromises made at the Synod of Orange left an incipient semi-Pelagianism which was eventually revived and accepted by the church at large during the middle ages.

Arminian view

Biblical Christianity was revived in the 16th century Protestant Reformation. However, it didn't take long after the Reformation for some of the same theological issues that Augustine faced to resurface, e.g. the sovereign grace of God versus the free will of man. This is not surprising since variations of free will Semi-Pelagianism had become the accepted position of both the Eastern and Roman churches.

At the Synod of Dort, 1618–1619, the Reformed churches of the day officially condemned what was perceived as the revived Semi-Pelagianism of the Dutch Remonstrants in favor of a strict Calvinistic position as expressed in the Belgic and Helvetic Confessions. Although officially rejected, this view continued to exist and grow in the Protestant churches under the name of Arminianism from Jacob Arminius, 1560–1609, whose teaching formed the basis of the Remonstrants' position.

Arminianism sees itself as a fundamental improvement over the Pelagian and Semi-Pelagian views in that it is supernaturalistic, attributing the primary work of salvation to God at all points. However, it maintains that by virtue of God's universal prevenient grace all men have a free will and the ability to savingly respond to God. It also maintains that predestination is based on God's divine foreknowledge, where foreknowledge is erroneously equated with foresight.

Arminianism is "universalistic" since in its view God does no more for any man than He does for all. This reduces to the point where the deciding factor in salvation is in man himself, which thus approaches Semi-Pelagianism where man saves himself with God's help. Reformed theologians therefore see a rather gray line that distinguishes Arminianism from Semi-Pelagianism.

Amyraldian view

Amyraldism developed historically following the Synod of Dort as a compromise between Calvinism and the early Arminianism by giving up what was perceived as some of the harshness of Calvinism. The Amyraldian view, named after French Theologian Moses Amyraut, 1569-1664, is associated with Calvinism because it retains a particularistic element by acknowledging God's distinguishing grace in the election of individuals.

The logic the of Amyraldians, however, places divine election after the decree to provide an atonement. This makes the atonement universal in nature and the application of the atonement particular in nature through divine election. This view is sometimes referred to as Four-Point Calvinism since it gives up the Calvinist doctrine of limited atonement in favor of a universal atonement. It is also known, perhaps more descriptively, as Hypothetical Redemptionism. Although Amyraldianism may be a recognizable form of Calvinism because it retains the principle of particularism in election, it is not necessarily a good form of Calvinism. According to B. B. Warfield, "it is a logically inconsistent and therefore unstable form of Calvinism. For another more important reason, it turns away from a substitutionary atonement, which is as precious to the Calvinist as his particularism," (Plan, p. 98).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

This view maintains that Christ died for all men alike, making all men savable, with actual salvation conditioned on individual faith. Then God, seeing that no one would respond because of their depravity, chose (or elected) some to receive the grace to believe. Some see this as inconsistent, for how is it possible to contend that God gave His Son to die for all men alike and equally, and at the same time to declare that when He gave His Son to die, He already fully intended that His death should not avail for all men equally, but only for some which He would select.

Looking now at the chart, the primary characteristic of the Amyraldian scheme is the placement of election after the atonement. However, opponents contend that Scripture indicates Christ came in order to execute the purpose of election. He came to die for and give eternal life to as many as the Father had given Him. See John 10:15 and 17:2, 9. If this point is true, then the decree to elect some of mankind should necessarily precede the decree to provide an atonement. The Amyraldian scheme assumes the reverse to be true.

Infralapsarian view

This term comes from the Latin. Infra means 'subsequent to' or 'below' and lapsus means 'fall'. This pertains to the placement of divine election in the order of decrees with respect to the Fall of man. In the case of Infralapsarianism, election is logically after the Fall.

Infralapsarianism recognizes that election has to do specifically with salvation. It maintains that the principle of particularism, in the sense of distinguishing grace, belongs to the sphere of God's plan of redemption. Therefore, Infralapsarians place election at the head of those decrees that look to salvation and subsequent to the decrees of creation and the Fall. In the order of thought, election falls subsequent to the decrees of creation and the Fall because these refer to all men alike, since all men are certainly created and all men have certainly fallen. Likewise, election falls prior to the decrees of redemption and its application because it is just as certain that all men are not redeemed and all men are not saved.

The Infralapsarian view is that of historic Calvinism (the heart of Reformed Theology). According to Warfield, this is the only view that is self consistent and consistent with the facts of Scripture.

John Calvin said in the final edition of the his Institutes, "No one who wishes to be thought religious dares simply deny predestination, by which God adopts some to hope of life, and sentences others to eternal death. But our opponents, especially those who make foreknowledge its cause, envelop it in numerous petty objections. We indeed, place both doctrines in God, but we say that subjecting one to the other is absurd." Institutes III.21.5 (Translation Battles & McNeill)

Supralapsarian view

Supra basically means 'prior to' or 'above'. Supralapsarianism thus puts God's decree to elect some to eternal life prior to His decree to permit the Fall. This view is usually associated with High Calvinism and is sometimes improperly called Hyper-Calvinism. A variation of Supralapsarianism places the decree to elect prior even to the decree to create man. This view thus holds that God's distinguishing grace is the primary means by which He brings glory to Himself, and therefore makes it His foremost concern.

The question raised between the Supra- and Infra-lapsarian views boils down to this: Does God discriminate between men in order to save some, or does He save some in order to discriminate between men? Or, as Warfield phrased it: "Is God's motive an abstract desire for discrimination so that He may have some variety in His dealings with men?… Or, is the motive that moves Him an unwillingness that all men should perish in their sins?" (Plan, p.19).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

While there have been logical arguments articulated for the Supra-views, opponents contend there is little scriptural support. They argue that the language of Scripture indicates the elect are chosen from a mass of fallen, sinful humanity, not an innocent (or uncreated) mass. Therefore, election should be viewed as logically subsequent to the Fall. See also John 15:19 and Romans 11:5–7. Scripture also declares that the elect are chosen unto sanctification and to the sprinkling of the blood of Christ. They must therefore have been regarded as guilty and defiled by sin when they were chosen. See 1 Pet. 1:2, and Eph. 1:4–6.

Summary

Calvinists give a predominate place to God's predestination and election as applied to individual men. Consequently, the doctrine of unconditional election, which is typically seen as the trademark of Calvinism, shows up in the first three columns of the chart. Although the Amyraldian view is considered a hybrid, nevertheless it is considered a brand of Calvinism because it does hold to an "unconditional" election.

In looking at the chart as a whole and tracking the doctrine of unconditional election, it is noted that the placement of election finds it's highest point in the first column with the Supralapsarian view, notably prior to the Fall of man. In the second column we have Infralapsarianism, representing a low or common Calvinist position, where election has moved down a level so that it now follows the decree to permit the Fall. As explained earlier, this seems to be the most biblical view. In the third column, Amyraldianism has moved election down another position so that it now comes after the decree to provide an atonement.

In the next column we see Arminianism, where God's unconditional election has been replaced with a predestination where God chose unto salvation those whom He foresaw would believe of their own free will. Here the salvation of men is no longer dependent on God but dependent on man himself. God has done His part, now man must do his part by believing in Christ of his own free will. Arminianism is perhaps the most popular scheme in professing Christianity today.

The last two columns represent naturalistic views which were historic predecessors of Arminianism. Here we see no hint of divine election at all, rather we see God providing salvation to those who merit it through their own works. Once you leave Amyraldianism, which still has its own inherent weaknesses, you have God doing no more for any man than He does for all men. What this means is that nothing that God and Christ have done can save us unless we add something to it. According to these views, the determining factor in salvation is man himself, which is contrary to Calvinism and the Reformed tradition.

Before proceeding, see*: Lapsarianism

See the "Order of Decrees" charts (several versions of the the same chart) by B.B. Warfield on the following several pages…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Lapsarianism – Order of Decrees (by B. B. Warfield)

Archive for the 'Infralapsarianism' Category

https://turretinfan.wordpress.com/category/infralapsarianism/

http://turretinfan.blogspot.com/2008/04/warfields-famous-chart-on-plan-of.html

Supernaturalistic									Naturalistic
Evangelical						Sacerdotal
Particularistic			Universalistic
Consistently Particularistic		Inconsistently Particularistic
Supralapsarian	Infralapsarian	Amyraldian	Lutheran	Wesleyan	Pure Universalistic	Anglican	Roman	Orthodox Greek	Remonstrant	Pelagian
Election of some to eternal life with God.	Permission of Fall — guilt, corruption and total inability.	Permission of Fall — corruption, guilt and moral inability.	Permission of Fall — guilt, corruption and total inability.	Permission of Fall — guilt, corruption and total inability.	Permission of Fall.	Permission of sin.	Permission of Fall — loss of supernatural righteousness.	Permission of Fall — loss of original righteousness, involving loss of knowledge of God and proneness to evil.	Permission of Fall — (physical) deterioration (followed by moral).	Gift of free will by virtue of which each may do all that is required of him.
Permission of Fall — guilt, corruption and total inability.	Election of some to life in Christ.	Gift of Christ to render salvation possible to all.	Gift of Christ to render satisfaction for the sins of the world.	Gift of Christ to render satisfaction for the sins of the world.	Predestination of all to life.	Gift of Christ to make satisfaction for the sins of all men.	Gift of Christ to offer satisfaction for all human sins.	Gift of Christ to reconcile sinful mankind with God.	Gift of Christ to render gift of sufficient grace possible.	Gift of the law and gospel to illuminate the way and persuade to walk in it.
Gift of Christ to redeem the elect and ground offer to all.	Gift of Christ to redeem his elect and ground offer to all.	Election of some for gift of moral ability.	Gift of means of grace to communicate saving grace.	Remission of original sin to all and gift to all of sufficient grace.	Gift of Christ to expiate the sin of all.	Establishment of Church as living agent for communicating God's sufficient grace.	Institution of the Church and the sacraments, to apply satisfaction of Christ.	Establishment of the Church "for the continual supply of the benefits of the cross."	Gift of sufficient (suasive) grace to all.	Gift of Christ to (expiate past sin and to) set good example.
Gift of the Holy Spirit to save the redeemed.	Gift of the Holy Spirit to save the redeemed.	Gift of the Holy Spirit to work moral ability in the elect.	Predestination to life of those who do not resist the means of grace.	Predestination to life of those who improve sufficient grace.	Gift of the Spirit to apply the expiation of Christ to all.	Communication of this grace through the sacraments as indispensable channels.	Application of satisfaction of Christ through sacraments, under operation of second causes.	Instruction, justification and edification through the ordinances of the Church.	Salvation of all who freely co-operate with this grace.	Acceptance of all who walk in right way.
Sanctification of all the redeemed and regenerated.	Sanctification of all the redeemed and regenerated.	Sanctification by the Spirit.	Sanctification through the means of grace.	Sanctification of all who cooperate with sufficient grace.	Salvation of all.	Salvation through the sacrament of baptism imparting life and of the Eucharist nourishing it.	Building up in holy life of all to whom the sacraments are continued.	Building up in grace through the seven sacraments.	Sanctification by co-operation with grace.	Continuance in right-doing by voluntary effort.

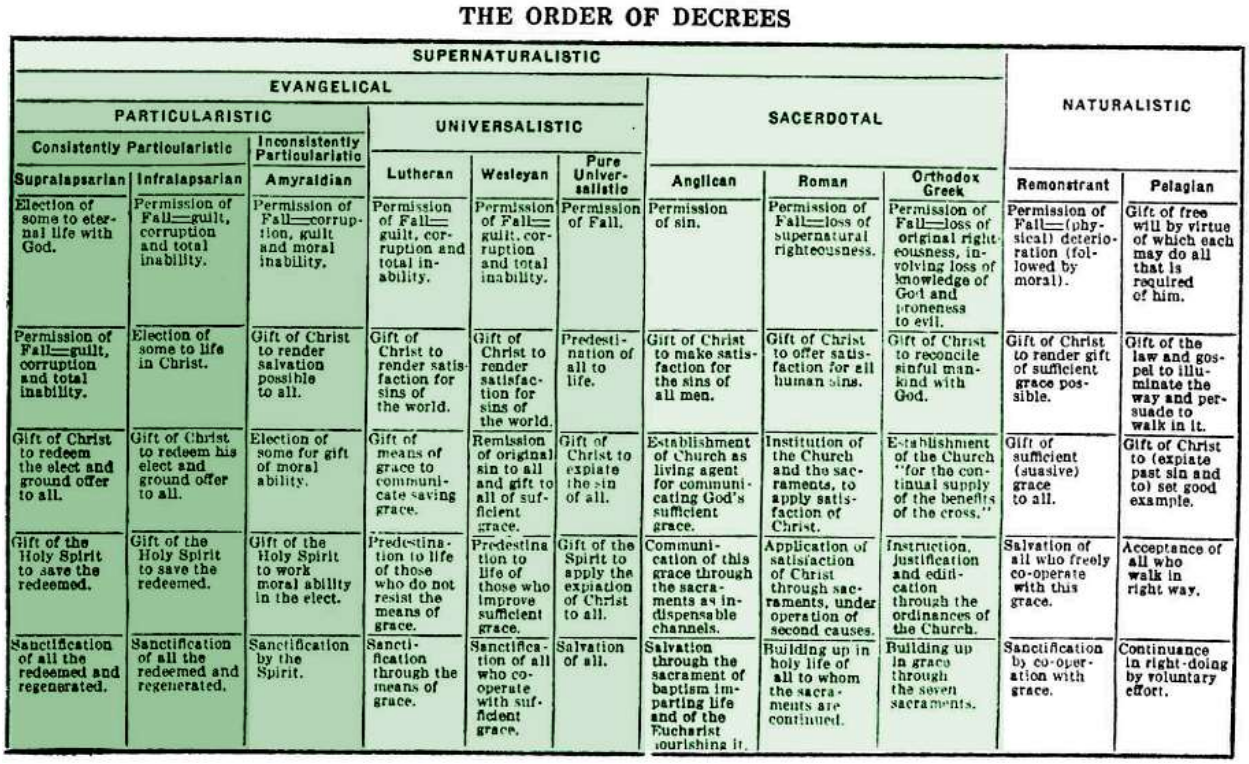
See next page for larger view…

Why Did God Create The Tree Of Good And Evil If He Knew Adam And Eve Would Eat From It? (http://calvarybible.org/)

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=5T6qKHDMxjw [Video]

Bible does not tell us, but there are three main views:
Supralapsarianism, Intralapsarianism, Sublapsarianism

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



Supernaturalistic								Naturalistic
Evangelical				Universalistic		Sacerdotal
Particularistic
Consistently Particularistic		Inconsistently Particularistic
Supralapsarian	Infralapsarian	Amyraldian	Lutheran	Wesleyan	Pure Universalistic	Anglican	Roman	Orthodox Greek	Remonstrant	Pelagian
Election of some to eternal life with God.	Permission of Fall — guilt, corruption and total inability.	Permission of Fall — corruption, guilt and moral inability.	Permission of Fall — guilt, corruption and total inability.	Permission of Fall — guilt, corruption and total inability.	Permission of Fall.	Permission of sin.	Permission of Fall — loss of supernatural righteousness.	Permission of Fall — loss of original righteousness, involving loss of knowledge of God and proneness to evil.	Permission of Fall — (physical) deterioration (followed by moral).	Gift of free will by virtue of which each may do all that is required of him.
Permission of Fall — guilt, corruption and total inability.	Election of some to life in Christ.	Gift of Christ to render salvation possible to all.	Gift of Christ to render satisfaction for the sins of the world.	Gift of Christ to render satisfaction for the sins of the world.	Predestination of all to life.	Gift of Christ to make satisfaction for the sins of all men.	Gift of Christ to offer satisfaction for all human sins.	Gift of Christ to reconcile sinful mankind with God.	Gift of Christ to render gift of sufficient grace possible.	Gift of the law and gospel to illuminate the way and persuade to walk in it.
Gift of Christ to redeem the elect and ground offer to all.	Gift of Christ to redeem his elect and ground offer to all.	Election of some for gift of moral ability.	Gift of means of grace to communicate saving grace.	Remission of original sin to all and gift to all of sufficient grace.	Gift of Christ to expiate the sin of all.	Establishment of Church as living agent for communicating God's sufficient grace	Institution of the Church and the sacraments, to apply satisfaction of Christ.	Establishment of the Church "for the continual supply of the benefits of the cross."	Gift of sufficient (suasive) grace to all.	Gift of Christ to (expiate past sin and to) set good example.
Gift of the Holy Spirit to save the redeemed.	Gift of the Holy Spirit to save the redeemed.	Gift of the Holy Spirit to work moral ability in the elect.	Predestination to life of those who do not resist the means of grace.	Predestination to life of those who improve sufficient grace.	Gift of the Spirit to apply the expiation of Christ to all.	Communication of this grace through the sacraments as indispensable channels.	Application of satisfaction of Christ through sacraments, under operation of second causes.	Instruction, justification and edification through the ordinances of the Church.	Salvation of all who freely co-operate with this grace.	Acceptance of all who walk in right way.
Sanctification of all the redeemed and regenerated.	Sanctification of all the redeemed and regenerated.	Sanctification by the Spirit.	Sanctification through the means of grace.	Sanctification of all who cooperate with sufficient grace.	Salvation of all.	Salvation through the sacrament of baptism imparting life and of the Eucharist nourishing it.	Building up in holy life of all to whom the sacraments are continued.	Building up in grace through the seven sacraments.	Sanctification by co-operation with grace.	Continuance in right-doing by voluntary effort.

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Pathogenicity of Rationalistic Calvinism

http://postbarthian.com/2015/07/11/george-hunsinger-on-the-pathogenicity-of-rationalistic-calvinism/

Excerpts:

THE ORDER OF DECREES

SUPERNATURALISTIC									NATURALISTIC
EVANGELICAL						SACERDOTAL
PARTICULARISTIC			UNIVERSALISTIC
Consistently Particularistic		Inconsistently Particularistic
Supralapsarian	Infralapsarian	Amyraldian	Lutheran	Wesleyan	Pure Universalistic	Anglican	Roman	Orthodox Greek	Remonstrant	Pelagian
Election of some to eternal life with God.	Permission of Fall—guilt, corruption and total inability.	Permission of Fall—corruption, guilt and moral inability.	Permission of Fall—guilt, corruption and total inability.	Permission of Fall—guilt, corruption and total inability.	Permission of Fall.	Permission of sin.	Permission of Fall—loss of supernatural righteousness.	Permission of Fall—loss of original righteousness, involving loss of knowledge of God and proneness to evil.	Permission of Fall—(physical) deterioration (followed by moral).	Gift of free will by virtue of which each may do all that is required of him.
Permission of Fall—guilt, corruption and total inability.	Election of some to life in Christ.	Gift of Christ to render salvation possible to all.	Gift of Christ to render satisfaction for sins of the world.	Gift of Christ to render satisfaction for sins of the world.	Predestination of all to life.	Gift of Christ to make satisfaction for the sins of all men.	Gift of Christ to offer satisfaction for all human sins.	Gift of Christ to reconcile sinful mankind with God.	Gift of Christ to render gift of sufficient grace possible.	Gift of the law and gospel to illuminate the way and persuade to walk in it.
Gift of Christ to redeem the elect and ground offer to all.	Gift of Christ to redeem his elect and ground offer to all.	Election of some for gift of moral ability.	Gift of means of grace to communicate saving grace.	Remission of original sin to all and gift to all of sufficient grace.	Gift of Christ to expiate the sin of all.	Establishment of Church as living agent for communicating God's sufficient grace.	Institution of the Church and the sacraments, to apply satisfaction of Christ.	Establishment of the Church "for the continual supply of the benefits of the cross."	Gift of sufficient (suasive) grace to all.	Gift of Christ to (expiate past sin and to) set good example.
Gift of the Holy Spirit to save the redeemed.	Gift of the Holy Spirit to save the redeemed.	Gift of the Holy Spirit to work moral ability in the elect.	Predestination to life of those who do not resist the means of grace.	Predestination to life of those who improve sufficient grace.	Gift of the Spirit to apply the expiation of Christ to all.	Communication of this grace through the sacraments as indispensable channels.	Application of satisfaction of Christ through sacraments, under operation of second causes.	Instruction, justification and edification through the ordinances of the Church.	Salvation of all who freely co-operate with this grace.	Acceptance of all who walk in right way.
Sanctification of all the redeemed and regenerated.	Sanctification of all the redeemed and regenerated.	Sanctification by the Spirit.	Sanctification through the means of grace.	Sanctification of all who co-operate with sufficient grace.	Salvation of all.	Salvation through the sacrament of baptism imparting life and of the Eucharist nourishing it.	Building up in holy life of all to whom the sacraments are continued.	Building up in grace through the seven sacraments.	Sanctification by co-operation with grace.	Continuance in right-doing by voluntary effort.

B. B. Warfield's famous "The Order of Decrees" chart from The Plan of Salvation is figured above. I've colorized the chart so that the darkest swim lanes are those most endorsed by B. B. Warfield (and most exemplifying Rationalistic Calvinism.)

B. B. Warfield devised this famous "Orders of Decree" chart in his small book, The Plan of Salvation. Warfield's endorses only the "Consistently Particularistic" plans for salvation that include the Supralapsarianism and Infralapsarianism swim lanes in the chart. Warfield believes all the Reformed Creeds are more-or-less Infralapsarian, but Supralapsarian is not explicitly excluded as an orthodox option by these numerous sixteenth and seventeenth century Reformed Creeds. Warfield places the "Consistently Particularistic" columns in juxtaposition to all other forms of Calvinism and Christianity listed in the swim lanes (with those increasing in heterodoxy to the right). Amyraldism (or as Warfield calls it, "Hypothetical Universalism") is listed within the "Particularistic" parent swim lane, however, Warfield discretely dismissed Amyrauldism as an "a logically inconsistent form of Calvinism and therefore an unstable form of Calvinism."

What is Rationalistic Calvinism, and how does it differ from non-Rationalistic Calvinism (i.e. Evangelistic Calvinism)? B. B. Warfield is only a footnote to this question, that Hunsinger aims to answer in Reading Barth With Charity. Although Hunsinger is not directly addressing Warfield (or his chart) in the following quotations, these quotations explain the difference between Rationalistic Calvinism and Evangelical Calvinism…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

…Rationalistic Calvinism tended to reason from the concepts to the subject matter. It argued that certain beliefs must be true because they followed logically from certain abstract propositions. In that sense the subject matter was dictated by the concepts.

Evangelical Calvinism, on the other hand, tended to do the opposite by reasoning from the subject matter to the concepts. It refrained from what it regarded as a false application of logical rigor because of constraints imposed by the subject matter, even if they had to be left in tension.

Rationalistic Calvinists, for example, argued rigorously from double predestination to limited atonement, whereas at least some Evangelical Calvinists resisted those conclusions. Instead they gave priority to scriptural affirmations that Christ died for all, even though they could not resolve all the remaining perplexities. The difference between the two forms of Calvinism was to a significant degree, the difference between deductive and inductive reasoning.

Infographic: The Order of Decrees denominational comparison chart

http://apostles-creed.org/confessional-reformed-christian-theology/soteriology/infographic-the-order-of-decrees-denominational-comparison-chart/

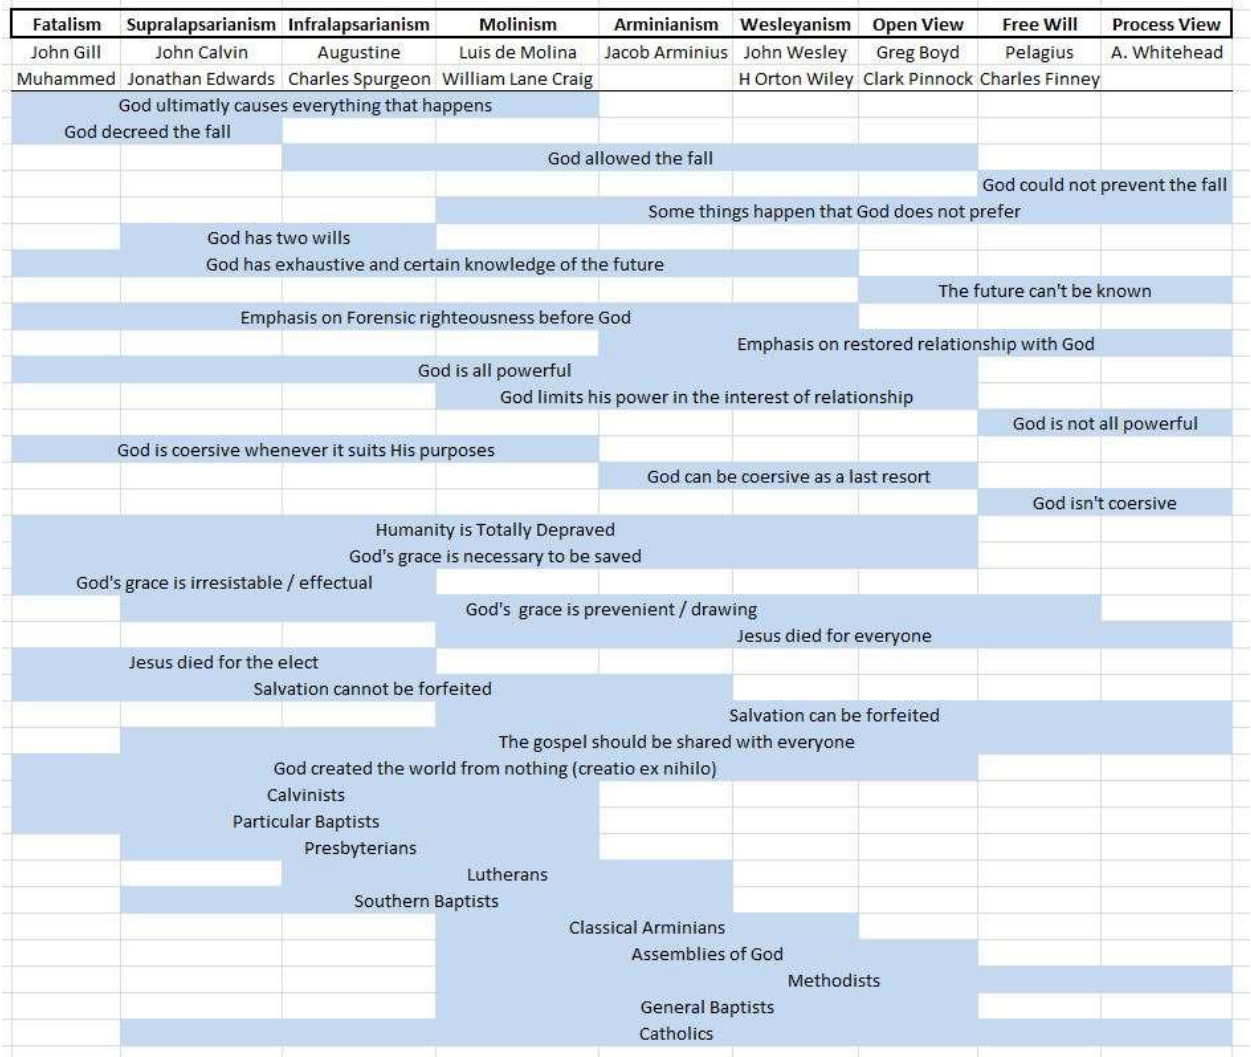
 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Context Retreat Diagrams – Eternity, Foreknowledge, Election; Systems
http://lifeonthehill.server300.com/wp-content/uploads/2014/06/Context%20Retreat%20Diagrams.pdf

Hyper Supralapsarianism	Strong (Extreme) Infralapsarianism	Moderate Sublapsarianism	Arminian Wesleyanism
(1) Decree to elect some and reprobate others	(1) Decree to create all	(1) Decree to create all	(1) Decree to create all
(2) Decree to create both the elect and the non-elect	(2) Decree to permit the Fall	(2) Decree to permit the Fall	(2) Decree to permit the Fall
(3) Decree to permit the Fall	(3) Decree to elect some and pass others by	(3) Decree to provide salvation for all	(3) Decree to provide salvation for all
(4) Decree to provide salvation only for the elect	(4) Decree to provide salvation only for the elect	(4) Decree to elect those who believe and pass by those who do not	(4) Decree to elect based on the foreseen faith of believers
(5) Decree to apply salvation only to the elect	(5) Decree to apply salvation only to the elect	(5) Decree to apply salvation only to believers (who cannot lose it)	(5) Decree to apply salvation only to believers (who can lose it)

Important Creeds and Councils of the Christian Church (by C.R. Biggs) (2014)
http://thirdmill.org/articles/cr_biggs/cha_biggs.CofC.12.pdf [PDF] (Reformed) (Thirdmill.org)

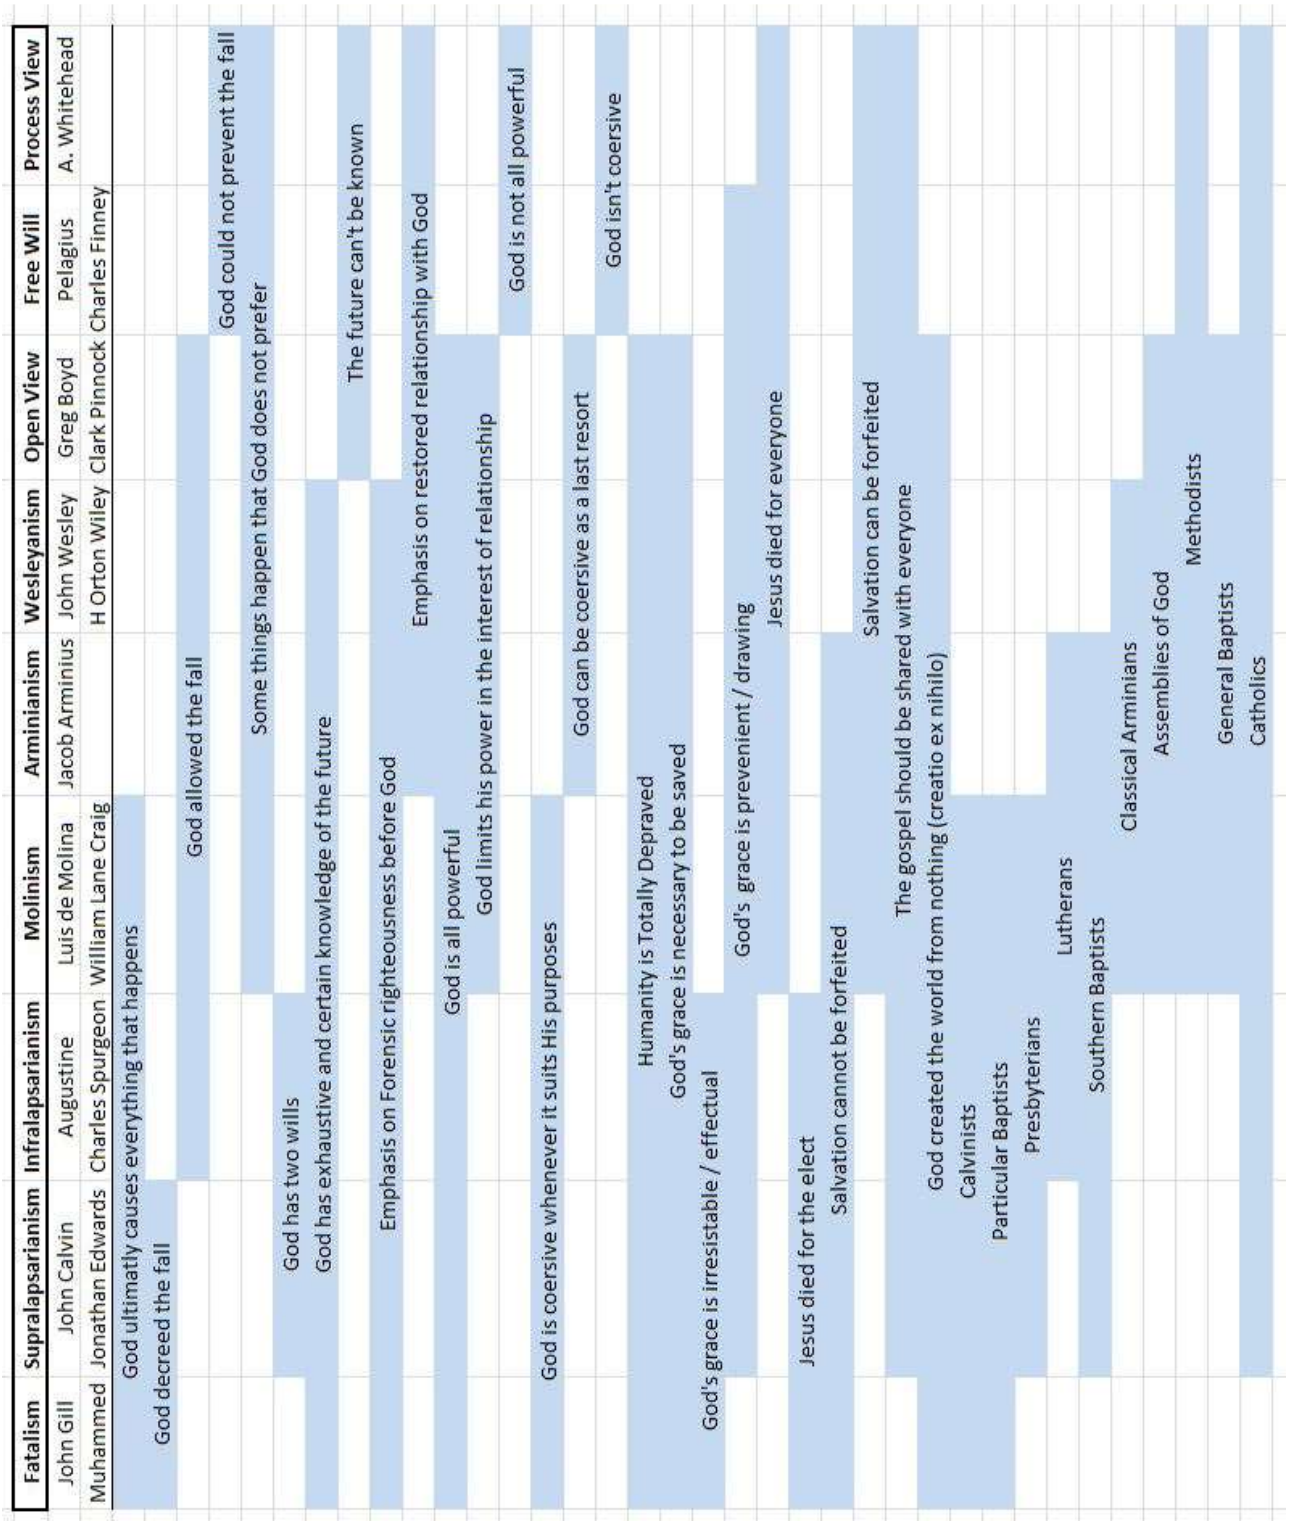
NOTE: For issues related to Heaven and life after death, as well as covering related topics and including different perspectives (including those by N.T. Wright) - see my separate "Reference Notes on Heaven"



Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

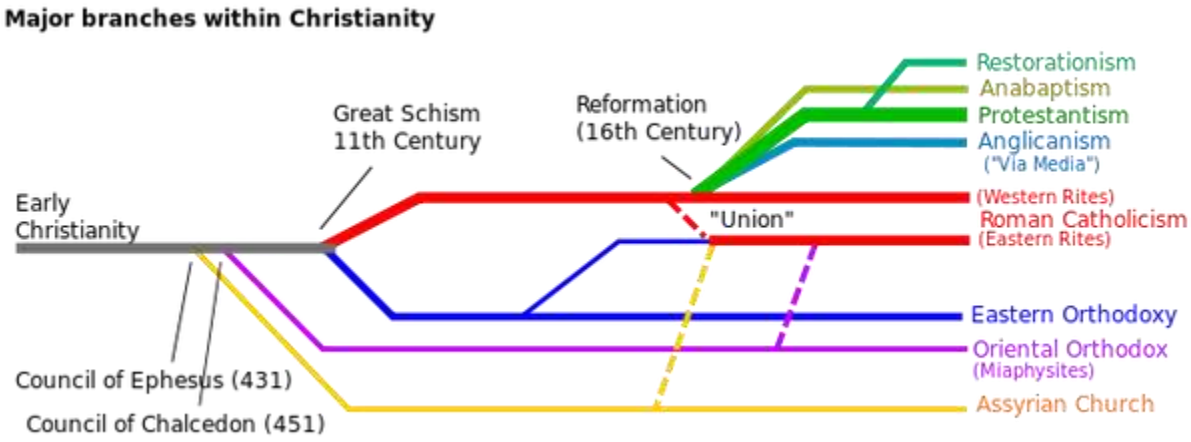
Theological Spectrum Chart

https://wesleyanarminian.wordpress.com/2012/09/11/theological-spectrum-chart/



Excerpt:

Here's a chart …that shows some of the differences and commonalities of various theological viewpoints as they relate to Calvinism and Arminianism. It's not perfect, and is only intended to give a general idea of what the theologies emphasize as important.



See larger view on next page…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

What are some of the major differences between world Christian denominations?
https://www.quora.com/What-are-some-of-the-major-differences-between-world-Christian-denominations

continued…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Source: https://qph.ec.quoracdn.net/main-qimg-de6f28a26eebf34f80778dee4a5856cf-c

Religious Authority	Catholic	Orthodox	Lutheran	Reformed/ Presbyterian	Anglican/ Episcopalian	Methodist/ Wesleyan	Baptist
Creeds & Confessions	Many, but special focus on Apostles' Creed and Nicene Creed (Catechism, 2nd ed.)	Nicene Creed is "the authoritative expression of the fundamental beliefs of the Orthodox Church." (GOAA)	Apostles' Creed, Nicene Creed, Athanasian Creed, Augsburg Confession, Formula of Concord (ELCA) (LCMS)	Apostles' Creed, Nicene Creed, Westminster Confession	"We understand the Apostles' creed as the baptismal symbol, and the Nicene creed as the sufficient statement of the Christian faith." (CofE: Art. 7)	Nicene and Apostles' (UMC)	"We have tended to avoid embracing prepared creeds or other statements that might compromise our obligation to interpret Scripture as individuals within the community of faith under the guidance of the Holy Spirit." (ABC)
Sacred Text	Holy Bible (Old Testament, New Testament, and Apocrypha)	Holy Bible (Old Testament, New Testament, and Apocrypha)	Holy Bible (Old Testament and New Testament only). Apocrypha can be "useful" reading and can help to increase one's faith. (ELCA)	Holy Bible (Old Testament and New Testament only) (PCUSA)	Holy Bible (Old Testament and New Testament only). Apocrypha used only for edification (Art. 7). Tradition and reason assist interpretation. (ECUSA)	Holy Bible (Old Testament and New Testament only)	Holy Bible (Old Testament and New Testament only)
Inspiration & Inerrancy of the Bible	"The books of Scripture firmly, faithfully, and without error teach that truth which God, for the sake of our salvation, wished to see confided to the Sacred Scriptures." (Catechism, 2nd ed.)	"God's inspiration is confined to the original languages and utterances, not the many translations." (GOAA) "While the Bible is treasured as a valuable written record of God's revelation, it does not contain wholly that revelation." (GOAA)	Inspired and inerrant. (LCMS) Inspired but not inerrant. (ELCA)	The Bible is inspired. "For some, that means the Bible is inerrant. For others, it means that even though the Bible is culturally conditioned and not necessarily factual or even always true, it breathes with the life of God." (PCUSA)	The OT and NT contain all things necessary for salvation. (CofE)	Inspired and inerrant in original manuscripts, "and have been transmitted to the present without corruption of any essential doctrine." (WC)	"written by men and divinely inspired. It has God for its author, salvation for its end, and truth, without any mixture of error, for its matter." (SBC) "the final authority and trustworthy for faith and practice." (ABC) Inspired by God, written by humans (MB)
Sources of Doctrine	Bible, church fathers, popes, bishops; Seven Ecumenial Councils; Trent, Vatican, and other Catholic councils	"The Scriptures, both the Old and New Testaments, along with Sacred Apostolic Tradition." Seven Ecumenical Councils. (GOAA)	Bible alone	"Our standards of belief are to be found in the Bible and in the Church's historic Confession of Faith." (CofS)	"The Scriptures and the Gospels, the Apostolic Church and the early Church Fathers, are the foundation of Anglican faith and worship."	"The Holy Scripture contains all things necessary to salvation." (UMC)	"We hold the Scriptures, the Old and New Testaments, as our final authority. We accept no humanly devised confession or creed as binding." (ABC)

continued…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Holy Spirit	The Holy Spirit proceeds from the Father and from the Son (Catechism, 264)	"The Holy Spirit is the Third Person of the Holy Trinity, Who proceeds from the Father only." (GOAA)	"The Holy Spirit - as person - might be said to be one of God's 'three faces'... In carrying on Jesus' earthly ministry, the Spirit's ongoing work is to reveal truth, give life and strengthen faith." (ELCA)	"We trust in God the Holy Spirit, everywhere the giver and renewer of life." (PCUSA)	"This is the aspect of God that is at work in the world, that inspires us, that speaks to us and strengthens us to do the often difficult work that our faith demands of us." (ECUSA)	"The Holy Ghost, proceeding from the Father and the Son, is of one substance, majesty, and glory with the Father and the Son, very and eternal God." (UMC Art. 4) "We believe in the Holy Spirit who proceeds from the Father and the Son, and is... truly and eternally God." (WC)	"The Holy Spirit is the Spirit of God, fully divine. He inspired holy men of old to write the Scriptures. Through illumination He enables men to understand truth." (SBC)
Angels	"The existence of the spiritual, non-corporeal beings that Sacred Scripture usually calls "angels" is a truth of faith. The witness of Scripture is as clear as the unanimity of Tradition... They are personal and immortal creatures, surpassing in perfection all visible creatures." (Catechism 328-330)		"Most ELCA Lutherans will agree that belief in angels is a non-issue. We simply accept that they are in the Bible and may well be part of the realities of heaven that we will not fully understand in this life." (ELCA)	"Angelology has not traditionally been emphasized in the Reformed churches..." Calvin affirmed their existence as "celestial spirits," but doubted idea of personal guardian angels. (PCUSA)
Satan and Demons	Demons are fallen angels who can never repent. Satan is a pure spirit, powerful and evil, but limited by God's providence. (Catechism 391-95)		Some ELCA Lutherans understand Satan to be a very real being, others view Satan metaphorically. (ELCA)				Historic Baptists believe in the literal reality and actual personality of Satan... though they certainly do not perceive him as the caricatured red figure with horns, a long tail, and a pitchfork. (BaptistPillar.com)
Mary	Mary had no original sin, remained free of sin throughout her life, is "Mother of God" and the new Eve. (Catechism, 508-10) Bodily assumption into heaven instead of death. (Catechism, 966)	Theotokos ("God-Bearer"). Honored highly, but no immaculate conception or bodily assumption into the heavens. (GOAA)		Mary should not be regarded as a mediator between man and God, but she should be honored as "God-bearer" and a model for Christians. (PCUSA)		Mary was the mother of Jesus and one of his disciples. (UMC) Virgin birth affirmed, immaculate conception denied. (UMC)

continued…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Sin & Salvation	Catholic	Orthodox	Lutheran	Reformed/ Presbyterian	Anglican/ Episcopalian	Methodist/ Wesleyan	Baptist
Human Nature	"Being in the image of God the human individual possesses the dignity of a person, who is ... capable of self-knowledge, of self-possession and of freely giving himself and entering into communion with other persons. And he is called by grace to a covenant with his Creator, to offer him a response of faith and love that no other creature can give." (Catech 357)	Humanity was created in the image and likeness of God. "'Image' is... intellect, emotion, ethical judgment, and self-determination. ... The 'likeness' is the human potential to become like God." (GOAA)	"The first man was not brutelike nor merely capable of intellectual development, but ... God created man in His own image." (LCMS)		"We are part of God's creation, made in the image of God... [which] means that we are free to make choices: to love, to create, to reason, and to live in harmony with creation and with God." (BCP 845)
Body & Soul	"The unity of soul and body is so profound that one has to consider the soul to be the "form" of the body...; spirit and matter, in man, are not two natures united, but rather their union forms a single nature." (Catech 365)	Material and spiritual realities are "closely bound together. The icon is an example of this belief.... Human life and human fulfillment are inextricably bound to both the physical and the spiritual dimensions of human existence." (GOAA)	Soul is not an independent entity but the "life principle" of the self, which is a psycho-physical organism. (ELCA)
Original Sin	Only a tendency to sin. "Luther and Calvin taught as their fundamental error that no free will properly so called remained in man after the fall of our first parents... and that man in all his actions sins." (CE)	"In fallen humanity [the image of God] remains part of human nature, albeit darkened, wounded, and weakened." (GOAA) An unnatural condition of human life that ends in death. (EB)	Adam's offspring "have lost the original knowledge, righteousness, and holiness, and thus all men are sinners already by birth, dead in sins, inclined to all evil, and subject to the wrath of God." (LCMS)	"No one of us is good enough on our own--we are all dependent upon God's goodness and mercy... from the kindest, most devoted churchgoer to the most blatant sinner." (PCUSA)		"Man is very far gone from original righteousness, and of his own nature inclined to evil, and that continually." (UMC) "Humans are very far gone from original righteousness, and by nature are continually inclined to evil." (WC)
Free will	Free to do good or evil. "God has endowed us with reason and free-will, and a sense of responsibility." (CE)	"Man is truly free only when he is in communion with God; otherwise he is only a slave to his body or to the world." (Encyc. Britannica) At the Fall, "man's will became blurred, but did not disappear." (GOAA)	Free only to do evil	Free only to do evil Presbyterians believe it is through the action of God working in us that we become aware of our sinfulness and our need for God's mercy and forgiveness." (PCUSA)		"We have no power to do good works, pleasant and acceptable to God, without the grace of God by Christ preventing us." (UMC)	"The freedom to respond to the Lordship of Christ in all circumstances is fundamental to the Christian gospel and to human dignity." (ABC)
Atonement (Purpose of Christ's Death)	"By his death and Resurrection, Jesus Christ has "opened" heaven to us." (Catech 1026) Also created merit that is shared with sinners through sacraments.	"Christ enlightens the minds of the people, purifies their hearts and frees their wills from the bondage of the devil. Christ became flesh to make reconciliation for the sins of the people." (GOAA)	"The purpose of this miraculous incarnation of the Son of God was that He might become the Mediator between God and men, both fulfilling the divine Law and suffering and dying in the place of mankind. In this manner God reconciled the whole sinful world unto	"Through Jesus' death and resurrection God triumphed over sin." (PCUSA)		Christ " truly suffered, was crucified, dead, and buried, to reconcile his Father to us, and to be a sacrifice, not only for original guilt, but also for actual sins of men. " (UMC) "Christ's offering of himself...	Christ "honored the divine law by His personal obedience, and in His substitutionary death on the cross He made provision for the redemption of men from sin." (SBC)

continued…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

God & Spirits	Catholic	Orthodox	Lutheran	Reformed/ Presbyterian	Anglican/ Episcopalian	Methodist/ Wesleyan	Baptist
The Trinity	"The mystery of the Most Holy Trinity is the central mystery of the Christian faith and of Christian life." (Catechism, 261)	"The fundamental truth of the Orthodox Church is the faith revealed in the True God: the Holy Trinity of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost." (GOAA)	"We teach that the one true God, is the Father and the Son and the Holy Ghost, three distinct persons, but of one and the same divine essence, equal in power, equal in eternity, equal in majesty, because each person possesses the one divine essence." (LCMS)	"We trust in the one triune God." (PCUSA)	"There is only one God, the Creator of the universe, who has three 'persons' or aspects, inseparable yet unique parts of the whole." (ECUSA)	"With Christians of other communions we confess belief in the triune God—Father, Son, and Holy Spirit." (UMC) "We believe in the one living and true God... Within this unity there are three persons of one essential nature, power and eternity--the Father, the Son and the Holy Spirit." (WC)	"The eternal triune God reveals Himself to us as Father, Son, and Holy Spirit, with distinct personal attributes, but without division of nature, essence, or being." (SBC)
Nature of Christ	"The Son is consubstantial with the Father, which means that, in the Father and with the Father the Son is one and the same God." (Catechism, 262)	"Christ was born with two perfect natures, the divine and human, as God-man." (GOAA)	"True God, begotten of the Father from eternity, and also true man, born of the Virgin Mary, [and] Lord." (Sm. Catech.)	Christ is "fully human, fully God." (PCUSA)	"Jesus is the complete revelation of God to us, and as such, Jesus, although fully human with us, is also fully God—fully divine." (ECUSA)	"The Son, who is the ... very and eternal God, of one substance with the Father, took man's nature... so that two whole and perfect natures... were joined together in one person, never to be divided; whereof is one Christ, very God and very Man." (UMC, Art. 2)	Christ "is the One Mediator, fully God, fully man, in whose Person is effected the reconciliation between God and man." (SBC)
Resurrection of Christ	"The mystery of Christ's resurrection is a real event, with manifestations that were historically verified." (Catechism, 639)	"The Resurrection of Christ is considered by the Church to be the supreme declaration of faith." (GOAA)	"ELCA Lutherans believe that what history does is to demonstrate the disciples' faith in the resurrection. Their witness and testimony to Jesus' post-death appearances make it abundantly clear that the resurrection was a primary object of the apostolic proclamation from Christianity's very beginning." (ELCA)	Christ "died, was buried, and was resurrected by God. For Christians, this resurrection is God's most amazing miracle and proof that Jesus was indeed divine." (PCUSA)	"We believe that as a fully human person, Jesus died on the cross at Jerusalem, just as all humans die, yet death could not keep him, and so he was raised from the dead to life again." (ECUSA)	"Christ did truly rise again from the dead, and took again his body, with all things appertaining to the perfection of man's nature, wherewith he ascended into heaven." (UMC, Art. 3)

--- End Chart ---

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Christian Theology Through the Ages

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The [Greek] "Philosophy" of Paul and the Bible [Greek Philosophy]

The Early Life and Background of Paul the Apostle.

http://www.biblicaltheology.com/Research/WallaceQ01.html

Excerpt:

> The Apostle Paul, to the many Christians who have had the opportunity to do a cursory study of this remarkable 1st century icon of the primitive church, still remains a highly enigmatic figure, even though he did much of the writing of the New Testament. Paul, through no fault of his own, has not been given enough extant historical material that can be mined to give us a thorough analysis of this fascinating figure who has come to dominate much of the New Testament Theology embraced by Western culture.
>
> It is possible, however, to combine scriptural analysis and anthropological research, with extra-biblical source information to produce a reasoned analysis of the possible cultural milieu, education, and other environmental influences in the early life of Paul that helped to shape him into the man that was divinely called to shepherd the new church into its mission to all humanity. To the extent this is possible, the ultimate purpose of this paper is to shed additional light upon the early years of Paul, ending with a brief analysis of the effect of his upbringing on his theology.

Paul and Hellenistic Philosophy

https://fjmorgan.wordpress.com/2009/10/03/paul-and-hellenistic-philosophy/

Excerpt:

> There is a great deal in Paul's letters which seems to be interrelated with Hellenistic philosophical concepts…
>
> Paul was a native of Tarsus, a city on the Cilician plain in the southeastern corner of modern Turkey. As a Hellenistic city, Tarsus was originally settled by Greeks from Ionia and was deeply influenced by Greek culture, language, and institutions (Polhill 6-7). Paul's letters demonstrate that he was fluent in an educated style of Greek, and his citation of Hellenistic poets (1Co 15:33, Ac 17:28, Tit 1:12) points to the probability that Paul was the beneficiary of a formal Greek education (Polhill 10).
>
> According to Polhill, "Strabo wrote that Tarsus 'surpassed' Athens and Alexandria in its love for Philosophy" (8). While the degree of Hellenistic influence on Paul is a matter of debate among scholars, the sheer fact that he was reared in the Tarsian cultural milieu, makes it difficult to believe that Paul would not have been impacted by Hellenistic philosophy. At the very least he was familiar with the philosophical zeitgeist and was able to hold his own with Greek philosophers as evidenced by his interaction with the Stoics and Epicureans in Athens (Ac 17:16-34).

How did Paul's education help him spread the Gospel?

http://www.answers.com/Q/How_did_Paul%27s_education_help_him_spread_the_Gospel

Excerpt:

> Paul's education prepared him to be an effective speaker and gave him the knowledge to use a particular group's own cultural background as a starting point to show how Jesus fit in with their philosophy. For example, his extensive knowledge of the Torah and rabbinical writings allowed him to argue that Jesus was the fulfillment of Messianic prophesies. His knowledge of Greek culture and philosophy allowed him to point out that Jesus was the ideal towards whom their philosophers had been striving, and that in fact the Greeks had already been worshipping Him as "the unknown God" ... they just hadn't known his name. Both of these strategies won converts. Read Acts chapter 17 for more details.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

As usual mans pride shines through in is inability to understand that God did and does not need us to spread his word, It seems the smarter we think we are the dumber God knows we are. Pauls education is irrelevant. I heard a joke once about Hillary and Bill Clinton: They pulled up to a gas station and the attendant once dated Hillary. Bill laughed at her and said, "Wow, just think where you would have happened if you would have married him," and she laughed and said, "Ya, he could have been president and you could have been pumping gas." Turn off your pride, He spoke this universe into existence. Hello, where were you little man/woman.

Paul and the Greek Philosophers: An Apologetic

https://humblesmith.wordpress.com/2014/02/04/paul-the-greek-philosophers-an-apologetic/

The Bible, in Acts 17:16-34, tells of when the apostle Paul is in Athens and addresses Greek philosophers. This passage can be shown to give support for the Bible as accurate history.

Acts 17 has Paul speaking to the Epicurean and Stoic philosophers in a key meeting place, the Areopagus, a location which still exists in the ancient city. Many modern teachers, including Christians, make the mistake of thinking the ancient Epicurean and Stoic philosophers taught ideas which were similar to the modern words epicurean and stoic. However, the ancient philosophies taught different things than what the modern words mean.

Paul's speech shows a great knowledge of the teachings of these schools of philosophy, even to the point of showing Paul to be a scholar of note. The speech has Paul quoting ancient writer Epimenides in v.28 when he says ". . . for in Him we live and move and have our being" which is a direct quote from the poem Cretica. Paul takes this statement, which in the Greek poem is a statement about Zeus, and applies it to the one true God, the God of Israel. In the same verse Paul also quotes the Greek writer Aratus, in the poem Phaenomena, when Paul says "For we are also His offspring." So here we have Paul apparently quoting the Greek philosophers' own literature with ease, quotes that we can readily confirm today as accurate.

If we compare the teachings of the Epicureans and Stoics as documented in Frederick Copleston's classic work A History of Philosophy, we can conclude that Paul not only had an intimate knowledge of both schools of philosophy, but in his speech systematically refuted many of their major teachings. The following chart demonstrates what the philosophers taught with portions of Paul's speech in Acts 17: …

Did Paul Make a Fundamental Mistake in Athens? – Paul the Philosopher (Part I)

http://www.reclaimingthemind.org/blog/2010/04/did-paul-make-a-fundamental-mistake-in-athens-paul-the-philosopher-part-i/

Paul as a Culturally-Relevant Bridge-Builder: Paul the Philosopher (Part II)

http://www.reclaimingthemind.org/blog/2010/06/paul-as-a-culturally-relevant-bridge-builder-paul-the-philosopher-part-ii/

Paul, the New Socrates in Athens: Paul as Philosopher (Part III)

http://www.reclaimingthemind.org/blog/2010/09/paul-the-new-socrates-in-athens-paul-as-philosopher-part-iii/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Acts 17: Paul and the Greek Philosophers https://humblesmith.wordpress.com/2011/02/19/acts-17-paul-and-the-greek-philosophers/

Excerpt:

> In Acts chapter 17, the apostle Paul is in Athens. He ends up at the place where the Greek philosophers discuss and debate, and ends up giving a long speech to them. Acts tells us that Paul was addressing the Epicurean and Stoic philosophers.
>
> In the course of this speech, Paul starts with what the Greeks would understand, and eventually ends up with the gospel message, speaking of the resurrection of Jesus. He was successful, for Acts 17 tells us some became Christians during Paul's message.
>
> I did a study of the content of Paul's message in Acts 17, comparing Paul's message with what the ancient Epicurean and Stoics believed. Without going into tedious detail, the summary is this: Paul understood very well what the pagan philosophers taught, for in his speech, he systematically goes through the main teachings of both of these groups and uses Christianity to refute what they teach, point-by-point. Keep in mind that the Epicureans and Stoics did not teach the same things as what is meant by the modern definitions of the words "epicurean" and 'stoic"……which is a mistake made by many. The same man, Paul, who tells us to beware of philosophy, understood philosophy well enough to refute bad philosophy with the truth of scripture. Paul's message was surgically accurate, based on a knowledge of the truth and knowledge of the false philosophy.
>
> Paul's speech tells us that he understood very well what these philosophers believed. Paul even quotes a couple of their teachers in his sermon. Perhaps a surprise to some is the fact that in Acts 17 the Bible quotes non-Christian philosophers in an effort to give the gospel message to lost people.
>
> What can we learn from this? The Biblical pattern can be summarized as "start where they are." When we reach out to non-believers, we start at the point where they can understand, and then quickly move them to the message of the gospel.
>
> We should not expect non-Christians to understand Christian lingo, theology, mannerisms, etc. but rather we should adapt the container of our message to fit the culture where we're speaking. But the content of the message should never change: all people are sinners and separated from God. So God, through Jesus, paid the price for our separation, and gave us life by rising from the dead. Through faith in Jesus, we can have fellowship with God again, and Jesus is the only way of being saved from eternal separation from God.
>
> The questions all Christians should ask themselves are these: Am I reaching out to a lost world? Am I going out to Athens, or am I expecting Athenians to come to Me? When I speak to lost people, am I able to start where they are, then lead them to Jesus, the only true way? Am I able to follow Paul's example by knowing enough of the false teachings in the world, and enough of God's truth, to refute the error and present the truth?

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Paul and his use of Greek Philosophy

https://biblethingsinbibleways.wordpress.com/2013/07/14/paul-and-his-use-of-greek-philosophy/

Excerpt:

Out of the 27 books, epistles and letters that make up the New Testament, 13 have been authored by the Apostle Paul (This does not include the book of Hebrews which some believe he wrote). One of the most influential people in the 1st Century Church, a former Pharisee, he took the gospel or Good news of our Messiah to the Greek speaking world of his day. This was no easy task. The peoples of Rome, Corinth, Galatia, Ephesus, Phillipi, Colosse & Thessalonica which he wrote to, were all part of the Greek speaking world educated in Greek literature and philosophy, with their own gods, traditions and opinions.

If you have read Paul's epistles, inevitably, a thought such as "Why is Paul so hard to understand?" would have crossed your mind at some point. It is true that some of his letters are not that easy to read or understand. And interestingly, this has been the case even in his day, as we see Peter saying "… even as our beloved brother Paul also according to the wisdom given unto him hath written unto you; As also in all his epistles, speaking in them of these things; in which are some things hard to be understood, which they that are unlearned and unstable wrest, as they do also the other scriptures, unto their own destruction" (2Pet 3:15,16)

Today, I present to you some research into Paul's words and why we have such a hard time understanding most of it. As you will see listed below, Paul uses the words, ideas and Greek philosophy presented by such philosophers as Plato, Socrates, Aristotle, Seneca and many more intellectuals of his day, to help the people who he was talking to, better understand his teachings.

1Cor 15:33
Evil communications corrupt good manners.
Quoted from Thais, a work done by "Menander", a writer from the 3rd Century BC, who in turn is supposed to have quoted from another Scholar named "Euripides".

Titus 1:12
The Cretians are always liars, evil beasts, slow bellies.
In writing to Titus Paul quotes a description of the Cretans taken from "Epimenides". Paul calls Epimenides "one of themselves, a prophet of their own".

Acts 17:24-29
In Acts 17:18 Paul is encountered by Epicureans and Stoics. Paul's first sentence struck directly at the "Epicurean" theory (the origin of the world by mere coincidence and of atoms) and arrayed himself with the "Stoics" in their doctrine of the (Divine Wisdom and Providence creating and ruling all things). His speech is made up of words quoted from a Roman Stoic Philosopher called Lucius Annaeus Seneca as mentioned below.

Acts 17:24
Paul went on to say, "God dwelleth not in temples made with hands."
Seneca, the most prominent contemporary representative of Stoicism, had put their doctrine into these words, "The whole world is the temple of the immortal gods," and "Temples are not to be built to God of stones piled on high. He must be consecrated in the heart of every man."

Acts 17:25
Paul said, "Neither is God served by men's hands, as though he needed anything, seeing he himself giveth to all life, and breath, and all things."
Seneca put the same truth in this form: "God wants not ministers. How so? He himself ministereth to the human race."

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Acts 17:26-28a
Paul said, "God made of one every nation of men to dwell on all the face of the earth."
Seneca agrees, "We are members of a vast body. Nature made us kin, when she produced us from the same things and to the same ends."

Paul said, "God is not far from each one of us; for in him we live, and move, and have our being."
Seneca wrote, "God is at hand everywhere and to all men."; and again, "God is near thee ; he is with thee; he is within."

Acts 17:28b
Paul says, For we are also his offspring.
In Paul's speech at Athens, he quotes from "certain of your own poets".
The poet he is talking about is Aratus, and this is a line found in the Phaenomena of Aratus**.

Acts 17:29
Then Paul proceeded, "Being then the offspring of God, we ought not to think the godhead is like unto gold or silver or stone, graven by art or device of men."
Seneca parallels the thought again: "Thou shalt not form him of silver and gold: a true likeness of God cannot be molded of this material.

Gal 5:23b
Paul says, Against such there is no law.
Roman 2:14b
Paul says, Are a law unto themselves.
Paul's words are eerily familiar to Aristotle's saying of men eminent for wisdom and virtue, "Against such there is no law, for they themselves are a law,"

1Cor 9:24a
Paul says, "Know ye not that they which run in a race run all, but one receiveth the prize?
Plato says, "But such as are true racers, arriving at the end, both receive the prizes and are crowned".

Rom 7:22,23
Paul says, "But I see another law in my members, warring against the law of my mind, and bringing me into captivity to the law of sin which is in my members."
Plato says, "There is a victory and defeat – the first and best of victories, the lowest and worst of defeats – which each man gains or sustains at the hands not of another, but of himself; this shows that there is a war against ourselves – going on in every individual of us."

Phillip 3:19
Paul says, "Whose end is destruction, whose God is their belly, and whose glory is in their shame, who mind earthly things".
Plato gives a vivid description of those gluttonous and intemperate souls whose belly was their God, in Plato's work called "the Republic".

Rom 8:5
Paul says, "For they that are after the flesh do mind the things of the flesh;"
Gal 6:8
Paul says, "For he that soweth to his flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption"
Plato speaks of "to be carnally-minded was death" in Phaedo.

2 Cor 4:4
Paul says, "In whom the god of this world hath blinded the minds of them which believe not"
~~Plato speaks of "the God of this world blindeth the eyes of his votaries" in Theaetetus~~
In the book Paul and His Epistles – D.A. Hayes writes "Plato would have pictured for him the truth that the God of this world blindeth the eyes of his votaries, and Paul never could have forgotten the picture when he had once read it." – Theaet., 176; Rep., 7, 514

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

(Please note that the above point has been corrected as rightly pointed out by dear brother, Dan Angelov – my sincere apologies for misquoting it before) I wish to thank Angelov for re-checking the post and communicating this correction.

Php 1:21
Paul says, "For me to live is Christ, and to die is gain."
Plato says, "Now if death is like this, I say that to die is gain."

2Tim 4:6
Paul says, "I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand
To be with Christ, which is far better."
Plato says, "The hour of departure has arrived, and we go our ways, I to die and you to live. Which is better God only knows."

1Cor 13:12
Paul says, "For now we see through a glass, darkly, but then face to face."
Plato says, I am very far from admitting that he who contemplates existences through the medium of thought, sees them only "through a glass, darkly," any more than he who sees them in their working effects.

1Thess 5:15
Paul says, "See that none render evil for evil unto any man."
Plato says, Then we ought not to retaliate or render evil for evil to anyone, whatever evil we may have suffered from him.

1Cor 9:16
Paul says, "For necessity is laid upon me; yea, woe is unto me, if I preach not the gospel!"
Plato says, But necessity was laid upon me – the word of God I thought ought to be considered first.

Acts 14:15
Paul and Barnabas say, "We also are men of like passions with you".
Plato says, I am a man, and, like other men, a creature of flesh and blood, and not of " wood or stone," as Homer says. ????

2Cor 7:2
Paul says, "I speak because I am convinced that I never intentionally wronged anyone".
Plato says, "We have wronged no man; we have corrupted no man; we have defrauded no man."

Rom 12:4
Paul says, "For as we have many members in one body, and all members have not the same office".
Socrates says "To begin with, our several natures are not all alike but different. One man is naturally fitted for one task, and another for another."

Eph 1:22,23
Paul says, "And hath put all things under his feet, and gave him to be the head over all things to the church, Which is his body, the fullness of him that filleth all in all."
Plato says "First, then, the gods, imitating the spherical shape of the universe, enclosed the two divine courses in a spherical body, that, namely, which we now term the head, being the most divine part of us and the lord of all that is in us; to this the gods, when they put together the body, gave all the other members to be servants."

1Cor 12:14-17
Paul explains that "a body is not one single organ, but many. … Suppose the ear were to say,

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

'Because I am not an eye, I do not belong to the body', it does still belong to the body. If the body were all eye, how could it hear? If the body were all ear, how could it smell? But, in fact, God appointed each limb and organ to its own place in the body, as he chose."
Socrates asks Protagoras, "Is virtue a single whole, and are justice and self-control and holiness parts of it? … as the parts of a face are parts-mouth, nose, eyes and ears." Socrates then probes into the metaphor further by asking Protagoras if they agree that each part serves a different purpose, just as the features of a face do, and the parts make the whole, but each serves a different purpose–"the eye is not like the ear nor has it the same function."

1Co 12:25
Paul says "That there should be no schism in the body; but that the members should have the same care one for another. And whether one member suffer, all the members suffer with it; or one member be honored, all the members rejoice with it."
Socrates says, that the best-governed city is one "whose state is most like that of an individual man. For example, if the finger of one of us is wounded, the entire community of bodily connections stretching to the soul for 'integration' with the dominant part is made aware, and all of it feels the pain as a whole"

Paul's use of Greek Philosophy of his day and age, cannot be overlooked or dismissed. He used the words of intellectuals of his day to his advantage in taking God's word and the good news to the Greek speaking Gentile world. The evidence provided above cannot be passed off as mere coincidence. He wrote and spoke these words to a particular people who would have understood and would have been very familiar with the metaphors and ideas which he was using. One of the main reasons that we have such a hard time understanding Paul's words is that we are so much removed from the world Paul was living in, and talking to. The above verses are only a few I could find in my attempt in researching this subject. But I am sure that there are many more instances where Paul would have used Greek Philosophy to his advantage.

This study would be somewhat of a shock to some who depend on Paul's words alone as the epitome of Scripture. (This is not in anyway, an attempt to demean his writings or his work) Paul was and still is one of the greatest apostles of God. But as Peter said in 2Pet 3:15,16, "there are some things in his letters that are hard to understand". It is better for us to take this warning seriously, and not fall into the category of "ignorant and unstable people who distort Paul's teachings to our own destruction". We must always remember that God's Word cannot have confusion or disorder. Paul's words (The actual meaning of his words, and not what we read into it) cannot disagree with any other author in the Bible. His words have to co-exist with all of Scripture in harmony.

I hope this study has helped you to understand Paul, his letters and his ministry a bit better.

Works Cited:
The life and letters of Paul the Apostle – Lyman Abbott
Paul and His Epistles – D.A. Hayes
Paul the Apostle: At the Edge by Faith – Stuart H. Merriam

Saint Paul's Application of Greek Philosophy

http://www.virtueonline.org/saint-pauls-application-greek-philosophy

http://biblicalanthropology.blogspot.com/2014/12/saint-pauls-application-of-greek.html [Alternate Link]

"Christians often overlook Paul's application of Greek philosophy and miss some of the more subtle points of his theology."

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The "Conscience" According to Paul http://www.biblicaltheology.com/Research/HakhSB01.pdf [PDF]

"The Wisdom of Men": Greek Philosophy, Corinthian Behavior, and the Teachings of Paul https://rsc.byu.edu/archived/shedding-light-new-testament/4-wisdom-men-greek-philosophy-corinthian-behavior-and

The Greek Philosophers' Search for the Meaning of Life Illuminated by the Divine Revelation of Christian Theology (Catholic) http://www.agapebiblestudy.com/documents/Greek%20Philosophy%20and%20Christian%20Doctrine.htm

Is Colossians 2:8 a Warning against Philosophy? (includes Paul and Philosophy) http://www.equip.org/article/is-colossians-28-a-warning-against-philosophy

Yeshua Our Cornerstone by Paul (Rabbi Shaul)
http://elshaddaiministries.us/messages/notes/5771/20101227rabbishaul.pdf [PDF]
Covers Greek philosophy knowledge of Paul and history of Christians vs Jewish Believers http://www.elshaddaiministries.us/storefront/pdf/20091221hrc_repltheo.pdf [PDF]
Covers some of the same Greek philosophy information as well as the Torah, Replacement Theology

How to Obtain Wisdom from God (James 1:5-8)
https://bible.org/seriespage/lesson-2-how-obtain-wisdom-god-james-15-8 (MS doc and Audio available)

Excerpt:

> I was a philosophy major in college. "Philosophy" comes from two Greek words meaning, "the love of wisdom." But I discovered that worldly philosophers are not so much in love with wisdom as they are with their own wisdom! They are not so much interested in how to live wisely before God, whose existence they question or deny, but rather in showing how wise they are in being able to win arguments.
>
> Writing to those who took pride in the great Greek philosophers, Paul contrasted the so-called wisdom of this world with God's wisdom as seen in the cross of Christ (1 Cor. 1:18-30). He sarcastically asks (1:20-21), "Where is the wise man? Where is the scribe? Where is the debater of this age? Has not God made foolish the wisdom of the world? For since in the wisdom of God the world through its wisdom did not come to know God, God was well-pleased through the foolishness of the message preached to save those who believe."
>
> The point is, if you have not come as a sinner to the cross of Christ to obtain God's mercy through faith, you do not know God and thus you cannot obtain the wisdom that comes only from Him. But, how does God impart the wisdom that we need?

How much did Plato's The Republic influence the development of Christianity?
https://www.quora.com/How-much-did-Platos-The-Republic-influence-the-development-of-Christianity

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Worldview and Christo-Platonism http://danieltrainingnetwork.org/worldview-christo-platonism-what-is-the-gospel/

see also Randy Alcorn's: Christoplatonism [PDF] [Video];

Platonic Dualism: Neoplatonism, Christoplatonism

Platonism's Influence on Christian Eschatology [PDF]

The World of the Apostle Paul
https://probe.org/the-world-of-the-apostle-paul/

N.T. Wright and the Faithfulness of Paul: Part 3: Paul's Worldview
https://derekvreeland.com/2014/09/n-t-wright-faithfulness-paul-part-3-pauls-worldview/

The Disciples' Encounter with Worldview Evangelism
https://www.gci.org/evang/evang12

Paul and the Philosophers - Baylor University http://www.baylor.edu/content/services/document.php/239229.pdf [PDF]

See also*: Paul's Worldview / Worldviews / Greek Philosophy

Heresies, Controversies, and Schisms in the Early Church, Part I http://www.biblescholars.org/2013/05/heresies-controversies-and-schisms-in-the-early-church.html

(Includes discuss of Greek philosophy influences)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Greek Philosophy – Epicureanism, Platonism, Stoicism

Epicureanism
Stoicism
Platonism
Epicureanism vs Stoicism
Use by Paul

Ancient Political Philosophy
https://plato.stanford.edu/entries/ancient-political/

Hellenistic Philosophy
http://www.utm.edu/staff/jfieser/class/110/3-hellenistic.htm

http://www.philosophypages.com/hy/2w.htm

Cynicism, Skepticism, Epicureanism, and Stoicism http://forums.canadiancontent.net/philosophy-discussion/72426-cynicism-skepticism-epicureanism-stoicism.html

Excerpts:

Some people in Hellenistic society adhered to the school of philosophy called Cynicism, a school of thought some other philosophers saw as hardly worthy of the name of philosophy. The founder of Cynicism was Antisthenes, who was about forty when he watched Athens defeated in the Peloponnesian War. He was a former student of Socrates, and he witnessed the execution of Socrates. Like Plato, Antisthenes was disgusted with the world around him. He had grown tired of what he saw as the worthless quibbling of refined philosophy. He saw himself as a teacher, and he left the company of other philosophers to preach to people in market places, in a manner he thought they could understand. He told people that virtue demanded withdrawal from involvement with a world that was immoral and corrupt...

…In the Hellenistic times that followed the death of Alexander, a few philosophers adopted the thinking and style of Antisthenes and Diogenes. They wandered from place to place, and at town squares they discussed social conventions and simple virtues. It was with these Cynics that the word cosmopolitan was coined, a word used to signify that they belonged to no state. They advocated salvation from worry and conflict by what some in modern times would call dropping out. They were entertaining to listen to, but Cynicism would forever remain a small and barely influential movement. For most people the call to drop out made no sense: they were already barely able to feed and clothe themselves and their families. The Cynics were little interested in economic realities. Only a few could go about without working, living off what was provided by those who labored in the fields or at other occupations. For most who had to struggle to get by the Cynics must have appeared as much the intellectual babblers that Antisthenes thought other philosophers to be.

Another philosophy that focused on how one should live was Epicureanism. Like the Cynics, Epicureans believed it best to purge oneself of the appetite for power or fortune, and they too favored withdrawal from the corruptions of society. Nevertheless, they wished to keep the wealth and possessions that helped make life pleasant, and most Epicureans were people who had accumulated some wealth…

…Epicurus was influenced by the materialism of Democritus. He believed that humanity created its destiny without interference from capricious spirits. Religion, he complained, unnecessarily frightened people by describing them at the mercy of gods and demons. He escaped from the unpopularity of atheism by speaking of gods as if they were nature rather than nature's creators. The gods, claimed Epicurus, should be worshiped with neither fear nor hope. And do not fear death, he said, for death is but eternal sleep and the dead feel no pain or torment.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Epicurus addressed the ultimate question about life by claiming that life was worth living. He saw life as possibly joyous – if one had an adequate sensitivity to the world of beauty and good friendships, good health and freedom from drudgery. He believed in the pleasures of contemplation, physical beauty and attachments to others.

Epicurus believed that the driving force of life is the avoidance of pain. He believed that the essence of virtue is avoiding inflicting pain upon others. He believed that the avoidance of pain for oneself and for others should take precedence over the pursuit of pleasure. He advocated self-control to avoid painful consequences. Pleasure, he said, should be adjusted to the equilibrium in one's body and mind. Excessive devotion to the gratification of appetites, he said, produces misery rather than happiness and should therefore be avoided…

…Epicureanism was to be the avowed philosophy of Thomas Jefferson, who must have found Epicureanism compatible with the Deism popular in his day, which also placed God outside of human affairs. Jefferson was to describe Epicureanism as the most rational philosophical system of the ancients. And his Epicureanism was to find expression in his contribution to the American Declaration of Independence, in its phrase "pursuit of happiness."

The Stoics rejected Epicureanism, including the belief that one's purpose in life should be to seek happiness. The purpose in life, they held, was to serve God's plan.

At the heart of Stoicism was the phrase "thy will be done." The Stoics believed that God worked in mysterious ways, that humanity was able to see only a tiny portion of God's plan. They explained the existence of evil within this master plan as God exercising people for virtue.

Central to their ethics was the belief that people had to choose between God's purpose and error. The Stoics believed that people exercised virtue by freeing themselves from conceit, by adhering to a humility that would better open them to follow what God had destined for them. This included indifference toward worldly success, rank or status.

The founder of Stoicism was Zeno of Citium, who was seven years younger than Epicurus…

…The god of Zeno and the Stoics was a Supreme Being, a divine fire from which came all that exists in heaven and earth, a god the Greeks called Zeus. Stoics tried to explain various gods as one god. And they attempted to explain the myths of various religions as representations of universal truths.

Zeno believed that all humanity had a soul – a divine spark – that eventually returned to divine eternity. The universe, he believed, was in essence a manifestation of godly reason. He saw passion as detrimental to reason and therefore ungodly.

Seeing life as planned by God, Zeno and his followers believed in facing all circumstances with resignation. They believed that one should accept and compose oneself for whatever came one's way.

The Stoics believed that self-discipline was the starting point of virtue and necessary in their contemplation of God. They saw freedom as a state of mind. An individual, they believed, could be free whatever his circumstances, including imprisonment, if he contemplated God…

Among the Hellenized, where freedom to speak and variety in ideas was extensive, one more school of philosophy was bound to emerge. This was Skepticism. The founder of Skepticism was Pyrrhon, who, while campaigning as a soldier with Alexander, had come into contact with a great variety of conflicting beliefs. He saw contrary belief as a source of trouble in the world. He established himself as a teacher in the city of Elis, in the northwest of Peloponnesia. He argued that equally valid arguments could be made on either side of any question and therefore it was best to draw no conclusion about the nature of things. nd in rejecting conclusions, Pyrrhon was left with intuition and faith. In Skepticism some found justification for believing in their god or gods, and they practiced religion as insurance against damnation.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Not believing in conclusions, Pyrrhon believed that one should live according to one's circumstances and desires. What mattered, concluded Pyrrhon, was living well and living unperturbed. But the imperturbability that Pyrrhon sought eluded him. He made much money teaching his doctrine of Skepticism, and he spent much time attacking a philosopher named Arcesilaus, whom he believed had copied his ideas and was endangering his source of wealth. Arcesilaus revived Plato's academy in Athens and left it devoted to Skepticism and the refutation of Stoicism.

A few followers of Pyrrhon supported Skepticism by trying to demonstrate inconsistencies and contradictions in the conclusions of others. They examined the logic of Aristotle and concluded that people could not deduce their way to truth from a self-evident premise. They examined materialist philosophy and concluded that the senses were unreliable and an invalid source of knowledge.
The Skeptics were drawing conclusions about humanity's inability to draw conclusions, and they were viewing knowledge as absolute rather than as approximation.

See also* Platonism.

Greek Philosophy
Epicureanism
Stoicism
Platonism
Epicureanism vs Stoicism
Use by Paul

Philosophy Comparisons

	Aim	Means	Comments
Plato	A just or well-order soul	Each part of the soul doing its part well; reason rules…	Knowledge of the good is paramount; wisdom
Aristotle	Eudaimonia: happiness as a well ordered life as a whole	Virtues: character traits that are means between extremes…	Hierarchy of goods and necessities of good life; a whole life
Epicureanism	Eudaimonia: Ataraxia or mind and body free from disturbance	Moderate Hedonism: Prudent action and understanding of nature; avoid pain, moderate pleasure	Materialism and removal of irrational fear as cause of distrubances
Stocisim	Eudaimonia: Ataraxia or pathe: rational constancy in accord with nature	Moderate Fatalism: Knowing what is/is not within one's control; adjusting desires to nature of things.	Pantheistic, fatalistic, moral conventionalism, modesty; cosmopolitanism

Source: http://www.powershow.com/view/3e420-MmM1N/Epicureanism_powerpoint_ppt_presentation

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Wikipedia: Epicureanism

Epicureanism

- Epicurus (341-271 BCE)
- A life devoted to worldly happiness based on materialist account of nature.
- Encouraged withdrawal from political life into communities of like-minded individuals (Gardens in Athens)
- Rational humanism, influence on Romans, revived in 16th/17th century with rise of science and renaissance humanism.

Epicurus (341—271 B.C.E.)

http://www.iep.utm.edu/epicur/

https://plato.stanford.edu/entries/epicurus/

http://philosophy.lander.edu/ethics/epicurus.html

http://www.encyclopedia.com/people/philosophy-and-religion/philosophy-biographies/epicurus

http://www.informationphilosopher.com/solutions/philosophers/epicurus/

Epicureanism - fast facts and introduction

http://www.religionfacts.com/epicureanism

Excerpts:

Beliefs	Materialism: everything is made of atoms, including gods and the soul. A deistic sort of polytheism: the gods exist, but take no notice of humans. Everything is made of atoms, including gods and the soul. No afterlife.
Texts	Letters and Principal Doctrines of Epicurus

Epicureanism is an ancient Greek philosophical system taught by Epicurus. It emphasized the goal of a happy and content life in the here and now, rejecting both superstitious fear of the gods and notions of an afterlife.

Though the modern use of the term "Epicurean" is associated with the saying, "Eat, drink and be merry," Epicureanism did not advocate simple pursuit of bodily pleasure and differed significantly from hedonism.

http://www.epicurus.net/

founded one of the major philosophies of ancient Greece, helping to lay the intellectual foundations for modern science and for secular individualism. Many aspects of his thought are still highly relevant some twenty-three centuries after they were first taught in his school in Athens, called “the Garden.”

Epicurus's philosophy combines a physics based on an atomistic materialism with a rational hedonistic ethics that emphasizes moderation of desires and cultivation of friendships. His world-view is an optimistic one that stresses that philosophy can liberate one from fears of death and the supernatural, and can teach us how to find happiness in almost any situation. His practical insights into human psychology, as well as his science-friendly world-view, gives Epicureanism great contemporary signficance as well as a venerable role in the intellectual development of Western Civilization.

Greek Philosophy

Epicureanism

Stoicism

Platonism

Epicureanism vs Stoicism

Use by Paul

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Epicureanism - PowerPoint PPT Presentation http://www.powershow.com/view/3e420-MmM1N/Epicureanism_powerpoint_ppt_presentation

Greek Philosophy

Epicureanism

Stoicism

Platonism

Epicureanism vs Stoicism

Use by Paul

Epicureanism

- Materialism (Atomism)
  - All things are atoms & void; shape & size
  - Atoms are eternal (nothing from nothing), universe is boundless
- Ethics
  - Aim: eudaimonia = happiness is a mind free from disturbance (ataraxia) and a body free from pain.
  - Means: fear and ignorance cause disturbances in mind and body, so ataraxia achievable by understanding the true nature of things; removal of source of fear and disturbance.

Body free from pain

- Pleasure and pain natural and necessary sensations
  - Can reduce pain by avoiding painful things
  - Increase pleasure by pursuing pleasurable things.
- But, a prudent life (virtuous) tells us not all pleasure is good, nor all pain bad.
  - Moderation in pursuit of pleasure and avoidance of pain
  - Friendship and other social/intellectual pleasures included.

"Moderate Hedonism"

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

What causes fear? The gods

- Fear punishment and arbitrary interference
  - a type of superstitious belief…
- But, gods are immortal and blessed,
  - Not celestial bodies aiming to pass judgment;
  - Not vengeful;
  - Only concerned with their own domain, not humans.
- So, no need to fear gods

What causes fear? Death

- Fear the pain and misery of life after death.
  - Either the punishment or dreary 'life' of death
- But, death is nothing but cessation of life.
  - Atomism (death is separation of body and soul; only through body is sensation possible; dissolution of material components, including soul.
- So, in life there is no death; in death there is no life to be concerned with.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Lucretius (98- 55 BCE)

- Roman expositor of Epicurean philosophy
  - Not much known about his life, other than he was a poet and philosopher
- De Rerum Natura:
  - Influential as exposition
  - Also poetic style and form

In this life…

- The banquet
  - Lucretius pp. 598-99
- Death is nothing
  - Lucretius, pp. 596-98
- Hell is in our lives
  - Lucretius, pp. 600-01 (Hell is in our lives)
- And, knowledge of the nature of things
  - Lucretius, p. 602

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Epicurean Notes from various Bible Commentary/Notes Sources (re: Acts 17:18)

NIV Study Bible 2008

Epicurean … philosophers. Originally they taught that the supreme good is happiness but not mere momentary pleasure or temporary gratification. By Paul's time, however, this philosophy had degenerated into a more sensual system of thought.

NET Notes

[66] sn An Epicurean was a follower of the philosophy of Epicurus, who founded a school in Athens about 300 B.C. Although the Epicureans saw the aim of life as pleasure, they were not strictly hedonists, because they defined pleasure as the absence of pain. Along with this, they desired the avoidance of trouble and freedom from annoyances. They saw organized religion as evil, especially the belief that the gods punished evildoers in an afterlife. In keeping with this, they were unable to accept Paul's teaching about the resurrection.

NLT Study Bible Notes

Epicureanism was a popular school of Greek philosophy, founded by Epicurus (341-270 BC). Epicureans believed that the principal aim of life was to secure happiness. They thought of pleasure not in terms of sensual indulgence, as their critics charged, but in terms of tranquility. Their contemporaries often called them atheists; in their view, there were no gods to fear, and death simply marked the end of human existence. They sought their security in organized communities where they could live in contentment apart from society.

Jamieson, Fausset and Brown (JFB)

18-21. certain … of the Epicureans —a well-known school of atheistic materialists, who taught that pleasure was the chief end of human existence; a principle which the more rational interpreted in a refined sense, while the sensual explained it in its coarser meaning.

…While therefore the Stoical was in itself superior to the Epicurean system, both were alike hostile to the Gospel. "The two enemies it has ever had to contend with are the two ruling principles of the Epicureans and Stoics— Pleasure and Pride " [Howson].

Jewish New Testament Commentary (JNTC)

The followers of Epicurus (341-270 B.C.E.) denied the existence of a purposeful God and believed the universe originated by chance from a falling rain of atoms. They mocked the popular (pagan) gods and mythology. Their view of the soul was materialistic: it dissolved and dissipated at death. Thus the aim of life was gratification, not pursuit of higher or externally given moral and spiritual interests. Gratification could be gross and sordid if one was so inclined, or esthetic and refined. Today's successors to the Epicureans speak of “doing your own thing,” and their unabashed selfishness is rarely ameliorated by the common qualification usually honored in the breach, “so long as it doesn't hurt anybody else.”

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Both Stoicism and Epicureanism (and their successors) oppose biblical religion. In the present verses we see how Sha'ul, expressing God's love, dealt with people—sinners like everyone else—whose primary channel of life-expression was intellectual.

Tyndale Bible Dictionary (TBD)

Epicureans followed the teachings of Epicurus (342?-270 BC), an Athenian philosopher who had taught practical ways of achieving a pleasant life through moderate behavior and stable human relationships. He believed that human beings are merely material objects produced by chance combinations of atoms—small, indestructible material pieces.

TBD: Epicureans

Those who followed the teachings of the Greek philosopher Epicurus (342-270 BC). Paul encountered some of them while in Athens (Ac 17:18).

Epicurus spent his childhood on the island of Samos, near the western coast of what is today Turkey. In his late teens he moved to Athens for military service. After his tour of duty, he devoted his time to the study and teaching of philosophy. This work took him from Athens, but he returned in 307 BC to found a school. He attracted a considerable following, and his disciples spread his message throughout the civilized world. The fact that Paul met Epicureans over three centuries after the death of Epicurus shows both the attractiveness of his teachings and the commitment of his disciples. In the first century BC these teachings found expression in the writing of the Roman poet Lucretius. His On the Nature of Things is a helpful guide to understanding Epicurus, especially since only fragments of Epicurus's own writings remain.

The Epicureans were empiricists; they relied upon sense experience for knowledge. This put them in opposition to those who chose to make statements about the world on the basis of reason alone, distrusting or rejecting the data of the senses. Epicureans were concerned with natural evidence and with practicalities, thus showing a somewhat scientific character. They were unenthusiastic about mathematics because of what they took to be its abstract quality, having little to do with the important matters of living. Ethics, the study of right behavior, was their focus.

The Epicurean judged the value of an action or thing in terms of the pleasure or pain it brought—a position called hedonism. It was egoistic hedonism because the person sought his own pleasure rather than the pleasure of others. This description can bring to mind the image of an irresponsible glutton or lover of wild parties, but this image, encouraged by the modern sense of the word "epicurean," is misleading. Epicurus rejected just such behavior. He realized that momentary pleasure can lead to enduring pain and that some pain can be beneficial. He viewed pleasure more as a quality of life than a series of thrills. What he sought is better called happiness. Basing his counsel on experience, he urged moderation, calm, friendship, a simple life. He avoided feasting, sexual passion, and strife. In fact, he avoided pain more than he sought pleasure. The pleasure of tranquillity, of peace, could be found in the absence of pain, and this was his aim. To ensure tranquillity, a man must tend to his stomach, but he must also attend to his mind, directing it toward wisdom.

Epicurus saw belief in gods as a serious threat to tranquillity. Gods were generally viewed as meddling and powerful beings who terrified ordinary mortals—sources of insecurity, not peace and happiness. Epicurus taught that the gods were not, in fact, like this but were tranquil hedonists who stayed away from men. They avoided the strife involved in contact with people on earth. In short, they were nothing to fear.

Epicurus taught that we, and everything in our world, are made up of atoms of different qualities. For example, the atoms of the human soul are smooth and round. Although atomic theories often lead to the conviction that all human actions are determined by the laws that rule the motion of atoms, Epicurus's theory did not. He allowed for human freedom by claiming that some atoms spontaneously leave their straight paths, thus setting off an unpredictable chain of collisions. Man's behavior is then free and not machinelike.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

In spite of his freedom, man is still a collection of atoms, and when the atoms separate, the man ceases to exist; he is not immortal. Epicurus saw this as reason no longer to fear death. For after death, all experience ceases. There will be no pain, and so there is no cause for anxiety.

Epicurean themes can be found in the Bible—for example, moderation (Phl 4:5) and the peace that comes from the exercise of wisdom (Pr 3:13-18). But the differences are clear. The Bible reveals a God who is intimately involved in the world; the immortality of man's soul; and the truth that genuine happiness depends upon communion with and service to God (Phl 4:6-7).

Greek Philosophy

Epicureanism

Stoicism

Platonism

Epicureanism vs Stoicism

Use by Paul

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

"What is Epicureanism? What did Epicurus teach?" [recommended]
https://www.gotquestions.org/Epicureanism-Epicurean.html

Pleasure as the Good in Epicureanism http://arcaneknowledge.org/philtheo/ethics2.htm

Introduction to Epicurean Philosophy
http://www.rooshv.com/introduction-to-epicurus

Epicurean Atomism
https://jameswhitten.wordpress.com/2011/03/03/epicurean-atomism/

Ancient Atomism
https://plato.stanford.edu/entries/atomism-ancient/

The Roots of Epicurean Humanism
https://epicureanchurch.wordpress.com/category/the-roots-of-epicurean-humanism/

Epicurean History – including impact on Jews and Christians http://www.epicurus.net/en/history.html

See: The Use of Greek Philosophy by Paul in the Bible

See also my other separate resource*:
Christian Scholarship: Biblical – Theological – Philosophical

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Wikipedia: Stoicism

Greek Philosophy

Epicureanism

Platonism

Epicureanism vs Stoicism

Use by Paul

Stoicism

https://plato.stanford.edu/entries/stoicism/

http://www.iep.utm.edu/stoicism/

http://www.newworldencyclopedia.org/entry/Stoicism

https://www.britannica.com/topic/Stoicism

http://www.philosophybasics.com/branch_stoicism.html

http://www.philosophybasics.com/movements_stoicism.html

https://www.reddit.com/r/Stoicism/wiki/faq

http://www.newadvent.org/cathen/14299a.htm

http://www.egreenway.com/virtues/stoicism.htm

http://www.jewishvirtuallibrary.org/stoicism

http://everything.explained.today/Stoicism/

http://www.ourcivilisation.com/smartboard/shop/warnerr/stoicism.htm

What Is Stoicism?

https://dailystoic.com/what-is-stoicism-a-definition-3-stoic-exercises-to-get-you-started/

Stoicism – CSU [MS Doc]

http://www.csun.edu/~kdm78513/subjects/philosophy/documents/Greek%20&%20Roman/Syllabus/stoics.doc

Stoicism - fast facts and introduction

http://www.religionfacts.com/stoicism

Practices	Ethical and philosophical training, self-reflection, careful judgment and inner calm.
Texts	writings of Zeno, Seneca, Epictetus, Marcus Aurelius

Stoicism was one of the two principal schools of the Hellenistic era (the other being Epicureanism). Originally founded by Zeno in 4th-century-BC Athens, Stoicism later developed and changed into forms designated "Middle Stoa" and "Later Stoa," also known as Roman Stoicism. This article deals with primarily with original, Greek Stoicism.

Fast Facts

- Date founded: c.313 BC
- Place founded: Athens, Greece

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

- Founder: Zeno (335-263 BC)
- Adherents: unknown

History

Stoicism was founded by Zeno of Citium (Cyprus), who was born in 335 BC and came to Athens around 313 BC. According to tradition, Zeno had studied under the Cynics, but some later Stoics (e.g. Panaetius) were embarrassed by this connection and denied it. At Athens, Zeno began teaching philosophy in the Stoa Poikile (the Painted Porch, hence "Stoicism"). He taught the scientific study of Greek grammar and vocabulary and developed a complete philosophical system of three branches: logic; physics and theology; and ethics. He taught that the goal of life is virtue; everything else is indifferent.

Zeno's successor was Cleanthes of Assos (331-232 BC), who became head of the school in 263 BC. He developed Zeno's materialistic worldview in a more religious direction. He compared the universe to a human being, and the realm of fixed stars to the soul. Both were the greater concentration of spirit in their respective realms, and the stars could therefore be worshipped. He also emphasized the universal law of providence. Cleanthes is best known for his Hymn to Zeus, which movingly describes Stoic reverence for the cosmic order and the power of universal reason and law.

Chrysippus of Soli (Cilicia) (c.280-207 BC) took over the Stoa in 232. He attempted to show that Homer and Hesiod were really Stoics, which gave impetus to the practice of allegorizing. Through him Stoicism assumed a more academic and technical character, and this was the form in which it was largely transmitted in the ancient world. The teachings of Zeno and Cleanthes were absorbed into Chrysippus to the extent that it is difficult to separate them.

Texts

None of the writings of the three earliest leaders of Stoicism has survived intact; we have only fragments and quotations. See Books, below, for bibliography.

The Stoics taught materialism, in which everything - including God and words - is material. Even emotions are material because they have physical manifestations (e.g. blushing, smiling).

Their worldview was also pantheistic, in which a divine reality pervades the universe. They taught there are two kinds of matter: the grosser matter that is seen and touched and the finer matter called breath or spirit that holds everything together. It was given various names: logos (reason), pneuma (breath), pronoia (providence), Zeus, or fire (the element considered most akin to reason). The Stoic god has thus been described as a "perfectly good and wise gas." 1

The Stoics sought to find their theories in the ancient mythology, using the allegorical method of interpretation to do so. The gods did not actually do the things attributed to them; these were descriptions of natural events. One technique was to rearrange letters to find true meaning; for example: Hera (ERA) becomes air (AER); DEMETER becomes GE METER (Earth Mother). This method was later adopted by the Jewish philosopher Philo of Alexandria, and through him, by the Christian philosophers Clement and Origen of Alexandria.

Human nature incorporates both of these kinds of matter in the body and the soul, respectively. The soul was believed to stretch throughout the body and have eight parts: the five senses, voice, generative power, and the "leading power" of the mind, which was located in the heart. (Later Stoics, because of advances in medicine, placed it in the head.)…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

New Dictionary of Theology (NDT): Stoicism

Stoicism was founded by Zeno (335-263 BC) who taught in Athens in a stoa (porch), from which his school derived its name. He was succeeded by Cleanthes (331-232 BC), who breathed a more personal spirit into the Stoic conception of deity, as in his 'Hymn to Zeus'. Chrysippus (c. 280-207 BC) gave Stoicism its completed form and logical defence.

The Stoic world-view may be characterized as materialistic pantheism. Matter, however, comes in two kinds: a grosser kind, corresponding to the ordinary conception of matter, and a more refined kind, described as breath or spirit and diffused throughout reality. The latter is the ruling power and guiding force of reality and corresponds to deity, for it exercises providence, making this the 'best of all possible worlds'. The human being too is composed of these same two kinds of material reality as is the cosmos. The present world derived from fire and will return to fire (the world conflagration), after which the same world will re-emerge to repeat the cycle (the regeneration, palingenesia). The ruling spirit is rational, and the Stoics contributed to logic by their efforts to represent reality rationally and to defend their system. The Stoics developed the allegorical method of interpretation as a way of attaching their physical theories to classical mythology. Their philosophy provided a defence of the traditional religion, including divination and astrology, on the basis of the interconnectedness of the universe.

The lasting influence of Stoicism came not from its pantheism and rationalism but its moral teaching and attitude toward life. The goal of life is virtue, and virtue is to live in accord with the rational nature of reality. The emotional life was disparaged as irrational and unnatural. The only important thing in life is virtue: therefore, one is to remain unmoved by external affairs, anything that is not within one's own power, and concentrate on the attitudes and character that are within one's control. Since according to the Stoic view of providence and the cyclical nature of reality, everything is determined, a person should accept things as they are. One cannot control circumstances, but he can control the way he looks at them. Everything outside of virtue is indifferent, but in the development of later Stoic ethics more and more attention was paid to what was preferred and not preferred among indifferent things.

This change in ethical concern came with the Middle Stoa of Panaetius (c. 185-109 BC), who adapted Stoicism to the Romans by giving more attention to political theory and allowing a greater place to emotional and aesthetic concerns. Posidonius (c. 135-50 BC) further broadened Stoicism to include scientific experiment, and through the theory of sympathetic relationship between all parts of the world contributed to the understanding of kinds of unity. He likened the universe to the unity of a living body. The later Stoics allowed a greater independence to the life of the soul and so weakened the earlier monism.

Roman Stoicism represented almost exclusively ethical concerns. Seneca (c. AD 1-65) laid bare the wickedness in human nature, and in his moral exhortations he more nearly approximated to Christian teaching than any other classical philosopher. Musonius Rufus (AD 30-101) and Epictetus (AD 55-c. 135) use language comparable to that in the NT Stoicism ascended the imperial throne with Marcus Aurelius (AD 131-180), an introspective and melancholy yet noble man. Thereafter we do not hear about Stoicism as a school, but it was not extinct, for its significant moral insights had become common property, one of the permanent legacies of the ancient world to western civilization.

Many points of contact between Stoicism and the NT have been noted. For instance, Paul in Ac 17:28 quotes a Stoic commonplace from the Phaenomena of Aratus (c. 315-240 BC), a pupil of Zeno. Many terms in the NT were at home in Stoicism: spirit, conscience, logos, virtue, self-sufficiency, reasonable service. Even the substantive similarities, however, are set in different world-views. Stoicism did not have a fully personal god, a creator, personal immortality, or a saviour. In ethics, where the similarities were the closest, there were fundamental differences. Stoicism told one to have the attitude to self that one has towards others; Christianity reversed the outlook. The motivation was different: in Stoicism, living in accord with the higher self; in Christianity, response to the love of God in Christ.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The pervasive influence of Stoicism in the ethical thought of the early Empire, including that of the 1st-century Jewish philosopher, Philo, meant that early Christian ethical writings showed contact with Stoicism. This is evident, for example, in Clement of Alexandria's Instructor (Paedagogus). Ambrose's treatise On the Duties of the Clergy is a Christian adaptation of Cicero's On Duties , itself influenced by Panaetius. The Stoic view of anthropology influenced Tatian (2nd century) and Tertullian's On the Soul , which gives a more 'material' view of the soul than Platonism did.

As assimilated into Christian thought, aspects of Stoicism became a part of the Christian heritage. Independent revivals of elements in Stoicism occurred in the Renaissance and early modern period. The Stoic attitude that inner character is superior to and indifferent to external affairs has continued to have appeal. Where morality has been sought apart from religion the Stoic view that virtue is sufficient for happiness has given encouragement. The Stoic stimulation of the idea of a natural religion and its humanitarianism and cosmopolitan universalism have been absorbed into Christian thought.

Bibliography

L. Edlestein, The Meaning of Stoicism (Cambridge, 1966); R. MacMullen, Enemies of the Roman Order (Cambridge, MA, 1966), ch. 2; M. Pohlenz, Die Stoa , 2 vols. (Göttingen, 1955-59); J. M. Rist, Stoic Philosophy (Cambridge, 1969); F. H. Sandbach, The Stoics (London, 1975); J. N. Sevenster, Paul and Seneca (Leiden, 1962); M. Spanneut, Le Stoïcisme des pères de l'Église de Clément de Rome à Clément d'Alexandrie (Paris, 1957); R. M. Wenley, Stoicism and its Influence (New York, 1963); E. Zeller, Stoics, Epicureans, and Sceptics (London, 1880).

Greek Philosophy

Epicureanism

Stoicism

Platonism

Epicureanism vs Stoicism

Use by Paul

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

More Stoicism Notes from various Bible Commentary/Notes sources (re: Acts 17:18)

NIV Study Bible 2008

Stoic philosophers. They taught that people should live in accord with nature, recognize their own self-sufficiency and independence, and suppress their desires. At its best, Stoicism had some admirable qualities, but, like Epicureanism, by Paul's time it had degenerated into a system of pride. [NIVSBN08]

NET Notes

[67] sn A Stoic was a follower of the philosophy founded by Zeno (342-270 B.C.), a Phoenician who came to Athens and modified the philosophical system of the Cynics he found there. The Stoics rejected the Epicurean ideal of pleasure, stressing virtue instead. The Stoics emphasized responsibility for voluntary actions and believed risks were worth taking, but thought the actual attainment of virtue was difficult. They also believed in providence.

NLT Study Bible Notes

Stoic philosophers:* Stoicism was founded by Zeno of Citium (335-263 BC) and became the most influential philosophy in the Greco-Roman world. It viewed the universe as permeated by Reason (sometimes referred to as God or Providence). Stoicism saw divine Reason as expressed in human reason and held that as humans made progress, they could advance from ignorance (the source of vice) to true knowledge (the source of virtue). They developed extensive lists of virtues and vices and produced detailed household codes to guide family behavior. Paul's teaching resembles that of the Stoics in his use of household codes and lists of virtues and vices (Ga 5:19-23; Ep 5:22-33; Col 3:18-4:1; 1Ti 3:1-13; 5:1-6:1). However, the message of Good News focusing on the life, death, and resurrection of Jesus Christ was strange and foreign to these Greek philosophers. • The air of superiority with which they addressed Paul as this babbler indicates the arrogance of some of these men.

Jamieson, Fausset and Brown (JFB)

and of the Stoics —a celebrated school of severe and lofty pantheists, whose principle was that the universe was under the law of an iron necessity, the spirit of which was what is called the Deity: and that a passionless conformity of the human will to this law, unmoved by all external circumstances and changes, is the perfection of virtue. While therefore the Stoical was in itself superior to the Epicurean system, both were alike hostile to the Gospel. "The two enemies it has ever had to contend with are the two ruling principles of the Epicureans and Stoics— Pleasure and Pride " [Howson].

Jewish New Testament Commentary (JNTC)

Stoics were pantheists for whom “God” was merely a word standing for some vague spirit of reason in the universe. They understood the soul to be corporeal and at death somehow absorbed into this blurry “God.” All the major Eastern religions and certain seemingly Western offshoots have at bottom a similar theology, that there is no transcendent God who created and rules the universe independently of human beings and their imaginings. The Stoic moral code was in some ways higher than that of the Epicureans, but for them the highest morality was an austere apathy and unconcern which regarded itself as superior to passion as well as circumstance. Many alienated people today repress the genuine hurt and guilt they ought to feel and attempt to elevate their alienation into philosophy, thus ending up with a version of Stoicism. In this philosophy pleasure is not good and pain is not evil, for nothing really matters. “Reason” becomes a guide, but when “reason” finds nothing left to live for, suicide becomes the “reasonable” action—the first two leaders of Stoicism died by their own hand. In this century Albert Camus's novel, The Stranger, and his essay, “The Myth of Sisyphus,” deal with this question from a nonbeliever's standpoint (see my discussion in Messianic Jewish Manifesto, pp. 35-41, on history and the meaning of life).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Both Stoicism and Epicureanism (and their successors) oppose biblical religion. In the present verses we see how Sha’ul, expressing God's love, dealt with people—sinners like everyone else—whose primary channel of life-expression was intellectual.

Tyndale Bible Dictionary (TBD)

Two specific philosophies are mentioned in the NT: Epicureanism and Stoicism (Ac 17:18). Epicureans followed the teachings of Epicurus (342?-270 BC), an Athenian philosopher who had taught practical ways of achieving a pleasant life through moderate behavior and stable human relationships. He believed that human beings are merely material objects produced by chance combinations of atoms—small, indestructible material pieces.

Stoics also emphasized moderate living, but they believed that there is an ultimate purpose in the world. This purposefulness is established by an all-pervading substance called Logos, or reason. However, like Epicureans, Stoics were materialists, believing all things to be made of matter, including humans, the divine, and the Logos (which they sometimes treated as God).

In Athens, Paul may have also encountered the “academic skeptics.” These philosophers emphasized the fallibility and finitude of human understanding to the point of withholding judgment whenever possible. However, they knew they had to make daily personal decisions, and they remained very curious about other people's ideas. In fact, all the Athenians and the foreigners who lived there at the time of Paul's visit seemed to sustain a high level of curiosity about new ideas (Ac 17:21), providing a mentally lively atmosphere.

It was only appropriate for Paul to present the gospel to these curious minds, and he was convincing enough to win some converts. He established a common ground by agreeing with ideas from two Greek philosophers: Epimenides (sixth century BC), “In him we live and move and have our being”; and Cleanthes the Stoic (third century BC), “We are his offspring.” Nevertheless, Paul inevitably offended most of his philosophic listeners by defending the uniqueness of a particular man, Jesus Christ, and by claiming that he had been resurrected from the dead—a claim that contradicted these philosophers' materialist resignation to the finality of death. Clearly, Christianity entailed a dramatically different “philosophy.”

TBD: Stoicism, Stoics

A widespread Greek philosophy, well represented in the audience at Athens listening to Paul (Ac 17:16-34). The apostle was probably familiar with it, for it had begun in Athens around 300 BC, with Zeno's teaching in the “stoa” (porches) of public buildings, and had spread throughout the Greco-Roman world. It was known, for example, at Tarsus and on the island of Cyprus, so that Paul would no doubt have encountered Stoics earlier in his journeys and possibly even in his hometown. The scope and power of its influence are indicated by the fact that the Roman emperor Marcus Aurelius (d. AD 180) was himself a Stoic, some of whose philosophical writings have survived.

The earliest Stoics were primarily concerned with cosmology, that is, the study of nature's origin and its laws. They were materialists, who held that all things come from the one basic element of fire and will eventually return to that one element in a vast cosmic conflagration. They, therefore, had a cyclical view of cosmic history, in which one universe after another arises and is destroyed. Both the orderliness of things as we know them, and this cyclical pattern of history, were ascribed to the organizing and sustaining power of a pervasive force known as the Logos that is sometimes regarded as divine. Its laws were the laws of nature to which all creatures must conform. It gives to all things their essential nature and so gives life and reason to men. In fact, the Logos is in man, taking the form of the human soul. Hence, to live according to reason is to live according to the natural order of things, and this is good. Conscious obedience to natural law liberates a man from fear and concern about external circumstances over which he has no control but which are still ruled by nature's laws. The good life, then, is one in which reason, not passion, rules, and peace of mind and harmony with nature consequently prevail.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Stoic ideas proved attractive to some Christians because of the apparent similarities between the Stoic logos and the Logos of Jn 1:1-18, and between the idea of natural law and the law of God.

Greek Philosophy

Epicureanism

Stoicism

Platonism

Epicureanism vs Stoicism

Use by Paul

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

A Timeline of Hellenistic Philosophy

http://www.uh.edu/~cfreelan/courses/Stoics/Timeline.html

Excerpt:

Stoicism
(the school of the "porch" or "colonnade")
The Early Stoa (3rd. c. B.C., in Athens, in the "Stoa Poikile" = "Painted Porch")
Zeno of Citium	336-264 B.C.
*Founder of school, ca. 300 B.C.
Cleanthes of Assos	331 - 232 B.C.
Chyrsippus of Soli	280-206 B.C.
(Engaged with Arcesilaus of the Academy)
The Middle Stoa (1st and 2nd B.C.; introduced Platonic elements)
Panaetius of Rhodes	185-110 B.C.
Posidonius of Apamea	145-51 B.C.
The Late Stoa (1st and 2nd c. A.D., Roman)
Epictetus	50-138 A.D.	(freed slave of one of Nero's bodyguards)
Seneca	4 B.C. - 65 A.D	(one of Nero's ministers)
Marcus Aurelius	121-180 A.D.	(became emperor in 161)

Stoicism – Encyclopedia Britannica

https://www.britannica.com/topic/Stoicism

Excerpt:

Stoicism, a school of thought that flourished in Greek and Roman antiquity. It was one of the loftiest and most sublime philosophies in the record of Western civilization. In urging participation in human affairs, Stoics have always believed that the goal of all inquiry is to provide a mode of conduct characterized by tranquility of mind and certainty of moral worth.

For the early Stoic philosopher, as for all the post-Aristotelian schools, knowledge and its pursuit are no longer held to be ends in themselves. The Hellenistic Age was a time of transition, and the Stoic philosopher was perhaps its most influential representative. A new culture was in the making. The heritage of an earlier period, with Athens as its intellectual leader, was to continue, but to undergo many changes. If, as with Socrates, to know is to know oneself, rationality as the sole means by which something outside of the self might be achieved may be said to be the hallmark of Stoic belief. As a Hellenistic philosophy, Stoicism presented an ars vitae, a way of accommodation for people to whom the human condition no longer appeared as the mirror of a uniform, calm, and ordered cosmos. Reason alone could reveal the constancy of cosmic order and the originative source of unyielding value; thus, reason became the true model for human existence. To the Stoic, virtue is an inherent feature of the world, no less inexorable in relation to humans than are the laws of nature.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Stoics believed that perception is the basis of true knowledge. In logic, their comprehensive presentation of the topic is derived from perception, yielding not only the judgment that knowledge is possible but also that certainty is possible, on the analogy of the incorrigibility of perceptual experience. To them, the world is composed of material things, with some few exceptions (e.g., meaning), and the irreducible element in all things is right reason, which pervades the world as divine fire. Things, such as material, or corporeal, bodies, are governed by this reason or fate, in which virtue is inherent. The world in its awesome entirety is so ruled as to exhibit a grandeur of orderly arrangement that can only serve as a standard for humankind in the regulation and ordering of life. Thus, the goal of humans is to live according to nature, in agreement with the world design.

Stoic moral theory is also based on the view that the world, as one great city, is a unity. Humans, as world citizens, have an obligation and loyalty to all things in that city. They must play an active role in world affairs, remembering that the world exemplifies virtue and right action. Thus, moral worth, duty, and justice are singularly Stoic emphases, together with a certain sternness of mind. For the moral person neither is merciful nor shows pity, because each suggests a deviation from duty and from the fated necessity that rules the world. Nonetheless—with its loftiness of spirit and its emphasis on the individual's essential worth—the themes of universal brotherhood and the benevolence of divine nature make Stoicism one of the most appealing of philosophies.

Its chief competitors in antiquity were: (1) Epicureanism, with its doctrine of a life of withdrawal in contemplation and escape from worldly affairs and its belief that pleasure, as the absence of pain, is the goal of humans; (2) Skepticism, which rejected certain knowledge in favour of local beliefs and customs, in the expectation that those guides would provide the quietude and serenity that the dogmatic philosopher (e.g., the Stoic) could not hope to achieve; and (3) Christianity, with its hope of personal salvation provided by an appeal to faith as an immanent aid to human understanding and by the beneficent intervention of a merciful God.

Greek Philosophy

Epicureanism

Stoicism

Platonism

Epicureanism vs Stoicism

Use by Paul

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Stoicism

- Aim: to achieve a tranquility of mind (ataraxia) and emotional stability (apathe)
- Means: to understand the nature of things
  - Understand what is or isn't under one's control
  - No control over the events of life, but one's reaction to those events
  - So, reason-guided life in accord with the nature of things
- Precepts:
  - Fatalism: world determined by divine providence
  - Conventionalism in moral action and social responsibility, including modesty
  - Cosmopolitanism: reason is divine spark that unites individuals

Marcus Aurelius (121-180 CE)

- Roman military and political leader
  - Reigned 161-180 CE
  - last of the "Five Good Emperors" who governed the Roman Empire from 96 to 180, and is also considered one of the most important stoic philosophers.
- Meditations are stoic maxims to himself, a diary of a ruler
  - written on campaign between 170-180, is still revered as a literary monument to a government of service and duty and has been praised for its "exquisite accent and its infinite tenderness."

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Great Philosophers 2: The Stoics
http://thephilosophersmail.com/perspective/the-great-philosophers-2-the-stoics/

The Stoic: 9 Principles to Help You Keep Calm in Chaos
http://99u.com/articles/24401/a-makers-guidebook-9-stoic-principles-to-nurture-your-life-and-work

Stoicism, the original cognitive therapy http://www.philosophyforlife.org/stoicism-the-original-cognitive-therapy/

Stoicism is One of the Best Mind Hacks Ever Devised https://aeon.co/essays/why-stoicism-is-one-of-the-best-mind-hacks-ever-devised

How to Be a Stoic
https://opinionator.blogs.nytimes.com/2015/02/02/how-to-be-a-stoic/

What is Stoicism and How Can it Turn your Life to Solid Gold?
http://www.mrmoneymustache.com/2011/10/02/what-is-stoicism-and-how-can-it-turn-your-life-to-solid-gold/

Podcast #316: An Introduction to Stoicism http://www.artofmanliness.com/2017/06/27/stoicism-podcast/

Stoicism and Philosophy
http://www.the-philosophy.com/stoicism-philosophy

Excerpt:

Stoicism: From the Old Stoicism to Imperial Stoicism

There are several periods in Stoicism:

– Old Stoicism: founded by Zeno of Citium. This Greek philosopher taught under the portico, where the name of the school of the Porch. We have only fragments of this thinker.

– Roman Stoicism, Imperial said: Seneca, Epictetus and Marcus Aurelius made it famous philosophical.

In the Stoicism, happiness means the independence from external circumstances and the detachment from things. Control of our representations and the exercise of judgments can be accessed.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Modern Wimp's Introduction to Stoicism
http://www.primermagazine.com/2010/live/introduction-to-stoicism

A Short Summary of Stoicism
http://hackthesystem.com/blog/a-short-summary-of-stoicism/

Beginners Guide to Stoicism
https://donaldrobertson.name/2016/08/13/beginners-guide-to-stoicism/

How Stoic Metaphysics leads to Stoic Ethics
http://www.loyno.edu/~folse/stoicism.html

Five Reasons Why Stoicism Matters Today
https://www.forbes.com/sites/kareanderson/2012/09/28/five-reasons-why-stoicism-matters-today/#72ee33757a64

Excerpt:

1. It was built for hard times.
2. Stoicism is made for globalization.
3. If you're Christian, you're already part-Stoic.

Imagine a religion that stressed human brotherhood under a benevolent creator God; that told us to moderate and master our basic urges rather than giving into them; that nevertheless insisted that all humans, because we're human, are bound to fail at this mission; and that spent a lot of time talking about "conscience" and the multiple aspects, or "persons," of a unitary God. All of that might sound familiar. But the philosophy that invented all of those ideas was not Christianity, but Stoicism.

It makes sense that Christianity is a deeply Stoic religion. Stoicism dominated Roman culture for centuries—and Christianity went mainstream in the same culture. What's more, many of the leaders of the early Christian church were former Stoics. Of course Christianity borrowed much of its thought and terminology from Stoicism--because thinking about religion in the early 1st millennium meant thinking like a Stoic.

As Christianity continued to grow, church leaders, who wanted to emphasize the uniqueness of their faith, began to downplay this Stoic connection. But Stoicism is still there at the foundation of the Christian religion, in some of its most basic terms and concepts.

4. It's the unofficial philosophy of the military.
5. It's a philosophy for leadership.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Stoicism and the Logos

http://www.theimaginativeconservative.org/2012/10/stoicism-and-logos.html

Excerpts:

Zeno of Cittium founded the Stoic School in 322B.C. The name came from the lecture hall: the Stoa poikile (the outdoor porch)

Zeno took much from both Plato and Aristotle; turned their metaphysical speculations into religious dogma/presuppositions. Stoicism, therefore, did not serve as mere speculation for these Hellenistic Greeks; it revealed the path to a virtuous life.

Three stages of the Stoa

1. Early Stoa (Zeno, Cleanthes, and Chrysippus of Soli)
2. Middle Stoa (Virgil, Cicero (though Cicero called himself an Eclectic and a New Academician), and Seneca)
3. Late Stoa (Epictetus and Marcus Aurelius—for whom the Logos Incarnate was the Roman Empire)

Believed (defined most clearly in/remembered from second stoa):

- Man must conform himself entirely to the natural law; nature/creation itself being comprehensive; from the One
- At the heart of all things was the universal principle, the "artistic fire" or Word known as LOGOS, which was closely tied to fate. It existed at the beginning of the universe, and it would bring all things back together in the end, perfecting all through the LOGOS (see below for various understandings of LOGOS).
- The various Greek gods represent simple names or manifestations of different aspects of the One; the Stoics understood each as an allegory or a myth, not as a reality in and of itself. "Zeno is reported as according the status of gods to the law of nature, the aether, reason, the stars, the years, months, and season; and as depriving, in his interpretation of Hesiod's Theogony, Jupiter, Juno, and Vesta of their divinity insisting that their names allegorically signify divine entities of a material nature. . . . The Hellenic polis had been conquered, but the Stoics developed the myth o the cosmos as the common habitat and polis of gods and men, a symbolism that satisfied the needs of an ecumenic society after a fashion . . . . into the myth of the cosmos as the megalopolis which comprises all nations."[2]
- We know the meaning of life through the empirical observation of nature and through the logic of the soul
- Adopted Aristotle's understanding of purpose
- Providence controls all

The Concept of Logos

….examines the impacts on Jewish (ex. Jewish Book of Wisdom) and Christian thought and influences across the centuries…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

What is Stoicism? What did the Greek Stoics teach? [Recommended]

https://www.gotquestions.org/Stoicism-Stoic.html

Excerpt:

Stoicism is one of many ancient Greek philosophies. While Paul was in Athens, a group of Stoics met him and engaged him in a debate (Acts 17:18) that started in the marketplace and continued in the Areopagus. In speaking to the Stoics and other philosophers gathered on Mars Hill, Paul gave a presentation of the gospel and made a point of mentioning the Athenian altar to the "unknown god" as proof of their spiritual ignorance.

Stoicism, which emphasizes rationalism and logic, is commonly considered to be the opposite of Epicureanism, which is seen as promoting feeling and comfort. Many people think Epicureanism is all about pleasure in life while Stoicism is all about rejecting pleasure. This view is over-simplified to the point of inaccuracy. In reality, Epicureanism teaches to arrange one's life in such a way that it is completely free of stress—including the stress brought about by over-indulgence and pleasure-seeking. True Stoicism says to align one's expectations with the logos—the natural law of the cosmos—and not to worry about the rest.

Stoicism was first taught by Zeno around 300 BC in the stoa poikile (painted colonnade) in the Agora in Athens. The philosophy is comprised of three disciplines. The philosophical base of Stocism is physics, or the natural world. Stoicism teaches materialism—that all of creation is made of material stuff, including god/logos and human souls (which are made of fire). When our five senses interact with other material objects, their reality is impelled upon us. But we can only accurately interpret those sensations through logos, which defines how the world works. All our assessments, whether concerning the temperature of a beverage or the feeling of imminent doom, are only accurate insofar as we are in tune with the logos. Ethics—the way we should act—is based on logos. The closer we are to the logos, the more ethical we will naturally act, according to Stoicism…

One area in which Stoicism contradicts Christianity is in the physics; the entire Stoic god is wrong. Stoicism teaches a kind of pantheism—that god is not only logos, but logos is god. The reason logos reigns in the cosmos is that it is in everything and a part of everything.

However, parts of Stoicism are relatable to Christianity—in fact, John calls Jesus the "Logos" in John 1, where the title is translated as "Word." Psalm 119 is filled with verses that explain joy comes with following God's law. And it's true that ethics are based on God's character. But there is one big difference: the logos is not an apathetic, material force that ordains the working of the universe. The Logos is a loving Person who intimately interacts with our lives and responds to us…

The Wisdom of the Stoics

https://www.mises.org/library/wisdom-stoics [Downloadable PDF]
Selections from Seneca, Epictetus, and Marcus Aurelius

Stoicism and Christianity

http://stoicism.biblestudyinfo.com/

I have always found it remarkable that the philosophy known as stoicism that was developed before Christ was born and that had its anticedents in Greek culture could bear such a close affinity with Christianity. This work explores this affinity via a thorough investigation of one of the premier works of Stoicism, the "First Book of the Discourses of Epictetus". What follows on this website is a complete book that comprises a study of the subject, based on a course I wrote a few years ago.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Greek Philosophy
Epicureanism
Stoicism
Platonism
Epicureanism vs Stoicism
Use by Paul

Stoics Home Page
http://stoics.com/

Christianity and Stoicism?
http://catholicexchange.com/christianity-and-stoicism

Was the New Testament Influenced by Stoicism?
http://www.equip.org/article/was-the-new-testament-influenced-by-stoicism/

Stoics and Moral Philosophy - The 8 Principles of Stoicism
https://www.thoughtco.com/stoics-and-moral-philosophy-4068536
Also, Does the Serenity Prayer Echo the Greco-Roman Notion of Stoicism?

From Stoicism to Platonism (Review)
https://rbecs.org/2017/07/31/from-stoicism-to-platonism/

Platonic Stoicism, Stoic Platonism: the dialogue between Platonism and Stoicism in antiquity https://books.google.co.uk/books/about/Platonic_Stoicism_Stoic_Platonism.html?id=glUEAQAAIAAJ

See: The Use of Greek Philosophy by Paul in the Bible

See also my other separate resources*:
Christian Scholarship: Biblical – Theological – Philosophical

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Platonism

Greek Philosophy
Epicureanism
Stoicism
Epicureanism vs Stoicism
Use by Paul

See also: Neoplatonism

Wikipedia: Platonism

Plato and Platonism
http://www.newadvent.org/cathen/12159a.htm

http://www.plosin.com/work/PlatoPlatonism.html

What is Platonism?
http://individual.utoronto.ca/lpgerson/What_Is_Platonism.pdf [PDF]

http://www.colorado.edu/neh2015/sites/default/files/attached-files/lloyd_gerson-what_is_platonism.pdf [PDF]

Platonism Study Resources
https://www.coursehero.com/subjects/platonism/

Platonic Philosophy
http://www.platonic-philosophy.org/

Platonism and neoPlatonism http://www.camrax.com/symbol/bookpdfs/1.%20Platonism%20and%20Neoplatonism.pdf [PDF]

Platonism and Theism
http://www.iep.utm.edu/pla-thei/

Platonism in the world of revealed religions https://www.britannica.com/topic/Platonism/Platonism-in-the-world-of-revealed-religions

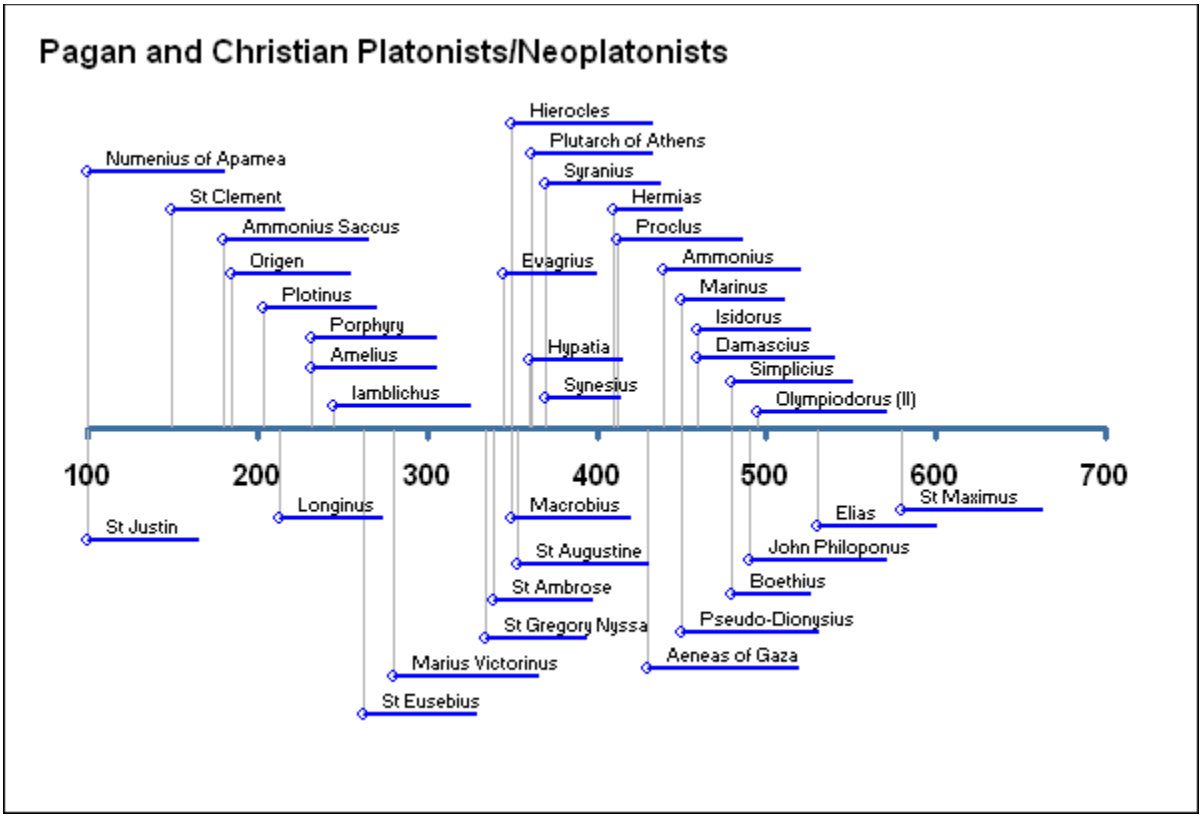
Augustine and the Platonists
http://shell.cas.usf.edu/~thomasw/aug&plat.pdf [PDF]

Platonism and Christianity
http://www.sullivan-county.com/id2/gnostic_files/plato.htm

http://trisagionseraph.tripod.com/platonism.html
https://realityisnotoptional.com/2013/11/11/christianity-platonism-for-the-people/

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



Platonism and the Kabbalah

http://www.newkabbalah.com/plato.html

Christian Platonism and Christian Neoplatonism

Christian Platonists and Platonizing Christians in History

http://www.john-uebersax.com/plato/cp.htm

About Christian Platonism

What is Christian Platonism? And what is its relevance today? We seek to answer these questions here.

The effort is ongoing, but let us begin with this much: Christian Platonism is a way of, or an approach to life. We can gain some initial appreciation of what this means by examining the many notable Christians who were Platonists and by reflecting on what they have in common.

Our principal aim is not to define or historically analyze the topic in exclusively rationalistic terms. Rather, we seek to understand the experience of Christian Platonism. Part of this, of course, involves understanding the religious dimensions of Platonism.

Essay: How Augustine Used Platonism and Stoicism in His Book "Confessions" http://www.essay.tv/buy-an-essay-how-augustine-used-platonism-and-stoicism-in-his-book-confessions/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Is Orthodoxy Neo-Platonic?
http://orthodoxinfo.com/inquirers/orth_plato.aspx

Questions on Paul, Jesus, and Middle Platonism http://christianthinktank.com/muddleplatonismx2.html

Platonism and Christianity
http://www.ccel.org/s/schaff/encyc/encyc09/htm/ii.cxxxiii.htm

Christoplatonism
http://www.epm.org/blog/2013/Jun/12/christoplatonism

See: The Use of Greek Philosophy by Paul in the Bible

See also my other separate resources*:
Christian Scholarship: Biblical – Theological – Philosophical

Greek Philosophy
Epicureanism
Stoicism
Platonism
Epicureanism vs Stoicism
Use by Paul

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Neo-Platonism

Wikepedia: Neo-Platonism

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Neoplatonism

Neoplatonism is a modern term for a strand of Platonic philosophy that started with Plotinus in the 3rd century CE. Neoplatonic philosophy derives the whole of reality from a single principle, "the One", an idea which is still popular in modern-day spirituality.

Three distinct phases in classical neoplatonism after Plotinus can be distinguished: the work of his student Porphyry; that of Iamblichus and his school in Syria; and the period in the fifth and sixth centuries, when the Academies in Alexandria and Athens flourished. The work of Proclus (412-485) had a lasting influence in the dissemination of Neoplatonism after the closing of the Platonic Academy in Athens in 529 CE by Justinian I.

In the Middle Ages, neoplatonic ideas were studied and discussed by Islamic, Christian, and Jewish thinkers. In the Islamic cultural sphere, neoplatonic texts were available in Arabic translations, and notable thinkers such as al-Farabi, Solomon ibn Gabirol (Avicebron), Avicenna, and Moses Maimonides incorporated neoplatonic elements into their own thinking. Latin translations of late ancient neoplatonic texts were first available in the Christian West in the 9th century, and became influential from the 12th century onward. Thomas Aquinas had direct access to works by Proclus, Simplicius and Pseudo-Dionysius the Areopagite, and he knew about other Neoplatonists, such as Plotinus and Porphyry, through secondhand sources.[4] Meister Eckhart was also influenced by neoplatonism, propagating a contemplative way of life which points to the Godhead beyond the nameable God.

Neoplatonism also had a strong influence on the Perennial philosophy of the Italian Renaissance thinkers Marsilio Ficino and Pico della Mirandola, and continues through 19th century Universalism and modern-day spirituality and nondualism.

Neoplatonism is a modern term. The term neoplatonism has a double function as a historical category. On the one hand, it differentiates the philosophical doctrines of Plotinus and his successors from those of the historical Plato. On the other, the term makes an assumption about the novelty of Plotinus's interpretation of Plato. In the nearly six centuries from Plato's time to Plotinus', there had been an uninterrupted tradition of interpreting Plato which had begun with Aristotle and with the immediate successors of Plato's academy and continued on through a period of Platonism which is now referred to as Middle Platonism. The term neoplatonism implies that Plotinus' interpretation of Plato was so distinct from those of his predecessors that it should be thought to introduce a new period in the history of Platonism. Some contemporary scholars, however, have taken issue with this assumption and have doubted that neoplatonism constitutes a useful label. They claim that merely marginal differences separate Plotinus' teachings from those of his immediate predecessors.

Whether neoplatonism is a meaningful or useful historical category is itself a central question concerning the history of the interpretation of Plato. For much of the history of Platonism, it was commonly accepted that the doctrines of the neoplatonists were essentially the same as those of Plato. The Renaissance Platonist Marsilio Ficino, for instance, thought that the neoplatonic interpretation of Plato was an authentic and accurate representation of Plato's philosophy. Although it is unclear precisely when scholars began to disassociate the philosophy of the historical Plato from the philosophy of his neoplatonic interpreters, they had clearly begun to do so at least as early as the first decade of the nineteenth century. Contemporary scholars often identify the German theologian Friedrich Schleiermacher as an early thinker who took Plato's philosophy to be separate from that of his neoplatonic interpreters. However, others have argued that the differentiation of Plato from neoplatonism was the result of a protracted historical development that preceded Schleiermacher's scholarly work on Plato.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Is Orthodoxy Neo-Platonic?

http://orthodoxinfo.com/inquirers/orth_plato.aspx

Stanford Encyclopedia of Philosopy: Neoplatonism

https://plato.stanford.edu/entries/neoplatonism/

Excerpt:

The term “Neoplatonism” refers to a philosophical school of thought that first emerged and flourished in the Greco-Roman world of late antiquity, roughly from the time of the Roman Imperial Crisis to the Arab conquest, i.e., the middle of the 3rd to the middle of the 7th century. In consequence of the demise of ancient materialist or corporealist thought such as Epicureanism and Stoicism, Neoplatonism became the dominant philosophical ideology of the period, offering a comprehensive understanding of the universe and the individual human being’s place in it. However, in contrast to labels such as “Stoic”, “Peripatetic” or “Platonic”, the designation “Neoplatonic” is of modern coinage and to some extent a misnomer. Late antique philosophers now counted among “the Neoplatonists” did not think of themselves as engaged in some sort of effort specifically to revive the spirit and the letter of Plato’s dialogues. To be sure, they did call themselves “Platonists” and held Plato’s views, which they understood as a positive system of philosophical doctrine, in higher esteem than the tenets of the pre-Socratics, Aristotle, or any other subsequent thinker. However, and more importantly, their signature project is more accurately described as a grand synthesis of an intellectual heritage that was by then exceedingly rich and profound. In effect, they absorbed, appropriated, and creatively harmonized almost the entire Hellenic tradition of philosophy, religion, and even literature—with the exceptions of Epicureanism, which they roundly rejected, and the thoroughgoing corporealism of the Stoics. The result of this effort was a grandiose and powerfully persuasive system of thought that reflected upon a millennium of intellectual culture and brought the scientific and moral theories of Plato, Aristotle, and the ethics of the Stoics into fruitful dialogue with literature, myth, and religious practice. In virtue of their inherent respect for the writings of many of their predecessors, the Neoplatonists together offered a kind of meta-discourse and reflection on the sum-total of ideas produced over centuries of sustained inquiry into the human condition.

As a natural consequence of their insistence on the undiminished relevance of the past, the Neoplatonists developed their characteristically speculative brand of philosophical enquiry in which empirical facts tended to serve as illustrations rather than heuristic starting points or test cases. Today, the Neoplatonic system may strike one as lofty, counterintuitive, and implausible, but to dismiss it out of hand is difficult, especially if one is prepared to take seriously a few fundamental assumptions that are at least not obviously wrong and may possibly be right.

The most fundamental of these assumptions, which the Neoplatonists shared with the majority of intellectuals of the ancient world, including most pre-Socratic thinkers as well as Socrates, Plato, Aristotle and their followers, is that mindful consciousness (nous, often translated as thought, intelligence, or intellect) is in an important sense ontologically prior to the physical realm typically taken for ultimate reality (Mind over Matter). There existed a dispute between Plato and Aristotle over whether or not the objects of mindful consciousness (abstract concepts, Platonic or otherwise, numbers, geometrical properties, and so forth) are also ontologically prior, but the Neoplatonists regarded this fact as a matter of inconsequential detail. And so, following a venerable and abiding tradition of Mind over Matter, Neoplatonism inevitably turned out to be an idealist type of philosophy.

The second assumption, which the Neoplatonists shared with the Stoics and the Hermetists (an influential group of Egyptian religious thinkers that predate the rise of Neoplatonism), was that reality, in all its cognitive and physical manifestations, depended on a highest principle which is unitary and singular. Neoplatonic philosophy is a strict form of principle-monism that strives to understand everything on the basis of a single cause that they considered divine, and indiscriminately referred to as “the First”, “the

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

One", or "the Good". Since it is reasonable to assume, as the Neoplatonists did, that any efficient cause is ontologically prior to, and hence more real, than its effect, then, in the hierarchy of being, the first principle, whatever it is, cannot be less "real" than the phenomena it is supposed to explain. Given the veracity of the first assumption (the ontological priority of intelligence and consciousness), it follows at once that the first principle must be a principle of consciousness. In consequence, the fundamental challenge all Neoplatonists struggled to meet was essentially the following: How are we to understand and describe the emergence of the universe, with all its diverse phenomena, as the effect of a singular principle of consciousness? In particular—and in this regard Neoplatonism shares certain concerns with modern cosmology—how is it possible to understand the emergence of the physical, material universe from a singularity that is in every sense unlike this universe? Their answer to this question was entirely new, and went far beyond any prior cosmic aetiology, including that of Plato's Timaeus, in elegance and sophistication.

Internet Encyclopedia of Philosophy (IEP): Neo-Platonism

http://www.iep.utm.edu/neoplato/

Excerpt:

Neo-platonism (or Neoplatonism) is a modern term used to designate the period of Platonic philosophy beginning with the work of Plotinus and ending with the closing of the Platonic Academy by the Emperor Justinian in 529 C.E. This brand of Platonism, which is often described as 'mystical' or religious in nature, developed outside the mainstream of Academic Platonism. The origins of Neoplatonism can be traced back to the era of Hellenistic syncretism which spawned such movements and schools of thought as Gnosticism and the Hermetic tradition. A major factor in this syncretism, and one which had an immense influence on the development of Platonic thought, was the introduction of the Jewish Scriptures into Greek intellectual circles via the translation known as the Septuagint. The encounter between the creation narrative of Genesis and the cosmology of Plato's Timaeus set in motion a long tradition of cosmological theorizing that finally culminated in the grand schema of Plotinus' Enneads. Plotinus' two major successors, Porphyry and Iamblichus, each developed, in their own way, certain isolated aspects of Plotinus' thought, but neither of them developed a rigorous philosophy to match that of their master. It was Proclus who, shortly before the closing of the Academy, bequeathed a systematic Platonic philosophy upon the world that in certain ways approached the sophistication of Plotinus. Finally, in the work of the so-called Pseudo-Dionysius, we find a grand synthesis of Platonic philosophy and Christian theology that was to exercise an immense influence on mediaeval mysticism and Renaissance Humanism.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Epicureanism vs. Stoicism

http://izhaarbir.com/phil/university-of-houston-undergraduate-%E2%80%93-senior/epicureanism-vs-stoicism/

http://academyofideas.com/2014/03/stoicism-vs-epicureanism/

How Can I Be Happy? An Epicurean and Stoic Perspective

https://www.thoughtco.com/happiness-epicurean-and-stoic-perspective-4070798

Excerpt:

[Classicist R.W.] Sharples desires to determine the type of lifestyle, Epicurean or Stoic, which achieves the greatest amount of happiness. In his book Stoics, Epicureans and Skeptics, Routledge, 1998 ("How can I be happy?", 82-116), he introduces readers to the fundamental ways in which happiness is created within the two philosophical perspectives, by juxtaposing the schools of thought to highlight criticisms toward, and commonality between, the two…

The Epicurean Road to Happiness

Sharples suggests that Epicureans embrace Aristotle's conception of self-love because the goal of Epicureanism is pleasure achieved through the removal of physical pain and mental anxiety. The Epicurean's foundation of belief rests within three categories of desires, including the natural and necessary, the natural but not necessary, and the unnatural desires. They eliminate all non-natural desires, such as ambition to attain political power or fame because both of these desires foster anxiety. Epicureans rely on the desires that free the body from pain by providing shelter and abolishing hunger through the supply of food and water, noting that simple foods provide the same pleasure as luxurious meals because the goal of eating is to gain nourishment.

Fundamentally, Epicureans believe people desire the natural delights derived from sex, companionship, acceptance, and love. From living a frugal lifestyle, Epicureans possess an awareness of their desires and have the capability to appreciate occasional luxuries to the fullest. Epicureans argue that the path to securing happiness comes by withdrawing from public life and residing with close, like-minded friends.

Sharples cites Plutarch's criticism of Epicureanism, which suggests that achieving happiness through withdrawal from public life neglects the desire of the human spirit to help mankind, embrace religion, and take on leadership roles and responsibility.

The Stoics on Achieving Happiness

Unlike the Epicureans who hold pleasure paramount, the Stoics grant the highest importance to self-preservation, by believing that virtue and wisdom are the necessary abilities to achieve satisfaction. Stoics believe reason leads us to pursue specific things while avoiding others, in accordance to what will serve us well in the future. The Stoics declare the necessity of four beliefs in order to achieve happiness, placing the utmost importance on virtue derived from reason alone. Wealth obtained during one's lifetime utilized to perform virtuous actions and the fitness level of one's body, which determines one's natural ability to reason, both represent core beliefs of the Stoics. Lastly, regardless of the consequences, one must always perform his/her virtuous duties. By exhibiting self-control, the Stoic follower lives according to the virtues of wisdom, bravery, justice, and moderation. In contradiction to the Stoic perspective, Sharples notes Aristotle's argument that virtue alone will not create the happiest possible life, and is achieved only through the combination of virtue and external goods…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Epicureanism and Stoicism compared http://www.csun.edu/~hcfll004/Stoic-Epic-comp.html

	EPICUREANISM (Lucretius)	STOICISM (Cicero)
THE SOUL NATURE:	material: atoms, a composite entity	spiritual: fiery, part of the Divine
ACTIVITY:	mortal, joint existence with the body	Unmoved Mover; deathless; can be separated from 'the material'
END:	disassociation into constituent atoms; end of consciousness; 'sleep' = soul dies	separation from body; ascent to uppermost sphere; continued consciousness
GODS:	Gods exist, but now dwell apart from the world; they did not create the world, so should not be worshipped. Gods are self-sufficient and do not need men. Tendency toward atheism and materialism.	Zeus = Nature. Tendency towards pantheism. All that happens is rational, in accordance with Nature's designs. Total involvement of 'Necessity' and human activity.
UNIVERSE:	The Universe is the result of random combinations of atoms into four elements, and elements into existing matter. The Universe will end when one element (earth, air, fire, water) totally dominates. [This is one view]	cyclical conflagrations and re-creations; no real beginning, no final end, only a continuous flux of elements.
cosmos:	Mechanical movements, with rational explanations of accidental combinations of things. Religion is the ignorant expression of fears of humans, and thus is irrational.	The planets are part of the 'Music of the Heavenly Spheres' There is a harmony in Nature. The divine plan for the universe is rational and can be known. Religion is rational.
CIVILIZATION:	Evolutionary view, natural selection. From isolated individual to complex society for self-protection and mutual security (Social Contract). Law is the set of arrangements made from time to time in one place or another. Control by tyrants comes of fear and wealth. True happiness comes from a simple life and contented mind.	Rational contemplation of Nature, and selfless service of fellow men, in whom the 'divine spark' burns. Happiness for one is happiness for all. Law is rational and universal, and part of every rational being's inheritance.
VIRTUE:	ATARAXIA ('freedom from disturbance'): disassociation from entanglements of society and the body. Suppression of sensual desire. Liberation from fear of death. True religion is contemplation of all things with a peaceful mind. Pleasures and pains, physical and mental.	DUTY toward fellow human beings. Moderation in all things. Justice regulates relationships between individuals. Justice is Nature, and each soul is part of nature. All can be just, through rational thought about divine justice. Reward for virtuous living: becoming a 'god'

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Greek Philosophy
Epicureanism
Stoicism
Platonism
Epicureanism vs Stoicism
Use by Paul

Stoics and Epicureans
http://www.markmoore.org/resources/essays/acts/stoics.pdf [PDF]

Greek Philosophy 14: Epicureanism & Stoicism
https://ericgerlach.com/greekphilosophy14/

Stoic and Christian (Dallas Baptist University)
http://www3.dbu.edu/naugle/pdf/stoic_christian_views.pdf [PDF]

Plato, Epicurus, and the New Testament https://bibleontap.wordpress.com/2014/04/28/plato-epicurus-and-the-new-testament/

The World of the Apostle Paul
https://probe.org/the-world-of-the-apostle-paul/

Excerpt:

When the Apostle Paul visited Athens, he took the message of Christ to the marketplace where a wide variety of people could be encountered. Among those he talked to were Epicurean and Stoic philosophers. We read about his encounter with them in Acts 17.

Who were these Epicureans and Stoics? I'd like to give a thumbnail sketch of their ideas about God, man, and the world which will help us understand why Paul what he did.

Stoicism and Epicureanism were philosophies which were developed to free people from the concerns of the present life.

Stoicism was materialistic and pantheistic. That is, Stoics believed that everything was composed of matter. The higher form of matter was of a divine nature, and it pervaded the universe. They called it various things: fire, Zeus, or even God. They believed that this divine "fire," or God, generated the universe and would one day take the universe back into itself through a great conflagration. This cycle of creation and conflagration is repeated eternally.

Stoicism was thus deterministic. Things are the way they are and can't be changed. To find true happiness, they believed one should understand the course of nature through reason and simply accept things the way they are.

In contrast to the Stoics, Paul taught that God is personal and not a part of this universe. He also taught that there would be a judgment to come, not a giant conflagration leading to another cycle.

Epicureans focused on the individual's happiness, also, but they went in a completely different direction than the Stoics. They believed that the way to happiness was through maximizing pleasure and minimizing pain. Tranquility was sought through a quiet, contemplative life lived among a community of friends.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Epicureans were materialists, also, but they weren't pantheists. They believed the universe was formed from atoms falling through space which occasionally bumped into each other accidentally, eventually forming the stars and planets and us. When we die, we simply become dissolved into atoms again. Epicureans believed in the gods, but thought they were like men, only of a higher order. The gods resided out in space somewhere, enjoying a life of quiet pleasure like that of the Epicureans. They had nothing to do with men. Apart from participation in sacrifices and religious rituals for aesthetic purposes, Epicureans believed humans needn't worry about the gods.

Against the Epicureans, Paul taught that God is involved in the affairs of His creation and created us specifically to search for Him. Of course, Paul's doctrine of a future judgment didn't fit with their thinking either.

N.T. Wright and the Faithfulness of Paul: Part 3: Paul's Worldview

https://derekvreeland.com/2014/09/n-t-wright-faithfulness-paul-part-3-pauls-worldview/

Excerpt:

I. The Convergence of Three Worlds
"So what happens with the owl, the (rooster) and the eagle are met by the bird that hovers over Israel?" (351) Review: Owl: Greek philosophy; Rooster: pagan culture and religion; Eagle: Roman politics; Hovering bird: Jewish religion

Paul remained a Jewish thinker whose worldview was shaped by Greek philosophy, Pagan religion, and Roman politics. These three were the "mental furniture" decorating Paul's primarily Jewish worldview. Reconstructing Paul's worldview is a necessary first step to understanding Paul's theology. Worldviews "give flavor to culture on the one hand and worship on the other" (351).

Worldview is comprised of praxis, symbol, story, and question. N.T. Wright joins together praxis (practices) and symbols in order to provide a "thick description" of Paul and his mindset.

H. Summing up Paul's symbolic praxis
These symbols-in-action are mental navigation points in Paul's worldview, shaping how he see's God, God's actions, God's world, and God's future. These symbols shape how Paul does theology as seen in his letters to the churches. Paul was not a detached observer of these things, he was personally involved as a pastor. He was not a stoic (everything is god) or an epicurean (the gods are far away and in concerned). He was an active member of the Messiah-family.

See also*: Paul's Worldview

Was The New Testament Influenced by Pagan Philosophy?

http://www.equip.org/article/was-the-new-testament-influenced-by-pagan-philosophy/

(Considers Platonism, Stoicism and Philo)

Platonism, Christianity, Stoicism: The Subject, The Truth, And the Political Import of Their Relationship in Three Traditions

https://rauli.cbs.dk/index.php/foucault-studies/article/view/4661/5094 [Downloadable as PDF]

See also:* The Use of Greek Philosophy by Paul in the Bible

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Three World Views in Economics

https://eppc.org/publications/the-three-world-views-in-economics/

Excerpt:

What is economics about?
Jesus once made the empirical observation that since the days of Noah and Lot, people have been doing, and until the end of the world presumably will be doing four kinds of things. He gave these examples: "planting and building," "buying and selling," "marrying and being given in marriage," and "eating and drinking" (Luke 17:26-28). In other words, we humans produce, exchange, give, and use our human and nonhuman goods.

A Brief, Remedial History of Economics.
Scholastic economics (1250-1776) began when Thomas Aquinas integrated these four elements (production, exchange distribution and consumption), all drawn from Aristotle and Augustine, in an outline integrated at the individual, domestic and political levels. This scholastic outline was taught by Catholics and Protestants (after the Reformation) for more than five centuries. Classical economics (1776-1871) began when Adam Smith cut these four elements to two, trying to explain "division of labor" by production and exchange alone, eliminating distribution and consumption. Today's "neoclassical" economics (1871-c.2000) began when three economists [1] independently reinvented Augustine's theory of utility, reintegrating consumption with production and exchange, but not distribution. I think "neoscholastic" economics will revolutionize the field again by restoring the missing element of distribution.

The three worldviews.
When Paul preached in the marketplace of Athens, he prefaced the Gospel with a Biblically orthodox adaptation of Greco-Roman natural law. The evangelist Luke tells us that "some Epicurean and Stoic philosophers argued with him" (Acts 17:18). The same dispute continues among (neo)scholastic, classical and neoclassical economists. In (neo)scholastic natural law, economics is a theory of rational providence, describing how we choose both persons as "ends" (expressed by our personal and collective gifts) and the scarce means used (consumed) by or for those persons, which we make real through production and exchange. By dropping both distribution and consumption, Smith expressed the Stoic pantheism that viewed the universe "to be itself a Divinity, an Animal" [2] with God as its immanent soul, while sentimental humans choose neither ends nor means rationally. By restoring consumption but not distribution, neoclassical economics expresses the Epicurean materialism that claims humans somehow evolved as clever animals, adept at calculating means but not ends, since "reason is, and ought only to be, the slave of the passions." [3]

I have found these philosophical differences helpful in interpreting the differences in economic theory used by economists...

— John D. Mueller is a Fellow and directs the Economics and Ethics Program at the Ethics and Public Policy Center.

Endnotes:
1 W.S. Jevons in England, Carl Menger in Austria, and Leon Walras in Switzerland.
2 Adam Smith [1795], "Essays on Philosophical Subjects," in The Early Writings of Adam Smith, ed. J. Ralph Lindgren, Augustus M. Kelley, New York, 1967.
3 David Hume, A Treatise of Human Nature, II, III, iii, http://www.gutenberg.org/dirs/etext03/trthn10.txt.

Greek Philosophy
Epicureanism
Stoicism
Platonism
Epicureanism vs Stoicism
Use by Paul

See: The Use of Greek Philosophy by Paul in the Bible

See also my other separate resources*:
Christian Scholarship: Biblical – Theological – Philosophical

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Worldview

Here's how Wright diagrams worldview in The New Testament and the People of God.

He then goes on to say that the part we refer to as culture runs between symbol and praxis.

Source: https://nickmelazzo.wordpress.com/page/48/

See also: Paul's Worldview for description of above diagram as applied to Paul and for more specifics about Paul's worldview.

FYI: N.T. Wright | On Worldview (2017) [Recommended]

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=2u-f2qmYr1s [Video] (< 8 min.)

Introduction: N.T. Wright and the Biblical Worldview (2006)

https://biblicalstudies.org.uk/pdf/ref-rev/15-2/15-2_intro.pdf [PDF]

What's in a worldview? | Todd Weir | TEDxUniversityofGroningen (2017)

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=0I6LAYwN3Jk [Video]

It is often said that those who don't understand history are doomed to repeat it. As a historian, I am a bit more humble. I think the task of history is to illuminate key aspects of the present day from a new angle and in this way, give us new approaches to old problems. In this TED talk I will challenge you to rethink your assumptions about one of the key concepts in today's thinking about politics and religion: worldview. If you turn on the news, you may hear pundits ask "what is Trump's worldview?" or speak of a "clash of worldviews" behind Brexit. Yet, this word, which seems so suited to our present day, has made a long journey. Where did the term worldview originate? How did it come to represent both religion and secular philosophies, politics as well as culture? What is “Christian worldview”? Why did Hitler embrace this term for his movement, while after the war American liberals rejected it? By delving into the history of Germany, the Netherlands and the United States to answer these questions, we will arrive back at the present moment and see the clash of worldviews in a new light.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Todd Weir is Professor of History of Christianity and Modern Culture at the University of Groningen. His research revolves around the relationship between religion and secularism. In 2014 he published a study on Secularism and Religion in Nineteenth Century Germany: The Rise of the Fourth Confession with Cambridge University Press. Todd is now researching the transnational history of the term worldview/*Weltanschauung from 1790 to the present. This talk was given at a TEDx event using the TED conference format but independently organized by a local community.

[Not flushed out/explained by the speaker well enough for my tastes, but provides an explanation of the origin of concept of secular “worldview”.]

Wikipedia: Worldview

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/World_view

A world view or worldview is the fundamental cognitive orientation of an individual or society encompassing the whole of the individual's or society's knowledge and point of view. A world view can include natural philosophy; fundamental, existential, and normative postulates; or themes, values, emotions, and ethics. The term is a calque of the German word Weltanschauung [ˈvɛlt.ʔanˌʃaʊ.ʊŋ] (listen), composed of Welt ('world') and Anschauung ('view' or 'outlook').[3] The German word is also used in English.

It is a concept fundamental to German philosophy and epistemology and refers to a wide world perception. Additionally, it refers to the framework of ideas and beliefs forming a global description through which an individual, group or culture watches and interprets the world and interacts with it. Worldview remains a confused and confusing concept in English, used very differently by linguists and sociologists. It is for this reason that Underhill suggests five subcategories: world-perceiving, world-conceiving, cultural mindset, personal world, and perspective (see Underhill 2009, 2011 & 2012). Worldviews are often taken to operate at a conscious level, directly accessible to articulation and discussion, as opposed to existing at a deeper, pre-conscious level, such as the idea of "ground" in Gestalt psychology and media analysis. However, core worldview beliefs are often deeply rooted, and so are only rarely reflected on by individuals, and are brought to the surface only in moments of crises of faith.

...

One of the most important concepts in cognitive philosophy and cognitive sciences is the German concept of Weltanschauung. This expression has often been used to refer to the "wide worldview" or "wide world perception" of a people, family, or person. The Weltanschauung of a people originates from the unique world experience of a people, which they experience over several millennia. The language of a people reflects the Weltanschauung of that people in the form of its syntactic structures and untranslatable connotations and its denotations.

The term Weltanschauung is often wrongly attributed to Wilhelm von Humboldt, the founder of German ethnolinguistics (see Trabant). As Jürgen Trabant points out, however, and as Underhill reminds us in his Humboldt, Worldview and Language (2009), Humboldt's key concept was Weltansicht. Weltanschauung, used first by Kant and later popularized by Hegel, was always used in German and later used in English to refer more to philosophies, ideologies and cultural or religious perspectives, than to linguistic communities and their mode of apprehending reality.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Weltansicht was used by Humboldt to refer to the overarching conceptual and sensorial apprehension of reality shared by a linguistic community (Nation). But Humboldt maintained that the speaking human being was the core of language. Speech maintains worldviews. Worldviews are not prisons which contain and constrain us, they are the spaces we develop within, create and resist creatively in speaking together.

A worldview can be expressed as the "fundamental cognitive, affective, and evaluative presuppositions a group of people make about the nature of things, and which they use to order their lives."

If it were possible to draw a map of the world on the basis of Weltanschauung, it would probably be seen to cross political borders—Weltanschauung is the product of political borders and common experiences of a people from a geographical region, environmental-climatic conditions, the economic resources available, socio-cultural systems, and the language family.[1] (The work of the population geneticist Luigi Luca Cavalli-Sforza aims to show the gene-linguistic co-evolution of people).

If the Sapir–Whorf hypothesis is correct, the worldview map of the world would be similar to the linguistic map of the world. However, it would also almost coincide with a map of the world drawn on the basis of music across people.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Three World Views in Economics

https://eppc.org/publications/the-three-world-views-in-economics/

Excerpt:

What is economics about?
Jesus once made the empirical observation that since the days of Noah and Lot, people have been doing, and until the end of the world presumably will be doing four kinds of things. He gave these examples: "planting and building," "buying and selling," "marrying and being given in marriage," and "eating and drinking" (Luke 17:26-28). In other words, we humans produce, exchange, give, and use our human and nonhuman goods.

A Brief, Remedial History of Economics.
Scholastic economics (1250-1776) began when Thomas Aquinas integrated these four elements (production, exchange distribution and consumption), all drawn from Aristotle and Augustine, in an outline integrated at the individual, domestic and political levels. This scholastic outline was taught by Catholics and Protestants (after the Reformation) for more than five centuries. Classical economics (1776-1871) began when Adam Smith cut these four elements to two, trying to explain "division of labor" by production and exchange alone, eliminating distribution and consumption. Today's "neoclassical" economics (1871-c.2000) began when three economists [1] independently reinvented Augustine's theory of utility, reintegrating consumption with production and exchange, but not distribution. I think "neoscholastic" economics will revolutionize the field again by restoring the missing element of distribution.

The three worldviews.
When Paul preached in the marketplace of Athens, he prefaced the Gospel with a Biblically orthodox adaptation of Greco-Roman natural law. The evangelist Luke tells us that "some Epicurean and Stoic philosophers argued with him" (Acts 17:18). The same dispute continues among (neo)scholastic, classical and neoclassical economists. In (neo)scholastic natural law, economics is a theory of rational providence, describing how we choose both persons as "ends" (expressed by our personal and collective gifts) and the scarce means used (consumed) by or for those persons, which we make real through production and exchange. By dropping both distribution and consumption, Smith expressed the Stoic pantheism that viewed the universe "to be itself a Divinity, an Animal" [2] with God as its immanent soul, while sentimental humans choose neither ends nor means rationally. By restoring consumption but not distribution, neoclassical economics expresses the Epicurean materialism that claims humans somehow evolved as clever animals, adept at calculating means but not ends, since "reason is, and ought only to be, the slave of the passions." [3]

I have found these philosophical differences helpful in interpreting the differences in economic theory used by economists...

— John D. Mueller is a Fellow and directs the Economics and Ethics Program at the Ethics and Public Policy Center.
Endnotes:
1 W.S. Jevons in England, Carl Menger in Austria, and Leon Walras in Switzerland.
2 Adam Smith [1795], "Essays on Philosophical Subjects," in The Early Writings of Adam Smith, ed. J. Ralph Lindgren, Augustus M. Kelley, New York, 1967.
3 David Hume, A Treatise of Human Nature, II, III, iii, http://www.gutenberg.org/dirs/etext03/trthn10.txt

See also: Paul's Worldview

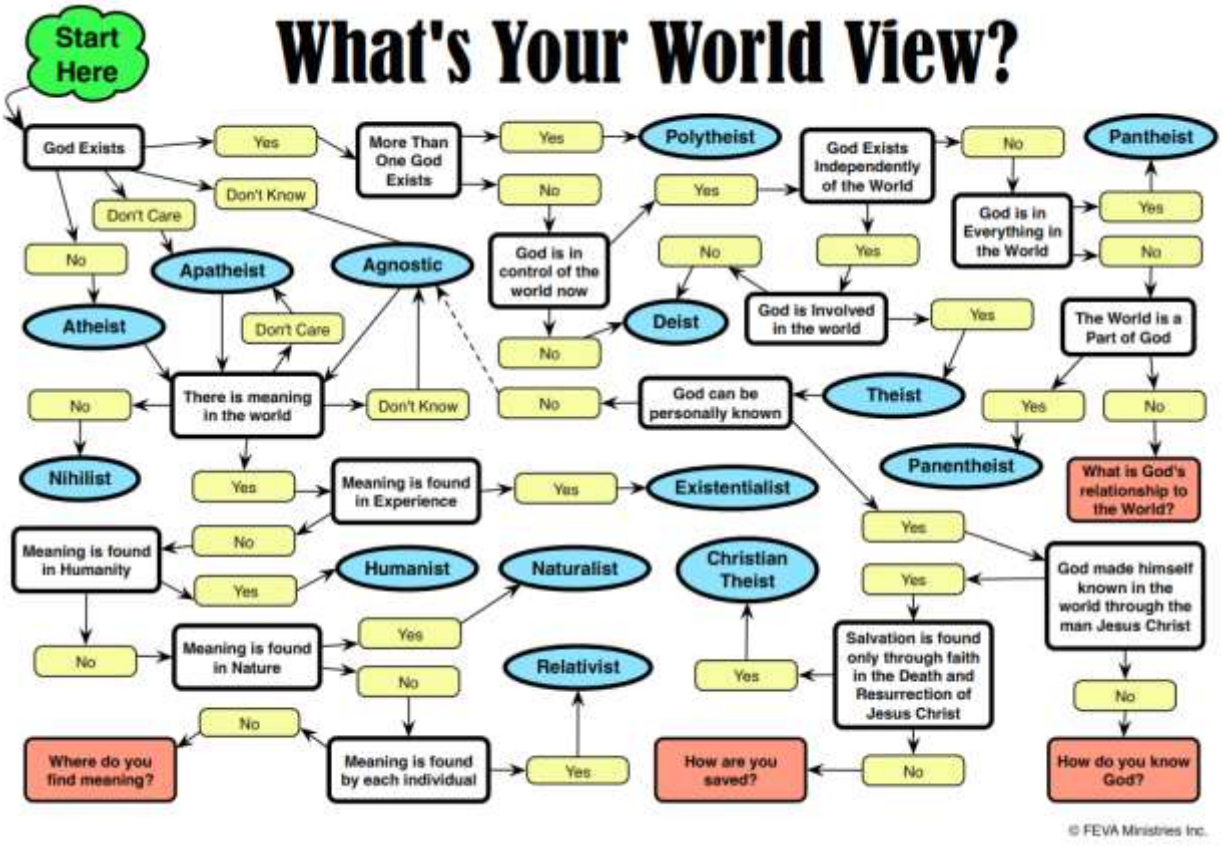
 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Worldview Summary

http://www.feva.org/pdf/wv_sum.pdf [PDF]

https://visualunit.me/2011/12/19/worldview-summary/



Alternate source: https://visualunit.files.wordpress.com/2011/10/worldview-summary-diagrams-final.jpg

See next page for larger view…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

What's Your Worldview?
http://www.feva.org/pdf/world_view.pdf [PDF]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

What in the World is a Worldview?

http://www.reasons.org/articles/what-in-the-world-is-a-worldview

Excerpt:

…Therefore, a well-thought-out course or worldview needs to answer twelve ultimate concerns that philosophers identify as "the big questions of life:" The answers given to these inquiries not only provide focus and purpose in life, but they can also (as a system) be tested for logical coherence, correspondence to reality, explanatory power and scope, and internal and external livability.

The Big Twelve

A viable worldview must offer adequate answers to these questions

Ultimate Reality	What kind of God, if any, actually exists?
External Reality	Is there anything beyond the cosmos?
Knowledge	What can be known, and how can anyone know it?
Origin	Where did I come from?
Identity	Who am I?
Location	Where am I?
Morals	How should I live?
Values	What should I consider of great worth?
Predicament	What is humanity's fundamental problem?
Resolution	How can humanity's problem be solved?
Past / Present	What is the meaning and direction of history?
Destiny	Will I survive the death of my body and, if so, in what state?

What is a Worldview? Ravi Zacharias on Origin, Meaning, Morality, and Destiny

https://vimeo.com/47662226 [Video]

I am totally convinced the Christian faith is the most coherent worldview around. Everyone: pantheist, atheist, skeptic, polytheist has to answer these questions: Where did I come from? What is life's meaning? How do I define right from wrong and what happens to me when I die? Those are the fulcrum points of our existence. I deal with cultural issues whether they be in the Middle East, Far East, the Orient or the West. You broach questions in the context of their culture and then present Christian answers.
- Ravi Zacharias

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

World Views

http://www.leaderu.com/orgs/probe/docs/w-views.html

Excerpt:

Components Found in All World Views

In addition to putting world views to these tests, we should also see that world views have common components. These components are self-evident. It is important to keep these in mind as you establish your own world view, and as you share with others. There are four of them.

First, something exists. This may sound obvious, but it really is an important foundational element of world view building since some will try to deny it. But a denial is self-defeating because all people experience cause and effect. The universe is rational; it is predictable.

Second, all people have absolutes. Again, many will try to deny this, but to deny it is to assert it. All of us seek an infinite reference point. For some it is God; for others it is the state, or love, or power, and for some this reference point is themselves or man.

Third, two contradictory statements cannot both be right. This is a primary law of logic that is continually denied. Ideally speaking, only one world view can correctly mirror reality. This cannot be overemphasized in light of the prominent belief that tolerance is the ultimate virtue. To say that someone is wrong is labeled intolerant or narrow-minded. A good illustration of this is when we hear people declare that all religions are the same. It would mean that Hindus, for example, agree with Christians concerning God, Jesus, salvation, heaven, hell, and a host of other doctrines. This is nonsense.

Fourth, all people exercise faith. All of us presuppose certain things to be true without absolute proof. These are inferences or assumptions upon which a belief is based. This becomes important, for example, when we interact with those who allege that only the scientist is completely neutral. Some common assumptions are: a personal God exists; man evolved from inorganic material; man is essentially good; reality is material.

As we dialogue with people who have opposing world views, an understanding of these common components can help us listen more patiently, and they can guide us to make our case more wisely.

Six World View Questions

Have you ever been frustrated with finding ways to stir the thinking of a non-Christian friend? We are confident the following questions will be of help. And we are also confident they will stir your thinking about the subject of world views.

We will answer these questions with various non-Christian responses. Christian responses will be discussed later in this article.

First, Why is there something rather than nothing? Some may actually say something came from nothing. Others may state that something is here because of impersonal spirit or energy. And many believe matter is eternal.

Second, How do you explain human nature? Frequently people will say we are born as blank slates, neither good nor evil. Another popular response is that we are born good, but society causes us to behave otherwise.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Third, What happens to a person at death? Many will say that a person's death is just the disorganization of matter. Increasingly people in our culture are saying that death brings reincarnation or realization of oneness.

Fourth, How do you determine what is right and wrong? Often we hear it said that ethics are relative or situational. Others assert that we have no free choice since we are entirely determined. Some simply derive "oughts" from what "is." And of course history has shown us the tragic results of a "might makes right" answer.

Fifth, How do you know that you know? Some say that the mind is the center of our source of knowledge. Things are only known deductively. Others claim that knowledge is only found in the senses. We know only what is perceived.

Sixth, What is the meaning of history? One answer is that history is determined as part of a mechanistic universe. Another answer is that history is a linear stream of events linked by cause and effect but without purpose. Yet another answer is that history is meaningless because life is absurd.{5}

The alert Christian will quickly recognize that the preceding answers are contrary to his beliefs. There are definite, sometimes startling differences. World views are in collision. Thus we should know at least something about the world views that are central to the conflict. And we should certainly be able to articulate a Christian world view.

Examples of World Views

In his excellent book, The Universe Next Door, James Sire catalogs the most influential world views of the past and present. These are Christian Theism, Deism, Naturalism, Nihilism, Existentialism, Eastern Pantheism, and New Age or New Consciousness.{6}

Deism, a prominent world view during the eighteenth century, has almost entirely left the scene. The Deist believes in God, but that God created and then abandoned the universe.

Nihilism, a more recent world view, is alive among many young people and some intellectuals. Nihilists see no value to reality; life is absurd.

Existentialism is prominent and can be seen frequently, even among unwitting Christians. The Existentialist, like the Nihilist, sees life as absurd, but sees man as totally free to make himself in the face of this absurdity.

Christian Theism, Naturalism, and New Age Pantheism are the most influential world views presently in the United States. Now we will survey each of them.

Christian Theism

Let's return to the six questions we asked earlier and briefly see how the Christian Theist might answer them.

Question: Why is there something rather than nothing? Answer: There is an infinite-personal God who has created the universe out of nothing.

Question: How do you explain human nature? Answer: Man was originally created good in God's image, but chose to sin and thus infected all of humanity with what is called a "sin nature." So man has been endowed with value by his creator, but his negative behavior is in league with his nature.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Question: What happens to a person at death? Answer: Death is either the gate to life with God or to eternal separation from Him. The destination is dependent upon the response we give to God's provision for our sinfulness.

Question: How do you determine what is right and wrong? Answer: The guidelines for conduct are revealed by God.

Question: How do you know that you know? Answer: Reason and experience can be legitimate teachers, but a transcendent source is necessary. We know some things only because we are told by God through the Bible.

Question: What is the meaning of history? Answer: History is a linear and meaningful sequence of events leading to the fulfillment of God's purposes for man.

Christian Theism had a long history in Western culture. This does not mean that all individuals who have lived in Western culture have been Christians. It simply means that this world view was dominant; it was the most influential. And this was true even among non-Christians. This is no longer valid. Western culture has experienced a transition to what is called Naturalism.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Worldview Compartion Chart

http://molinebaptist.org/wp-content/uploads/2014/02/Worldview-Comparison-Chart.pdf [PDF}

There are eight major worldviews. Other worldviews exist but are based upon one or more of these eight: Theism, Deism, Naturalism, Nihilism, Existentialism, Pantheism, New Age and Post Modernism.

Seven propositions are used to broadly compare these eight basic worldviews. They are:
1. What is the nature of God or ultimate reality?
2. What is the nature of the cosmos?
3. What is the nature of humanity?
4. What is the result of human death?
5. What is the basis of human knowing?
6. What is the basis of ethics?
7. What is the basis of history?

BACKGROUND

Deism – Deism evolved in the 17th century as Christian Theism became chaotic and quarrelsome between denominations. Knowledge changes location and authority from God to humanity. By the 18th century Deism was virtually abandoned because of too many conflicting and untenable positions. The danger is that Deism proved to be a transitional worldview between Theism and Naturalism.

Naturalism – Naturalism evolved between the 17th and 18th centuries. It is a dangerous contender that endures even today. Its strongest assertions are that "matter" is all that matters and reason is the sole basis for truth.

Nihilism – Nihilism evolved in the late 18th century. Friedrich Nietzsche mostly credited with founding Nihilism and he wrote the most damaging statement that, "God is dead". Nihilism is the logical conclusion of all worldviews except Theism. It is characterized by the denial of everything, absence of meaning and nothingness.

Existentialism – Existentialism gained popularity in the mid-20 century and it took Nihilism seriously. Its greatest goal was to transcend Nihilism. Two major forms are followed: Atheistic Existentialism which is a parasite to pure Naturalism and Theistic Existentialism which is a parasite to pure Theism. Only the Atheistic form is compared in the chart.

Pantheism – Pantheism originated as a worldview in the mid-17th century, but aspects existed in ancient forms of Hinduism since 1,000 BC. Philosopher Baruch Spinoza argued against Descartes' dualist theory of a separate body and spirit. It gained popularity in America in the 1960's.

New Age – New Age roots trace back to ancient Gnosticism. It appeared in America in the 1960's with a growing interest in the 70's and a wide awareness in the 80's. By the 1990's it achieved general acceptance. It is highly syncretic of all other worldviews, especially Pantheism and Animism (not compared here). It depends heavily upon the notion of and pursuing altered states of consciousness.

Post Modernism – Post Modernism has similarities to Naturalism and Existentialism. It evolved in the mid-20th century and is marked by a pluralism of perspectives and a plethora of philosophical possibilities. Its defining concepts include relativism, absence of truth and antiideologies. Metanarratives don't exist but their stories are meaningful and useful. Nevertheless, no story has absolute corresponding truth.

[External link to chart (PDF)]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

PROBLEMS

Deism – It is an inconsistent and unstable worldview. Ethical system is illogical since they claim nothing is inherently right or wrong. Knowledge works outward from the empirical specifics to general, universal truths, however, no human can understand enough specifics to draw confident conclusion about the general. Humans can't be significant or have individuality in a closed universe. This is determinism which leads to apathy and hopelessness.

Naturalism – It is a circular reasoning of complexity of matter. This worldview takes a determinist view based on inexorable cause and effect, but, insists upon freewill. Without freewill there can be no morality. Extinction at death poses a major problem regarding any sense of purpose. There is no tenable explanation for the origins of the universe.

Nihilism – Logic and reason are not provable. The closed universe is boxed in (it's inconclusive without outside measurement or comparison). Extinction is psychologically unsettling. Chance is offered as a means for freewill but that's not possible in a closed system. Knowledge, meaning and ethics are also boxed in and can't be proven without outside measurement or comparison. Nihilism denies the meaning of everything including art, yet, its strongest adherents are artists and writers.

Existentialism – Relegating ethics to one's own subjective judgment leads to solipsism. There's no answer to death or the concept of eternity deep within one's being.

Pantheism – It insists upon an impersonal God and impersonal soul. However, karma acts like a moral personal being that judges an individual being determining success and failure and what in form a person should be reincarnated. Techniques leading to the One require actions like chanting and meditation but they are professed illusions themselves and therefore ultimately meaningless. Improving one's karma is not love for another's sake but is self-serving.

New Age – A closed universe denies a transcendent God which also denies the basis for absolute ethics. This leads to solipsism, egoism and megalomania. They believe in demigods, demons and spiritual guardians that haunt the inner space which must be placated by rituals or controlled by incantation. Knowledge and truth is based in the self which leads to epistemological nihilism. Proposing the self to be God leads to infinite regression of "am I the dreamer or the dream"?

Post Modernism – Post Modernism states that too much confidence has been placed in human reason. They state that language is closely related with power and authority. These points the Christian Theist generally finds agreement. The rejection of any and all metanarratives (overarching explanation for life and reality) is itself a metanarrative. The proposition that we can't know reality but only tell stories about it is self-referential. Using language to claim that language is indeterminate is a paradox. Claiming that human reason and certitude is insufficient rests on the sufficiency and certainty of human reason. All these positions are contradictory but have increasingly gained acceptance in American society.

[External link to chart (PDF)]

Chart begins on next page…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

	Worldviews
Proposit-ions	Theism	Deism	Naturalism	Nihilism	Existential-ism	Pantheism	New Age	Post Modernism
God Or Ultimate Reality	God is infinite, personal, transcendent, imamnent, omniscient, sovereign and he IS good	God is transcendent God is NOT imamnent, personal, omniscient or sovereign God is neither good nor evil	God does NOT exist Only matter exists eternally and is all there is Nothing comes from nothing There is no spiritual element	God does NOT exist Only matter exists eternally and is all there is Nothing comes from nothing Reality itself is in doubt	God does NOT exist Only two types of being: objective and subjective Objective is matter and law of cause and effect Subjective is awareness, intellect and freedom The subjective is merely a shadow of the objective Humans are subjective beings that control and create meaning and value	God exists God (universe/ nature) is all and in all, the totality of all and identical with divinity God is NOT a personal being God is the One and ultimate reality	The self is the prime reality The self's perception is reality, including imagination The self creates reality The self is God and a universe unto itself	God does NOT exist Matter exists eternally but can't be fully known Truth about reality is forever hidden We are left with telling stories about reality which can be useful but void of absolute truth
Cosmos	God created the cosmos ex nihilo The universe is orderly The universe is open	God created the cosmos like a clock/ machine The universe is closed It's in its normal state, it's not fallen	The cosmos is a uniformity of cause and effect It is a closed system No change or reordering is possible from within or from outside	The cosmos is a uniformity of cause and effect It is a closed system No change or reordering is possible from within or from outside	The cosmos is a uniformity of cause and effect It is a closed system The human subjective realm is an open system The objective world is eternal but the subjective is not	God is all that exists Anything that appears to exist that isn't God is an illusion Distinction requires thought, but Pantheism searches for the oneness in everything	Each self is a universe unified unto itself The cosmos is two realms of visible as experienced through ordinary awareness and the invisible as experienced through altered states of consciousness The visible is real, orderly and open to reordering The invisible is "next door", with different ordering and laws The spirit dimension is characterized by brilliance and color	Doubt is cast on the law of cause and effect as objective reality It is a closed system that accepts the incongruence of chance and internal reordering by nature, evolution and survival of the fittest
Humanity	Humans are created in God's image Humans are personal, limitedly transcendent, limited knowing, know right from wrong, desire community and are creative	Humans are personal, intelligent and have capacity for community and creativity Humans do NOT have determination or individuality apart from the machinery	Humans are only complex machines of matter The invention of computers fuel their position Insist that humans are unique due to reason and speech Human thought and sense of ethics gives us value above other matter	Humans are only complex machines of matter, just part of the system Freewill is an illusion, just part of the system Strict determinism, mere pinballs in the machine Awareness is just a part of the machine looking at itself	In the objective realm essence precedes existence In the human subjective realm existence precedes essence Humans define themselves by awareness and determinacy Each human is free to think, act and dream; he is king of his own subjective world	Atman is Brahman – the human soul is the soul of the cosmos; each person's soul is God All roads lead to the One Awareness, personality, knowledge and ethics disappear when one becomes one with the One It's about techniques not belief or faith Waking life leads to dreaming life, then deep sleep and finally awakened life of pure consciousness	Humans are God; prime reality Increasing awareness propels one toward a radically transformed being The Age of Aquarius bring perfect health, happiness and transcendent joy in a utopian Nirvana	Friedrich Nietzsche critiqued Descartes' "I think therefore I am" by turning it around and asked does the thinking create the "I"? Such radical doubt caused radical damage to any sort of human certitude
Death	Each individual is transformed Either glorified in an eternal existence with God - or – Condemned to eternal	Deism offers no explanation for death or what comes after it It's a normal part of the clockwork	Death is extinction of personality and individuality Matter in the body is disorganized at death Only a sense of immortality exists through progeny, work in	Death is the extinction of personality and individuality Matter merely returns to matter	Death is the extinction of an individual's subjectivity The subject returns to an object in the objective world Death is the ultimate absurdity which creates anxiety	Death is the extinction of the individual The soul can't pass out of existence Karma and reincarnation rule this view	Humans are a unity beyond physical form Death is a transition to another stage of life Near death stories or experiences are valued Believe in past recall, channeling and reincarnation	Death is extinction Only a sense of immortality exists through progeny, work in society or enduring influence upon others However, they don't claim that they can really know

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

	existence separated from God in hell		society or enduring influence upon others
Knowing	God gives the ability to know We can know the universe We can know God through "special revelation in God's word Ultimate "special" revelation is found in Jesus Christ	Humans have intellect but Deism doesn't understand how God is and can only be known behind nature Empiricism, reason and experience is the only way to know	Empiricism, reason and experience is the only way to know Nothing is revealed from outside the closed system	Empiricism, reason and experience is the only way to know Nothing is revealed from outside the closed system	Observation and experience is the only way to know The knower assimilates knowledge which becomes the knower	Knowledge passes away and is an illusion because it requires dualism between the knower and what can be known; Pantheism insists on oneness in all	Knowing is based in personal experience The self creates reality What one sees, imagines and experiences is reality and what is known	Confidence is lost in human reason and ability to know anything Nothing we think we know can be proved by outside reality Language is a human construct, the cosmos doesn't speak We make the self through language, there is no substantial self Language and stories give power to the teller
Ethics	God created everything and all systems including ethics God's character is goodness and he is the standard of ethics – not humanity	Ethics is limited only to observing nature Nature is right, (whatever is, is right) Deism affirms Theistic ethics but NOT their basis for	Ethics applies only to human beings Value is a construct of humans, not of nature There are no ethics in nature Ethics stem from societal and situational experience Moral absolutes do	There is no right and wrong in nature Humans have no morality in a closed system Absolutes do NOT exist	There is no right and wrong in the objective world Action affirms one's values and is therefore good, no one can choose evil Good is only measured from within one's subjective world The only evil or wrong is passivity	Good and evil pass away because ethics require distinction which is fundamentally opposed to oneness of all things	Only the visible realm of ordinary consciousness observes ethical standards The invisible realm of altered states of consciousness transcends ethics	Ethics flow from the construct of language Ethics and truth are what a community agrees upon Truth is whatever those in power say it is, there's no appeal to a higher authority Rules are oppression, no rules or agreed rules are freedom
	Ethics are absolute	them	NOT exist
History	History is linear, sequential and is leading somewhere History has meaning History is a record of God's involvement in creation and with humanity	History is linear It isn't leading somewhere It doesn't have meaning It isn't important in itself History unfolds in no other way than it has	History is a linear record of cause and effect It has no direction or purpose It entails all matter with a subset of humans History has a self-activating origin, i.e. Darwinian evolution Humans are not the goal of history or evolution	History is a linear record of cause and effect It has no direction or purpose It entails all matter with a subset of humans History has a self-activating origin, i.e. Darwinian evolution Humans are not the goal of history or evolution	History is a linear record of cause and effect It has no direction or purpose It entails all matter with a subset of humans History is self-activating without explanation Humans are not the goal of history or evolution	Oneness with the One passes beyond time and space Time is an illusion History is essentially cyclical (consider vantage points along a river) History is disregarded as irrelevant	History is linear Humanity is moving toward a higher transcendent state There's no proposed statement of origin	Post Modernists engage in revisionist history by creating the past in the image of the present and according to the judgment of the historian These historians practice subjectivity and no longer use scholarly footnotes

A Comparison of Major Worldviews [PDF]

http://web001.rbc.org/pdf/discovery-series/windows-on-the-world-a-comparison-of-major-worldviews.pdf

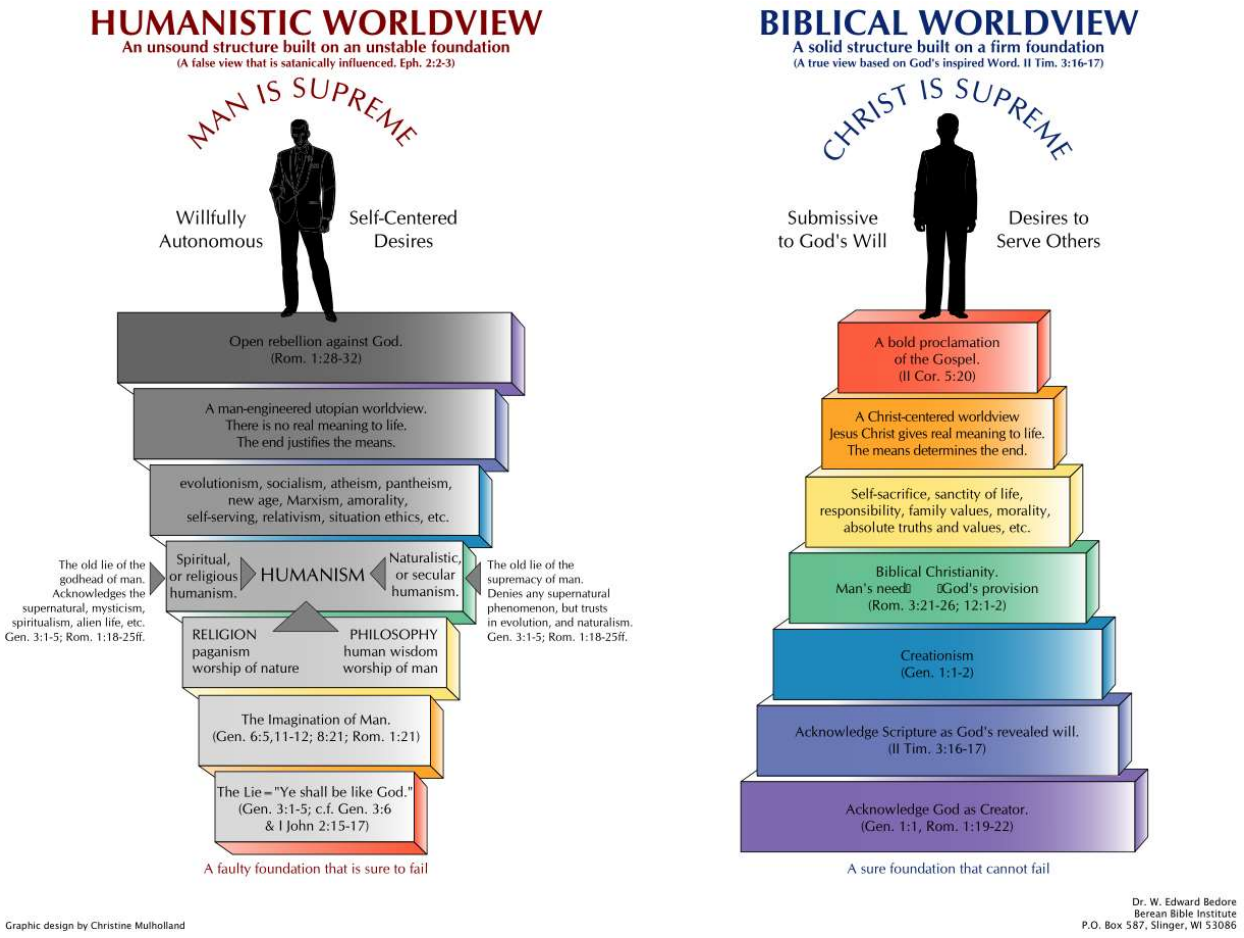
What's a Christian Worldview?

http://www.focusonthefamily.com/faith/christian-worldview/whats-a-christian-worldview/whats-a-worldview-anyway

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Four Models of Western Religious Thought

http://www.hisglory.us/World%20View%20Index/worldviewindex.htm#Chart

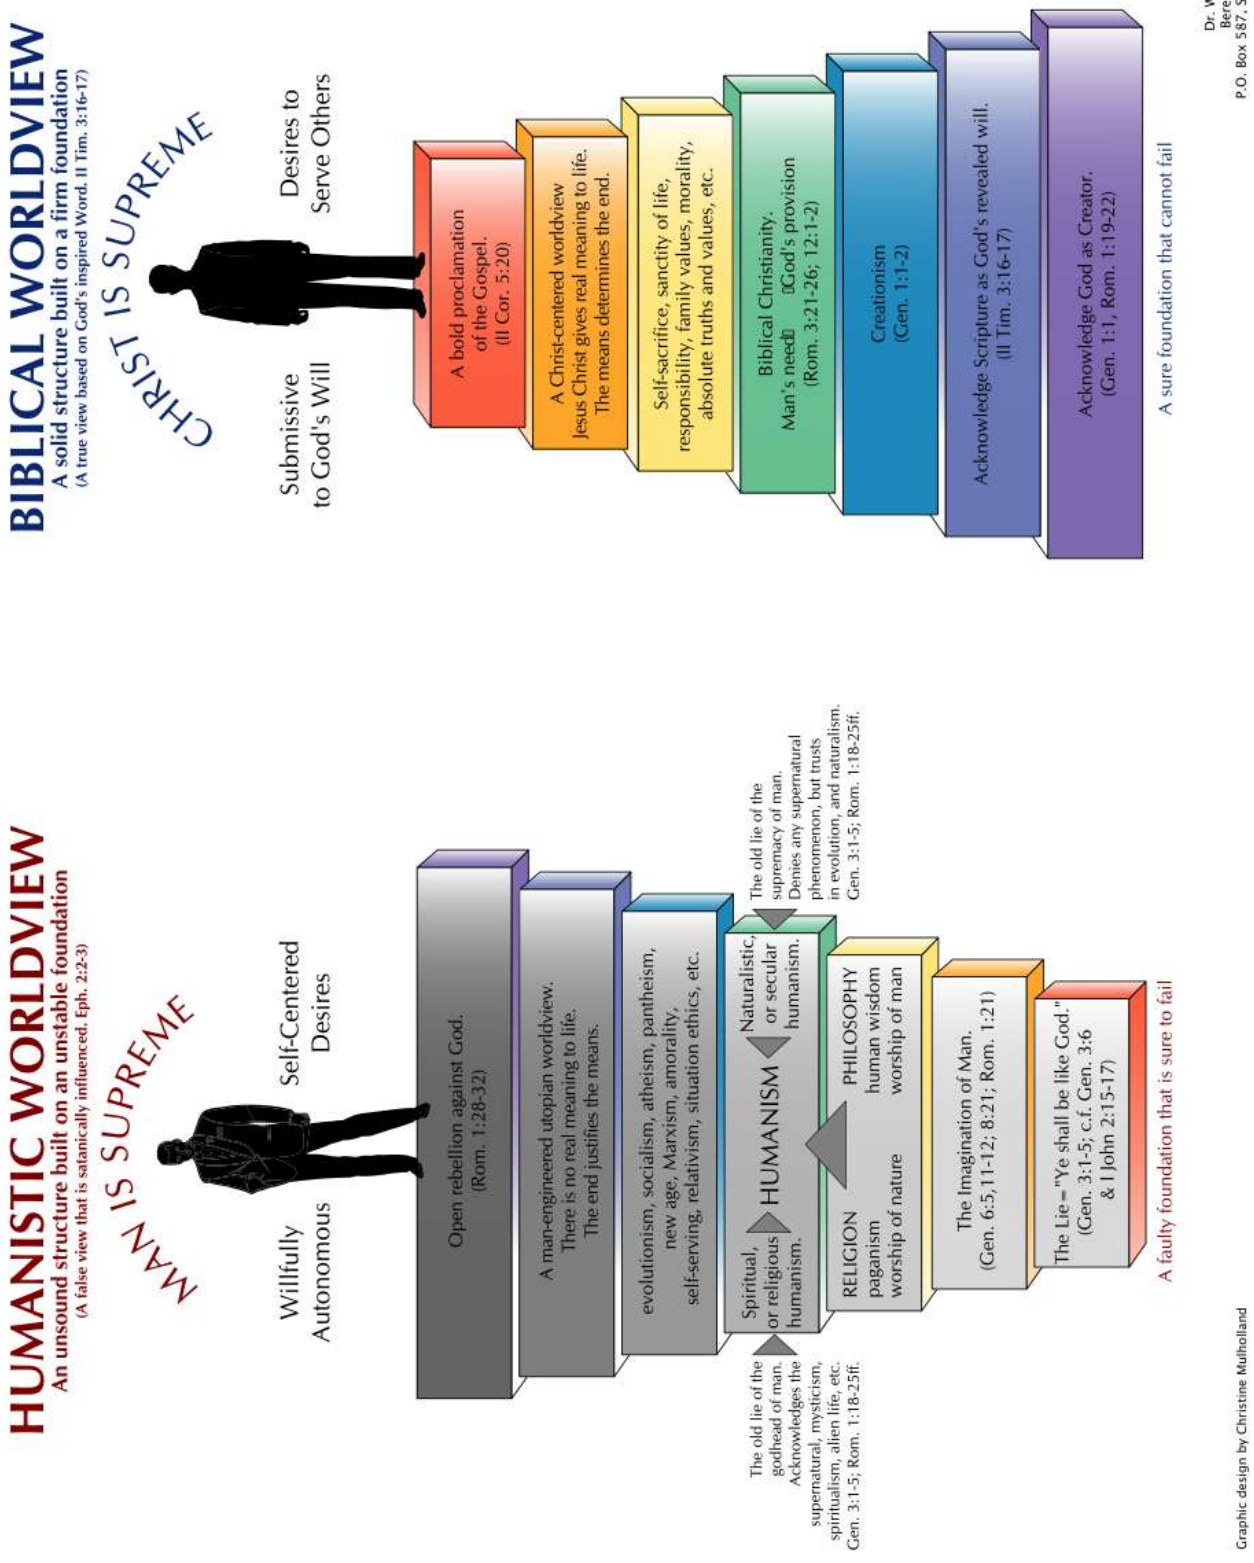


Four Models of Western Religious Thought
	Secular Humanism	Marxism-Leninism	Cosmic Humanism	Biblical Christianity
Source	Humanist Manifesto I & II	Writings of Marx and Lenin	Writings of Spangler, Ferguson, etc	Bible
Theology	Atheism	Atheism	Pantheism	Theism
Philosophy	Naturalism	Dialectical Materialism	Non-Naturalism	Supernaturalism
Ethics	Ethical Relativism	Proletariat Morality	Ethical Relativism	Ethical Absolutes
Biology	Darwinian Evolution	Darwinian/ Punctuated Evolution	Darwinian/ Punctuated Evolution	Creation/ Intelligent Design
Psychology	Monistic Self-Actualization	Monistic Pavlovian Behaviorism	Collective Consciousness	Dualism
Sociology	Non-Traditional World State Ethical Society	Abolition of Home, Church and State	Non-Traditional Home, Church and State	Home, Church, State
Law	Positive Law	Positive Law	Self-Law	Biblical/ Natural Law
Politics	World Government (Globalism)	New World Order	New Age Order	Justice, Freedom, Order
Economics	Socialism	Socialism/ Communism	Universal Enlightened Production	Stewardship of Property
History	Historical Evolution	Historical Materialism	Evolutionary Godhood	Historical Resurrection

The positivist and phenomenological worldviews

http://ro.uwe.ac.uk/RenderPages/RenderLearningObject.aspx?Context=7&Area=1&Room=1&Constellation=2&LearningObject=41

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



Humanistic Worldview vs Biblical Worldview

[Source: http://www.bereanbibleinstitute.org/resources.html]

See next page for larger view…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Worldview Chart

https://www.summit.org/resources/worldview-chart/

https://truthandreasonblog.wordpress.com/2006/02/20/worldview-chart/

https://www.summit.org/wp-content/uploads/2016/08/10.05.2017-WVchart.pdf [PDF]

	Biblical Christianity	Islam	Secularism	Marxism	New Spirituality	Postmodernism
			©Summit Ministries® 2017
Source	Bible	Qur'an, Hadith, Sunnah	Humanist Manifesto I, II & III	Marx, Engels, Lenin, Mao	MacLaine, Spangler, Chopra, Walsch	Nietzsche, Foucault, Derrida, Rorty
Theology	Trinitarian Monotheism	Monotheism	Atheism	Atheism	Pantheism	Theological Suspicion
Philosophy	Dualism	Dualism	Naturalism & Materialism	Dialectical Materialism	Spiritual Monism	Anti-Realism
Ethics	Agape	Divine Command Theory	Moral Relativism or Utilitarianism	Proletariat Morality	Karma	Cultural Relativism
Biology	Special Creation	Special Creation	Neo-Darwinian Evolution	Punctuated Equilibrium	Spiritual Evolution	Anti-Essentialism
Psychology	Mind/Body Dualism (Fallen)	Mind/Body Dualism (un-fallen)	Mind/Body Monism (Self-Actualization)	Mind/Body Monism (Classical Conditioning)	Mind/Body Monism (Fourth Force)	Decentered Self
Sociology	Sphere Sovereignty	Ummah	Personal Autonomy	Proletariat Society	Collective Consciousness	Social Construction
Law	Natural Law	Shariah Law	Legal Positivism	Proletariat Law	Self-Law	Critical Legal Studies
Politics	Subsidiarity	Islamic Theocracy	Progressivism	Statism	Autarchy	Political Pessimism or Liberalism
Economics	Biblical Stewardship	Shariah Economics	Economic Interventionism	Socialism	Universal Enlightened Production	Economic Interventionism
History	Redemptive Narrative	Pan-Islam	Social Progress	Historical Materialism	Evolutionary Godhood	Historical Revisionism

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Worldviews Chart

http://www.summit.org/resources/worldview-chart/

COMPARING COMPETING WORLDVIEWS

	Christianity	Islam	Secular Humanism	Marxism-Leninism	Cosmic Humanism	Post-Modernism
	Bible	Qur'an, Hadith, Sunnah	Humanist Manifestos I, II, III	Marx, Engels, Lenin, Mao	MacLaine, Spangler, Chopra, Walsch	Nietzsche, Foucault, Derrida, Rorty
Theology	Theism (Trinitarian)	Theism (Unitarian)	Atheism	Atheism	Pantheism	Atheism
Philosophy	Supernaturalism (Faith and Reason)	Supernaturalism (Faith and Reason)	Naturalism	Dialectical Materialism	Non-Naturalism	Anti-Realism
Ethics	Moral Absolutes	Moral Absolutes	Moral Relativism	Proletariat Morality	Moral Relativism (Karma)	Cultural Relativism
Biology	Creationism	Creationism	Neo-Darwinian Evolution	Punctuated Evolution	Cosmic Evolution	Punctuated Evolution
Psychology	Mind/Body Dualism (Fallen)	Mind/Body Dualism (Un-fallen)	Monism (Self-Actualization)	Monism (Behaviorism)	Higher Consciousness	Socially-Constructed Selves
Sociology	Traditional Family, Church, State	Polygamy, Mosque, Islamic State	Non-Traditional Family, Church, State	Classless Society	Non-Traditional Family, Church, State	Sexual Egalitarianism
Law	Divine/Natural Law	Shari'ah Law	Positive Law	Proletariat Law	Self-Law	Critical Legal Studies
Politics	Justice, Freedom, Order	Islamic Theocracy (Global Islam)	Liberalism (Secular World Gov't)	Statism (Communist World Gov't)	Self-Government (New World Order)	Leftism
Economics	Stewardship of Property	Stewardship of Property	Interventionism	Scientific Socialism	Universal Enlightened Production	Interventionism
History	Creation, Fall, Redemption	Historical Determinism (Jihad)	Historical Evolution	Historical Materialism	Evolutionary Godhood	Historicism

COPYRIGHT © 2006 SUMMIT MINISTRIES

See following page for larger view…

Comparing Competing Worldviews

	Christianity	Islam	Secular Humanism	Marxism-Leninism	Cosmic Humanism	Post-Modernism
	Bible	Qur'an, Hadith, Sunnah	Humanist Manifestos I, II, III	Marx, Engels, Lenin, Mao	MacLaine, Spangler, Chopra, Walsch	Nietzsche, Foucault, Derrida, Rorty
Theology	Theism (Trinitarian)	Theism (Unitarian)	Atheism	Atheism	Pantheism	Atheism
Philosophy	Supernaturalism (Faith and Reason)	Supernaturalism (Faith and Reason)	Naturalism	Dialectical Materialism	Non-Naturalism	Anti-Realism
Ethics	Moral Absolutes	Moral Absolutes	Moral Relativism	Proletariat Morality	Moral Relativism (Karma)	Cultural Relativism
Biology	Creationism	Creationism	Neo-Darwinian Evolution	Punctuated Evolution	Cosmic Evolution	Punctuated Evolution
Psychology	Mind/Body Dualism (Fallen)	Mind/Body Dualism (Un-fallen)	Monism (Self-Actualization)	Monism (Behaviorism)	Higher Consciousness	Socially-Constructed Selves
Sociology	Traditional Family, Church, State	Polygamy, Mosque, Islamic State	Non-Traditional Family, Church, State	Classless Society	Non-Traditional Family, Church, State	Sexual Egalitarianism
Law	Divine/Natural Law	Shari'ah Law	Positive Law	Proletariat Law	Self-Law	Critical Legal Studies
Politics	Justice, Freedom, Order	Islamic Theocracy (Global Islam)	Liberalism (Secular World Gov't)	Statism (Communist World Gov't)	Self-Government (New World Order)	Leftism
Economics	Stewardship of Property	Stewardship of Property	Interventionism	Scientific Socialism	Universal Enlightened Production	Interventionism
History	Creation, Fall, Redemption	Historical Determinism (Jihad)	Historical Evolution	Historical Materialism	Evolutionary Godhood	Historicism

COPYRIGHT © 2006 SUMMIT MINISTRIES

World View Chart

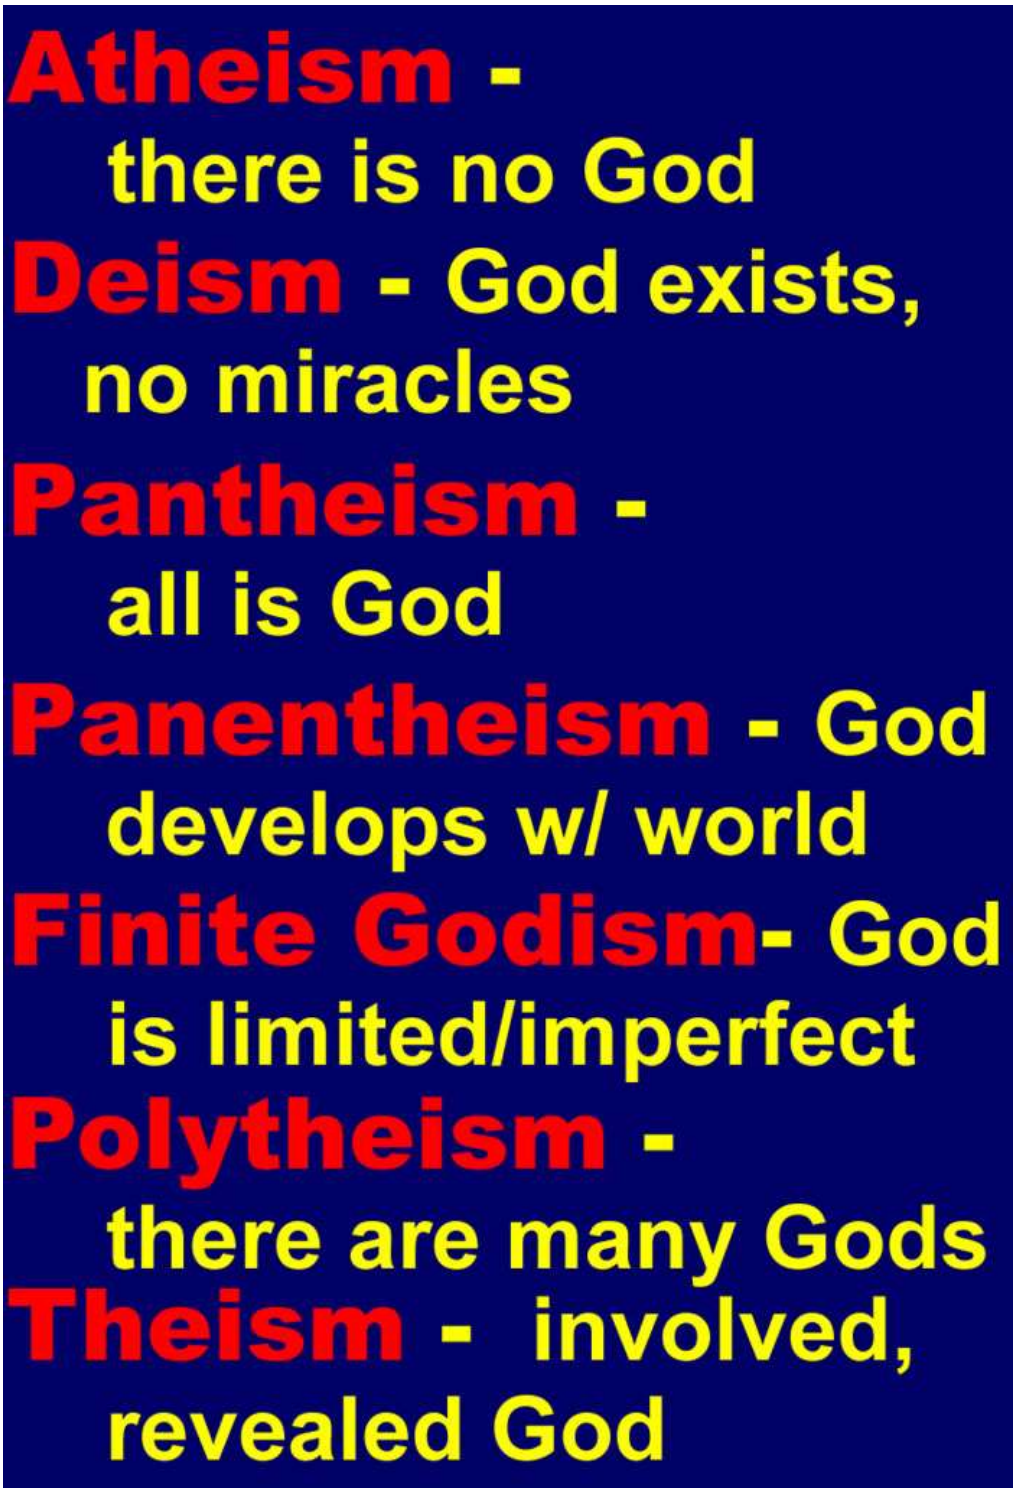
http://www.generationword.com/diagrams_and_charts.html

	CHRISTIAN	ISLAM	SECULAR HUMANISM	MARXISM-LENINISM	COSMIC HUMANISM	POST-MODERNISM
THEOLOGY	God exits, is intelligent, powerful, loving, just. Died for sins.	Allah, one God, creator, master of universe	No God. Scientific process made God obsolete. Only matter. Man is matter.	Marx was atheist. Combat Religion. Atheism needs to overthrows existing social conditions.	All things are divine. God is within us and things. We discover this.	Not atheists like sec. hum. Like Nietzsche: "God is dead" or unbelievable
PHILOSOPHY	2 Co. 10:5; Col. 2:8; Non-Christian worldviews are vain and deceitful. Christian view is reasonable	Also, a "revealed" religion and is assumed to be reasonable	Only matter exists. Know only through scientific process and senses.	Materialism. THESIS is the way it is. ANTITHESIS is the opposite of the way it is. SYNTESIS is the way it becomes as a result of the struggle.	God is in everything. Everything is spiritual When this is realized the physical will not exist. Enlightened mind controls matter.	Objective reality is rejected. Reality is constructed by what a human thinks or believes. No universal truth or absolutes.
ETHICS	God is absolute & unchanging. He hates evil and loves good. God revealed his character.	Qur'an and Muhammad are foundational	Humans decide standards and values	Whatever advances communism is good and whatever stands in the way is evil. Thus, kill the opposition.	Follow inner universal god-consciousness to determine your right or wrong. Only evil is to say there is moral absolutes.	Local community determines moral truth. No "grand narrative" so each community of people identify ethics.
BIOLOGY	Only the creationist perspective can account for design, laws, order. Science tells us about God's universe.	Universe created by Allah, but Genesis is corrupted	Natural selection. Mutations provide variations. Evolution slow. If evolution is false there is no Secular Humanism	Depend on evolution and spontaneous generation. THESIS + ANTITHESIS=SYNTHESIS Clashes and leaps=change	Man evolving from disharmony to harmony. Evolution guides man from material world to spiritual beings, godhood	Rejects order and design of history so patterned evolution is replaced with chance and random leaps
PSYCHOLOGY	Emphasize spiritual. Understand fallen, sinful nature. Recognize need for salvation. Face guilt and repent	Man is not fallen. Adam forgiven and left no trace of sin in man	Monism (only body). Man is good. Achieve mental health by meeting physical and material needs. Behaviorism.	Everything a man does is: 1-from physical makeup 2-influence of environment Man is limited to this, but Marx expects man to revolt?	Society, environment stifle the god within us. Man must realize he is perfect, his impulses and intuitive urges are good.	We are many selves created from language, geography, family, education so we are a social construction.
	The individual & the social order are important to God: Marriage, family, state	Family, religion, state are not distinguished	Civilization, culture are evil and make man evil. Family is the worst. Government education is most desirable method for abolishing old institutions	Everyone is both the laborer and the owner of production. No need for government, church or family since empowered men are responsible to act right	Evil in man is due to traditional society (especially in the West). Rebel against traditional values: fathers, families, state, free enterprise,	Even playing field by focusing on the cultural fringe: poor, oppressed, homosexual. Demonize privileged like white males, businesses.
LAW	Natural and revealed. Based on God's character. Government controls sinful man. All have unalienable rights, made in God's image	Law based not in God's character but on God's determined law	State has sovereign power to determine law since they are highest power. Crime is fault of social order not criminal. "Truth" is merely legal.	Sovereignty is taken from state and given to the working class. Law originate with property owners. Get rid of property and there will be no need for law.	Each person decides what is right. Need for law will fade away as we grow into god-consciousness.	Western understanding & justice is the root of problem. Get rid of white male view. Less objectivity, focus on subjectivity, minorities
POLITICS	God ordained the state, but it is limited, never totalitarian. Never removes freedom, religion or family.	Global Islamic theocracy set up under rule of Allah's laws	World government is next in evolution's process. This is the road to utopia. Goal: World Peace	Working class rises up to seize production & politics to form a world rule by working class until the state is no longer needed	Government exists because some are unaware of god in them. One world government will lead to spiritual unity	Empower women, minorities, homosexual. Get rid of white males and Western culture
ECONOMICS	System must check mans injustice and make man responsible to produce. Free Enterprise	Based on unity, care of poor, free will, responsibility	Man capable of planning perfect economy. Strict central control of world economy. Interventionist.	Economics determine all institutions. Society based on production. Improved slavery to feudalism to capitalism to socialism to abolish private property for a communistic world order. All needs met.	Traditional economic models stress material, so hinders enlightenment. Spiritual harmony will cause material needs to flow towards you.	Goal is to alleviate all human suffering through government's economic intervention
HISTORY	Movement through history from creation, fall, redemption, restoration	Allah oversees & leads history to ultimately express his will	No supernatural influence or purpose. Without design history moves from simple to complex	History is THESIS+ ANTITHESIS=SYNTHESIS at work. History is a result of biological & economic evolution	Moving toward god-consciousness into unified enlightenment. Christians, etc. hinder this process	Facts are inaccessible since writers of history record their views. We re-write it w/ our own 'truth'

*This information was studied and reorganized from Summit Ministries at http://www.summit.org by Generation Word at http://www.generationword.com

See larger view on next page…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



…Continue from prior page

	CHRISTIAN	ISLAM	SECULAR HUMANISM	MARXISM-LENINISM	COSMIC HUMANISM	POST-MODERNISM
THEOLOGY	God exits, is intelligent, powerful, loving, just. Died for sins.	Allah, one God, creator, master of universe	No God. Scientific process made God obsolete. Only matter. Man is matter.	Marx was atheist. Combat Religion. Atheism needs to overthrows existing social conditions.	All things are divine. God is within us and things. We discover this.	Not atheists like sec. hum. Like Nietzsche: "God is dead" or unbelievable
PHILOSOPHY	2 Co. 10:5; Col. 2:8; Non-Christian worldviews are vain and deceitful. Christian view is reasonable	Also, a "revealed" religion and is assumed to be reasonable	Only matter exists. Know only through scientific process and senses.	Materialism. THESIS is the way it is. ANTITHESIS is the opposite of the way it is. SYNTESIS is the way it becomes as a result of the struggle.	God is in everything. Everything is spiritual When this is realized the physical will not exist. Enlightened mind controls matter.	Objective reality is rejected. Reality is constructed by what a human thinks or believes. No universal truth or absolutes.
ETHICS	God is absolute & unchanging. He hates evil and loves good. God revealed his character.	Qur'an and Muhammad are foundational	Humans decide standards and values	Whatever advances communism is good and whatever stands in the way is evil. Thus, kill the opposition.	Follow inner universal god-consciousness to determine your right or wrong. Only evil is to say there is moral absolutes.	Local community determines moral truth. No "grand narrative" so each community of people identify ethics.
BIOLOGY	Only the creationist perspective can account for design, laws, order. Science tells us about God's universe.	Universe created by Allah, but Genesis is corrupted	Natural selection. Mutations provide variations. Evolution slow. If evolution is false there is no Secular Humanism	Depend on evolution and spontaneous generation. THESIS + ANTITHESIS=SYNTHESIS Clashes and leaps=change	Man evolving from disharmony to harmony. Evolution guides man from material world to spiritual beings, godhood	Rejects order and design of history so patterned evolution is replaced with chance and random leaps
PSYCHOLOGY	Emphasize spiritual. Understand fallen, sinful nature. Recognize need for salvation. Face guilt and repent	Man is not fallen. Adam forgiven and left no trace of sin in man	Monism (only body). Man is good. Achieve mental health by meeting physical and material needs. Behaviorism.	Everything a man does is: 1-from physical makeup 2-influence of environment. Man is limited to this, but Marx expects man to revolt?	Society, environment stifle the god within us. Man must realize he is perfect, his impulses and intuitive urges are good.	We are many selves created from language, geography, family, education so we are a social construction.
	The individual & the social order are important to God: Marriage, family, state	Family, religion, state are not distinguished	Civilization, culture are evil and make man evil. Family is the worst. Government education is most desirable method for abolishing old institutions	Everyone is both the laborer and the owner of production. No need for government, church or family since empowered men are responsible to act right	Evil in man is due to traditional society (especially in the West). Rebel against traditional values: fathers, families, state, free enterprise,	Even playing field by focusing on the cultural fringe: poor, oppressed, homosexual. Demonize privileged like white males, businesses.
LAW	Natural and revealed. Based on God's character. Government controls sinful man. All have unalienable rights, made in God's image	Law based not in God's character but on God's determined law	State has sovereign power to determine law since they are highest power. Crime is fault of social order not criminal. "Truth" is merely legal.	Sovereignty is taken from state and given to the working class. Law originate with property owners. Get rid of property and there will be no need for law.	Each person decides what is right. Need for law will fade away as we grow into god-consciousness.	Western understanding & justice is the root of problem. Get rid of white male view. Less objectivity, focus on subjectivity, minorities
POLITICS	God ordained the state, but it is limited, never totalitarian. Never removes freedom, religion or family.	Global islamic theocracy set up under rule of Allah's laws	World government is next in evolution's process. This is the road to utopia. Goal: World Peace	Working class rises up to seize production & politics to form a world rule by working class until the state is no longer needed	Government exists because some are unaware of god in them. One world government will lead to spiritual unity	Empower women, minorities, homosexual. Get rid of white males and Western culture
ECONOMICS	System must check mans injustice and make man responsible to produce. Free Enterprise	Based on unity, care of poor, free will, responsibility	Man capable of planning perfect economy. Strict central control of world economy. Interventionist.	Economics determine all institutions. Society based on production. Improved slavery to feudalism to capitalism to socialism to abolish private property for a communistic world order. All needs met	Traditional economic models stress material, so hinders enlightenment. Spiritual harmony will cause material needs to flow towards you.	Goal is to alleviate all human suffering through government's economic intervention
HISTORY	Movement through history from creation, fall, redemption, restoration	Allah oversees & leads history to ultimately express his will	No supernatural influence or purpose. Without design history moves from simple to complex	History is THESIS+ ANTITHESIS=SYNTHESIS at work. History is a result of biological & economic evolution	Moving toward god-consciousness into unified enlightenment. Christians, etc. hinder this process	Facts are inaccessible since writers of history record their views. We re-write it w/ our own 'truth'

This information was studied and reorganized from Summit Ministries at http://www.summit.org by Generation Word at http://www.generationword.com

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

World Views Concerning God

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Seven (7) World Views

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

World Views

http://www.generationword.com/diagrams_and_charts.html

Secular Humanism	Cosmic Humanism	Marxism and Leninism
SECULAR HUMANISM - No God exists - Only matter - Man decides right/wrong - Natural selection - Man is good, only body - Culture makes man evil - State is sovereign -World Governemtn = World Peace - Man plans perfect economy - History has no purpose	Cosmic Humanism - All is divine - everything is spiritual - society stifles god in man - man is good - each person decides - world government = world peace	MARXISM-LENINISM - Overthrow religion - materialism - advance communism - evolution - no need for government - no private property - history results form evolution
Christian	Post-Modernism
CHRISTIAN - God exists - Christianity is resonable - God is absolute - Creation explains design - Man is fallen - Social institutions - Law based on God - State is ordained - Free Enterprise - Move from fall to redemption	Post-Modernism - God is dead - Reality constructed by man - local communities decide on truth - reject order and design - even playing field - Western culture is evil - empower minorities -demonize majority -alleviate human suffering -rewrite history

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

World Views Introduction (including Modernism and Postmodernism)

https://bible.org/seriespage/1-world-views-introduction

Excerpt:

3. Naturalism

There is no God. The world and mankind just evolved. Men are just the product of their environment. Morality is decided by man. There is no purpose to history; it just happens. When you die, you cease to exist.

4. Pluralism

Naturalism has undergone a major change in the past 50 years. Enough of a change that it deserves its own category—Pluralism. Pluralism is very similar to Naturalism, but it's sort of a cafeteria style world view. People mix and match various aspects of the other world views. It is extremely inconsistent, but that doesn't seem to matter in a postmodern world.

The shift from Naturalism to Pluralism corresponds to the shift from Modernism to Postmodernism.

I've used the terms modernism and postmodernism a couple times already and some of you may be wondering what in the world I'm talking about. So, let's define them.

Modernism: Prior to the Renaissance everyone believed in God and the supernatural. But around 1500 several things happened. Gutenberg developed the printing press which made books available to the masses and learning grew exponentially. Martin Luther began the Reformation, the Renaissance began with the whole new emphasis on art, science, humanism, etc. Reality was what you could see and measure. The myth of progress captivated the world. Man came to believe that science would solve all the problems of mankind. Science would discover the cure for all diseases, control the weather, end poverty, bring about world peace, etc. There were World Fairs touting the marvels of the modern age. This period, called "Modernism," lasted from the 1500's to 1960's. Incidentally, lots of folks believed in post-millennialism as a direct result of this. They thought we were in the millennium and Christ was coming back at the end of it. But that's another lesson.

Postmodernism: But after the Second World War, people were disillusioned. (Including the post-millennialists) The war to end all wars (WWI) didn't. WWII and the holocaust happened. It was obvious we weren't going to bring about world peace. Science wasn't curing very many diseases. In fact, cancer was becoming more and more prevalent. People recognized that science wasn't solving man's problems. Science hadn't brought about a utopia of progress uniting the human race like it promised. In fact, modernism was rather weak on relationships. People were just cogs in the machine. So, society began rejecting modernism (science) and moving toward something we call "postmodernism." The name "post"-modernism means "after"-modernism. People are now looking for something else to explain reality. Since naturalism has rejected the existence of God, we have moved from science (with its truth/facts) to existentialism which is basically experience, spirituality, and pragmatism (whatever works).

This shift from modernism to postmodernism is a process, and our generation is right in the middle of it and as such, we are all a little of both.

I think one of the best ways to illustrate this is by comparing older commercials with new ones. Old commercials had guys in white lab coats touting the virtues of various products. Why were they in white lab coats? Because it made them look like scientists and led you to believe that what they were claiming was a scientific fact. Postmodern commercials, on the other hand, consist of beautiful and or rugged looking individuals having a good time in exotic locations. Compare the old Coke/Pepsi “taste test” commercials with the more recent ones. The “taste test” was supposedly a scientific measurement. More people preferred Pepsi. Now you are inundated with multiple images of folks having a great time drinking Coke. Or you’re encouraged to just “Be a Pepper,” etc.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Postmodernism

https://www.xenos.org/essays/five-worldviews

Reality

Reality must be interpreted through our language and cultural "paradigm." Therefore, reality is "socially constructed."

Man

Humans are nodes in a cultural reality – they are a product of their social setting. The idea that people are autonomous and free is a myth.

Truth

Truths are mental constructs meaningful to individuals within a particular cultural paradigm. They do not apply to other paradigms. Truth is relative to one’s culture.

Values

Values are part of our social paradigms as well. Tolerance, freedom of expression, inclusion, and refusal to claim to have the answers are the only universal values.

A Summary of Postmodern Philosophy

https://www.allaboutworldview.org/a-summary-of-postmodern-philosophy-faq.htm

Excerpt:

Kevin J. Vanhoozer, Research Professor of Systematic Theology at Trinity Evangelical Divinity School, is a shrewd observer of the Postmodern scene and a somewhat sympathetic critic. In addition, he understands the important role Nietzsche played in expressing the foundational ideas for Postmodernism.[1] He writes, “Nietzsche, the patron saint of postmodernity, prophesied accurately: if God is dead, then it’s interpretation ‘all the way down.’...[O]ne word only points to another word and never to reality itself. No one interpretation can ever be regarded as final. As in interpretation, so in life: everything becomes undecidable.”[2]

Vanhoozer points us to the late C.S. Lewis, who foresaw the shift toward Postmodernist thinking. Lewis’ term for this movement is “bulverism” after its imaginary inventor Ezekiel Bulver. Vanhoozer explains: “Lewis imagines the moment that bulverism was born, when five-year-old Ezekiel heard his mother say to his father, ‘Oh, you say that because you are a man.’ Bulver intuitively grasped the stunning implication:

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

arguments need not be refuted, only situated. One rebuts a thought simply by calling attention to the genealogy or location of its thinker."[3] Probably nothing in Postmodernism today would surprise Lewis.

A Summary of Postmodernism

Vanhoozer offers a concise summary of Postmodern philosophy:

1. The mark of the Postmodern condition of knowledge is a move away from the authority of universal science toward narratives of local knowledge.[4]
2. Postmodernists reject the notion of universal rationality; reason is always situated within particular narratives, traditions, institutions, and practices.
3. Postmodernists reject unifying, totalizing, universal schemes in favor of new emphases on difference, plurality, fragmentation, and complexity.
4. Postmodernists reject the notion that the person is an autonomous individual with a rational consciousness that transcends his or her particular place in culture, language, history, and gendered body.
5. Postmodernists agree with Nietzsche that "God" (that is to say, the supreme being of classical theism) has become unbelievable, as have the autonomous self and the meaning of history.
6. What we know about things is linguistically, culturally, and socially constructed. Language stands for the socially constructed order within which we think and move and have our being.[5]

Notes:

Rendered with permission from the book, Understanding the Times: The Collision of Today's Competing Worldviews (Rev 2nd ed), David Noebel, Summit Press, 2006. Compliments of John Stonestreet, David Noebel, and the Christian Worldview Ministry at Summit Ministries. All rights reserved in the original.

[1] See Arthur Herman, The Idea of Decline in Western History (New York, NY: The Free Press, 1997), Will Du rant's The Story of Philosophy, and John P. Koster, The Atheist Syndrome (Brentwood, TN: Wolgemuth & Hyatt Publishers, 1989) for background material on Nietzsche.
[2] Penner, Christianity and the Postmodern Turn: Six Views, 78.
[3] Ibid., 76.
[4] Postmodernists were not the first to offer such a view of knowledge. Bertrand Russell held a similar view—"all truths are particular truths." See Mary Midgley, Evolution as a Religion (London, UK: Rutledge Classics, 2002), 127. Midgley offers a classic critique of this position, quoting Wittgenstein that "particular propositions cannot always be prior to general ones. Both are elements in language, which is itself an element in our whole system of behaviour. In a crucial sense, the whole is always prior to its parts. And unquestionably this kind of belief in a law-abiding universe... is a precondition of any possible physical science."
[5] Kevin J. Vanhoozer, ed., Postmodern Theology (Cambridge, UK: Cambridge University Press), 10–13.

For more on Postmodernism, see also my other separate reference resource*:

Christian Scholarship: Biblical – Theological – Philosophical

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Comparing Postmodernism, Modernism, and Theism

https://www.xenos.org/essays/comparing-postmodernism-modernism-and-theism

The following comparisons form the basis for discussion in chapter 2 and 3 in The Death of Truth.

Subject	Modernism	Postmodernism	Biblical (theism)
Human Nature	Humans are, purely material machines. We live in a purely physical world. Nothing exists beyond what our senses perceive.	No opinion on this issue, but suspicious of such dogmatic claims to knowledge.	Humans are the only beings on earth created in the image of God. They are spiritual and material.
Free Will (autonomy)	Humans are self-governing and free to choose their own direction	People are the product of their culture and only imagine they are self-governing.	Human free will has been drastically diminished by a moral fall from grace, but they are still responsible for the use of their remaining free will. People's desire to be autonomousis sinful--we were created to depend on God.
View of Reason	People should be "rationalistic optimists." They should depend only on the data of their senses and reason.	There is no such thing as objective rationality (i.e., reason unaffected by bias) in the sense modernists use the term. Rationalism is a myth.	Reason is necessary but not sufficient for understanding reality. Reason can disclose truth about reality, but faith and revelation are needed in addition.
View of Progress	Humankind is progressing by using science and reason.	"Progress" is a code word used by modernists to justify the domination by European culture of other cultures.	Humans aren't progressing toward any glorious future. However, advances which relieve suffering and prolong life are good.

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Biblical versus Postmodern Thinking

http://www.crossroad.to/charts/postmodernity.htm'

Today's "postmodern" leaders and social engineers are using this word to introduce and justify changes that are transforming churches around the world. If we don't know its implications, we can't really understand the impact of today's social revolution.

This chart lists the main postmodern obstacles to victorious faith. It shows the new meanings given to Biblical terms, and it lists Scriptures that clarify the confusion caused by postmodern thinking. Knowing these truths will strengthen your child's conscience and help anchor his or her mind in truth.
Notice that the postmodern views below are compared to Christianity, not to "modernity." The latter generally reflect the "progressive" humanist philosophies of the 19th & 20th century, not Biblical Truth.

Postmodern		Biblical faith
Emphasis	Means or implies:	But Jesus said:
Personal relationships	- with the group or community. Aim to please people rather than God.	"For do I now persuade men, or God? Or do I seek to please men? For if I still pleased men, I would not be a bondservant of Christ." Galatians 1:10 - with God. "He who has My commandments and keeps them, it is he who loves Me." John 14:20-21
Tolerance	- for what God warned us to shun. Forbidden things are now okay.	"What comes out of a man, that defiles a man. For from within, out of the heart of men, proceed evil thoughts, adulteries, fornications, murders, thefts, covetousness, wickedness, deceit, lewdness, an evil eye, blasphemy, pride, foolishness. All these evil things come from within and defile a man." Mk 7:20-23 ["Abhor what is evil. Cling to what is good." Romans 12:9]
Truth & Scriptures	- subjective, always changing, defined by the group -- with little or no Biblical insight. Denial of absolute and objective truth.	"I am the way, the truth, and the life...." John 14:6 ["Jesus Christ is the same yesterday, today, and forever. Do not be carried about with various and strange doctrines." Heb 13:8-9]
Pluralism	All religions (1) lead to the same place, (2) are valid paths to salvation.	"No one comes to the Father except through Me." John 14:6 "No one can come to Me unless the Father who sent Me draws him." John 6:44
Authority	Reject traditional authorities. Follow subjective feelings and group consensus.	"I have come down from heaven, not to do My own will, but the will of Him who sent Me." John 6:38 "Father, if it is Your will, take this cup away from Me; nevertheless not My will, but Yours, be done." Luke22:42
Faith and view of the future	Based on feelings, imagination, mysticism and group consensus.	Based on God's Word: "I do not pray for these alone, but also for those who will believe in Me...." John 17:20-21 ["All Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness, that the man of God may be complete, thoroughly equipped for every good work." 2 Tim 3:16-17]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Spirituality	Seeking spiritual power, favors, knowledge or wholeness - or oneness with a higher consciousness or an unknowable universal force or spirit*.*	"...we know that the Son of God has come and has given us an understanding, that we may know Him..." I John 5:20 "Take heed that you not be deceived. For many will come in My name, saying, 'I am He,' and, 'The time has drawn near.' Therefore do not go after them." Luke 21:8
Pluralism and multicul-turalism	All religions are equal and okay. Dismiss people who disagree as bigots or extremists.	"You shall have no other gods before Me." Exodus 20:3 "You shall not go after other gods, the gods of the peoples who are all around you (for the Lord your God is a jealous God among you), lest the anger of the Lord your God be aroused against you." Deut 6:14-15 "...if you by any means forget the Lord your God, and follow other gods, and serve them and worship them, I testify against you this day that you shall surely perish." Deut. 8:19
Continual Change	Demands continual inner adaptation to cultural transformation	"...do not be conformed to this world...." Romans 12:2 "Pilate, wanting to gratify the crowd, released Barabbas to them; and he delivered Jesus, after he had scourged Him, to be crucified." Mark 15:15 "If you were of the world, the world would love its own. Yet because you are not of the world, but I chose you out of the world, therefore the world hates you." John 15:19
"Test all things; hold fast what is good. Abstain from every form of evil. Now may the God of peace Himself sanctify you completely; and may your whole spirit, soul, and body be preserved blameless at the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ. He who calls you is faithful, who also will do it." 1 Thessalonians 5:19-24

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

CHRISTIAN ETHICS: Biblical Worldview Thinking

http://mybiblicalstudy.weebly.com/christian-ethics.html

What is a worldview?

A worldview is simply a habituated way of seeing and doing; it is the big picture that directs our thoughts and actions. A worldview is composed of at least seven fundamental elements:

One's view of God

One's view of reality

One's view of truth

One's view of knowledge

One's view of humanity

One's view of ethics

One's view of evil.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

I. What is the Study of Ethics?

The study of problems of right conduct in light of moral principles such as compassion, goodness, justice, rationality, responsibility, and virtue. The word "ethics" comes from the Greek word "ethos," which means "character." Choices concerning what values to embrace and how to treat oneself and one's responsibilities to others are matters of ethics. The term ethics is often used interchangeably with the term "morality," which is derived from the Latin word "mores", "customs." Ethics involves distinguishing right from wrong, defining good & bad, & to consider the consequences of our actions. Questions like "What is the right thing to do?" & "Why is this the right thing to do?" are the basis of ethical inquiry. Ethics inquires into why we have a sense of right and wrong at all, how ethical views are grounded, and whether or not there are universal principles. Consider the following:

1. Some believe that our sense of right & wrong comes from God.

2. Others believe that our sense of right & wrong is a natural capacity, like our ability to reason.

3. Still, there are others have argued that our sense of right & wrong arises from our individual experiences in the world.

II. Important Terms to Know: COMING SOON

3 Major Models of Ethics:

Let's look at the following models of ethics from a bird's eye view before we examine each of these models more deeply in future classes:

Virtue Ethics

Deontological Ethics

Consequential Ethics

From A Bird's Eye View:

Deontological Elements: 2 Essential Premises:
1. An action is right iff it is in accordance with a moral rule or principle.
2. A moral rule is one that is: (a) laid on us by God, (b) required by natural law, (c) laid on us by reason, (d) required by rationality, (e) would command universal rational acceptance, or (f) would be the object of choice of all rational beings.

What is essential is the link between right action, moral rule, & rationality.

What is Virtue Ethics: An action is right iff it is what a virtuous agent would do in the circumstances; 1a. A virtuous agent is one who acts virtuously, i.e., one who has & exercises the virtues. 2 A virtue is a character trait a human being needs to flourish or live well. It is a habit of excellence, a beneficial tendency, a skilled disposition. Roughly speaking, a virtue is a good habit and a vice is a bad habit. A habit is a disposition to think, feel, desire, and act in a certain way without having a tendency to will consciously to do so.

What is essential is to note the conceptual link between virtue & flourishing (living well or eudaimonia).

What is Consequential Ethics:
1. An act is right if it promotes the best consequences;
2. The best consequences are those in which happiness is maximized. What is essential to note is that it forges a link between consequences & happiness.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

How do we define or calculate what is "happiness" or what is "the best"? Who or what makes those calculations?

III. What is Truth?

Truth is that which corresponds to reality, identifies things as they actually are, must be able to be expressed in propositions (t + t = true), can never fail, diminish, change, or be extinguished, and is sourced in the God of the Bible, who is the Author of all truth.

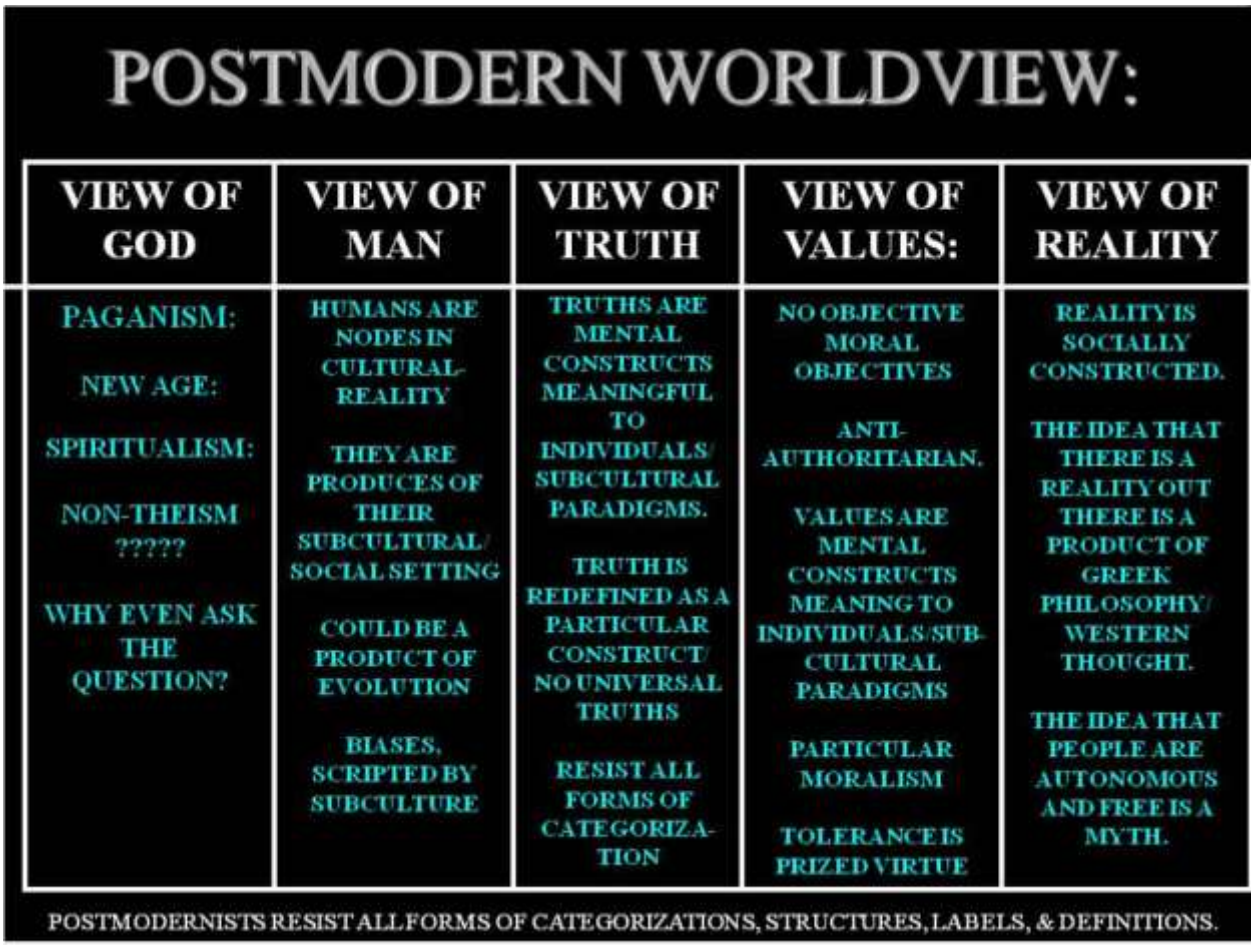
Correspondence View of Truth: Truth is that which corresponds to its object, whether the object is abstract or concrete. Truth is the way things really are. Truth is "telling like it is."

Coherent View of Truth: Truth is that which is internally consistent; what coheres within; what is self-consistent.

Pragmatic View of Truth: A statement is known to be true if it brings the right results. If it works, then it is true.

IV. Six Worldviews:

1. Philosophical Naturalistic Worldview
2. Philosophical Postmodern Worldview
3. Religious Pantheistic Worldviews
4. Religious Polytheism & Spiritism Worldviews
5. Theistic Worldview
6. Biblical Christian Worldview



See following pages for corresponding charts…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Naturalistic Worldview?

VIEW OF GOD	VIEW OF MAN	VIEW OF TRUTH	VIEW OF VALUES:	VIEW OF REALITY
ATHEISM: There is no God. AGNOSTICISM: There is not enough information to determine whether God exists. SECULAR EXISTENTIALISM God does not exist so humanity must learn to live without Him (angst). WITHOUT GOD ???????	CHANCE PRODUCT OF EVOLUTION ENTIRELY MATERIAL-BIOLOGICAL MACHINE. MAN IS FINITE AND WILL ON DAY BECOME EXTINCT THERE IS NO AFTERLIFE THERE IS NO SUCH THING AS "SIN"	TRUTH IS USUALLY UNDERSTOOD AS SCIENTIFIC PROOF KNOWLEDGE GAINED BY FIVE SENSES ONLY THAT WHICH CAN BE OBSERVED WITH THE FIVE SENSES IS ACCEPTED AS REAL	NO OBJECTIVE PRESCRIPTIVE VALUES MORALS ARE INDIVIDUAL PREFRENCES, SOCIOLOGICALLY USEFUL BEHAVIOR. CONSCIENCE MAY BE AN EVOLUTIONARY DEVELOPMENT USUALLY SITUATIONAL OR CONTRACT MODEL OF ETHICS	THE MATERIAL UNIVERSE IS ALL THAT EXISTS REALITY IS "ONE –DIMENSIONAL" NO SUPER-NATURALISM. EVERYTHING CAN BE EXPLAINED ON THE BASIS OF PHYSICAL/ CHEMICAL LAWS/SOCIO-BIOLOGICAL SCIENCE

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

For more on Postmodernism, see also my other separate reference resource*:

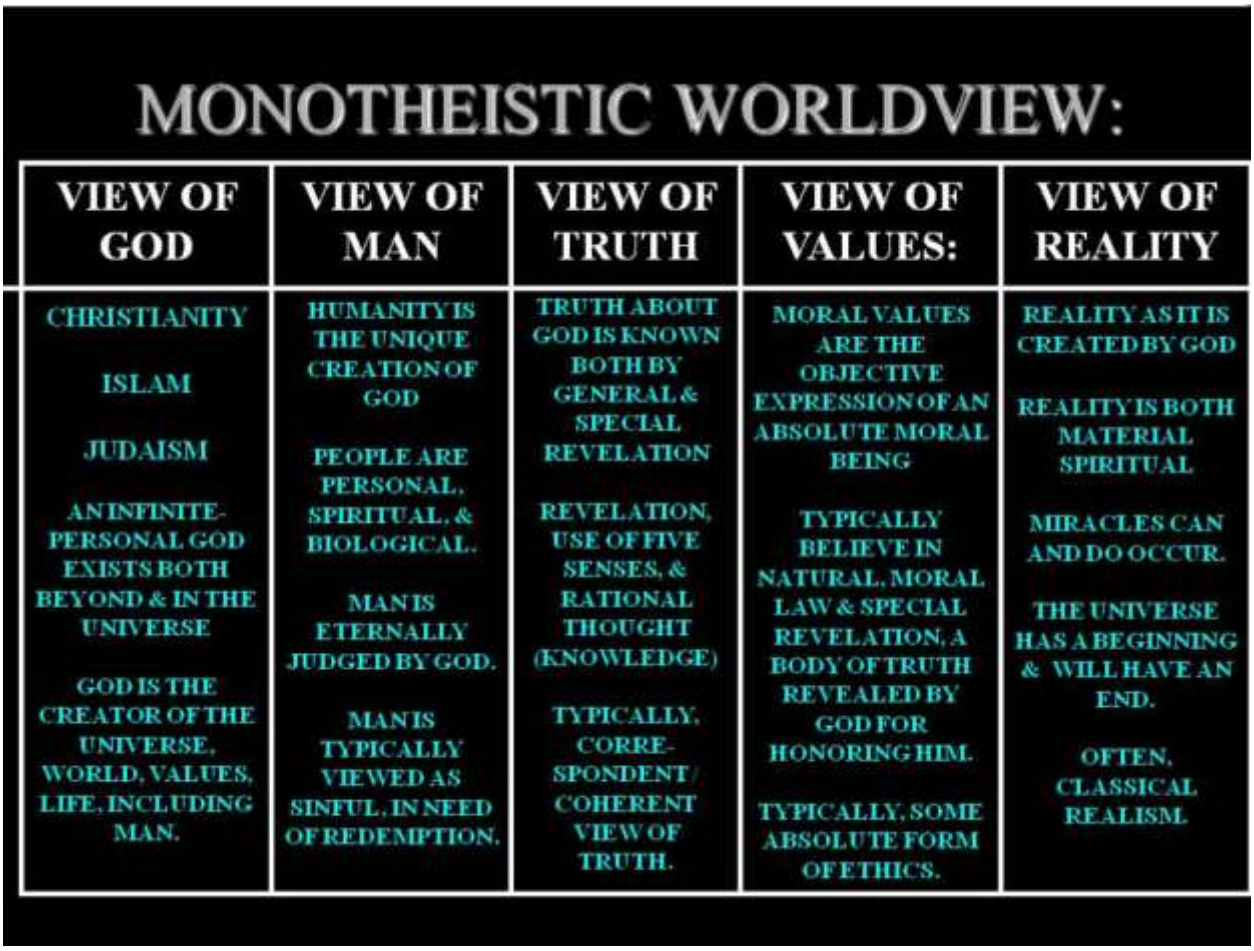
Christian Scholarship: Biblical – Theological – Philosophical

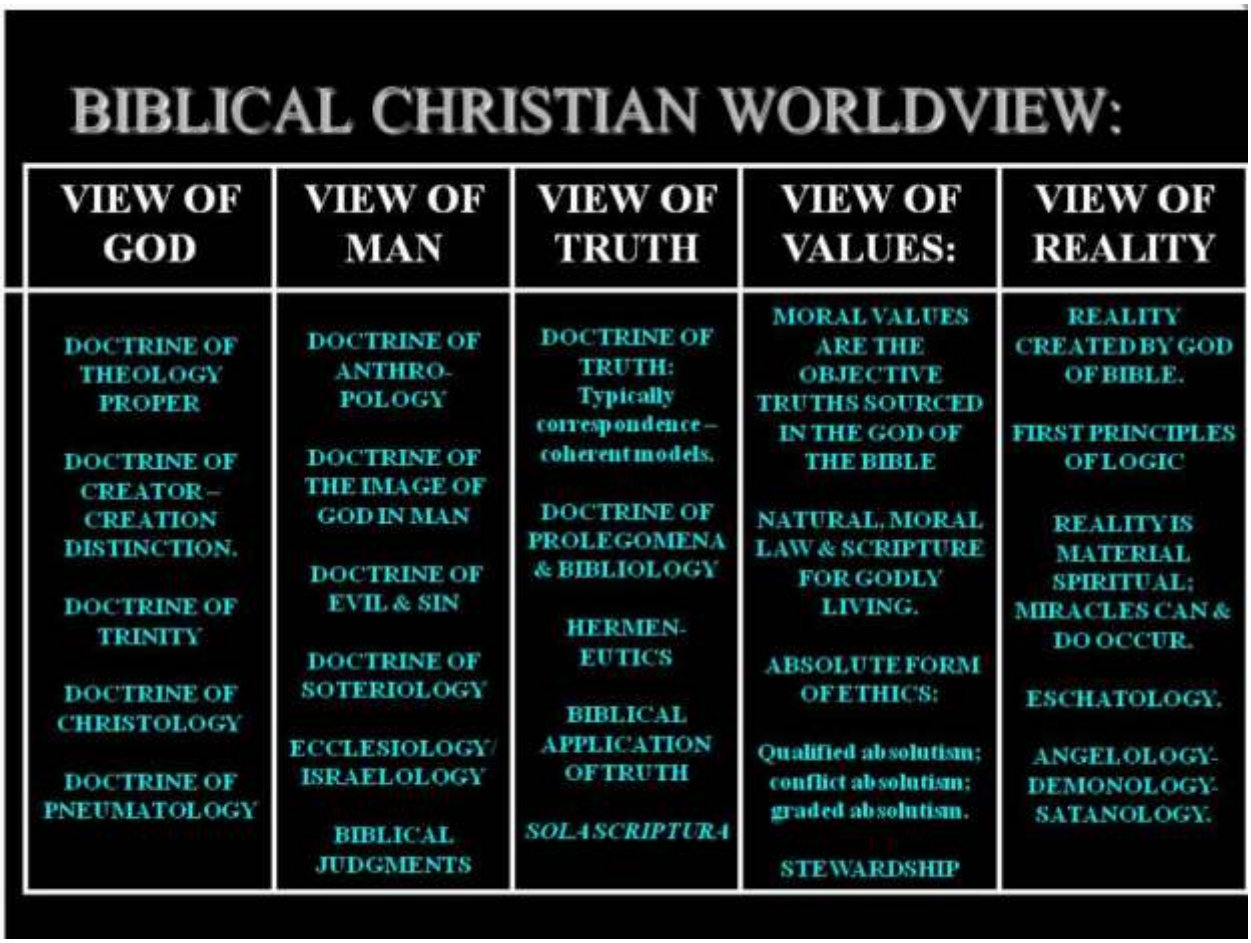
 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

THE RELIGIOUS WORLDVIEWS OF PANTHEISM:



VIEW OF GOD	VIEW OF MAN	VIEW OF TRUTH	VIEW OF VALUES:	VIEW OF REALITY
HINDUISM: Polytheism. TAOISM: Ultimate Reality is Impersonal: Ying-Yang Dualism. BUDDHISM: Polytheism NEW AGE BELIEFS.	MAN IS ONE WITH REALITY, THUS MAN IS SPIRITUAL AND ETERNAL INDIVIDUALISM IS AN ILLUSION AN PERSON WHO BECOMES AWAKENED FROM THE "SLEEP OF IGNORANCE" BY DIRECTLY THE TRUE NATURE OF REALITY IS A "BUDDHA."	TRUTH IS AN EXPERIENCE OF UNITY WITHIN "ONENESS OF THE UNIVERSE." TRUTH IS BEYOND ALL RATIONAL DESCRIPTION AWAKENING IS THROUGH MEDITATION, VARIOUS RELIGIOUS PRACTICES, ETC.	BECAUSE ULTIMATELY REALITY IS IMPERSONAL, THERE IS NO REAL DISTINCTION BETWEEN GOOD & EVIL. INSTEAD, "UNENLIGHTENED BEHAVIOR" IS THAT WHICH FAILS TO UNDERSTAND ESSENTIAL UNITY (IGNORANCE).	THE MATERIAL UNIVERSE IS ALL THAT EXISTS BUDDHIST PRACTICE IS TO PUT AN END TO THE STRESS OF EXISTENCE ONLY THE SPIRITUAL DIMENSION EXISTS; ALL ELSE IS ILLUSION. SPIRITUAL REALITY IS ETERNAL & IMPERSONAL.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



SPIRITISM & POLYTHEISM:

VIEW OF GOD	VIEW OF MAN	VIEW OF TRUTH	VIEW OF VALUES:	VIEW OF REALITY
ANIMISM: Primitive beliefs, the doctrine of spiritual beings. Spirit beings inhabit ordinary objects, inorganic or organic. The world is populated by "spirit beings" who govern what goes on. POLYTHEISM: There are many gods that exist both beyond and in the universe.	MAN IS A CREATION OF THE GODS LIKE THE REST OF THE CREATURES ON EARTH. OFTEN, TRIBES OR COMMUNITIES HAVE A SPECIAL RELATIONSHIP WITH SOME GODS WHO PROTECT THEM & CAN PUNISH THEM.	FOR SPIRITISM, TRUTH ABOUT THE NATURAL WORLD IS TYPICALLY DISCOVERED THROUGH A SHAMAN FIGURE WHO HAS VISIONS THAT TELL HIM OR HER WHAT THE GODS AND DEMONS ARE DOING & HOW THEY FEEL. TRUTH CAN BE ARBITRARY.	FORM OF TABOOS, WHICH ARE THINGS WHICH IRRITATE OR ANGER VARIOUS SPIRITS. THESE TABOOS ARE DIFFERENT FROM THE IDEA OF "GOOD & EVIL" BECAUSE IT IS JUST AS IMPORTANT TO AVOID IRRITATING EVIL SPIRITS AS IT IS GOOD ONES.	WORLD IS POPULATED BY BEINGS WHO GOVERN REALITY. GOD & DEMONS ARE THE REAL REASON BEHIND NATURAL EVENTS. MATERIAL THINGS ARE REAL, BUT HAVE SPIRITS ASSOCIATED WITH THEM; REALITY CAN BE INTERPRETED SPIRITUALLY.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

V. The Problem of Evil

What is evil?...Atheism affirms evil but denies the reality of God...Finite godism can claim that God desires to destroy evil but is unable to because he is limited in power...Deism can distance God from evil by stressing that God is not in the world, but beyond it...Panentheism insists that evil is a necessary part of the ongoing progress of the interaction of God and the world...Pantheism affirms the reality of God but denies the reality of evil....Theism affirms both the reality of both God and evil.

The problem of evil may be viewed in simple form as a conflict involving three concepts:

1. God's power,
2. God's goodness, and
3. the presence of evil in the world.

Solutions to the problem of evil typically involve modifying one or more of these three concepts:

1. limit God's power,
2. limit God's goodness,
3. modify the existence of evil (e.g., call evil an illusion).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Consider…(1) If God made no claims to being good, then the existence of evil would be easier to explain; but God does claim to be good; (2) If God were limited in power so that he was not strong enough to withstand evil, the existence of evil would be easier to explain; but God does claim to be all-powerful; (3) If evil were just an illusion that had no reality, the problem wouldn't really exist in the first place; but evil is not an illusion. Evil is real.

We face the reality of two types of evil...
a. Moral Evil (evil committed by free moral agents, involving such things as war, crime, cruelty, class struggles, discrimination, slavery, ethnic cleansing, suicide bombings, & social injustice);

b. Natural Evil (involving such things as hurricanes, floods, earthquakes, tornadoes, etc).

THE MORAL LAW ARGUMENT:

1. Moral Law imply a Moral Law Giver.

2. There is an objective moral law.

3. Therefore, there is a Moral Law Giver.

Biblical Ethics

Here are 5 ways to develop and keep a mode of Biblical Ethics:

1.) Does it violate any clear teaching of Scripture?

2.) Does it destroy any part of the body (physically, mentally, or spiritually) that is The Temple of The Holy Spirit?

3.) Does it cause a weaker Christian or non-Christian to be hindered?

4.) Does it violate the express will of one who has the God-given right to exercise headship?

5.) Does it glorify God?

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Six Worldviews You're Competing Against

http://www.christianpost.com/news/six-worldviews-you-146-re-competing-against-29420/

Excerpt:

Worldview matters. Clarifying worldviews is not an academic exercise, intellectual theory, or a philosophical concept. A worldview is an integral part of the lives of those you minister to on a weekly basis. It determines their relationships. It determines their successes and failure. It determines their goals and motivations. If you want to see someone change their lives, they'll have to change how they look at the world first.

Every week as you stand before your people to share God's Word, they're bringing different worldviews into the room. What are some of these worldviews?

1. The one with the most toys wins.
This is the worldview of materialism – and it can be summed up with one world, more. Materialism says that the only thing that really matters in life is acquiring things. Those who subscribe to this worldview live mostly to collect things.

The Bible's answer: Jesus said this in Luke 12, "A man's life does not consist in the abundance of his possessions" (NIV). He tells us not to judge our lives by how much we've got. The greatest things in life aren't things.

2. I've got to think of me first.
We live in a "me first," serve-yourself world that says it's all about you. Commercial slogans cater to this viewpoint. Slogans like, "have it your way," "we do it all for you," "obey your thirst," "you've got to think of what's best for yourself," and "You deserve it."

For the last 40 years, the Baby Boomer generation has been called the "Me Generation." This "me first" idea has infected entire communities. It has torn up marriages ("I don't care how divorce impacts my spouse or children; it's all about me"), destroyed workplaces ("I don't care how my laziness impacts my co-workers; it's all about me") and even ruined churches ("Serve my needs first, forget about the lost").

It's a self-centered, individualistic way of life that says we should ignore the community and other people.

The Bible's answer: Jesus says, "If you try to keep your life for yourself, you will lose it. But if you give up your life for me, you will find true life" (Matt. 16:25 NLT). Jesus says you only begin to live when you give your life away. Significance in life does not come from serving yourself; it comes from serving God and others.

3. Do what feels good.
This is hedonism – the belief that the most important thing in life is how we feel. The number one goal of a hedonist is to feel good, be comfortable, and have fun.

It's the worldview that Hugh Hefner founded Playboy magazine on. He willingly acknowledges he is a hedonist.

It's not just playboys who are hedonists, though. In fact, someone who lives for the goal of retirement is a hedonist. If the whole goal of a person's life is to simply do nothing, live a self centered life, and make no contribution to the world, that's hedonism.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Bible's answer: "Are you addicted to thrills? What an empty life! The pursuit of pleasure is never satisfied" (Prov 21:17 Msg). Mick Jagger's been singing: "I can't get no satisfaction" for 40 years. Why? The pursuit of pleasure is never satisfied.

4. Whatever works for you.
This worldview says it doesn't matter if it's right or wrong. It doesn't matter if it hurts anybody or not. If it works for you, fine. As that great theologian Sly Stone says, "Different strokes for different folks."

In our multi-cultural, pluralistic world, this is a very popular worldview. Nobody wants to tell someone else that what they are doing is wrong. In fact that's the only way you can be wrong in our society today – if you tell someone else they're wrong.

The Bible's answer: The Bible says, "There is a way that seems right to a man, but in the end it leads to death" (Prov. 14:12 NIV). Our ideas may seem right, but in the end our ideas lead to death. "Whatever works for you" leads to death. You don't break God's universal laws; they break you.

5. God doesn't exist.
This worldview is naturalism or atheism. Naturalists believe that everything in life is a result of random chance. We're all accidents of nature. There is no grand creator or grand design. God either doesn't exist or he doesn't matter.

If there is no God, there's no plan or purpose for life. If there is no purpose, than your life doesn't really matter. Your only value comes from the fact that God loves you, created you, and thought you up. For naturalists, life has no value, meaning, or purpose.

It takes more faith to be an atheist than it does to believe in God. When you look at creation and how the world is set on an axis, it proves the existence of God to me. If it were one degree one way, we'd freeze up. If it were one degree the other way, we'd burn up.

The Bible's answer: Paul says in Romans 1:25 (NIV), "From the beginning of creation, God has shown what he is like by all he has made. That's why those people don't have any excuse. They know about God, but they don't honor him or even thank him...They claim to be wise, but they are fools." In other words, we can look at nature and see a lot about God. We know God is creative, powerful, organized, and likes diversity. There are lots of things we know about God just by looking at nature.

6. You are your own God.
This worldview, otherwise known as humanism, is very popular in the Western world. It says we are the mastermind of our own fate, the determiner of our destiny. You'll hear this in the new age movement as well: "You're divine. You're a god."

It's ironic. God wired us to worship something. And if we don't worship God, we end up worshipping ourselves. The self-made man usually worships his maker.

The Bible's answer: Paul says in Rom. 1:25 (NIV): "They exchanged the truth of God for a lie, and worshipped created things rather than the Creator." You can go all around the world and find people worshipping little idols that they made – stone idols, rock idols, crystals, and wooden idols. They're worshipping something that they created themselves or somebody else created. In America we have our own idols – they're called cars, homes, and status symbols. The Bible is clear that God is God, and we're not.

All of these worldviews have consequences. Every day we're affected and influenced by them. We're often not even aware of it. These worldviews affect the happiness and success of the people to whom you minister. They matter greatly.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

There's only one worldview that is consistent with the Bible. The biblical worldview says God made us for his purposes. It says that we exist for his pleasure. It's 180 degrees different from the other worldviews above.

Want to change the hearts of those listening to your sermons each week? Change their minds – and their worldviews – first.

Christian Worldview and Social Issues
https://probe.org/christian-worldview-and-social-issues/

The Biblical Worldview
"Providing Scriptural Teaching And Commentary From the Biblical Worldview and the Posttrib Position" http://www.thebiblicalworldview.org/

For more on Postmodernism and the Church, see also my other separate reference resource*:

Christian Scholarship: Biblical – Theological – Philosophical

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Apologetics and World-Views (Outline)

http://www.worldvieweyes.org/resources/Strauss/ApologeticsAndWV.htm

Excerpt:

INTRODUCTION (J. P. Moreland. Scaling the Secular City. Baker, 1987)

1. "I am now convinced that for a person to be fully conscious intellectually he should not only be able-to detect the world views of others but be aware of his own; why it is his, and, why in the light of so many options he thinks it is true."

2. The following goes along with what is involved in becoming thinking people in dealing with world issues involving history of thought. From The Witness. September, 1976:

> "WANTED— HARD SAINTS. We have so many 'soft saints.' They are lovely in disposition, upright in soul. But their minds, instead of being places of sunlight, are masses of drifting fog, a haze of wishes and illusions.... They will do anything for the kingdom of God but think. The Church has no greater need than that of hard saints, with fire not around the head as in conventional pictures, but fire in the head, a continual state of mental disturbance; saints who can do hard thinking in a day which desperately needs thinking; saints in whom the higher brain centers are not paralyzed." -Halford Luccock.

I. WORLD VIEW: (see my World-View. Facts, and 'Theory. Laden' Observation)

A. Definition: A world view is a set of presuppositions (or assumptions) which we hold (consciously or subconsciously) about the basic makeup of our world. (See journal, Ultimate Reality, cf. Sire's The Universe Next Door, Inter-Varsity Press).

B. The first assumption everyone makes before he even begins to think at all is that some thing exists.

1. All world views assume that something is there rather than that nothing is there. (Sarte even thought this.)

2. So primary that most of us do not even know we are assuming it. We take it as too obvious to mention. Of course, something is there!

3. That is the point: If we do not recognize that, we get nowhere. The apprehension that something is there is the beginning of conscious life.

4. Also the beginning of two branches of philosophy: metaphysics (the study of being) and epistemology (the study of knowing).

C. We Discover: Once we have recognized that something is there, we have not necessarily recognized what that something is.

1. Here is where world views begin to diverge.

2. Definition again: "A world view is composed of a number of basic presuppositions, more or less self-consistent, generally unquestioned by each person, rarely, if ever, mentioned by his friends, and only brought to mind when challenged by a foreigner from another ideological universe." (p. 18)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

D. Well-rounded world view includes basic answers to each of the following questions.

(Phillips and Brown. Making Sense of Your World. (Moody, 1991).

1. What is prime reality—the really real?

2. Who is man? To this we might answer a highly complicated electro-chemical machine whose complexity we do not understand, or a personal being created by God in his own image, or a sleeping god. Current question by western world "Who am I?" (Play "Death of a Salesman")

3. What happens to man at death?

4. Basis for morality?

5. What is the meaning of human history?

6. Within various basic world views other issues often arise.

   a. Nature of external world?

   b. In charge of the world?

   c. Man determined or free?

   d. How can we know and how can we know that we know?

   e. Man, the maker of all values?

   f. Is God really good?

   g. Is God personal/impersonal?

   h. Does God exist at all?

E. When stated in such sequence: boggles the mind

1. Either answers are too obvious to us and we wonder why anyone would bother to ask such questions or else we wonder how any of them can be answered with any certainty.

2. "If we feel the answers are too obvious to consider, then we have a world view; but we have no idea that many others do not share it. We should realize that we live in a pluralistic world. What is obvious to us may be a lie from hell to our neighbor next door. If we do not recognize that, we are certainly naive and provincial, and we have much to learn about man in today's world. Alternatively, if we feel that none of the questions can be answered without cheating or committing intellectual suicide, we have already adopted a sort of world view - a form of skepticism which in its extreme form leads to nihilism." (p. 19)

3. We cannot avoid assuming some answers to the questions. We will adopt either one

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

stance or another; refusing to adopt an explicit world view will turn out itself to be a world view or at least a philosophical position.

4. In short: we are caught! “So long as we live, we will live either the examined or the unexamined life. It is the assumption of this book that the former is better.” (p. 19)

F. What are the universes next door?

G. Each of the following world views considers: nature and character of God, nature of the universe, nature of man, question of what happens to man at death, basis of ethics, and the meaning of history.

II. CHRISTIAN THEISM: “A Universe Charged With the Grandeur of God.” (See syllabus God: Creator/Redeemer: Becker, The Heavenly City of the 18th Century Philosophers)

A. Situation of western world to end of the 17th Century.

B. Basic Christian Theism: Essence of this View (Supenaturalism)

1. God is infinite and personal (Triune), transcendent and imminent, omniscient, sovereign and good.

2. God created the cosmos ex nihilo to operate with a uniformity of cause and effect in an open system. (Miracle and Scientific World-View)

3. Man is created in the image of God and thus possesses personality, self-transcendence, intelligence, morality, gregariousness, and creativity.

4. God can and does communicate with man.

5. Man was created good, but through the Fall the image of God became defaced, though not so ruined as not to be capable of restoration; through the work of Christ God redeemed man and began the process of restoring man to goodness, though any given man may choose to reject that redemption.

6. For man death is either the gate to life with God and his people or the gate to eternal separation from the only thing that will ultimately fulfill man’s aspirations.

7. Ethics is transcendent and is based on the character of God as good (holy and loving).

8. History is linear, a meaningful sequence of events leading to the fulfillment of God’s purposes for man.

C. The Grandeur of God: (Brown, Miracles and Critical Mind. 1984; Geisler, Miracles and Modem Thought. 1982)

III. THE CLOCKWORK UNIVERSE: DEISM (See syllabus, Historiography of Physical Sciences)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

A. If theism lasted so long, what could possibly have happened to undermine it? If it satisfactorily answered all man's basic questions, provided a refuge for his fears and hope for his future, why did anything else come along? Answers to these questions can be given on many levels. The fact is that many forces operated to shatter the basic intellectual unity of the West.

B. Basic Deism - From Deism to Doubt (Oz Guiness, In Two Minds (TVT, 1976).

1. A transcendent God, as a First Cause, created the universe but then left it to run on its own. God is thus not imminent, not fully personal, not sovereign over the affairs of men, not providential.

2. The cosmos God created is determined because it is created as a uniformity of cause and effect in a closed system; no miracle is possible.

3. Man, though personal, is part of the clockwork of the universe.

4. The cosmos, this world, is understood to be in its normal state; it is not fallen or abnormal. Man can know the universe and he can determine what God is like by studying it.

5. Ethics is limited to general revelation; because the universe is normal, it reveals what is right.

6. History is linear, for the course of the cosmos was determined at creation.

C. An Unstable Compound: Deism did not prove to be a very stable world view. Historically it held sway over the intellectual world of France and England briefly from the late seventeenth into the first half of the eighteenth century. Preceded by theism, it was followed by naturalism.

IV. THE SILENCE OF FINITE SPACE: NATURALISM (See syllabus Making of Contemporary Mind)

A. Deism is the isthmus between two great continents - theism and naturalism. To get from the first to the second deism is the natural route. Though perhaps without deism, naturalism would not come about so readily; deism is only a passing phase, almost an intellectual curiosity. Naturalism, on the other hand, is serious business.

B. In intellectual terms the route is this: In theism God is the infinite-personal Creator and sustainer of the cosmos. In deism God is "reduced" - he begins to lose his personality, though he remains Creator and (by implication) sustainer of the cosmos.

In naturalism God is further "reduced"; he loses his very existence

C. Basic Naturalism

1. Matter exists eternally and is all there is. God does not exist.

2. The cosmos exists as a uniformity of cause and effect in a closed system.

3. Man is a complex "machine"; personality is an interrelation of chemical and physical properties we do not yet fully understand.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

4. Death is extinction of personality and individuality.

5. History is a linear stream of events linked by cause and effect but without an overarching purpose.

6. Ethics is related only to man.

D. The Persistence of Naturalism: Unlike deism, naturalism has had great staying power. Born in the 18th century, it came of age in the 19th century and grew to maturity in the 20th. While signs of the age are now appearing, naturalism is still very much alive. It dominates the universities, colleges and high schools. It provides the framework for most scientific study. It poses the backdrop against which the humanities continue to struggle for human value, as writers, poets, painters and artists in general shudder under its implications. No rival world view has yet been able to topple it, though it is fair to say that the 20th century has provided some powerful options and theism is experiencing somewhat of a rebirth at all levels of society.

V. ZERO POINT: NIHILISM (See Nihilism. S. Rosen, Yale University Press, 1969).

A. Nihilism is more a feeling than a philosophy. Strictly speaking, nihilism is not a philosophy at all. It is a denial of philosophy, a denial of the possibility of knowledge, a denial that anything is valuable. If it proceeds to the absolute denial of everything, it even denies the reality of existence itself. In other words, nihilism is the negation of everything - knowledge, ethics, beauty, reality. In nihilism no statement has validity; nothing has meaning. Everything is gratuitous, contingent.

Those who have been untouched by the feelings of despair, anxiety and ennui associated with nihilism may find it hard to imagine that nihilism could be a seriously held “world view”. But it is, and it is well for everyone who wants to understand the 20th century to experience, if only vicariously, something of nihilism as a stance toward human existence.

B. Nihilism came about, not because the theists and deists picked away at naturalism from the outside. Nihilism is the natural child of naturalism.

1. The First Bridge: Necessity and Chance

2. The Second Bridge: The Great Cloud of Unknowing

3. The Third Bridge: Is and Ought

C. The Loss of Meaning: The strands of epistemological, metaphysical and ethical nihilism weave together to make a rope long enough and strong enough to hang a whole culture. The name of the rope is Loss of Meaning.

D. Inner Tensions in Nihilism: There are at least five reasons why nihilism is unlivable.

1. First, from meaninglessness, nothing at all follows, or rather, anything follows.

2. Second, every time a nihilist thinks and trusts his thinking, he is inconsistent, for he has denied that thinking is of value or that it can lead to knowledge.

3. Third, while a limited sort of practical nihilism is possible for a while, eventually a limit is reached.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

4. Fourth, nihilism means the death of art. Here too we find a paradox, for much modern art - literature, painting, drama, film - has nihilism for its ideological core.

5. Fifth, and finally, nihilism poses severe psychological problems for a nihilist. People cannot live with it because it denies what every fiber of their waking being calls for - meaning, value, significance, dignity, worth. Nietzsche ended in an asylum. Hemingway affirmed a "lifestyle." Beckett writes black comedy. Vonnegut revels in whimsy. And Kafka - perhaps the greatest artist of them all - lived an almost impossible life of tedium, writing novels and stories that boil down to a sustained cry: "God is dead! God is dead! Isn't he? I mean, surely he is, isn't he? God is dead. Oh, I wish, I wish, I wish he weren't."

E. It is thus that nihilism forms the hinge for modem man. No one who has not plumbed the despair of the nihilists, heard them out, felt as they felt - if only vicariously through their art - can understand the 20th century. Nihilism is the foggy bottom land through which modem man must pass if he is to build a life in Western culture. There are no easy answers to modem man's questions, and none of them are worth anything unless it takes seriously the problems raised by the possibility that nothing whatever of value exists.

VI. BEYOND NIHILISM: EXISTENTIALISM (See syllabus Modem/Contemporary Philosophy)

A. In an essay published in 1950, Albert Camus wrote, "A literature of despair is a contra diction in terms.... In the darkest depths of our nihilism I have sought only for the means to transcend nihilism." Here the essence of existentialism's most important goal is summed up in one phrase - to transcend nihilism. In fact, every important world view that has emerged since the turn of our century has had that as a major goal. For nihilism, coming as it does directly from a culturally pervasive world view, is the problem of our age. A world view that ignores this fact has little chance of proving relevant to modern thinking people. Existentialism, especially in its secular form, not only takes nihilism seriously, it is an answer to it.

B. Basic Atheistic Existentialism (Hans Kung. Does God Exist? Doubleday, 1980) Atheistic existentialism begins by accepting all of the following propositions of naturalism:

Matter exists eternally: God does not exist: The cosmos exists as a uniformity or cause and effect in a closed system; History is a linear stream of events linked by cause and effect but without an overarching purpose. Ethics is related only to man. In other words, atheistic existentialism affirms all propositions of naturalism except those relating to the nature of man and his relationship to the cosmos. Indeed, existentialism's major interest is in who man is and how he can be significant in an otherwise insignificant world.

1. The cosmos is composed solely of matter, but to man reality appears in two forms - subjective and objective.

2. For man alone existence precedes essence; man makes himself who he is.

3. Man is totally free as regards his nature and destiny.

4. The highly wrought and tightly organized objective world stands over against man and appears to him as absurd.

5. In full recognition of and against the absurdity of the objective world, the authentic man must revolt and create value. (Jaki, Road to Science. Chicago University, 1979)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

C. Basic Theistic Existentialism

1. Man is a personal being who, when he comes to full consciousness, finds himself in an alien universe; whether or not God exists is a tough question to be solved not by reason but by faith.

2. The personal is the valuable.

3. Knowledge is subjectivity; the whole truth is often paradoxical.

4. History as a record of events is uncertain and unimportant, but history as a model or type or myth to be made present and lived is of supreme importance.

VII. JOURNEY TO THE EAST: EASTERN PANTHEISTIC MONISM

(cf Strauss. "Confronting the New Age - Alternatives to Holiness")

A. In the course of Western thought eventually we reach an impasse. Naturalism leads to nihilism, and nihilism is hard to transcend on the terms, which Western man - permeated by naturalism - wishes to accept. Atheistic existentialism, as we have seen, is one at tempt, but it has some rather serious problems. Theism is an option, but for a naturalist it is uninviting. How can one accept the existence of an infinite, personal, transcendent God? For over a century that question has posed a serious barrier. Modem man would rather stick with his naturalism, for it still seems to be a decided improvement on the fabulous religion it rejected. Moreover, modern Christendom, with its hypocritical churches and its lack of compassion, is a poor testimony to the viability of theism. No, that way will not do.

B. Basic Eastern Pantheistic Monism

1. A man is Brahman; that is, the soul of man (each and every man) is the soul of the cosmos.

2. Some things are more one than others.

3. Many (if not all) roads lead to the One.

4. To realize one's oneness with the cosmos is to pass beyond personality.

5. To realize one's oneness with the cosmos is to pass beyond knowledge. The principle of non-contradiction does not apply where ultimate reality is concerned.

6. To realize one's oneness with the cosmos is to pass beyond good and evil; the cosmos is perfect at every moment.

7. Death is the end of individual, personal existence, but it changes nothing essential in man's nature.

8. To realize one's oneness with the One is to pass beyond time. Time is unreal. History is cyclical.

C. East and West: A Problem in Communication:

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Cyclical history, paths that cross, doctrines that disagree, evil that is good, knowledge that is ignorance, time that is eternal, reality that is unreal: All these are the shifting, paradoxical - even contradictory - masks that veil the One.

VIII. A SEPARATE UNIVERSE: THE NEW CONSCIOUSNESS (See syllabus Contemporary Religious Movements)

A. Eastern mysticism is posing one way out for Western man caught in naturalism's nihilistic bind. But Eastern mysticism is foreign. Even a watered-down version like 'Transcendental Meditation' requires an immediate and radical re-orientation of Western man's mode of grasping reality. Such re-orientation leads to new states of consciousness and feelings of meaning, as we saw, but the intellectual cost is high. One must die to the West to be born in the East. Is there a less painful, less costly way to achieve meaning and significance? Why not conduct a search for a new consciousness along more Western lines?

B. The Radical Transformation of Man.

C. Relationship to Other World Views

D. The Basic Tenets of the New Consciousness

1. Whatever the nature of being (idea of matter, energy or particle) the self is the kingpin - the prime reality. As mankind grows in his awareness and grasp of this fact, he is on the verge of a radical change in human nature; even now we see harbingers of the new man and prototypes of the new age.

2. The cosmos, while unified in the self, is manifested in two more dimensions: the visible universe, accessible through ordinary consciousness, and the invisible universe (or Mind at Large), accessible through altered states of consciousness.

3. The core of the new consciousness is the experience of cosmic consciousness, in which ordinary categories of space, time and morality tend to disappear.

4. Physical death is not the end of the self; under the experience of cosmic conscious ness, the fear of death is removed.

5. Three distinct attitudes are taken to the metaphysical question of the nature of reality under the general framework of the new consciousness: (1) the occult version in which the beings and things perceived in states of altered consciousness exist apart from the self that is conscious; (2) the psychedelic version in which these things and beings are projections of the conscious self and (3) the conceptual relativist version in which the cosmic consciousness is the conscious activity of a mind using one of many non-ordinary models for reality, none of which is any "truer" than any other.

E. Crack in the New Consciousness

IX. THE EXAMINED LIFE: CONCLUSION See syllabus Historiography of Christian Apologetics/Eristics)

"The tough-minded and the tender-minded, as William James described them so brilliantly, are perennial types, perennially antagonistic.... Respect for the facts of experience, open-

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

mindedness, an experimental trial-and-error attitude, and the capacity for working within the frame of an incomplete unfinished world view distinguish (the tough-minded) from the more impatient, imaginative, and often aprioristic thinkers in the tender-minded camp." Herbert Feigl, Logical Empiricism

Postmodernism: Resurgent Neo-Gnostic Pantheism

Postmodernism; Multicultural Pluralism and Radical Contextualization (see J. Sire, The Universe Next Door. 3rd ed. (IVP, 1997), pp. 172-90; M. Behe, Darwin's Black Box (Free Press, 1996); Philip Johnson, Reason in the Balance (IVP, 1995); Darwin on Trial (IVP, 1991); Defeating Darwinism by Opening Minds (IVP, 1997).

A. Nietzsche's brilliant parable, "The Mad Man," saw the results of the death of God in Western Christian culture. The West lost its ordering center and the intellectual and cultural consequences are crystal clear hi our present multicultural maze. "Where is God?" he cried. "I shall tell you. We have killed him - you and I. All of us are his murderers. But how have we done this? How were we able to drink up the sea? Who gave us the sponge to wipe away the entire horizon? ... This tremendous event is still on its way, still wandering - it has not yet reached the ears of man." (See Strauss, "Relativism: Contextualization in Context" (bibliography), and "The Making of the Postmodern Mind" (syllabus).

B. Our postmodern culture inverts Socrates' dictum, "the unexamined life is not worth living" to "the examined life is not worth living." Postmodern culture is a pluralism of perspectives, a plethora of open-ended philosophical possibilities.

C. Gene Veith, Jr. writes, "If all cultural values are relative, then none need to be taken seriously. Postmodernist multi-culturalism must affirm all cultures, but in doing so it may destroy them all." (Postmodern Times, Crossway. 1994; pp. 143-44). He further critiques the "New Tribalism" because it leads to additional "segmentation, relativism, Western universities repudiating their own intellectual heritage, intolerance and racial tension." (See Strauss, "Whoever Controls the Soul of the University Controls the Soul of Culture"). Veith states that the tenets of postmodernist ideology are as follows:

(1) Social construction

(2) Cultural determinism

(3) The rejection of individual identity

(4) The rejection of humanism

(5) The rejection of reason

(6) Revolutionary critique of social order (Veith, p. 158)

Veith thinks this leads to totalitarianism - the side with the most power "winning"; pragmatism -without any kind of meta-arching moral code; and the possibility of the demise of American democracy.

D. Postmodernism: (Six tenets)

(1) The first question postmodernism asks is not "what is there?" or "how do we know what is there?" but rather "how does language function; i.e., how is meaning itself constructed? In other words, we are at the end of Kant's "radical constructionist" - language creates meaning, it does not decode "objective reality."

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Postmodernism is a radical move from knowing to meaning (this is shown in "seeker-friendly" emphasis in church growth - what is relevant or meaningful to me?). In short, meaning is not decoded but is created by the knowing subject.

This postmodern epistemology can be traced back to David Hume (1711-76), Immanuel Kant (1724-1804), G. F. W. Hegel (1770-1831), finding its penultimate expression hi the thought of Friederich Nietzsche (1844-1900). The shift is thus made from knowing to meaning (on the development from epistemology to hermeneutics, see Strauss, "Logic Epistemology to Postmodern Hermeneutics" and "Philosophical - Historical Origins of Postmodern Hermeneutics").

Two fundamental themes run through the intellectual milieu of the 19th century: (1) Positivism; and (2) Historicism.

Nietzsche took Descartes'' doubt to the total rejection of certitude about the existence of the "self.

(2) Knowing comes under fire. The epistemology of correspondence is rejected (see Strauss, "Whatever Happened to True Truth?"). Conceptual relativism penetrates beyond religious experience to all aspects of reality. No truth about reality for reality itself is forever hidden from us. All we can do is tell stories (which may or may not be true) or use metaphor (e.g., "seeker-friendly" churches where the audience is the text -not the word of God.) See Strauss, "What is a Metaphor a Metaphor Of?"

Richard Rorty says that the world does not speak - "only we do! Languages are made rather than found and truth is a property of linguistic entities of sentences (Richard Rorty, On Contingency and Solidarity. 1989). Only our story is as true as any story is ever going to get!

(3) Language as Power: Shift from being to knowing to meaning declares that all narratives mask a play for power. Any one narrative which insists upon presenting a metanarrative is oppressive.

(4) Death of the Self (Psalm 8. "What is man?") receives a postmodern answer - human beings make themselves who they are by the language they construct about themselves. This represents an existential step toward postmodernism. Sartre said, "Existence precedes essence"); (Existentialism - Sartre's "authentic self is never encompassed by its cultural context or any meta-narrative: it is radically free. Little did Sartre realize that "absolute freedom" is insanity! ALL meta-stories are oppressive, but the rejection of these meta-stories is anarchy - which Michel Foucault accepts. In fact, Foucault perpetrates perpetual infinite anarchy!! All postmodernisits reduce meta-narratives to power plays. Postmodernists say, "We are only what we desire ourselves to be." We have moved from the biblical Imago Dei to Freud's Oedipus Complex - id, ego and superego to Nietzsche's Ubermensch (see especially his Thus Spake Zarathustra) to modern science, which declares that man is paradoxically the product of DNA template which is the result of unmodifiable evolution based in a chance mutation of survival of the fittest. Postmoderns use these developments to describe themselves. What/who describes what/who?

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

(5) Being God without God: Ethics, like knowledge is a linguistic construct; social good is whatever society takes it to be. This is, of course, cultural and epistemological relativism in postmodern garb (See R. Zacharias, Can Man Live Without God? There is little ultimate difference between Richard Rorty and Michel Foucault. For the latter, the greatest good is in the individual's freedom to maximize pleasure. (See Ronald Beiner, "Foucault's Hyper Liberalism," Critical Review. Summer, 1995, pg. 349-70). The postmodern notion that morality is multiplicity: i.e., that language is used to describe culturally contingent right from wrong.

(6) Cutting Edge of Culture is Literary Theory: In the Middle Ages, theology was the "queen of the sciences." In the Enlightenment, philosophy and especially science be came the leading edge of the intellectual cultural charge. In the postmodern era, Literary Theory leads the way.

The "babbling brooks" of Marx and Freud have fed into the fresh springs of Anthropology (Claud Levi-Strauss); Sociology (M. Foucault, Jean Francois Loytard); Feminism (Kate Millet, Elaine Showalter), and Linguistics (Ferdinand de Sauseure) with such force that the eddies of literary study become the mainstream of intellectual life. Scholars like Jacques Derrida (deconstructionism) and Stanley Fish (reader-response) became "hot" on major campuses (see Karen Winkler, "Scholars Mark the Beginning of the Age of' Post-Theory'", The Chronicle of Higher Education. Oct. 13, 1993, p. A9).

Panoramic Sweep of Postmodernism: The effects of postmodernism can be seen almost everywhere in Western culture. (Dennis McCallum, in The Death of Truth. Bethany House, 1996, has gathered essays on postmodernism in healthcare, literature, education, history, psychotherapy, law, science and religion, each written by an expert in the field. This is a fundamental tool to begin a Christian critique of postmodernism).

(A) History becomes a reflection on histories - history is a "hall of mirrors".

(B) Scientific truth is a language that we use to get what we want. "There is no proof that the rules (of science) are good thus the consensus extended to them by the experts" (The Post Modern Condition, p. 29). When a scientific claim fails, the sentence is false or the language is obscure.

(C) The postmodern rewriting of theology has produced the a/theologies of Mark C. Taylor, the post-liberalism of George Lindbeck, the Christian story emphasis of Diogenes Allen, the "revisioned" evangelical theology of Stanley Grenz, and the narrative nature of theology promoted by Richard Middleton.

F. Postmodernism: A Christian Critique.

(1) Postmodernism's critique of optimistic naturalism is often on target. However, its epistemology is hardly a rational foundation for such a critique.

(2) Postmodern recognition that language is closely associated with power is also apt. We do often tell stories, believe doctrines, or hold philosophies because they give integration. They give us our community power over others.

(3) Foucault's prime value - personal freedom to intensify pleasure - is belied by his reduction of all values to power itself.

(4) The truth question cannot be avoided. Is it true that all discourse is power play? A radical postmodernism says "yes" and thus, is self-refuting (see A. McGrath, A Passion for Truth, p. 195;

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

also Strauss, Theology of Promise - Bible is a metanarrative without a masked power play. Man is free to serve or reject God but not free to determine the consequences).

Conclusion: Postmodernism is Many Faces:

· The anguish of Nietzsche railing against the head mentality of the mass of humanity.

· The ecstatic joy of Nietzsche willing into being the Overman.

· The living visage of Foucault seeking the intensification of sexual experience.

· The comic grin of Derrida (his search ended in death by AIDS) as he seeks to deconstruct all discourse including his own..

· The play of irony on the lips of Rorty as he searches for a foundation - less solidarity.

... But not one of these faces displays a confidence in truth, a trust in reality or a hope for the future.

For more on Postmodernism, see also my other separate reference resource*:

Christian Scholarship: Biblical – Theological – Philosophical

See also: Paul's Worldview

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

You Say vs God Says

YOU SAY	GOD SAYS	BIBLE VERSES
You say: 'It's impossible'	God says: All things are possible	(Luke 18:27)
You say: 'I'm too tired'	God says: I will give you rest	(Matthew 11:28-30)
You say: 'Nobody really loves me'	God says: I love you	(John 3:1 6 & John 3:34)
You say: 'I can't go on'	God says: My grace is sufficient	(II Corinthians 12:9 & Psalm 91:15)
You say: 'I can't figure things out'	God says: I will direct your steps	(Proverbs 3:5- 6)
You say: 'I can't do it'	God says: You can do all things	(Philippians 4:13)
You say: 'I'm not able'	God says: I am able	(II Corinthians 9:8)
You say: 'It's not worth it'	God says: It will be worth it	(Roman 8:28)
You say: 'I can't forgive myself'	God says: I Forgive you	(I John 1:9 & Romans 8:1)
You say: 'I can't manage'	God says: I will supply all your needs	(Philippians 4:19)
You say: 'I'm afraid'	God says: I have not given you a spirit of fear	(II Timothy 1:7)
You say: 'I'm always worried and frustrated'	God says: Cast all your cares on ME	(I Peter 5:7)
You say: 'I'm not smart enough'	God says: I give you wisdom	(I Corinthians 1:30)
You say: 'I feel all alone'	God says: I will never leave you or forsake you	(Hebrews 13:5)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Martin Luther Biography

Wikipedia: Martin Luther https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Martin_Luther

Martin Luther | Speaker: Eric Metaxas (Oct. 2, 2017) [Recommended]
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=gQD52TMgjnI [Video]

Grace Chapel Church (October 1, 2017) – Author/Speaker Eric Metaxas speaks on the significance and legacy of Martin Luther and the Protestant Reformation. Based on Metaxas' book Martin Luther: The Man Who Rediscovered God and Changed the World

Eric Metaxas Discusses Life and Work of Martin Luther at Proclaim 17 (Feb. 2017)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=k8Xj8x-fzgo [Video] [Recommended]

Syndicated radio show host, popular author, and speaker Eric Metaxas talked about the life and work of Martin Luther on February 28, 2017, during a session for the Pastors Track of Proclaim 17, the NRB International Christian Media Convention, in Orlando, Florida. Metaxas, who will publish "Martin Luther: The Man Who Rediscovered God and Changed the World" in October, emphasized Luther's faithfulness to God's Word over all other things.

Martin Luther: The Man Who Rediscovered God – CBN Interview of Eric Metaxas (2017)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=zPq5VzScwvU [Video] (Oct. 4, 2017)

Why Martin Luther's 'Ninety-Five Theses' are still important (Fox News Interview of Eric Metaxas) (Oct. 4, 2017)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=gTl9I-mzSyA [Video]

Martin Luther: The Man Who Rediscovered God and Changed the World (Eric Metaxas) (Oct. 22, 2017) (Lecture with Q&A at Memorial Drive Presbyterian) [Recommended] https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=eOljzKwaI0A [Video]

A Conversation about Martin Luther with Eric Metaxas and Chuck Swindoll
(Oct. 31, 2017) (Stonebrier Community Church) (MetaxasTalk)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=uDkt8CetVr8 [Video]

Martin Luther and the 95 Theses – Facts and Summary (History Channel) http://www.history.com/topics/martin-luther-and-the-95-theses [text and video]

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Line of Fire (Dr. Michael Brown): An Interview with Eric Metaxas re: Martin Luther https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=ljj4meRLRc8 [Video/Audio] (Nov. 1, 2017)

Martin Luther's Doctrines (Reformation Theology) (2014)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=bY9lSNfOWZY [Video]

Luther and the Protestant Reformation: Crash Course World History #218 (2014) https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=1o8oIELbNxE [Video]

Theopedia: Martin Luther http://www.theopedia.com/martin-luther

Excerpt:

Martin Luther (Nov 10, 1483 - Feb 18, 1546) was a German theologian, an Augustinian monk, and an ecclesiastical reformer whose teachings inspired the Reformation and deeply influenced the doctrines and culture of the Lutheran and Protestant traditions. Luther's call to the Church to return to the teachings of the Bible led to the formation of new traditions within Christianity and to the Counter-Reformation, the Roman Catholic reaction to these movements.

Luther's contributions to Western civilization went beyond the life of the Christian Church. Luther's translations of the Bible helped to develop a standard version of the German language and added several principles to the art of translation. Luther's hymns inspired the development of congregational singing in Christianity. His marriage on June 13, 1525, to Katharina von Bora began a movement of clerical marriage within many Christian traditions.

http://www.beliefnet.com/faiths/christianity/galleries/5-interesting-facts-about-martin-luther.aspx?p=3

Martin Luther was born in November 10, 1483 in Germany to Hans and Margarette Luder. He was born,Martin Luder, but it is rumored he opted to change his name to something more academic sounding. His father was a successful miner and ore smelter and his upbringing was humble. Luther would later pursue lawschool but then forego that route to begin a spiritual journey he could have never planned for.

A Man Named Martin Luther - The Moment (2016)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=ANNwv-j_4_0 [Video]

A Man Named Martin: The Moment examines the errant teachings and wayward traditions of the Late Medieval Church that eventually sparked the Protestant Reformation, a theological overhaul set in motion most notably by Martin Luther's nailing of the 95 Theses to the church door at Wittenberg.

As a follow-up Bible study to 2015's A Man Named Martin-Part 1: The Man, this three-session Bible study takes a close look at the widespread teachings of the late Medieval Church that were superfluous to the Bible or not scripturally grounded. Among them were purgatory, penance, celibacy, prayers for the dead, transubstantiation, the treasury of merits of Christ, devotion to Mary and the rosary, the institution of the papacy, and the one most often linked to the Reformation: the sale of indulgences.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Joining forces in examining these aberrant teachings and the role Martin Luther had in debating and, ultimately, rejecting them is a cast of scholars, professional church workers, and pastors. Here Dr. Paul Maier, Dr. Ken Schurb, Dr. John Nunes, Dr. Joel Lampe, Dr. Susan Mobley, Dr. Joel Biermann, and others, along with The Lutheran Hour Speaker and host Dr. Gregory Seltz, add insight and expertise to this fascinating period in the life of Martin Luther.

A Man Named Martin Luther – The Movement (2017)

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=s7JUcjRJ-MU [Video]

Martin Luther - PBS Documentary (2014)

Part 1: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=dHFblXYiXo4

Part 2: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=zK3iRNWUths

Martin Luther OSA (German: [ˈmaɐ̯tiːn ˈlʊtɐ]) 10 November 1483 -- 18 February 1546) was a German monk, Catholic priest, professor of theology and seminal figure of the 16th-century movement in Christianity known later as the Protestant Reformation. He strongly disputed the claim that freedom from God's punishment for sin could be purchased with monetary values. He confronted indulgence salesman Johann Tetzel, a Dominican friar, with his Ninety-Five Theses in 1517. His refusal to retract all of his writings at the demand of Pope Leo X in 1520 and the Holy Roman Emperor Charles V at the Diet of Worms in 1521 resulted in his excommunication by the Pope and condemnation as an outlaw by the Emperor.

Luther taught that salvation and subsequently eternity in heaven is not earned by good deeds but is received only as a free gift of God's grace through faith in Jesus Christ as redeemer from sin and subsequently eternity in Hell.His theology challenged the authority of the Pope of the Roman Catholic Church by teaching that the Bible is the only source of divinely revealed knowledge from God] and opposed sacerdotalism by considering all baptized Christians to be a holy priesthood.[3] Those who identify with these, and all of Luther's wider teachings, are called Lutherans even though Luther insisted on Christian as the only acceptable name for individuals who professed Christ.

His translation of the Bible into the vernacular (instead of Latin) made it more accessible, which had a tremendous impact on the church and on German culture. It fostered the development of a standard version of the German language, added several principles to the art of translation, and influenced the writing of an English translation, the Tyndale Bible. His hymns influenced the development of singing in churches. His marriage to Katharina von Bora set a model for the practice of clerical marriage, allowing Protestant priests to marry.

In two of his later works, Luther expressed antagonistic views toward Jews, writing that Jewish synagogues and homes should be destroyed, their money confiscated, and liberty curtailed. These statements and their influence on antisemitism have contributed to his controversial status.

Martin Luther died in 1546, still convinced of his Reformation theology, and with his decree of excommunication by Pope Leo X still effective. On his deathbed, Luther was asked, 'Are you ready to die trusting in your Lord Jesus Christ and to confess the doctrine which you have taught in his name?'. He answered, 'Yes' before taking his final breath.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Martin Luther – Encyclopedia Britannica https://www.britannica.com/biography/Martin-Luther

Line of Fire (Dr. Michael Brown): Martin Luther and the Jews (Oct. 31, 2017) https://askdrbrown.org/library/martin-luther-and-jews [Link to Video]

Dr. Brown shares some shocking quotes from the writings of Martin Luther

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Preface to the Letter of St. Paul to the Romans (by Martin Luther) http://www.ccel.org/l/luther/romans/pref_romans.html

http://www.ccel.org/ccel/luther/prefacetoromans.html

http://messiahskingdom.com/resources/The-Gospel/luther-romans.pdf [PDF]

https://christianhistoryinstitute.org/study/module/luther-romans/

For Luther, Romans is the very heart of the gospel, so he wants to turn the brightest spotlight on it. As he starts by saying, “This letter is truly the most important piece in the New Testament.”

The main aim of the Preface is to explain all the theological language Paul uses in Romans such as “grace” and “faith.” “Otherwise” he says “there is no use in reading it.” In the extract below he explains law, and faith.

Catholic doctrine taught that God makes us righteous by giving us the strength to keep his laws. In response to this Luther is at pains to define law in a way that makes it impossible for us to keep.

This makes way for the importance of faith, the attitude of the heart that is acceptable to God. But Luther is also at pains to show that the attitude of the heart is then reflected in outward acts, so no one can say “If I'm saved by faith, I don’t need to do good works.”

Luther’s translation quickly became the German Bible. It was so well—read that it molded the German language — so you can imagine the influence that this preface has had. In it Luther unpacks for the common Christian the meaning of the essential Protestant belief: it is not the good we do that puts us right with God, it is the good we trust him to do in us. We are justified by faith, not works.

Luther and Lutheranism

https://www.elca.org/Faith/ELCA-Teaching/Luther-and-Lutheranism

Martin Luther – ReligionFacts

http://www.religionfacts.com/martin-luther

Excerpt:

The life of Martin Luther is one of the most fascinating stories in the history of Christianity. It has all the stuff of a good novel: parental conflict, spiritual agony, life-changing moments, near-misses, princes, popes, emperors, castles, kidnapping, mobs, revolution, massacres, politics, courage, controversy, disguises, daring escapes, humor and romance. And not only is it a good story, it marks a major turning point in western history and in Christianity.

Martin Luther is known as the man who ignited the Protestant Reformation. He was born in 1483 into a strict German Catholic family. His parents intended him for a law career, but he became a monk and a theology professor instead. A sensitive soul, he struggled mightily with a guilty conscience and an intense fear of God and hell until he realized the doctrine of "justification by faith" while studying the book of Romans…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Compare and contrast the attitudes of Martin Luther and John Calvin toward political authority and social order.

https://wbphillipskhs.pbworks.com/w/file/fetch/65554170/luther-v-calvin-handout.pdf [PDF]

Compare and contrast the attitudes of Martin Luther and John Calvin toward political authority and social order.

Similarities:

--In general

1) Both Calvin and Luther were Protestant reformers who wanted to curb the abuses of the Catholic Church and return to a more spiritual Christianity.

--Political Authority

1) Both denied the political (and religious) power of the pope.
2) Both sought regional ecclesiastical autonomy.

--Social Order

1) Both believed in the power of lay people to read and interpret the scriptures.
   a. Luther: equal in God's eyes (in the kingdom of God)
   b. Calvin: the elect

Differences:

--Political Authority

Luther:

1) Luther believed in the political and religious autonomy of the state (cuius regio, eius religio).
2) Luther did no want to alter the current political structure (he needed the support of the German princes)

Calvin:

1) Calvin believed that the church and state should be one. In Geneva, their was cooperation between magistrates and the clergy in matters of internal discipline (the Consistory consisted of both syndics, elders, and pastors)

--Social Order

Luther:

1) Luther was a social conservative and did not want to restructure society (Peasants' Revolt).
2) People were equal in the eyes of the Lord only.

Calvin:

1) Calvin wanted to restructure society according to his moral code.
2) Calvin was socially more egalitarian. The concept of the elect and the combination of church and state forced everyone to live by the same moral rules.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Martin Luther and the birth of the modern world (Exclusive Eric Metaxas book excerpt)

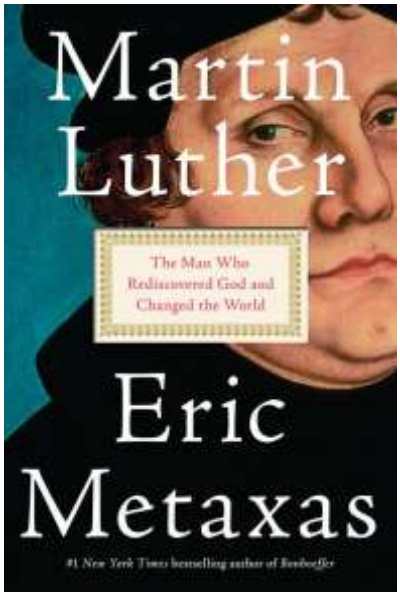
http://www.theblaze.com/news/2017/10/27/exclusive-eric-metaxas-book-excerpt-martin-luther-and-the-birth-of-the-modern-world/

Editor's note: On the 500th anniversary of The Ninety-Five Theses, Eric Metaxas, radio host and author of the bestselling book, "Martin Luther," looks at the historic influence of the humble monk who started the Protestant Reformation.

The following is excerpted from "Martin Luther: The Man Who Rediscovered God and Changed the World" by Eric Metaxas, published on October 3, 2017 by Viking, an imprint of Penguin Random House LLC. Copyright © Eric Metaxas, 2017.

A statue of Martin Luther, whose 95 theses of 1517 set in motion the Reformation, stands in the city center in Eisenach, Germany.

(Sean Gallup/Getty Images)



There isn't a historian the last five centuries who could argue against the idea that Luther's stand at the Diet of Worms—before the assembled powers of the empire, and against the theological and political and ecclesiastical order that had reigned for centuries, and therefore against the whole of the medieval world—was one of the most significant moments in history. It ranks with the 1066 Norman Conquest and the 1215 signing of the Magna Carta and the 1492 landing of Columbus in the New World. And in its way, it far outweighs all of those historic moments.

If ever there was a moment where it can be said the modern world was born, and where the future itself was born, surely it was in that room on April 18 at Worms. There can be no question that what happened that day unequivocally led to all manner of things in the future, among them the events 254 years and one day later, on April 19, 1775, when the troops at Lexington and Concord took a stand for liberty against tyranny. So much followed from that moment and so much has been made of it that it bears our taking a closer look at what exactly happened at Worms, and what did not.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Luther's Appeal to Conscience

Much of what has been written about that moment homes in on the word "conscience." Luther declared, "My conscience is captive to the Word of God." He continued, "To go against conscience is neither safe nor right." But so many historians have conflated our modern ideas about conscience with Luther's very different ideas about it that we have accepted a deeply mistaken idea about what Luther meant, and therefore about what his stand at Worms meant. Of course Luther never said the English word "conscience"; that word is a translation from his German and Latin. The words he used, usually translated as "conscience," cannot perfectly be translated as what we today mean by that word. The German word he used, Gewissen, really means "knowing." And the Latin word, conscientia, means "with knowing." But there is nothing about these words in Luther's day that even implies what we today mean by the word "conscience." The modern concept of conscience has come to mean something almost completely subjective, as though each of us has his own barometer and that barometer were sacrosanct, as though each person's truth were comparable to truth itself. Indeed, the subjective idea of each person's truth has fairly trumped the idea of an objective truth. It implies that each of us has his own truth, and that truth is one's conscience.

Many of the toughest critics of Luther rightly aver that the line between the one and the other concepts of truth and conscience was crossed when Luther took his stand at Worms. Once the interpretation of the Scriptures and the concept of truth was taken away from the church itself, it was given away to each individual, and real and objective truth itself was effectively abolished. Once the authority of the church was broken up and the opportunity to disagree with the church was possible, anyone might disagree with any authority, and a thousand churches might spring up, each with its own version of the truth. This is indeed precisely what happened.

But it is important to see that despite what both his critics and his defenders have often said, Luther was never coming near anything of the kind. His concept of the word "conscience" was not our modern view, in which conscience takes its cue from the autonomous self. On the contrary, his concept of truth did not vary one iota from the accepted Roman Catholic view. The only difference between his view and the church's view was in the idea that one's conscience must obey God himself. The Catholic church reserved the right to say that it and it alone spoke for God, whereas Luther, in pointing out that the pope had erred and church councils had erred, was saying that the church could not reserve the right to speak for God. Therefore, if the church—via pope and councils—was able to err and to sometimes not speak for God and God's truth, Luther asserted the idea that only the Scriptures could be that inerrant standard to which everyone—including the church—must repair. Thus, if the Scriptures plainly said something different from what councils and popes said, it must be the councils and the popes who were in error and were obliged to change their views. There was no other recourse. And Luther, in saying that he could not go against con- science, was simply saying that if his own understanding, his own knowledge, as guided by plain logic and clear arguments, showed him that Scripture said one thing and anyone else—even the church—said another, he had no choice but to go with what the Scriptures said. The Word of God trumped all else. So it was not Luther's conscience that trumped anything. It was the Word of God that trumped everything. One's conscience was only one's ability to understand these things, and because he understood the Word of God clearly, he had no choice but to follow it. Luther was one of few who during that time had studied the Word of God carefully, so he had opportunity to observe that it was inerrant in a way that the church councils and popes were not. He therefore concluded that only the Scriptures spoke for God. The church must therefore bow to that greater authority.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

But something else that arises out of this discussion about conscience has to do with the difference between power and truth. By demanding over and over that he be shown where he was mistaken—if he was indeed mistaken, as the church was saying—Luther appealed to the idea that anyone could understand what the Scripture said if one only dared to look at it. He knew that if he could force them all merely to look at it, to show him his error, they would see that in fact it was they who had been in error. There was no other way for him to convince them than to bother them to look for themselves. But because they were unwilling to do this, they were ignoring what the Scriptures said and were asserting the naked power of the church. Forcing people to believe did not comport with Luther's view of the God of the Scriptures. God was all powerful and omniscient, and he alone defined truth and indeed was truth. But he did not assert that power in a way that ever smacked of power in the worldly sense. He had always and ever shown himself in weakness. Jesus washed the feet of his disciples. Jesus died on the cross for those who had mocked and rejected him. God did not crush us but showed us mercy, and Luther could see that the church had not adopted this view, but had itself become wed to worldly power. It took money that was not its own and burned those who disagreed with what it taught. Luther was trying to call the church back to its true roots, to a biblical idea of a merciful God who did not demand that we obey but who first loved us and first made us righteous before he expected us to live righteously. This was the good news of the Gospel that the church had so horribly obscured. And it was what had freed Luther from the horrors of his previous life. This was truth itself, and the church's disturbing response to his attempts to get it to see these things only proved that God was not on its side in this. He would do all he could to get it to see this, including be willing to die for it, if it came to that. He feared that less than he feared God and denying God's truth.

Many historians have put Luther forward as the first to put "individual conscience" before the authority of the church and empire. But ironically, he was not at all asserting the freedom of the individual to do as he pleased. He was asserting the freedom of the individual to do as God pleased—if and when the church or the state attempted to abrogate that freedom. Luther was asserting the modern idea of freedom of religion and freedom of con- science for the first time in history. These things point not to man as a new free agent but to God himself. That it would be possible for someone to abuse these ideas to do what God did not want him to do was always the risk, so to the extent that Luther made that risk and error possible, he may be held responsible for that. But the alternative to opening things up to this risk is to accept the sheer authority of church or state, and that was far worse. So yes, to some extent, Luther's stand at Worms created new problems that we did not have before, but to a larger extent it gave us genuine liberty in a way that would lead to a new freer and deeper understanding of what God wanted. Just as Jesus had called upon the Pharisees to stop their outward obedience to God and go far deeper, to inward obedience, so Luther called upon every Christian to cease the petty obedience to church that was nothing when compared to the freedom and joy of actually obeying God.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Eric Metaxas' latest book about Martin Luther turns some centuries-long legends upside down

http://www.theblaze.com/news/2017/10/30/eric-metaxas-latest-book-about-martin-luther-turns-some-centuries-long-legends-upside-down/

A statue of 16th-century theologian Martin Luther stands on Marktplatz square in Wittenberg, Germany. On Oct. 31, 1517, Luther nailed his 95 Theses to a door of the nearby Schlosskirche Church. (Sean Gallup/Getty Images)

Martin Luther's 95 Theses have been considered for centuries as the young German monk's most thunderous act of defiance toward the Roman Catholic Church, but author Eric Metaxas shakes up some of the old legends with new discoveries about Luther in his latest book, "Martin Luther, The Man who Rediscovered God and Changed the World."

"Luther was the most influential person in 2,000 years aside from Jesus," said Metaxas, who lives in New York City.

Five hundred years ago, Martin Luther's 95 Theses, which were pinned Oct. 31, 1517, to the wall of Castle Church in Wittenberg, Germany, sparked the beginning of the Protestant Reformation. In 1517, Luther spoke out against various practices of the church, including the purchase of indulgences that replaced confession and allowed people to buy their forgiveness of sin. It was Luther's love of the church that inspired him to speak out against its leaders, according to Metaxas.

The 95 Theses questioned religious authority and common practices. Luther argued that Scripture is the source of religious authority rather than the leaders of the Catholic Church.

In 1518, Luther was summoned before an imperial diet and ordered to defend his teachings to Cardinal Thomas Cajetan. However, Cajetan defended the church's authority and use of indulgences. One year after the 95 Theses were presented to the church, the first papal commission found Luther's teachings to be scandalous and offensive. Eventually, Pope Leo X excommunicated Luther from the Catholic Church. This forever divided the Catholic Church and is believed to be the beginning of Reformation.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

During a recent phone interview with TheBlaze, Metaxass added that many beliefs surrounding Luther are distorted.

What new information did Metaxas discover about Martin Luther?

• Luther was trying to help, not divide, the church by questioning some of its practices.
• He was a "loving and obedient son of the church."
• Luther was funny and "such a wild man" that readers will find themselves "laughing out loud."
• The 95 Theses were almost certainly not pinned by Luther to the church wall on Oct. 31, 1517. It's likely that someone else was sent to do it for him. Also, at that time, placing messages on the wall of the church is how people shared information with each other.
• Luther was believed to have been poor, but he was not. His father was a wealthy and successful businessman in mining. Luther attended the finest schools.

Why did Metaxas write this book?

Two of Metaxas' friends came up with the idea for the book and told him he was "the one" who should write it. At first, he resisted the idea, but they kept talking about it.

After doing some research, Metaxas realized Luther was a wildly funny man and it inspired him to write the book.

The history of Luther is something "everyone in America should understand," according to Mataxas.

"There's a direct line from Luther and the gospels to what we today call freedom of religion and American-style government," Metaxas said, adding that he hopes mainstream readers as well as "not serious Christians" will be attracted to reading the book that was released earlier this month.

Unlike the character in his New York Times best-selling book, "Bonhoeffer: Pastor, Martyr Prophet, Spy" Metaxas told TheBlaze he had a lot of fun bringing this entertaining character to life.

Anything else to add?

"The main thing to understand is the Reformation didn't have to happen this way," Metaxas explained. "The Vatican handled it [Luther's 95 Theses] dramatically."

More information about the 95 Theses…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Martin Luther's 95 Theses

Text in English (versions):

http://www.luther.de/en/95thesen.html

http://www.iclnet.org/pub/resources/text/wittenberg/luther/web/ninetyfive.html

http://www.theopedia.com/95-theses

https://carm.org/luthers-95-theses

Summary of 95 Thesis by Martin Luther http://www.educationalwriting.net/resource_center/Thesis/Topics/Summary_of_95_Thesis_Topic.htm

Disputation of Doctor Martin Luther on the Power and Efficacy of Indulgences

About Martin Luther:

Martin Luther was born on November 10, 1483 and was the son of Hans and Margarethe Luther. He was married to Katharina von Bora, and had six kids namely Hans, Elizabeth, Magdalena, Martin, Paul, Margarethe.

He was a German monk, theologian, university professor, Father of Protestantism, and church reformer whose ideas influenced the Protestant Reformation and changed the course of Western civilization. He died on February 18, 1546.

What Is The Definition For 95 Thesis?

The Ninety-Five Thesis on the Power of Indulgences were written by Martin Luther in 1517 and are widely regarded as the primary means for the Protestant Reformation. Dr Martin Luther used these Thesis to display his unhappiness with the Church's sale of indulgences, and this eventually gave birth to Protestantism. It especially defied the teachings of the Church on the nature of penance, the authority and power of the pope and the efficacy of indulgences. They sparked a theological dispute that would result in the Reformation and the birth of the Lutheran, Reformed, and Anabaptist traditions within Christianity.

Martin Luther did not intend the Thesis to be a program for reform, an attack on the Pope, etc. He was simply questioning the indulgences.

Purpose of 95 Thesis

The purpose of the 95 Thesis was to invite local scholars to a disputation on indulgences. He addressed a lot of hierarchy issues within the church.

The following point summary shows the purpose of Martin Luther's 95 Thesis:

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

- Mainly the focus was no longer God but was men, some of which shouldn't have been in the positions they were in.
- The other main focus was that people were thinking they didn't have a direct link with God but that there were middle men whom they had to approach to reach God.
- The Popes at church were not paying enough attention to those outside who were suffering and poor.

Analysis Of Martin Luther 95 Thesis

History records Martin Luther as a savior of Christianity. He was concerned with the well-being of the Catholic Church and its policy of granting forgiveness through indulgence rather than penance. Luther's actions were neither cinematic nor groundbreaking. The message of 95 Thesis gave the summary and expressed the feelings of many of his peers already had about the corruption of Christ's teachings. Luther illustrated the spiritual, material, and psychological truths behind abuses in the practice of buying and selling indulgences. He was not out to pick a fight or to have his own way; his purpose was to uphold the Reformation Of 95 Thesis

Martin Luther (1483-1546) stands in history as one of those unique forces, an individual who by force of will and by his ideas changed the world fundamentally. It brought the following reformations.

1. It promoted the protestant reformation.
2. It brought many changes in religion, and way of life.
3. New religions were formed.

Summary Of Martin Luther 95 Thesis

In the revolutionary Martin Luther 95 Thesis, he raised many points. We can make the following summary of his Thesis.

1. Establishes what true repentance is.
2. Establishes the limits of the Pope’s power and will, i.e., as vicar of Christ
3. Canons of Church apply only to the living, cannot extend into purgatory
4. Indulgences must not go beyond the right and just powers of the Pope, which is to declare what God has done, so that they deceive the people
5. The powers of clergy lie in intercession, which is ultimately dependent upon the will of God
6. The certainty of contrition or salvation lies outside of men themselves and with God alone
7. No man is better than another; all benefits of Christ are granted by God alone
8. The indulgent nature of indulgences most often renders them contrary to true repentance; i.e. dulls the conscience
9. Only a very few can rightly distinguish between indulgence(s) and true contrition
10. Service and mercy are above indulgences; works of love improve a man but indulgences promote manipulative behavior
11. A person’s money is better spent than on many indulgences
12. St. Peter’s, or money spent on the Church, is worth less than prayers for the Pope himself or the very flesh and bone of the people
13. Indulgences should not have too great an importance attached to them, especially compared to the Word and the Gospel.
14. Indulgences should not be a matter reserved merely for the clergy, but the people ought to be privy to the accounts as well.
15. The first shall be last, and the last, first
16. The gospel fishes for men, but indulgences fish for wealth

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

17. Indulgences have their rightful place; i.e., there is apostolic precedent to preaching pardon in Christ
18. To assert that the Pope has power to remit sin is to blaspheme the Pope himself
19. The Pope's graces come from God via spiritual gifting
20. If grace is free to all, then it ought not be limited to those who purchase indulgences
21. Let's not make money off of prayers for the dead – they're past the point of intercession
22. Why doesn't the Pope use his own wealth, which is substantial, to build St. Peter's?
23. Remittance of sin by the Pope is redundant
24. These questions are serious and deserve the attention of and reply from the Pope.

1. Martin Luther's Disputatio pro declaratione virtutis indulgentiarum of 1517, commonly known as the Ninety-Five Theses, is considered the central document of the Protestant Reformation.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

1517 Nuremberg printing of the Ninety-five Theses as a placard

Source: https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Ninety-five_Theses

Amore et studio elucidande veritatis: hec subscripta disputabūtur Wittenberge. Presidente R. Pd. Martino Luther: Artiū et S. Theologie Magistro: cuiusdemq; ibidem lectore Ordinario. Quare petit: vt qui nostri possunt verbis presentes nobiscū disceptare: agant id literis absentes. Jn noie dñi nostri Jhesu xpi. Amē.

1 ¶ Dominus et magister nr Jesus xpus dicendo. Penitentiā agite. xc. omnē vitam fidelium penitentiam esse voluit.

2 ¶ Qd verbū de penitētia sacramentali (id est confessionis et satisfactionis que sacerdotum ministerio celebratur) non pōt intelligi.

3 ¶ Non tñ solam intendit interioritē: immo interior nulla est. nisi foris operetur varias carnis mortificationes.

4 ¶ Manet itaq; pena donec manet odium sui (id est penitentia vera intus) scz vsq; ad introitum regni celoꝝ.

5 ¶ Papa nō vult nec pōt vllas penas remittere. ꝑter eas: quas arbitrio vel suo vel canonum imposuit.

6 ¶ Papa nō pōt remittere vllā culpā nisi declarando et approbando remissam a deo. Aut certe remittendo casus reseruatos sibi: quibꝰ ꝓtēptis culpa prioꝛ remaneret.

7 ¶ Nulli prioꝛum remittit deus culpā: quin simul eū subijciat: humiliatū in omnibus: sacerdoti suo vicario.

8 ¶ Canones penitētiales solū viuētibus sunt impositi. nihilq; morituris fm eosd em debet imponi.

9 ¶ Inde bñ nobis facit spūs scūs in papa. excipiendo in suis decretis sp articulū mortis et necessitatis.

10 ¶ Indocte et male faciūt sacerdotes ii: qui morituris pēnas canonicas in purgatoriū reseruant.

11 ¶ Zizania illa de muranda pena Canonica in penam purgatorij. vident certe dormientibus episcopis seminata.

12 ¶ Olim pene canonice nō post: sed ante absolutionem imponebantur: tanq; tentamenta vere contritionis.

13 ¶ Morituri: p morte omnia soluunt. et legibus canonū moꝛtui iam sunt habentes iure earum relaxationem.

14 ¶ Jmꝑfecta sanitas seu charitas morituri: necessario secum fert magnū timoꝛem: tantoq; maioꝛem: quāto minoꝛ fuerit ipsa.

15 ¶ Hic timoꝛ et horroꝛ satis est. se solo (vt alia taceā) facere penā purgatorij: cum sit primus desperationis horroꝛ.

16 ¶ Vident infernus: purgatoriū: celum differe: sicut desperatio: ꝓpe desperatio. securitas differunt.

17 ¶ Necessariū videt animabꝰ in purgatorio: sicut minui horoꝛē. ita augeri charitatem.

18 ¶ Nec ꝓbatum videt vllis: aut rōnibus aut scripturis. q; sint extra statum meriti seu agende charitatis.

19 ¶ Nec hoc ꝓbatū esse videt: q; sint de sua beatitudine certe et secure: saltē oēs. licz nos certissimi simus.

20 ¶ Igitur papa p remissionē plenariā oīm penaꝝ. nō simpliciter oīm. intelligit: sed a seipso tantūmodo impositaꝝ.

21 ¶ Erant itaq; indulgētiarū ꝑdicatoꝛes. ii: qui dicūt per pape indulgētias: hoīem ab oīi pena solui et saluari.

22 ¶ Cum nulla remittit animabus in purgatorio: quā in hac vita debuissent fm Canones soluere.

23 ¶ Si remissio vlla oīm oino penaꝝ: pōt alicui dari. certū est eā nō nisi perfectissimis. i. paucissimis dari.

24 ¶ Falli ob id necesse est: maioꝛē partē popli: per indifferentē illā et magnificam pene solute ꝓmissionem.

25 ¶ Qualē ꝓtātem hꝫ papa in purgatorio: nō ꝓtāt quilibet Epi scopus et Curatus in iua diocesi et parochia specialiter.

1 ¶ Optime facit papa: q; nō ꝓtāt clauis (quā nulla hꝫ) sed per modū suffragij dat animabus remissionem.

2 ¶ Doctrinā predicāt. qui statim vt tinctus nummus in cistam tinnierit: euolare dicunt animā.

3 ¶ Certū est. numo in cistā tinniente: augeri questū et auaricia posse. suffragium aūt ecclie: in arbitrio dei solꝰ est.

4 ¶ Quis scit. si oēs. ale m purgatorio velint redimi. sicut de. s. Seuerino et paschali factū narratur.

5 ¶ Nullus est securus de veritate sue cōtritionis. multominus de cōsecutione plenarie remissionis.

6 ¶ Qꝝ rarꝰ est de penitēte vtā rarꝰ est de indulgētias redimēs. i. rarissimꝰ

7 ¶ Dānabunt ineternū cū suis magistris: qui p lras veniaꝝ securos sese credunt de sua salute.

8 ¶ Cauendi sunt nimis: qui dicūt venias illas ꝑape: donū esse illud dei inestimabile: quo reconciliat homo deo.

9 ¶ Siatte est ille veniales: tantū respiciunt penas satisfactionis sacramentalis ab homie constitutas.

10 ¶ Non christiana predicant: qui docent. q; redemptionis aniaꝝ vel cōfessionalium sit necessaria contritio.

11 ¶ Quilibet christianus vere cōpunctus: hꝫ remissionē plenariā: a pena et culpa. etiam sine lris veniaꝝ sibi dedītā.

12 ¶ Quilibet verus christianus: siue viuus siue mortuꝰ: hꝫ participationē oīm bonoꝝ Xpi et Ecclesie. etiā sine lris veniaꝝ a deo sibi datam.

13 ¶ Remissio tñ et participatio ꝑape: nullo mō est ꝓtemnēda. q; (vt dixi) est declaratio remissionis diuine.

14 ¶ Difficilimū est: etiā doctissimis Theologis simul extollere veniaꝝ largitatem: et contritionis veritatē coram populo.

15 ¶ Contritionis veritas penas querit et amat. Veniaꝝ aūt largitas relaxat: et odisse facit saltem occasione.

16 ¶ Caute sunt venie apūce ꝑdicande. ne populus false intelligat. eas ꝑferri ceteris bonis operibus charitatis.

17 ¶ Docendi sunt christiani. q; Pape mens nō est: redemptionē veniaꝝ vlla ex parte cōparandā esse operibus misericordie.

18 ¶ Docendi sunt christiani. q; dans pauꝑi: aut mutuans egenti: melꝰ facit: ꝙ si veniaꝫ redimeret.

19 ¶ Quia p opus charitatis crescit charitas: ꝛ fit hō melioꝛ. sed p veniaꝫ nō fit melioꝛ: sed tñmodo a pena liberioꝛ.

20 ¶ Docendi sunt christiani. q; qui videt egenū: et neglecto eo. dat p veniijs nō indulgētias Pape: sed indignationē dei sibi vendicat.

21 ¶ Docendi sunt christiani: q; nisi superfluis abundent: necessaria tenent domui sue retinere: et nequaq; ꝓpter venias effundere.

22 ¶ Docē d sunt christiani. q; redemptio veniarū est libera: nō ꝓcepta.

23 ¶ Docēdi sunt christiani. q; Papa sicut magis eget: ita magis optat in veniijs dandis. p se deuotam oꝛationem: ꝙ ꝑmptam pecuniam.

24 ¶ Docendi sunt christiani. q; venie Pape sunt vtiles: si non in eas confidant. Sed nocentissime: si timoꝛem dei per eas amittant.

25 ¶ Docendi sunt christiani. q; si Papa nosset exactiones venialiū ꝑdicatorum mallet Basilicā. s. Petri in cinereo ire: ꝙ edificari. cute carne et ossibus ouium suaꝝ.

1 ¶ Docendi sunt christiani. q; Papa sicut debet ita vellet. etiam vendita (si opus sit) Basilica. s. Petri: de suis pecuniis dare illis: a quoꝝ plurimis questā cōcionatoꝛes veniaꝝ pecuniam eliciunt.

2 ¶ Vana est fiducia salutis p lras veniaꝝ. etiā si Cōmissarius: immo Papa ipse suā aiam ꝓ illis impignoraret.

3 ¶ Hostes christi et Pape sunt ii: qui ꝓter veniaꝫ ꝑdicandas verbū dei in aliis ecclesijs penitus silere iubent.

4 ¶ Jniuria fit verbo dei: dū in eodē sermone: equale vel longius tēpus impenditur veniijs ꝙ illi.

5 ¶ Mens Pape necessario est. q; si venie (qđ minimum est) vna cāpana: vnus pompus: et ceremonijs celebrant. Euangelium (qđ maximū est) centū campanis: centū pompis: centū ceremonijs predicet.

6 ¶ Thesauri ecclie vñ Papa dat indulgētias: neq; satis notati sunt: neq; cogniti apud ꝓplm christi.

7 ¶ Temporales certe nō esse patet. q; nō tā facile eos ꝓfundūt: hꝫ tñmō colligunt multi concionatoꝛes.

8 ¶ Nec sunt merita Xpi et scoꝝ. qi hec sp sine Papa operāt gram hoīs interioris: et crucē mortē: infernumq; exterioris.

9 ¶ Thesauros ecclie. s. Laurētī dixit esse: pauperes ecclie. hꝫ locutus est vsu vocabuli suo tpe.

10 ¶ Sine temeritate dicim⁹ clauem ecclie (merito Xpi donatam) esse thesaurum istum.

11 ¶ Clar est effe. q; ad remissionē penaꝝ et casuū sola sufficit prās Pape.

12 ¶ Verus thesaurus ecclie. est sacrosctm euāgelium glorie et gratie dei.

13 ¶ Hic aute est merito odiosissimus. qi ex primis facit nouissimos.

14 ¶ Thesaurus aūt indulgentiaꝝ merito est gratissimus. qi ex nouissimis facit primos

15 ¶ Jgitur thesauri Euangelici rhetia sunt: quibus olim piscabant viros diuitiarum.

16 ¶ Thesauri indulgentiaꝝ rhetia sunt: ꝙbus nūc piscant diuitias virorum.

17 ¶ Indulgētie: quas cōcionatoꝛes vociferant maxias gras. intelliguntur vere tales quoad questum ꝓmouendum.

18 ¶ Sunt tamen re vera minime ad gram dei et crucis pietatē compare.

19 ¶ Tenent Epi et Curati veniaꝝ applicarii Cōmissarios cū oīi reuerentia admittere.

20 ¶ Sed magis tenent oibus oculis intendere: oibus auribꝰ aduertere: ne ꝓ cōmissione Pape sua illi somnia ꝑdicent.

21 ¶ Cōtra veniaꝝ applicaꝝ ꝓbitatē q; loquit. sit ille anathema et maledictꝰ.

22 ¶ Qui vero contra libidinē ac licentiā verboꝝ Cōcionatoꝛis veniarū curam agit: sit ille benedictus.

23 ¶ Sicut papa iuste fulminat eos: qui in fraudem negocij veniarū quacunq; arte machinantur.

24 ¶ Multo magis fulminare intendit eos: qui p veniarū pietextū in fraudem fidē charitatis et veritatis machinant.

25 ¶ Opinari venias papales tātas esse: vt soluere possint hoīem. etiā si qs p impossibile dei genitricē violasset. Est insanire.

1 ¶ Dicimus contra. q; venie papales: nec minimū venialium pctoꝝ tollere possint quo ad culpam.

2 ¶ Qꝝ dñ. nec s. s. Petrus modo papa esset: maioꝛes gras donare possit est blasphemia in scām Petrum et Papam.

3 ¶ Dicimus contra. q; etiā iste et quilibet papa maioꝛes hꝫ. scz Euangelium: virtutes: gras curationū. xc. vt. 1. Co. xij.

4 ¶ Dicere. Crucē armis papalibus insigniter erectā: cruci christi equipare: blasphemia est.

5 ¶ Rationē reddent Epi: Curati: et Theologi. qui tales sermōes in populum licere sinunt.

6 ¶ Facit hec licētiosa veniaꝝ ꝑdicatio. vt nec reuerentiā Pape facile sit: etiā doctis vir⁹ redimere a calūnijs aut certe arguti: qstiobꝰ laicoꝝ.

7 ¶ Dcs. Cur Papa nō euacuat purgatoriū ꝓter sctissimā charitatem et summā aiarū necessitatē: vt cām oīm iustissimā. Si infinitas aias redimit ꝓpt pecuniā funestissimā ad structurā Basilice: vt cāz leuissimā

8 ¶ Jrē. Cur ꝓmanēt exequie et annuersaria defunctoꝝ: et nō reddit aut recipi ꝑmittit bñficia ꝑ illis instituta. cū tā sit iniuria ꝓ redēpt⁹ orare

9 ¶ Jrē. Que illa noua pietas Dei et Pape. q; impio et inimico ꝓter pecuniā ꝑmittit bñficia ꝑ illis instituta. cū tā sit iniuria ꝓ redēpt⁹ orare

10 ¶ Jrē. Cur Canones pūiales re ipa et nō vsu: tā diu in semet abrogati et mortui: adhuc tñ pecuniꝫ redimunt ꝑ ꝑcessionē indulgētiaꝝ tanq; viuacissimi.

11 ¶ Jrē. Cur Papa cuꝰ opes hodie sunt opulentissimis crassio crassiores: nō de suis pecuniis magis ꝙ paupm fidelium struit vnā tñmō Basilicā sancti Petri.

12 ¶ Jtem. Quid remittit aut participat papa iis: qui p pntionē ꝑfectaꝫ ius habēt plenarie remissionis et partiepationis.

13 ¶ Jtem. Quid adderet eccle boni maioꝛis. Si Papa sicut semel facit: ita cēties in die cuilibꝫ fidelū has remissiōes et participationes tribuēt.

14 ¶ Ex quo papa salutē querit aliaꝝ. p veniaꝫ magis ꝙ ꝓpitiationes tribuēt. Cur suspendit lras et venias iam olim ꝑcessas: cū sint eque efficaces.

15 ¶ Nec scrupulositas laicoꝝ argumētatiōla ꝓtēt. ꝑ esse: nec reddita ratione diluere. Est ecclesiam et Papā hostibꝰ ridendo exponere et infelices christianos facere.

16 ¶ Si ergo venie fm spiritū et mentē Pape ꝑdicarētur. facile illa oīa soluerent: immo nō essent.

17 ¶ Valeāt itaq; oēs illi. ꝓphe: q dicūt ppho Xpi. Pax pax. et nō est pax.

18 ¶ Wē agāt oēs illi. ꝓphe: q dicūt ppho Xpi. Crux crux. et non est crux.

19 ¶ Exhortandi sunt Christiani: vt caput fui xpm per penas: mortes: infernosq; sequi studeant.

20 ¶ Ac si magis p multas tribulatiōes intrare celū: ꝙ p securitatē pacis confidant.

W. D. xvij.

1517

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Here is an English translation (example version) of the text that was originally written in Latin:

The 95 Theses

Disputation of Doctor Martin Luther on the power and efficacy of Indulgences

---

Out of love for the truth and from desire to elucidate it, the Reverend Father Martin Luther, Master of Arts and Sacred Theology, and ordinary lecturer therein at Wittenberg, intends to defend the following statements and to dispute on them in that place. Therefore he asks that those who cannot be present and dispute with him orally shall do so in their absence by letter. In the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, Amen.

---

2. When our Lord and Master Jesus Christ said, ``Repent'' (Mt 4:17), he willed [called for] the entire life of believers to be one of repentance.
3. This word cannot be understood as referring to the sacrament of penance, that is, confession and satisfaction, as administered by the clergy.
4. Yet it does not mean solely inner repentance; such inner repentance is worthless unless it produces various outward mortification of the flesh.
5. The penalty of sin remains as long as the hatred of self (that is, true inner repentance), namely till our entrance into the kingdom of heaven.
6. The pope neither desires nor is able to remit any penalties except those imposed by his own authority or that of the canons.
7. The pope cannot remit any guilt, except by declaring and showing that it has been remitted by God; or, to be sure, by remitting guilt in cases reserved to his judgment. If his right to grant remission in these cases were disregarded, the guilt would certainly remain unforgiven.
8. God remits guilt to no one unless at the same time he humbles him in all things and makes him submissive to the vicar, the priest.
9. The penitential canons are imposed only on the living, and, according to the canons themselves, nothing should be imposed on the dying.
10. Therefore the Holy Spirit through the pope is kind to us insofar as the pope in his decrees always makes exception of the article of death and of necessity.
11. Those priests act ignorantly and wickedly who, in the case of the dying, reserve canonical penalties for purgatory.
12. Those tares of changing the canonical penalty to the penalty of purgatory were evidently sown while the bishops slept (Mt 13:25).
13. In former times canonical penalties were imposed, not after, but before absolution, as tests of true contrition.
14. The dying are freed by death from all penalties, are already dead as far as the canon laws are concerned, and have a right to be released from them.
15. Imperfect piety or love on the part of the dying person necessarily brings with it great fear; and the smaller the love, the greater the fear.
16. This fear or horror is sufficient in itself, to say nothing of other things, to constitute the penalty of purgatory, since it is very near to the horror of despair.
17. Hell, purgatory, and heaven seem to differ the same as despair, fear, and assurance of salvation.
18. It seems as though for the souls in purgatory fear should necessarily decrease and love increase.
19. Furthermore, it does not seem proved, either by reason or by Scripture, that souls in purgatory are outside the state of merit, that is, unable to grow in love.
20. Nor does it seem proved that souls in purgatory, at least not all of them, are certain and assured of their own salvation, even if we ourselves may be entirely certain of it.
21. Therefore the pope, when he uses the words ``plenary remission of all penalties,'' does not actually mean ``all penalties,'' but only those imposed by himself.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

22. Thus those indulgence preachers are in error who say that a man is absolved from every penalty and saved by papal indulgences.
23. As a matter of fact, the pope remits to souls in purgatory no penalty which, according to canon law, they should have paid in this life.
24. If remission of all penalties whatsoever could be granted to anyone at all, certainly it would be granted only to the most perfect, that is, to very few.
25. For this reason most people are necessarily deceived by that indiscriminate and high-sounding promise of release from penalty.
26. That power which the pope has in general over purgatory corresponds to the power which any bishop or curate has in a particular way in his own diocese and parish.
27. The pope does very well when he grants remission to souls in purgatory, not by the power of the keys, which he does not have, but by way of intercession for them.
28. They preach only human doctrines who say that as soon as the money clinks into the money chest, the soul flies out of purgatory.
29. It is certain that when money clinks in the money chest, greed and avarice can be increased; but when the church intercedes, the result is in the hands of God alone.
30. Who knows whether all souls in purgatory wish to be redeemed, since we have exceptions in St. Severinus and St. Paschal, as related in a legend.
31. No one is sure of the integrity of his own contrition, much less of having received plenary remission.
32. The man who actually buys indulgences is as rare as he who is really penitent; indeed, he is exceedingly rare.
33. Those who believe that they can be certain of their salvation because they have indulgence letters will be eternally damned, together with their teachers.
34. Men must especially be on guard against those who say that the pope's pardons are that inestimable gift of God by which man is reconciled to him.
35. For the graces of indulgences are concerned only with the penalties of sacramental satisfaction established by man.
36. They who teach that contrition is not necessary on the part of those who intend to buy souls out of purgatory or to buy confessional privileges preach unchristian doctrine.
37. Any truly repentant Christian has a right to full remission of penalty and guilt, even without indulgence letters.
38. Any true Christian, whether living or dead, participates in all the blessings of Christ and the church; and this is granted him by God, even without indulgence letters.
39. Nevertheless, papal remission and blessing are by no means to be disregarded, for they are, as I have said (Thesis 6), the proclamation of the divine remission.
40. It is very difficult, even for the most learned theologians, at one and the same time to commend to the people the bounty of indulgences and the need of true contrition.
41. A Christian who is truly contrite seeks and loves to pay penalties for his sins; the bounty of indulgences, however, relaxes penalties and causes men to hate them -- at least it furnishes occasion for hating them.
42. Papal indulgences must be preached with caution, lest people erroneously think that they are preferable to other good works of love.
43. Christians are to be taught that the pope does not intend that the buying of indulgences should in any way be compared with works of mercy.
44. Christians are to be taught that he who gives to the poor or lends to the needy does a better deed than he who buys indulgences.
45. Because love grows by works of love, man thereby becomes better. Man does not, however, become better by means of indulgences but is merely freed from penalties.
46. Christians are to be taught that he who sees a needy man and passes him by, yet gives his money for indulgences, does not buy papal indulgences but God's wrath.
47. Christians are to be taught that, unless they have more than they need, they must reserve enough for their family needs and by no means squander it on indulgences.
48. Christians are to be taught that they buying of indulgences is a matter of free choice, not commanded.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

49. Christians are to be taught that the pope, in granting indulgences, needs and thus desires their devout prayer more than their money.
50. Christians are to be taught that papal indulgences are useful only if they do not put their trust in them, but very harmful if they lose their fear of God because of them.
51. Christians are to be taught that if the pope knew the exactions of the indulgence preachers, he would rather that the basilica of St. Peter were burned to ashes than built up with the skin, flesh, and bones of his sheep.
52. Christians are to be taught that the pope would and should wish to give of his own money, even though he had to sell the basilica of St. Peter, to many of those from whom certain hawkers of indulgences cajole money.
53. It is vain to trust in salvation by indulgence letters, even though the indulgence commissary, or even the pope, were to offer his soul as security.
54. They are the enemies of Christ and the pope who forbid altogether the preaching of the Word of God in some churches in order that indulgences may be preached in others.
55. Injury is done to the Word of God when, in the same sermon, an equal or larger amount of time is devoted to indulgences than to the Word.
56. It is certainly the pope's sentiment that if indulgences, which are a very insignificant thing, are celebrated with one bell, one procession, and one ceremony, then the gospel, which is the very greatest thing, should be preached with a hundred bells, a hundred processions, a hundred ceremonies.
57. The true treasures of the church, out of which the pope distributes indulgences, are not sufficiently discussed or known among the people of Christ.
58. That indulgences are not temporal treasures is certainly clear, for many indulgence sellers do not distribute them freely but only gather them.
59. Nor are they the merits of Christ and the saints, for, even without the pope, the latter always work grace for the inner man, and the cross, death, and hell for the outer man.
60. St. Lawrence said that the poor of the church were the treasures of the church, but he spoke according to the usage of the word in his own time.
61. Without want of consideration we say that the keys of the church, given by the merits of Christ, are that treasure.
62. For it is clear that the pope's power is of itself sufficient for the remission of penalties and cases reserved by himself.
63. The true treasure of the church is the most holy gospel of the glory and grace of God.
64. But this treasure is naturally most odious, for it makes the first to be last (Mt. 20:16).
65. On the other hand, the treasure of indulgences is naturally most acceptable, for it makes the last to be first.
66. Therefore the treasures of the gospel are nets with which one formerly fished for men of wealth.
67. The treasures of indulgences are nets with which one now fishes for the wealth of men.
68. The indulgences which the demagogues acclaim as the greatest graces are actually understood to be such only insofar as they promote gain.
69. They are nevertheless in truth the most insignificant graces when compared with the grace of God and the piety of the cross.
70. Bishops and curates are bound to admit the commissaries of papal indulgences with all reverence.
71. But they are much more bound to strain their eyes and ears lest these men preach their own dreams instead of what the pope has commissioned.
72. Let him who speaks against the truth concerning papal indulgences be anathema and accursed.
73. But let him who guards against the lust and license of the indulgence preachers be blessed.
74. Just as the pope justly thunders against those who by any means whatever contrive harm to the sale of indulgences.
75. Much more does he intend to thunder against those who use indulgences as a pretext to contrive harm to holy love and truth.
76. To consider papal indulgences so great that they could absolve a man even if he had done the impossible and had violated the mother of God is madness.
77. We say on the contrary that papal indulgences cannot remove the very least of venial sins as far as guilt is concerned.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

78. To say that even St. Peter if he were now pope, could not grant greater graces is blasphemy against St. Peter and the pope.
79. We say on the contrary that even the present pope, or any pope whatsoever, has greater graces at his disposal, that is, the gospel, spiritual powers, gifts of healing, etc., as it is written. (1 Co 12[:28])
80. To say that the cross emblazoned with the papal coat of arms, and set up by the indulgence preachers is equal in worth to the cross of Christ is blasphemy.
81. The bishops, curates, and theologians who permit such talk to be spread among the people will have to answer for this.
82. This unbridled preaching of indulgences makes it difficult even for learned men to rescue the reverence which is due the pope from slander or from the shrewd questions of the laity.
83. Such as: ``Why does not the pope empty purgatory for the sake of holy love and the dire need of the souls that are there if he redeems an infinite number of souls for the sake of miserable money with which to build a church?'' The former reason would be most just; the latter is most trivial.
84. Again, ``Why are funeral and anniversary masses for the dead continued and why does he not return or permit the withdrawal of the endowments founded for them, since it is wrong to pray for the redeemed?''
85. Again, ``What is this new piety of God and the pope that for a consideration of money they permit a man who is impious and their enemy to buy out of purgatory the pious soul of a friend of God and do not rather, beca use of the need of that pious and beloved soul, free it for pure love's sake?''
86. Again, ``Why are the penitential canons, long since abrogated and dead in actual fact and through disuse, now satisfied by the granting of indulgences as though they were still alive and in force?''
87. Again, ``Why does not the pope, whose wealth is today greater than the wealth of the richest Crassus, build this one basilica of St. Peter with his own money rather than with the money of poor believers?''
88. Again, ``What does the pope remit or grant to those who by perfect contrition already have a right to full remission and blessings?''
89. Again, ``What greater blessing could come to the church than if the pope were to bestow these remissions and blessings on every believer a hundred times a day, as he now does but once?''
90. ``Since the pope seeks the salvation of souls rather than money by his indulgences, why does he suspend the indulgences and pardons previously granted when they have equal efficacy?''
91. To repress these very sharp arguments of the laity by force alone, and not to resolve them by giving reasons, is to expose the church and the pope to the ridicule of their enemies and to make Christians unhappy.
92. If, therefore, indulgences were preached according to the spirit and intention of the pope, all these doubts would be readily resolved. Indeed, they would not exist.
93. Away, then, with all those prophets who say to the people of Christ, ``Peace, peace,'' and there is no peace! (Jer 6:14)
94. Blessed be all those prophets who say to the people of Christ, ``Cross, cross,'' and there is no cross!
95. Christians should be exhorted to be diligent in following Christ, their Head, through penalties, death and hell.
96. And thus be confident of entering into heaven through many tribulations rather than through the false security of peace (Acts 14:22).

See also: Reformation, Reformation Timeline

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

High Church vs Low Church

The Difference Between "Low Church" and "High Church"

http://www.crivoice.org/lowhighchurch.html

Excerpt:

"Low Church" is a neutral term that simply describes a type of worship that does not follow a prescribed order of service, that does not follow certain liturgical patterns, and does not make use of developed ritual, ceremony, or worship accouterments like vestments. From Webster's Dictionary: "Low Church (1710) tending esp. in Anglican worship to minimize emphasis on the priesthood, sacraments, and the ceremonial in worship and often to emphasize evangelical principles." By contrast: "High Church (1687) tending esp. in Anglican worship to stress the sacerdotal [priestly], liturgical, ceremonial, traditional, and Catholic elements in worship."

Wikipedia: High Church; Low Church

"Low church", in an Anglican context, denotes the church's simplicity or Protestant emphasis, and "high church" denotes an emphasis on ritual or, later, Anglo-Catholicism.

High Church vs Low Church

http://vspages.com/high-church-vs-low-church-24270/

High Church, a term applied to persons and practices of the Church of England and the Episcopal Church insofar as they seek to approximate the doctrinal position and liturgical practices of ancient Christianity, particularly of the church in Rome. The High Church view stresses the continuity of the episcopacy with the apostles; the authority of the church; and sacraments. It usually includes a concern for liturgical elaboration. Probably first used in the late 17th century, the term became more common in the 19th century with the Oxford Movement and the rise of Anglo-Catholic tendencies.

Low Church, a term applied to members of the Anglican Church who regard the episcopate, priesthood, and sacraments as relatively unimportant and stress a more evangelical, Protestant approach. Adherents of the Low Church position also oppose elaborate liturgy and ceremony and anything that is too close to the usage of the Roman Catholic Church.

The term “Low Church” came into use in the early 18th century to distinguish the more liberal, or Latitudinarian, group from the “High Church,” or conservative group. The term passed out of currency until the 19th century, when it was revived with its current meaning of “evangelical.””Broad Church” became the term attached to the liberal group. The term “Low Church” is also in use in other churches of the Anglican Communion

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

High Church vs Low Church

https://www.christianforums.com/threads/high-church-vs-low-church.2561280/

High/low refers to the worship style rather than the theology, although there is a strong correlation between worship style and theology.

A high worship style is associated with Anglo-Catholic theology, so highly sacramental with stimulation of all senses. A low worship style is associated with evangelical theology, so more bible based and personal relationship with Christ. But there is nothing preventing Anglo-Catholics from having low worship, or evangelicals having high worship. Most churches will have the full range of 'churchmanships' in their weekly programs, simply with different emphases.

60 Theologians on an Ecclesiological Spectrum

http://www.andyrowell.net/andy_rowell/2008/12/mapping-60-theologians-on-an-ecclesiological-spectrum.html

Ben Witherington on Frank Viola's Pagan Christianity and Reimagining Church

http://www.andyrowell.net/andy_rowell/2009/04/ben-witherington-on-frank-violas-pagan-christianity-and-reimagining-church.html

Young Evangelicals Getting "High" in Church?

http://www.patheos.com/blogs/euangelion/2013/07/young-evangelicals-getting-high-in-church/

High Church vs. Low Church: Documentary Narrative of an Ecclesiastical Joke

http://anglicansonline.org/special/highlow/

"I EXPECT six clergymen to dine with me on such a day," said a gentleman to his butler. "Very good, sir," said the butler. "Are they High Church or Low Church, sir?" "What on earth can that signify to you?" asked the astonished master. "Everything, sir," was the reply. "If they are High Church, they'll drink; if they are Low Church, they'll eat!"

Beyond "I'm Right/You're Wrong" Thinking

http://scottboren.blogspot.com/2014/04/beyond-im-rightyoure-wrong-thinking.html

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Bible Backgrounds

How Jewish Christians Became Christians
http://www.myjewishlearning.com/article/how-jewish-christians-became-christians/

Conflict at Rome: Romans 14
https://www.gci.org/bible/rom14

Jews and Gentiles Together: Romans 15
https://www.gci.org/bible/rom15

Separation: Synagogue and Church, Jew and Christian https://www.facinghistory.org/sites/default/files/Ch.2.pdf [PDF]

The Apostolic Age – The Gentile Churches
http://www.bible.ca/history/eubanks/history-eubanks-4.htm

The Church in Rome: Jews and Greeks http://www.biblestudywithrandy.com/2015/07/the-church-in-rome-jews-and-greeks/

Gentiles and Jews Together – in Ancient Rome and North African Carthage http://www.chosenpeople.com/symposium/papers2012/JeffSeif.doc [MS Doc]

Something About the Book of Romans that Will Help You Really Get It http://www.thegoodbookblog.com/2012/aug/29/something-about-the-book-of-romans-that-will-help-/

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Bible Backgrounds – Culture / Customs:

Links to Edersheim (pdf) The Life and Times of Jesus the Messiah:
http://www.holybooks.com/wp-content/uploads/The-Life-and-Times-of-Jesus-the-Messiah.pdf (complete)
Part 1: http://wesley.nnu.edu/wesleyctr/books/1001-1100/HDM1024.PDF
Part 2: http://wesley.nnu.edu/wesleyctr/books/1001-1100/HDM1025.PDF

Additional Edersheim publications:
The Temple and It's Services: http://wesley.nnu.edu/wesleyctr/books/1001-1100/HDM1026.PDF
Sketches of Jewish Social Life: http://wesley.nnu.edu/wesleyctr/books/1001-1100/HDM1027.PDF
Bible History of the OT: http://hopefaithprayer.com/books/BibleHistoryOldTestament-Edersheim.pdf

I'm noticing that Edersheim has been referenced a lot in biblical articles and books.
(Edershiem is an in-depth study. Albert Edersheim (b. 1825 – d. 1889) wrote around the mid to latter 1800's, but his information is still being referenced today. Since Edersheim was a converted Jew, he draws on extensive research (including sacred Jewish documents, such as the Talmud) and personal understanding of the Jewish background in order to help us more fully understand Jesus' Life and the Times in which he lived.)[I may not always fully agree with some of his theological conclusions, but its good information nevertheless.]

Shurer: A history of the Jewish people in the time of Jesus Christ 2d and rev. ed. of a "Manual of the history of the New Testament times.":
http://archive.org/details/historyofjewishp01schuoft [Downloadable PDF, ePUB and other formats] (multiple scanned volumes) http://archive.org/details/p1historyofjewishp01schuoft
http://archive.org/details/p2historyofjewishp02schuoft
http://archive.org/details/s2historyofjewis03schuoft
http://archive.org/details/historyofjewishp18910203sch
http://archive.org/details/historyofjewishp0101sch
http://archive.org/details/p1historyofjewishp01schuoft
http://archive.org/details/historyofjewishp0201sch
http://archive.org/details/historyofjewishp0202sch

Online version:
http://www.ecatholic2000.com/history6/untitled-02.shtml Division 1 Volume 1
http://www.ecatholic2000.com/history6/untitled-03.shtml Division 1 Volume 2
http://www.ecatholic2000.com/history6/untitled-04.shtml Division 2 Volume 1
http://www.ecatholic2000.com/history6/untitled-05.shtml Division 2 Volume 2
http://www.ecatholic2000.com/history6/untitled-06.shtml Division 2 Volume 3
http://www.ecatholic2000.com/history6/untitled-08.shtml Contents

See also:
http://juchre.org/schurer/schurer.htm (Table of Contents with links to online/downloadable volumes on google)

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Works of Flavius Josephus (including The Wars of the Jews, Antiquities of the Jews, Life of Flavius Josephu, Against Apion, Discourse to the Greeks Concerning Hades):
http://www.ncbible.info/MoodRes/History/WorksofFlaviusJosephus.pdf [PDF]
http://www.ccel.org/ccel/josephus/complete.html [Online, PDF]
http://archive.org/details/completeworksofj02jose [Online, PDF, ePUB and more]

http://www.josephus.org/

History of the Christian Church, Volume II:
Ante-Nicene Christianity. A.D. 100-325.History of the Christian Church, Volume II: Ante-Nicene Christianity. A.D. 100-325.
http://www.ccel.org/ccel/schaff/hcc2.v.vii.iv.html Quartadecimanian Controversy

Eusebius – History of the Church – Life of Constantine http://www.prayerfoundation.org/books/book_review_eusebius_history_of_church.htm http://www.ccel.org/ccel/schaff/npnf201.toc.html
http://www.ntslibrary.com/PDF%20Books/Church%20History%20Life%20of%20Constantine.pdf [PDF]

Comparisons of Major Christian Traditions:
http://christianityinview.com/comparison.html

5 views of the Eucharist: http://christianityinview.com/eucharist.html

Catholics and Orthodox Liturgy Compared https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=dApWNfJgGC4 [Video] https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=QxcOv4zPoVo [Video]

N. T. Wright on the Gospel and Meal Jesus Gave Us (Eucharist)
https://worship.calvin.edu/resources/resource-library/n-t-wright-on-the-gospel-and-meal-jesus-gave-us/

See also: TheMessianicFeast.com

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Additional related internal links:

Paul

Paul's Use of Greek Philosophy in the Bible / Greek Philosophy

Paul's Worldview

Old Testament Sayings in Paul's Letter to the Romans (Chart)

Church History, Early (including Antiochene and Alexandrian Theology)

Apostolic Fathers – Writings / History

Culture / Customs, History (Bible Backgrounds)

Luther, Martin

Galatians

Romans

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Karl Barth

Barth: The Epistle to the Romans
https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/The_Epistle_to_the_Romans_%28Barth%29

(German: Der Römerbrief) is a commentary by Swiss theologian Karl Barth on the New Testament Epistle to the Romans.

Disillusioned with both German Protestant Liberalism and Religious Socialism after the outbreak of the World War I in 1914, Barth decided in the summer of 1916 to write a commentary on Paul's Epistle to the Romans as a way of rethinking his theological inheritance. Barth was a pastor in Safenwil at the time. Protestant Liberal theology had played a significant role in the rise of German nationalism prior to World War I, leading to Barth's disillusionment and attempts to restructure Protestant theology. The first edition of the commentary was published in December 1918 (but with a publication date of 1919). It was the first edition of the work, which has not been translated into English, which earned Barth his invitation to teach at the University of Göttingen and which Karl Adam said fell "like a bombshell on the theologians' playground." In October 1920 Barth decided that he needed to revise the first edition and worked for the next eleven months on rewriting the commentary, finishing around September 1921. The second edition was published in 1922 and translated into English in 1933.

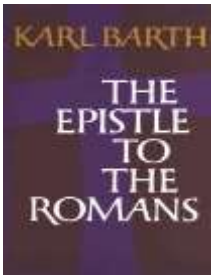
This work, like many of his others, emphasizes the saving grace of God and humanity's inability to know God outside of God's revelation in Christ. Specifically, the God who is revealed in the cross of Jesus challenges and overthrows any attempt to ally God with human cultures, achievements, or possessions. While famous for its use of dialectic, some scholars have argued that Barth makes extensive use of analogy in the work as well.

Google Books;
https://books.google.com/books/about/The_Epistle_to_the_Romans.html?id=dCEDzQhI4R4C

Wikipedia: Barth first began his commentary The Epistle to the Romans (Ger. Der Römerbrief) in the summer of 1916 while he was still a pastor in Safenwil, with the first edition appearing in December 1918 (but with a publication date of 1919). On the strength of the first edition of the commentary, Barth was invited to teach at the University of Göttingen. Barth decided around October 1920 that he was dissatisfied with the first edition and heavily revised it the following eleven months, finishing the second edition around September 1921. Particularly in the thoroughly re-written second edition of 1922, Barth argued that the God who is revealed in the cross of Jesus challenges and overthrows any attempt to ally God with human cultures, achievements, or possessions. The book's popularity led to its republication and reprinting in several languages.

In the decade following the First World War, Barth was linked with a number of other theologians – actually very diverse in outlook – who had reacted against their teachers' liberalism, in a movement known as "Dialectical Theology" (Ger. Dialektische Theologie). The members of the movement included Rudolf Bultmann, Eduard Thurneysen, Eberhard Grisebach, Emil Brunner, and Friedrich Gogarten

Romans 9-11 in Karl Barth`s Doctrine ... - Vanderbilt University
http://www.vanderbilt.edu/AnS/religious_studies/SBL2007/Stegemann.pdf



Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Karl Barth and the Neo-orthodox View of the Bible [recommended]

http://www.free-online-bible-study.org/karl-barth.html

Excerpt:

Neo-orthdoxy is born

The emergence of Neo-orthodoxy is generally inked to the publication of Barth's commentary on Paul's letter to the Romans in 1919. Neo-orthodoxy means "new orthodoxy." It implies a return to orthodox Christian beliefs after two centuries of liberalism.

Barth's Commentary on Romans ("The Epistle to the Romans"):

* Made theology God-centered rather than man-centered.

* Deprived man of all self-righteousness and self-reliance and exalted the grace of God in Christ.

Critics of neo-orthodoxy contend that the designation "orthodoxy" is a misnomer. Reformed theologian Paul Enns concedes that neo-orthodoxy "takes the Bible more seriously than older liberalism." Nonetheless he insists that it has "retained the foundations of liberalism."

Karl Barth and Biblical Inspiration

I appreciate the view of inspiration proposed by Barth (1886-1968). This view is gaining wide acceptance among the postmodern emerging churches. His "neo-orthodox" perspective challenged the fundamentalist notion of an "infallible written Word." He called this view a "paper-pope."

Barth argues that the Bible is not the objective Word of God, but rather a witness to the Word. He categorizes the Word of God into three realms:

(1) The "Revealed Word" is God revealing himself by speaking to the apostles and prophets.

(2) The "Written Word" is the deposit of revelation made by man.

(3) The "Preached Word" is the proclamation of the Word, and when the grace of God breaks through to the individual, then theBible becomes the Word of God. In his influential Church Dogmatics, Barth writes, "What we have in the Bible are in any case human attempts to repeat and reproduce [the] Word of God in human words and thoughts and in specific human situations." He argues, "The Bible is God's Word to the extent that God causes it to be His Word, to the extent that He speaks through it."

In contrast to Emil Brunner and other neo-orthodox thinkers, Karl Barth rejected the idea of God's general revelation in nature. Barth believes that the possibility of knowledge of God lies in God's Word and nowhere else. The event of revelation is Jesus Christ and the Triune God is the entire subject of revelation.

Karl Barth affirms that "The eternal God is to be known in Jesus Christ and not elsewhere."

Neo-orthodoxy emphasizes Scripture as the source of theology.

When neo-orthodox theologians talk about the "word of God," they do not usually mean the Bible.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Bible is a witness to the revelation of God which is found, not in a set of verbal propositions, but in an existential encounter with Jesus Christ.

Because the Bible is a book written by human beings, it need not be absolutely inerrant.

Karl Barth and Evangelical Theology (1963)

According to Barth, the term "evangelical" relates theology to both the New Testament and the Reformation.

"Theology" is primarily concerned with God himself. He agues, “If theology wished to reverse this relationship, and instead of relating man to God, related God to man, then it would surrender itself to a new Babylonian captivity. It would become the prisoner of some sort of anthropology or ontology.”

Note: anthropology is the study of man; ontology is the study of being or existence.

Concerning the place of theology, Barth contends that theology stands and falls with the Word of God. It is the Word God spoke, speaks, and will speak to all men. “Regardless of whether it is heard or not, it is, in itself, directed to all men.”

Karl Barth identifies two biblical witnesses of the Word:

* The prophetic men of the Old Testament.

* The apostolic men of the New Testament.

Anything other than the intention of these witnesses of the Word “cannot be the substance of evangelical theology."

Postmodern Evangelicals embrace Karl Barth

In the 1980s I had the opportunity to get to know the post-evangelical thinker and writer Dave Tomlinson.

Dave describes Karl Barth as “the first truly postmodern theologian.” Like neo-orthodoxy, post-evangelicalism speaks of the Bible becoming, rather than being, the Word of God.

The important thing for many postmodern believers is the existential encounter that is possible with the Word of God even though the actual text may be tainted with factual errors, because of the human dimension of who wrote the Bible.

This neo-orthodox view of the Bible has much to commend it to the postmodern believer seeking an authentic Christianity in an era of deconstruction. However, Paul Enns wisely cautions, “In this view the authority is the subjective experience of the individual rather than the scriptures themselves.”

[See also: Worldviews]

Note: For details on Postmodernism, neo-Orthodoxy and other philosophies impacting the Church, see my separate resource: Christian Scholarship: Biblical – Theological – Philosophical

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Karl Barth and Contemporary Theology by Tom Greggs https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=aehQjcaKeS4 [Video]

Karl Barth – Internet College
http://internetbiblecollege.net/Lessons/Karl%20Barth.pdf [PDF]

Excerpt:

There are numerous reasons for the spread of pagan relativistic attitudes to the Bible and absolute truth among many Evangelicals, Pentecostals and Charismatics in the United States and some other Western countries. But one of these reasons is the acceptance of the teachings of non-Evangelical Neo-Orthodox theologians like Karl Barth.

When talking about the Bible, Karl Barth said, "the prophets and apostles as such, even in their office, even in their function as witnesses, even in the act of writing down their witness were real, historical men as we are, and therefore sinful in their action, and capable and actually guilty of error in their spoken and written word*."*

Barth also said about the Bible, "It witnesses to a revelation from God, but that does not mean that God's revelation is now before us in any kind of inherent quality of being divinely revealed. The Bible is not a book of oracles; it is not an instrument of direct impartation. It is really witness."

Here Barth was teaching a modified version of the liberal doctrine that the Bible is not the Word or objective revelation of God but instead merely contains the Word or revelation of God in some of its parts. Barth's concept of the Bible witnessing to the living Word of God – Jesus Christ – is different from liberal teachings on this, but it still ends up with a similar result. This result is the Bible is regarded as not 100% God's Word or revelation.

Therefore, it is little wonder that Barth spoke similarly to the Neo-orthodox writer C.H. Dodd when Barth said commenting on Romans 5:12: "Adam has no existence on the plane of history."

We can see the implications of Barth's errors about the nature of the written Word of God when we see, for example, his comments about Satan and demons. He proposed a mystical philosophical view when he claimed: "their origin and nature lie in nothingness…They themselves are always nothingness."

When referring to Jude 6 and 2 Peter 2:4 in relation to the topic of the fall of angels, Barth said, "the intolerable artificiality with which attempts have been made to use them as a basis for the development of the doctrine of a fall of angels and therefore of an explanation of the existence of the devil and demons."

Karl Barth – Trinity Review – Forward to Karl Barth's Theological Method by Gordon H. Clark
http://www.trinityfoundation.org/PDF/The%20Trinity%20Review%200155a%20KarlBarth.pdf [PDF]

Muller: What I Haven't Learned From Karl Barth [recommended]
https://heidelblog.net/2016/08/muller-what-i-havent-learned-from-karl-barth/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

A Critical Evaluation of Karl Barth's Suggestion That Biblical Inerrancy is Theologically Indefensible (Link to PDF)
https://www.monergism.com/content/critical-evaluation-karl-barths-suggestion-biblical-inerrancy-theologically-indefensible

Ten propositions on Karl Barth: theologian http://www.faith-theology.com/2006/11/ten-propositions-on-karl-barth.html

Is Karl Barth Neo-Orthodox?
https://reformedforum.org/karl-barth-neo-orthodox/

John MacArthur: Existential Neo-Orthodoxy Denies Sola Scriptura
http://apprising.org/2009/04/15/john-macarthur-existential-neo-orthodoxy-denies-sola-scriptura/

Karl Barth and N.T. Wright Side by Side on Philippians 2:5-11 and the 'Emptying' https://growrag.wordpress.com/2013/07/31/karl-barth-and-n-t-wright-side-by-side-on-philippians-25-11-and-the-emptying/

N.T. Wright on Karl Barth and the Neo-Orthodox https://nearemmaus.wordpress.com/2011/06/29/n-t-wright-on-karl-barth-and-the-neo-orthodox/

N.T. Wright and Universal Redemption http://postbarthian.com/2014/01/07/n-t-wright-and-universal-redemption/
Question: "Is there a hope for all people, animals, plants and stars, that is more than preservation." Read transcript or listen to the audio file to hear his response!

N.T. Wright on Unscholarly Scholars and Sachkritik (Material Criticism) http://postbarthian.com/2015/11/13/n-t-wright-on-unscholary-scholars-and-sachkritik-material-criticism/

Richard Hays on N. T. Wright and Karl Barth https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=pLaU0ueJWac [Video]

A Look at Karl Barth and N.T. Wright's Exegetical Methodologies
https://ordinand.files.wordpress.com/2008/04/chapter-1.pdf [PDF]

Karl Barth and N.T. Wright's Exegetical Methodologies
https://ordinand.files.wordpress.com/2008/04/chapter-2.pdf [PDF]

Wrights-Historical-Exegetical-Methodology
https://ordinand.files.wordpress.com/2008/04/chapter-3.pdf [PDF]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Relationship with Charlotte von Kirschbaum

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Karl_Barth#Relationship_with_Charlotte_von_Kirschbaum

Charlotte von Kirschbaum was Barth's secretary and theological assistant for more than three decades. When Barth first met her in 1924 he had already been married for 12 years and, in 1929, she moved into the Barth family household, which included his wife Nelly and five children. George Hunsinger summarizes the influence of von Kirschbaum on Barth's work: "As his unique student, critic, researcher, adviser, collaborator, companion, assistant, spokesperson, and confidante, Charlotte von Kirschbaum was indispensable to him. He could not have been what he was, or have done what he did, without her."

The long-standing work relationship was not without its difficulties. It caused offense among some of Barth's friends, as well as his mother. While Nelly supplied the household and the children, von Kirschbaum and Barth shared an academic relationship. The feminist scholar, Suzanne Selinger says "[p]art of any realistic response to the subject of Barth and von Kirschbaum must be anger", because she has been largely unrecognized by Barthian scholars for her work. Barth lauds von Kirschbaum for her assistance in the preface of Church Dogmatics: Volume 3 – The Doctrine of Creation Part 3.

An article written in 2017 by Christiane Tietz (originally a paper she delivered at the 2016 American Academy of Religion in San Antonio, Texas) for the academic journal Theology Today engages letters released in both 2000 and 2008 written by Barth, Charlotte von Kirschbaum, and Nelly Barth, which discuss the complicated relationship between all three individuals that occurred over the span of 40 years. The letters published in 2008 between von Kirschbaum and Barth from 1925-1935 made public "the deep, intense, and overwhelming love between these two human beings."

Why I Still Don't Much Care for Karl Barth [Recommended]

https://theecclesialcalvinist.wordpress.com/2017/10/02/why-i-still-dont-much-care-for-karl-barth/

…In sum, then, I still don't much care for Karl Barth, and for a variety of reasons having to do with both theology and life. Those wise words of Barth's mother quoted above to her wayward son should be a salutary word of caution to those of us who seek to do theology: "What is the most brilliant theology good for, if it is to be shipwrecked in one's own house?"

Christianity Today: What to Make of Karl Barth's Steadfast Adultery – Do the recent revelations discredit his theology? (2017) [Recommended]

http://www.christianitytoday.com/ct/2017/october-web-only/what-to-make-of-karl-barths-steadfast-adultery.html

Karl Barth continued next page…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Dulis: Christianity Today Editor Champions Theologian Who Excused Stalin's Mass Murder (Referencing a Christianity Today article criticizing Donald Trump)

https://www.breitbart.com/faith/2019/12/20/dulis-christianity-today-editor-champions-theologian-who-excused-stalins-mass-murder/

Excerpt:

However, Galli has no moral authority to make this judgment on political preferences. Just a few years before this missive, Galli authored a lionizing biography of Karl Barth (pictured, inset) — a neo-orthodox theologian (e.g., believed that Christ did rise from the dead but the eyewitnesses did not record it accurately) and avowed socialist who excused Josef Stalin's "totalitarian atrocities" due to the "positive intention" of the Marxist world view. He wrote:

> [I]t is pertinent not to omit to discriminate in our view of contemporary Communism between its totalitarian atrocities as such and the positive intention behind them. And if one tries to do that, one cannot say of Communism what one was forced to say of Nazism ten years ago — that what it means and intends is pure unreason, the product of madness and crime. It would be quite absurd to mention in the same breath the philosophy of Marxism and the "ideology" of the Third Reich, to mention a man of the stature of Joseph Stalin in the same breath as such charlatans as Hitler, Goering, Hess, Goebbels, Himmler, Ribbentrop, Rosenberg, Streicher, etc. What has been tackled in Soviet Russia — albeit with very dirty and bloody hands and in a way that rightly shocks us — is, after all, a constructive idea, the solution of a problem which is a serious and burning problem for us as well, and which we with our clean hands have not yet tackled anything like energetically enough: the social problem. (Die Kirche zwischen Ost und West, 1949)

In his book, Galli's harshest criticism on the topic of Soviet mass murder reads: "in retrospect, Barth does seem naive on this issue." No accusations of disloyalty to the Decalogue.

The Trinity Foundation: Karl Barth

http://www.trinityfoundation.org/journal.php?id=147
(Includes discussion of Barth the Communist)

"Despite his apparently orthodox words, Barth's dialectical theological enterprise was always shaped by his prior and lifelong commitment to socialism. He chose theology as a basis for his social action. The theology of the nineteenth century could not do so, in Barth's view; a new theology was necessary."

See also my separate resource*:

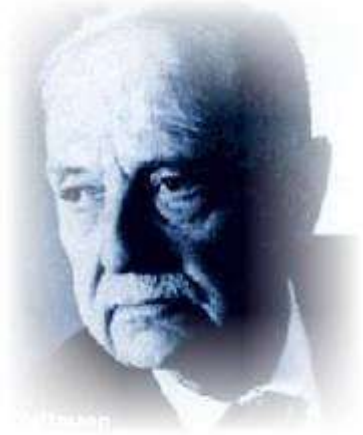
Christian Scholarship: Biblical – Theological - Philosophical

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Rudolf Bultmann

Rudolf Karl Bultmann (German: [ˈbʊltman]; 20 August 1884 – 30 July 1976) was a German Lutheran theologian and professor of New Testament at the University of Marburg. He was one of the major figures of early 20th century biblical studies and a prominent voice in liberal Christianity.

Bultmann is known for his belief that the historical analysis of the New Testament is both futile and unnecessary, given that the earliest Christian literature showed little interest in specific locations. Bultmann argued that all that matters is the "thatness", not the "whatness" of Jesus,[a] i.e. only that Jesus existed, preached and died by crucifixion matters, not what happened throughout his life.



Bultmann relied on demythologization, an approach interpreting the mythological elements in the New Testament existentially. Bultmann contended that only faith in the kerygma, or proclamation, of the New Testament was necessary for Christian faith, not any particular facts regarding the historical Jesus.

-Wikipedia

Rudolf Bultmann - The Demythologizer

http://www.free-online-bible-study.org/bultmann.html

Excerpt:

The son of a Lutheran minister, Rudolf Bultmann (1884-1976) pursued his theological studies at the Universities of Tübingen, Berlin, and Marburg in Germany. From 1921 to 1951, he served as professor of New Testament at Marburg, where he was influenced by the existential thought of Danish philosopher Soren Kiekegaard and by the German existentialist Martin Heidegger, a colleague at Marburg from 1922 to 1928.

World War I (1914-1918) and the Great Depression (began 1929) led many liberal theologians to turn to secular humanism, rejecting both Christianity and God. Out of this crisis emerged a "new" liberalism, which described itself as "evangelical." Proclaiming Jesus Christ as Lord, neo-liberals called for recognition of the uniqueness of the Bible. They affirm sin as the human predicament, which could be relieved only with God's help. Bultmann became a leading figure in this movement.

In the field of New Testament criticism, Bultmann developed "form criticism" as an attempt to discover the literary forms and sources used by the writers of the biblical texts.

He concluded that the gospel records are a collection of myths, which portray truths about man's existence rather than tell about actual historical events. In order to understand the New Testament books it is necessary to "demythologize" them, that is, to strip them of the myth with which the early church had clothed the gospel writings.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Is Jesus Christ a myth?

Bultmann's chief concern was to make biblical, Christian faith understandable to modern man. He did so by applying an existential interpretation of the New Testament. This approach views the message of the ancient Scriptures as God's Word addressed to the individual and which call for an individual faith response.

At the heart of his theology is form criticism. The gospels are the product of the early church, which embellish the original records about the life of Christ. The gospel writers were collectors of fragmentary writings and editors who pieced the writings together.

In his landmark Theology of the New Testament (1948-53), he makes the quintessential statement of neo-liberal belief: "The message of Jesus is a presupposition for the theology of the New Testament rather than a part of that theology itself."

The process of uncovering the original statements of Jesus is to "demythologize" the gospel by peeling off the layers of editorial embellishments by the early church.

For example, the early church thought of the cosmos as a three-tiered universe: heaven above, earth, and hell below. Within these levels of existence are supernatural beings: God, angels, Satan, and demons. But according to Bultmann this is all mythological statement—the words have symbolic meanings that need to be interpreted.

Bultmann insists that "the world picture of the New Testament as a mythical world picture." He argues the biblical worldview "is a three-story structure, with earth in the middle, heaven above it, and hell beneath it."

In Jesus Christ and Mythology (1958) Bultmann claims, "To de-mythologize is to reject not Scripture or the Christian message as a whole, but the world-view of Scripture, which is the world-view of a past epoch." He insists that the worldview of the Scripture is mythological and is therefore unacceptable to modern man. Thus for him, "Demythologizing makes clear the true meaning of God's mystery."

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Although Bultmann believes that the New Testament is enshrouded with myth, he saw, nonetheless, a kerygma, a gospel proclamation that expresses the true intent of the biblical writers behind their mythological pattern of thought.

He argues that God meets the individual existentially through the preached word. He writes, "I think our interest is really to hear what the Bible has to say for our actual present, to hear what is the truth about our life and about our soul."

The message of Jesus and the problem of mythology

Left: University of Marburg, Germany (the old university building)

According to Bultmann in Jesus Christ and Mythology, "the heart of the preaching of Jesus Christ is the Kingdom of God." Jesus conceived of the Kingdom as eschatological (related to the end-times).

He convincingly argues that eschatological expectation and hope is the core of the New Testament preaching (the kerygma). He contends that this hope of Jesus and the early church was unfulfilled. Thus he concludes, "the same world still exists and history continues. The course of history has refuted mythology. For the conception of the 'Kingdom of God' is mythological."

Does Jesus' preaching of the Kingdom of God and the preaching of the New Testament still have any importance as a whole for modern men?

Bultmann's hermeneutic (method of interpretation) of demythologization tries to recover the supposed deeper meaning behind the mythological ideas of the New Testament.

While some conservative Christian thinkers have serious reservations regarding his hermeneutic methodology, there is general agreement with his practical and ethical conclusion: "If the ethical demands of Jesus are stumbling-blocks to modern man, then it is to his selfish will, not his understanding, that they are stumbling-blocks."

The Christian Message and the Modern Worldview

In Jesus Christ and Mythology, the criterion for demythologizing is the modern worldview. Bultmann claims the process of demythologization does not reject Scripture or the Christian message as a whole; rather it rejects the worldview of Scripture.

This is seen as the worldview of a past epoch. This mythological worldview of Scripture is unacceptable to modern man. Demythologization rejects the notion that the message of Scripture and of the Church is bound to an ancient worldview which is obsolete.

He believes that the Word of God calls man away from his selfishness and from the illusory security which he has built up for himself, calling him to God, who is beyond the world and beyond scientific thinking.

He argues that to believe in the Word of God means to abandon all merely human security and thus to overcome the despair which arises from the attempt to find security, and attempt which is always vain.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

His conclusion is worthy of careful thought and application by all believers...

"Faith is the abandonment of man's own security and the readiness to find security only in the unseen beyond God."

He offers a compelling definition of faith: "Faith is security where no security can be seen."

Jesus Christ and Mythology contends that God's Word speaks to man in his insecurity and summons him to freedom. Bultmann is right that man "loses his freedom in his very yearning for security." Genuine freedom is to be found in obedience.

Bultmann argues convincingly that the freedom of subjective arbitrariness is a delusion, for it delivers man up to his drives, to do in any moment what lust and passion dictate. Therefore, "genuine freedom is freedom from the motivation of the moment; it is freedom which withstands the clamor and pressure of momentary motivations."

Critical evaluation of demythologization

Bultmann's theological approach utilizes existential philosophy in the theological task, which results in a narrow, privatized faith. His subjective methodology approaches the Scriptures like any other piece of literature. His form criticism redefines the evangelical notion of the inspiration of Scripture.

Demythologization builds upon form criticism and further extends the subjective approach to the Scriptures. The underlying premise is that Scripture is filled with myth and must be eliminated because it does not correspond to the modern scientific mind.

Paul Enns, professor and director of the Tampa Extension of Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary in the Moody Handbook of Theology (1989), insists that "the true Christian faith is anchored to history and has historical validity," in contrast to the Bultmannian gospel, which "is a proclamation of myth that offers little hope."

Enns argues that the limitation of theological discourse to the dimension of human existence truncates both God's eternal reality and God's actions in the world. He thus became the John the Baptist for the God-is-Dead movement of the 1960s.

Critics ask: Does demythologizing reduce the Christian message to a product of human rational thinking? "Not at all!" replies Bultmann in Jesus Christ and Mythology, "demythologizing makes clear the true meaning of God's mystery."

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Existential Theology: Bultmann and Tillich

https://quizlet.com/140144489/unit-4-existential-theology-bultmann-and-tillich-flash-cards/

Bultmann's Theology

Bultmann's New Testament Scholarship	Most of Bultmann's NT work is an example of "historical critical scholarship," which basically interprets the Bible just as one would interpret any book. Specifically, Bultmann significantly contributed to two sub-specialties within historical criticism: (1) Form criticism (2) The History of Religions Approach
Bultmann and Form Criticism	Form criticism attempts to uncover the original oral content of the Bible (e.g., Jesus teachings) by distinguishing between what is "authentic" and what is an expression of later traditions (e.g. like those of early Christians). He famously said of Jesus that "the proclaimer [the historical Jesus] became the proclaimed [the Christ of the church and of Christian faith]." Form criticism attends to the specific "forms" and "linguistic markers" of the Bible in order to do this. It also employs the "criterion of dissimilarity" to identify authentic sayings of Jesus (as opposed to Jewish or early Christian sayings). [Note: This idea seems absurd given that Jesus was a Jew, and the Christians attempted to base their ideas on Jesus!] Bultmann wrote key book The History of the Synoptic Tradition (1921).
Bultmann and "The History of Religions" School/Approach	This approach attempts to relate the New Testament (NT) to its cultural, religious and historical environment (Jewish, Hellenistic, Roman, Egyptian, Gnostic, etc.) Bultmann believed that the NT was marked by religious syncretism, drawing from many different religious ideas including those of Gnosticism (even though this movement was later regarded as a heresy by Christians). The basic proclaimed message of the NT—the kerygma—is communicated through diverse cultural means.
Some Results of Bultmann's Approach to the NT	It encouraged people to doubt the historical accuracy of the NT. For example, he often thought that what the Gospel's said that Jesus said and did was different from what he really said and did in history. Again, "the proclaimer became the proclaimed"—and he assumes that the proclaimer and proclaimed are quite different. Thus, Bultmann believes that there was a growing gap between faith and history, between the claims of faith (made by the NT writers or later Christians) and what actually happened. This means that if we are to maintain Christian faith today, it cannot be a faith that tries to be based on history or is overly concerned with history.
Bultmann's De-mythologization	This is a specific "hermeneutic" or way of interpreting the NT. In sum, it attempts to interpret the so called "mythical" portions of the Bible in a manner that rejects their literal meaning and truth but that attempt to draw a deeper, symbolic meaning from them. Bultmann is trying to interpret the NT in a way that is honest about what is means historically, but is still able to see it as a valuable resource for faith. This method implies a kind of theology that can reject some aspects of the Bible (myth) in favor of other aspects of it (the kerygma or basic message and its existential implications) Bultmann's theology, which draws from existentialist philosophy, asserts that there is a huge gap between history and faith, and between the Bible's time and our time.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Bultmann and Heidegger's Existentialism	Martin Heidegger, one of the main existentialist philosophers of the 20th Century, developed a philosophy about human existence which described human experience as an anxious struggle to find meaning. Humans find such meaning in an authentic, responsible way of living. Bultmann believed that Heidegger's philosophy could help modern readers to identify what was really essential and important about the Bible's message, i.e., what was important for understanding our existence as defined by Christian faith. Hence, Bultmann thought that existentialism functioned as the right "pre-understanding" (set of presuppositions) for NT interpretation.
Questions that Bultmann Raises for Biblical Studies and Theology	How much can we know about the historical Jesus and how can we know it? How close is the "Jesus of history" to the "Christ of faith" of the NT and Christian tradition? How much is the early Christian view of Jesus Christ effected by Gnosticism and other views different from Jesus' own views? How does Christianity today deal aspects of the Biblical message that seem "unreasonable" or "supernatural"? Is God's work primarily objective (historical, ontological) or subjective (existential, personal, experiential)? How do the objective and subjective aspects relate to one another?

Ancient vs. Modern Biographies: Didn't Bultmann Know the Difference? (2017)
http://vridar.org/2017/08/02/ancient-vs-modern-biographies-didnt-bultmann-know-the-difference/

Kerygma and Mythos – by Bultmann
https://www.scribd.com/document/61555866/Kerygma-and-Myth-by-Rudolf-Bultmann

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Rudolf Bultmann and Demythologization

http://people.bu.edu/wwildman/bce/mwt_themes_760_bultmann.htm

BULTMANN: 1953 Postmodernism, Kerygma & Myth

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=lpv0PiwzKNQ

Kerygma and History in the Thought of Rudolf Bultmann

http://www.westarinstitute.org/wp-content/uploads/2014/09/Forum-32-Luedemann-Kerygma-and-History.pdf [PDF]

6. Der liberale Protestantismus-R.Bultmann

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=24Ml2JDyW04 [Audio] (German)

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

"Rudolf Karl Bultmann" – Christology, Video 14
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=JgycPQnC43Y

Rudolf Bultmann and the Quest for the Historical Jesus (2012)
https://bjreynolds.wordpress.com/2012/05/11/bultmann-historical-jesus/

Wikipedia: Quest for the historical Jesus
https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Quest_for_the_historical_Jesus

Some say that Christ's resurrection was a myth, not history. Is this possible?
http://christiananswers.net/q-eden/edn-t009.html

The Theological Significance of Rudolf Bultmann
http://cdn.theologicalstudies.net/38/38.2/38.2.1.pdf [PDF]

The Significance of Rudolf Bultmann (The Baptist Quarterly)
http://www.biblicalstudies.org.uk/pdf/bq/16-8_343.pdf [PDF]

Existentialism, Science, and the Scriptures:
The Mythological Christology of Rudolf Bultmann
http://www.biblicaltheology.com/Research/CarterJ05.html

Rudolph Bultmann – An Introductory Interpretation [Recommended]
http://www.theologicalstudies.org.uk/pdf/uccf/bultmann_webster.pdf [PDF]

Rudolf Bultmann: A Reader's Guide
https://fireandrose.blogspot.com/2013/11/rudolf-bultmann-readers-guide.html

History and Eschatology – by Rudolf Bultmann https://www.giffordlectures.org/lectures/history-and-eschatology chaps. 8 and 10. Bultmann's Gifford Lectures are full of wonderful historical and theological insights and deserve to be read in their entirety. I have highlighted chapters 8 and 10 because there he summarizes his hermeneutical position. It is important to see that Bultmann differentiates between two aspects of historiography (p. 117): (a) the perspective of the historian who is situated within a particular historical situation and (b) the existential encounter with history. These two aspects correspond to Bultmann's key concepts: preunderstanding (Vorverständnis) and self-understanding (Selbstverständnis). The 1957

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

essay (#10 above) only focuses on the first aspect, while Bultmann is very clear that an authentically Christian interpretation of scripture concerns the second aspect, a point that is often misunderstood.

-Rudolf Bultmann: A Reader's Guide

http://www.omnilexica.com/?q=existential+theology

Excerpt (image):

See also: Karl Barth, Neo-Orthodox = dialectical theology (European terminology), Kerygma

Bultmann versus Wright on the Resurrection http://aguyinthepew.blogspot.com/2008/05/bultmann-versus-wright-on-resurection.html

Is N. T. Wright greater than Bultmann?
http://www.faith-theology.com/2005/07/is-n-t-wright-greater-than-bultmann.html

The Virtues and Vices of N.T. Wright's After You Believe (2013)
http://www.mbird.com/2013/07/the-virtues-and-vices-of-n-t-wrights-after-you-believe/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

N.T. Wright: Historical Paul and 'Systematic Theology' (2014) [Recommended]

http://ntwrightpage.com/2017/02/24/historical-paul-and-systematic-theology/

Excerpts:

Putting Paul in his Place

That task of location has, supposedly, been the aim of much biblical study. However, even in the hallowed halls of the historical critics things have often been very different. A hundred years ago a genuine effort was being made, by people like Adolf Deissmann, to locate Paul within that complex world; but this was largely abandoned in the long years of existential and neo-Kantian interpretation led by Rudolf Bultmann. Instead, exegetes have arranged their Pauline work around a string of essentially theological debates, which swirl around one another confusingly and routinely twist the texts to fit. These debates grow out of, and flow into, one another, though, again confusingly, they do not map on to one another. Was Paul basically writing about anthropology or cosmology (Bultmann vs. Kasemann)? Was the centre of his thought justification or salvation history (Kasemann vs Stendahl, echoing older debates between the followers of F. C. Baur and those who were arguing for some form of Heilsgeschichte, ending notably with Cullmann)? Or, taking a different tack, was Paul really an apocalyptic theologian, or a proponent of salvation-history (Martyn)? Or is the real opposition 'apocalyptic' against 'justification' itself (Campbell)? And so on. In particular, of course, we have had thirty-five years of trench warfare between something which I originally labelled the 'new perspective', but which is now both quite old and certainly highly pluriform – 'not-so-new perspectives', in other words – and something which inevitably gets called the 'old perspective'. And the heat aroused by this debate is certainly not caused by rival hypotheses of historical exegesis. Everyone knows that there are big theological issues at stake, though since the exegetes are not trained to address them and the theologians don't want to know about the historical basis for the argument this remains a dialogue of the deaf. As Bertrand Russell said of a long-standing argument he had had with one of his former wives: She still thinks she is right, and I still think I am right. Once again: the mystery of the non-marriage of theology and exegesis.

At the heart of my argument, both in the book and today, is the belief that the so-called historical-critical school of exegesis, as it has spent its energies prolifically over the last century, has by and large led us into a quagmire of false antitheses: not because it was historical and critical but because it was not nearly historical or critical enough. Here is the irony of the school that runs from Baur to Bultmann to Kasemann and on to Martyn and others today: they have used enough 'history' to fill their pages with learned footnotes, but part of their 'critical' stance has been precisely and explicitly to stand over against the text, helping Paul to say more clearly what they thought he was really trying to say, peeling away not only layers of later glosses but also the parts where Paul, unaccountably to this school, persisted in thinking and writing more like a first-century Jew and less like a good existentialist Lutheran. This method, dignified with the name Sachkritik, 'material criticism', has bedevilled some of the main work of the last hundred years. While we acknowledge and even applaud the intention to enable the biblical text to speak into very specific and dangerous situations, such as Germany between the wars, the elevation of that unique and peculiar moment, with all its cultural and philosophical currents, into a hermeneutical grid for interpreting the New Testament, was itself a triumph of an essentially anti-Jewish, anti-historical and I believe anti-Pauline impetus. Even when it celebrates its great triumphs, such as Kasemann's commentary on Romans, it always needed, but alas did not always have, a slave in the back of the chariot to whisper in the great man's ear, 'Remember you too are historically situated.'

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Albert Schweitzer

Wikipedia: Albert Schweitzer
https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Albert_Schweitzer

Albert Schweitzer, 1955

Albert Schweitzer, OM (14 January 1875 – 4 September 1965) was a French-German theologian, organist, writer, humanitarian, philosopher, and physician. A Lutheran, Schweitzer challenged both the secular view of Jesus as depicted by historical-critical methodology current at this time, as well as the traditional Christian view. His contributions to the interpretation of Pauline Christianity concern the role of Paul's mysticism of "being in Christ" as primary and the doctrine of Justification by Faith as secondary.

He received the 1952 Nobel Peace Prize for his philosophy of "Reverence for Life", expressed in many ways, but most famously in founding and sustaining the Albert Schweitzer Hospital in Lambaréné, now in Gabon, west central Africa (then French Equatorial Africa). As a music scholar and organist, he studied the music of German composer Johann Sebastian Bach and influenced the Organ Reform Movement (Orgelbewegung).

Short life history: Albert Schweitzer http://www.einstein-website.de/biographies/schweitzer_content.html

Theopedia: Albert Schweitzer
http://www.theopedia.com/albert-schweitzer

Albert Schweitzer
https://www.biblicaltraining.org/library/albert-schweitzer

Albert Schweitzer, Missionary http://justus.anglican.org/resources/bio/238.html

Albert Schweitzer and the Interpretation of the New Testament http://churchsociety.org/docs/churchman/125/Cman_125_4_Hawkin.pdf [PDF]

Albert Schweitzer's Understanding of Righteousness by Faith according to Paul's Letter to the Romans http://www.vanderbilt.edu/AnS/religious_studies/SBL2007/Claussen.pdf [PDF]

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Christian Research Institute: Albert Schweitzer
http://www.equip.org/article/albert-schweitzer/

Excerpt:

…But before he went to Africa he became widely known for two other accomplishments: one, as a great interpreter of Bach (he wrote a two-volume biography of Bach and was also considered to be the greatest interpreter of Bach on the organ of his day); and also as a theologian. His best-known written work was Quest of the Historical Jesus. Unfortunately, that book betrays Schweitzer as less than a Christian theologian. He had tremendous influence on theology, but he certainly did not maintain orthodox Christian theology. He concluded that book with Jesus having brought about His own crucifixion; he also left Christ without a resurrection. Schweitzer's position was that Jesus held the idea that He was the Messiah, that He had a "messianic consciousness" and that He thought He could bring about the end of the world by forcing His own death; that, according to Schweitzer, was His glory. Jesus died as a martyr to His belief in His "messianic character."

Just before Schweitzer's death, he joined the International Unitarian Association, making it perfectly plain that he did not believe in Jesus' deity. This is a great tragedy; but it shows that a person can be a humanitarian without necessarily being a Christian. Many people have been concerned with human need, even though they themselves have not been Christians.

Schweitzer grew up in the Alsace, in France, where a certain brand of mysticism prevailed in earlier centuries called "Rhine Mysticism." People who adhered to that believed in Jesus in some emotional way, but they were schizophrenics. As a result, it did not become part of their philosophy of life intellectually. The irony of this is that Schweitzer went to Africa and taught the natives to sing "Jesus loves me this I know, for the Bible tells me so." There were natives who were certainly converted by Schweitzer's own presence there, but Schweitzer himself certainly did not hold, in any intellectual way, to the deity of Christ. Schweitzer is a paradoxical figure, to say the least.

The Albert Schweitzer Page
http://home.pcisys.net/~jnf/

Albert Schweitzer Biography http://www.schweitzer.org/2012/en/work-and-life/biography-long

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Albert Schweitzer | Biography.com

Doctor, Theologian, Scholar, Journalist, Philosopher, Preacher, Missionary(1875–1965)
https://www.biography.com/people/albert-schweitzer-9476451

Albert Schweitzer was Alsatian-German theologian, philosopher, organist, and mission doctor in equatorial Africa, whose goal was the Brotherhood of Nations.

Synopsis

Albert Schweitzer was born Jan. 14, 1875, in Kaysersberg, Germany. His book The Quest of the Historical Jesus established him as a world figure in theological studies. During these years he also became an accomplished musician. In 1913 he become a mission doctor in Gabon. Interned there briefly as an enemy alien, and later in France as a P.O.W., he turned his attention towards world problems.

Dr. Albert Schweitzer, a renowned medical missionary with a complicated history http://www.pbs.org/newshour/updates/dr-albert-schweitzer-a-renowned-medical-missionary-with-a-complicated-history/

(PBS Newshour)

Albert Schweitzer Ideas (Boston Collaborative Encyclopedia of Western Theology)

http://www.csus.edu/indiv/c/craftg/hist127/schweitzerideas.pdf [PDF]

Realized Eschatology by John F. Waalvord

https://bible.org/article/realized-eschatology

Excerpt:

The place of eschatology in liberal theology has undergone in the last generation a dramatic change. The extreme skepticism expressed by Harnack[1] which regarded eschatology in Scripture contemptuously has been replaced by a new study of the eschatological aspects of Scripture largely due to the influence of Albert Schweitzer's Quest of the Historical Jesus.

Centrality or Directionality in Pauline Theology?

https://dmyencich.wordpress.com/2016/10/11/centrality-and-or-directionality-in-pauline-theology/

Excerpt:

Many debates between the "New" and "Old Perspective" on Paul (hereafter 'NP' and 'OP,' respectively) rise and fall on defining the center of Paul's theology. For various OP/Lutheran readers of Paul, the center is justification by faith. For Albert Schweitzer, the center was being "in Christ," with justification nestled as a subsidiary within that center. Schweitzer's "crater-within-a-crater" reading of Paul's central concerns was then redeployed, in modified form, in E. P. Sanders' Paul and Palestinian Judaism, one of the first shots fired by what has later come to be known as the NP. What is important here is that all three—Luther, Schweitzer, and Sanders—assumed that Paul's theology had a center and that identifying this center was the first step toward satisfactory exegesis.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Quotes by Schweitzer
http://www.quotationspage.com/quotes/Albert_Schweitzer

https://www.goodreads.com/author/quotes/47146.Albert_Schweitzer

http://www.great-quotes.com/quotes/author/Albert/Schweitzer

http://thinkexist.com/quotes/albert_schweitzer/

https://www.ranker.com/list/a-list-of-famous-albert-schweitzer-quotes/reference http://christian-quotes.ochristian.com/Albert-Schweitzer-Quotes/

WikiQuote: Albert Schweitzer
https://en.wikiquote.org/wiki/Albert_Schweitzer

An Outline Biography: Albert Schweitzer
http://www.age-of-the-sage.org/philosophy/schweitzer.html

LucidCafe: Albert Schweitzer
http://www.lucidcafe.com/library/96jan/schweitzer.html

Schweitzer: The Quest of the Historical Jesus
A Critical Study of its Progress from Reimarus to Wrede http://www.earlychristianwritings.com/schweitzer/

Translated by W. Montgomery
From the First German Edition "Von Reimarus zu Wrede," 1906.
With a Preface by F. C. Burkitt, D.D.
First English Edition, 1910.

Albert Schweitzer and a Thoroughly Apocalyptic Jesus (and Paul) https://jamestabor.com/albert-schweitzer-and-a-thoroughly-apocalyptic-jesus-and-paul/

N.T. Wright: The Historical Jesus and Christian Theology (1995) [Recommended] http://ntwrightpage.com/2016/07/12/the-historical-jesus-and-christian-theology/

Excerpt:

Thus far, so much we may say of the history—which is, of course, completely theological, both in itself and in our reading of it. I turn, in conclusion, to three wider remarks, again about history and theology.

First, Schweitzer was right to see that his eschatological Jesus would shake comfortable Western orthodoxy to its foundations. I have modified his scheme by interpreting apocalyptic historically, but the Jesus that I discover remains shocking. Western orthodoxy has for too long had an overly lofty, detached, and oppressive view of God. It has approached Christology by assuming this view of God, and has tried to fit Jesus into it. Hardly surprisingly, the result has been a docetic Jesus; this in turn generated Reimarus's protest, not least because of the social and cultural nonsense which the combination of deism and docetism reinforced. That combination remains powerful and still needs a powerful challenge. My proposal, then, is not that we assume that we know what the word "God" means, managing somehow to fit Jesus into that. Instead, I suggest that we think historically about a young Jew, possessed of a desperately-risky— indeed, apparently crazy—vocation, riding into Jerusalem in tears, denouncing the Temple, dining once more with his friends, and dying on a Roman cross, and that we somehow allow our meaning for the word "God" to be re-centered around that point, Second, the story of Jesus does not generate a set of theological propositions, a "New Testament Theology." It generates, as Schweitzer saw with prophetic clarity, a set of tasks. The great exegetical mistake of the century (perpetrated by Schweitzer himself)—the idea that first-century Jews (including Jesus) expected the end of the world and were disappointed has so occupied the minds of scholars that the real problem of delay has gone almost unnoticed, and people now come upon it as though it were a novelty. If for Jesus, and indeed for the whole early church for which we have any real evidence, the God of Israel defeated evil once and for all on the cross, then why does evil still exist in the world? Was Jesus, after all, a failure? The New Testament answers this question with one voice. The cross and resurrection won the victory over evil, but it if the task of the Spirit, and those led by the Spirit, to implement that victory in and for all the world. This task demands a freshly-drawn worldview: new praxis, stories, symbols, and answers. These come together into a fresh vision of God in which—precisely because of this re-discovery of who God is—history, theology, spirituality, and vocation recover their proper relationship. For Jesus's followers, finding out who Jesus was in his historical context meant and means discovering their own task within their own contents.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

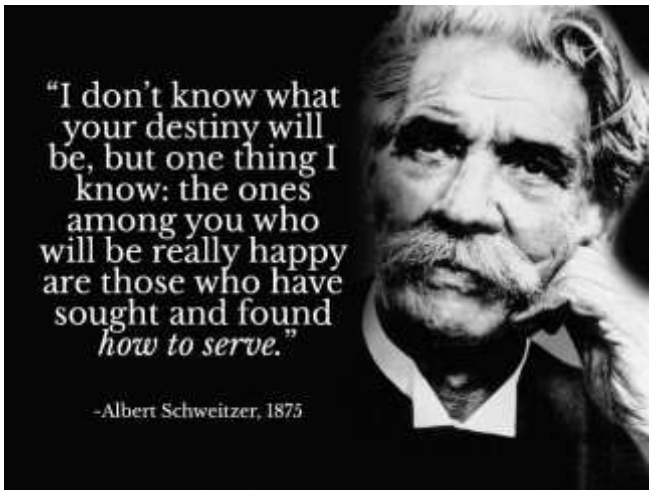
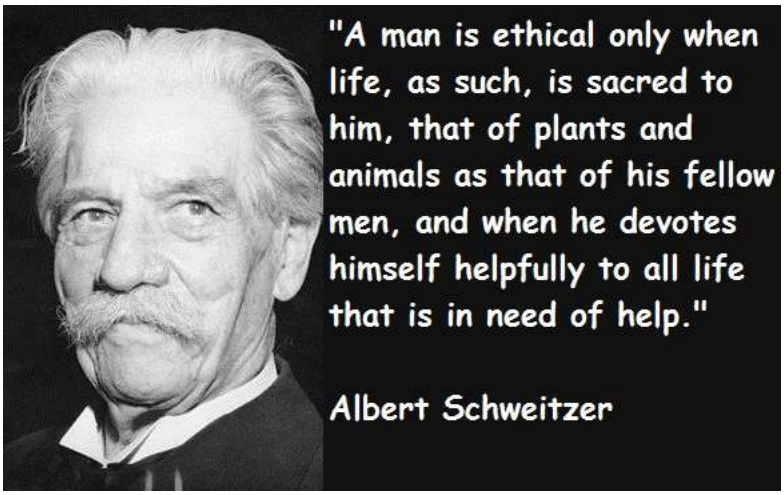
Third, and last. Several first-century Jews other than Jesus held and acted upon remarkable and subversive views. Why should Jesus be any more than one of the most remarkable of them? The answer must hinge upon the resurrection. If nothing happened to the body of Jesus, I cannot see why any of his implicit or explicit claims should be regarded as true. What is more, I cannot as a historian see why anyone would have continued to belong to his movement and regard him as its messiah. There were several other messianic or quasi-messianic movements within a hundred years on either side of Jesus. Routinely, they ended with the leader being killed by the authorities or by a rival group. If your messiah is killed, naturally you conclude that he was not the messiah. Some of those movements continued to exist; where they did, they took a new leader from the same family. (Note, however, that nobody ever said James, the brother of Jesus, was the messiah.) Such groups did not suffer from that blessed twentieth-century disease of cognitive dissonance. In particular, they did not go around saying that their messiah had been raised from the dead. I agree with Paula Fredriksen: the early Christians really did believe that Jesus had been raised bodily from the dead.10 What is more, I cannot make sense of the whole picture, historically or theologically, unless I say that they were right.

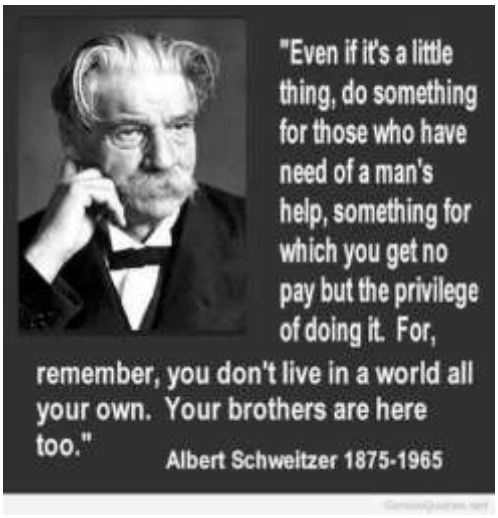
 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



Bach's Organ Works Played by Albert Schweitzer – 1935 (Audio)
http://publicdomainreview.org/collections/bachs-organ-works-played-by-albert-schweitzer-1935/



AllMusic: Albert Schweitzer – Works of Back (Audio)
http://www.allmusic.com/album/albert-schweitzer-plays-organ-works-mw0002031808



Videos re: Albert Schweitzer
https://duckduckgo.com/?t=palemoon&q=albert+schweitzer&iax=1&ia=videos

Dr. Albert Schweitzer - Full Documentary
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Gf4B9v0s0CY [Video]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Albert Schweitzer (1875–1965): A reverence for life

https://www.ncbi.nlm.nih.gov/pmc/articles/PMC4291958/

Excerpt:

MULTITALENTED

Albert Schweitzer, born on January 14, 1875 in Alsace, Germany (now a part of France), was the son of a Lutheran minister and member of a family of ministers, scholars and musicians, which included a famous cousin, Jean-Paul Sartre. As a child, Schweitzer played the organ and piano, and was only nine when he first performed at his father's church. His musical talent earned him international recognition. Although he dedicated his life to the healing profession, he continued to perform as an organist throughout his life, even publishing a book on organ construction and a biography on Bach.

In 1893, Schweitzer enrolled at the University of Strasbourg. He received a doctorate in philosophy in 1899 and a teaching degree in theology the following year. Following in the footsteps of his father, Schweitzer became the pastor of Saint Nicholas Church in Strasbourg and worked at the Theological College of Saint Thomas for nearly a decade. During that time, he published, among other works, a scholarly text entitled The Quest of the Historical Jesus.

In 1904, Schweitzer experienced a turning point in his life after reading an article published by the Paris Missionary Society, which highlighted an urgent need for physicians in Gabon, a French colony in Africa. The article so moved him that he immediately decided to pursue a medical career, much to the disappointment of his family, colleagues and friend – the only exception being a rare woman named Helene Bresslau, whom he eventually married. A determined Schweitzer re-entered the University of Strasbourg in 1905 at the age of 30, funding his medical education with fees from concert performances and lectures. Eight years later, he graduated with specialisations in tropical medicine and surgery. Incredibly, the Paris Missionary Society initially rejected his application to join its programme in Africa, fearing that other 'liberals and radicals' would follow suit. However, the Schweitzers agreed to raise their own funds to cover the first two years of expenses, which caused the Paris Missionary Society to relent. In March 1913, Dr and Mrs Schweitzer left for Africa to build a hospital at Lambaréné in the French Congo, and according to historical records, the work had started in a modified chicken coop.

AFRICA

Schweitzer's arrival in Africa was beset with challenges. Within a year, World War I broke out, and being German citizens, the Schweitzers were considered enemies of France. In 1917, they were interned as prisoners of war, first in the Pyrenees, then in a former mental institution at Saint Remy, where Vincent van Gogh was confined during his last months of life. Upon an early release, the Schweitzers returned to Europe and remained there for the next six years. During that time, Dr Schweitzer maintained his medical skills as well as his pastoral and musical interests, writing several texts, including On the Edge of the Primeval Forest, The Decay and Restoration of Civilization, Civilization and Ethics, and Christianity and the Religions of the World. Schweitzer finally returned to Lambaréné in 1924 and remained there for the rest of his life. Unfortunately, his wife Helene could not remain by his side, as she had contracted tuberculosis during their earlier stay at Lambaréné, and was not well enough to withstand the rigorous living conditions in the jungles of Africa. It was a difficult separation for the family, and Schweitzer had to make do with letters and infrequent visits. In due course, their daughter Rhena moved to Africa to work with her father and eventually took charge of the mission.

While being transported upstream on the Ogowe River from Lambaréné, Schweitzer honed his philosophy of 'reverence for life'. He reasoned that the morality of man should extend to the entire creation of the universe and that relationships should be both deepened and widened, with each person acting in accordance with his beliefs, as he himself had done. Schweitzer also believed that all should live a portion of their lives for others. His philosophy embraced not only humans but also all living creatures, as was demonstrated by the multitude of animals that populated the hospital grounds…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Albert Schweitzer, circa 1960 in Lambaréné, Gabon, where he established a hospital.
Photo by Rolls Press/Popperfoto/Getty Images

Schweitzer.org
http://www.schweitzer.org/

The Schweitzer Institute
http://www.iseps.org.uk/

The Albert Schweitzer Fellowship
http://www.schweitzerfellowship.org/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Paul Tillich

Wikipedia: Paul Tillich

Paul Johannes Tillich (August 20, 1886 – October 22, 1965) was a German-American Christian existentialist philosopher and Lutheran Protestant theologian who is widely regarded as one of the most influential theologians of the twentieth century.

Among the general public, he is best known for his works The Courage to Be (1952) and Dynamics of Faith (1957), which introduced issues of theology and modern culture to a general readership. In academic theology, he is best known for his major three-volume work Systematic Theology (1951–63) in which he developed his "method of correlation", an approach of exploring the symbols of Christian revelation as answers to the problems of human existence raised by contemporary existential philosophical analysis

Method of correlation

The key to understanding Tillich's theology is what he calls the "method of correlation." It is an approach that correlates insights from Christian revelation with the issues raised by existential, psychological, and philosophical analysis.

Tillich states in the introduction to the Systematic Theology:

> Theology formulates the questions implied in human existence, and theology formulates the answers implied in divine self-manifestation under the guidance of the questions implied in human existence. This is a circle which drives man to a point where question and answer are not separated. This point, however, is not a moment in time.
>
> The Christian message provides the answers to the questions implied in human existence. These answers are contained in the revelatory events on which Christianity is based and are taken by systematic theology from the sources, through the medium, under the norm. Their content cannot be derived from questions that would come from an analysis of human existence. They are 'spoken' to human existence from beyond it, in a sense. Otherwise, they would not be answers, for the question is human existence itself

Theopedia: Paul Tillich

http://www.theopedia.com/paul-tillich

Excerpt:

Paul Johannes Tillich (1886-1965) was a German-American theologian and Christian existentialist philosopher. Tillich, along with contemporary Karl Barth, is considered by many as one of the most influential Protestant theologians of the twentieth century.

Tillich was born in Germany, in 1886. From 1904 to 1909 he studied at universities in Berlin, Tübingen, and Halle, and in 1910 he received the Ph. D. degree from the University of Breslau. He was ordained in the Lutheran Church in Berlin in 1912 and served as an army chaplain on the Western front during World War I.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

From 1924-25 Tillich was Associate Professor of Theology at the University of Marburg, from 1925-29 Professor of Philosophy and Religious Studies at the Dresden Institute of Technology, and from 1929-33, Professor of Philosophy at the University of Frankfurt.

In 1933 Tillich's position was suspended by the Nazi government. Later that year he accepted an invitation from Reinhold Niebuhr to teach at the Union Theological Seminary and moved to New York. He was Visiting Professor of Philosophy of Religion and Systematic Theology at Union Theological Seminary from 1933 to 1937 and continued there as a professor until 1955.

From 1955-62, he was University Professor at Harvard, and during his last three years, the Nuveen Professor Theology in the Divinity School, University of Chicago.

Who is Paul Tillich? (Slide presentation)
https://www.slideshare.net/jenrivamonte/paul-tillich

Paul Tillich – short intro
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=N_mTGP3dUb0 [Video]

Paul Tillich in Conversation (1956)
Part 1: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=56x_ZPrc0fQ [Video]

Part 2: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=ZkUXvHW1EBw [Video]

After a brief discussion about his background and the events and people which influenced his thoughts, the interview leads to Tillich explaining in basic, easy to understand terms his thoughts about Faith, Symbols, Ultimate Concerns, the Method of Correlation and the Protestant Principle. The video concludes with Tillich tying these ideas together in the Christian answer to the question of human estrangement from God and from ourselves and what we should be - which is what Tillich calls the new reality of our "New Being" found in Jesus Christ

Paul Tillich on Christian faith and symbolism (1950/60?)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=-UzPI3gKn_4 [Video] Talks about his book (including problem with title), The Protestant Era [PDF of Full Book]

Carl Rogers and Paul Tillich p.1 (1960)
P. 1: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=8gHSKdX66tY [Video]

P. 2: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=ilRzf6SRfZI [Video]

Paul Tillich: The New Being [web page]
http://www.holybooks.com/wp-content/uploads/The-New-Being-by-Paul-Tillich.pdf [PDF]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Paul Tillich: The Eternal Now [PDF]
http://www.mercaba.org/SANLUIS/Filosofia/autores/Contempor%c3%a1nea/Tillich/The%20eternal%20now.pdf

Paul Tillich: Systematic Theology: Reason & Revelation (Summary)
https://mtabaczek.files.wordpress.com/2012/02/paul-tillich.pdf [PDF]

Tillich: The Dynamics of Faith (Review)
http://alameda.peralta.edu/robert-johnson/files/2013/02/Dynamics-of-Faith.doc [MS Word doc]

Tillich's Dynamics of Faith (A Guide)
https://www.scribd.com/doc/51125597/A-Guide-to-Paul-Tillich-s-Dynamics-of-Faith

Paul Tillich: The Shaking of Foundations http://media.sabda.org/alkitab-2/Religion-Online.org%20Books/Tillich,%20Paul%20-%20The%20Shaking%20of%20the%20Foundations.pdf [PDF] (Full)

The Gospel According to Paul Tillich: Introduction (1)
http://www.jeremybouma.com/the-gospel-according-to-paul-tillich-introduction-1

The Gospel According to Paul Tillich: On the Human Condition, Sin (2)
http://www.jeremybouma.com/the-gospel-according-to-paul-tillich-on-the-human-condition-sin-2/

The Gospel According to Paul Tillich: On the Person and Work of Jesus Christ (3)
http://www.jeremybouma.com/the-gospel-according-to-paul-tillich-on-the-person-and-work-of-jesus-christ-3

The Gospel According to Paul Tillich: On Salvation (4) http://www.jeremybouma.com/the-gospel-according-to-paul-tillich-on-salvation-4

The Gospel According to Paul Tillich: Conclusion (5)
http://www.jeremybouma.com/the-gospel-according-to-paul-tillich-conclusion-5

The Christology of Paul Tillich: The New Being in Jesus as the Christ (Typed Paper)
http://www.etsjets.org/files/JETS-PDFs/1/1-2/BETS_1-2_15-23_Ficek.pdf [PDF]

Paul Tillich - The Dynamics of Faith (Review)
http://faculty.luther.edu/~kopfg/books/Kilcrease.html

100 Quotes by Paul Tillich
http://www.azquotes.com/author/14665-Paul_Tillich?p=3

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Existential Theology: Bultmann and Tillich

https://quizlet.com/140144489/unit-4-existential-theology-bultmann-and-tillich-flash-cards/

Paul Tillich: An Overview of His Theological Contributions

Introduction	This slideshow will give an overview of five main contributions that Paul Tillich makes to contemporary Theology: View of God as the "Ground of Being" Theological "Method of Correlation" View of Faith as "Ultimate Concern" View of the Relationship of Faith and History View of Christ as the "New Being"
God as the "Ground of Being"	- Tillich rejected two views of God that he regarded as inadequate: "naturalism" (God as a part of the natural world) and "supernaturalism" (God as a supernatural personal being who lives in a supernatural/heavenly realm) - Tillich believed that both of these views tend to make God as finite "thing" or "being" alongside other finite things, rather than regarding God properly as an infinite and transcending all individual beings" (emphasis on "transcendence") and yet present in all being (emphasis on "immanence")
God as the "Ground of Being" cont'd	- Tillich's alternative, then, is to regard God as the "Ground of Being"—that is the underlying source of Being and presence in Being, but not itself a Being. Another parallel term Tillich used for God is "Being Itself"—the very source and power of existence. - Tillich believed that if we regard God as anything other than the Ground of Being or Being Itself then we are speaking symbolically, rather than literally. --For example, if we speak of God as a Father that we can have a personal relationship with, Tillich thinks that is not a literal description of God (for he thinks that would be making God to much like a human being), but only a symbolic picture of God that might serve some religious purpose for us. --As one can see, Tillich's view of God is quite different from how most Christians view God.
The "Method of Correlation"	- Tillich's concept of God is a central part of the content of his Theology (and I will have more to say about matters of content in a moment), but we will now turn to describe part of his theological method, the way in which he does Theology. - At its core, Tillich's method is a method of correlation. That is, it attempts to correlate human existential questions (basic questions pertaining to human existence) with the answers provided by divine revelation (Christ, Scripture, etc.). This generally implies that tries to balance the contributions of Scripture, tradition, reason and experience more or less equally (although reason and experience tend to be more dominant in practice).
Method of Correlation	- Tillich believed that the best way to uncover the deep existential questions of humanity in any culture is to examine the intellectual reflections of that culture: its art, its literature, and especially its philosophy. - Accordingly, Tillich's theology was profoundly engaged the intellectual currents of his day in many different disciplines. He was called by some "the apostle to the intellectuals," because he took the concerns of intellectuals seriously and often revised Christianity in a way that would meet these concerns.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

	- Theologians have responded to Tillich's method of correlation in different ways: -- Some have regarded Tillich as striking an ideal balance between human questions and divine answers. -- Some, usually those more liberal than Tillich, regarded him as too confident in the ability of God's revelation to provide answers (or at least of us humans being able to know that revelation). -- Some, usually those more conservative than Tillich, regarded him as too confident in the ability of humanity to ask the right questions (Barth believed that God needed to reveal to humanity what the right questions are, not just the answers to our human questions)
Faith as "Ultimate Concern"	- In his book Dynamics of Faith (see the selection in the Packet) and elsewhere, Tillich defined faith as "ultimate concern." - This means that whatever a person is ultimately concerned about is the object of their faith, their "god." Some examples are: -- God (the "Ground of Being") -- Success -- Money -- Nation -- Personal Pleasure - Since everyone has some "ultimate concern" in their lives, everyone has some form of faith. - Tillich believed that only when God was our ultimate concern could we have "authentic faith," i.e. faith in that which is infinite. Otherwise, we have an idolatrous faith in that which is merely finite like ourselves. (This is similar to the Apostle Paul's concept of humanity worshiping created things rather than the creator--see Romans 1:18ff)
Faith and History	- Like Bultmann (and unlike Pannenberg and others), Tillich believed that Christian faith (the Christian's ultimate concern) and history (historical facts and the scholarly attempt to uncover them) were basically independent and unrelated to one another. - This meant that, for Tillich, a Christian could still have faith in God and Christ without believing that the historical man Jesus Christ even existed, let alone rose from the dead (see Miller/Grenz, 65-68, and the the joke on 222, footnote #21). - In other words, one could believe in the Christ idea or Christ principle (see next slide) without being concerned with the historicity of the episodes described in the Bible. One could still experience Christ as a meaningful idea or presence, one who made an existential difference.
The Christ as the New Being	- For Tillich, Jesus was basically an "ordinary" man who became "the Christ" when God adopted him as his Son (close to the "adoptionist" heresy of the early church, which denies Christ's pre-existence). As one who takes on the office/role of the Christ, Jesus: -- was perfectly united with God, the Ground of all Being -- overcomes the existential problem of human estrangement from God (This is his way of speaking about Christ overcoming sin.) - Tillich summed up these ideas by calling Jesus, the Christ, the New Being, one who signifies and makes possible as new way of existing in relationship to God, a way that heals the rift between God and humanity (see M/G, 61f and B/J, 88

Paul Tillich and Process Theology
http://cdn.theologicalstudies.net/36/36.3/36.3.4.pdf [PDF]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Tillich: Perspectives on 19th & 20th century protestant theology (1963)

http://daurril.org/OCRs/Tillich/Perspectives/index.htm [Recommended]

Edited and with an Introduction by CARL E. BRAATEN

This major posthumous work of Paul Tillich presents, in the author's words, "the drama of the rise of humanism in the midst of Christianity." Tillich shares with us his reflections and perspectives on major periods, trends, movements, and figures in two centuries of Protestantism as it underwent a "continuous series of attempts to unite the diverging elements of the modem mind."

PERSPFCTIVES can also be read as the mirroring of those sources which exerted the greatest impact on Tillich's mind in his earlier formative years. The author traces the philosophy of religion, dogmatic elements within the church, and historical criticism of the Bible and tradition. These chapters document clearly how Tillich's thought moves with penetrating insight and empathy on the boundary between theology and philosophy.

The book begins with the period of Protestant Orthodoxy and shows how the Enlightenment presupposed and rejected both. A major chapter is devoted to Kant and the philosophy of the Enlightenment: it becomes clear how Tillich is both the heir and the severest critic of the Enlightenment tradition. Tillich goes on to describe the reaction of the Romanticists against the Enlightenment, the emergence of the two great syntheses of Schleiermacher and Hegel, and the subsequent breakdown of these systems.

With an economy of words, Tillich gets to the heart of the thinking of such radical, prophetic voices as Schelling and Kierkegaard, Marx and Nietzsche, Bultmann and Barth. Every paragraph opens a new window into the profound mind of this masterful interpreter of the Protestant heritage, as well as bringing the reader into a lively encounter with the voices of the recent past. The whole book is a demonstration of Tillich's dictum that every interpretation is a living union of the interpreted and the interpreter.

Note: Vol II, includes links to videos by Tillich

Note: This is recommended not because of Tillich's ideas, but for elucidating the ideas of others.

Tillich.org

The Impossible God of Paul Tillich

http://www.patheos.com/blogs/camelswithhammers/2011/12/the-impossible-god-of-paul-tillich/

Paul Tillich: Theism Rewritten for an Age of Science

http://www.godweb.org/Tillich.htm

Excerpt:

The theologian dies. His wife returns home and walks upstairs to his desk. Hannah Tillich describes what she discovered:

> I unlocked the drawers. All the girls' photos fell out, letters and poems, passionate appeal and disgust. Beside the drawers, which were supposed to contain his spiritual harvest, the books he had written and the unpublished manuscripts all lay in unprotected confusion. I was tempted to > place between the sacred pages of his highly esteemed lifework those obscene signs of the real life that he had transformed into the gold of abstraction--King Midas of the spirit.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

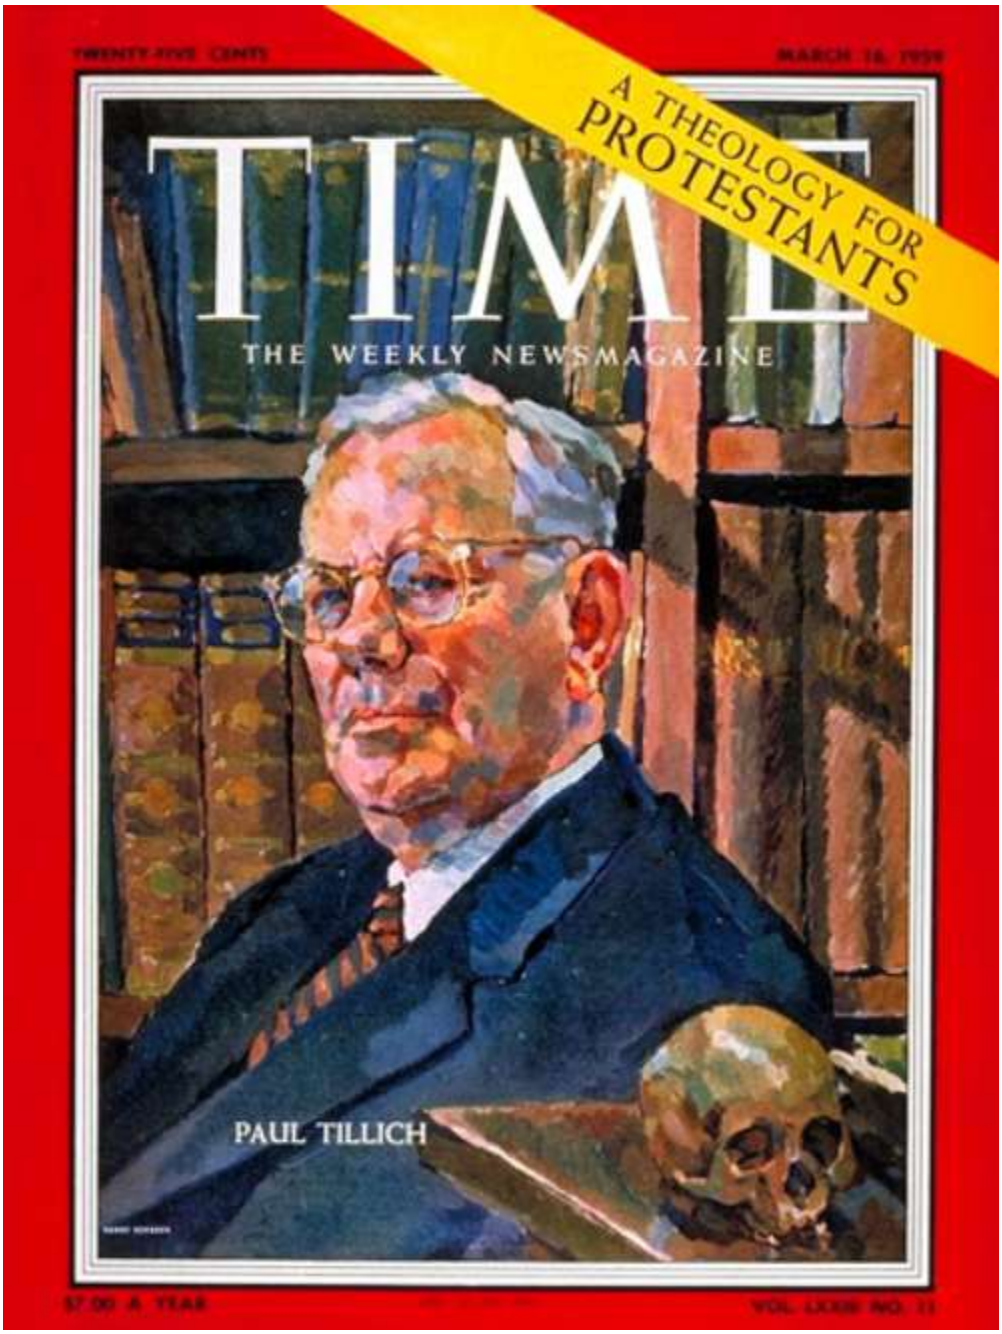
Hannah Tillich's autobiography contains a brief, brutally honest account of the theologian's personal life. It portrays the Paulus she knew as husband and lover; it shows in concrete detail the situation of passion in which many of Tillich's ideas were conceived and nurtured. Like no other record in western literature, From Time to Time reveals what it was like to be life's companion to a titan of the spirit.

Reading this book, many would discount Tillich as a theologian. After all, why is a teacher in the church of God defiant of so many of the rules in conventional morality? Why the extra-marital relationships, the menage-a-trois, the experimentation with drugs, the Marxism, and, most remarkable of all, the development of a theological system that rests upon the premise that God does not exist!

When Hannah's book is read alongside all the other Tillich books and, when the patterns of his whole life and work emerge from the immediate passions of their marriage, the answers to these questions become obvious. Hannah opened the desk containing Tillich's treasury of love letters nestled alongside his theological writings, and she has this fantasy. With a depth of conflicting emotion she imagines placing "between the sacred pages of his highly esteemed lifework those obscene signs of the real life that he had transformed into the gold of abstraction." These words are descriptive. It would not be far off the mark to say that Tillich did turn the deepest passions of life into the gold of abstraction. That is exactly what a theologian is supposed to do. The fire of religious feeling -- faith and doubt, wonder, and awe -- must be translated into an orderly pattern so that one may see and understand the fire's source. If one wants to learn from the religious experience of another person, one must have the instruments of thought necessary to discern what may be of value in a particular experience and what may not be of value.

Historically, the church has lost its way when its abstractions were no longer in touch with "real life" and no longer served a human need. Whenever the words of piety, sermons, or prayers are invoked in mindless repetition and whenever the words of the theologians no longer bear any relationship to the actual passions of a particular people, then it is time to mourn for the church of Christ.



One of Tillich's greatest contributions to theology, far greater than his mastery of abstraction, was his demonstration of exactly how deeply religious passion is rooted in human life itself. Tillich would have considered it a compliment to say that he succeeded in making the deepest thoughts and feelings accessible to understanding. Of course, Hannah's comment was not meant to be complimentary. She was referring to the tragedy of Midas, suggesting exactly what many of Tillich's theological opponents have charged: that he transformed life itself into an abstraction; that he turned the reality of God into the deadly gold of fanciful theory.

Thus, in the bitterness of her mourning Hannah imagines placing the love letters in between the pages of his theology, and, ironically, that act would have been appropriate. For, as Tillich struggled with the many loves and lovers in his life, he also struggled with the deepest and most imponderable love of all, the love of God. Tillich's most formidable work, the weighty, three volumes of his Systematic Theology could be described as a thoughtful record of one man's exploration into the depths of love. What Hannah says of the love letters can also be said of the theology. In the papers contained within Tillich's secret desk she could see "the many-colored flow of emotions he had aroused and that had aroused him -- the red of passion, the sharp poisonous yellow of competition, the black of despair, the blue of devotion, and even the white of innocence he had not been able to destroy."(2) There were these and many other shades and hues of emotion represented in the letters and in the theology. For in his writings Tillich was able to discern the inner symmetry of the human spirit; he was able to explore the geography of human consciousness itself. In so doing he drew upon the newest of the life sciences, depth psychology. Almost single-handedly Tillich was able to separate the science of psychoanalysis from the atheism of its founder, Sigmund Freud, and to use its powerful tools of analysis in rebuilding the very faith which Freud so confidently assigned to oblivion. Though one may not find in Tillich a life one wants to emulate, one most certainly finds in his theology a number of insights indispensable to the renewal of religion in an age of science…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Time Cover: March 16, 1959

Paul Tillich, Death and Eternal Life
http://www.geocities.ws/bulmabriefs144/PaulTillich.html

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Personal Life:

https://www.thefamouspeople.com/profiles/paul-tillich-4051.php

- In 1914, he married a woman named Margarethe Grethi Wever. She later conceived a baby from another affair and the couple separated in 1919 and eventually divorced.
- In 1924, he married his second wife, Hannah Werner-Gottschow.
- He died at the age of 79, due to a heart attack he had suffered ten days ago. He was laid to rest at the Paul Tillich Park in New Harmony, Indiana.

Paul and Hannah Tillich: Their relationship, sexual affair, and personality

http://szezeng.blogspot.com/2010/10/paul-tillich-hannah-tillich-their.html

Two Fools: Karl Marx and Paul Tillich

http://patriotsandliberty.com/lindas-latest/2013/8/9/two-fools-karl-marx-and-paul-tillich

Book Review - Paul Tillich First-Hand: A Memoir of the Harvard Years

http://people.bu.edu/wwildman/tillich/resources/review_cali-grace_paultillichfirsthand_xu.htm

How close is Paul Tillich's work to (Zen) Buddhism?

https://sunwalked.wordpress.com/2012/08/24/zen-masters-talk-about-nothing-but-the-existence-of-god-in-tillichs-sense/

Excerpt:

First some of Tillich's central ideas:

Tillich presents ……. God as Being-Itself, Ground of Being, Power of Being.

What makes Tillich's ontological view of God (RP ontology = being) different from theological theism is that it transcends it by being the foundation or ultimate reality that "precedes" all beings.

Just as Being for Heidegger is ontologically prior to conception, Tillich views God to be beyond Being-Itself, manifested in the structure of beings.[42] God is not a supernatural entity among other entities. Instead, God is the ground upon which all beings exist.

We cannot perceive God as an object which is related to a subject because God precedes the subject-object dichotomy.[42]

Thus Tillich dismisses a literalistic Biblicism. Instead of rejecting the notion of personal God, however, Tillich sees it as a symbol that points directly to the Ground of Being.[43]

Since the Ground of Being ontologically precedes reason, it cannot be comprehended since comprehension presupposes the subject-object dichotomy.

Tillich disagreed with any literal philosophical and religious statements that can be made about God.

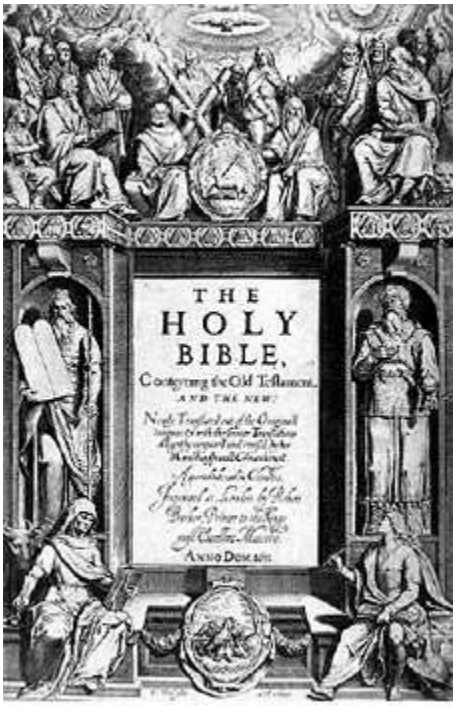
Such literal statements attempt to define God and lead not only to anthropomorphism but also to a philosophical mistake that Immanuel Kant warned against, that setting limits against the transcendent inevitably leads to contradictions.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Any statements about God are simply symbolic, but these symbols are sacred in the sense that they function to participate or point to the Ground of Being.

Tillich insists that anyone who participates in these symbols is empowered by the Power of Being, which overcomes and conquers nonbeing and meaninglessness.

RP – A few comments:



Tillich's 'pointings' are no different to those of a Zen master.

Buddhist teachers, especially Zen masters talk about nothing but the existence of God – and how to be a drop lost in the Ocean – until the laundry needs doing

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

King James and KJV Bible History and Controversies (King James Only [KJO] Issues)

KJV Bible 1611

Title page of the first edition of the King James Version in 1611.

KJV Bibles - Original 1611 Preface
Alternate Source with Commentary
KJ Instructions to Translators #2 Translators #2 #3 #4

KJV Bible 1611 Marginal Notes
History, Commentary and Critiques
The Correct Meaning of "Church" and "Ecclesia"
#2 #3 #4 #5 #6 #7 [PDF]

7 Things You May Not Know About the KJV (see also the comments section for a good discussion)

10 Things You Need to Know About the KJV

The REAL 1611 King James Version - What will you find in it? Additional Margin Notes Viewpoint

Notes on the King James Translation and the So-Called Textus Receptus

The Debate Over the King James Version

The King James Bible Controversy (PDF)

KJ Only -- Shock and Awe (by a Textus Receptus advocate - this discusses some of the main personalities/problems within the KJO movement -- long article)

Removing Verses from the Bible (KJV vs more modern versions)

The Majority Text and the Original -- Are They Identical? (includes discussion of their relation to Textus Receptus; also Byzantine vs Alexandrian)

FAQs on the Textus Receptus and the KJV

Video: Dr. James White (NASB, Reformed) with Steven Anderson (KJV-Only, Anti-Calvinism, Post-Trib) - Full Interview 'NWO Bible Versions' (2.5 hour discussion, Youtube)

Is Your Modern Translation Corrupt? (by James White) [Recommended]

Conspiracy Behind New Bible Translations

Is "Lucifer" the Devil in Isaiah 14:12? - The KJV Argument against Modern Translations [Recommended]

Demystifying the Controversy Over the Textus Receptus and the KJV

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

What About the Majority Text?

Textual Choices and Bible Versions

The Center for Study and Preservation of the Majority Text

KJO page, including "Confessions by a KJO Advocate"

Fundamentalism and the King James Version: How a Venerable English Translation Became a Litmus Test for Orthodoxy [PDF]

The Best Cure for KJVOisms: A Real 1611 KJV

KJO Debate Blog Interview: Dr. Maurice Robinson on the superiority of the Byzantine Textform - Part 1, Part 2, Part 3 [Recommended] [Different site interview]

KJO Debate Blog - Additional discussions regarding TR and KJO [more] [Recommended]

The Geneva Bible and Its Influence on the King James Bible http://founders.org/fj86/the-geneva-bible-and-its-influence-on-the-king-james-bible/

Textual Differences Between the KJV and the Geneva Bibles
http://bibleversiondiscussionboard.yuku.com/topic/5708/20-Textual-differences-between-Geneva-Bible-and-KJV

The Bishops' Bible and Its Influence on the King James Bible
https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Bishops%27_Bible

What Makes the King James Version Great http://www.reformation21.org/articles/what-makes-the-king-james-version-great.php

In the Beginning Was the Word (re: 400th anniversary of the KJV and its history) http://www.vision.org/visionmedia/religion-history-of-king-james-bible/50299.aspx

The King James Bible – New World Encyclopedia
http://www.newworldencyclopedia.org/entry/King_James_Bible

On the King James Bible Versus Other Translations Controversy
http://www.tentmaker.org/Biblematters/King-James-version.htm

Founders Journal – KJV - 400 Years
http://founders.org/main/wp-content/uploads/fj86.pdf [PDF]

Bible Version and KJO Information
http://www.unboundscriptures.com/

What's the Big Deal About the KJV? (Pro-KJO)
http://bigdealkjv.com/

Bible Versions: What's the Difference (Pro-KJO)
http://www.beyondthefundamentals.com/bible-versions.html

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Answer Book by Samuel C. Gipp (Extreme KJO advocate) http://samgipp.com/answerbook/

http://www.chick.com/catalog/books/0158.asp

http://www.jesus-is-savior.com/Bible/Gipp/ab_toc.htm

http://www.seawaves.us/na/web4/answerbook.html

Sam Gipp vs James White
https://www.baptistboard.com/threads/sam-gipp-vs-james-white.71856/

Ankerberg Show: KJV Discussion Complete Scholars' Position [Recommended]
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=320N_Kz9H0A [Video] (Over three hours with KJO advocates such as Sam Gipp and Bible translators for NASB, NIV, NKJV, etc., including Dan Wallace, plus James White, etc.)

Daniel Wallace: Inspiration, Preservation and NT Textual Criticism
https://faculty.gordon.edu/hu/bi/ted_hildebrandt/NTeSources/NTArticles/GTJ-NT/Wallace-Inspiration-GTJ.pdf [PDF]

See also:

Bible: Reliability

Bible: NT Accuracy

Bible: Dating Books of NT

See also my other separate reference resources*:

Christian Scholarship – Biblical, Theological and Philosophical

The Complete Sayings of Jesus – NKJV with Appendix

(Note: NKJV is primary text to make reading easier, except when it varies significantly from the original KJV or a different translation text is clearer and/or more accurate.)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Thou, Thee, Thy, Thine and Ye; and the Advantage of King James English

The English words "thou, thee, thy and thine" are translated from an emphatic Greek and Hebrew personal pronoun, stressing the identity of the one being addressed to the exclusion of all others.

A "pronoun" is a word that "stands in for" another noun or noun-phrase. A "personal pronoun" is one which stands for a person. The personal pronouns are classified as first person, second person and third person by their relationship to the one speaking.

1st Person - The speaker himself, and any others he may include as part of his group.
2nd Person - Those to whom the speaker is speaking.
3rd Person - Those about whom the speaker is speaking.

Thus, we have the following table which we can construct in English, once we differentiate between the purpose of the various pronouns:

		Nominative	Objective	Possessive
1st Person	singular:	I	Me	My (or Mine)
	plural:	We	Us	Our (or Ours)
2nd Person	singular:	Thou	Thee	Thy (or Thine)
	plural:	Ye	You	Your (or yours)
3rd Person	singular:	He/She/It	Him/Her/It	His/Hers/Its plural:	They	Them	Their (or Theirs)

See the full article for examples of verses expressing the importance of using thou, thee, thy, thine and ye:
http://www.ecclesia.org/truth/thou.html

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Bible Versions and History

6 Version English Interliner NT Bible [PDF] (Wycliff, Purvey-Wycliff, Tyndale (1534 and 1526 variants), Geneva, JKV)

The Bible Reader's Museum (Links to Bibles on the Internet)

Bible Researcher (Directory of Bibles on the Internet)

History of the English Bible (Wallace)

History of the English Bible

History of the Bible and Flowchart [Flowchart Image (PNG)]

History of Bible Flowchart (KJV-Only, Fundamentalist) (Flowchart has so many issues with it that I can't begin to list them, but provided FYI)

Bible Timelines with World History

English Bible Translation Prior to the KJV (Ohio State Univ.) (includes images of original pages from corresponding translations)

Early English Bibles

Bible NT Manuscripts - List of Doctrinally Significant Variants -- Pro Textus Receptus / Byzantine Textform (Word *.doc file) [Alternate link]

Trinitarian Bible Society - Holds to Authorized Version supremacy that is not divinely inspired (original Masoretic Hebrew/Aramaic and Byzantine Greek Received Texts are divinely inspired [ref.])

History of the New Testament Scriptures - Pro KJV - Textus Receptus, etc. (has some good background information regardless)

Daniel Wallace: Pope Francis, The Lord's Prayer, and Bible Translation (2017)
https://danielbwallace.com/2017/12/12/pope-francis-the-lords-prayer-and-bible-translation/

15 Myths About Bible Translation

Five More Myths about Bible Translations and the Transmission of the Text

Bible Translations Source Table
http://www.millpark.org/bible/doctrine-critical/Hort_and_Westcott_and_RT_versions.html

Faithful Translations
http://www.millpark.org/bible/doctrine-critical/_FAITHFUL_TRANSLATIONS.html

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Daniel Wallace: Choosing Bible Translations

https://www.christianity.com/bible/choosing-a-bible-translation-11631126.html

https://www.hopefaithprayer.com/books/Choosing-Translation-Daniel-B-Wallace.pdf [PDF]

Excerpt:

Anyone who has learned a second language knows that a word-for-word translation is impossible much or most of the time. Idioms and colloquialisms in a language need to be paraphrased to make sense in another language.

Even the KJV translators realized this. In a couple of places in the Old Testament, the Hebrew text literally reads, "God's nostrils enlarged." But, the KJV translates this as, "God became angry"—which is what the expression means. In Matthew 1:18 the KJV says that Mary was found to be with child. But the Greek is quite different and quite graphic: "Mary was having it in the belly!" In many places in Paul's letters, the KJV reads, "God forbid!" But the original has neither "God" nor "forbid." Literally, it says, "May it never be!" (as most modern translations render it).

Therefore, when we speak of a translation being faithful to the original, we need to clarify the question: Is it faithfulness to form? Or, faithfulness to meaning? Sometimes faithfulness to one involves lack of fidelity to the other. There are problems with each of the translation philosophies. The KJV, with its attempted fidelity to form, does not make sense in some passages. (In 1611, these instances did not make sense either). Likewise, The NASB often contains wooden, stilted English.

On the other hand, functional equivalence translations sometimes go too far in their interpretation of a particular phrase. The NIV, in Eph 6:6, tells slaves to "Obey (their masters) not only to win their favor." However, the word "only" is not in the Greek, and I suspect that Paul did not mean to imply it either. This reveals one of the problems with dynamic equivalence translations: the translators don't always know whether their interpretation is correct. The addition of one interpretively-driven word can change the entire meaning of a clause or a passage.

Some versions don't interpret—they distort. Some are notorious for omitting references to Christ's blood, or for attempting to deny his deity. In these instances, the translators are neither faithful to the form or the meaning. They have perverted the Word of God.

Yet, functional equivalence translators who are honest with the text often make things very clear. In Phil 2:6, for example, the NIV tells us that Jesus was "in [his] very nature God." But most formal equivalence translations state that he was in the form of God. The problem with these formally correct translations is that they are misleading: the Greek word for "form" here means essence or nature.

A formal equivalence translation lets the reader interpret for himself or herself. However, the reader often does not have the background information or the tools to interpret accurately. The net result is that he or she runs the risk of misunderstanding the text, simply because their translation was not clear enough.

On the other hand, a functional equivalence translation is usually clear and quite understandable. But if the translators missed the point of the original (either intentionally or unintentionally) they may communicate an idea foreign to the biblical text.

What Bible Should I Own? (Dan Wallace)

https://credohouse.org/blog/what-bible-should-i-own-dan-wallace

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

See also:

Bible: Reliability

Bible: NT Accuracy

Bible: Dating Books of NT

See also my other separate reference resources*:

Christian Scholarship – Biblical, Theological and Philosophical

The Complete Sayings of Jesus – NKJV with Appendix

(Note: NKJV is primary text to make reading easier, except when it varies significantly from the original KJV or a different translation text is clearer and/or more accurate.)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Eschatology (End Times Theology / Doctrine)

Amillennialism, Premillennialism and Postmillenialism (Eschatology)

NOTE: These links and charts (including Comparisons of Millennial Views) relating to premillennialism, amillennialism and postmillennialism are included because our [view, philosophy, Biblical interpretation] of eschatology [i.e., study of end times] will directly impact our understanding and timings/sequencing of the events that make up the last days or end times.

When reading some of the articles included in this document (or elsewhere for that matter), it will greatly benefit your understanding if you know the eschatological mindset upon which the author is basing his/her conclusions and opinions.

See also* the Two Major Systems of Theology under which these views can be associated.

CAUTION: This section is being included to help explain the variation in end-time beliefs you will encounter in your independent readings. While these concepts are interesting and important to understand, they are NOT basic salvation effecting doctrines. (It is assumed that for this reason Randy Alcorn avoided them as much as possible in his book on Heaven. See note below of Randy's video statement and how he handled his position.)

Eschatology, the doctrine of the end times, could take another couple thousand pages and still not cover everything that is written and discussed from a wide variation of points of view and beliefs. While all the end times doctrine can not all be correct, some have gained more traction and acceptance than others. Although a particular end times doctrine may be false, most of them are not a "damnable" doctrine, which is a doctrine that will cause a soul to be lost! Therefore, we are only devoting this one section to the topic and providing links to additional online information for you to pursue as interested.

See also: Millennial Comparison Charts (Tables),

Millennial Views (Graphs), Comparison of Eschatological Views,

Tribulation Beliefs, Rapture Theories, Rapture Views (N.T. Wright and others),

What Determines Your Millennial Position

What is Millennialism?

https://www.gotquestions.org/millenarianism.html

Answer: Millenarianism, generally speaking, is belief in a future positive transformation of society. Christian millenarianism, also known as millennialism, is the belief that there will be a 1,000-year period in the future in which Christ will literally rule on earth. The word millenarianism comes from the Latin word for "1,000"—millennium. Millennialism is also sometimes called chiliasm, which is from the Greek word for "1,000." Those who hold this belief are called millennialists or millenarians (not to be confused with Millennials, who are the generation of people born between the years 1980 and 2000).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The millennium (from the Latin mille, "thousand," and annus, "year"). It is taken literally by some as 1,000 actual years, while others interpret it metaphorically as a long but undetermined period of time. There are three basic approaches to the subject of the millennium:

(1) Amillennialism: The millennium describes the present reign of Christ in heaven over his realm (Mt 28:18–20), along with the souls of deceased believers, and in the hearts and lives of living believers on earth (see also note on 1Co 15:25). The present form of God's kingdom will be followed by Christ's return, the general resurrection, the final judgment and Christ's continuing reign over the perfect kingdom on the new earth in the eternal state.

(2) Premillennialism: The present form of God's kingdom is moving toward a grand climax when Christ will return, the first resurrection will occur and his kingdom will find expression in a literal, visible reign of peace and righteousness on the earth in space-time history. After the final resurrection, the last judgment and the renewal of the heavens and the earth, this future, temporal kingdom will merge into the eternal kingdom, and the Lord will reign forever on the new earth.

(3) Postmillennialism: The world will eventually be Christianized through the preaching of the gospel, resulting in a long period of peace and prosperity called the millennium. This future period will close with Christ's second coming, the resurrection of the dead, the final judgment and the eternal state.

Source: NIV Study Bible Notes

Eschatology (Study Guide) (Singapore Bible College)
http://biblestudydownloads.org/files/eng/cn/Eschatology%20%28High%20Res%2047%20MB%29-388_eng_cn_8965_v1.0.0.pdf [PDF]

http://biblestudydownloads.org/files/eng/cn/Eschatology_eng_cn_5065_v1.0.0.doc (MS Word doc)

Five Views of the Millennium (Power Point)
[dispensational premillennialism, historic premillennialism, postmillennialism, and amillennialism and preterist]
http://markmoore.org/resources/powerpoints/mvss.ppt

Four Views of the Millennium
[dispensational premillennialism, historic premillennialism, postmillennialism, and amillennialism (including partial-preterist)]
http://www.blueletterbible.org/faq/mill.cfm

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Pre-Millenialism and The Rapture

The Rise of Premillennialism and Dispensationalism

In the emergence of fundamentalism, premillennialism played a significant role in uniting otherwise often very divergent people. The church has always believed in the return of Jesus (the Second Coming); the problems lie in the specifics. Rev 20:2 says that Satan will be bound for 1000 years. Most churches through the ages have held to an amillennial view – there will be no literal 1000-year period; rather, Satan has been bound and God will work through the church to bring about the kingdom of peace on earth.

Premillennialism, by contrast, is the belief that Jesus will return and institute a literal reign on earth of 1000 years. Most premillennialists believe that this kingdom will be preceded by a general apostasy, wars, famine, earthquakes, the appearance of the Antichrist, and a period of tribulation. Although Christ will rule during the millennium, there will at the end be a battle, the Battle of Armageddon, between Christ and His saints and those who have rebelled against Him.

From the mid-1870s on, evangelicals organized Bible conferences to study the Bible and especially prophecy. These prophetic conferences, as well as the writings of the speakers at these conferences, were premillennial in outlook; they were eminently successful and helped make premillennialism a core belief. At the 1898 Niagara (N.Y.) Conference, a statement of faith was adopted that was essentially identical to the five points adopted by the Presbyterian Assembly (see The Mainline Churches above, "Mainline Churches"), except that the last point (the reality of miracles) was replaced by the millennial return of Christ.

But further refinements were adopted by some in the form of dispensationalism. This is a theological system that divides time into seven periods or dispensations, which are stages in God's progressive revelation. The key point in dispensationalism is that in the church age God's plan for the Jews is different from His plan for the church. Thus the Jews will go through the Great Tribulation and will turn to Christ during that period, while the church is taken away (raptured) before the Tribulation. In the end, of course, both Jews and Gentiles will stand before God together.

This dispensational system was developed by John Darby, an Englishman who was a leader of the Plymouth Brethren. Darby's views on the pretribulational rapture split the Plymouth Brethren but migrated to America in the 1870s and spread via Bible and prophetic conferences. Dispensationalism became entrenched after C. I. Scofield published the Scofield Reference Bible in 1909. This Bible shows in detail how the dispensationalist system works. It had wide appeal and still sells well today. In 1924, Dallas Theological Seminary (DTS) was founded with the specific goal to train men in dispensational theology.

(See more details following in this document.)

Source: Halley's Bible Handbook

Theories About The Rapture (PDF)

http://www.biblefortoday.org/pdf/rapture.pdf

The "Origen" of the Concept of a Pre-Tribulation Rapture

http://christinprophecy.org/articles/the-origin-of-the-concept-of-a-pre-tribulation-rapture/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

PRE-MID-POST-A WHAT?

http://www.apocalypsesoon.org/trib.html

Rapture: Post-Tribulation - Pre-Wrath

http://crossbearer-brian.tripod.com/id59.htm

The timing of the rapture in relation to the tribulation is one of the most controversial issues in the church today. The three primary views are pre-tribulational (the rapture occurs before the tribulation), mid-tribulational (the rapture occurs at or near the mid-point of the tribulation), and post-tribulational (the rapture occurs at the end of the tribulation). A fourth view, commonly known as pre-wrath, is a slight modification of the mid-tribulational position. [These are all Pre-Millennial.]

[Source: http://www.gotquestions.org/rapture-tribulation.html]

[Related: http://www.gotquestions.org/pre-wrath-rapture.html - re: Pre-Wrath]

The Incredible Scofield and His Book by Joseph M. Canfield (Review)

https://paulsheldonfoote.blogspot.com/

Book Online: https://www.scribd.com/doc/54737546/The-Incredible-Scofield-and-His-Book

For more details about The Rapture and tribulation variations of Pre-Millenialism following in this document.

Basic Eschatology, An Introduction

https://www.slideshare.net/StephenYong2/basic-eschatology-an-introduction [slideshow]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

FYI: Non-dispensational [premillennialism] = historic = classical

Comparison of Four Eschatological Positions
http://natewilsonfamily.net/eschtlgy.htm

Competing theories of eschatology, end times, and millennialism http://www.religioustolerance.org/millenni.htm
(Note: This is a very 'progressive' organization that attempts to incorporate views from all religions, including even atheists, agnostics, Satanists and others. Including this link here as it does identify and summarizes all the major eschatology theories; although suggest taking their opinions with 'a grain of salt'.)

Theopedia: Millennialism, Postmillennialism, Premillennialism

Three Prevailing Views
(on an eschatology blog – a ministry of Francis A Schaeffer Institute of Church Leadership):
https://biblicaleschatology.org/2010/12/03/the-three-prevailing-millennium-views-amillennial-premillennial-and-postmillennial/

Amillennialism, Postmillennialism and Premillennialism. What are they? [Forum] https://www.christianforums.com/threads/amillennialism-postmillennialism-and-premillennialism-what-are-they.1168117/

Amillennialism, Postmillennialism and Premillennialism [Video] https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=XuICihe5sJQ&spfreload=10

Three Views of the Millennium
https://www.gci.org/bible/rev/3views

History of Millennialism
http://www.newtestamentchurch.org/york/libraryfiles/HISMILL.html

Views of the Second Coming of Jesus Christ http://www.ibiblio.org/freebiblecommentary/pdf/EN/second_coming_theories.pdf [PDF]

Why Every Calvinist Should Be a Premillennialist, Part 6 (Selected Scriptures)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=X1oEmg6iqow [John MacArthur]

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Views from a Premillennialist Perspective

https://carm.org/amillennialism-and-premillennialism

http://www.baptistpillar.com/article_383.html (Amillennialism as viewed by a Premillennialist)

http://www.baptistpillar.com/article_946d.html (Amillennialism from a Premillennialist perspective)

http://www.baptistpillar.com/article_394.html (Premillennialism)

http://www.baptistpillar.com/article_395.html (Premillennialism as defined by Larkin, a Dispensationalist)

http://www.baptistpillar.com/article_396.html (Premillennialism vs Millennialism from Baptist view)

http://www.baptistpillar.com/article_399.html (The Rise and Fall of Amillennialism)

Historic Premillennialism

http://www.rediscoveringthebible.com/HistoricPremillennialism.html

http://www.rediscoveringthebible.com/MillennialViews.html (comparison of 3 millennial views)

Classic Premillennialism

http://www.messiahskingdom.com/PreMill/premill.html

Millennialism, End Times, and the Reign of Christ (Amillennial perspective)

https://www.minneapolischurch.net/files/Millennialism,%20End%20Times,%20and%20the%20Reign%20of%20Christ_0.PDF [PDF]

Amillennialism (Hoekema)

http://www.the-highway.com/amila_Hoekema.html

Amillennialism – A Critique by a Premillennialist

http://www.thepropheticyears.com/comments/amillennial.HTM

http://christinprophecy.org/articles/amillennial-problems/ (another critique)

Theopedia: Postmillennialism

http://www.theopedia.com/postmillennialism

A Critique of R. C. Sproul's The Last Days According to Jesus

http://www.wordexplain.com/PDFdocs/Sproul_Book_Analysis.pdf [PDF]
(Discusses and compares Sproul's postmillennial views)

R.C. Sproul: The Last Days According to Jesus – The Millennium

http://www.ligonier.org/learn/series/last_days_according_to_jesus/the-millennium-938/ [Video]

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

R.C. Sproul: The Millenium

Part 1: http://www.ligonier.org/learn/devotionals/millennium-part-i/
Part 2: http://www.ligonier.org/learn/devotionals/millennium-part-ii/

"The millennium is perhaps the most fiercely debated aspect of Christian eschatology (the doctrine of last things). Orthodox believers often allow their views on this topic to separate themselves from other Christians. This is regrettable. After all, Dr. R.C. Sproul teaches, the literature in which millennial teaching is found is difficult to interpret and should caution us against dogmatism on this issue. Nevertheless, millennial views are not irrelevant, for they can affect the way we live…"

New Testament Eschatology in the Light of Progressive Revelation (Wallace)

https://bible.org/article/new-testament-eschatology-light-progressive-revelation

What is dispensational premillennialism / premillennial dispensationalism?

https://www.gotquestions.org/dispensational-premillennialism.html

The Historical Context of Premillennialism

https://bible.org/seriespage/10-historical-context-premillennialism

Classic Premillennialism vs. Dispensational Pretribulationism: The Interpretation of Scripture – Introduction (Arminian)

http://arminiusfan.blogspot.com/2013/10/18-classic-premillennialism-vs.html

Dispensational vs. Historic Premillennialism

https://theologue.files.wordpress.com/2014/06/eschatologycomparison.pdf [PDF]

Premillennialism and History

http://www.rightlydividingtheword.com/articles/premillennialism.htm

Is The Return of Christ Premillennial? (Walvoord)

https://bible.org/seriespage/3-return-christ-premillennial

Will the Church Go Through Tribulation? (Walvoord)

https://bible.org/seriespage/6-will-church-go-through-tribulation

Why I Changed My Mind About the Millennium (Sam Storms)

https://www.thegospelcoalition.org/article/why-i-changed-my-mind-about-the-millennium

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Is Premillennialism always dispensational? (Historic vs Dispensational Premillennialism) https://www.monergism.com/thethreshold/articles/onsite/qna/premilldispy.html

What is dispensational premillennialism / premillennial dispensationalism?
https://www.gotquestions.org/dispensational-premillennialism.html

Is Your Eschatology Political Or Biblical?
(Pro review of Tenney book re: Premillennialism) https://healtheland.wordpress.com/2011/03/12/is-your-eschatology-political-or-biblical/

Is Your Eschatology Showing?
https://standingforgod.com/2011/10/03/is-your-eschatology-showing/

https://www.thebereancall.org/content/your-eschatology-showing

DigitalCommons@Liberty University
http://digitalcommons.liberty.edu/

Source for conservative Christian scholarly papers (pdfs) and links to articles on a wide range of theological topics. (Just enter your search parameters to discover related publications.)

Category examples: Pre-Trib Archives: The Rapture; What is pre-, post-, a- millennialism; and more

Differences Between Different Millennialisms (Discussion Forum)
http://christianity.stackexchange.com/questions/3131/what-are-the-differences-between-the-different-millenialisms

Eschatology (Study Guide) (Singapore Bible College)
http://biblestudydownloads.org/files/eng/cn/Eschatology%20%28High%20Res%2047%20MB%29-388_eng_cn_8965_v1.0.0.pdf [PDF]

http://biblestudydownloads.org/files/eng/cn/Eschatology_eng_cn_5065_v1.0.0.doc (MS Word doc)

Millennial Prefixes
https://postmillennialworldview.com/2016/01/25/millennial-prefixes/

Note: Randy Alcorn, in the first Heaven Video listed in these notes (@ approx. 14:30 min. into video) states that he is an historic premillennial. He goes on to say to the audience, many who are of the reformed persuasion and amillennial, that if you think either premillennial or amillennial is stupid, then you don't understand them. He as read and understands both of them and both make a lot of sense. Ultimately he had to choose.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

However, it doesn't matter a great deal what one believes about a 1000 year reign of Christ and his people on earth, compared to a belief that all saved people should share: forever we will live on a new earth!

See also*:

Millennial (Eschatological) Views (What Determines Your Millennial Position?)

Millennial (Eschatological) Comparison Charts (Tables)

Millennial (Eschatological) Views (Graphs)

Millennial (Eschatological) Comparison Views

Rapture and Pre-Millennialism (Introduction)

Rapture Theories (Pre-, Post-, Mid-, Tribulation; Pre-Wrath)

Rapture (N.T. Wright's and Others View of the Rapture)

Return to the beginning of this Eschatology section

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

What Determines Your Millennial Position?

[Source: http://markmoore.org/resources/powerpoints/mvss.ppt] (Powerpoint)

Note: The above Powerpoint presentation (up through the first 24 slides) provides a good introduction to the different millennial views.

The Postmillennial View
http://www.forerunner.com/eschatology/X0001_1._Postmil.html

Rebuttal to Dispensational Premillennialism (from a Post-Millennialist) http://www.forerunner.com/eschatology/X0004_4._Disp_Rebuttal.html

Return to the beginning of this Eschatology section

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Four Views of the End Times

	Dispensational Premillennialism	Historical Premillennialism	Amillennialism	Postmillennialism
Will Jesus return physically?	Yes	Yes	Yes	Yes
When will Jesus return?	After a 7-year tribulation; before the millennium.	After tribulation; before the millennium.	Anytime; a detailed time frame is not important.	After the millennium.
Do the rapture and second coming of Christ occur at the same time?	No, they are events separated by either 7 years (pre-tribulation rapture) or $3^1/_2$ years (mid-tribulation rapture).	Yes	Yes	Yes
Will there be a great tribulation?	Yes	Yes	The tribulation occurs any time Christians are persecuted or wars and disasters occur.	Tribulation is either the first-century Jewish-Roman War or the ongoing conflict between good and evil prior to millennium.
Will Christians suffer during the tribulation?	Christians are either raptured before the tribulation (pre-tribulation rapture) or $3^1/_2$ years into the tribulation (mid-tribulation rapture).	Yes, Christians will go through the tribulation and endure suffering and persecution for the cause of Christ.	Yes, Christians will suffer and endure persecution until Jesus returns; persecution will increase in the end.	Yes, Christians are called to share the gospel, and tribulation will occur when that gospel is opposed.
Will there be a literal 1,000-year millennium?	Yes, after the 7-year tribulation, Christ will return and reign for 1,000 years.	Yes, after the tribulation, Christ will return and reign for 1,000 years.	No, the millennium refers to the reign of Christ in the hearts of his believers.	No, the millennium refers to a period of peace when the gospel reaches all people.
Who is saved?	Christians only	Christians only	Christians only	Christians only
Is the modern state of Israel relevant to the prophecies in Revelation?	Yes	No	No	No
When was this view most held?	Became popular about 1860. Has increased in popularity.	The earliest view of the end times, emerging at the end of the first century.	Popularized in AD 400. Continues to be accepted today.	May have been popular as early as AD 300. Less popular today.

http://greatlakeschurch.com/sites/default/files/Four%20Views%20of%20End%20Times.png

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Millennium: Four Major Views

https://www.gci.org/bible/rev/3views

	dispensational premillennialism	"historic" premillennialism	postmillennialism	amillennialism
Old Testament prophecies	tendency toward literal interpretation	more figurative meanings allowed; perfection mixed with imperfection	mostly figurative, based on NT uses such as Acts 2:16-21; 15:15-18	mostly figurative, based on NT use of OT prophecies
Israel and the church	distinct; the millennial kingdom will be dominated by Jews	prophecies may apply both to the church now and to Israel later	possibly a small role for Israel as a special nation	most "Israel" prophecies apply to the church, the new Israel return of Christ	seven years before the millennium for the rapture, then just before the millennium begins	just before the millennium begins	after the millennium	after the millennium
Rev. 20:1-3	Satan will be bound after Christ returns	Satan will be bound after Christ returns	Satan will be or has been bound 1,000 years or a long time before Christ's return	Satan was bound at Christ's first coming, is now unable to stop the gospel
Rev. 20:4-6	saints will be immortal, reigning with Christ over mortals on earth	saints will be immortal, reigning with Christ over mortals on earth	the gospel will achieve such success that the 1,000-year golden age will develop from the church age	the saints "live again" in the church age by being born again; another view is that they reign in heaven resurrection(s) and judgment(s)	two or three	two	one	one advocates	C. Scofield, D. Moody, J. Walvoord, Hal Lindsey, D. Pentecost	Justin Martyr, Irenaeus, G.E. Ladd, W. Grudem, M. Erickson	some liberals, A.H. Strong, G. Bahnsen, some Calvinists	Augustine, Luther, Calvin, L. Berkhof, most mainline churches
key scriptures	OT prophecies; 1 Thess. 4; Rom. 11:26	Rev. 2:26-27; Rev. 20:1-10	Matt. 28:18-20; Matt. 13:31-33	Matt. 12:28f; John 5:28f; 2 Pet. 3:10

See also:* http://www.reformedreader.org/mchart.htm for a more detailed chart.

"The central issue within each position is (should be) Christ, His Exaltation and His Sovereignty. Any position weak or even lacking in these areas will also find themselves faulty (at least in some areas) in their eschatological conclusions."

Millennium Comparison Chart

http://www.seeking4truth.com/millennium_comparison_chart.htm

Comparison Of Four Eschatological Positions (Chart)

http://natewilsonfamily.net/eschtlgy.htm

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Millennial Views
VIEW	Premillennial	Amillennial	Postmillennial	Historical Premillennial
The Millennium	A literal 1,000 year period	A figurative number	A figurative number	A literal 1,000 year period.
Christ's Reign	Reigns literally in a kingdom on Earth after his Second Coming	Reigns spiritually on a heavenly throne or reigns spiritually in the hearts of believers	Reigns spiritually in the hearts of believers, as the gospel transforms the nations of the Earth	Reigns literally in a kingdom on Earth after his Second Coming
Israel	Christ reigns in Israel over a regathered Israel	The Church replaces the promises given to national Israel	The Church replaces the promises given to national Israel	The Church replaces the promises given to national Israel
View of Human History	Believes human history will get progressively worse, as the gospel reaches all nations	Believes human history will get progressively worse, as the gospel reaches all nations	Believes that human history will get progressively better. The nations will eventually be transformed by Christ's reign over society	Believes human history will get progressively worse, as the gospel reaches all nations

As you can see, there are radically different perspectives regarding the millennium. How can Christians disagree so much on this topic?

(We hold to a premillennial perspective, but hopefully, we can articulate the other perspectives accurately. Here [above] is a brief overview of each position)

http://www.evidenceunseen.com/theology/eschatology/millennial-views/

…let's consider each view:

1. The Premillennial View: Christ Initiates His 1,000 Year Reign

2. The Amillennial View: The 1,000 Years is Symbolic

3. The Postmillennial View: We Initiate the 1,000 Year Reign

4. The Historical Premillennial View: Israel is Not in the Millennium

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

STRENGTHS
HISTORIC	1. This view has the most natural reading of Rev. 20 2. It historic and early roots commend it as authoritative. 3. It has a balanced hermeneutic and exegesis.
DISPENSA-TIONAL	1. Clear chronology. 2. Consistent literal hermeneutic. 3. It engages the entire Bible into its eschatological scheme.
POSTMIL.	1. Positive and optimistic view of the progress of the Church. 2. Good exegesis of Matthew 13 & 28:18-20.
AMIL.	1. It's Based on 2 Peter 3 rather than apocalyptic literature. 2. Expectation of Jesus' eminent return. 3. The kingdom is present now (Mt 12:28; Lk 17:20-21).
PRETERIST	1. It takes Jesus' statements about his return literally. 2. Answer some difficult eschatological questions for apologists 3. It gives strong impetus to improve the present world.

Weaknesses
HISTORIC	1. An earthy millennial kingdom seems anti-climactic. 2. Inconsistent hermeneutic: Figurative/Literal; Israel/church. 3. The kingdom is mongrel – resurrected and earthly. 4. A post-tribulation rapture seems odd.
DISPENSA-TIONAL	1. Secret, mid-trib rapture. 2. The cross as plan "b" and a "paused clock." 3. Literal interpretation which ignores conditional promises. 4. Kingdom is only future for Israel (cf. Mt 12:28 & 21:43).
POSTMIL.	1. Unrealistic about the direction of the world. 2. It is a late development and not widely supported. 3. Arguing that most will be saved (cf. Mt 7:13-14; Lk 18:8) 4. Explains Rev 19:11-21 as church growth not the parousia.
AMIL.	1. Radically figurative in some texts, esp. OT prophecy 2. Explanation of Satan's binding and Rev 20 are questionable.
PRETERIST	1. This present world is our "blessed hope" (1 Thess 2:19)?! 2. Jesus return was invisible, even unnoticed (cf. Mt 24:27). 3. Death, pain, and tears are not destroyed (Rev 21:4).

[Source: http://markmoore.org/resources/powerpoints/mvss.ppt] (Powerpoint)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Comparison Of Four Eschatological Positions By Nate Wilson

NOTE: The distinctions are often not as clear-cut between positions as this chart may make it appear. There really is a whole spectrum, especially if you take into account the fact that there are different camps within each millennial position. For instance, within the Dispensational camp, there are major differences, and the Progressive camp of Dispensationalists may be closer to the Historic PreMil. position on this chart than to the Dispensational PreMil. as represented on this chart.

Sources: Lectures from Dr. Dwight F. Zeller, Sangre de Cristo Seminary and the book The Meaning of the Millennium: Four Views, edited by Robert G. Clouse (IVP 1977)

	Dispensational Premillennialism	Historic / Covenant Pre-millennialism	Amillennialism	Post-millennialism
Overview	"A golden age of civilization...as described in the Bible...a millennial kingdom will be ushered in by a divine, supernatural and catastrophic manifestation from heaven at the Second coming of Christ....when the conditions of life have reached the depths of great tribulation." H.A. Hoyt	"After the Second coming of Christ, he will reign for a thousand years over the earth before the final consummation of God's redemptive purpose in the new heavens and the new earth of the age to come." G.E. Ladd	"...amillennialists do not believe in a literal thousand-year reign which will follow the return of Christ... the millennium of Revelation 20 is not exclusively future, but is now in the process of realization." A.A. Hoekema	"..the kingdom of God is now being extended in the world through the preaching of the gospel and the saving work of the Holy Spirit in the hearts of individuals... the world eventually is to be Christianized and the return of Christ is to occur at the close of a long period of righteousness and peace, commonly called the millenium." L. Boettner
Key Bible Verse(s)	Dispensationalism provides a Comprehensive view of the whole Bible	Rev. 20:1-6--two resurrections	No particular emphasis	Matt. 28:18ff--the whole earth must be discipled Matt. 16:18--church must be triumphant over gates of hell
Herme-neutics	• Whole Bible is divided into 7 dispensations/time	"Natural reading" of Revelation Context determines whether literal or figurative	Progressive Parrallellism in Revelation (Earth's history repeated 7 times) OR Pretoristic:	• Revelation either mostly figurative or mostly

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

	periods in which God acts in different ways toward man. • Interpretation must be literal whenever possible • Interpret the New Testament by the Old Testament.	⍰ Interpret the Old Testament by the New Testament (Hos. 1:9/Rom 9:25-26, Jer.31:33ff/Heb. 8) ⍰ Millennium must be Christ-Centered	interpret in terms of meaning to 1st century church--reassurance of Christ's victory over Roman persecutors. ⍰ Context determines whether literal or figurative ⍰ Interpret the Old Testament by the New Testament.	fulfilled in 70ad (Mt. 24:34) • Context determines whether literal or figurative • Interpret the Old Testament by the New Testament.
History	Dispensationalism Espoused by Darby and the Brethren movement beginning in mid-1800's. Continues in Bible School movement and Annotated Bibles (Scoffield, Revised Scoffield, and Ryrie). Three schools: Classical, Moderate, and Progressive. For a history of Premillennialism, see Historic Premil. History section.	Early church chialists (incl. Iraenus and Justin Martyr) believed in a literal earthly Premillennial reign, but generally abandoned by 400ad. Picked up by Anabaptists in 16th century Reformation	Figurative thousand years embraced by E. Orthodox church (under Origen's influence), later Espoused by Augustine and embraced by Western church by 400ad. Held by Roman Catholic church as well as by Reformers, and written into the Augsburg and Westminster Confessions..	Tychonius (350ad) was early proponent; existed side-by-side with a-mil positions in Roman and Reformation streams because differences are relatively small. Popular among non-dispensational evangelicals in the 19th century before the world wars. Three schools: Traditional, Liberal (Social Gospel) and Theonomic
Mil-lennium	• Literal • Spoken of throughout the Bible (Isa11: 6-9, Isa. 65: 20-25, Amos 9:15, etc.) • Has to do with Christ's physical reign on earth before	⍰ May be literal or figurative ⍰ Mentioned in Rev. 20 & I Cor 15:23-26 ⍰ Has to do with Christ's reign on earth before the end.	• Figurative. • Only mentioned in Rev. 20 • Has to do with the age of the church between Christ's First and Second coming, in which Christ	⍰ May be literal or figurative ⍰ Only mentioned in Rev. 20 ⍰ Has to do with a gradual appearance (Lk.17:20), of a "golden age" of earth's history in which the nations are discipled in God's ways, until the earth is filled

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

	the end. (Obad. 12ff, Is. 2:3, 24:23, 33:17, 52:10, Dan.2:31, Rev. 22:1ff)		rules from heaven. • We are in the millennial last days (Acts 2:16, 1 Cor. 10:11, I John 2:18)	with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord (Hab. 2:14) and ends with Christ's Second coming.
Rev. 19-20	• Necessarily chronological, • Enthroned saints are on earth • two physical resurrections	• Chronological • enthroned saints are on earth "angel came down to earth" (20:1) • 2 physical resurrections • Describes the destruction of the beast, the false prophet, and the devil.	• Not necessarily Chronological. Parallelists say break b/w 19 and 20, Pretorists say just a figurative description of Christ being triumphant over enemies. Purpose is to comfort persecuted believers. • Saints reign in heaven (In heaven in Rev.6, and thrones are usually in heaven.) • "And I saw" indicates a new vision.--20:1-3 is earthly parallel to the heavenly scene in 20:4-6 going on at same time • resurrections spiritual ("souls")	Not Chronological Ch. 19 speaks not of II coming, but of the church between the two advents of Christ Saints reign in heaven Rev. 20 speaks of Christ's coming and of Church age resurrections are spiritual
New Heavens & New Earth	Realized in the earthly millennium	Realized after millennial earthly	Set up at Christ's second coming, immediately after the resurrection and the judgement (Is. 65:17, 66:22, Rev. 21:1)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

	with a curse partly lifted. (Is. 65:17) Jewish temple rebuilt along with sacrificial system (Ez.40-48) After millennium is merged with eternal kingdom (I Cor. 15:24ff, Rev. 21:1ff, 22:1ff)	reign is over and end has come
Resurrection	Approx. 4 Resurrections: 1. Rapture: Christ will make an incomplete appearance and take the Christians to heaven (I Thes. 4:16), sparing them from approximately seven years of severe tribulation on the earth. (Rev. 6-19). These saints are a "Spiritual Aristocracy/ Nobility" who will reign with Christ. Rev. 20:4ff) 2. The second resurrection is of tribulation-era saints and O.T. saints at the beginning of the millennium	2 Resurrections as per Rev. 20, first of saints before the millennium, then of everyone else after the millennium	1 resurrection of all the dead, as per Jn. 5:28ff & Acts 24:15. "Resurrections" in Rev. 20 are spiritual. The "First resurrection" is the passing of the soul into God's presence, the "second death" is eternal damnation (Rev. 20:14)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

	(Rev. 20:4, Is.26:19ff, Dan. 12:1ff) 3. company of saints after the millennium (I Cor. 15:23ff) 4. finally of the wicked (Rev. 20:11ff)
Judgement	3 judgements: • first of the raptured believers (I Cor. 3:13ff) • Second of the nations at the beginning of the millennium (Joel 3:2, Matt. 19:28) • Lastly of the wicked at the end of the millennium (Rev. 20:15)	One judgement at the end Rev. 22:12, Mt. 16:27, 25:31ff, Jude 14ff, II Thes. 1:7ff
O.T. Prophecy	Speaks of a coming triumphant reign of Christ on earth (IChron. 17:1ff, II Sam. 7:14). Isa11: 6-9, Isa. 65: 20-25, and Amos 9:15 refer to an earthly Jewish millennial kingdom. O.T. Prophecies proclaim God's various blessings upon the Jews	O.T. Prophecy doesn't necessarily predict the millennium. N.T. often interprets O.T. prophecies in a way not suggested by O.T. context (Hos. 1:9/Rom 9:25-26, Jer.31:33ff/Heb. 8). Jesus' 1st coming was unexpected by O.T., but his second will be in the anticipated power. (Mt. 12:28)	Prophecies like Isa. 11 and 65, and Amos 9:15 refer to the new heavens and new earth. References to Israel and Jerusalem are often taken figuratively	Messianic Jewish kingdom predictions were conditional upon obedience and thus abrogated by Israel's disobedience (Deut. 28, Jer. 18:9ff, Mt. 21:43, Heb. 8:7ff, 1 Thes. 2:16), to be realized through the church or in the new earth. Prophecies such as Zech. 9:10, Isa. 66, and Hab. 2:14 are

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

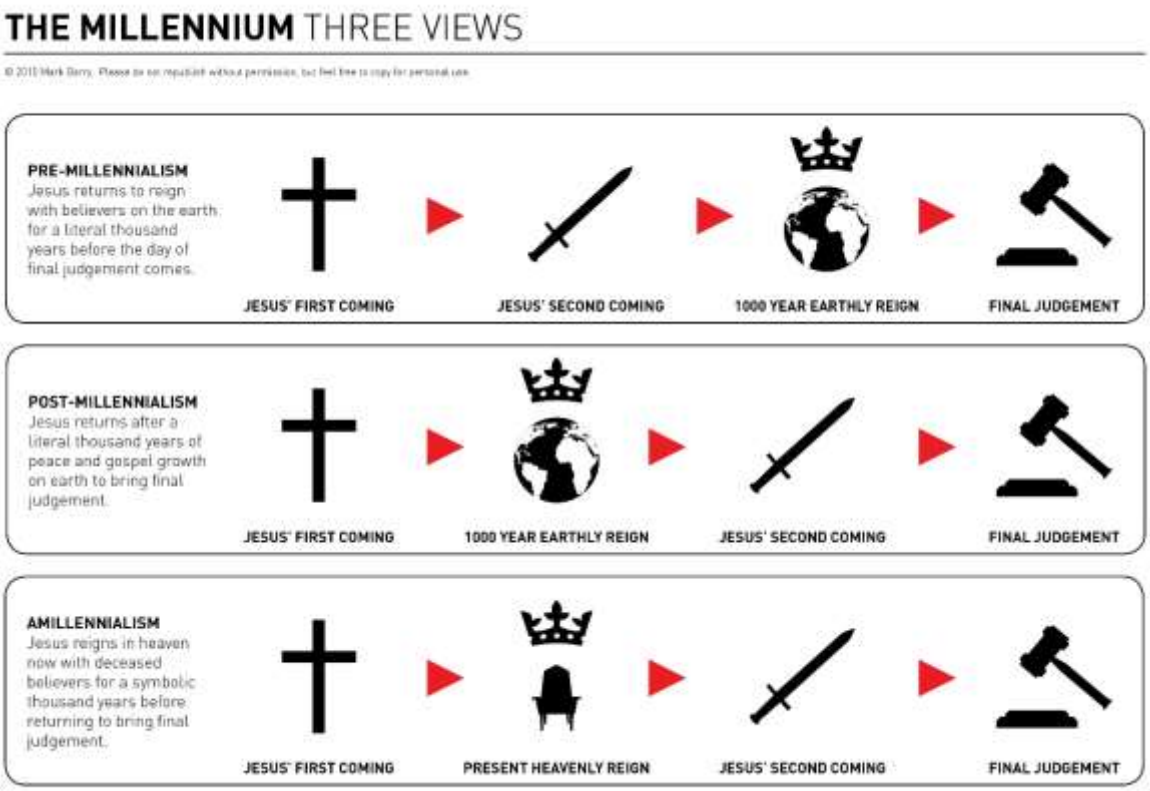
	"forever" (Gen. 17:8, Ex. 40:15, II Sam. 7:13ff)			speaking of the work of the church in the millennium.
Israel and the Church	Israel is only the physical nation. Rejection of Christ brought a temporary suspension of the Kingdom during which the church is in place (Mt. 13:11). Will be converted during the tribulation and will become preeminent over Gentile believers in the millennial kingdom. (Is. 49:15ff, 60:1ff)	Israel is sometimes the physical nation (Rom. 11:26) and sometimes the church (Rom 9:25-26, 4:11-16, 2:28-29, Gal. 3:7&29, Phil. 3:3) Physical Israel remains the people of God and will be evangelized.	O.T. Israel is the nation N.T. Israel is the Church (Rom 2-4 and Gal 3) The nation of Israel no longer has any spiritual significance.
Binding of Satan (Rev. 20:2-3)	Satan is rampant now and the world is getting worse and worse. He will be bound when Jesus comes for the millennium.	Satan bound to some extent by Jesus' work on the cross, but not fully until Christ's coming. Satan will be unbound after the millennial reign, after which comes the judgement and the end.	Occurred at the Cross. (Col. 2:14) Knowledge of God was mostly within Israel until this time. After the Cross, satan is no longer able to deceive the nations, hence the Gospel can spread to the ends of the earth. (Mt. 12:29, John 12:31ff, Luke 10:17ff)
Kingdom	Physical Main theme of the Bible (Gen. 1:26, Ex. 19:5ff, 7:1, Deut. 18: 15ff, II Sam. 7:12ff, I Chron. 28:5ff, Is. 9:6ff, Dan. 2:44, 7:13ff, Lk. 1:32ff, Rev. 11:15) Two kingdoms--God's universal kingdom (Ps. 103:19) and the "mediatorial" or dispensational	Christ has already been made Lord (Heb. 1:3, 2:7ff, 10:12ff, Rev. 3:21, Phil. 2:5ff, Acts 2:36), and reigns in heaven, but it will be visibly realized in the future millennial reign (II Thes. 1:7, Tit. 2:13).	Spiritual (Jn. 18:36) Came with Jesus' ministry on earth (Mt. 12:28, Luke 17:20ff) Both present (Mk. 9:1, Rom. 14:17, I Cor. 4:19, Col 1:13) and future (I Cor 6:9, Gal 5:21, Eph. 5:5, IITim. 4:18)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

	manner of God's rule with men (Dan. 2:44). The millennial kingdom is all future (Hos. 3:4-5, I Cor. 15:24ff, Rev. 22:3)
2nd Coming	First a "rapture" appearance (I Thes. 4:13ff), then a full appearance 7 years later to establish an earthly millennial kingdom Rev. 19:7ff)	One appearance to establish an earthly millennial reign	One appearance to judge the earth and establish the new heavens and new earth. (I Cor 15:23-26, Matt. 25:31-46)
Reccommended Reading	Scofield Reference Bibles Ryrie Study Bibles The End Times (Hoyt)	Commentary on the Revelation (Ladd)	More than Conquerors (Hendriksen) The Bible & the Future (Hoekema)	The Message from Patmos (Clark) The Millennium (Boettner) Institutes (Rushdoony)
Dangers	• Not as literal as claim to be • Can only be seen if you put on "dispensational glasses" • Bible doesn't define tribulation as 7 years • Not Christological • Ethnically Jewish, inc. sacrifices (Heb. 8:13) • Unrealized kingdom (Mt. 12:28)	Earthly reign of heavenly saints De-emphasizes power of Christ's victory over satan at the cross	• Over-spiritualize O.T. • "Brother-Bashing" • Breaking continuity of Revelation with recapitulations	Over-spiritualize O.T. Lack fervency in world mission

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Problems	All positions agree that: 1) The Bible is the word of God, fully inspired and authoritative and 2) There was a first advent and there will be a personal, visible, glorious, and objective 2nd advent.		• 2 physical resurrections in Rev. 20	evil isn't abating Doesn't deal with Rev. 20
AGREE-MENT	All positions agree that: 1) The Bible is the word of God, fully inspired and authoritative and 2) There was a first advent and there will be a personal, visible, glorious, and objective 2nd advent.

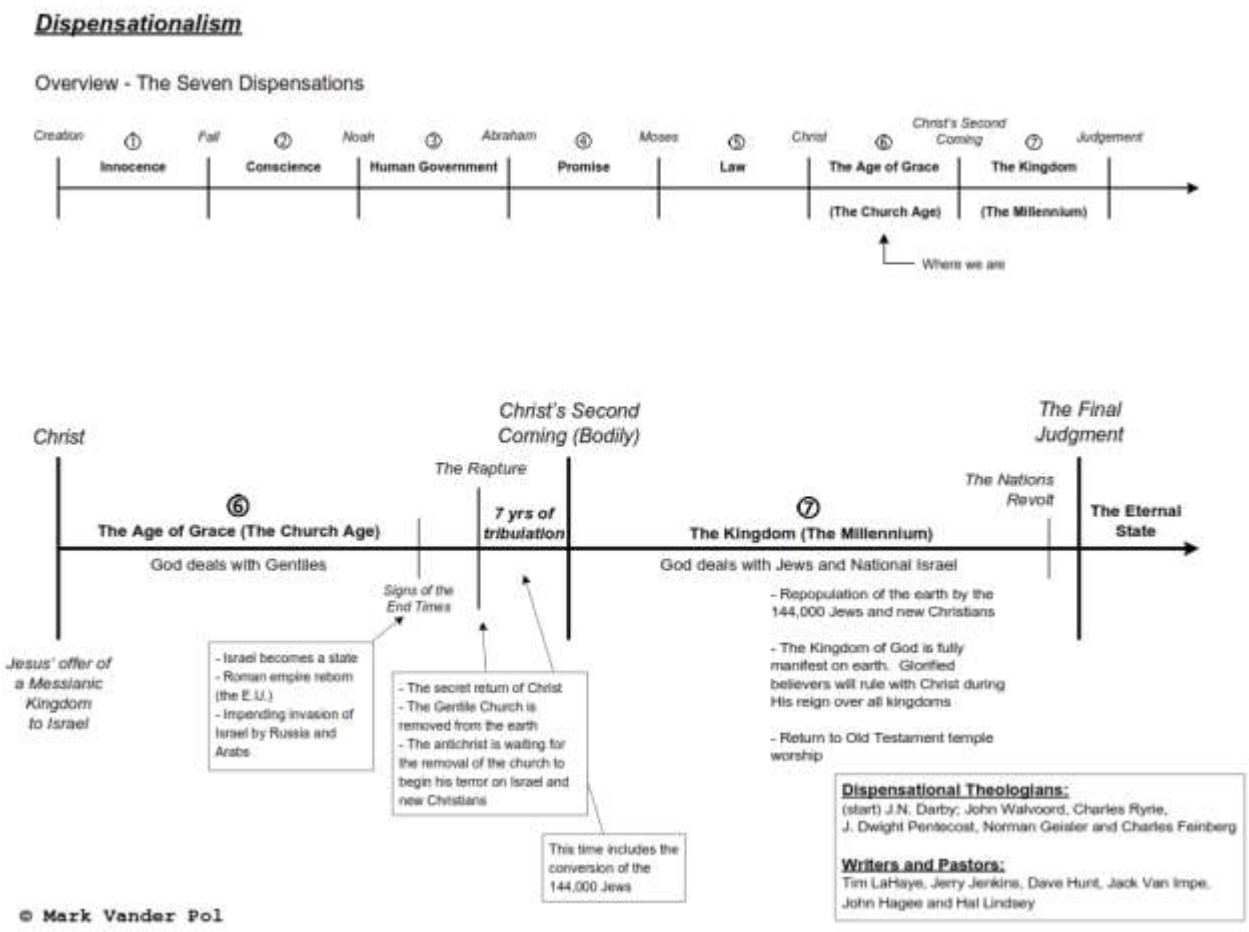


[Source: http://www.natewilsonfamily.net/eschtlgy.htm]

Return to the beginning of this Eschatology section

More comparisons of millennial views…

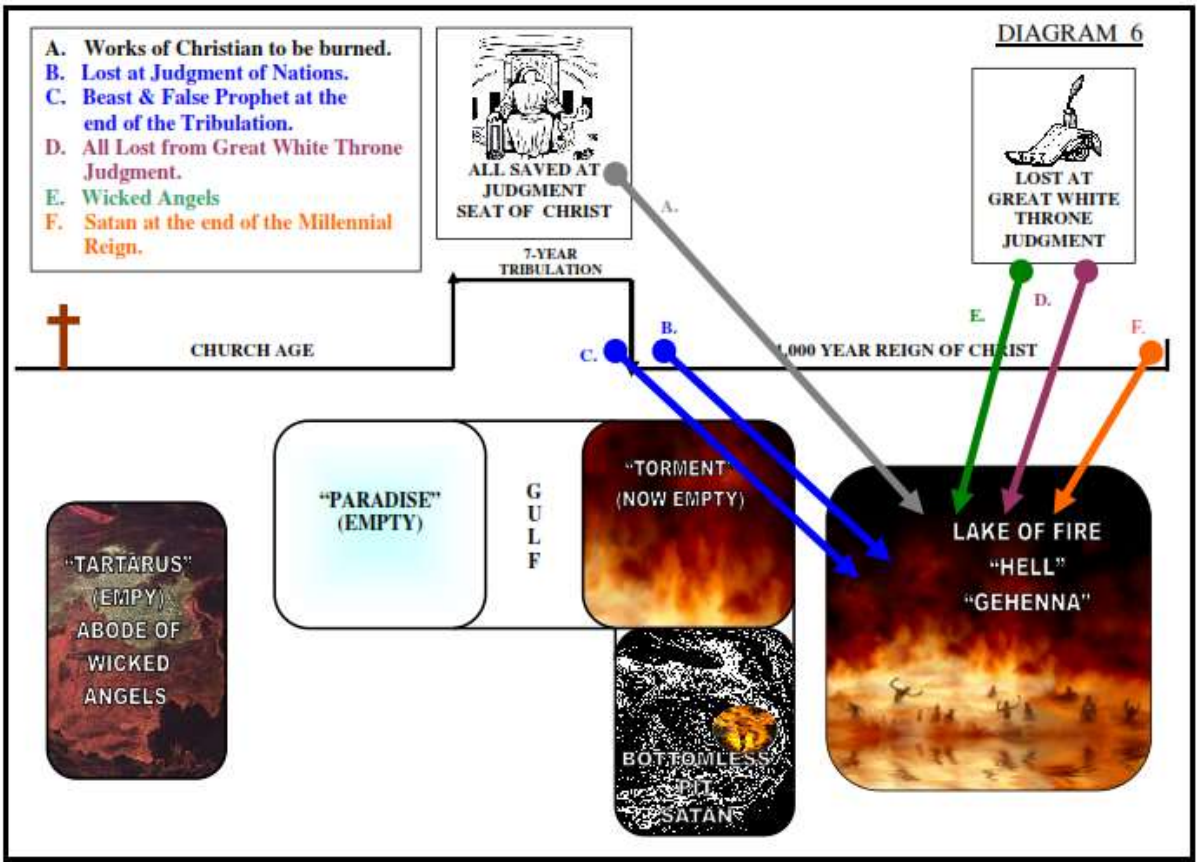
 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



Here's highlights of the three main views of the millennium
https://visualunit.me/2010/09/03/the-millennium/

Return to the beginning of this Eschatology section

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

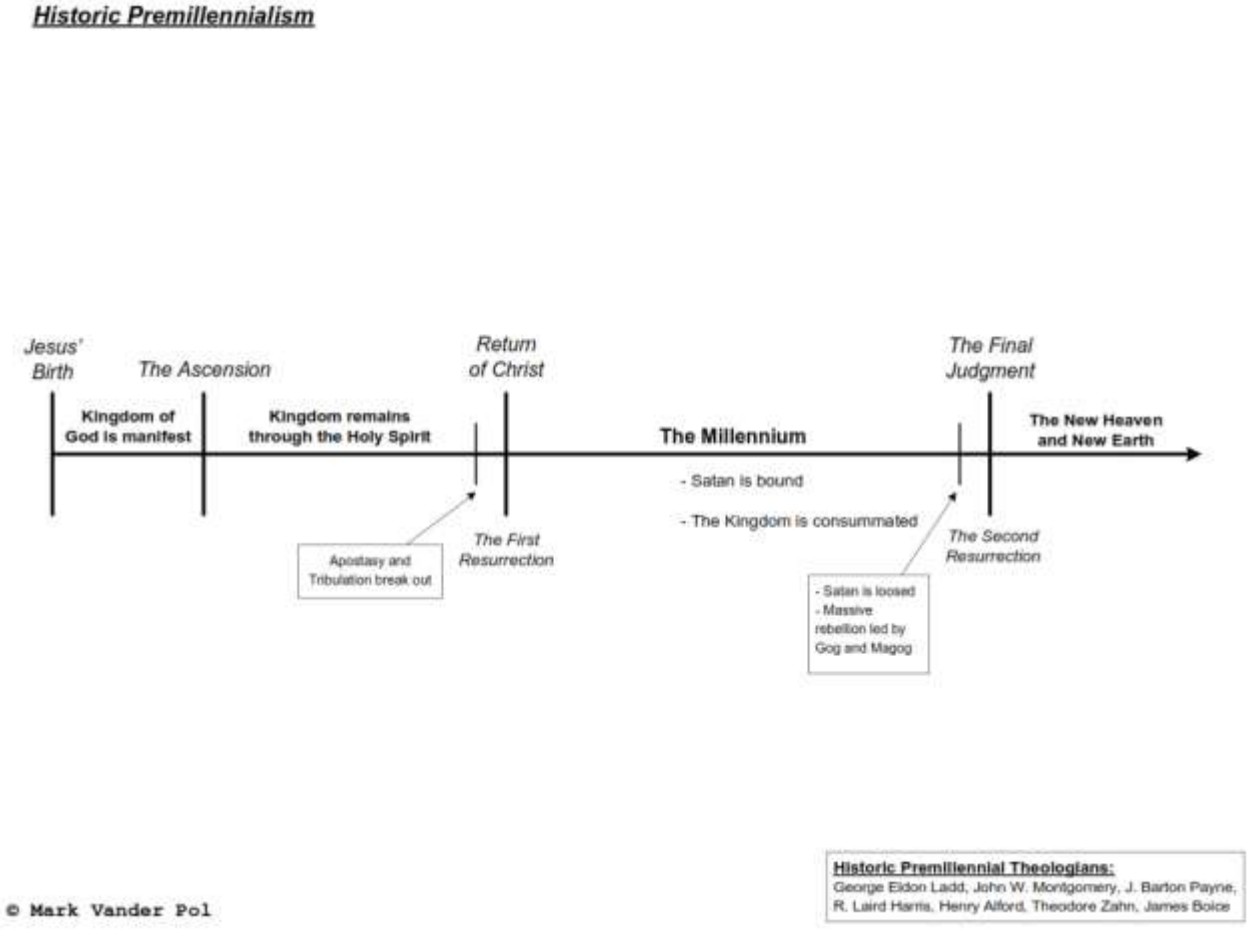


Millennial Views (graphics)

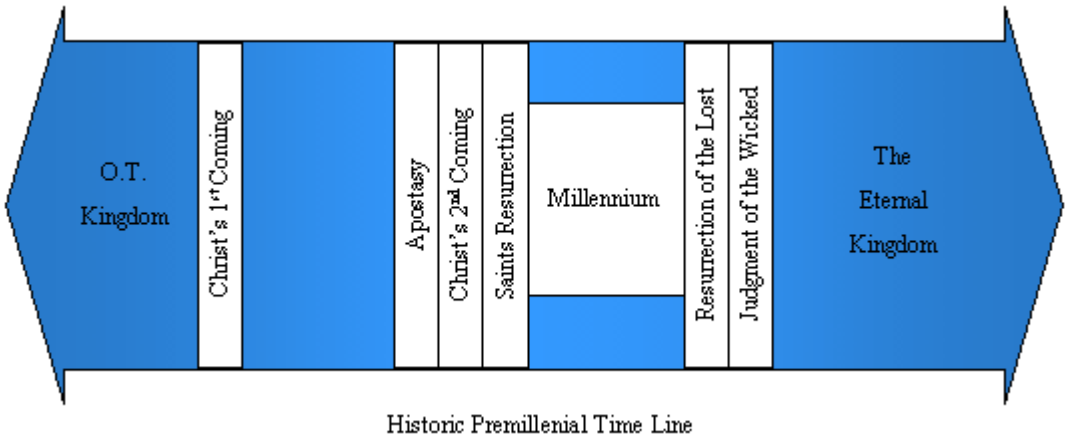
http://kimriddlebarger.squarespace.com/eschatology-charts/millennial_views.pdf [PDF]

Here's another Dispensational Premillennial/Pre-Tribulation View

Pre-Tribulation perspective:



[Source: Unknown]

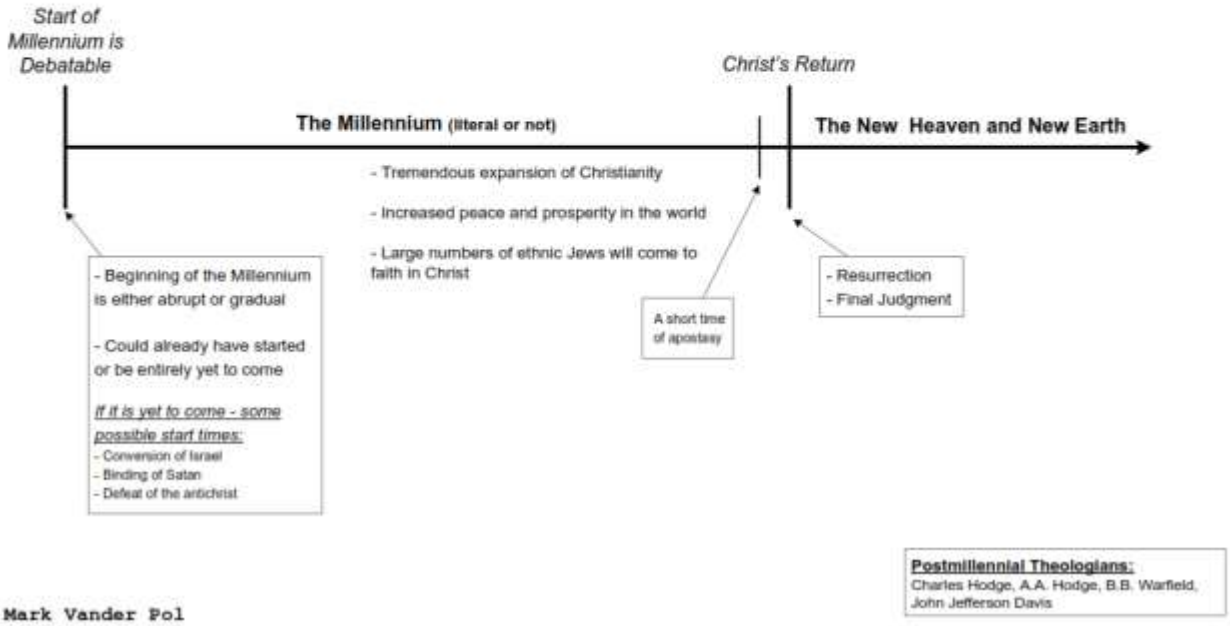


Four Views of End-Times Prophecy

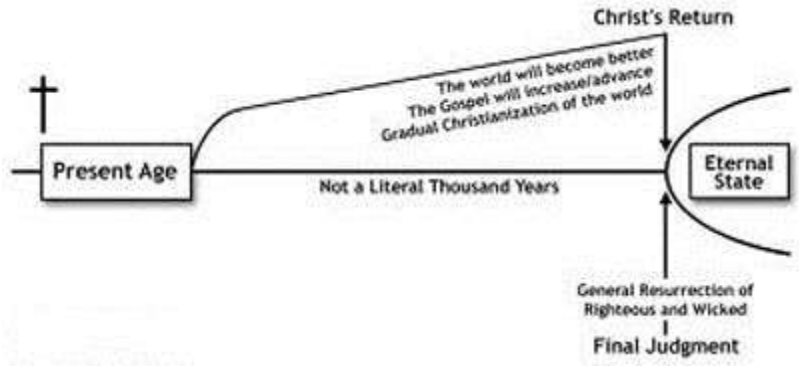
(Pro Premillennial-Pretribulation)
http://www.matthewmcgee.org/rapture.html

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

http://kimriddlebarger.squarespace.com/eschatology-charts/millennial_views.pdf [PDF]



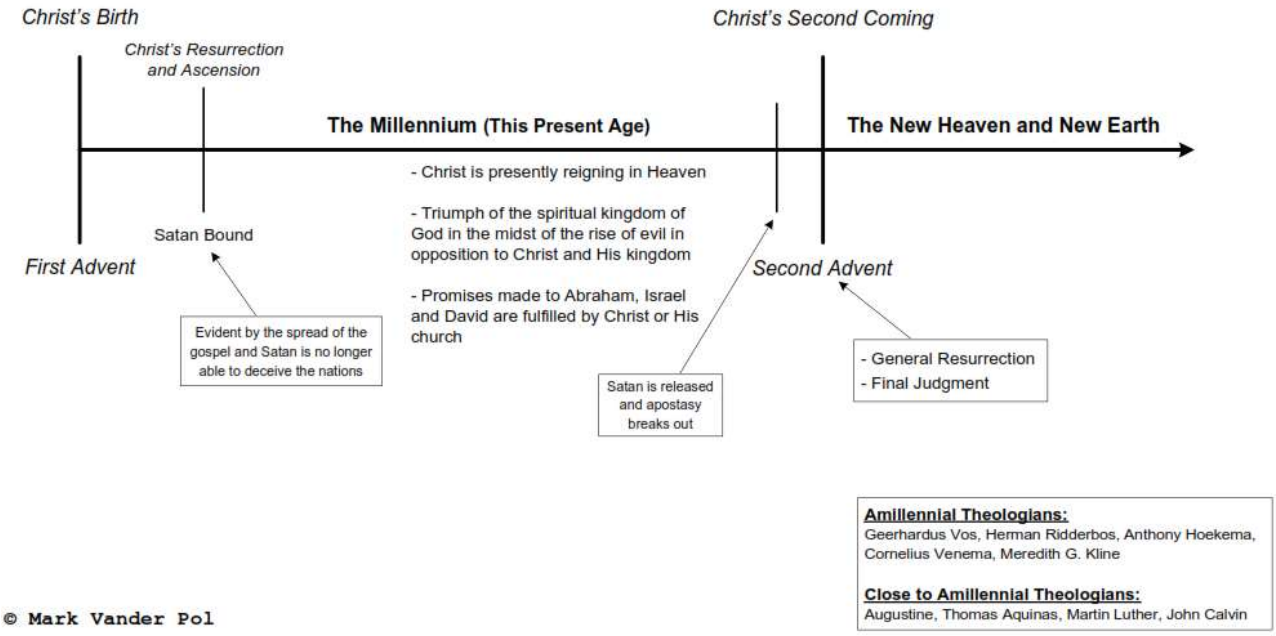
Historic Premillenial Time Line



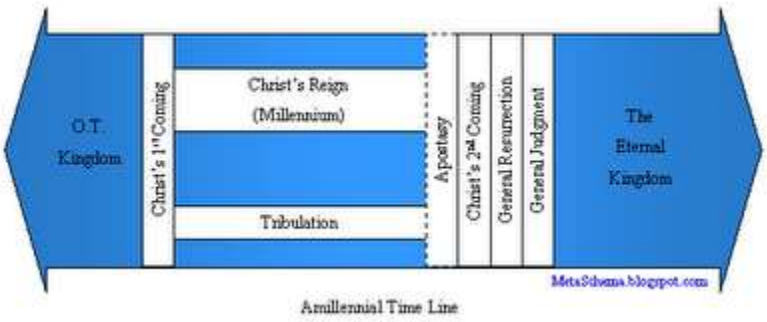
http://www.logosapologia.org/why-eschatology-matters-part-iv-premillennialism/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Postmillennialism



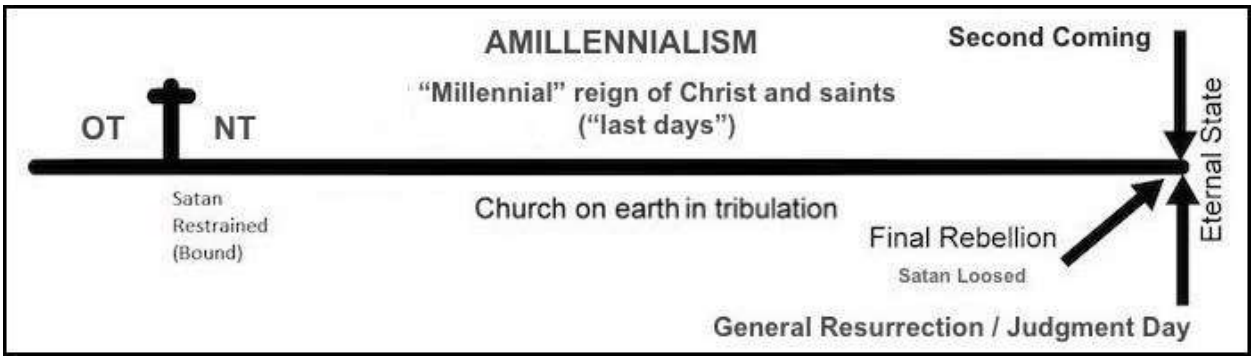
http://kimriddlebarger.squarespace.com/eschatology-charts/millennial_views.pdf [PDF]



http://www.logosapologia.org/why-eschatology-matters-part-iv-postmillennialism/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Amillennialism



http://kimriddlebarger.squarespace.com/eschatology-charts/millennial_views.pdf [PDF]

http://www.logosapologia.org/amillennialism/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

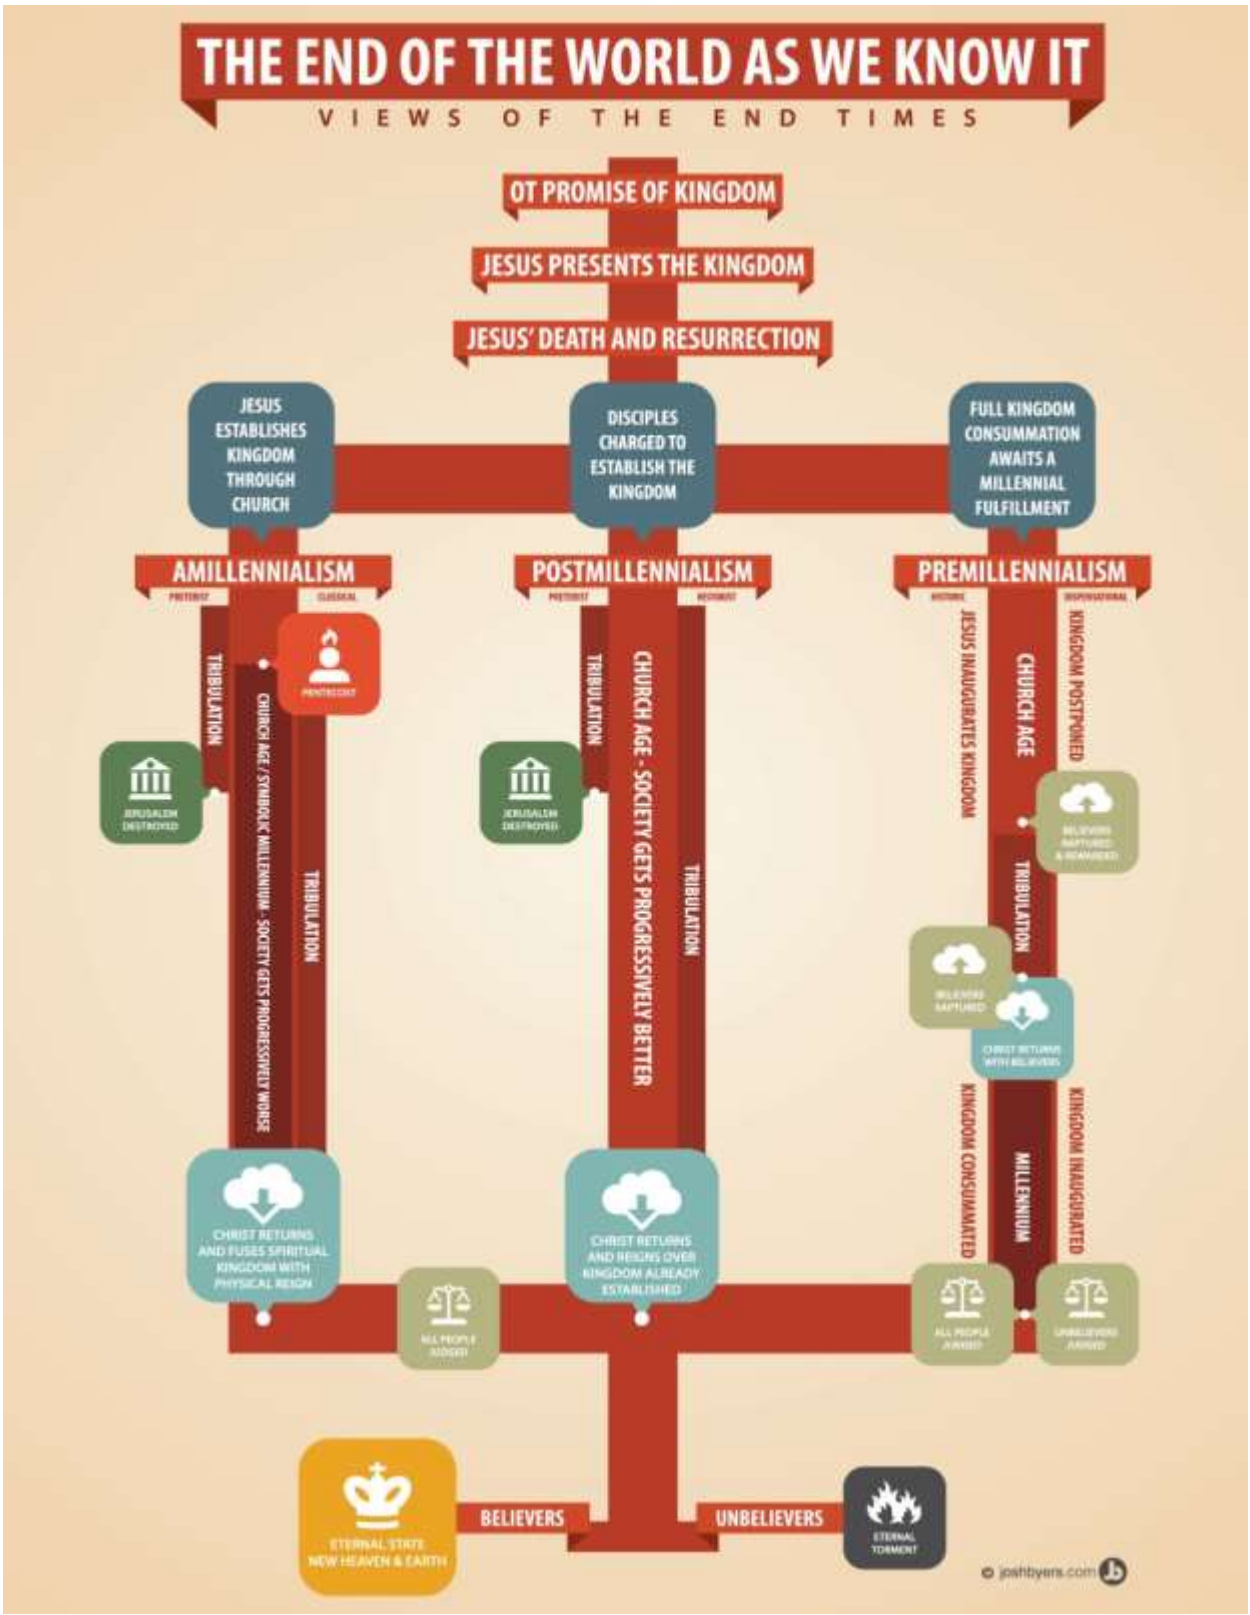
Amillennialism, continued…

http://www.twoagespilgrims.com/doctrine/dispensational-premillennialism-and-amillennialism-compared/

Return to the beginning of this Eschatology section

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Summarized from "Dispensationalism" by Dr. Ligon Duncan



Dispensational Premillennialism	Amillennialism
May be Arminian or modified Calvinist. Almost never 5-point Calvinist.	Always Calvinist. Usually 5 point.
Stresses 'literal' interpretation of the Bible.	Accepts both literal and figurative interpretation of the Bible.
Usually does not accept the idea of the 'Analogy of Faith.'	Almost always accepts the idea of the 'Analogy of Faith.'
'Israel' always means only the literal, physical descendants of Jacob.	'Israel' may mean either literal, physical descendants of Jacob or the figurative, spiritual Israel, depending on context.
Israel of God' in Gal. 6:16 means physical Israel alone.	'Israel of God' in Gal. 6:16 means spiritual Israel, parallel to Gal. 3:29, Rom. 2:28-29, 9:6, Phil. 3:3.
God has 2 peoples with 2 separate destinies: Israel (earthly) and the Church (heavenly).	God has always had only 1 people, the Church gradually developed.
The Church was born at Pentecost.	The Church began in the OT (Acts 7:38) and reached fulfillment in the NT
The Church was not prophesied as such in the OT but was a hidden mystery until the NT	There are many OT prophecies of the NT Church.
All OT prophecies for' Israel, are for literal Israel, not the Church.	Some OT prophecies are for literal Israel, others are for spiritual Israel.
God's main purpose in history is literal Israel.	God's main purpose in history is Christ and secondarily the Church.
The Church is a parenthesis in God's program for the ages.	The Church is the culmination of God's saving purpose for the ages.
The main heir to Abraham's covenant was Isaac and literal Israel.	The main heir to Abraham's covenant was Christ and spiritual Israel.
No eternal Covenant of Redemption within the Trinity.	The eternal Covenant of Redemption was within the Trinity to effect election.
No Covenant of Grace concerning Adam.	God made a conditional Covenant of Works with Adam as representative for all his posterity.
No Covenant of Works with Adam in the Garden of Eden.	God made a Covenant of Grace with Christ and His people, including Adam
Israel was rash to accept the Covenant at Mt. Sinai.	Israel was right to accept the Covenant at Mt. Sinai.
The 'New Covenant' of Jer. 31:31-34 is only for literal Israel and is not the New Covenant of Lk. 22:20.	The 'New Covenant' of Jer. 31 is the same as in Lk. 22; both are for spiritual Israel according to Heb. 8.
God's program in history is mainly through separate dispensations.	God's program in history is mainly through related covenants.
Some have said that OT sinners were saved by works.	No man has ever been saved by works, but only by grace.
Most teach that men in the OT were saved by faith in a revelation peculiar to their Dispensation, but this did not include faith in the Messiah as their sin-bearer.	All men who have ever been saved have been saved by faith in Christ as their sin-bearer, which has been progressively revealed in every age.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The OT sacrifices were not recognized as the Gospel or types of the Messiah as sin-bearer, but only seen as such in retrospect.	OT believers believed in the Gospel of Messiah as sin-bearer mainly by the sacrifices as types and prophecies.
The Holy Spirit indwells only believers in the Dispensation of Grace, not OT and not after the Rapture.	The Holy Spirit has indwelt believers in all ages, especially in the present NT era, and will not be withdrawn.
Jesus made an offer of the literal Kingdom to Israel; since Israel rejected it, it is postponed.	Jesus made only an offer of the spiritual Kingdom, which was rejected by literal Israel but has gradually been accepted by spiritual Israel.
OT believers were not 'in Christ,' nor part of the Body or Bride of Christ.	Believers in all ages are all 'in Christ' and part of the Body and Bride of Christ.
The Law has been abolished.	The Law has 3 uses: to restrain sin in society, to lead to Christ, and to instruct Christians in godliness. The ceremonial laws have been abolished; the civil laws have been abolished except for their general equity; the moral laws continue.
OT laws are no longer in effect unless repeated in the NT	OT laws are still in effect unless abrogated in the NT
The Millennium is the Kingdom of God. Dispensationalists are always Premillennial and usually Pre-Tribulational.	The Church is the Kingdom of God. Covenanters are usually Amillennial , sometimes Premillennial or Postmillennial, rarely Pre-Tribulational.
The OT animal sacrifices will be restored in the Millennium.	The OT sacrifices were fulfilled and forever abolished in Christ.
The Millennium will fulfill the Covenant to Abraham. Israel has a future.	Christ fulfilled the Covenant to Abraham. Some Covenanters believe in a future for literal Israel, most don't.
David will sit on the Millennial throne in Jerusalem.	Christ alone sits on the throne. Saints rule under Him.

http://www.twoagespilgrims.com/doctrine/dispensational-premillennialism-and-amillennialism-compared/

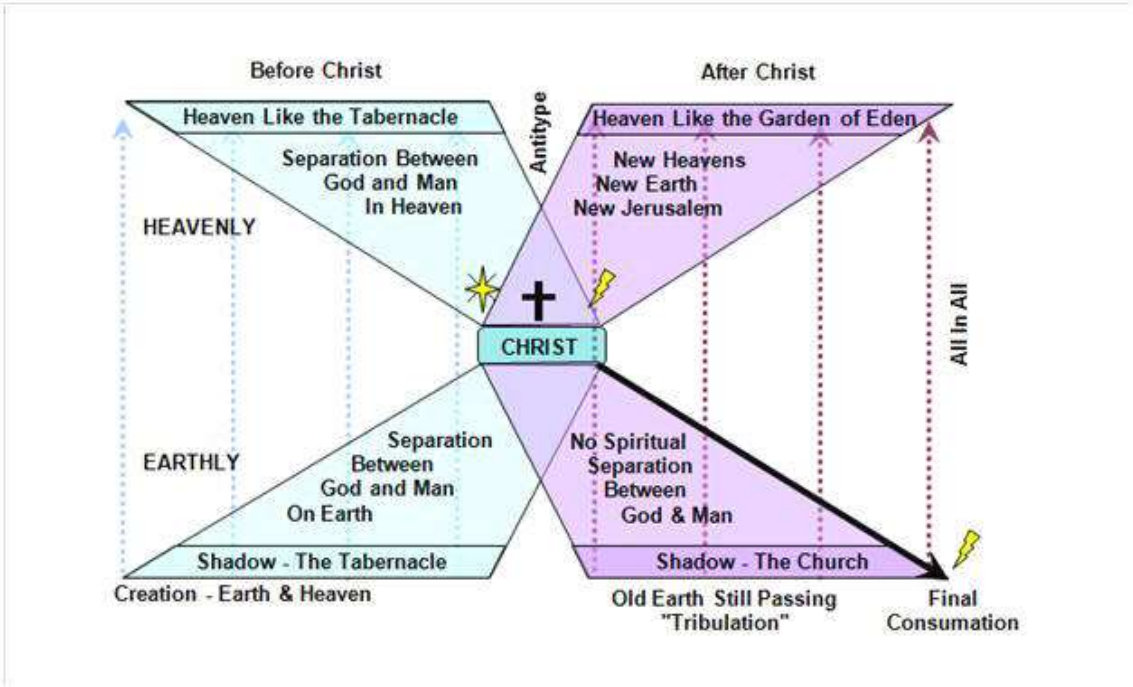
Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

End Times Infographic Dissects Christian Views on Tribulation, Rapture In Christianity, the end times is punctuated by the tribulation, the rapture and the second coming of Jesus Christ, and is often discussed

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

along the lines of premillennialism, postmillennialism and amillennialism. The Book of Revelation, the final book of the Bible, is usually cited in these discussions, although other New Testament books and prophetic books of the Old Testament are referenced as well. Christians believe the Bible teaches that Jesus Christ will return at some future point to reign on Earth and judge the world — although the purported timeline of events are hotly debated." [Note Preterist is shown under both Amillennialism and Postmillennialism in the above infographic.]
Source: http://preteristarchive.com/ARTchive/josh-byers-end-times-infographic.jpg

Preterism



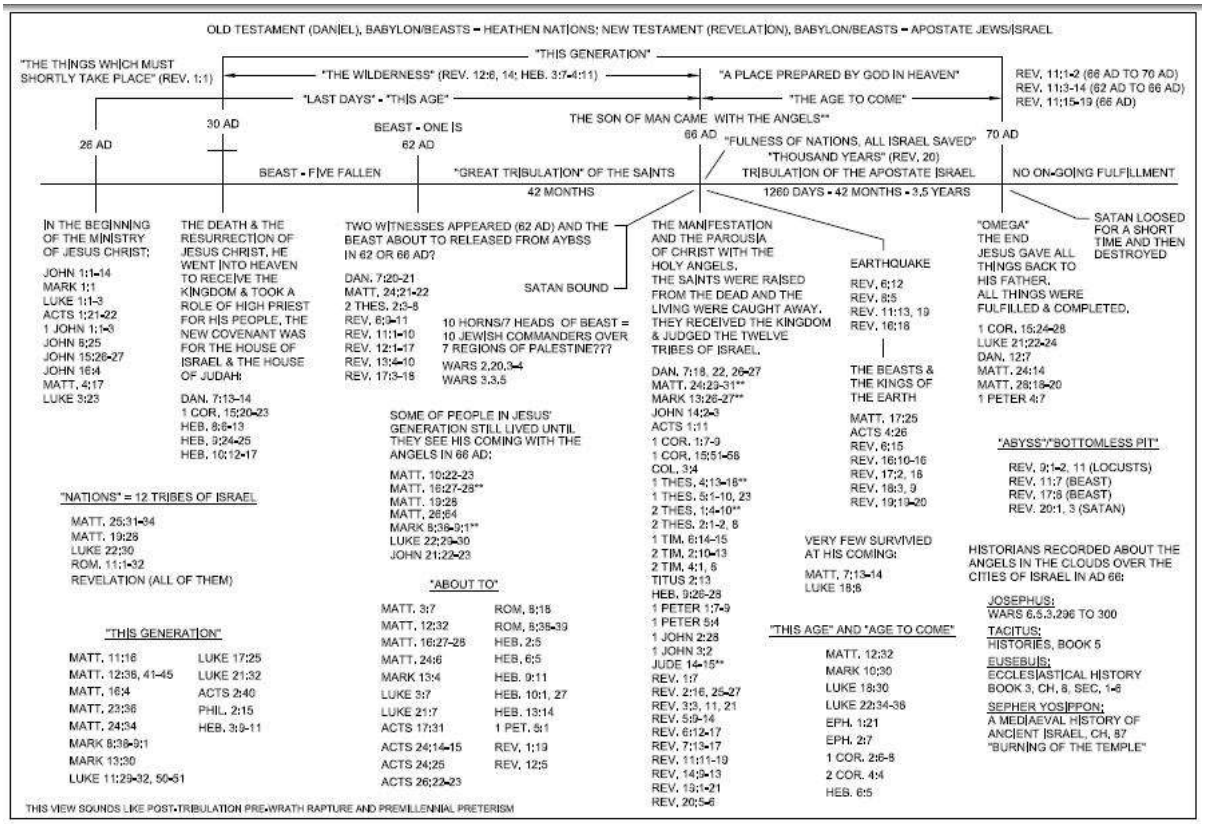
http://www.pfrs.org/preterism/index.html

Theopedia: Preterism: http://www.theopedia.com/preterism

Full Preterism, which focuses on the destruction of Jerusalem in 70 AD, assumes a symbolic Millenium and that all prophecy has been fulfilled in one way or another.

Partial Preterism is usually a subset of Amillennialism (sometimes Post-millenialism) and associated with covenant theology, “Those who hold to partial preterism believe that the prophecies in Daniel, Matthew 24, and Revelation (with the exception of the last two or three chapters) have already been fulfilled and were fulfilled no later than the first century AD. According to partial preterism, there is no rapture, and passages describing the tribulation and the Antichrist are actually referring to the destruction of Jerusalem in AD 70 and the Roman emperor Titus. Partial preterists do believe in the return of Christ to earth and a future resurrection and judgment, but they do not teach a millennial kingdom or that Israel as a nation has a place in God’s future plan. The “last days” relates to the old Jewish covenant not the earth itself. [Source: http://www.gotquestions.org/partial-preterism.html]

Idealistic Preterism:



[Source: http://www.preteristarchive.com/Idealism/]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Preterist Perspective

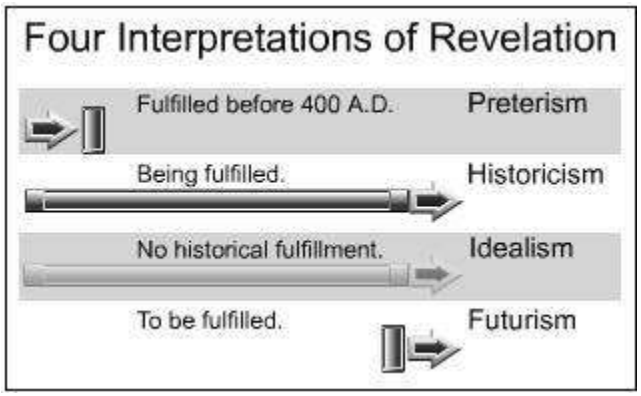


Chart of Ages:

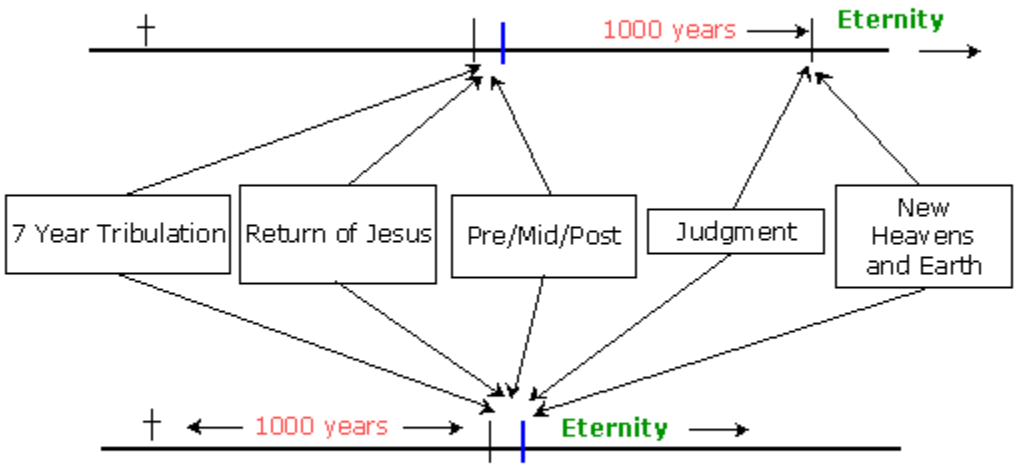
Discussing the "Two Age Model" "Do no preterists wish to offer their views? The two age model contradicts preterism. Preterism depends in part on interpreting some passages about a present age as referring to the age of the Old Covenant, which was to be ended with the destruction of Jerusalem." (represented in the Idealism of Waldron)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

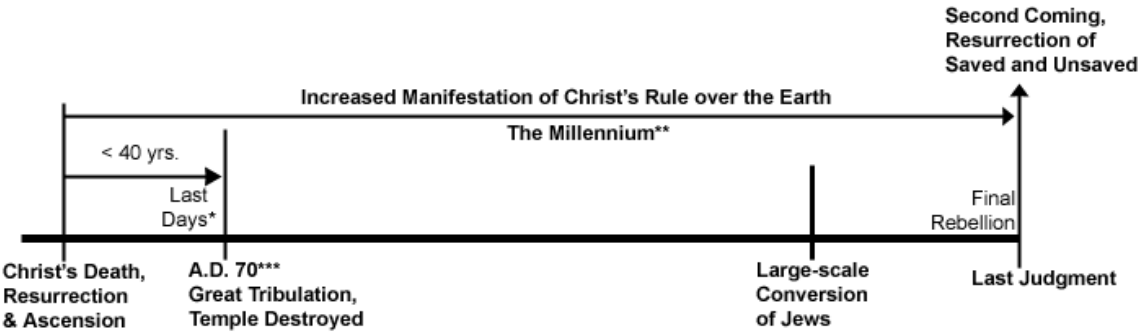
[Source: http://preteristarchive.com/ARTchive/Charts/]



Return to the beginning of this Eschatology section

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Premillennialism vs Amillenialism



https://carm.org/amillennialism-and-premillennialism

Premillenialism

Amillenialism

Postmillennialism

* Some Postmillennialists teach that the Last Days are the entire period from the first to the second coming, since that is the last age of the earth prior to eternity.

 Some Postmillenialists have taught that church history will end in a literal 1000 year period of great blessing before the Final Judgment.

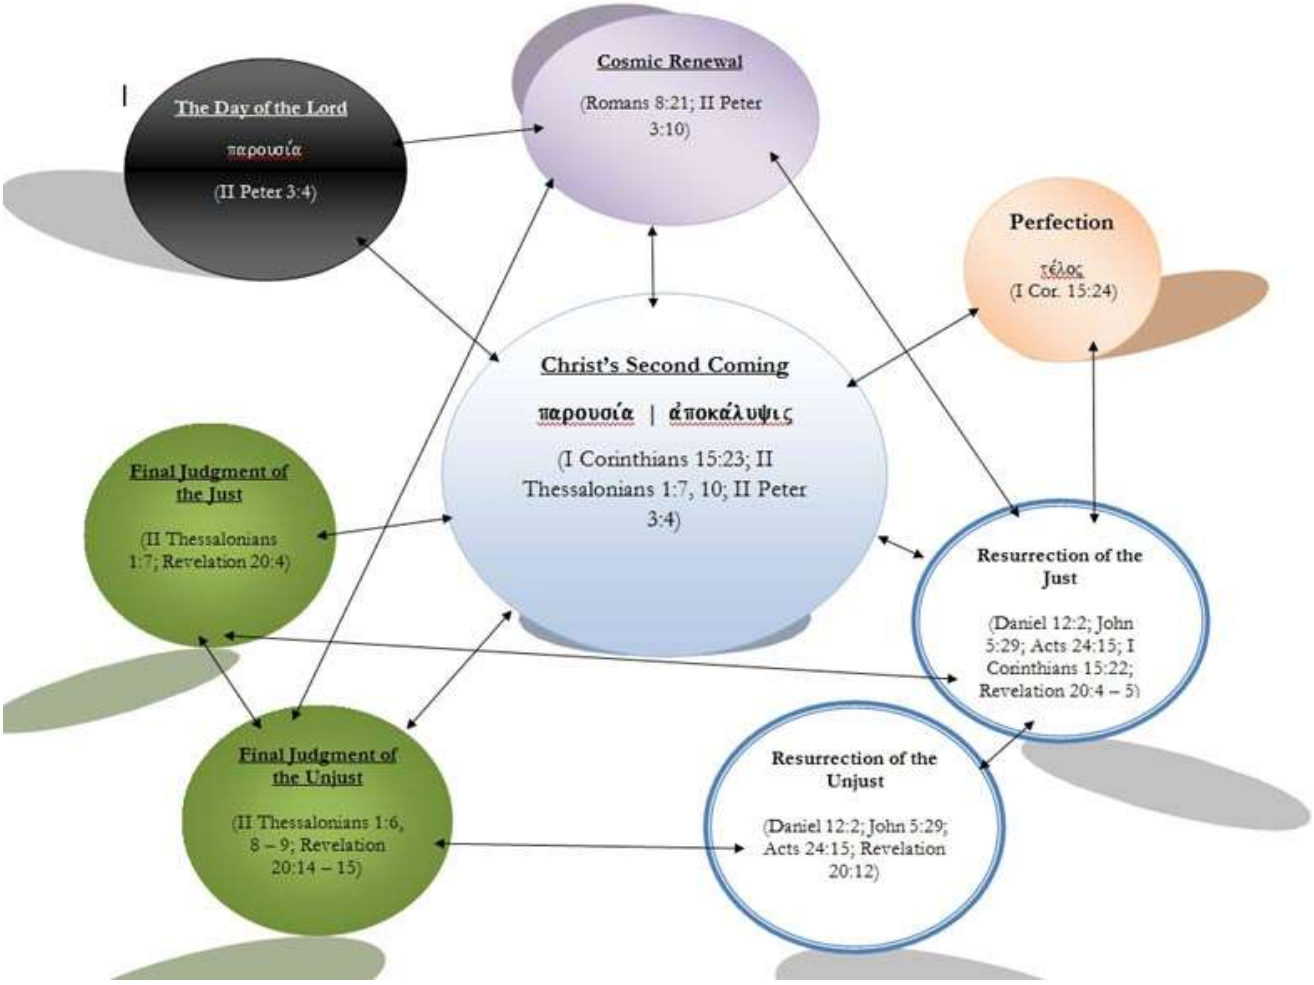
 The view that the Great Tribulation has already occured is called the "preterist" view. Some Postmillennialists believe that the Tribulation covers the entire church history, called the "church historicist" view.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Postmillennialism vs Premillennialism

http://www.rekindle.co.za/content/postmillennialism-vs-premillennialism/

If you're wondering about amillennialism compared with postmillennialism or premillennialism, it may help you to know that Amillennialism is fairly similar to the postmillennial view but does not share the upward curve (where Christian influence brings about good in the world), postmillennialists are sometimes called optimistic amillennialists for this reason.



Postmillennialism (after the millennium) is an eschatological position within Christian theology that interprets Revelation 20 as a period in which through the preaching of the Word of God that the entire world will eventually be converted to Christianity, and this will usher in the kingdom of Christ. This is when Christ will return. It is postmillennial in that after the 1,000-year reign of Christ that the world will be converted and the final work of God will be completed. Some Postmillennialists believe the 1,000 years is literal, and others believe it is figurative.
https://carm.org/dictionary-postmillennialism

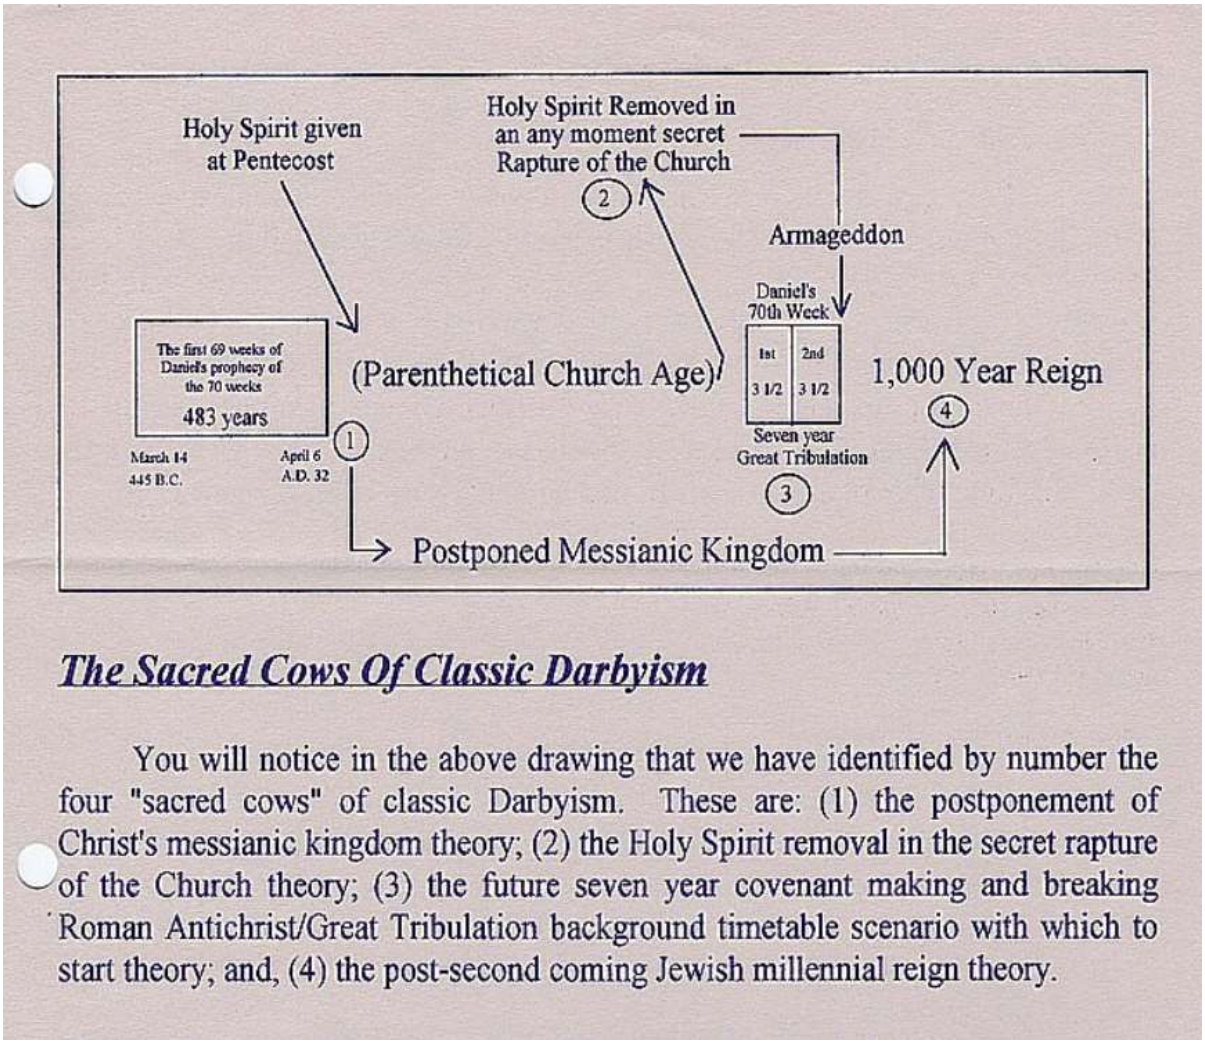
What is Postmillennialism?

http://digitalcommons.liberty.edu/cgi/viewcontent.cgi?article=1041&context=pretrib_arch [PDF]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

An Amillennial Eschatology Chart!

http://www.reformationtheology.com/Parousia_Concurrent.jpg



http://hereiblog.com/files/amillennialchart.pdf [PDF]

http://www.reformationtheology.com/2008/12/an_amillennial_eschatology_cha.php

…it shows, in picture form, (above) that all these events are concurrent or take place simultaneously. The return of Jesus ushers in the resurrection of the just and unjust, the final judgement, the new heavens and the new earth etc...

Alternate source:
http://jollyblogger.typepad.com/jollyblogger/2008/12/an-amillennial-eschatology-chart.html

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Picture outline of the belief system of modern Scofield/Darby; otherwise known as Dispensational Premillennialism

[Source: http://www.facebook.com/WesleyanEndTimeBibleProphecy; http://www.rapturerevival.org/Main%20pages/diagrams.html]

