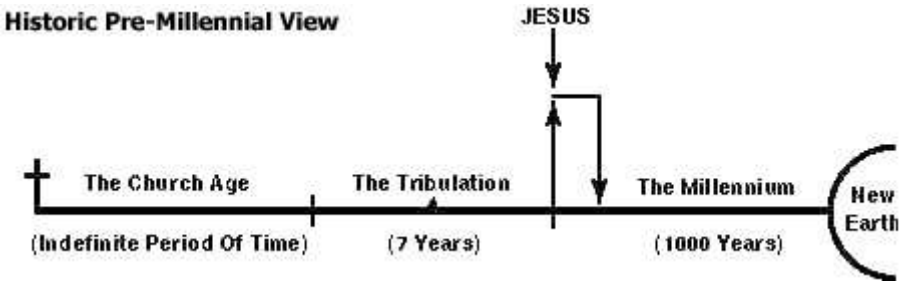
End Time Viewpoints - Why are there so many? How do they differ? Does it matter?

…Basically, there are four major end time viewpoints. Or, to put it another way, there are four different interpretations about what the Bible says concerning end time events.



Historic Premillennialism

The oldest viewpoint is called historic premillennialism. It is termed "historic" for two reasons: to differentiate it from modern premillennialism and to indicate that it was the historic position of the early Church.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

It is called "premillennial" because it envisions a return of Jesus to earth before (pre) the beginning of the Millennium. The word, millennium, is a combination of two Latin words mille annum which simply means one thousand years.

A diagram of this viewpoint is presented below. It divides the future of the world into four periods: 1) the current Church Age; 2) a seven year period called the Tribulation; 3) a reign of Christ on earth lasting one thousand years (the Millennium); and 4) the Eternal State when the redeemed will dwell forever with God on a new earth.

This view is based on a literal interpretation of what the Bible says will happen in the end times. One of its distinctive features is that it places the Rapture of the Church at the end of the Tribulation.

According to this view, the Church will remain on earth during the Tribulation. At the end of that period, Jesus will appear in the heavens and the Church will be caught up to meet Him in the sky. The saints will be instantly glorified, and then they will immediately return to the earth to reign with Jesus for a thousand years.

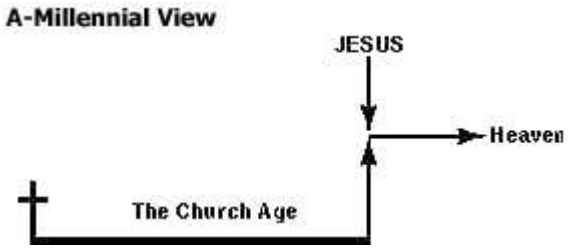
The Church Fathers

This is the only view of end time events that existed during the first 300 years of the Church. With one exception, all the Church Fathers who expressed themselves on the topic of prophecy were premillennial until A.D. 400. Justin Martyr, who was born in A.D. 100, went so far in his writings on the subject as to suggest that anyone with a different viewpoint was heretical.

Those today who disagree with this view respond to the near unanimity of the early Church Fathers by saying they were simply wrong in their interpretation of the prophetic Scriptures.

It certainly should be noted that these early church leaders were not prophetic scholars. They wrote very little on prophecy, and what they wrote was sketchy. Their main concern was not prophecy, but the deity of Jesus, the oneness of God, the practical problems of church organization, and survival amidst persecution.

Yet their concept of end time events should not be dismissed out of hand as crude and primitive, for anyone who has studied the prophetic Scriptures will have to admit that the Church Fathers' viewpoint presents a plain sense summary of the Bible's teachings about the end times.



The one exception to the consensus opinion among the early Church Fathers was Origen (185-254 A.D.). Origen's approach to all of Scripture was to spiritualize it. He therefore denied the literal meaning of prophecy. He looked upon its language as highly symbolic and expressive of deep spiritual truths rather than of future historical events.

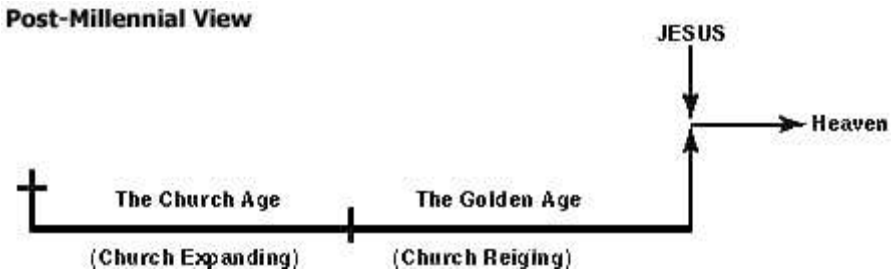
Although Origen could not accept the premillennial viewpoint, he did not develop an alternative. That task fell to the Church Father named St. Augustine (358-434 A.D.) who ultimately had the greatest impact on the development of church doctrine. He conceived an alternative viewpoint at the end of the fourth century.

Amillennialism

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The concept formulated by Augustine is illustrated below. It is called amillennialism. This strange name derives from the fact that in the Greek language a word is negated by putting the letter "a" in front of it. Thus, amillennial literally means "no thousand years."

The term is misleading, however, because most amillennialists do believe in a millennium, but not a literal, earthly one. They argue that the Millennium is the current spiritual reign of Christ over the Church and that it will continue until He returns for His saints. They thus interpret the thousand years as a symbolic period of time.



One appealing aspect of the amillennial view is its simplicity. The Church Age comes to a screaming halt as a result of the Rapture of the Church. There is no Tribulation, no literal earthly Millennium, and no eternity on a new earth. Augustine spiritualized everything, arguing that the kingdom is the Church, the Millennium is the current Church Age, and the new earth is symbolic language for Heaven.

Augustine's view of end time events was adopted by the Council of Ephesus in 431 A.D. and has remained Catholic dogma to this day. It is also the current majority viewpoint among mainline Protestant denominations. In other words, the amillennial viewpoint is the one that is held today by the vast majority of all those who profess to be Christians.

Postmillennialism

The third view of end time events, called post-millennialism, did not develop until the mid-seventeenth century, long after the Reformation. The Reformation had little impact on prophetic views because the Reformation leaders had their attention riveted on the questions of Biblical authority and justification by faith.

The postmillennial view was a product of the rationalistic revolution in thinking. It was developed in the mid-1600's by a Unitarian minister named Daniel Whitby. It was immediately dubbed "postmillennialism" because it envisioned a return of Jesus after (post) a literal thousand year reign of the Church over all the earth. This view is illustrated below.

Postmillennialism spread quickly within the Protestant world, probably for two reasons. First, it gave Protestants an opportunity to differ from the Catholic position. More importantly, it was a theological expression of the prevailing rationalistic philosophy of the age, a philosophy that boldly proclaimed the ability of mankind to build the kingdom of heaven on earth.

The postmillennial view holds that the Church Age will gradually evolve into a "golden age" when the Church will rule over all the world. This will be accomplished through the Christianization of the nations.

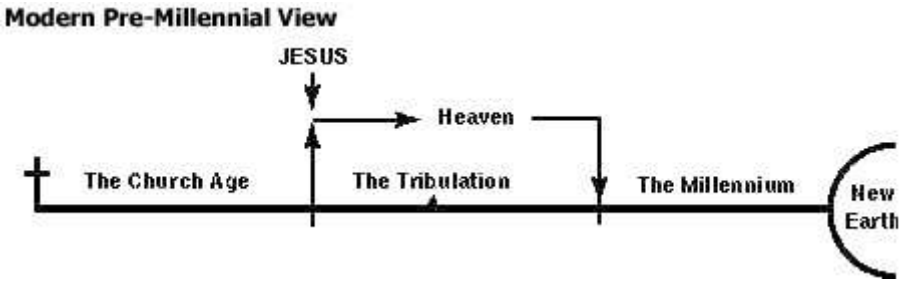
 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

To its credit, it can be said that this viewpoint served as a mighty stimulus to missionary efforts during the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries. Missionaries were seized with the vision of speeding up the return of the Lord by preaching the gospel to all the world.

A Sudden Death

By 1900 nearly all segments of Protestant Christianity had adopted the postmillennial viewpoint. But the view was to be quickly dropped.

Postmillennialism died almost overnight with the outbreak of the First World War. The reason, of course, is that this great war undermined one of the fundamental assumptions of the postmillennial viewpoint the assumption of the inevitability of progress. This had always been a fatal flaw in the postmillennial concept, due mainly to its birth in rationalistic humanism. Its visions of the perfectibility of man and the redemption of society were destroyed by the atrocities of the war.



Another fatal flaw of the postmillennial viewpoint was its lack of a consistent Biblical base. To expound the view, it was necessary to literalize some prophecies (those concerning the Millennium) while at the same time spiritualizing other prophecies (the personal presence of the Lord during the Millennium). Also, it was necessary to ignore or explain away the many prophecies in the Bible that clearly state that society is going to get worse rather than better as the time approaches for the Lord's return (Matthew 24:4-24 and 2 Timothy 3:1-5).

The sudden death of postmillennialism left a prophetic vacuum among Protestant groups. Since the postmillennial view was based to a large extent upon a spiritualizing approach to Scripture, most Protestant groups returned to the spiritualized amillennial viewpoint they had abandoned in the 1700's.

However, a new choice of prophetic viewpoint presented itself on the American scene about this same time, and some of the more fundamentalist Protestant groups opted for it. This view was technically called "dispensational premillennialism" because it originated with a group who had been nicknamed "Dispensationalists." I call it the modern premillennial viewpoint.

Modern Premillennialism

The modern premillennial viewpoint crystallized in the early 1800's among a group in England known as the Plymouth Brethren. The view is illustrated below.

As can be readily seen, this viewpoint revives the historic premillennial view except for its concept of the Rapture of the Church. The Plymouth Brethren envisioned two future comings of Jesus, one for His Church and one with His Church. Their concept of the Rapture has since come to be known as the "pre-Tribulation Rapture."

This viewpoint has been attacked as being "too new to be true." But its advocates are quick to point out that the Bible teaches the principle of "progressive illumination" regarding prophecy (Daniel 12:4 and Jeremiah 30:24). What they mean by this is that the Bible itself indicates that end time prophecy will be better understood as the time nears for its fulfillment.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Comparisons

Looking back over these four views of the end times, we can see some significant differences. But let's not overlook the similarities.

1. All agree that Jesus is coming back for His saints.
2. All agree that the redeemed will spend eternity in the presence of God.

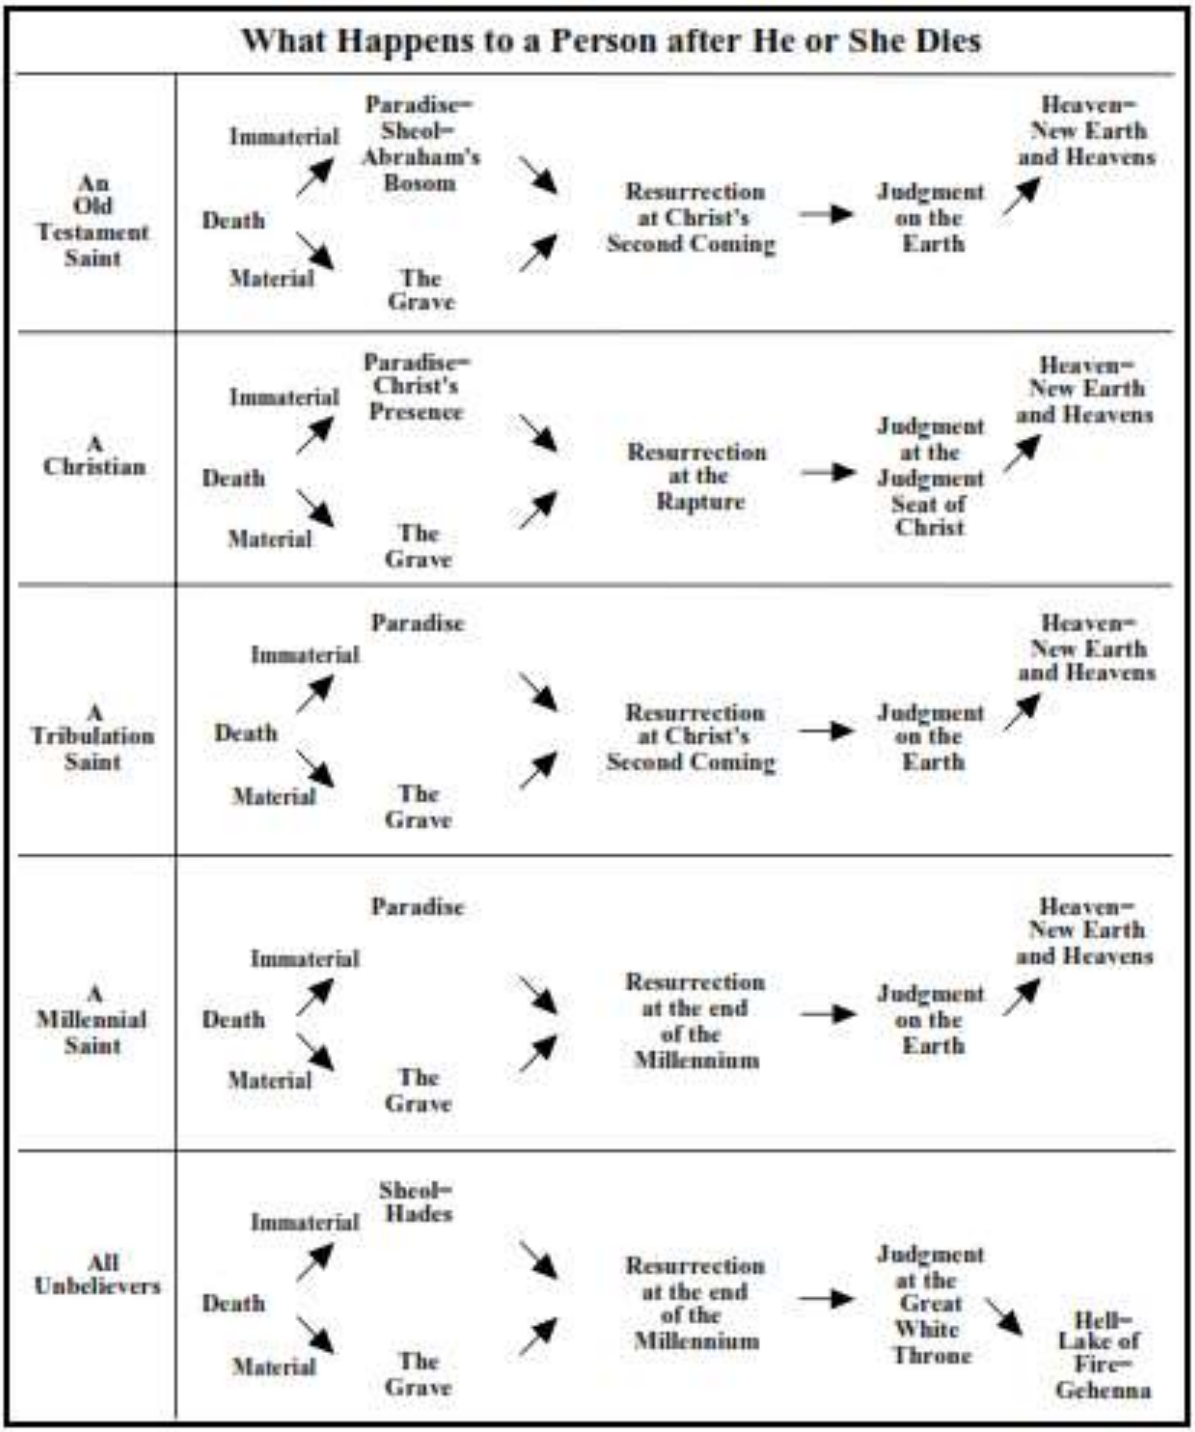
These two points of agreement are far more important than the many points of disagreement.

Still, the areas of disagreement are significant. Two of the views (the amillennial and postmillennial) deny that Jesus will ever manifest His glory before the nations in a world wide reign of peace, justice and righteousness. The postmillennial view also denies the soon coming of the Lord, for according to this view, the Lord cannot return until His Church has ruled over the world for a thousand years.

The key to the differences is the approach to Scripture. If you tend to spiritualize Scripture, you will end up with an amillennial or postmillennial viewpoint. If you tend to accept Scripture for its plain sense meaning, you will have a premillennial viewpoint.



[Source: http://christinprophecy.org/articles/end-time-viewpoints/]

The Theological Context of Premillennialism (Walvoord)

[Source: http://www.walvoord.com/article/150]

Return to the beginning of this Eschatology section

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

[Source: Dr. Constable Expository Notes – Revelation]
http://www.soniclight.com/constable/notes.htm

Note: Above assumes a dispensational, pre-tribulation (and therefore pre-millennial) perspective.

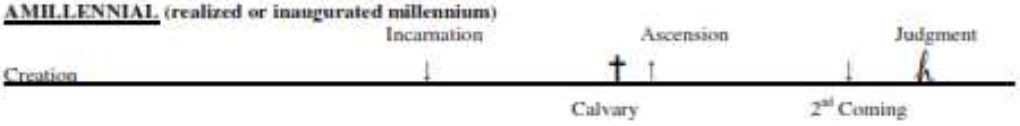
 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

VIEWS OF THE SECOND COMING

INTRODUCTION

A. This subject has caused great arguments.
B. The how is not certain, the when is not certain, but the event is sure!
C. Where did you get what you believe?
D. What is the purpose of the Second Coming?
E. Does the Bible teach a systematic eschatology?
F. Why is our day so interested in the Second Coming?
G. All theories concerning the physical return of Jesus are conservative views.

EARLY CHURCH PREMILLENNIAL (Historical Premillennial)

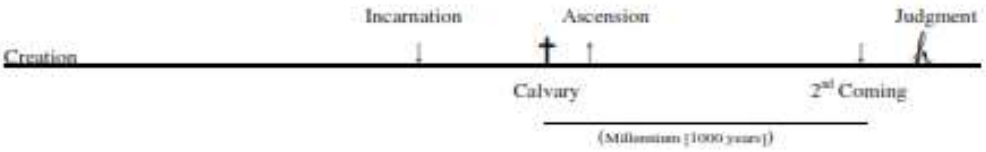


Presuppositions
1. History of the Earth is analogous to 7 days of Creation (Epistle of Barnabus, Irenaeus, Methodius)
2. Each day represents 1000 years (II Pet. 3:8; Ps. 90:4)

Advocates
1. Papias Irenaeus, Justin Martyr, Tertullian Hipplytus, Methodius
2. George Ladd (Historical Premillennial)

Strengths
1. Certain events must occur before Parousia
   a. Gospel to all nations (Matt. 24:14)
   b. Conversion of Israel (Rom. 11:25ff)
   c. Great Apostasy (Matt.24:10; II Thess. 2:3)
   d. Great Tribulation (Matt. 24:21)
   e. Revealing of Man of Sin - Antichrist (II Thess. 2:3)
2. A visible, universal Rapture and Coming

AMILLENNIAL (realized or inaugurated millennium)



Presuppositions
1. The Church is Spiritual Israel (Gal. 3:9,29; 6:16; Rom. 2:5,9, 28-29; Rev. 1:6; I Pet. 3:6)
2. One Covenant (Old and New, Rom. 4 - Abraham is Paul's example for justification by faith)
3. Christ's Kingdom is not temporal (John 18:36)
4. One Second Coming
   One Resurrection
   One Judgment
   The Eternal Kingdom

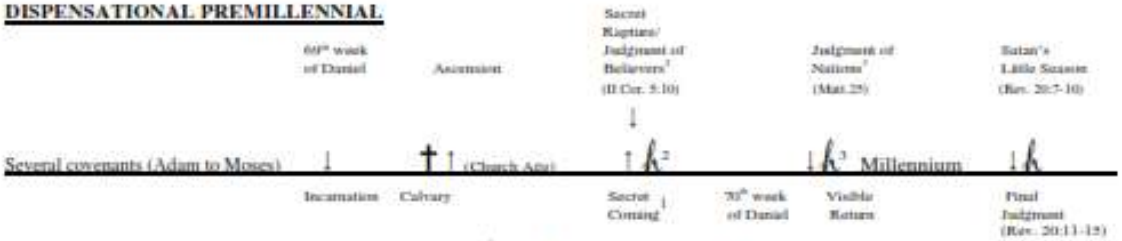
Advocates
1. Some Early Church Fathers
2. Augustine
3. Zwingli
4. Calvin (Presbyterianism)
5. Ray Summers (Baptist)
6. Jay Adams (Reformed)
7. Most Churches of Christ

Strengths
1. Victory won at Calvary, not Millennium
2. Satan bound now
3. Unity of God's plan of redemption

POSTMILLENNIAL (millennium now)

Presuppositions
1. Man's efforts will bring in the Kingdom (II Pet. 3:12; Matt. 6:10)
2. Things are getting better and better

Advocates
1. Jonathan Edwards
2. A. H. Strong
3. W. T. Conner
4. Most 19th Century Scholars



Strengths
1. Takes Second Coming Seriously
2. Man has a part in God's plan
3. Optimistic about contemporary culture

Continued next page…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

…continued from preceeding page

DISPENSATIONAL PREMILLENNIAL

[1] There are 3 views of this Secret Coming:
1) Pre-tribulationist
2) Mid-tribulationist
3) Post-tribulationist

[2] Judgment of Believers (II Cor. 5:10)

[3] Judgment of Nations (Matt. 25)

Presuppositions
1. The Bible is divided into seven distinct dispensations
2. Literal fulfillment of every OT prophecy to Israel
3. Church and Israel totally separate. The Church is God's Plan B when the Jews rejected Jesus as the Messiah
4. The Church will be secretly raptured, before the Tribulation. The book of Revelation, after chapter 5, is Jewish.
5. NT interpreted in light of OT prophecy

Advocates
1. John Darby (Plymouth Brethren)
2. Clarence Larkin
3. D. L. Moody
4. C. I. Scofield (Reference Bible)
5. Dallas Seminary (Pentecost, Ryrie, Walvoord)
6. W. A. Criswell (Southern Baptist)
7. Hal Lindsey
8. Tim LaHaye
9. Bible Churches (Dallas Seminary)

Strengths
1. Takes Bible prophecy seriously (especially Daniel)
2. Any-moment return (Matt. 24:40-42)

BOB'S TENTATIVE OPINION (Historical Premillennial/Post-Tribulationist/Nonmillennial)

Presuppositions
1. One Plan (Gen. 3:15)
2. Unity of the people of God (Rom. 2:28-29;4; Gal. 3:29; 6:16)
3. Apocalyptic nature of Daniel, Ezekiel, and Revelation (literary genre)
4. OT saw one coming (Two Ages), one visible coming
5. One visible coming (Matt. 24:27)
   One Rapture (I Thess. 4:13-16)
   One Resurrection
   One Judgment (Matt. 25; Rev. 20)
   The Eternal Kingdom

Dialectical Tensions:
1. between Old Covenant prophetic models and New Covenant apostolic models
2. between the Bible's monotheism (one God for all) and the election of Israel
3. between the conditional aspect of biblical covenants and promises ("if...then") and the unconditional faithfulness of God to fallen mankind's redemption
4. between Near Eastern literary genres and modern western literary models
5. between the Kingdom of God as present, yet future
6. between belief in the imminent return of Christ and the belief that some events must happen first

Conclusion
1. John Calvin said of the book of Revelation, "Only God knows what this means."
2. There is no approved or majority opinion on the Second Coming.
3. Every generation of believers forces the Bible into its own historical and cultural settings.
4. There is no systematic eschatology in the NT, but truth is revealed for us to "be ready" and "be active."
5. Only conservatives fight over this issue.
6. It is every generation of believers' hope, encouragement, and motivation to expect the Second Coming in their lifetime (Mark 13:33-37).

[Source: http://www.ibiblio.org/freebiblecommentary/pdf/EN/second_coming_theories.pdf] [Dr. Bob Utley]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

A Comparison and Contrast Between:
Our Present World, the Millennium and the Eternal State

A Refutation of the Teaching that Denies the Literal 1000 Year Reign of Christ*

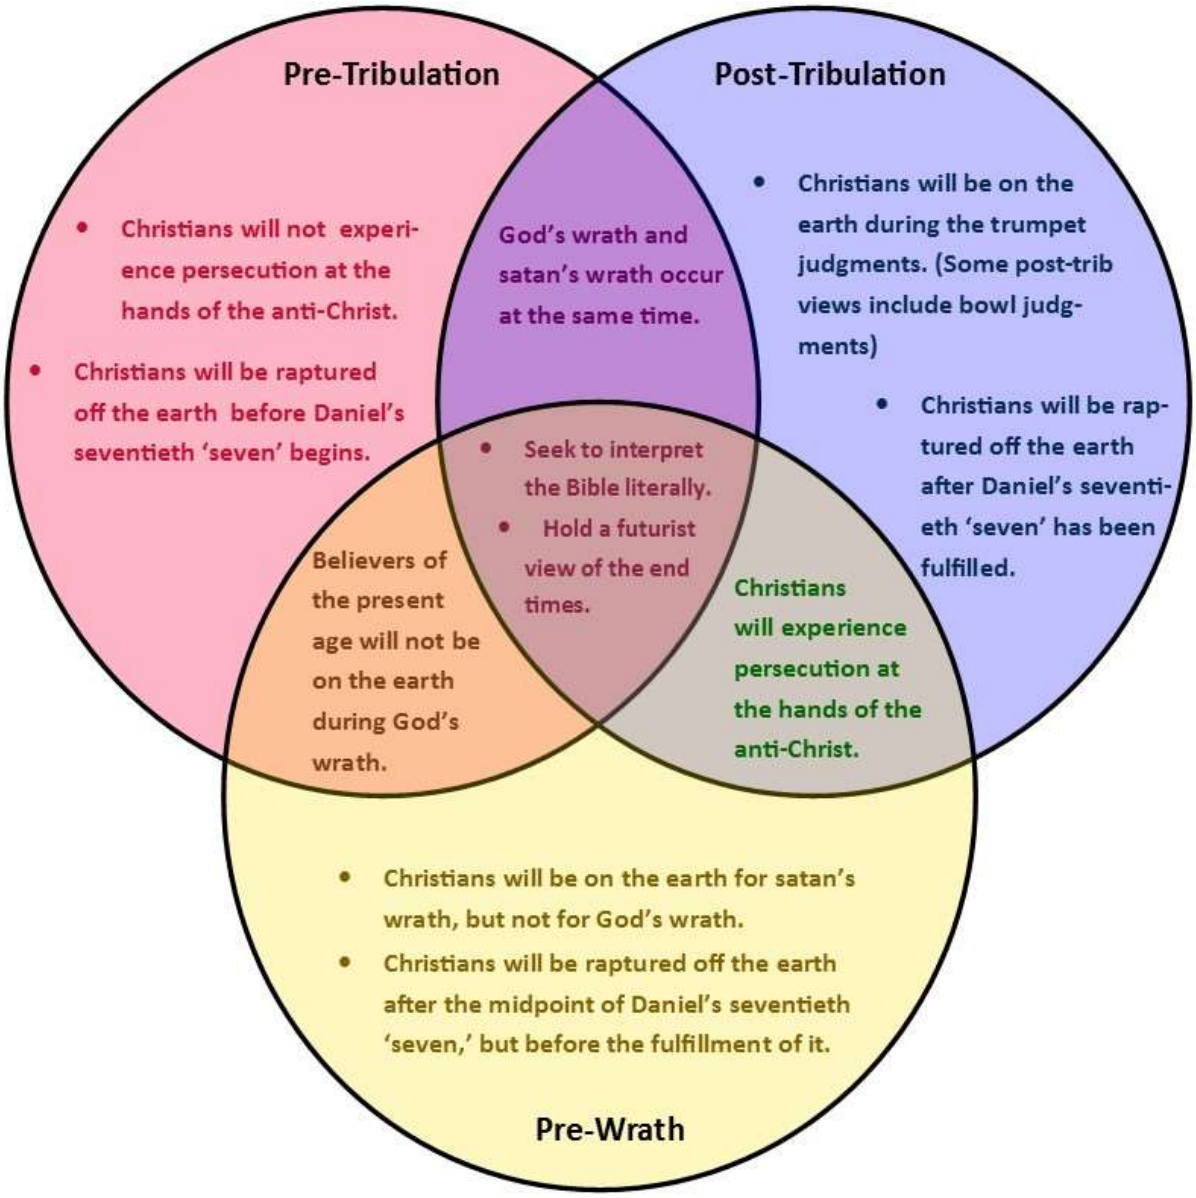
Introduction: In these days there is much confusion concerning the subject of the millennium. Many teach that the millennium is taking place today and that the church is fulfilling the kingdom promises that God made to Israel (Replacement Theology). These people generally teach that at the second coming of Christ there will be one general resurrection and one general judgment followed immediately by the eternal state. The following chart illustrates that if the Bible is interpreted literally (in its plain and normal sense), three distinct ages must be recognized which are quite different from each other. The kingdom age is not the same as our present age; the kingdom age is also quite different from the eternal state. Thus three distinct ages must be distinguished. God means what He says and says what He means. May we approach the prophetic Scriptures with much reverence and humbly take God at His Word.

TOPIC	THIS PRESENT AGE (Our Present World)	THE AGE TO COME (The Millennium)	THE ETERNAL AGES (The Eternal State)
Duration	Unrevealed (Matthew 24:36)	A Thousand Years (Revelation 20:2-7)	Forever and ever (Rev. 22:5)
Preceding Event	Inaugurated by the death, resurrection and ascension of Christ and the coming of the Holy Spirit (Acts 2)	Preceded by the great tribulation and the second coming of Christ (Matthew 24:21, 29-31)	Preceded by the Great White Throne Judgment (Revelation 20:11-15)
Termination Point	Terminated by the second coming of Christ (Matthew 24:3)	Terminated by the release of Satan from the abyss or bottomless pit (Rev. 20:7)	No termination point (Revelation 22:5)
The Resurrection	The resurrection is future (John 5:28—"the hour is coming")	Preceded by the first resurrection (Revelation 20:4-6)	Preceded by the second resurrection (Revelation 20:5, 13-15)
Death	Men are under the curse of physical death (Heb. 9:27). Death is the norm.	Men enjoy unusual longevity but there is occasional death (Isaiah 65:20,22). Death is the exception.	"There shall be no more death" (Revelation 21:4)
Animals	Animals are under the curse and bondage	Animals are delivered from the curse and	No mention of animals

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

	resulting from the fall of man (Rom. 8:20-21). Many animals are fierce, dangerous and carnivorous.	bondage which resulted from man's sin, and no animals are fierce and carnivorous (Hosea 2:18; Ezek. 34:25; Isaiah 11:6-8)
The Sea (Ocean)	The sea is in existence	The sea is in existence (Rev. 20:13; Ps. 72:8; Ezek. 47:8,15,17)	"There was no more sea" (Rev. 21:1)
Sun and rain	We enjoy both (Matthew 5:45)	In Christ's kingdom of peace both will exist (Isaiah 30:26; Zech. 14:17)	There will be no sun and no rain (Rev. 21:23)

TOPIC	THIS PRESENT AGE (Our Present World)	THE AGE TO COME (The Millennium)	THE ETERNAL AGES (The Eternal State)
Sickness	There is abundant sickness and disease (Matthew 24:7)	No sickness (Isaiah 33:24) unless divinely inflicted (Zech. 14:18; Isaiah 65:20)	No more sickness or pain (Revelation 21:4)
Evangelism	Evangelism needful and necessary (Mark 16:15; Matthew 28:18-20; etc.)	Evangelism not necessary (see Jer. 31:34) but people will still need to choose for or against the God whom they know	Evangelism not necessary. Eternal destinies will be settled and fixed (Revelation 22:11)
Saved and Unsaved	Saved and unsaved will be mixed (Matthew 13:30)	At the beginning of the millennium all will be saved (Matt. 25:34; 13:41,49) but at the end there will be a great host of unsaved (Rev. 20:7-9)	Only the saved will be in the eternal city. The unsaved will be forever excluded (Rev. 21:8; 22:15).
Kind of Body	All inhabitants are in natural bodies because the resurrection is yet future	The resurrected saints will be in glorified bodies; the survivors of the tribulation and their	All saved inhabitants will be in glorified bodies, bodies not subject to pain or death (Revelation 21:4)



Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

		offspring will be in natural bodies
1 Corinthians chapter 15	We are awaiting His coming (1 Cor. 15:23)	Christ reigns but there are still enemies and still death (1 Cor. 15:24-25)	No more enemies...the kingdom is delivered unto God (1 Cor. 15:26-28)
The Devil	Active, on the loose and walking about seeking whom he may devour (1 Pet. 5:8)	Chained and bound in the abyss (temporary prison) (Revelation 20:1-7)	In the lake of fire (permanent prison) (Revelation 20:10)
Religion	Many false religions—in and outside of "Christendom"	False religion is not tolerated by the King. True worship is strictly enforced (Zech. 14:16-19)	True worship only and forever (Revelation 22:3)
War and Peace	There will be wars to the end of the age (Matt. 24:6-7) until the "Prince of Peace" comes	There will be no war (Hosea 2:18; Micah 4:3-4; Isaiah 2:4) but the thousand years will end with a final rebellion (Rev. 20:7,9)	There will be no war and no more rebellion "for the former things are passed away" (Rev. 21:4)
Sacrifice	No animal sacrifices for the church. The Lord's Table is observed in remembrance of Him (1 Cor. 11:23-34).	Animal sacrifices will be offered in connection with millennial temple worship (Ezek. 43:27; 45:15,17; etc.).	No sacrificial system. Continual worship of the Lamb that was slain!
Temple	The church is God's temple today (1 Cor. 3:16-17) and there will be a tribulation temple at the end of the age (2 Thess. 2:4; Matthew 24:15)	A glorious millennial temple far surpassing that of Solomon's (Haggai 2:6-9; Ezek. 40-48)	No temple, just a glorious and great God (Revelation 21:22)
The Lord Jesus Christ	Our exalted Lord! (Philippians 2:9-11)	The great millennial King! (Isaiah 33:22)	The Lamb of eternity! (Revelation 21-22)

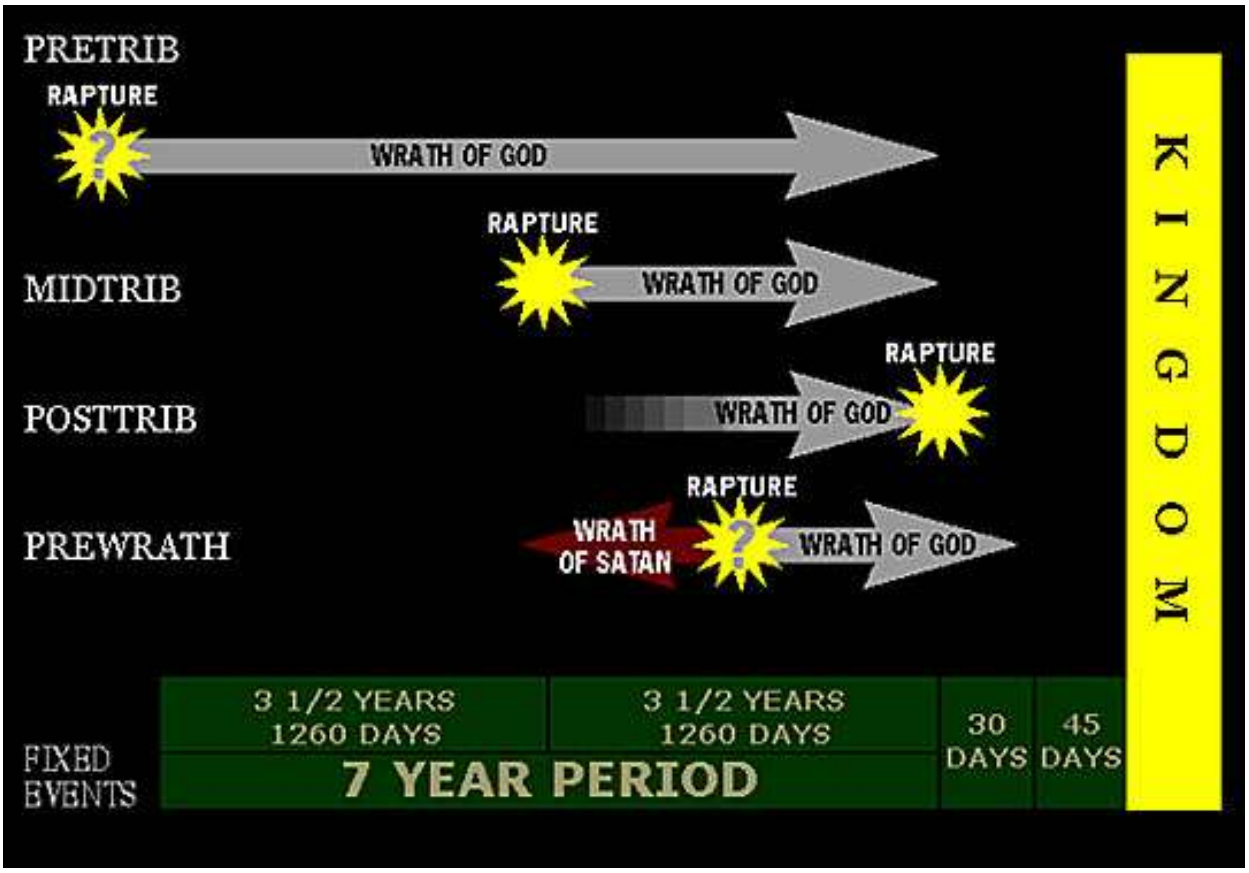
*This article by George Zeller first appeared in The Voice (IFCA), July/August 1987. It has since been revised.
[Source: http://www.middletownbiblechurch.org/proph/millenim.htm]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



Premillennialism's Tribulation Beliefs

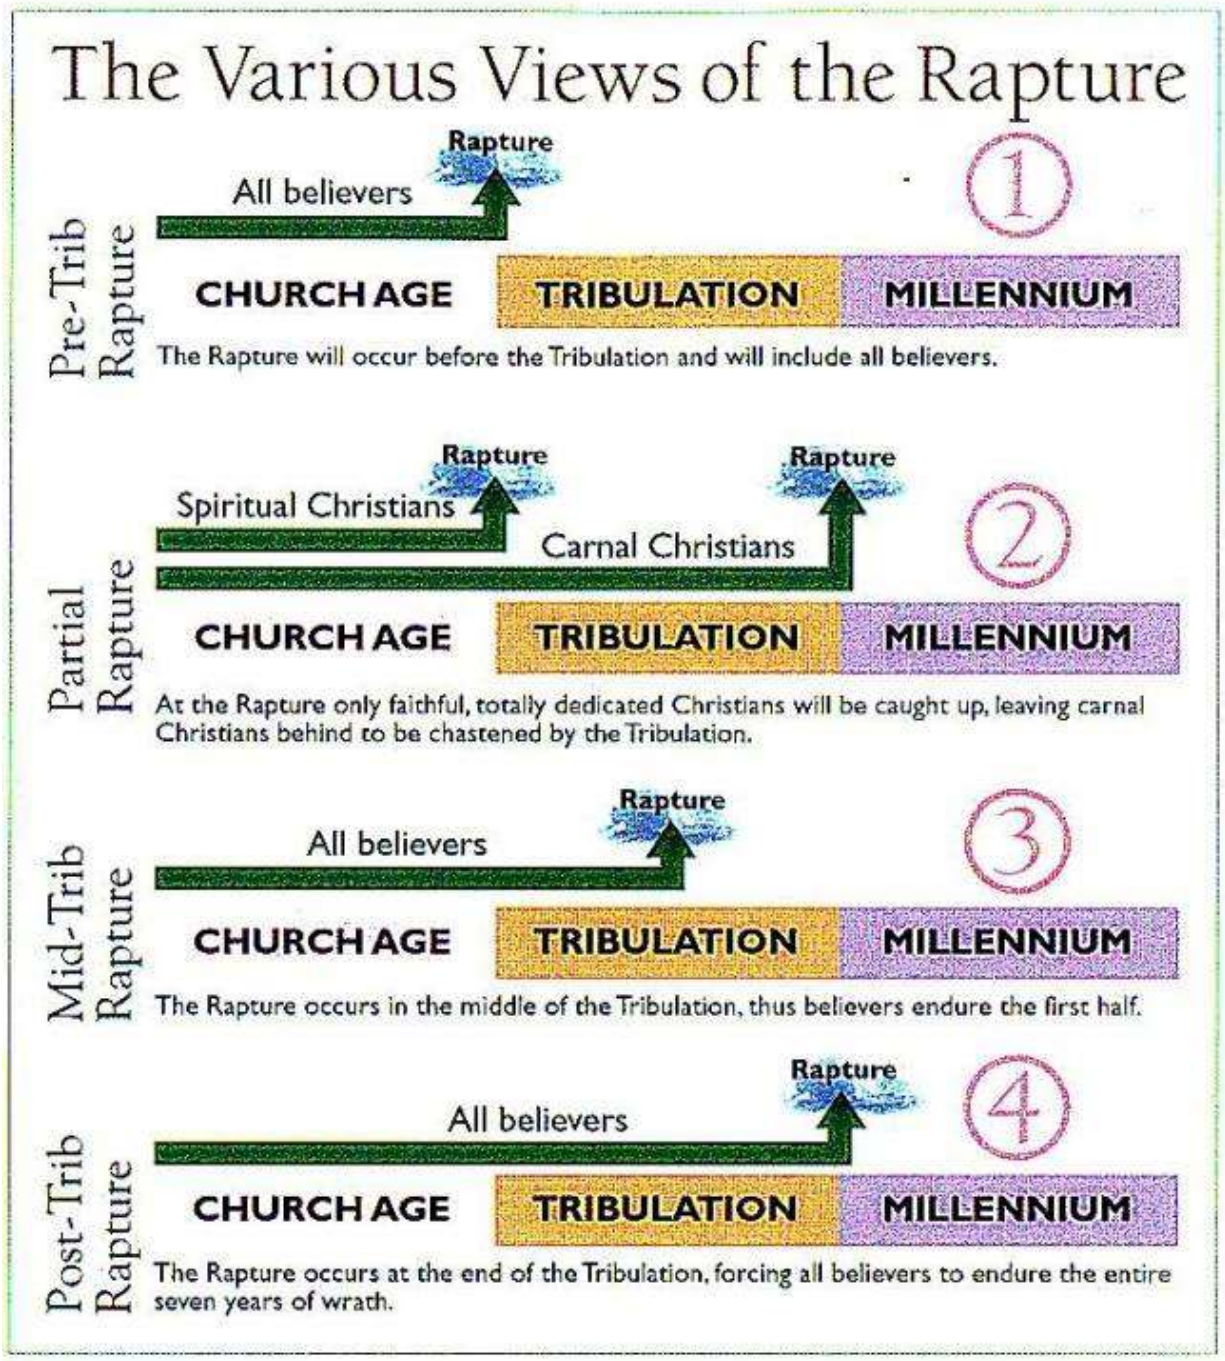
https://prewrathresources.files.wordpress.com/2016/06/venn-diagram-comparison-of-3-literal-biblical-interpretation-end-time-views.jpg

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Main End Times Rapture (Pre-Millennial) Theories ("Trib" = Tribulation)

[Source: http://www.apocalypsesoon.org/trib.html]

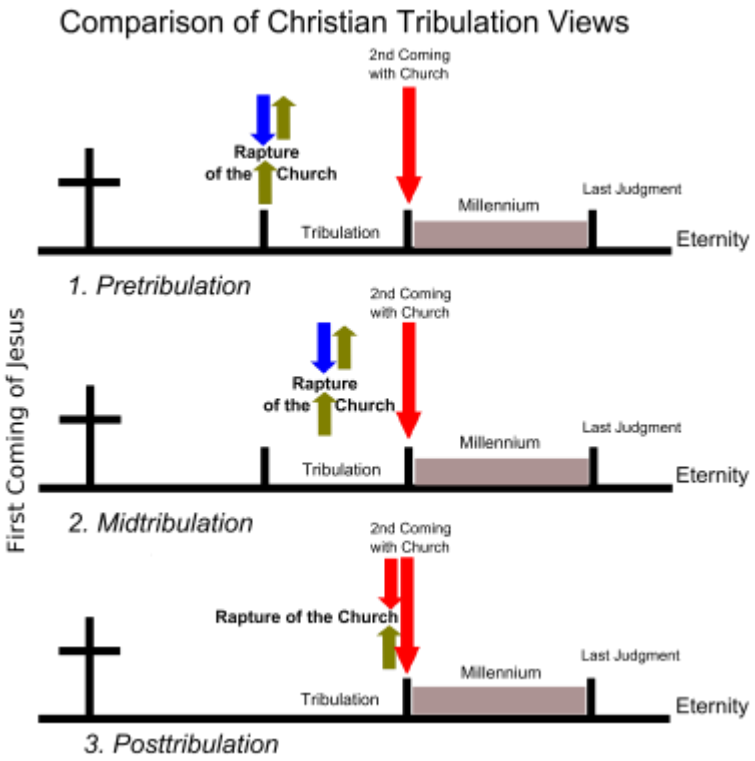
Question: "What is premillennialism (Chiliasm)?"
https://www.gotquestions.org/premillennialism.html



PRE-MID-POST-A WHAT?
http://www.apocalypsesoon.org/trib.html

Rapture: Post-Tribulation - Pre-Wrath
http://crossbearer-brian.tripod.com/id59.htm

(See also Tribulation chart on previous page)



Return to the beginning of this Eschatology section

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Source: https://duaineallensblogs.wordpress.com/2014/03/29/bible-tim-lahaye-tom-ice-charting-the-end-times/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

[Source: http://www.patheos.com/blogs/lovejoyfeminism/2012/02/the-end-times-part-i-the-millenium-tribulation-and-rapture.html]

The Pre-Wrath Rapture

Is there any validity to this concept?

The Question of Timing

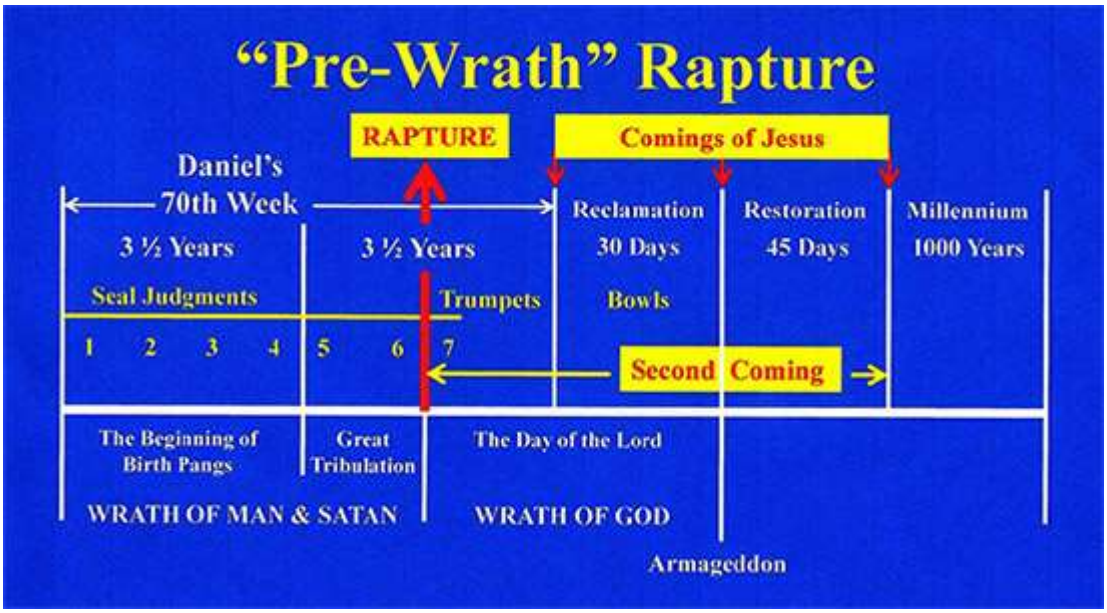
Among those who believe in a Rapture of the Church, there is disagreement as to the timing of the event. Until recent years, there were three concepts of the Rapture's timing:

1) The Pre-Trib View — This is the idea that the Rapture will take place before the Tribulation begins.

2) The Mid-Trib View — This viewpoint places the Rapture in the middle of the Tribulation.

3) The Post-Trib View — According to this view, the Rapture and the Second Coming are all one event that takes place at the end of the Tribulation.

The "Pre-Wrath" View



In 1990 Marvin Rosenthal presented a fourth viewpoint in his book, The Pre-Wrath Rapture of the Church. Rosenthal was not the originator of this new viewpoint. Rather, he was the one who popularized it with his book…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Meaning of the "Pre-Wrath" View

The "Pre-Wrath" view of the Rapture argues that the first three-fourths of the Tribulation is the wrath of Man and the wrath of Satan, and not the wrath of God. Therefore, the proponents of this view argue that the Church will suffer through the first three-quarters of the Tribulation since the Church is promised protection only from the wrath of God.

Those who espouse this viewpoint of the Rapture's timing believe that the Seal Judgments are the wrath of Man and Satan and that they continue throughout the first half of the Tribulation and into the second half, right up to the three-quarters point, or shortly thereafter. They place the Trumpet Judgments in the last quarter of the Tribulation and the Bowl Judgments in the first 30 days following the end of Daniel's 70th Week of Years.

For more History of the Origin and Development of this Concept as well as a Critique:

[Source: http://www.lamblion.com/articles/articles_rapture10.php]

[See also: http://www.lamblion.us/2014/12/the-pre-wrath-rapture-objections-to.html]

SUMMARY OF THIS VIEW

The Pre-Wrath view is not a pre-tribulational view because it insists that the Church will be present on earth during most of the seven years of Daniel's 70th week (all except for the last phase which this view calls the Day of the Lord).

The Pre-Wrath view is not a mid-tribulational view because it insists that the Rapture will occur after the midpoint of the final seven years, somewhere around the middle of the last 3½ years.

The Pre-Wrath view is a post-tribulational view in the sense that it teaches that the Rapture will occur after the Great Tribulation. However, this view redefines the Great Tribulation period in a way that is unusual. Instead of saying that the Great Tribulation ends at the same time Daniel's 70th week ends (at the end of this 7-year period), this view says that the Great Tribulation ends just prior to the Day of the Lord which they say takes place a significant time prior to the end of Daniel's 70th week. Thus this view is post-tribulational but not post-"Daniel's 70th week." This view teaches that the Rapture will take place toward the end of Daniel's 70th week but not at the end.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Pre-Wrath view is a pre-wrath, pre-"Day of the Lord" view because it teaches that the Rapture will take place immediately prior to the Day of the Lord which is the time when God pours out His wrath upon the earth.

In summary, this view rejects the pre-tribulational view because it says that the Rapture will not take place prior to Daniel's 70th week; it rejects the mid-tribulational view because it says that the Rapture will take place a significant but unknown period of time after the middle of Daniel's 70th week; and this view rejects the post-tribulational view because it places the Rapture not at the end of Daniel's 70th week, but at a significant period of time before the end.

The following is a chart of the pre-wrath position:

For more details and a critique…
[Source: http://www.middletownbiblechurch.org/proph/prewrath.htm]

Why Pre-Tribulation is Doctrinally Correct

[Source: http://the-end-time.blogspot.com/2009/11/why-pre-tribulation-rapture-is.html]

Comparing Pre- and Post- Tribulation Points of View (Favors Post-Tribulation)

[Source: http://www.watchmanspost.com/scoming/twopoints.html]

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Rapture–Amillennialism, Post-millennialism, or Pre-millennialism?
[Source: http://truthsaves.org/articles/the-rapture-amillennialism-post-millennialism-or-pre-millennialism/] [Pre-Tribulation]

The Rapture Debate (Pro vs Post)
[Source: http://www.evangelicaloutreach.org/rapture-debate.htm]

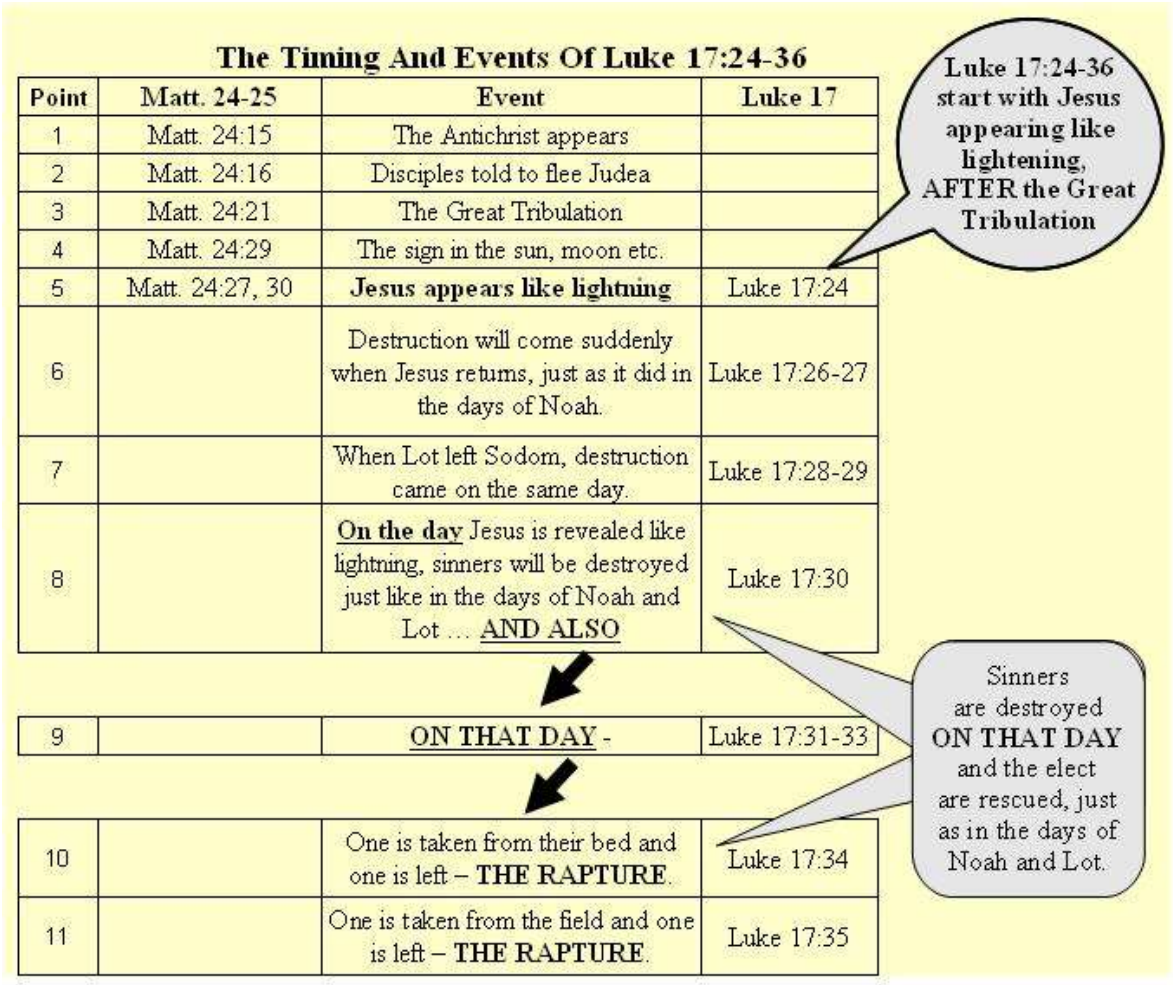
An Overview of Pretribulational Arguments
[Source: http://www.pre-trib.org/articles/view/an-overview-of-pretribulational-arguments] [also Downloadable as PDF]

Topical Bible Study: Rapture (Chuck Missler)
[Source: http://www.khouse.org/topical_bible_study/rapture/]

JIT (Just-in-time) Rapture (???)
[Source: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=ZG0V0gaoWJQ] [Video]

The Biblical Case for Mid-Tribulation
[Source: http://www.nobts.edu/faculty/itor/lemkesw/personal/midtribulationism.html]

Prophecy Signs – 20 Key Prophecy Signs Indicating the End Times Have Begun
(Note: believes Church will go through the Tribulation)
[Source: http://prophecysigns.com/20-key-prophecy-signs-chart/]



Return to the beginning of this Eschatology section

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Will Christians go through the Great Tribulation?

[Source: http://www.christianissues.biz/endtimeprophecy.html] [Also Downloadable as a PDF]

The following are charts from the above article…

The Timing And Events Of Luke 17:24-36

Point	Matt. 24-25	Event	Luke 17
1	Matt. 24:15	The Antichrist appears
2	Matt. 24:16	Disciples told to flee Judea
3	Matt. 24:21	The Great Tribulation
4	Matt. 24:29	The sign in the sun, moon etc.
5	Matt. 24:27, 30	Jesus appears like lightning	Luke 17:24
6		Destruction will come suddenly when Jesus returns, just as it did in the days of Noah.	Luke 17:26-27
7		When Lot left Sodom, destruction came on the same day.	Luke 17:28-29
8		On the day Jesus is revealed like lightning, sinners will be destroyed just like in the days of Noah and Lot … AND ALSO	Luke 17:30
9		ON THAT DAY -	Luke 17:31-33
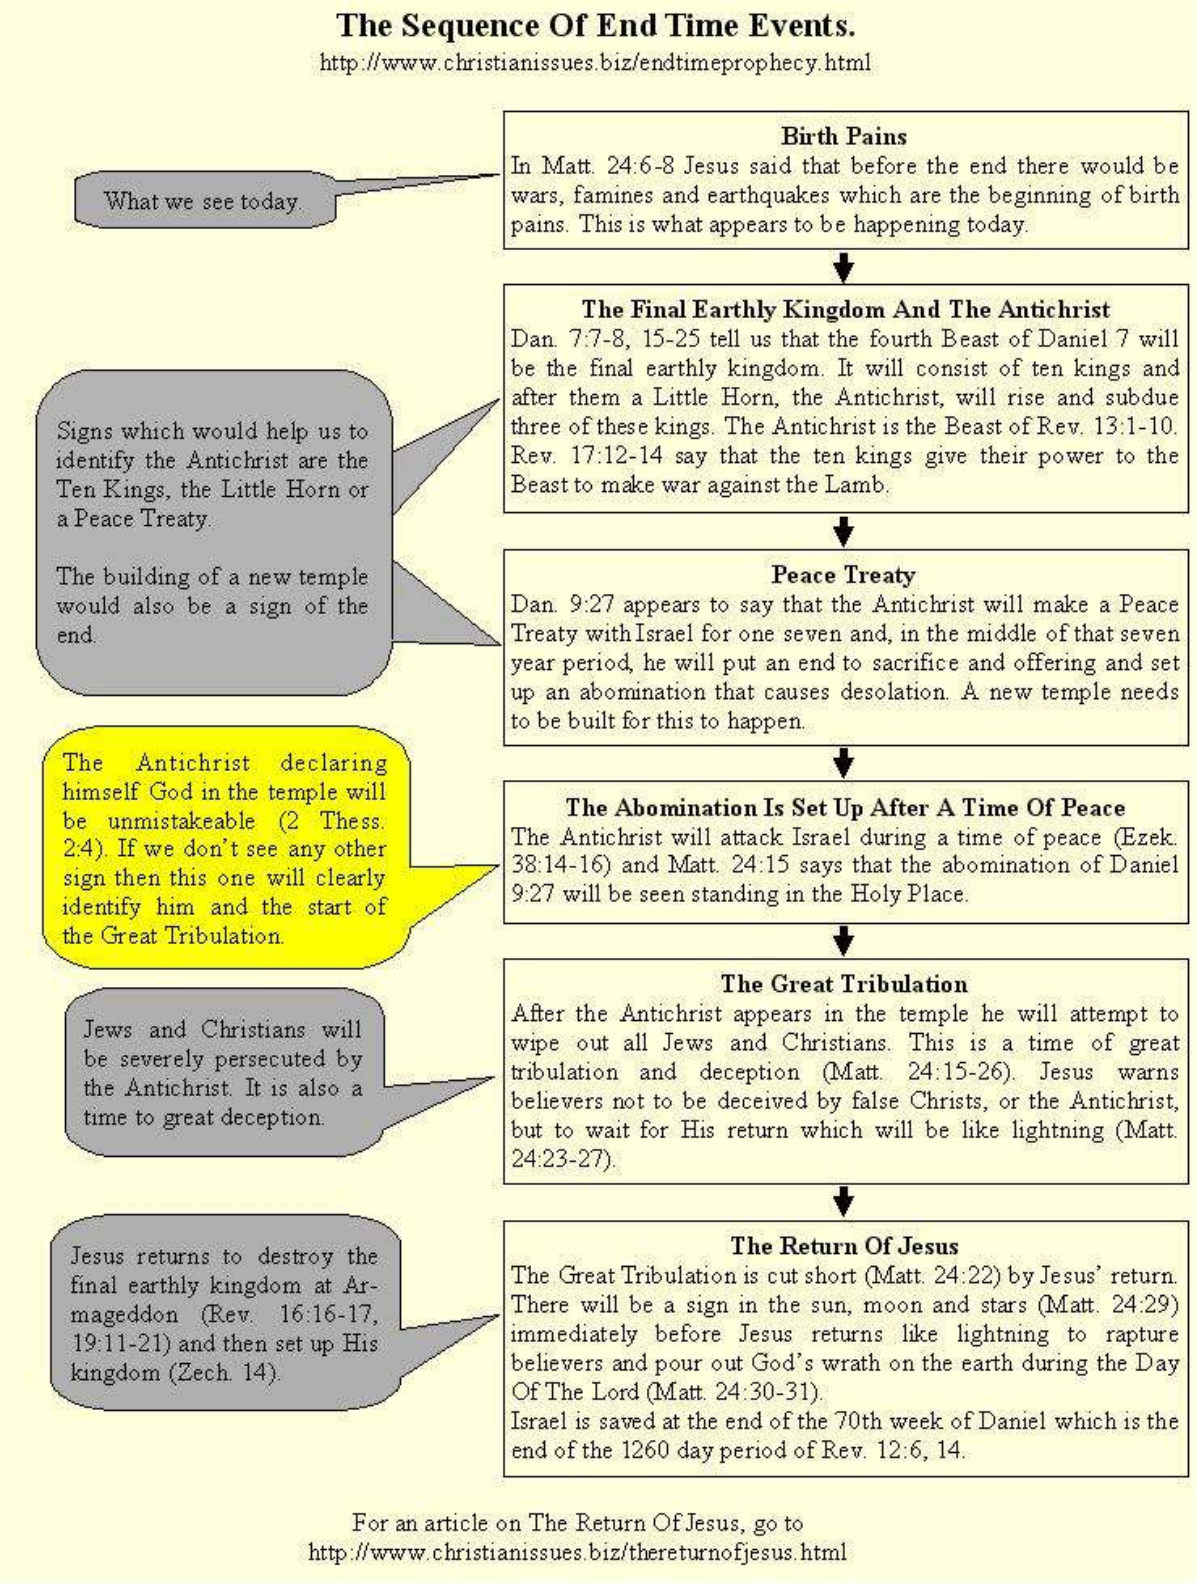
10		One is taken from their bed and one is left – THE RAPTURE.	Luke 17:34
11		One is taken from the field and one is left – THE RAPTURE.	Luke 17:35

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

#	Event	1 Thess. 4-5	Matt. 24-25
1	Jesus returns	1 Thess. 4:16	Matt. 24:30
2	From heaven	1 Thess. 4:16	Matt. 24:30
3	With a commanding presence	1 Thess. 4:16	Matt. 24:30
4	Angels present	1 Thess. 4:16, 3:13	Matt. 24:31
5	Trumpet sound	1 Thess. 4:16	Matt. 24:31
6	Believers gathered	1 Thess. 4:17	Matt. 24:31, 40-41
7	Believers meet the Lord	1 Thess. 4:17	Matt. 25:1, 6
8	In the clouds	1 Thess. 4:17	Matt. 24:30
9	The time is unknown	1 Thess. 5:1-2	Matt. 24:36
10	Will come as a thief	1 Thess. 5:2,4	Matt. 24:43
11	Will come at night	1 Thess. 5:2	Matt. 24:43
12	Unbelievers unaware of judgment	1 Thess. 5:3	Matt. 24:37-39
13	Birth pains	1 Thess. 5:3	Matt. 24:8
14	Believers not deceived	1 Thess. 5:6	Matt. 24:4-5, 25
15	Believers are to watch	1 Thess. 5:6	Matt. 24:42, 25
16	Warning against drunkenness	1 Thess. 5:7	Matt. 24:49

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



End Times Gospel Chart

Comparing Matt. 24 with Luke 21 & Luke 17:22-37

#	Event	Matt 24	Luke 21	Luke 17
1	Deception	4-5	8	Luke 17 only speaks about the day Jesus returns like lightning
2	Wars, famines and earthquakes	6-8	9-11
3	Persecution	9-13	12-19
4	Jerusalem destroyed in 70AD. Israel trampled on until the times of the Gentiles is fulfilled	Jerusalem's destruction not mentioned	20-24
5	Gospel to be preached before the end.	14	The times of the Gentiles
6	Abomination of desolation	15
7	The Great Tribulation	16-22
8	False Christs	23-27
9	The sign in the sun, moon and stars.	29	25-26
10	Jesus to return like lightning.	27, 30	27	23-24
11	The Rapture; one taken and the other left.	31 & 40-41		30-36
12	Like the days of Noah and Lot.	37-41		26-30
13	Be watchful	42-44	28-36
14	Carcass and vulture	28		37

Jesus' return is common to all three passages.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Comparing 1 Thessalonians 4-5 with Matthew 24-25

Event	1 Thess. 4-5	Matt. 24-25
Christ Himself returns	1 Thess. 4:16	24:30
From heaven	1 Thess. 4:16	24:30
With a commanding presence	1 Thess. 4:16	24:30
Angels present	1 Th. 4:16, 3:13	24:31
Trumpet sound	1 Thess. 4:16	24:31
Believers supernaturally gathered to Christ	1 Thess. 4:17	24:31, 40-41
Believers meet the Lord	1 Thess. 4:17	25:1, 6
In the clouds	1 Thess. 4:17	24:30
The time is unknown	1 Thess. 5:1-2	24:36
Will come as a thief	1 Thess. 5:2,4	24:43
Will come at night	1 Thess. 5:2	24:43
Unbelievers are unaware of impending judgment	1 Thess. 5:3	24:37-39
Judgment comes as travail upon an expectant mother	1 Thess. 5:3	24:8 [cf. RSV]
Believers not deceived	1 Thess. 5:6	24:4-5,25
Believers are to watch	1 Thess. 5:6	24:42,25
Warning against drunkenness	1 Thess 5:7	24:49

Comparing Matthew 24 with Revelation 6-8

Matt. 24 - The Olivet Discourse		The Revelation of Christ
24:4	WARNING To God's elect	22:19	WARNING
24:5	FALSE CHRISTS	6:1-2	THE FIRST SEAL
24:6	WARS	6:3-4	THE SECOND SEAL
24:7	FAMINES	6:5-6	THE THIRD SEAL
24:9,21	THE GREAT TRIBULATION	6:7-8	THE FOURTH SEAL
24:9,22	Death	6:9-11	THE FIFTH SEAL
24:10,24	Apostasy
24:29	SIGN OF THE END OF THE AGE Sun, moon & stars.	6:12-17	THE SIXTH SEAL
24:30,27	SIGN OF CHRIST'S COMING
24:30	THE COMING OF CHRIST
24:13,31	THE DELIVERANCE OF CHRIST'S ELECT Rapture	7:9-14	THE GREAT MULTITUDE Out of the Great Tribulation
24:14,30, 37-39	THE WRATH OF GOD The End of the Age or The Day of the Lord	8:1-7	THE SEVENTH SEAL

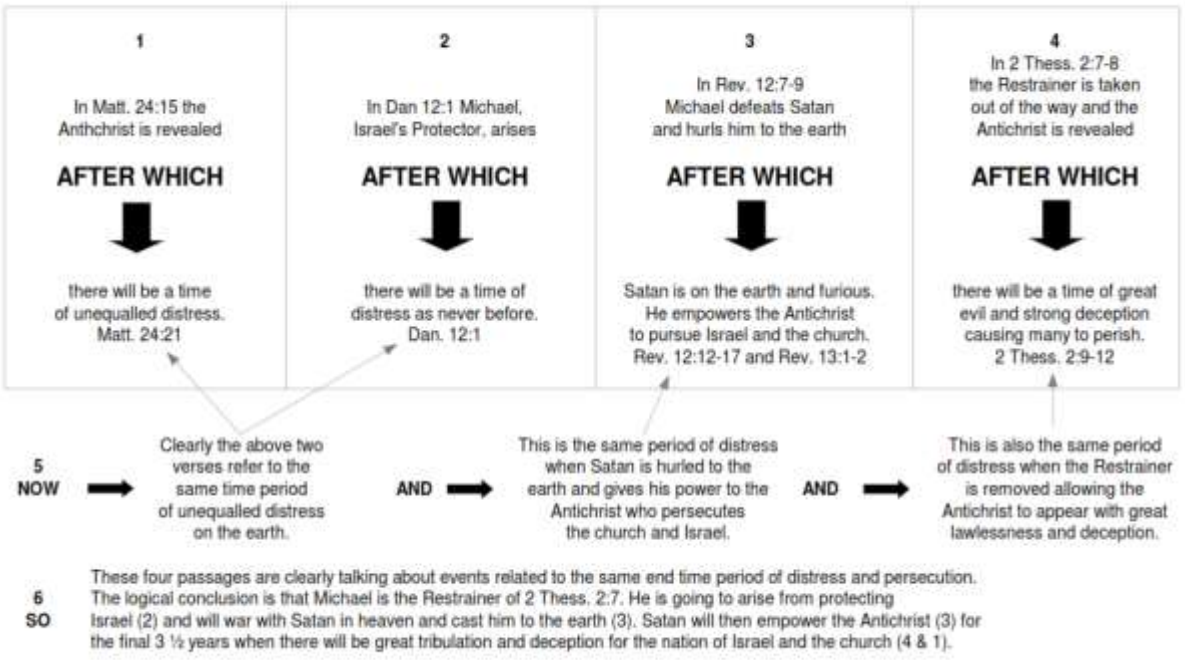
Who is the Restrainer?

See next page.



God's wrath in the Day Of The Lord – see last page

NOTE: "parousia" is singular in 1 Th. 4:15 and Matt. 24:27.

The striking parallels between 1 Thess. 4-5, Matt. 24-25 and Rev. 6-8 make it abundantly clear that they are all describing the same event. There is no secret Rapture but a single return of the Lord. On the day of His return, Jesus cuts short the Great Tribulation by gathering the elect to Himself in the clouds and then the Day Of The Lord begins when God pours out His wrath on those remaining on the earth.

Taken from Sola Scriptura (http://www.scriptorium.org/products/newsletters.html) and The Rapture Question Answered, Plain & Simple, by Robert Van Kampen.
Mick Alexander Email: leeandmick@gmail.com
Downloaded from: http://www.christianissues.biz/endtimeprophecy.html

Who is the Restrainer of 2 Thess. 2:7?

The Day Of The Lord is the period of God's wrath that will occur after Jesus returns.
The following shows this period of wrath occurring in Matthew 24, Rev. 6-8 and 1 Thess. 4-5.

The sun and moon darkened	Matt. 24:29, Rev. 6:12-13
Jesus returns – the Rapture	Matt. 24:31, Rev. 7:9-14 and 1 Thess. 4:16-17.
God's wrath during the Day Of the Lord	Matt. 24:30, Rev. 6:15-17 (Rev. 8) and 1 Thess. 5:1-2

Because the Day of The Lord is common to all three passages, then it is obvious that all three passages are talking about the same thing, namely the return of Jesus to Rapture the church and then pour out God's wrath during the Day Of The Lord.

END: Excerpts from "Will Christians go through the Great Tribulation?"

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Rapture, including N.T. Wright's View of the Rapture

N.T. Wright: Farewell to the Rapture (2001)
http://itsinthetext.blogspot.com/2013/03/farewell-to-rapture-nt-wright_4.html

Original text: http://ntwrightpage.com/2016/07/12/farewell-to-the-rapture/

Little did Paul know how his colorful metaphors for Jesus' second coming would be misunderstood two millennia later.

Corresponding videos:

N .T. Wright on the Rapture Passage (2016)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=TJyVLm-tuCg [Video]

ABC News: N.T. Wright on Heaven & Rapture Theology (2012)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=I9ln9Jq5Y-E [Video] https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=1u4CzArtW3E [Video]

N. T. Wright on the FALSE Doctrine of the Rapture to Heaven
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=M-GZt5Mrbq8 [Video]

Left Behind Rapture Debunked - N. T. Wright
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=-OIVJaIcTwQ [Video]

Where Did Rapture Theology Come From? Ben Witherington III (2014)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=d_cVXdr8mVs [Video]

The Rapture in Matthew 24 & 1 Thessalonians 4: Seven Minute Seminary (2014)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=cg8lRGqtMHc [Video] Ben Witherington III

Quote: "A text without a context is just a pretext for whatever you want it to say"

Rejecting the 'Left Behind' Rapture Theology | William Lane Craig (2015)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=DLuUV6yUMSk [Audio] [FYI (not related): Kalam Cosmological Argument]

Return to the beginning of this Eschatology section

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

What About the Rapture in 1 Thess 4? Problem Texts for Holistic Eschatology, Part 2

https://jrichardmiddleton.wordpress.com/2014/10/14/what-about-the-rapture-problem-texts-for-holistic-eschatology-part-2/

Excerpt:

...

Paul's Application of apantēsis to the Return of Christ

It was customary for people to vie for pride of place in meeting the coming dignitary, hence Paul's assurance in 1 Thessalonians 4:15-16 that Christians who had already died would not be inconvenienced at this great event; rather they would rise first (and thus be the first to meet the coming King).

Since cemeteries were located outside city walls in the first century, often lining the main road leading to the city, Paul's readers could vividly imagine the scenario of the dead in Christ being raised as the King passed by, before those in the city went out to meet him as he approached the city gates. This also makes sense of Paul's statement that "God will bring with him [Christ] those who have died" (1Thess 4:14); this suggests that those raised from the graves, who have met the returning Lord, will then enter the city with him.

The most important point in the above scenario is that those who went out to meet the dignitary returned with him, escorting him in grand procession into their city. In this case, this clearly means an escort to earth.

Beyond the background custom of an imperial visit (represented by parousia and apantēsis) and the clear biblical teaching of the redemption of creation, there are further reasons to doubt that 1 Thessalonians means to teach the rapture, as classically understood.

1 Thessalonians 4:13-18 Describes a Public Event

First, the rapture is supposed to be a secret event, yet the coming of Christ in 1 Thessalonians 4 is announced with great fanfare, "with a cry of command, with the archangel's call and with the sound of God's trumpet" (1 Thess 4:16). This is similar to the sound of the trumpet in 1 Corinthians 15:51-52, which describes the suddenness of Christ's coming, accompanied by the transformation of living believers and the resurrection of those who have died.

"Listen, I will tell you a mystery! We will not all die, but we will all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trumpet. For the trumpet will sound, and the dead will be raised imperishable, and we will be changed." (1 Cor 15:51-52)

1 Thessalonians 4:13-18 Is About the Resurrection and the Final State

Furthermore, in its most popular form, the rapture is meant to remove living believers from earth so that the Tribulation can begin (all dead believers are already in heaven). But in 1 Thessalonians 4 Paul speaks of both dead and living believers rising to meet Christ. The text is thus not about removal of believers from earth at all. Like 1 Corinthians 15, 1 Thessalonians 4 addresses the resurrection of the dead and transformation of the living that will accompany Christ's decisive coming as Lord to judge the world and make all things new.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

A Farewell to the Rapture in Matthew 24? Problem Texts for Holistic Eschatology, Part 3

https://jrichardmiddleton.wordpress.com/2014/10/17/a-farewell-to-the-rapture-problem-texts-for-holistic-eschatology-part-3/

Excerpt:

…Indeed, it turns out that many dispensationalists agree that Matthew 24 // Luke 17 doesn't teach the rapture. And some even doubt that it is taught anywhere in the Bible.

But I'm getting ahead of myself.

The Understanding of Matthew 24:37-41 in Popular Eschatology

In Matthew 24 (as part of the so-called Olivet discourse) Jesus explains what will happen when the Son of Man returns. According to Matthew 24:40-41: "Then two will be in the field; one will be taken and one will be left. Two women will be grinding meal together; one will be taken and one will be left."

Luke 17:34-35 is similar: "I tell you, on that night there will be two in one bed; one will be taken and the other left. There will be two women grinding meal together; one will be taken and the other left."

The common assumption of much Christian eschatology is that the one "taken" in Matthew 24 // Luke 17 is the believer, going to heaven to be with the Lord. And this is identified with the "rapture" of 1 Thessalonians 4:17.

The Importance of Reading Texts Carefully

The problem is that we do not typically read the Bible very carefully. So let us pay close attention to the comparison Jesus makes in Matthew 24.

Jesus begins by describing what life was like in the time of Noah, when people did not expect the flood. His point in verse 39 is that the people of Noah's time "knew nothing until the flood came and swept them all away, so too will be the coming of the Son of Man."

Note who is taken away, according to Jesus. The phrase "swept them all away" clearly describes judgment on the wicked; it was Noah and his family who were "left behind" (if we might put it so); they remained on the earth after the flood.

Thus, when Jesus introduces the eschatological equivalent to the days of Noah (in vv. 40-41), it is evident from the analogy he draws between the two events that the ones taken are the unrighteous; they are taken to judgment.

The two Greek verbs Jesus uses in Matthew 24:39-41 (airō for the time of Noah and paralambanō for the coming of the Son of Man), are translated as "swept away" and "taken" in the NRSV. They are rendered as "taken away" and "taken" in the KJV, and also in the NIV. The similarity of these verbs in the KJV and NIV should have made Jesus' point even more obvious for those reading these translations.

The fact that so many have misread who is taken and who is left, despite such clear verbal clues (not to mention Jesus' analogy between the flood and the eschaton), is a powerful example of how our assumptions about what a text says can predetermine what we see in the text.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Luke 17 Clarifies Where They Are "Taken"

If we doubt this interpretation of Matthew 24, we need only turn to Luke's version of this text, for he follows the narrative of one taken and one left (in 17:34-35) with a question from the disciples in verse 37. The ask, "Where, Lord?" That is, where are they taken?

Jesus replies, "Where the corpse is, there the vultures will gather." This is clearly a reference to judgment; the image is certainly not of "heaven."

The image Jesus alludes to is the valley of Ben-Hinnom (gai ben-hinnom or Gehenna), southwest of Jerusalem, which had become the city dump in the Second Temple period, used for incinerating garbage, dead animals, and executed criminals. In the Old Testament the valley of Ben-Hinnom is associated with idolatry and child sacrifice (by burning) to Baal or Molech.

We should not be surprised that those taken from the earth are being judged. After all, the same Jesus who taught about the last days in Matthew 24 proclaimed in the Beatitudes: "Blessed are the meek, for they will inherit the earth" (Matt 5:5).

Most Dispensationalists No Longer Think Matthew 24 Teaches the Rapture

Although Matthew 24:37-41 is often used to support the rapture in popular eschatology, it is significant that these words of Jesus are not typically appealed to by dispensationalist theologians and Bible scholars (even though the rapture is a distinctively dispensationalist doctrine).

Even Hal Lindsay's bestseller, The Late, Great Planet Earth, which resolutely emphasizes the rapture, never appeals to this text about being "taken" in Matthew 24 or Luke 17.

These verses are also notably absent from the discussion in both the first and second editions of Three Views of the Rapture (1984; reprint. 1996; and 2010) published by Zondervan in their Counterpoints series; indeed, when the introduction to the second edition (2010) lists texts that either explicitly or implicitly teach the rapture, Matthew 24:36-42 is not on the list.

Although early dispensationalists such as John Nelson Darby and William E. Blackstone cited this text in arguing for the rapture, as early as 1925 dispensationalists had begun to back off using it as part of their argument. And by the mid-twentieth century the majority of dispensationalists had come to the conclusion that Matthew 24:36ff. did not address the rapture at all, conceding instead that it referred to events after the tribulation.

Thus dispensationalist John F. Walvoord critiques those who use this text to support the rapture, emphatically noting: "Those taken away were taken away in judgment" (Walvoord, The Blessed Hope and the Tribulation: A Historical and Biblical Study of Posttribulationalism [Grand Rapids: Zondervan, 1976], 89).

Why Do Evangelicals Think Matthew 24 is a Rapture Text?

For the popularity of the contemporary rapture interpretation of Matthew 24 // Luke 17 we need to turn to Larry Norman's famous 1969 song, "I Wish We'd All Been Ready," which was released on what is usually regarded as the first Christian rock album (On this Rock, Capitol Records, 1969). After evoking the Great Tribulation in verse 1, the second verse of the song is a poetic restatement of Luke 17:34 and Matthew 24:40:

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

> A man and wife asleep in bed,/ She hears a noise and turns her head he's gone;/ I wish we'd all been ready.
>
> Two men walking up a hill,/ One disappears and one's left standing still;/ I wish we'd all been ready.

The song clearly understands the person who is "gone" (or who "disappears") as having been taken to heaven. Perhaps it is significant that according to Norman, the song "talked about something I had never heard preached from a pulpit as I grew up" (Larry Norman comment from 1969).

Because of Larry Norman, many of us have since heard this preached from the pulpit—and beyond the pulpit. Indeed, the chorus ("There's no time to change your mind,/ The Son has come and you've been left behind") arguably generated the title of the Left Behind series of books and movies.

Rapture Agnosticism and the New Creation among Some Dispensationalists

Beyond even John Walvoord's assertion that Matthew 24 // Luke 17 does not teach the rapture, it is significant that some dispensationalists no longer affirm the rapture as a doctrine at all. One such is R. Todd Mangum, who has impeccable dispensationalist credentials (a doctorate from Dallas Theological Seminary and recipient of the John F. Walvoord Award for outstanding work in eschatology).

Yet Magnum admits that "little good has come of dispensationalists' emphasis on a pre-tribulational rapture up to now; there is promise for even less good to come of such emphasis in the future." He even suggests that dispensationalists adopt a posture of "rapture agnosticism," both because of the doctrine's negative ethical effects (it detracts from legitimate Christian concern for the earth) and because it is not clearly taught in Scripture (Mangum, "High Hopes for 21st-Century Dispensationalism: A Response to 'Hope and Dispensationalism: An Historical Overview and Assessment' by Gary L. Nebeker" [paper presented to the Dispensational Study Group of the Evangelical Theological Society, Nashville, Tennessee, November 2000]).

Magnum proposes instead an "inaugurated kingdom ethic"(the kingdom of God has already begun on earth, to be consummated at Christ's return), which is more in line with the teaching of Jesus and the New Testament

New Testament scholar Darrell Bock also emphasizes the 'this-worldly' nature of the kingdom. In an extended study, Bock examines the biblical basis for the inaugurated kingdom of God in the midst of history, while also affirming the kingdom's culmination not in heaven, but in "the cosmos as a whole" (Bock, "The Kingdom of God in New Testament Theology," in Looking into the Future: Evangelical Studies in Eschatology, ed. David W. Baker [Evangelical Theological Society Studies; Baker Academic, 2001], 48).

Both Magnum and Bock fit the category of what dispensationalist theologian Craig Blaising calls "progressive dispensationalism," a term that does not refer to "progressive" in opposition to "conservative," but rather to an understanding of how the dispensations unfold. According to Blaising, there are three stages in the development of dispensationalism—which he names classical, revised, and progressive (Blaising, "The Extent and Varieties of Dispensationalism," in Craig A. Blaising and Darrell L. Bock, Progressive Dispensationalism [Wheaton, Ill: Bridgepoint, 1993], 9-56).

As a representative of progressive dispensationalism, Blaising himself has articulated a clear distinction between what he calls a "spiritual vision model" of eschatological escape to heaven and the biblical "new creation model," which "expects the earth and the cosmic order to be renewed and made everlasting through the same creating power that grants immortal and resurrection life to the saints" (Blaising, "Premellennialism," in Three Views of the Millennium and Beyond, ed. Darrell L. Bock [Counterpoints: Exploring Theology; Grand Rapids: Zondervan, 1999], 163).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

A Farewell to the Rapture?

What's the world coming to when dispensationalists are agnostic about the rapture? Or when they affirm the renewal of the cosmos as the goal of eschatology?

This is an important and historic shift. But more important for our purposes is that neither Matthew 24 nor 1 Thessalonians 4 teaches the future escape of believers from the earth to heaven.

And if the two most cited proof-texts for the rapture don't support this idea, we have no good reason to think that it is any part of biblical eschatology.

N.T. Wright on the (Non) Rapture

http://www.patheos.com/blogs/unsystematictheology/2016/06/n-t-wright-on-the-non-rapture/

In a discussion of Matthew 24:26-28, which is commonly taken by premillennial pretributionalist dispensationalists (there's an eschatological mouthful) to be one of the key "rapture" texts, N.T. Wright articulates a very counter-position to the rapture notion, which is actually a quite recent development in interpretation:

> While they [Jesus' disciples] were waiting for the moment to arrive, however, there would be many voices urging that Israel's vindication was to be found in this or that new movement. They would long to see one of the days of the 'son of man' but would not see it, and would be an open pry to invitations to look at this or that conspiracy or uprising as the way towards vindication. But when it happened there would be no mistaking it: it would be like lightning flashing from east to west, and on that day…they should not stop to pack and get ready, but simply run.
>
> At that time there would be division between families and colleagues: one would be taken, another left. It should be noted that 'taken' in this context means being taken in judgment. There is no hint, here, of a 'rapture,' a sudden 'supernatural' event which would remove individuals from terra firma. Such an idea would look as odd, in these synoptic passages, as a Cadillac in a camel-train. It is a mater, rather, of secret police coming in the night, or of enemies sweeping through a city and seizing all they can. If the disciples were to escape, if they were to be 'left,' it would be by the skin of their teeth.
>
> From Jesus and the Victory of God, p. 366.

The Biblical Worldview

"Providing Scriptural Teaching And Commentary From the Biblical Worldview and the Posttrib Position" http://www.thebiblicalworldview.org/

Return to the beginning of this Eschatology section

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Rapture proponents:

Thomas Ice / Pre-Trib Research Center)

Pre-Trib Archives: The Rapture; What is pre-, post-, a- millennialism; and more

The Rapture - John MacArthur (2012)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=EYEeb2ysy6U [Video]

Bible hammer lock on The RAPTURE! (2013)
Chuck Missler & John MacArthur & Scottie Clarke
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=6pxAS1ZunuY&spfreload=5 [Video]

Q&A January 14th 2015 - Chuck Missler & Hal Lindsey - An Interview (2015)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=bjmjYR1pHh0 [Video]

The Last Days by Tim Lahaye (2013)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=656M97E6Svo [Video]

Larry King Live: Left Behind (Tim Lahaye and Jerry Jenkins)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=3lK87nQxKHA [Video]

See also: Premillennial, Amillennial, Postmillennial (Eschatology) (includes info. on the rapture)

Complete PREVIEW of the RAPTURES!
Pre-Trib / Mid-Trib / Post-Trib / Pre-Wrath Explained
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=5KqQuTP3yqs [Videos]

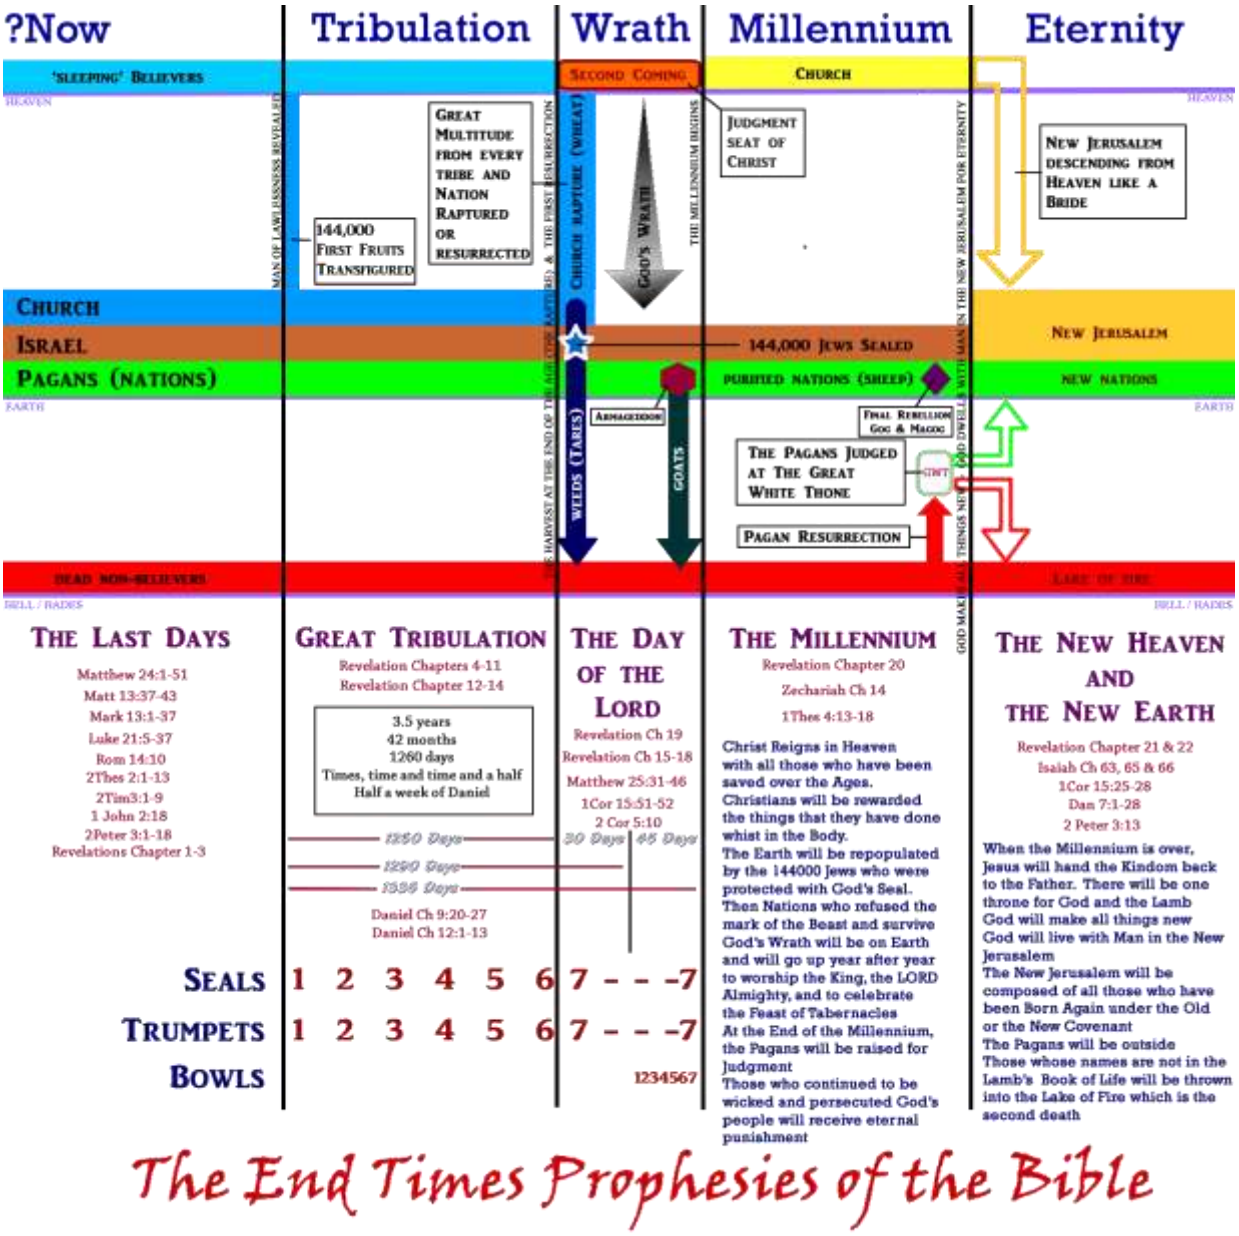
Return to the beginning of this Eschatology section

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Covenants vs Dispensations (example graphic)

http://www.preservedwords.com/images/dispchrt.gif

The above chart (which represents a premillennial/pretribulation view) is provided to show how biblical covenants be made roughly lined up with the dispensations and is a useful reference for this section on Premillennial, Amillennial, Postmillennial.



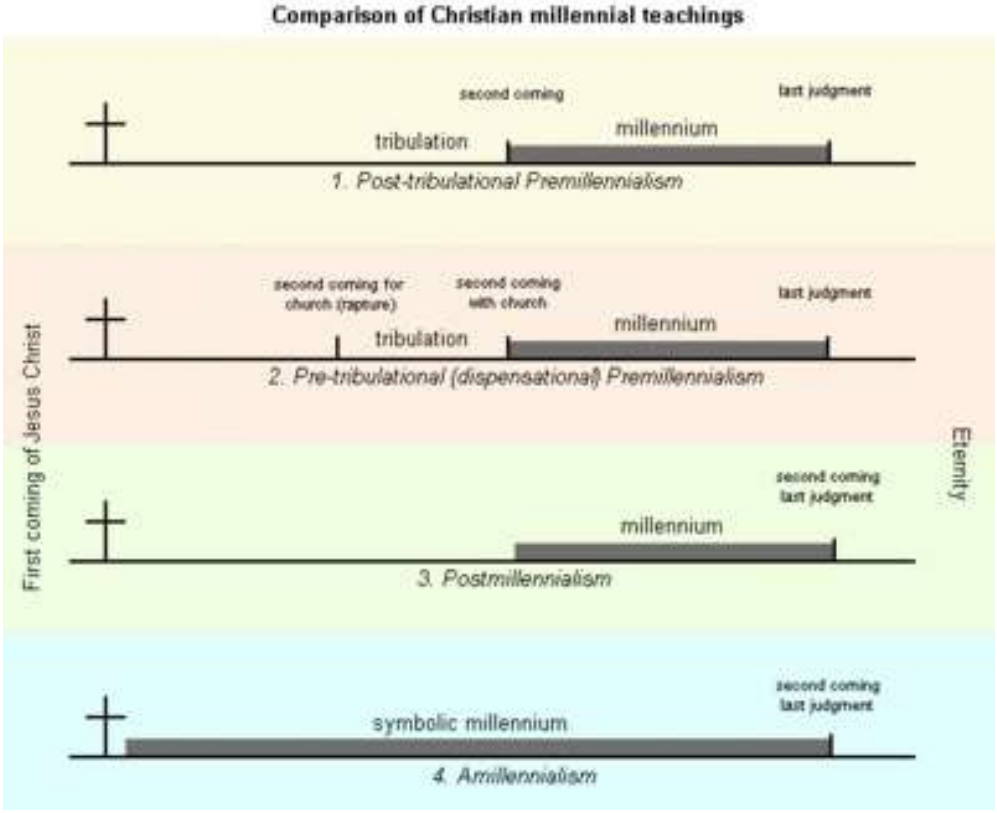
For more Covenants vs Dispensations Comparison Charts, see:
Two Major Systems of Theology

See also: What Occurs at Death (from the time of the resurrection of Christ onward) [Chart]

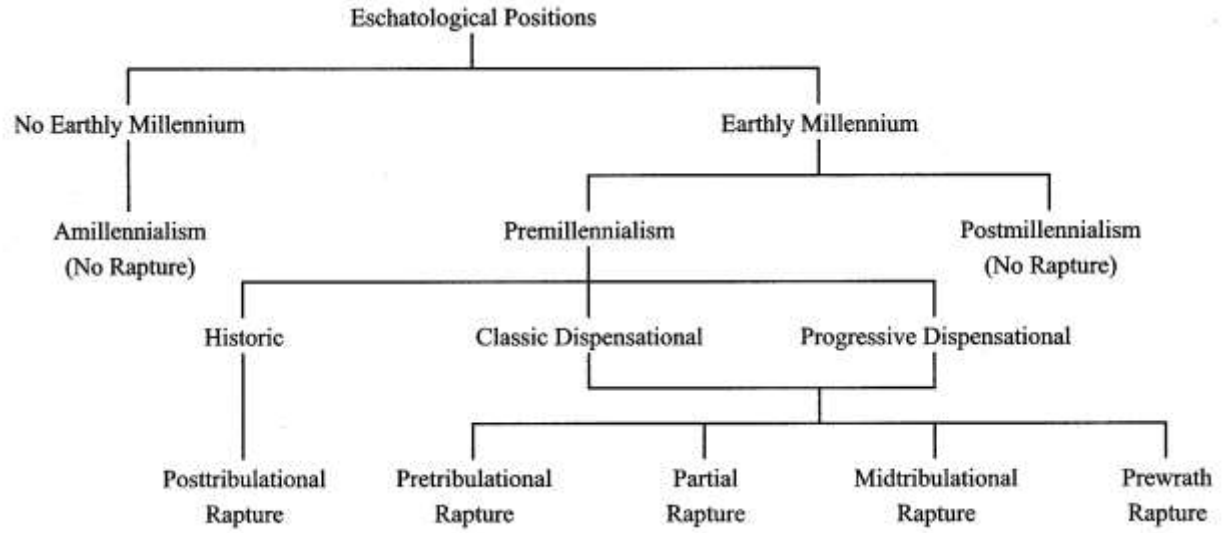
Return to the beginning of this Eschatology section

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Another variation of premillennial view:



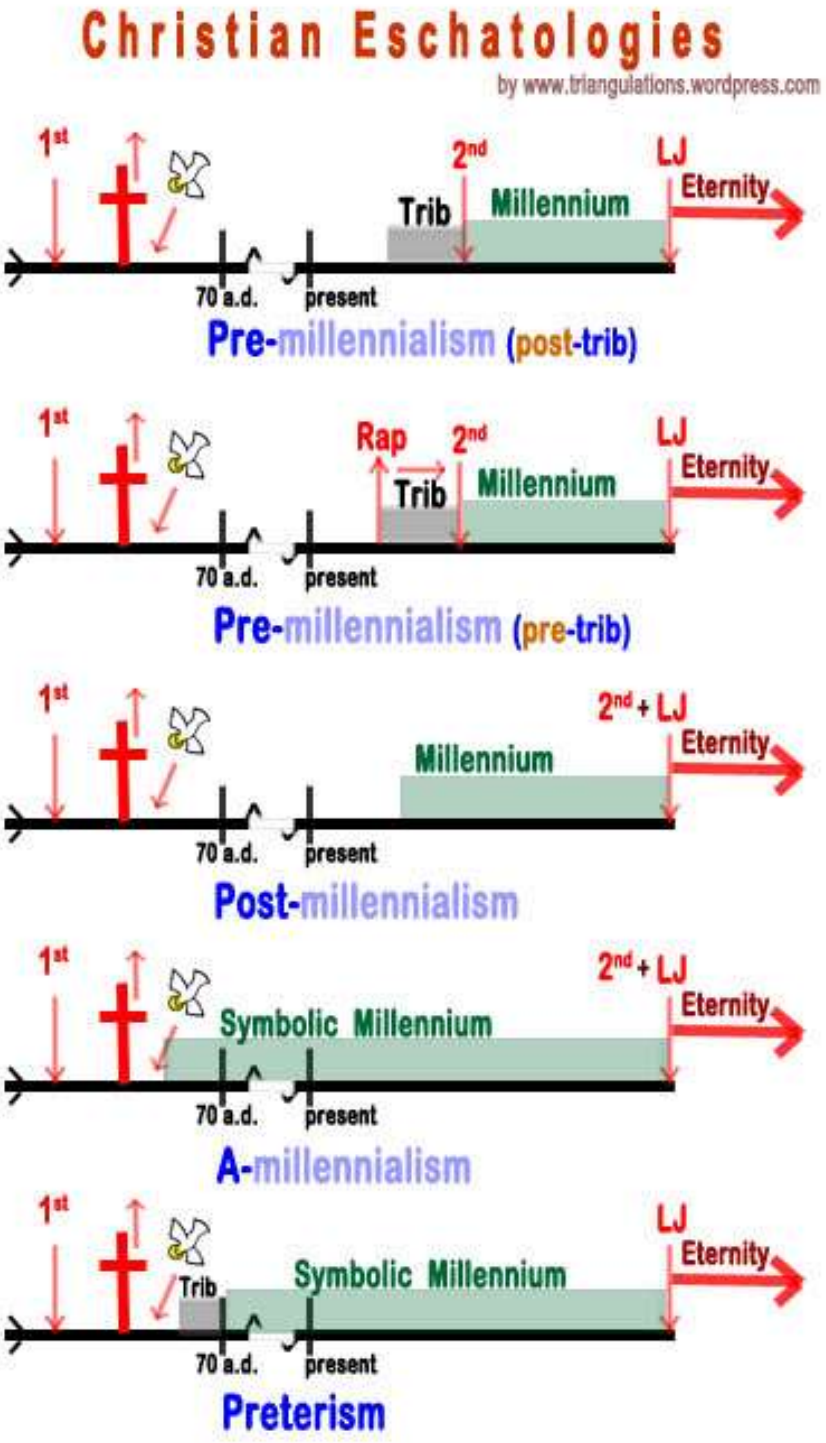
http://www.truthinlove.com/Pictures/millennium3.gif



(Above is an example of a premillennial/pre-wrath viewpoint)

Return to the beginning of this Eschatology section

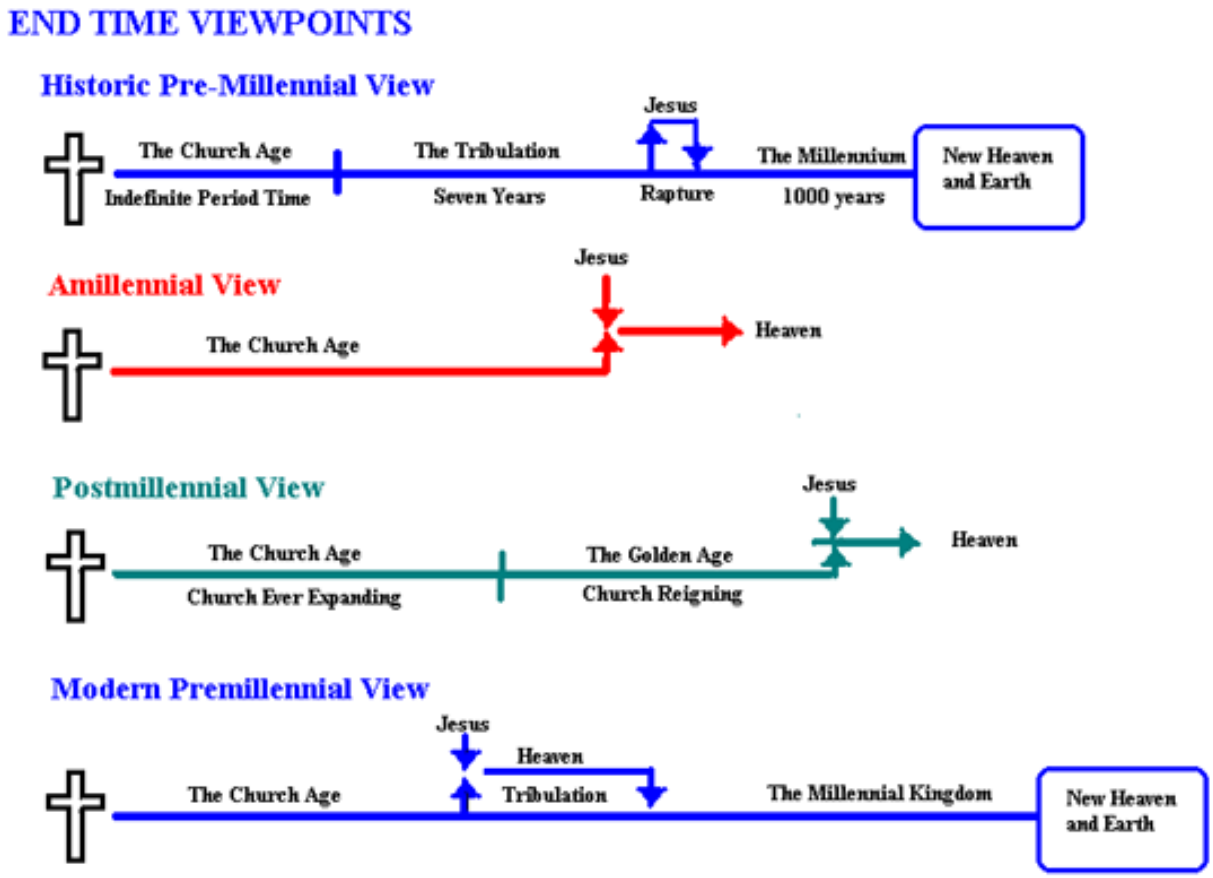
 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



Comparisons of Eschatological (End Times) Views

http://www.writeopinions.com/christian-eschatological-views

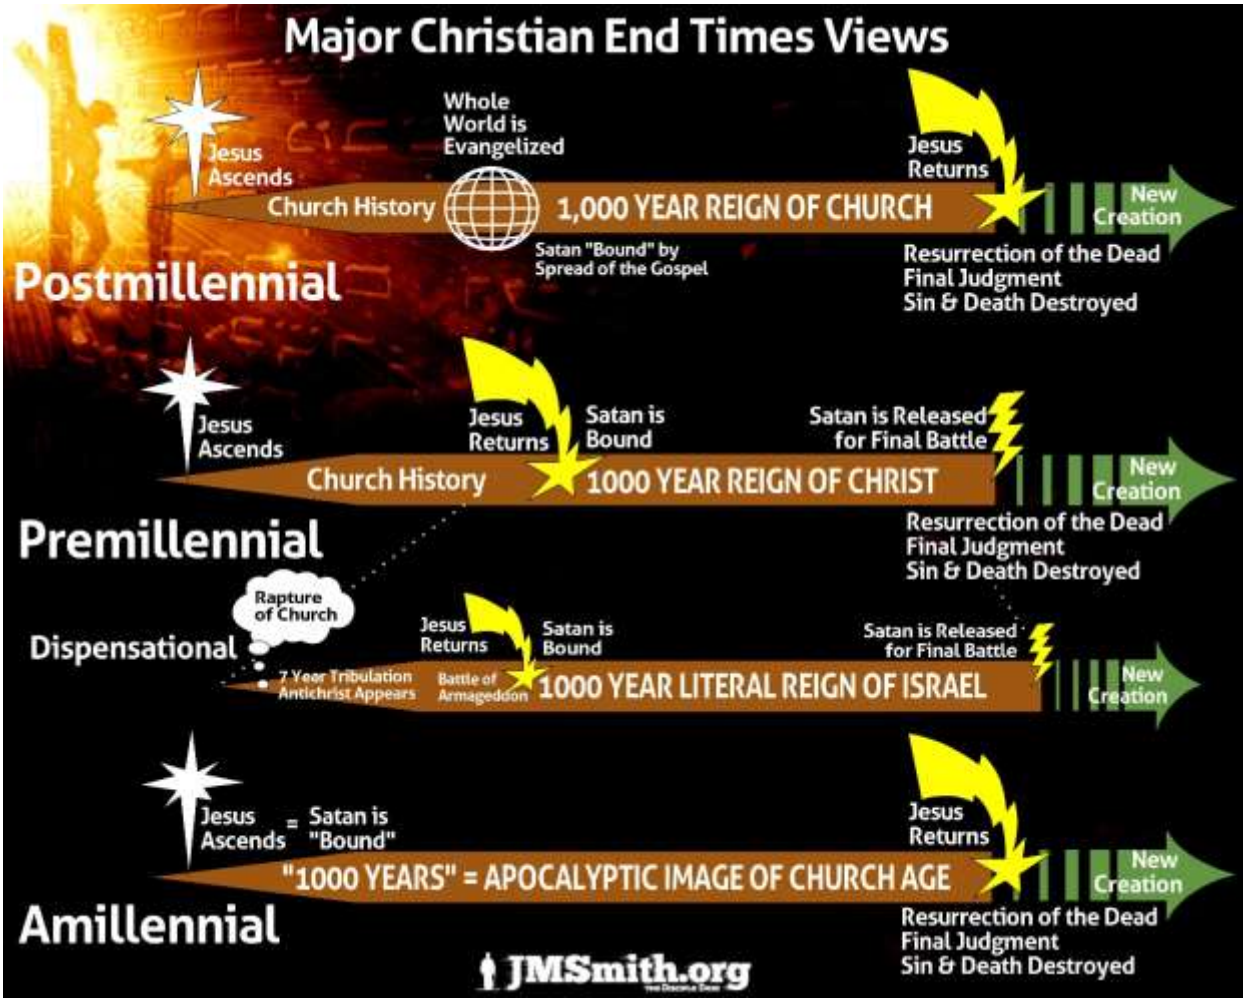
 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



http://www.writeopinions.com/christian-eschatological-views

Note: FYI Preterism: http://www.theopedia.com/preterism

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



What are the differences between the different millennialisms? [Forum] https://christianity.stackexchange.com/questions/3131/what-are-the-differences-between-the-different-millenialisms

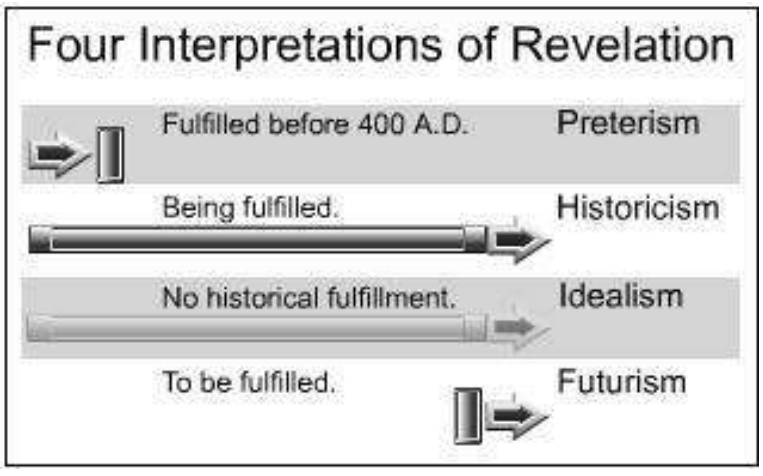
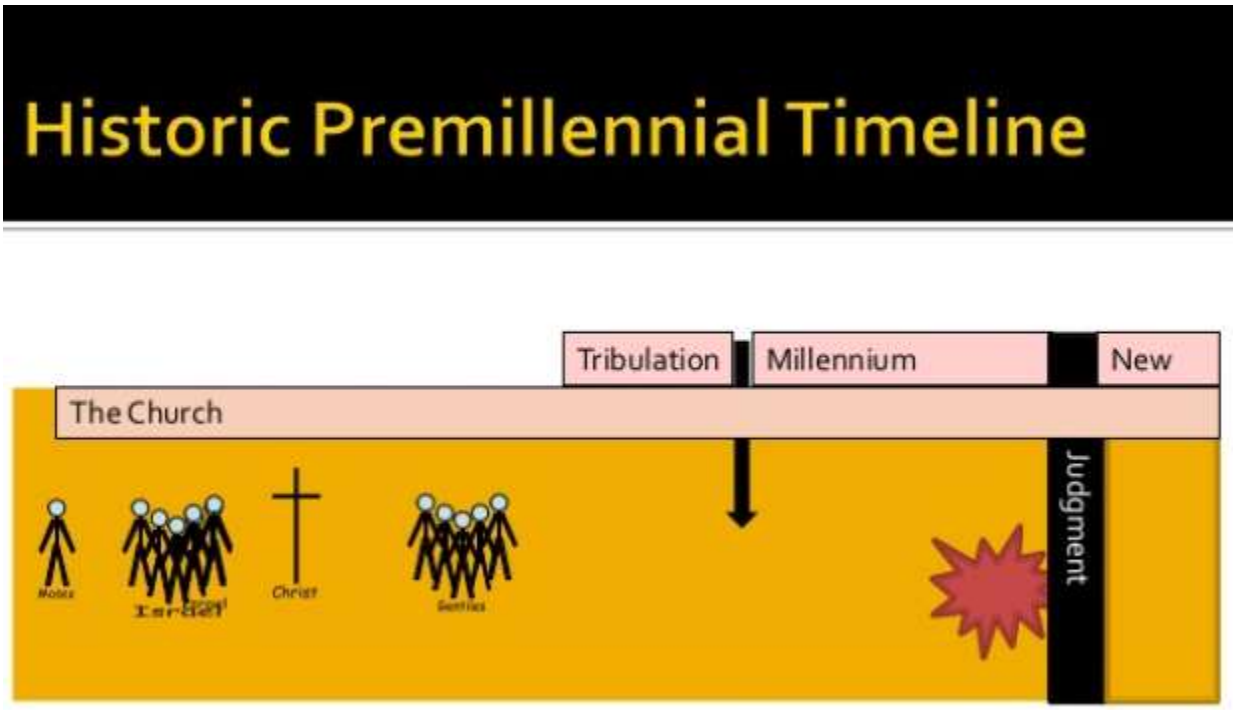
Excerpt:

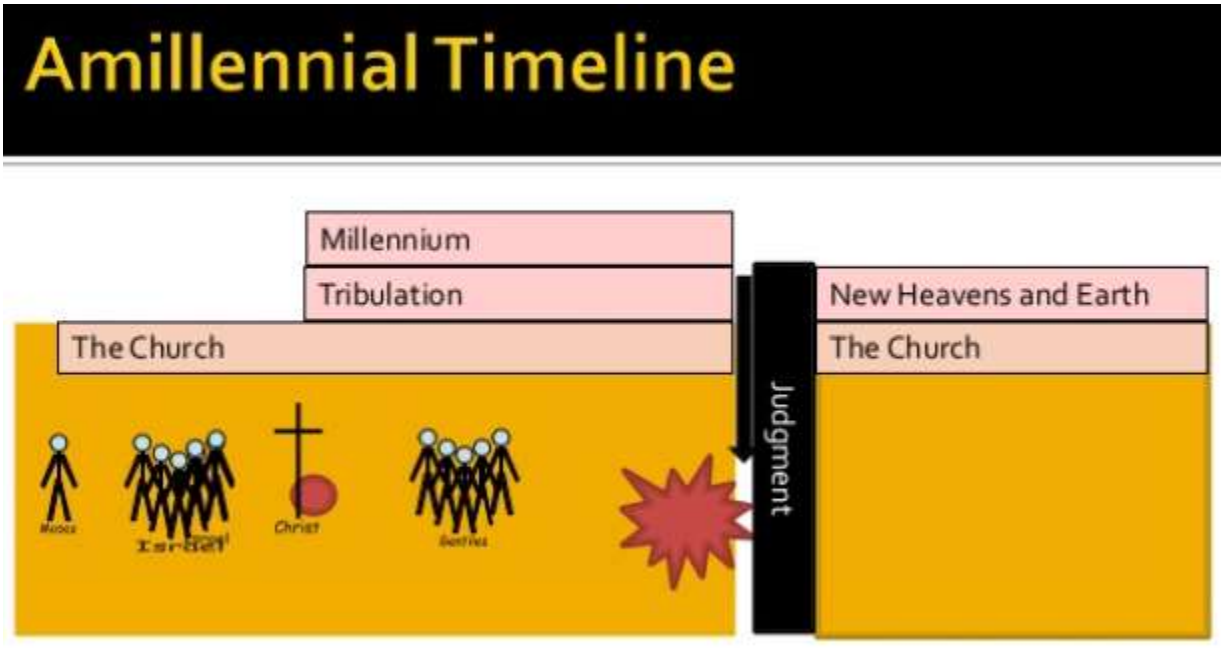


Return to the beginning of this Eschatology section

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

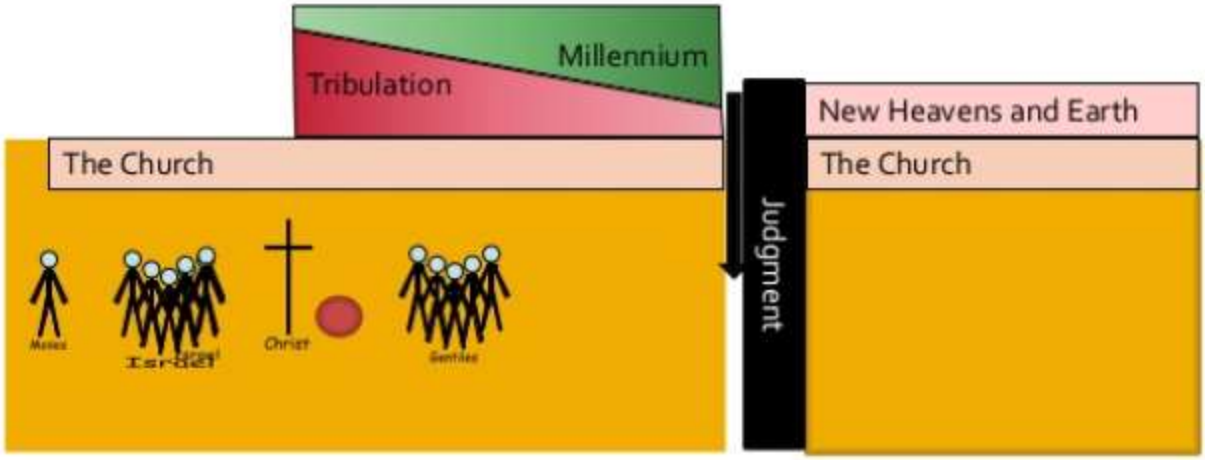


Note: the site for the above chart in general has a Wesleyan perspective.



[Source: http://preteristarchive.com/ARTchive/Charts/]

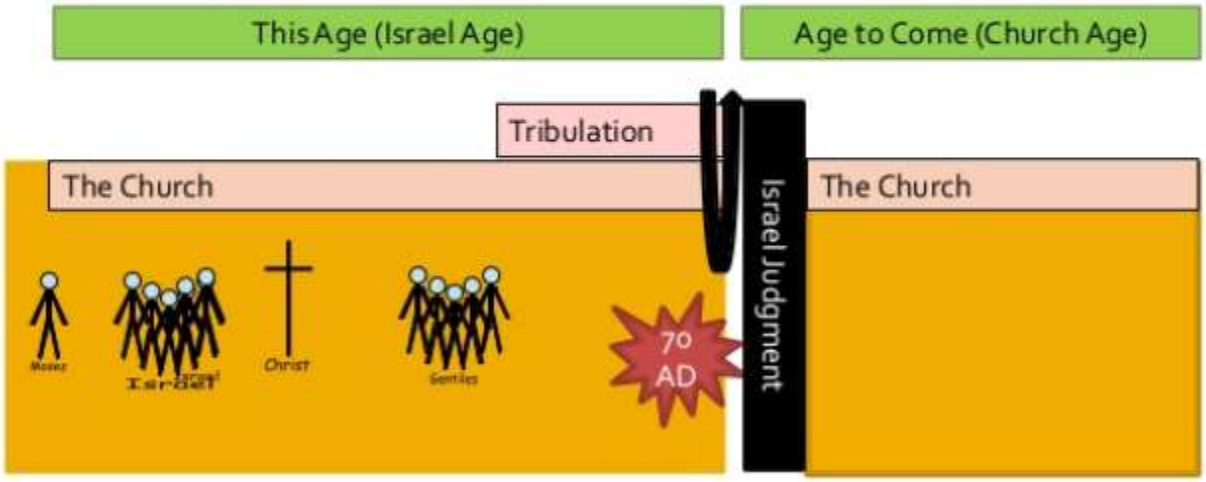
 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



http://metaschema.blogspot.com/2017/04/the-consummation-class-11-review-and.html

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

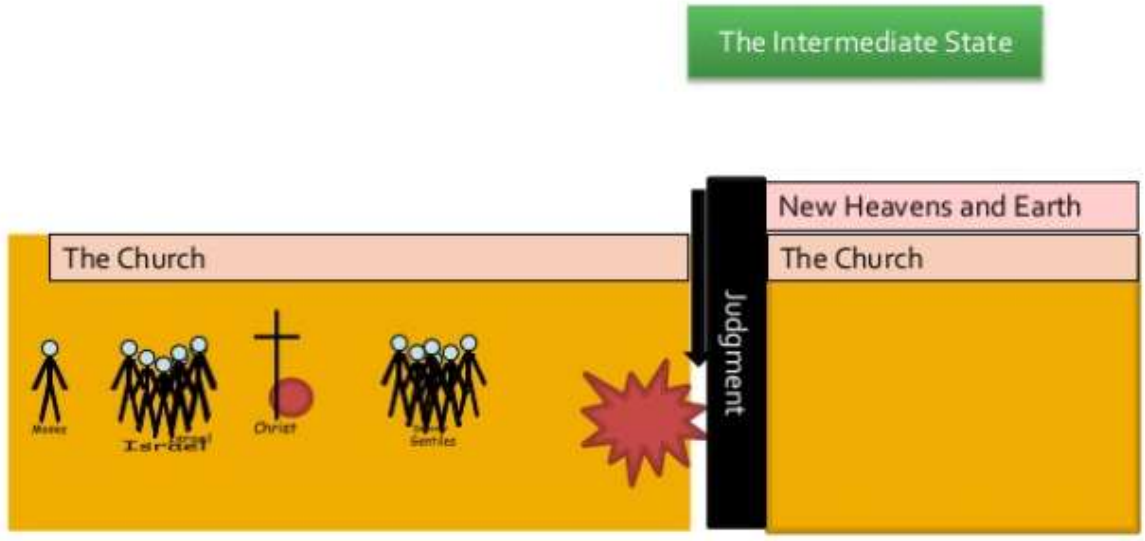
Postmillennial Timeline



Full Preterist Timeline

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Partial Preterist Timeline



Amillennial View of Ages

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Intermediate State

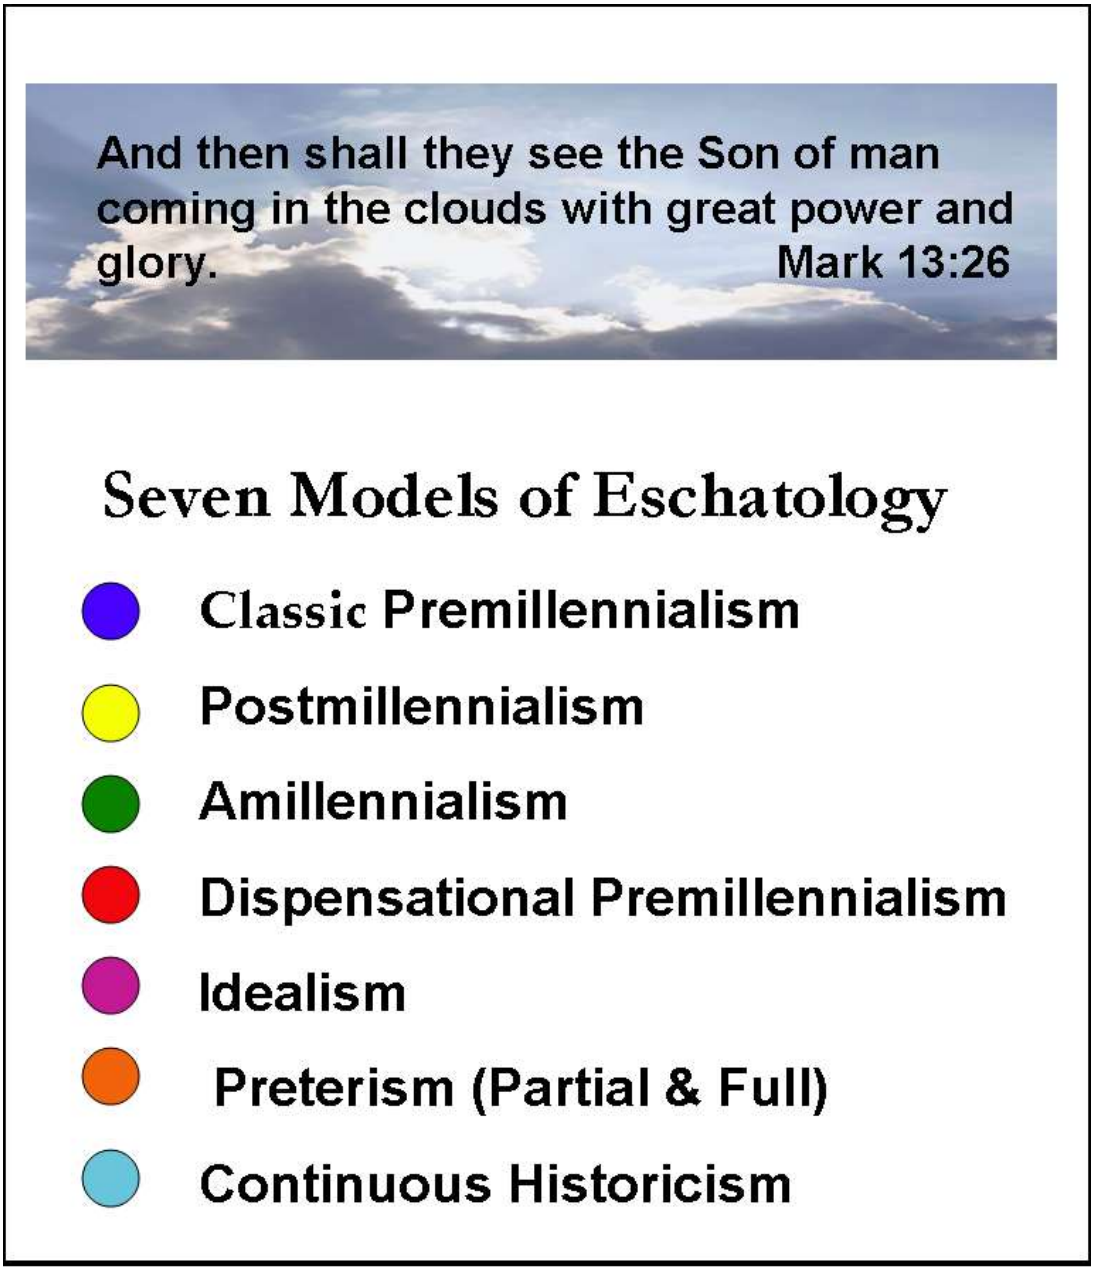
The Intermediate State

- Roman Catholic
- Infused Righteousness
- Church Tradition.
- 2 Maccabees 12:43-46
  - Praying for the dead.
- Matthew 12:32
  - Categories of sin.
- 1 Corinthians 3:11-15
  - Fire burning stubble.

- Protestant
- Imputed Righteousness
  - Romans 3-5
  - God's wrath is removed when we exercise saving faith.
- Finished Work
  - Matt 27:51
  - Luke 23:39-43

For Intermediate State details, see my separate "Reference Notes on Heaven"

Return to the beginning of this Eschatology section



[Go to Index] Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only [Go to Top - TOC]

Models of Eschatology

https://modelsofeschatology.com/

Eschatology refers to the biblical doctrine and study of last things. Usually focused on the return of Christ at the end of the age.

This blog is being setup to assist in the Models of Eschatology study course at United Christian Church in Richmond, Virginia which began January 23, 2008.

Return to the beginning of this Eschatology section

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Two Major Systems of Theology

Two major systems of Christian theology are the long standing Covenant Theology and it's more recent (1800's) Dispensationalism. There have since been attempts to 'tweak' the systems where many have felt they were weakest and/or bridge the gap between the two systems, resulting in New Covenant Theology, Progressive Dispensationalism; and attempting to study and interpret scripture 'out of the box', Christocentric Theology (or hermeneutics). They are also included in this section.

Comparison Chart:

DISPENSATIONALISM AND COVENANT THEOLOGY

The following are the major differences between these two systems of theology. They represent the mainstreams of both systems, though there are variations in each. Representative systematic theologies are those of L.S. Chafer and Charles Hodge.

DISPENSATIONALISM	COVENANT THEOLOGY
1. May be Arminian or modified Calvinist. Almost never 5-point Calvinist.	1.Always Calvinist. Usually 5-point.
2. Stresses 'literal' interpretation of the Bible.	2.Accepts both literal and figurative interpretation of the Bible.
3. Usually does not accept the idea of the 'Analogy of Faith.'	3. Almost always accepts the idea of The 'Analogy of Faith.'
4. 'Israel' always means only the literal, physical descendants of Jacob.	4. 'Israel' may mean either literal, physical descendants of Jacob or the figurative, spiritual Israel, depending on context.
5. 'Israel of God' in Gal. 6:16 means physical Israel alone.	5. 'Israel of God' in Gal. 6:16 means spiritual Israel, parallel to Gal. 3:29; Rom. 2:28029, 9:6; Phil. 3:3.
6. God has 2 peoples with 2 separate destinies: Israel (earthly) and the Church (heavenly).	6. God has always had only 1 people, the Church gradually developed.
7. The Church was born at Pentecost.	7. The Church began in O. T. (Acts 7:38) and reached fulfillment in the N. T.
8. The Church was not prophesied as such in the O.T. but was a hidden mystery until the N.T.	8. There are many O. T. prophecies of the N. T. Church.
9. All O.T. prophecies for 'Israel' are for literal Israel, not the Church.'	9. Some O. T. prophecies are for literal Israel, others are for spiritual Israel.
10. God's main purpose in history is literal Israel.	10. God's main purpose in history is Christ and secondarily the Church.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

11. The Church is a parenthesis in God's program for the ages.	11. The Church is the culmination of God's saving purpose for the ages.
12. The main heir to Abraham's covenant was Isaac and literal Israel.	12. The main heir to Abraham's covenant and was Christ and spiritual Israel.
13. There was no eternal Covenant of Redemption within the Trinity.	13. The eternal Covenant of Redemption was within the Trinity to effect election.
14. There was no Covenant of Works with Adam in the Garden of Eden.	14. God made a conditional Covenant of Works with Adam as representative for all his posterity.
15. There was no Covenant of Grace concerning Adam.	15. God made a Covenant of Grace with Christ and His people, including Adam.
16. Israel was rash to accept the Covenant at Mt. Sinai.	16. Israel was right to accept the Covenant Mt. Sinai.
17. The 'New Covenant' of Jer. 31:31- 34 is only for literal Israel and is not the New Covenant of Lk.22:20.	17. The 'New Covenant' of Jer. 31 is the same as in Lk. 22; both are for spiritual Israel according to Heb. 8.
18. God's program in history is mainly through separate dispensations.	18. God's program in history is mainly through related covenants.
19. Some Dispensationalists have said that O. T. sinners were saved by works.	19. No man has ever been saved by works, but only by grace.
20. Most Dispensationalists teach that men in the O.T. were saved by faith in a revelation peculiar to their dispensation, but this did not include faith in the Messiah as their sin-bearer.	20. All men who have ever been saved have been saved by faith in Christ as their sin-bearer, which has been progressively revealed in every age.
21. The O.T. sacrifices were not recognized as the Gospel or types of the Messiah as sin-bearer, but only seen as such in retrospect.	21. O. T. believers believed in the Gospel of Messiah as sin-bearer mainly by the sacrifices as types and prophecies.
22. The Holy Spirit indwells only believers in the dispensation of Grace, not O.T. and not after the Rapture.	22. The Holy Spirit has indwelt believers in all ages, especially in the present N. T. era, and will not be withdrawn.
23. Jesus.made an offer of the literal Kingdom to Israel; since Israel rejected it, it is postponed.	23. Jesus made only an offer of the spiritual Kingdom, which was rejected by literal Israel but has gradually been accepted by spiritual Israel.
24. O.T. believers were not in Christ, not part of the Body or Bride of Christ.	24. Believers in all ages are all 'in Christ' and part of the Body and Bride of Christ.
25. The Law has been abolished.	25. The Law has 3 uses: to restrain sin in society, to lead to Christ, and to instruct Christians in godliness. The ceremonial Laws have been abolished; the civil laws have been abolished except for their general equity; the moral laws continue.
26. O. T. laws are no longer in effect unless repeated in the N.T.	26. O. T. laws are still in effect unless abrogated in the N.T.
27. The Millennium is the Kingdom of God. Dispensationalists are always Pre-Millennial and usually Pre-Tribulational.	27. The Church is the Kingdom of God. Covenanters are usually Amillennial, sometimes Pre-Millennial or Post-Millennial, rarely Pre-Tribulational.

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

28. The O.T. animal sacrifices will be restored in the Millennium.	28. The O. T. sacrifices were fulfilled and forever abolished in Christ.
29. The Millennium will fulfill the Covenant to Abraham. Israel has a future.	29. Christ fulfilled the Covenant to Abraham. Some Covenanters believe in a future for literal Israel, most don't.
30. David will sit on the Millennial throne in Jerusalem.	30. Christ alone sits on the throne. Saints rule under Him.

[Source: http://faithbibleonline.net/MiscDoctrine/DispCov.htm]

See also*: Three Schools of Theology – DIspensational, Covenant and New Covenant

See additional comparison…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

A Comparison of Dispensationalism and Covenant Theology

	Dispensationalism	Covenant Theology
1	Either Pelagian, Semi Pelagian, Arminian, Evangelical Arminian, rarely a modified Calvinism and even less rarely a five point Calvinist	Augustinian and Calvinistic, Reformed and Presbyterian embraces five points, Lutheran a modified version as well as Anglicans
2	Stresses a 'literal' interpretation of the Bible	Accepts both literal and figurative interpretation
3	Usually does not accept the idea of "Analogy of Faith"	Almost always accepts the idea of "Analogy of Faith"
4	"Israel" always means only the literal, physical descendants of Jacob	"Israel" may be literal, physical descendants of Jacob or figurative, spiritual Israel, based on context
5	"Israel of God" in Galatians 6:16 is physical Israel alone	"Israel of God" in Galatians 6:16 is spiritual Israel, cf Galatians 3:29, Romans 2:28-29, 9:6; Philippians 3:3
6	God has two peoples with two separate destinies: Israel (earthly) and the Church (heavenly)	God always had only one people, which developed from Abraham to the Church
7	The Church was born at Pentecost	The Church began in the Old Testament (Acts 7:38) and reached fulfillment in the New
8	The Church was not prophesied as such in the Old Testament but was a hidden mystery until the New	The Old Testament contains many prophecies of the New Testament Church
9	All Old Testament prophecies for Israel are for literal Israel, not the church	Some Old Testament prophecies were for literal Israel, others are for spiritual Israel
10	God's main purpose in history is literal Israel	God's main purpose is Christ and secondly the Church.
11	The church is a parenthesis in God's program for the ages.	The church is the culmination of God's saving purpose for the ages
12	The main heir to Abraham's covenant was Isaac and literal Israel	The main heir to Abraham's covenant was Christ and spiritual Israel
13	There was no eternal "Covenant of Redemption" within the Trinity	The eternal "Covenant of Redemption" was within the Trinity to effect election
14	There was no "Covenant of Works" with Adam in the Garden of Eden	God made a conditional "Covenant of Works" with Adam as representative for all his posterity
15	There was no "Covenant of Grace" concerning Adam	God made a "Covenant of Grace" with Christ and His people, including Adam
16	Israel was rash to accept the Covenant at Mount Sinai	Israel was right to accept the Covenant Mount Sinai
17	The "New Covenant" of Jeremiah 31:31-34 is only for literal Israel and is not the New Covenant of Luke 22:20	The "New Covenant" of Jeremiah 31 is the same as in Luke 22; Hebrews 8, says both are for spiritual Israel
18	God's program in history is mainly through separate dispensations	God's program in history is mainly through related covenants
19	Some Dispensationalists have said that Old Testament sinners were saved by works	No one was ever saved by works, but by grace alone
20	Most Dispensationalists teach that men in the Old Testament, were saved by faith in a revelation peculiar to their dispensation, but this did not include faith in the Messiah as their sin-bearer.	All men who have ever been saved have been saved by faith in Christ as their sin-bearer, which has been progressively revealed in every age.
21	The Old Testament sacrifices were not recognized as the Gospel or types of the Messiah as sin-bearer, but only seen as such in retrospect	Old Testament believers believed in the Gospel of Messiah as sin-bearer mainly by the sacrifices as types and prophecies

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

22	The Holy Spirit indwells believers in the Dispensation of Grace, not in the Old Testament nor after the Rapture	The Holy Spirit indwelt some believers in all ages, and all in the present era, and will never be withdrawn
23	Jesus made an offer of the literal Kingdom to Israel; since Israel rejected it, it is postponed	Jesus made only an offer of the spiritual Kingdom, which was rejected by literal Israel but has gradually been accepted by spiritual Israel
24	Old Testament believers were not in Christ, nor part of the Body or Bride of Christ.	Believers in al ages are all "in Christ" and part of the Body and Bride of Christ
25	The Law has been abolished	The Moral Law has three uses: • to restrain sin in society • to lead to Christ, and • to instruct Christians in godliness. The ceremonial laws have been abolished; the civil laws apply only within their general equity; the applicability of the moral laws continues
26	Old Testament laws are no longer in effect unless repeated in the New Testament	Old Testament laws are still in effect unless abrogated in the New Testament
27	Sees the Millennium is the Kingdom of God, are always Pre-Millennial and usually Pre-Tribulation	The Church is the Kingdom of God. Covenanters are usually Amillennial, or Post-Millennial, sometimes Pre-Millennial but never Pre-Tribulational
28	The Old Testament animal sacrifices will be restored in the Millennium	The Old Testament sacrifices were fulfilled and forever abolished in Christ
29	The Millennium will fulfill the Covenant made with Abraham. Israel has a literal future	Christ fulfilled the Covenant made with Abraham. Some believe in a future for literal Israel, most do not
30	David will sit on the Millennial throne in Jerusalem	Christ alone sits on the throne. Saints rule under Him

http://ugandamission.net/doctrine/rapture/comparedispensationalism.pdf [PDF]

See additional comparison…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

A Comparison of Historic Covenant and Historic Dispensational Theology

ISSUE	COVENANT POSITION	DISPENSATIONAL POSITION
PATTERN OF HISTORY	Covenant of Works with Adam; Covenant of Grace with Christ on behalf of elect (some distinguish between Covenant of Redemption with Christ and Covenant of Grace with the elect).	Divided into dispensations (usually seven); e.g., Innocence (pre-Fall), Conscience (Adam), Human Government (Noah), Promise (Abraham), Law (Moses), Grace (Christ's First Coming), Kingdom (Christ's Second Coming).
VIEW OF HISTORY	Optimistic: God is extending His kingdom.	Pessimistic: the Last Days are marked by increasingly worse wickedness in the world and by apostasy in the church.
GOD'S PURPOSE IN HISTORY	There is a unified redemptive purpose.	There are two distinct purposes, one earthly (Israel), one heavenly (church).
VIEW OF THE BIBLICAL COVENANTS	They are different administrations of the, Covenant of Grace.	They mark off periods of time during which God's specific demands of man differ.
RELATIONSHIP OF OLD TESTAMENT TO NEW TESTAMENT	Acceptance of Old Testament teaching required unless specifically abrogated by New Testament.	Old Testament prescriptions are not binding unless reaffirmed in New Testament.
RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN ISRAEL AND THE CHURCH	The church is spiritual Israel, in continuity with true Israel of Old Testament.	The church is the spiritual people of God, distinct from Israel, the physical people of God.
OLD TESTAMENT PROPHECY	Refers to God's people, the church.	Refers to ethnic Israel.
CHURCH AGE	God's redemptive purpose continued to unfold.	There is a parenthesis between past and future manifestations of the kingdom.
ROLE OF HOLY SPIRIT	The Holy Spirit indwells God's people throughout history.	The Holy Spirit indwells God's people only from Pentecost to the Rapture.
BAPTISM	Unified covenant generally used to support infant baptism.	Israel/church distinction often (but not always) used to support believers' baptism.
SOCIAL IMPLICATIONS	Emphasizes "cultural mandate."	The only way to save the world is to save individuals; therefore evangelism takes precedence over "social action."

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

ESCHATOLOGY	Usually amillennial; rarely postmillennial; occasionally premillennial.	Premillennial, usually pretribulational.
MILLENNIUM	Symbolic, often identified with present age.	Literal, earthly 1000-year reign after Second Coming.

http://reformed-theology.org/html/c-vs-dis.htm

http://sabalharu.blogspot.com/2011/11/comparison-of-historic-covenant-and.html

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Seventh-Day Adventist Perspectives

http://ssnet.org/blog/are-adventists-old-covenant-christians-part-5/

Excerpt:

In the previous post, we identified where Adventism fits in relation to covenant theology. The conclusion placed Adventism closest to the views espoused by the 2nd London Baptist Confession, a covenantal framework that falls under the tradition of the Presbyterians, Congregationalists, and Baptists known as "Covenantalism." The post concluded by sharing some points on how this identification is helpful for the church.

As we launch into the final posts of this series I will re-introduce some of the concepts mentioned before in order remind the reader of the important elements before moving forward. The first concept was introduced in the second installment of this series and identified the different types of covenant views that exist in Christianity. Covenantalism falls under Category A leaving the other two systems in Category B. The significance of this lies in the fact that the views under Category A all teach the perpetuity of the law, while the views under Category B reject it.

Category A	Category B
Covenantalism	Alternate views to Covenantalism
1) Westminster Confession	1) Dispensationalism
2) 2nd London Baptist Confession	2) New Covenant Theology
(Embrace Perpetuity of Law and Sabbath)	(Reject Perpetuity of Law and Sabbath)

Below I have also included the chart which summarized the last post.

Themes	CATEGORY A: COVENANTALISM		CATEGORY B: ALTERNATE VIEWS TO COVENANTALISM		Category C
	Westminster Confession (WCC)	2nd London Baptist Confession (2LBC)	Classic Dispensationalism (CDM)	New Covenant Theology (NCT)	Adventism (ADM)
Salvation	Reformed/ Calvinist Salvation always by grace even in OT	Reformed/ Calvinist Salvation always by grace even in OT	Arminian/ OSAS/ Some Calvinist Salvation always by grace even in OT	Reformed/ Calvinist Salvation always by grace even in OT	Arminian Salvation always by grace even in OT
Covenant Narrative	Eternal Covenant of Grace (from eternity past) • Covenant of Works (Eden state) • Covenant of Grace (post-fall until second coming) Modern WCC embraces Covenant of Redemption.	Eternal Covenant of Grace (from eternity past) • Covenant of Redemption (before the foundations of the world) • Covenant of Works (Eden state) • Covenant of Grace (post-fall until second coming)	Dispensational Narrative: 7 dispensations OT dispensations where diverse administrations of grace NT dispensations, Jesus administers grace	1 redemptive plan and one people of God No covenant of redemption, works, or grace All grace – Christ is centre and fulfillment of all	Eternal Covenant of Grace (from eternity past) • Covenant of Redemption (before the foundation of the world) • Covenant of Works (Eden state) • Covenant of Grace (post-fall until second coming)
Covenant Continuity	OT post-fall covenants are Covenant of Grace Therefore, there is continuity between old and new Pedobaptist Ceremonial and civil law annulled Moral law remains as standard of life not as administration of Grace 10 commandments still binding including Sabbath (Sunday)	OT post-fall covenants typified Covenant of Grace Therefore, there is no continuity between old and new Credobaptist Entire law annulled Decalogue is transcovenantal therefore it remains relevant 10 commandments still binding including Sabbath (Sunday)	OT Dispensations are administrations of Covenant of Grace Each dispensation ends with the arrival of a new one. No continuity. Credobaptist Entire law annulled Decalogue is not transcovenantal 10 commandments no longer binding unless repeated in NT. Sabbath is kept by faith in Jesus, not resting on a day	OT post-fall covenants typified Covenant of Grace Therefore, there is no continuity between old and new Credobaptist Entire law annulled Decalogue is not transcovenantal 10 commandments no longer binding unless repeated in NT. Sabbath is kept by faith in Jesus, not resting on a day	OT post-fall covenants typified Covenant of Grace Therefore, there is no continuity between old and new Credobaptist • Traditional: Civil and Ceremonial Annulled. Moral Remains • Progressive: Entire law annulled Decalogue is transcovenantal therefore it remains relevant 10 commandments still binding including Sabbath (7th Day)
Israel/ Church Relationship	Israel was the church in the OT NT Church is continuation of true Israel Promises to Israel fulfilled in Church	Israel typified the Church Church is replacement of Israel Promises to Israel fulfilled in Church	Israel and Church are 2 separate redemptive plans Old Covenant to be reinstated after the restoration of National Israel in end times	Israel typified the Church Church is continuation of Israel Promises to Israel fulfilled in Jesus	True Israel was the church in the OT NT Church is continuation of true Israel Promises to Israel fulfilled in Jesus and to the church
Eschatology	Classic – Historicism (papacy as antichrist) Modern – Preterism (antichrist was Nero) Rejects any central end time role for Israel	Classic – Historicism (papacy as antichrist) Modern – Preterism (antichrist was Nero) Rejects any central end time role for Israel	Futurism Secret Rapture - 7 Years Tribulation Premillennial Rule of Christ Israel has central role in end times	Preterism/ Futurism (one world government = antichrist) Rejects any central end time role for Israel	Historicism (papacy as antichrist) Rejects any central end time role for Israel

See next page for larger view…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

NOTE: This is a Seventh-Day Adventist Perspective

Themes	CATEGORY A: COVENANTALISM		CATEGORY B: ALTERNATE VIEWS TO COVENANTALISM		Category C
	Westminster Confession (WCC)	2nd London Baptist Confession (2LBC)	Classic Dispensationalism (CDM)	New Covenant Theology (NCT)	Adventism (ADM)
Salvation	Reformed/ Calvinist Salvation always by grace even in OT	Reformed/ Calvinist Salvation always by grace even in OT	Arminian/ OSAS/ Some Calvinist Salvation always by grace even in OT	Reformed/ Calvinist Salvation always by grace even in OT	Arminian Salvation always by grace even in OT
Covenant Narrative	Eternal Covenant of Grace (from eternity past) • Covenant of Works (Eden state) • Covenant of Grace (post-fall until second coming) Modern WCC embraces Covenant of Redemption.	Eternal Covenant of Grace (from eternity past) • Covenant of Redemption (before the foundations of the world) • Covenant of Works (Eden state) • Covenant of Grace (post-fall until second coming)	Dispensational Narrative: 7 dispensations OT dispensations where diverse administrations of grace NT dispensations, Jesus administers grace	1 redemptive plan and one people of God No covenant of redemption, works, or grace All grace – Christ is centre and fulfilment of all	Eternal Covenant of Grace (from eternity past) • Covenant of Redemption (before the foundation of the world) • Covenant of Works (Eden state) • Covenant of Grace (post-fall until second coming)
Covenant Continuity	OT post-fall covenants are Covenant of Grace Therefore, there is continuity between old and new Pedobaptist Ceremonial and civil law annulled Moral law remains as standard of life not as administration of Grace 10 commandments still binding including Sabbath (Sunday)	OT post-fall covenants typified Covenant of Grace Therefore, there is no continuity between old and new Credobaptist Entire law annulled Decalogue is transcovenantal therefore it remains relevant 10 commandments still binding including Sabbath (Sunday)	OT Dispensations are administrations of Covenant of Grace Each dispensation ends with the arrival of a new one. No continuity. Credobaptist Entire law annulled Decalogue is not transcovenantal 10 commandments no longer binding unless repeated in NT. Sabbath is kept by faith in Jesus, not resting on a day	OT post-fall covenants typified Covenant of Grace Therefore, there is no continuity between old and new Credobaptist Entire law annulled Decalogue is not transcovenantal 10 commandments no longer binding unless repeated in NT. Sabbath is kept by faith in Jesus, not resting on a day	OT post-fall covenants typified Covenant of Grace Therefore, there is no continuity between old and new Credobaptist • Traditional: Civil and Ceremonial Annulled. Moral Remains • Progressive: Entire law annulled Decalogue is transcovenantal therefore it remains relevant 10 commandments still binding including Sabbath (7th Day)
Israel/ Church Relationship	Israel was the church in the OT NT Church is continuation of true Israel Promises to Israel fulfilled in Church	Israel typified the Church Church is replacement of Israel Promises to Israel fulfilled in Church	Israel and Church are 2 separate redemptive plans Old Covenant to be reinstated after the restoration of National Israel in end times	Israel typified the Church Church is continuation of Israel Promises to Israel fulfilled in Jesus	True Israel was the church in the OT NT Church is continuation of true Israel Promises to Israel fulfilled in Jesus and to the church
Eschatology	Classic – Historicism (papacy as antichrist) Modern – Preterism (antichrist was Nero) Rejects any central end time role for Israel	Classic – Historicism (papacy as antichrist) Modern – Preterism (antichrist was Nero) Rejects any central end time role for Israel	Futurism Secret Rapture - 7 Years Tribulation Premillennial Rule of Christ Israel has central role in end times	Preterism/ Futurism (one world government = antichrist) Rejects any central end time role for Israel	Historicism (papacy as antichrist) Rejects any central end time role for Israel

[Go to Index]

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

[Go to Top - TOC]

Israel and the Church – Covenant Theology vs Dispensationalism, etc.

See also*: Supercession or Replacement Theology

Comparison chart Covenant Theology vs. Dispensationalism

https://www.christianforums.com/threads/comparison-chart-covenant-theology-vs-dispensationalism.8047488/

Excerpt:

Here is a brief comparison showing the main differences between covenant theology and dispensational theology, nice and impartial.

Dispensationalism

1. God has two distinct people – Israel and the Church.
2. The Church age was a parenthesis in God's dealing with Israel.
3. God's promises to Israel were postponed till after the rapture.
4. After a Jewish tribulation revival, their 'dispensation' will resume.
5. Worship in the millennium includes re-instituted temple sacrifice.
6. The promised temple is an example of what must yet be fulfilled.
7. Modern Israel proves not all promises are fulfilled in the Church.

Covenant Theology

1. God has always only had but one spiritual people.
2. The Church (incl. Jew & Gentile) actually is true Israel.
3. God's promises to Israel are fulfilled in Christ's Church.
4. There will be a revival of Jews but it will be into the Church.
5. Redemption is in the cross and sacrifice is finished forever.
6. Even if a temple gets rebuilt it is unnecessary and irrelevant.
7. The modern restoration of the nation of Israel is coincidental.

Note on #1: When dispensationalists say God has two people, they are referring to Israel (an ethnic group) and the Church. (a spiritual group) When covenant theology says God has one people they are referring to 'Spiritual Israel' (a single entity consisting of saints from every tribe)

Note on #3: Covenant theology applies the geographical land promises to the Church figuratively.

Note on #5: Dispensationalists either infer or state that the entire levitical system will be repeated in the Millennium. Moderates think that it will simply serve as a 'reminder' of Christ's death. Extreme dispensationalists infer that it will be the basis of millennium atonement. In either case all disps. accord an elite position to ethnic Israel in the millennium.

The Church is now all of the specific things that Israel never became http://paleoevangelical.blogspot.com/2011/10/church-is-now-all-of-specific-things.html

Excerpt:

A long, long time ago—back in May—I launched a series on the relationship between the major biblical covenants. Initially rooted in arguments from this book, we more recently (July!) interacted with John Reisinger's Abraham's Four Seeds. And that's where we'll land, finally, in this post and another scheduled to publish soon.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Reisinger published a chart on pages 114-115 that was designed to compare and contrast the nation of Israel with the body of Christ—two nations, two covenants, related to one another under "God's one single goal." I've reproduced it below, not because it indisputably resolves all the issues (I actually think it doesn't), but because it's an enlightening glimpse at the issues from one particular angle that I've seldom heard discussed:

Point of Comparison	The Nation of Israel	The Body of Christ
Promise to Abraham	Same promise given to the nation of Israel	Fulfilled in the Church
"I will make of thee a Great Nation" (Gen. 12:3)	"If ye will obey...and keep my covenant, then ye shall be a peculiar treasure unto me...a kingdom of priests, and an holy nation...(Ex. 19:5-6).	"Ye also, as lively stones, are built up a spiritual house, an holy priesthood,...Ye are a chosen generation, a royal [kingly] priesthood, an holy nation, a peculiar people...(1 Peter 2:5, 9).
Both chosen "nations"	Isaiah 51:4	1 Peter 2:9
Kind of nation	Physical	Spiritual
Basis of citizenship	Natural birth	Spiritual birth
Spiritual state of citizens	Saved and lost—Romans 9:6	Saved only—Hebrews 8:10, 11
Proof of citizenship	Circumcision of the flesh by human hands	Circumcision of the heart by the Holy Spirit
Both are the "seed of Abraham" by birth	Born "after the flesh"—"natural" seed only	Born "after the Spirit"—"spiritual" seed
Relationship to God	Loved, chosen, redeemed, adopted, as a physical nation among nations	Loved, chosen, redeemed, and adopted as a spiritual family
Both "redeemed"	Physically—from Egypt	Spiritually—from sin
Both "called by God"	Out of Egypt	Out of the world
Covenant foundation of nationhood	Decalogue—"Do" and live, disobey and die	Blood of Christ; "Finished"—believe
Condition of blessing	Works—obedience	Grace—faith
Government or rule	Whole Mosaic economy	Whole Law of Christ
Goal—become the true "holy nation" of God (Exodus 19:4, 5)	Never realized—the "if" never fulfilled	Realized by every citizen in the nation—"ye are"
Time frame of nation's existence	Began—Exodus 24:8; Ended—Matt. 27:51	Began—Pentecost (1 Cor. 12:12, 13); Never end—Eph. 2:21-23
Conclusion	All finished—Hebrews 8	All new–Hebrews 9 and 10

Reisinger argues that the chart is rooted in five biblical facts. He expands on and defends them (115-117); I'll merely list them:

1. The physical nation of Israel was given the specific promise of becoming the true holy nation of God if the people would obey the covenant of law given at Mount Sinai (Ex. 34:27, 28).

2. Israel, as the physical nation of God, was brought into being, as a nation or "body politic," by the Law Covenant at Sinai (Deut 4:13). Their national existence and special relationship to God were based on their obedience to that legal covenant and all its ceremonial and civil accruements.

3. The physical nation of Israel was cast off and the special national covenant relationship was totally ended when Christ came (Matt. 21:43)

4. The spiritual nation, the Body of Christ, was "born in a day" [an allusion to Is. 66:8] and has become all of the very things Israel never became. . . . It is impossible not to see 1 Peter 2:5-9 as the word-for-word fulfillment of the promise made to Israel at Sinai in Exodus 19:5, 6.

5. The Church inherits the true spiritual blessings promised to Israel in the law covenant at Sinai simply because her Lord has kept the covenant for her. Christ earned every blessing the law covenant promised by being born under that covenant (Gal. 3:24-4:7), and then rendering to it the perfect obedience that it demanded (Phil. 2:5-11 and Rom. 8:1-4). This was the only way that he could earn (for us) the righteousness that was necessary to inherit the blessings that the law covenant promised. Christ also endured every curse that same law covenant threatened when he died on the cross under the judgment of God. [. . . and I hope we can all say amen to that . . .]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

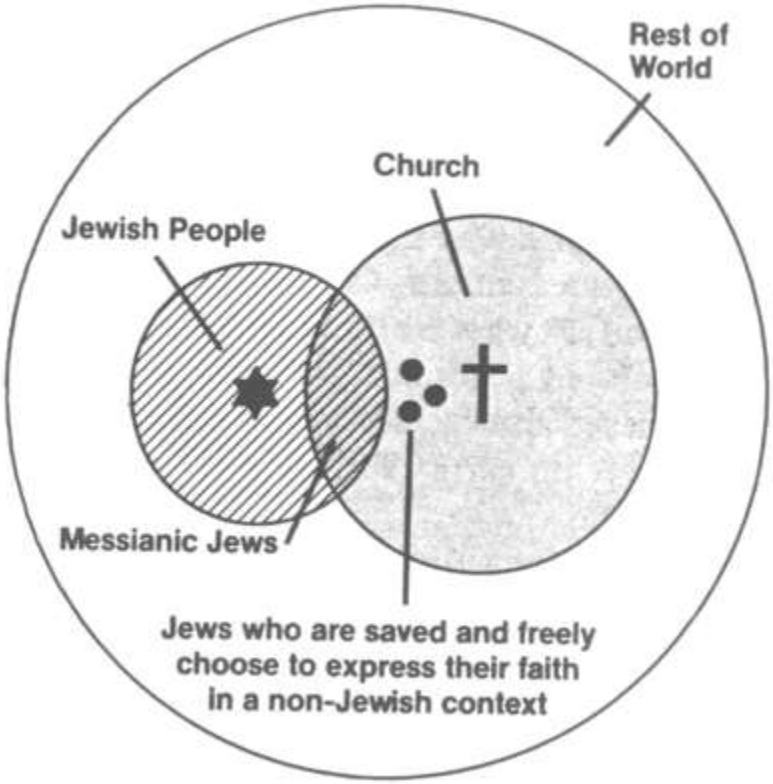
Comment:

I found it. He posted this at Dan Phillips' blog.

"I do not have bad views of the millennium simply because I do not have ANY view of the mil... I was a pre-mil, went to A-mil, went to pan-mil (will all pan out), went to pro-mil (if there is one I am for it.) I am now, and have been for a while, an existential milllennialist, (I have given up hope of finding the answer).



If 'pre-mil' means there must be an earthly mil...or God's promises are not fulfilled then I cannot be a pre-mil. If you say, "The Bible teaches there will be no earthly mil"...I cannot be an a-mil. Where does the Bible say there will be no mil...? I feel about the mil...the same as I feel about the gifts of the Spirit being revived (or an earthly mil...), but I see nothing in Scripture to prevent there being a mil and even some possibility there might be. I would be happy to share my fixed view if you so desire.

John Reisinger"

Are Non-Jewish Believers Really a Part of Israel? – Part 1 (Written)

http://messianicapologetics.net/archives/10447

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

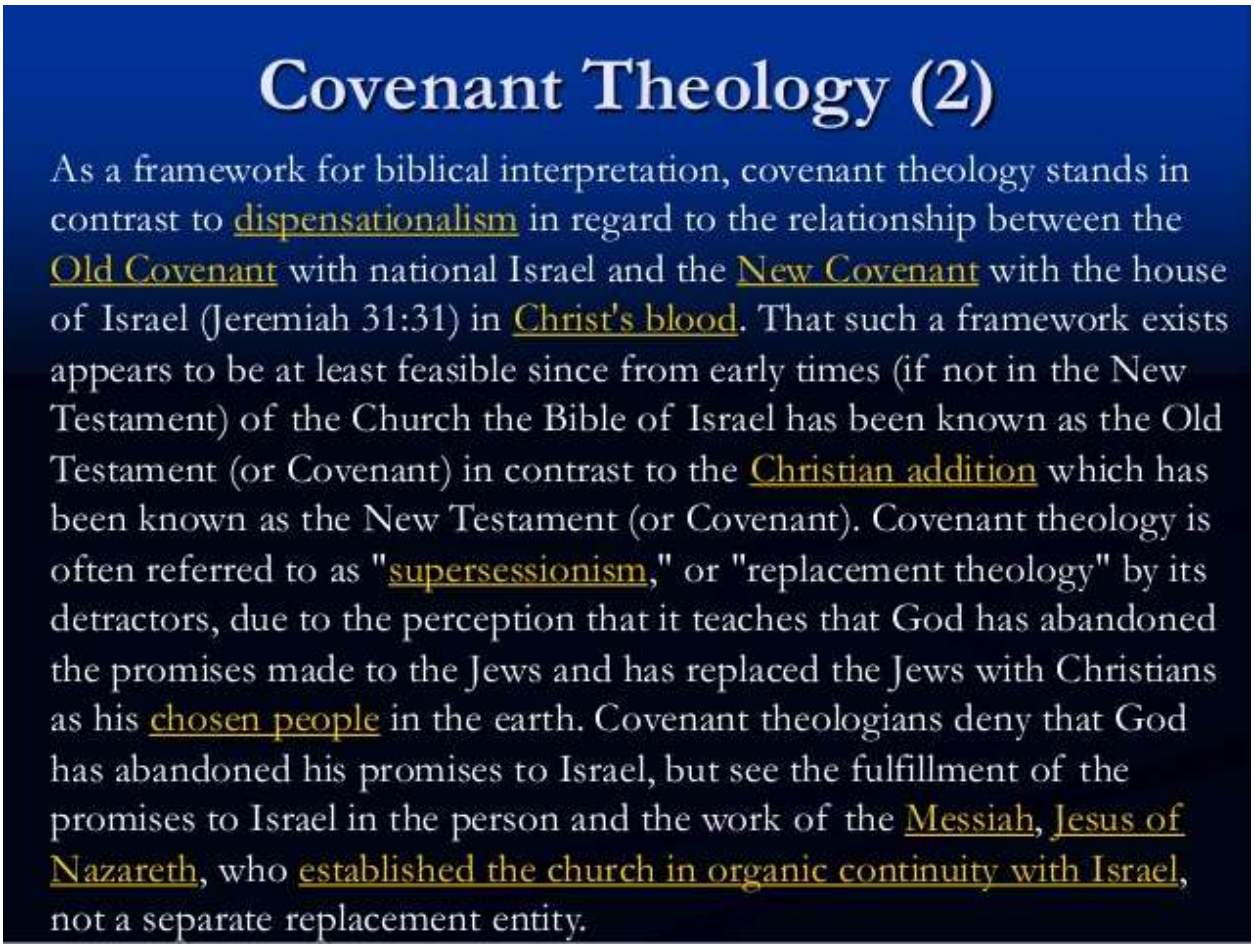
Israel and the Church: Does One Equal the Other? (Dispensational Perspective)

https://randomtheoloblog.wordpress.com/2012/06/25/israel-and-the-church-does-one-equal-the-other/

Excerpt:

I received the above chart from a friend of mine. As you can see it equates Israel with the Church based upon various similarities. Obviously, some of the similarities are legitimate. However, similarity does not equal identity. In other words, just because two things have many characteristics in common doesn't mean that they are the same entity. Israel and the Church is a case in point.

I want to begin by simply pointing out the ill-advised hermeneutic that has been employed in at least one of the similarities. Number sixteen states that Christ is married to them (speaking of the nation Israel) and Christ is married to the Church also. Notice that Christ being married to Israel is in italics. That is because the Old Testament doesn't teach that Christ is married to Israel but that Yahweh is. Hosea 2:19 is not Messiah speaking but is Yahweh speaking to Old Testament Israel: "I will betroth you to Me forever." (NASB) However, this is just one issue. Let's get to the meat of the subject.



There are sixteen similarities in this chart, fifteen if you discount number sixteen. Years ago Lewis Sperry Chafer illustrated twenty-four contrasts between Israel and the Church. Perhaps they will help to make my point, which is that Israel and the Church are two separate entities created by God for His purposes. Note: All of these are found in Lewis Sperry Chafer, Systematic Theology (Grand Rapids: Zondervan Publishing House, 1948), IV:47-53. Additional explanation and variation is found in Arnold Fruchtenbaum, Israelology (San Antonio: Ariel Ministries Press, 1989). Granted not all of these are direct statements of Scripture but are easily seen in Scriptural revelation by simply examining the information Scripture provides. The interesting thing about these observations is that they are all derived simply by a man and his Bible and a normal reading of Scripture. To put it another way, just as the doctrine of the Trinity is not overtly stated in one verse and must be deduced from the totality of Scripture's teaching, these distinctions or contrasts between Israel and the Church must be discovered in the same manner.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

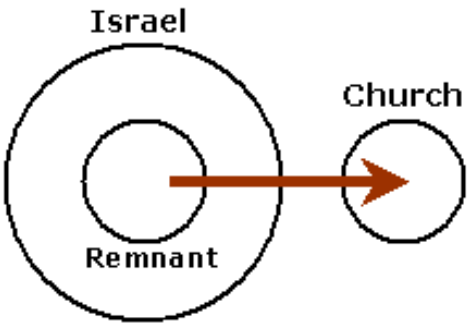
It is my intention to discuss these twenty-four contrasts over our next two blog posts. Enjoy…

Basic Eschatology: An Introduction
https://www.slideshare.net/StephenYong2/basic-eschatology-an-introduction

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



Israel and the Church - Understanding Some Theological Options http://biblicalchristiannetwork.blogspot.com/2013/04/theology-israel-and-church-john-j.html

Excerpts:

See also*: Israel and the Church

There are three basic theological options regarding the relationship between the Church and Israel: Replacement Theology, Separation Theology, and Remnant Theology.

See also*: Supercessionism and Replacement Theology

Replacement Theology

- The covenants and promises given to Israel are transferred to the Gentile Church.
- Jews must convert to Gentile Christianity.

Remnant Theology

- The Gentile Church partakes of the covenants and promises given to Remnant Israel.
- Gentile Christians must identify with Remnant Israel.

Separation Theology

- The covenants and promises given to Israel are not transferred to the Gentile Church.
- The Church is a new spiritual entity with a distinct purpose and destiny.

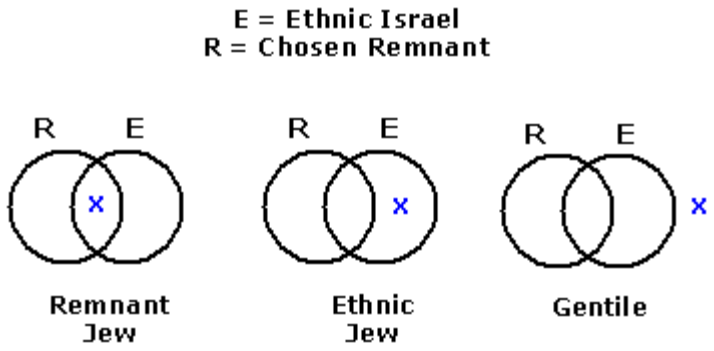
 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

3. Remnant Theology



A third theological option regarding the relationship of the Church and Israel is to claim that the Church and Israel "overlap" in some manner. In Replacement/Covenant Theology, the Church is said to supercede Israel in such a way that Israel is abandoned with no redemptive future. In Separation theology, there is a distinction between Israel and the Church, but there is some question about how the two groups will interact, especially beyond the millennial reign of Jesus into eternity. Remnant Theology attempts to mediate these positions by understanding the Church to be a subset of faithful ethnic Israel who received Jesus (Yeshua) as the promised Messiah. This faithful subset of Israel is called the Remnant or the "Israel of God" (Gal. 6:6):

- The Gentile Church partakes of the covenants and promises given to remnant Israel.
- Gentile Christians must identify with Remnant Israel.

She'arit Yisrael - The Remnant of Israel

The Scriptures make a distinction between being an ethnic Jew (i.e., one born Jewish) and one who is considered to be a member of she'arit Yisrael, the faithful remnant of Israel. This can be seen in the following:

As can be seen from this diagram, a person can be 1) outside of relationship to Israel altogether (i.e., a Gentile); 2) within ethnic Israel by virtue of birth (to a Jewish mother); or 3) within both ethnic Israel (i.e., of Jewish lineage) and part of the faithful remnant (as a Jew who trusts the God of Israel). (Logically, there is a fourth option here which will be discussed below). These distinctions are important because there are many who oversimplify the matter and confuse ethnic Israel with the "remnant of Israel chosen by the grace of God" (Rom. 11:5).

The Remnant of Israel is a sovereignly chosen subset of ethnic Israel that has been faithfully preserved by the LORD over the centuries. Its existence is evidenced in the Old Testament Scriptures as is seen in the following cases:

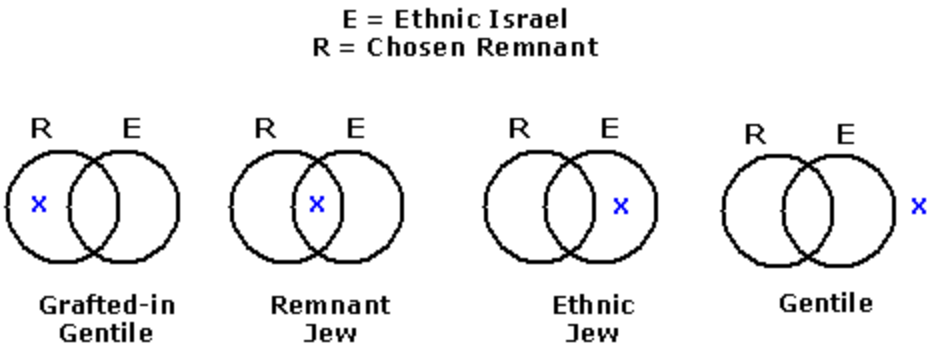
- Isaac was chosen over Ishmael (Gen. 17:19)
- Jacob was chosen over Esau (Gen. 28:13-15)
- Joseph was chosen over his other brothers (Gen. 45:7)
- Israel was chosen (as a nation) at Sinai and a remnant preserved after the sin with the Golden Calf (Ex. 32)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

- Caleb and Joshua were chosen among all those of the desert generation to enter into the Promised Land (Num. 14:38)
- Elijah was told that God preserved 7,000 faithful during apostasy (1 Kings 19:18)
- Ezekiel was told that a remnant would be preserved from the northern kingdom after their captivity (Ezek. 37:19)
- The returning exiles from Babylon were chosen (Zech. 8:5)

It is further evidenced in the New Testament:

- John the Baptist distinguished between those merely born Jewish and those who are part of remnant Israel (Matt. 3:9)
- God chose a remnant of Israel to receive the Messiah (Rom. 11:5)
- After the destruction of the Temple by the Romans, God preserved a remnant of Israel which has continued to this day.
- Paul spoke of the remnant of Israel chosen by God's grace (Rom. 2:28-29; 9:27, 11:5) and the one "New Man" composed of Jews and grafted in Gentiles (Eph. 2:15).
- During the coming Great Tribulation, God will preserve a remnant of Israel (Rev. 7:4).



It's important to realize that Remnant Theology understands that the Church is "grafted in" or "in-placed" within remnant Israel, and not the other way around -- i.e., remnant Israel is NOT understood to be placed within the Church:

This is a vital distinction, since otherwise the Church would be guilty of "boasting" that its "branches" have been grafted into the Olive Tree, rather than remembering that the root is what sustains the Church (Rom. 11:18). While only some ethnic Jews are part of the faithful remnant, all saved Gentiles are spiritually made Jewish (Rom. 2:29; Rom. 4:16; Eph. 2:12-19), and are therefore partakers of the covenantal blessings given to remnant Israel. But it is crucial to understand that the Church is incorporated into the chosen remnant of Israel, and not the other way around! In other words, a Jew doesn't need to disown his or her Jewishness in order to be a member of the Church.

With this distinction in mind, we can finish the diagram that reveals the logical possibilities between ethnic Israel and the Remnant:

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

A person can be 1) outside of relationship to Israel altogether (i.e., a Gentile); 2) within ethnic Israel by virtue of birth (to a Jewish mother); 3) within both ethnic Israel (i.e., of Jewish lineage) and as part of the faithful remnant (as a Jew who trusts the God of Israel), or 4) a Gentile who partakes of the blessings given to the faithful Remnant of Israel.

The Olive Tree and the Remnant Chosen by Grace

The statement of Paul that "not all who are descended from Israel belong to Israel" (Rom. 6:9) means that a person can be a descendant of ethnic Israel but not part of the remnant of Israel that was chosen by God for salvation in Messiah. In Romans 9:1-31, Paul reveals his heartfelt desire to see all of Israel come to understand the truth of salvation as given through Jesus, though he specifically mentions that a godly remnant has always existed.

Later Paul explicitly asked the question of whether God was "finished" with ethnic Israel, to which he replied:

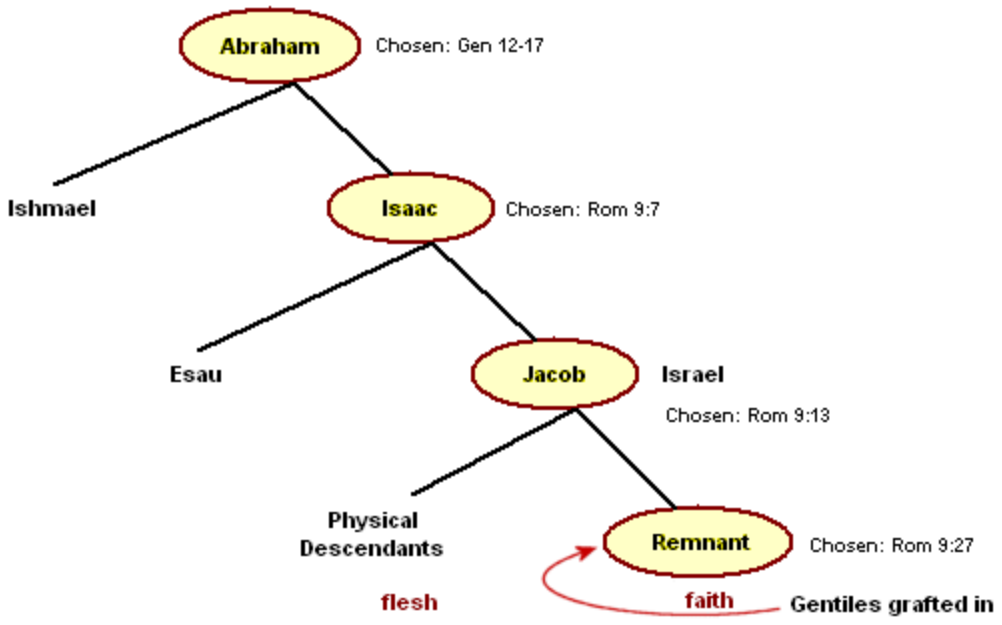
"God forbid! For I myself am an Israelite, a descendant of Abraham, a member of the tribe of Benjamin. God has not rejected his people whom he foreknew. Do you not know what the Scripture says of Elijah, how he appeals to God against Israel? "Lord, they have killed your prophets, they have demolished your altars, and I alone am left, and they seek my life." But what is God's reply to him? "I have kept for myself seven thousand men who have not bowed the knee to Baal." So too at the present time there is a remnant, chosen by grace. (Rom. 11:1-5)

Paul goes on to give the analogy of the Olive Tree to illustrate how the Church is grafted in to the remnant of Israel. The natural branches broken off represent unbelieving, ethnic Israel, while the "wild olive shoots" grafted in among the others represent Gentiles who come to faith in the Messiah. But note especially the prepositional phrase, "among the others." These remaining branches represent remnant Israel, who never were separated from the supporting Root (which represents the covenant promises given to the patriarchs of Israel - Abraham, Isaac, Jacob - as given by the LORD). This metaphor clearly indicates that the wild olive shoots (believing Gentiles) are placed within the remaining branches on the tree (believing Jews). The Olive Tree, in other words, pictures the covenantal saving program of God based on His faithfulness to Israel.

Note also that Paul goes on to state that the restoration of the broken off branches is within the power and ultimate purposes of God (Rom. 11:23-24), who has temporarily "hardened" ethnic Israel until all the "wild olive shoots" have been added to the remnant Tree (11:25), and then "all Israel will be saved" (11:26).

While it is true that ethnic Israel has rejected their Mashiach (a "partial hardening of Israel" - Rom. 11:25),

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



Paul consoles himself by reflecting that not all physical descendants of Abraham are made the inheritors of the covenantal blessings from the LORD. No, Abraham had two sons, but it was Isaac (not Ishmael) who was chosen; and Isaac also had two sons, but it was Jacob (not Esau) who was chosen. In other words, even though Ishmael and Esau were physical descendants of Abraham, they were not chosen to be inheritors of the blessing of God.

Indeed, regarding the case of Jacob and Esau, Paul goes further by saying that "though they were not yet born and had done nothing either good or bad -- in order that God's purpose of election might continue, not because of works but because of his call, Rebecca was told, "The older will serve the younger." Paul then quotes from Malachi 1:3, "Jacob I loved, but Esau I hated."

Paul then asks the rhetorical question of whether all this might be unfair. After all, was it Esau's fault that he was rejected when God had Himself foreordained that the blessing should not be his? Paul answers this by flatly saying that the LORD God of Israel is sovereign and can choose to show mercy and grace to whomsoever He wills - man's objections notwithstanding. In other words, God has the complete right to predestine outcomes to suit His good pleasure and purposes, and mankind must simply accept His rule and reign in the universe.

Being a physical descendant of Abraham is not enough to be a part of God's family, since only the children of the promise are counted as God's offspring. And that even includes Gentiles, as the prophet Hosea revealed: "those who were not my people I will call 'my people,' and her who was not beloved I will call children of the Living God" (Hosea 1:10). And did not the prophet Isaiah also cry out concerning Israel: "Though the number of the sons of Israel be as the sand of the sea, only a remnant of them will be saved"?

Paul ends this line of thinking by saying that those who trust in the promise of God's salvation through the Mashiach have attained righteousness by faith; but those who pursue their own righteousness based on the law will never succeed in reaching that goal, since Yeshua alone is the "end of the law for righteousness" to all who believe.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Covenants and Dispensations (Ice; Liberty University)
http://digitalcommons.liberty.edu/cgi/viewcontent.cgi?article=1002&context=pretrib_arch

A Comparison of Dispensationalism and Covenant Theology
http://www.ugandamission.net/doctrine/rapture/comparedispensationalism.pdf [PDF]

Dispensationalism and Covenant Theology: A Catholic Perspective on a Debated Point http://www.calledtocommunion.com/2014/06/dispensationalism-and-covenant-theology-a-catholic-perspective-on-a-debated-point/

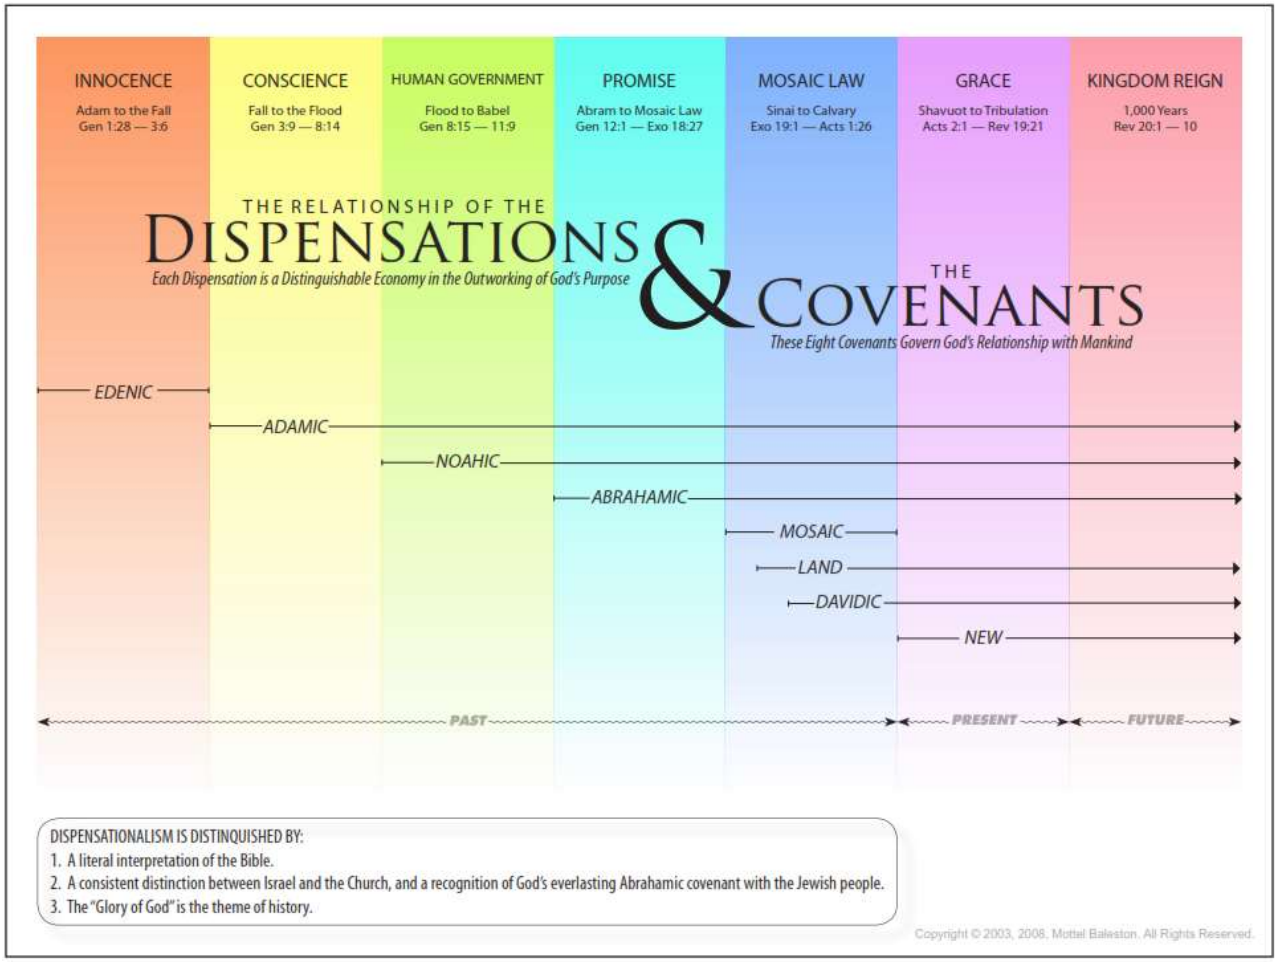
Dispensationalism and Covenant Theology
http://www.febc.edu.sg/assets/pdfs/studyresource/Dispensationalism%20and%20Covenant%20Theology.pdf [PDF]

John MacArthur's Defense of Dispensationalism (Opposing Review)
https://americanvision.org/1679/john-macarthurs-defense-of-dispensationalism/



A Primer on Eschatology: Covenant Theology vs Dispensationalism
http://thepredestinedblog.blogspot.com/2009/02/primer-on-eschatology-dispensationalism.html

Introdcution to Covenant Theology – J.I. Packer
http://www.gospelpedlar.com/articles/Bible/cov_theo.html

See also in these notes Example graphic chart syncing Covenants with Dispensations

See the following corresponding Covenants/Dispensations comparison charts and links….

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

http://www.ariel.org/amdld.htm

Dispensationalism – Covenant Theology (Systems Compared and Contrasted)
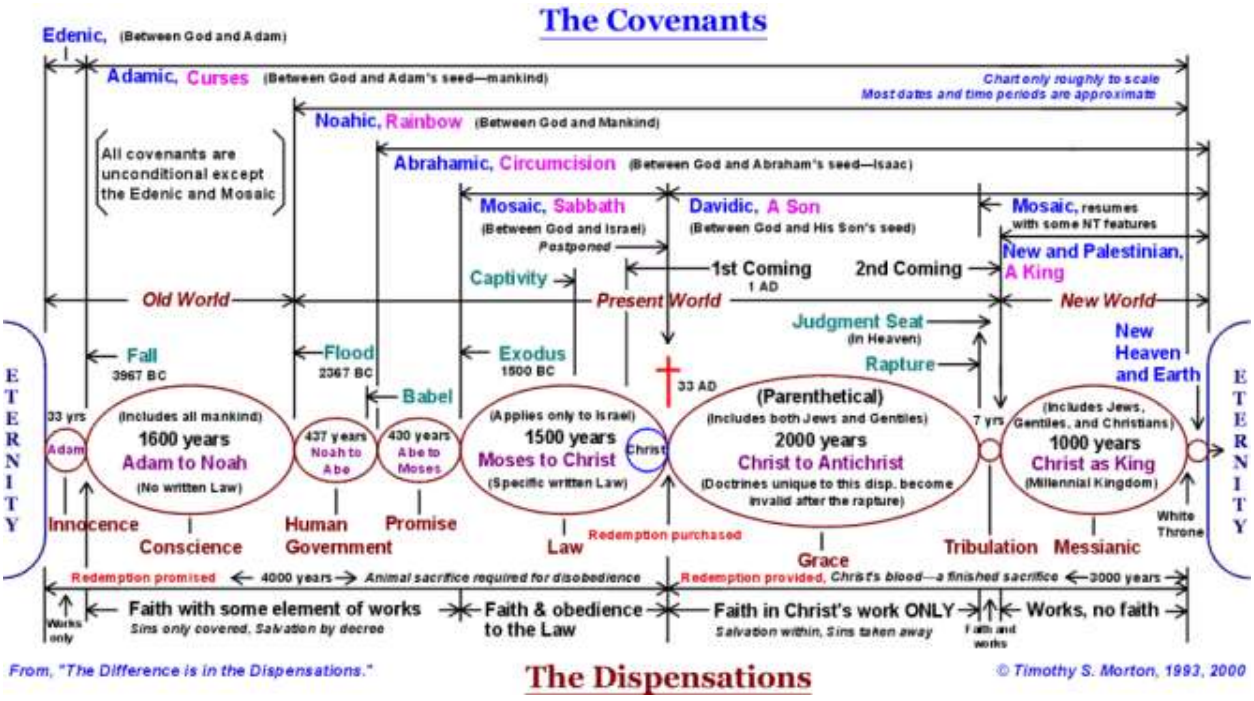
http://www.apttoteach.org/Theology/Introduction/pdf/105_Two_Systems.pdf [PDF]



The Significance of Covenant Theology in Reformed Eschatology
http://www.mountainretreatorg.net/eschatology/significance_of_covenant_theology_in_eschatology.shtml

Eschatology Comparison
http://www.fivesolas.com/esc_chrt.htm

The Dispensation-Covenantal Rift: [Recommended]
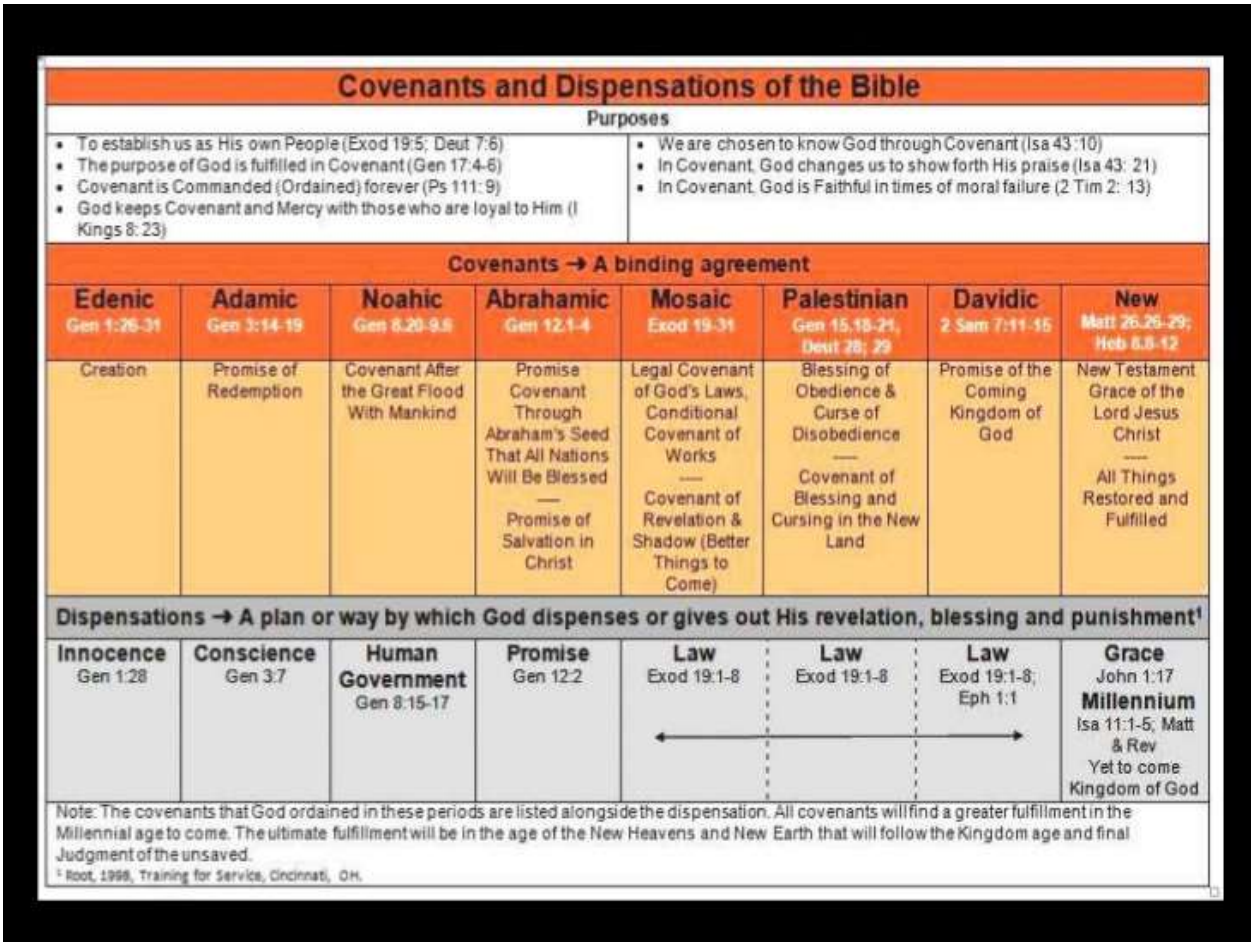
How it Happened, Why It Happened, Can It be Repaired? (2010) (R. Todd Mangum)
http://ntresources.com/blog/documents/DSG2010_Mangum_DispCovRift.pdf [PDF]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Covenant and The Dispensations (Premillennialism Perspective)

Souce: http://www.biblerays.com/dispensational-truth.html

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



Souce: http://www.biblerays.com/dispensational-truth.html

See larger view on next page…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Covenants and Dispensations of the Bible

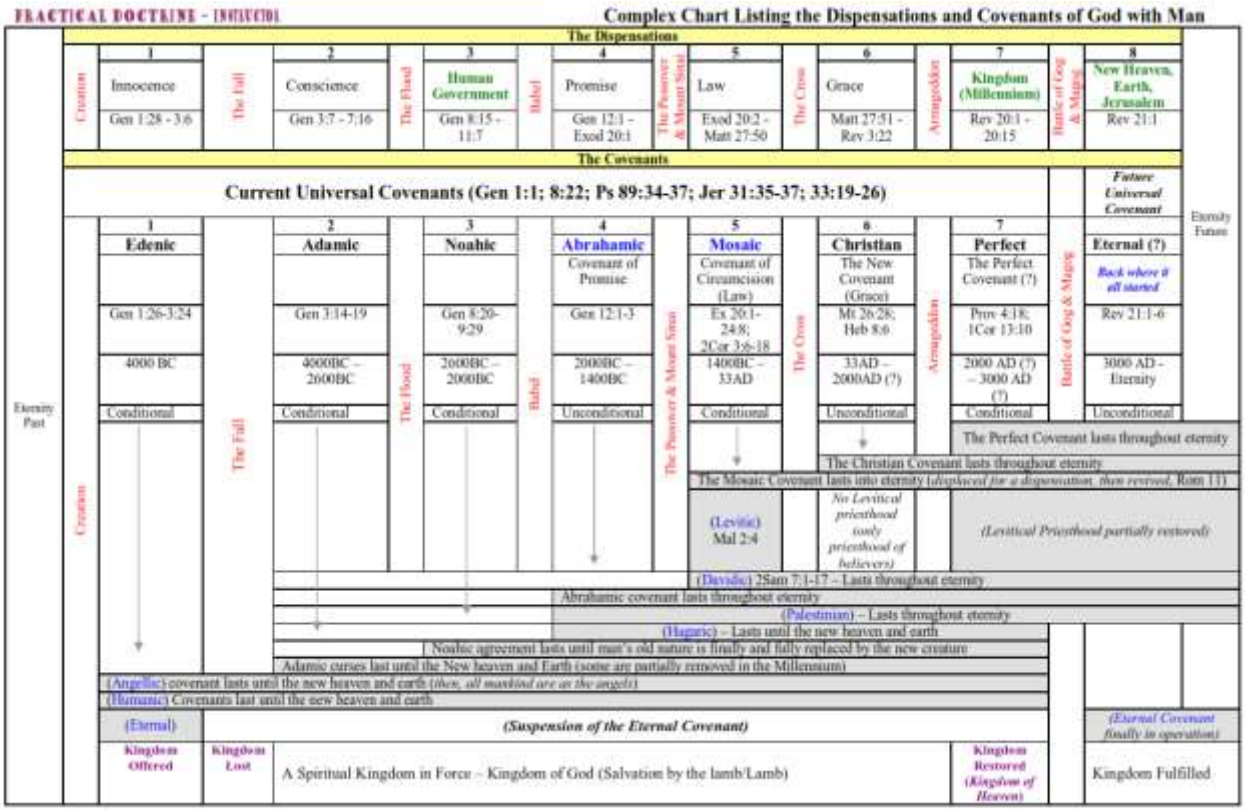
Purposes

- To establish us as His own People (Exod 19:5; Deut 7:6)
- The purpose of God is fulfilled in Covenant (Gen 17:4-6)
- Covenant is Commanded (Ordained) forever (Ps 111:9)
- God keeps Covenant and Mercy with those who are loyal to Him (I Kings 8:23)
- We are chosen to know God through Covenant (Isa 43:10)
- In Covenant, God changes us to show forth His praise (Isa 43:21)
- In Covenant, God is Faithful in times of moral failure (2 Tim 2:13)

Covenants → A binding agreement

Edenic Gen 1:26-31	Adamic Gen 3:14-19	Noahic Gen 8:20-9:6	Abrahamic Gen 12:1-4	Mosaic Exod 19-31	Palestinian Gen 15:18-21, Deut 28; 29	Davidic 2 Sam 7:11-16	New Matt 26:26-29; Heb 8:8-12
Creation	Promise of Redemption	Covenant After the Great Flood With Mankind	Promise Covenant Through Abraham's Seed That All Nations Will Be Blessed — Promise of Salvation in Christ	Legal Covenant of God's Laws, Conditional Covenant of Works — Covenant of Revelation & Shadow (Better Things to Come)	Blessing of Obedience & Curse of Disobedience — Covenant of Blessing and Cursing in the New Land	Promise of the Coming Kingdom of God	New Testament Grace of the Lord Jesus Christ — All Things Restored and Fulfilled

Dispensations → A plan or way by which God dispenses or gives out His revelation, blessing and punishment[1]



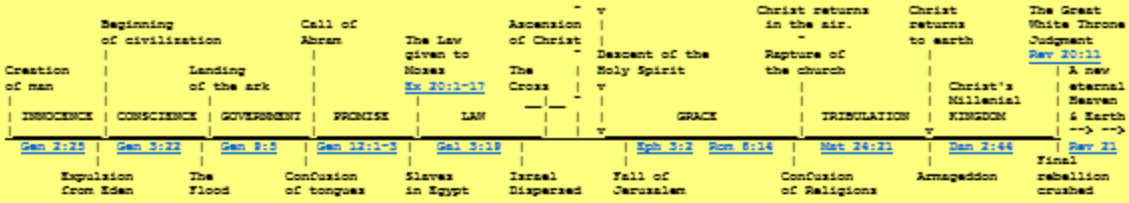
Innocence Gen 1:28	Conscience Gen 3:7	Human Government Gen 8:15-17	Promise Gen 12:2	Law Exod 19:1-8	Law Exod 19:1-8	Law Exod 19:1-8; Eph 1:1	Grace John 1:17 Millennium Isa 11:1-5; Matt & Rev Yet to come Kingdom of God

Note: The covenants that God ordained in these periods are listed alongside the dispensation. All covenants will find a greater fulfillment in the Millennial age to come. The ultimate fulfillment will be in the age of the New Heavens and New Earth that will follow the Kingdom age and final Judgment of the unsaved.

[1] Root, 1998, Training for Service, Cincinnati, OH.

Source: http://image.slidesharecdn.com/dispensationandcovenant-120417191442-phpapp02/95/covenants-and-dispensations-cross-platform-view-1-728.jpg?cb=1334744869

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

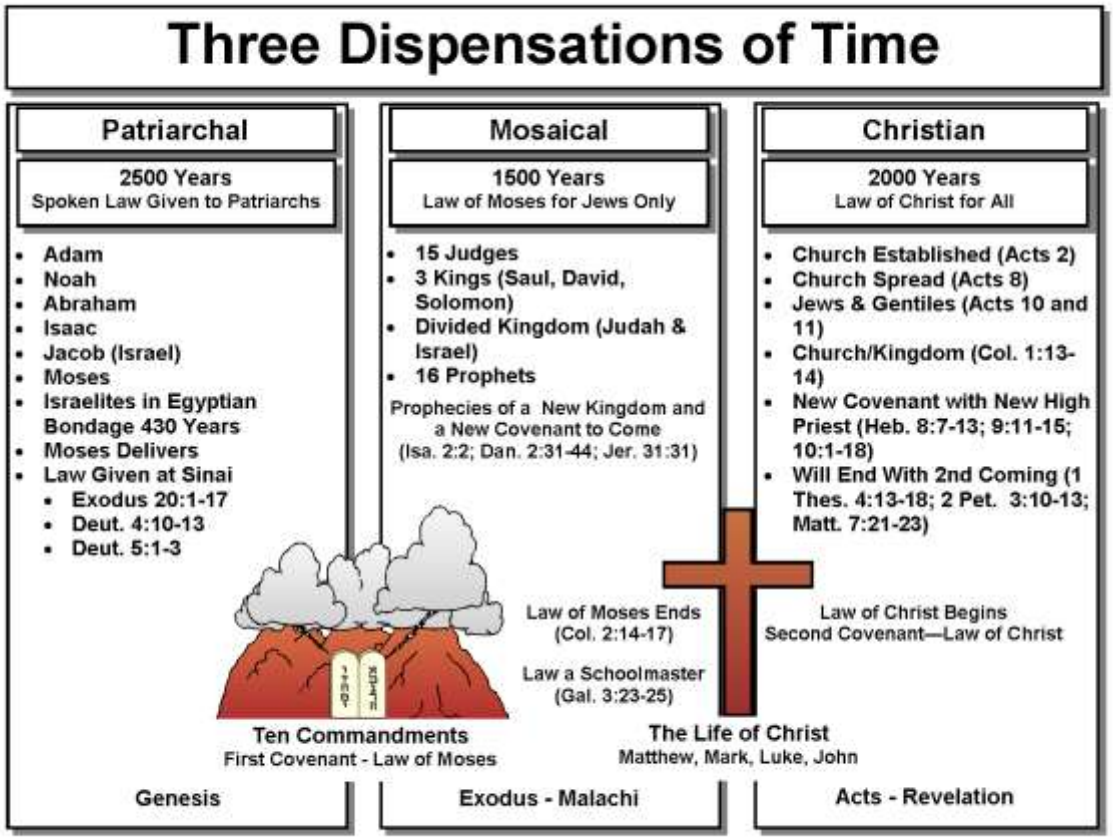


http://www.biblebc.com/bbi/Courses/Disp_Cov/Dispensational%20and%20Covenant%20Theology%20-%20Student.pdf] [PDF]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Seven Dispensations

The story of Man's Failure - and God's Grace - as demonstrated in all ages



Dispensation	Opening Event	Man's Responsibility	Man's Failure	Man's Tendency	Closing Event	Personal Salvation
INNOCENCE (1) Summary/Principle: Rom 5:12	God creates man Gen 1:26,27 2:7,25	Believe & Obey Gen 2:15-17	Innocence Lost Gen 3:6,7	Away from God Gen 3:9,10	Judgment- Expelled from Eden Gen 3:17-19 3:22-24	By Grace through Faith- Substitutionary sacrifice: - The blood of the Lamb, Gen 3:21 - The promise of the Seed, Gen 3:15; 4:25
CONSCIENCE (2) Rom 2:15	Abel offers a lamb. Cain murders Abel. Gen 4:2-15	Believe & Obey Gen 4:4-7 Heb 11:4	Conscience defiled Gen 6:5-7	Away from God Gen 6:11-13	Judgment- The Flood Gen 7:11-12,23	By Grace through Faith- Gen 6:8 Heb 11:4-7 1Pet 3:18-22
GOVERNMENT (3) Rom 13:1-7	Noah -worships God -receives a covenant and responsibility Gen 8:20-22	Believe & Obey Gen 9:1-6	Personal disorder Gen 9:20-23 Societal disorder Gen 11:1-4	Away from God- 'Man's Failure' references apply.	Judgment- Confusion of tongues Gen 11:5-9	By Grace through Faith- The line of the Seed: Gen 9:26; 11:10-32
PROMISE (4) Num 23:19 Mic 7:20 Rom 11:29	God -calls Abram -gives him promises Gen 12:1-7; 13:14-17; 15:5 Promises repeated to Isaac & Jacob Gen 26:1-5 28:10-15	Believe & Obey Gen 15:6 Rom 4:3	Promised blessings pursued by fleshly means: -Abram, Gen 16:2 -Jacob, Gen 27:19 -Moses, Acts 7:22-29	Away from God- God's promises disregarded: -Lot, Gen 13:10-13 -Esau, Gen 25:31-34 26:34,35 -The sons of Israel Gen 37:18-20 -Israel's longing for Egypt Ex 16:2,3 Summary: Psa 106:1-15	Judgment- -Bondage in Egypt Ex 1:7-14; 2:23-25	By Grace through Faith- Rom 4:3-5 Heb 11:8-22 Gen 22:8,15-18 Gen 49:8-12,18
LAW (5) Rom 3:19,20	Israel promises to keep the Law Ex 19:1-8	Believe & Obey Deu 7:11-15, blessings Deu 8:11-20, cursings	Law broken repeatedly- Ex 32:1-8 Judg 21:25 Psa 106:16-48	Away from God Dan 9:4-16	Judgment- -Israel captive in Assyria 2Kin 17:1-18 -Judah captive in Babylon 2Kin 25:1-11 -Jerusalem destroyed Mat 23:37-39	By Grace through Faith- the blood of the Lamb Ex 12:3 Lev 17:11 Heb 9:19-22 Gal 4:4,5 Examples of believers: -Moses, Heb 11:23-40 -David, Rom 4:5-8 Summary- Gal 3:10-19
GRACE (6) John 1:17 Titus 2:11-14 1Pet 1:10-12	Christ -ascends -sends the Spirit Acts 1:1-9 Acts 2:1-4 -establishes His church 1Cor 12:12,13 Eph 3:1-10	Believe & Obey -for eternal life Acts 2:36-47 John 6:28,29,47; 5:24 Rom 5:1,2; 10:4 Eph 2:8,9 -for earthly living Rom 8:2-4 Gal 2:20; 3:2,3	Apostasy- 2Tim 4:3-4 Heb 6:4-8	Away from God 2Tim 3:13 2Pet 2:1-3,17-22	The Bride of Christ caught up to meet Him. 1The 4:16-17 Rev 3:10 Judgment- The apostate church enters the Tribulation. Rev 2:21-23 Rev 3:15-16	By Grace through Faith- 1Pet 1:18-21 Isaiah 53 Rom 3:20-26 Rom 6:23 also see references under 'Man's Responsibility'
TRIBULATION (a special 7 yr period) John 5:43	The man of sin is revealed 1The 5:1-3 2The 2:1-12 Mat 24:21-22	In the Tribulation, man's failure comes to awful fruition: Innocence- Man live the lie & call evil good (cp. Gen 3:5). Conscience- Corrupt minds ignore God's Word (Mat 24:37-39). Government- The world unites with antichrist against God. Promise- Israel is in the promised land, but in unbelief. Law- The rebuilt Temple is given over to false worship. Grace- The apostate church is aligned with the antichrist.			Judgment- Christ casts out Satan & his false leaders. Rev 19:11-21 Rev 20:1-3	Even in this terrible time, many find salvation by Grace through Faith in the blood of the Lamb. Rev 7:14; 12:10,11
KINGDOM (7) Isa 9:6,7	Jesus Christ returns to earth as King of kings Mat 25:31-34 Rev 20:4-6	Believe & Obey Isa 2:1-4 Isa 11:1-16 Isa 12:1-6 Isa 55:1-5 Zech 14:16-18	Even in the age of Righteousness, man turns away from Christ to follow Satan when given the opportunity. Rev 20:7-10		Judgment- -the final rebellion is crushed. -eternal destinies are decreed Rev 20:10-15	By Grace through Faith- Rev 21:22-27
		During the Kingdom age, the disorder of previous ages is corrected: Innocence- God's truth is known by all men (Jer 31:34). Conscience- God's people have holy hearts to serve Him (Jer 31:33). Government- Christ rules from Jerusalem. Righteousness covers the earth. Promise- Israel is in her land. Abrahamic & Davidic covenants are fulfilled. Law- True temple worship declares that Christ has fulfilled the Law. Grace- The true church is with Christ in His glory.

See also: Covenant Theology and Dispensational Theology

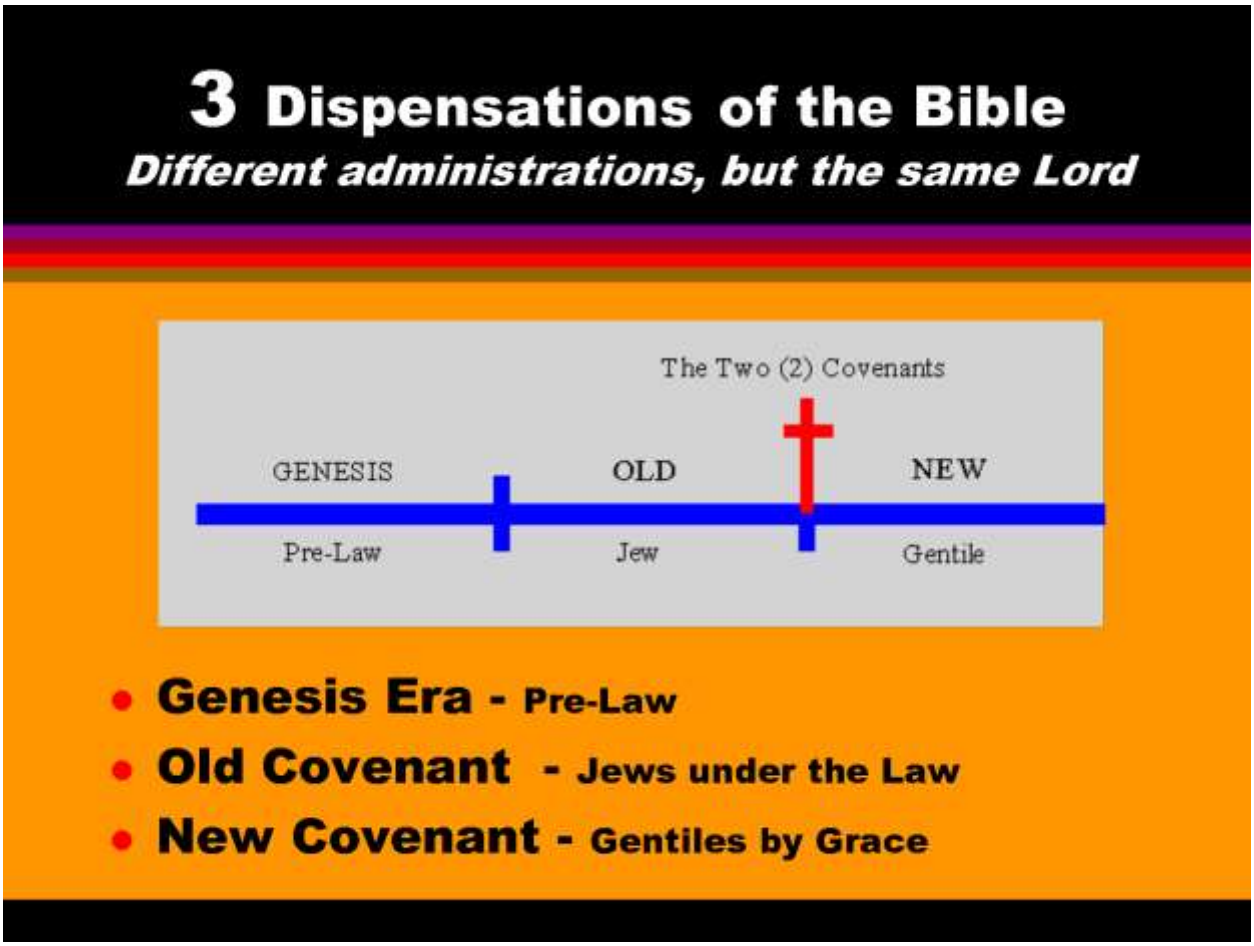
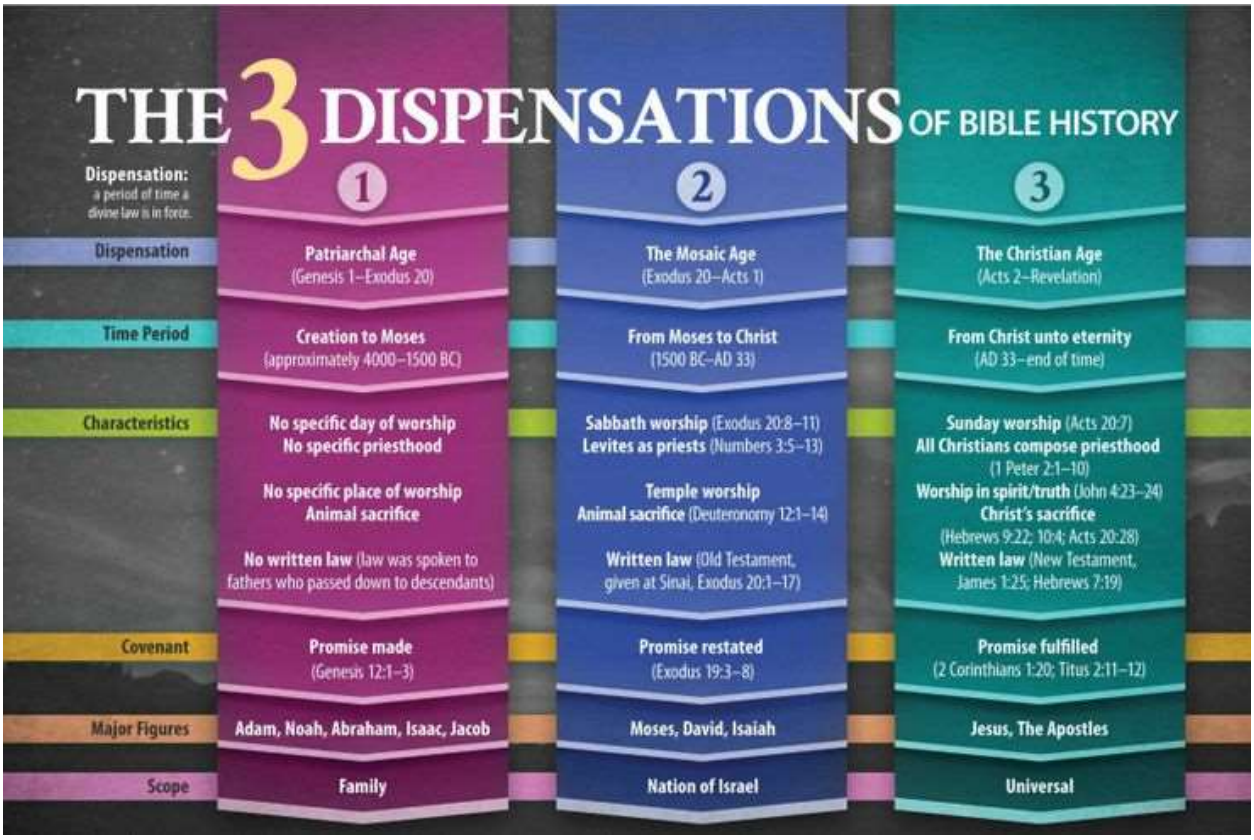
Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



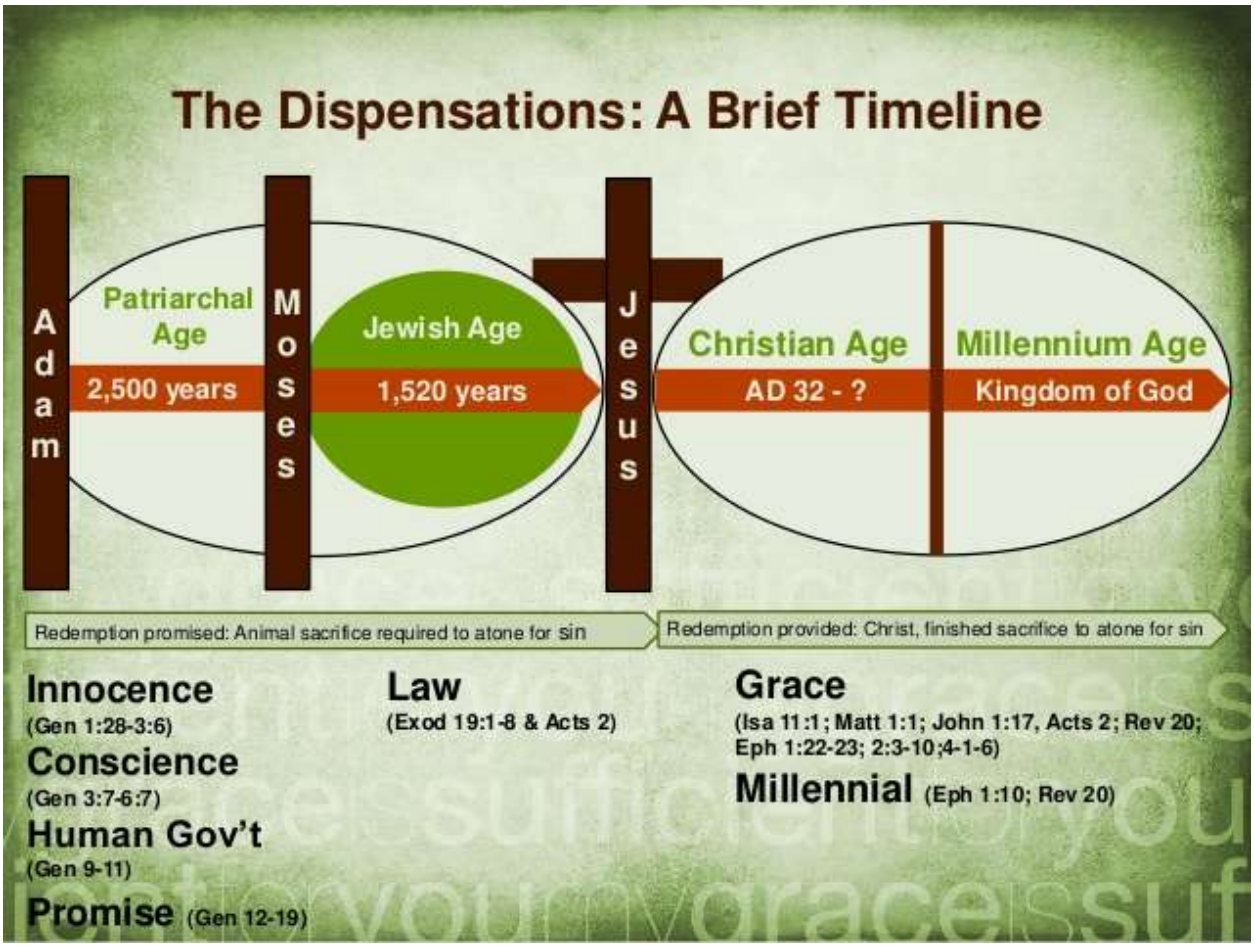
Other Dispensation Divisions

3 Dispensations



Source: http://www.searchingthescriptures.net/main_pages/evangelism/practical_guidelines_book.htm

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



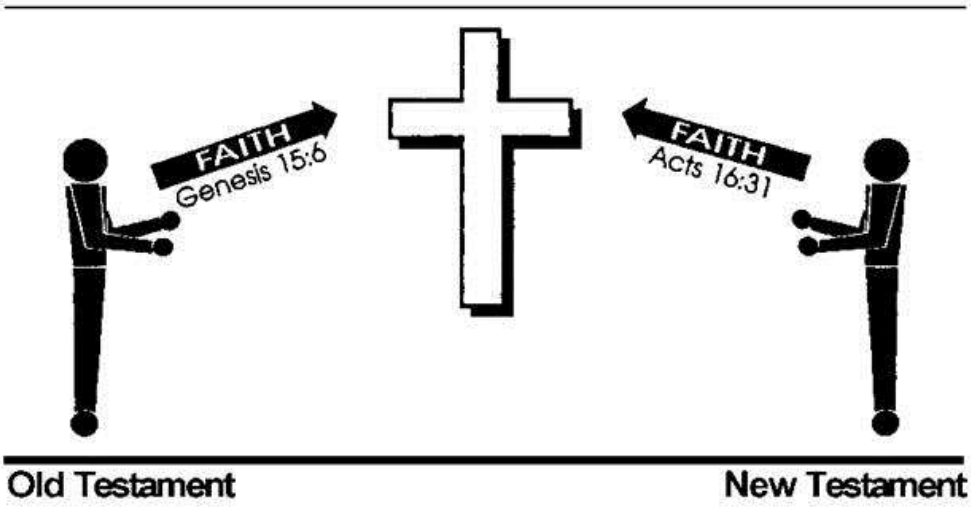
Source: http://churchintoronto.blogspot.com/2012/06/three-schools-of-theology.html

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Source: https://i.pinimg.com/736x/11/cd/e0/11cde09df49e34acfb7eb7a6a6767e0b.jpg

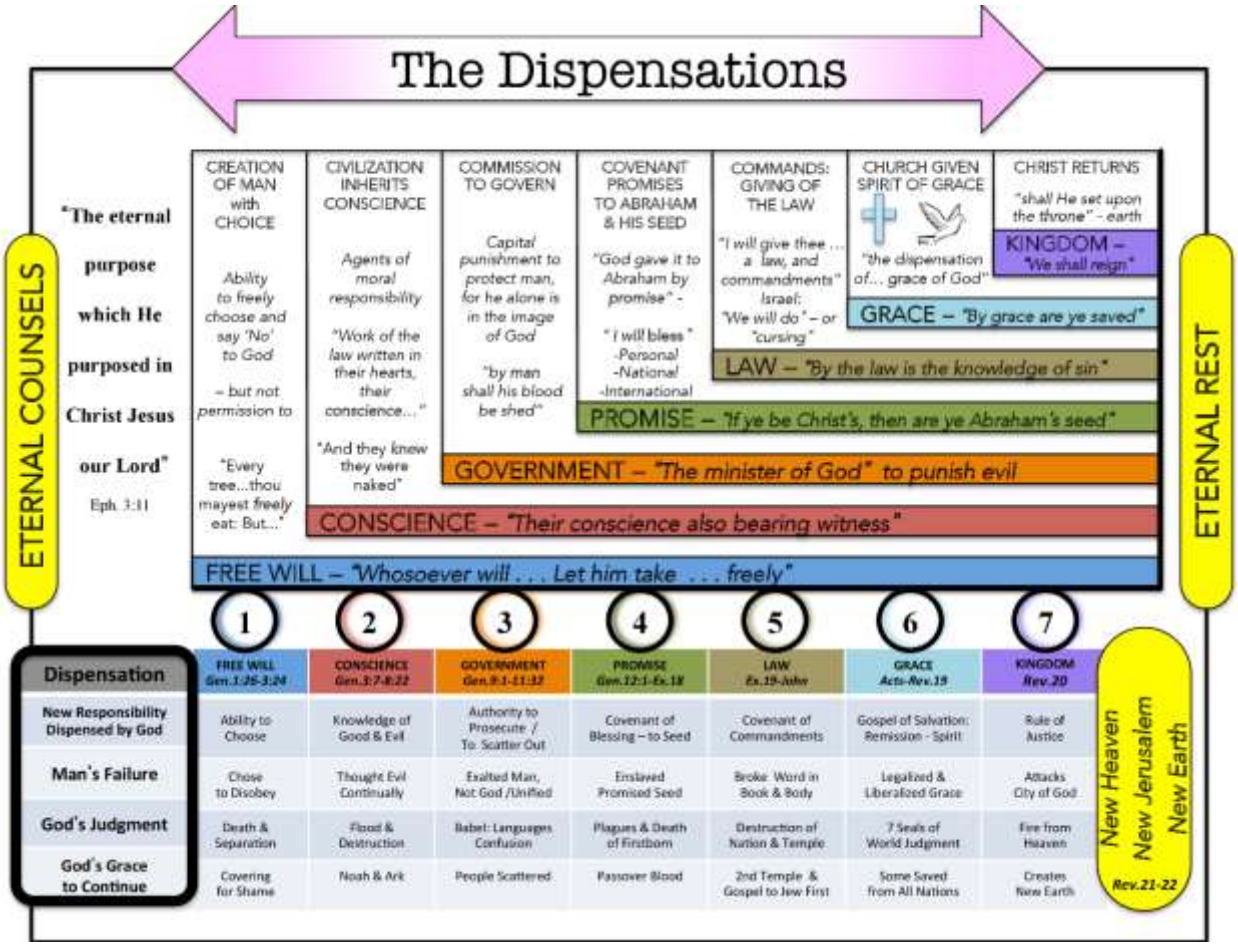
 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Source: https://www.slideshare.net/drjparon/dispensations-of-the-bible



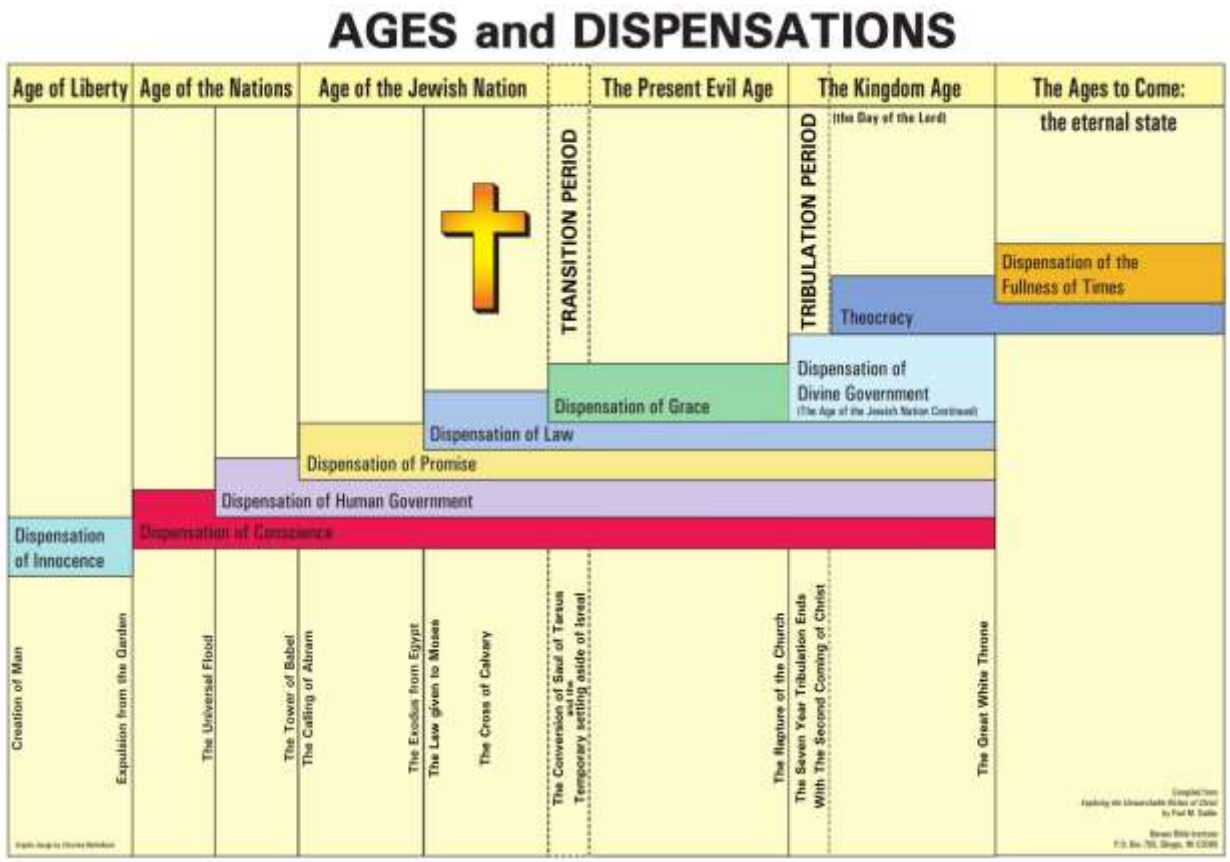
Dispensations of the Bible (slideshow)
https://www.slideshare.net/drjparon/dispensations-of-the-bible

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



Source: https://biblerevelation.wordpress.com/2010/10/28/dispensation_revelation_1/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

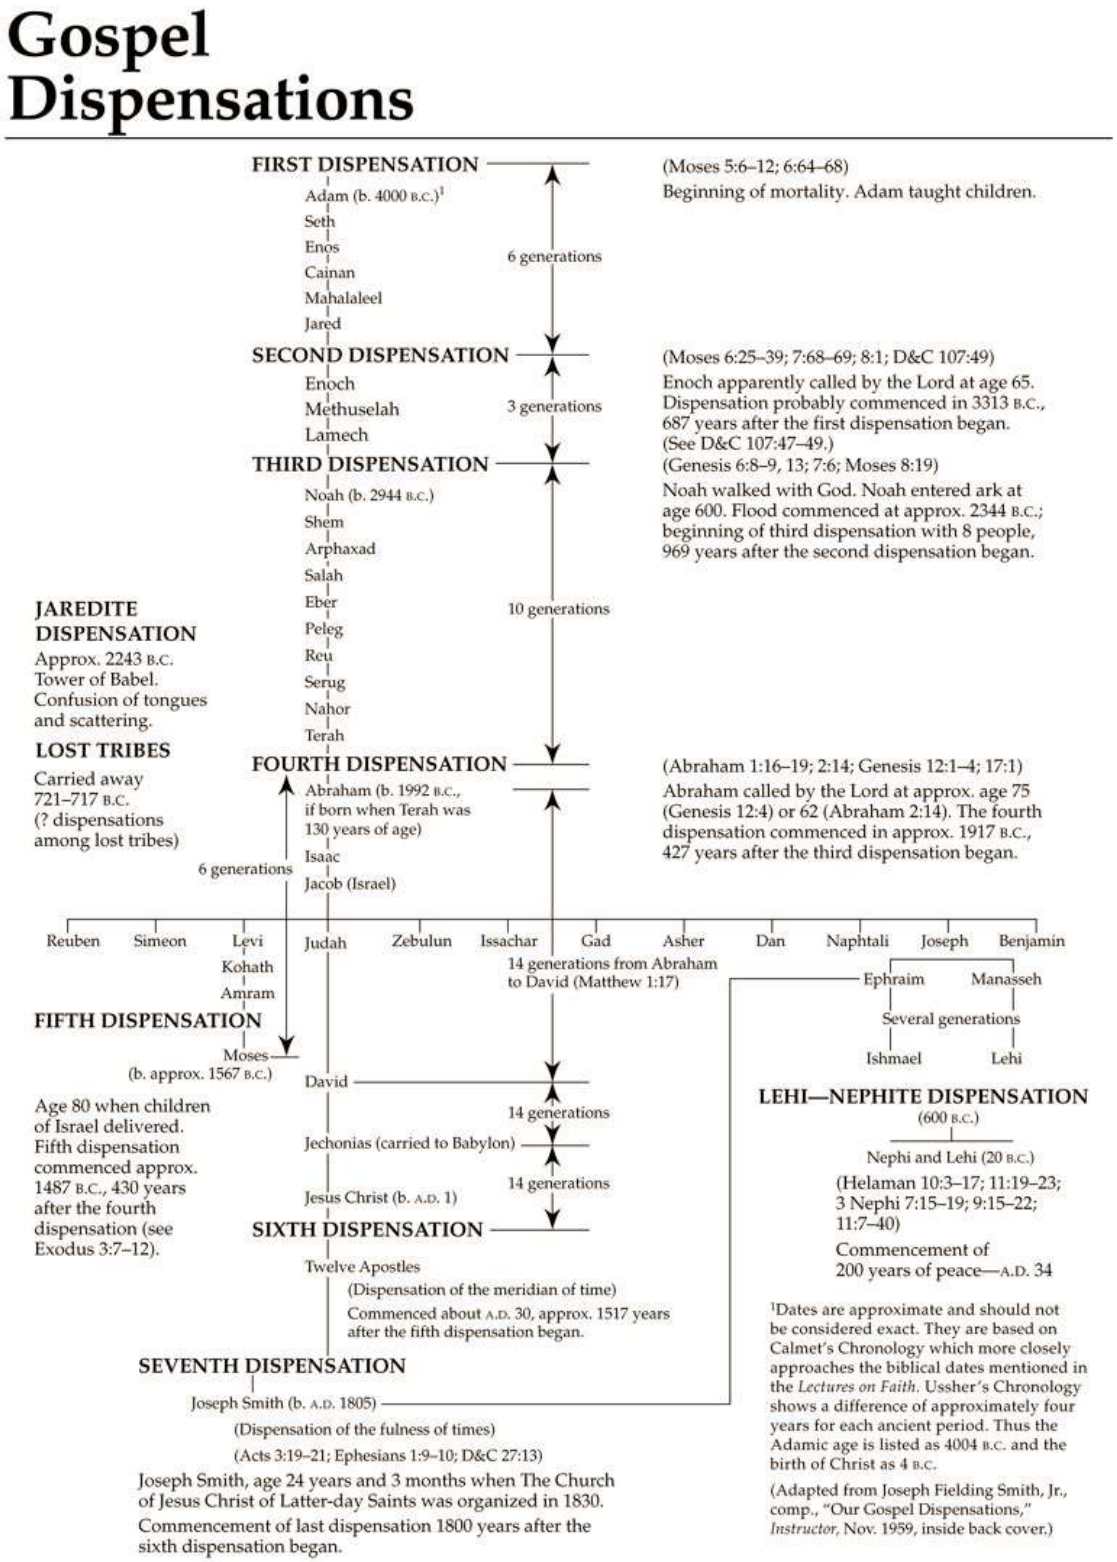


Source: http://www.basictraining.org/print.php?nid=209

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Source: https://digitalsojourner.com/2014/09/18/dispensations-chart-r-p-amos/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



Source: https://kettlemorainebiblechurch.weebly.com/charts.html

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Gospel Dispensations

http://www.scriptures101.com/lessons/old-testament/lesson02-overview-of-the-old-testament/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

DISPENSATIONS AND COVENANTS CHART

GENTILES			ISRAEL		ONE NEW MAN	ISRAEL	NEW CREATION
DISPENSATION OF PERFECT ENVIRONMENT	DISPENSATION OF CONSCIENCE	DISPENSATION OF HUMAN GOVERNMENT	DISPENSATION OF THE PATRIARCHS	DISPENSATION OF THE MOSAIC LAW	DISPENSATION OF GRACE	DISPENSATION OF THE MILLENIAL KINGDOM	DISPENSATION OF THE FULLNESS OF TIMES
THE COVENANTS							THE ETERNAL STATE: Eph. 1:9-10 . . .he hath purposed in himself: That in the dispensation of the fulness of times he might gather together in one all things in Christ, both which are in heaven, and which are on earth; even in him 1 Cor. 15:28 . . .that God may be all in all.
EDENIC COVENANT	ADAMIC COVENANT	NOAHIC COVENANT	ABRAHAMIC COVENANT	>MOSAIC >PALESTINIAN >DAVIDIC COVENANTS	GENTILES PARTAKE OF THINGS THAT PERTAIN TO ISRAEL	NEW COVENANT
MAN'S RESPONSIBILITY
SUBDUE AND "KEEP" THE EARTH	>PROCREATE >SACRIFICES INSTITUTED	FILL THE EARTH	SET APART BY CIRCUMCISION	OBEY THE LAW	FAITH ALONE IN CHRIST ALONE	PROMISE OF THE LAW FULLY REALIZED
MAN'S FAILURE
ATE THE FRUIT	ALL FLESH CORRUPTED	CONSTRUCTED BABEL TOWER	ASSIMILATED WITH PAGAN CULTURE	BROKE THE LAW	THE FALLING AWAY	GOG AND MAGOG REVOLT
DIVINE JUDGMENT
SPIRITUAL AND PHYSICAL DEATH	THE GREAT FLOOD	LANGUAGES CONFUSED	EGYPTIAN BONDAGE	5 COURSES OF DISCIPLINE: THE DIASPORA	INGRAFTED BRANCHES BROKEN OFF AGAIN	GREAT WHITE THRONE JUDGMENT

Source: https://i.pinimg.com/736x/29/41/df/2941dfc4a93198352c99c171685a6fb6.jpg

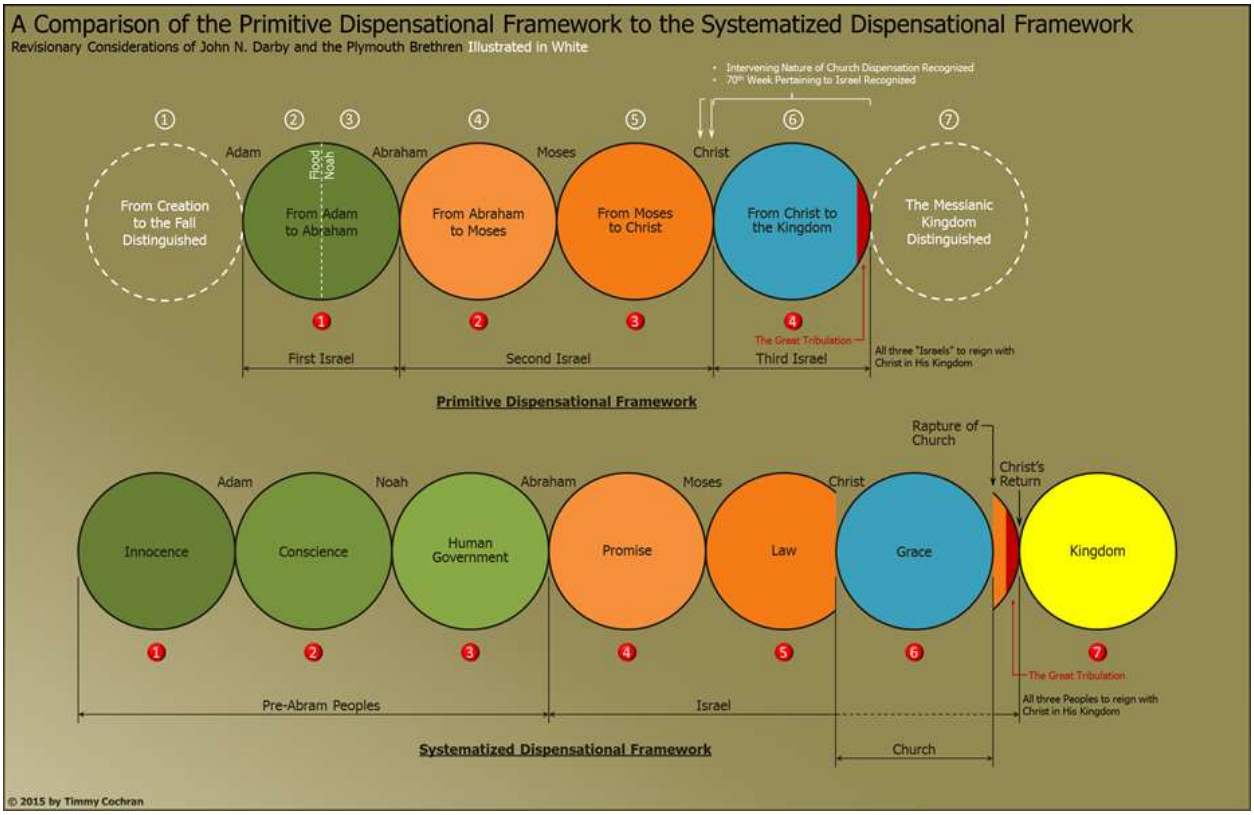
Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Source: http://www.ayahasherayah.org/files/elohim.htm

NOTE: Above is not vetted, organization appears heretical / cultish at first glance

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

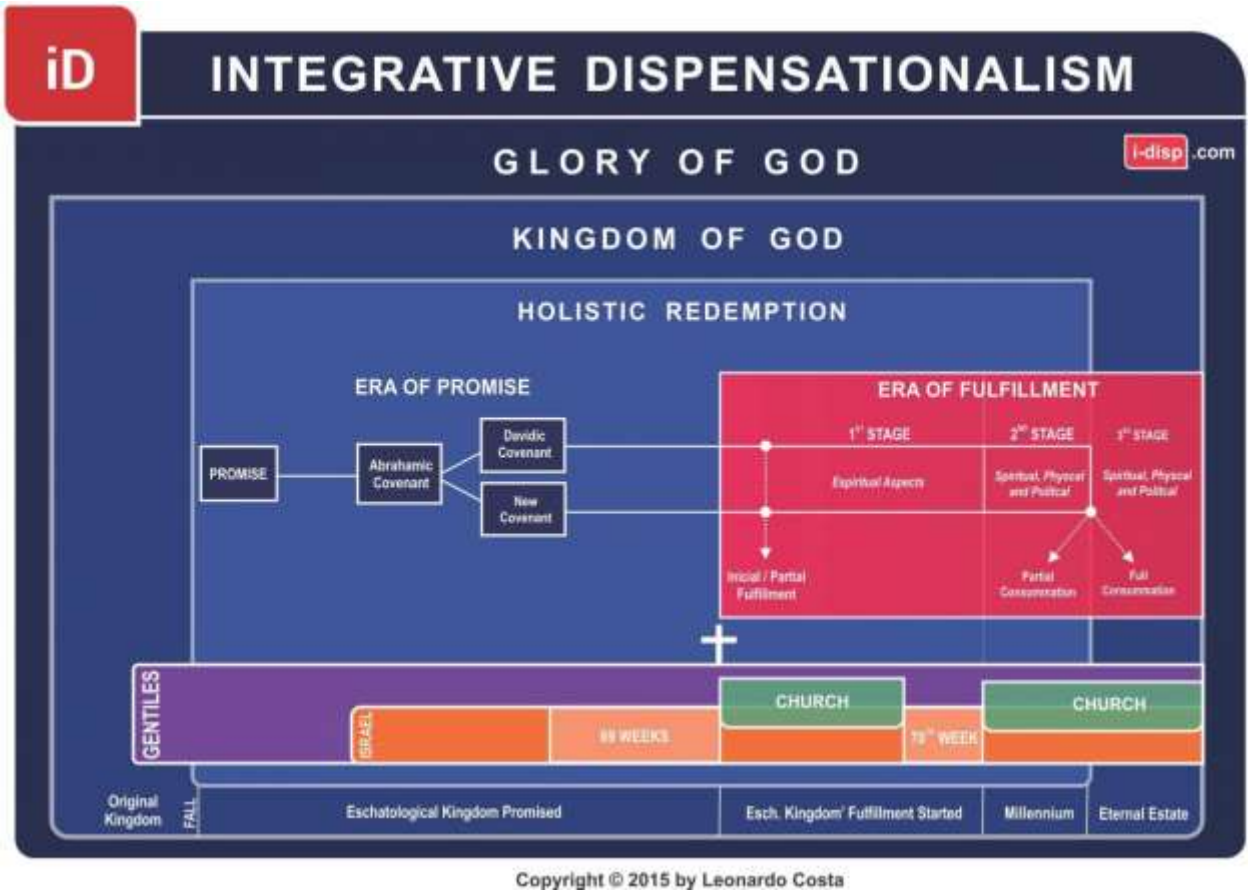
The Proto-Dispensationalism of the Ancient Church



http://www.dispensationalfriends.org/articles/ecfdisp.html

Excerpt:

For a viewer and printer friendly version of the above chart, click here. This illustration may accompany the following study by Larry V. Crutchfield:



http://www.galaxie.com/article/ctj03-9-03

The ancient Church knew that Israel and the Church were two distinct entities, and they constructed a four-fold dispensational outworking of God's plan through history. This automatically places them as our forefathers in the faith, and the basis upon which John Nelson Darby further refined to produce the system today known as Dispensational Theology.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Integrative Dispensationalism

Copyright © 2015 by Leonardo Costa

Source: https://i-disp.com/integrative-dispensationalism-chart/

Integrative Dispensationalism Research Center

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Traditional vs Integrative vs Progressive Dispensationalism

https://i-disp.com/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

POTENTIAL EIGHT-DISPENSATION FRAMEWORK

Copyright © 2016 Dispensational Publishing House, Inc.

	TITLE	TEXT UNIT
1	Dispensation of Innocence	Genesis 1:1–3:21
2	Dispensation of Conscience	Genesis 3:22–8:12
3	Dispensation of Human Government	Genesis 8:13–11:32
4	Dispensation of Promise	Genesis 12:1–Exodus 18:27
5	Dispensation of Law	Exodus 19:1–Acts 1:26
6	Dispensation of the Church	Acts 2:1–Revelation 19:21; 22:6–21
7	Dispensation of the Messianic Kingdom	Revelation 20:1–15
8	Dispensation of the Eternal Kingdom	Revelation 21:1–27; 22:1–5

Source: https://dispensationalpublishing.com/an-introduction-to-biblical-dispensations/

See also: Three Schools of Theology – Dispensational, Covenant and New Covenant

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

A Comparison of Various Dispensational Schemes (Ed. Sanders)

https://theologue.files.wordpress.com/2014/08/howmanydispensations-edsanders.pdf [PDF]

Excerpt:

The acknowledged 'father of dispensationalism', John Nelson Darby, held to a scheme of 6 dispensations. Darby was not consistent with the names of dispensations so Professor Charles Ryrie (Dallas Theological Seminary) reworked Darby's scheme based on his analysis of Darby's writings (see chart). C. I. Scofield proposed a 7 dispensation scheme (see chart below) in his Scofield Reference Bible which has become the most widely held view.

In spite of Scofield's popular seven dispensational scheme the number and names of the dispensations is still a confusing issue. I have seen schemes for few as three to as many as five, seven (E.W. Bullinger, Scofield, etc), eight, nine (Finis Dake), twelve (A. E. Koch), fourteen, eighteen (C. H. Welch), or 18 Plus add your own number!. Concerning the number of dispensations one website author opines

> "How many dispensations are there? It all depends how finely you look at the issue - the more detailed your criteria for defining a dispensation, the more you get.....My own feeling is that seven dispensations seems about right".

'It all depends...seems about right' shows the writer, like others, just do not know for sure! And why the confusion? The fact is that dispensationalism is a scheme imposed upon the Scriptures rather than a clear teaching based on Scripture. If it were taught in Scripture there would be no confusion about the number and names of the dispensations.

...

A look at the following chart should be enough to convince anyone that the Bible does not clearly teach any 'distinguishable' dispensational scheme 'clearly marked off in Scripture', even the most well-known and respected dispensationalists do not agree on the number and names. Some of the attempts to define the dispensations follow:

Continued on next page…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Dispensational Schemes Compared
Darby	Ryrie	Grey	Scofield	Larkin	Thieme	Willmington
1 Noahic (Government)	1 Paradisaical	1 Edenic	1 Innocency	1 Edenic	1 Gentiles	1 Innocence
2 Abrahamic	2 Noah	2 Antediluvian	2 Conscience	2 Anti Diluvian	2 Israel	2 Conscience
3 Israel (law, priesthood, kings)	3 Abraham	3 Patriarchal	3 Human Government	3 Post Diluvian	3 Church	3 Civil Government
4 Gentiles	4 Israel (law, priesthood, kings)	4 Mosaic	4 Promise	4 Patriarchal	4 Millennial	4 Promise
5 Church, Spirit, Christian, Gentile, Church, Present[13]	5 Gentiles	5 Church	5 Law	5 Legal		5 Mosaic Law
6. Millennium	6 Spirit	6 Millennial	6 Grace	6 Ecclesiastical		6 Church
	7 Millennium	7 Fullness of times	7 Kingdom	7 Millennial		7 Tribulation
		8 Eternal		8 Perfection		8 Millennium
						9 New Creation
John Nelson Darby, See his articles: The Apostasy of the Successive Dispensations	Charles C. Ryrie, Dispensationalism, pp. 68, 71. (his version of Darby's scheme)	Dr James M. Grey was one of the editors of the Scofield Bible. Note the difference in names (and number) from the Scofield scheme.	C. I. Scofield, Scofield Reference Bible (1917 Edition) Lewis Sperry Chafer held to essentially the same scheme.	Clarence Larkin	Robert Thieme taped lectures Basic Training (c. 1968).	Harold L. Willmington, Willmington's Bible Handbook

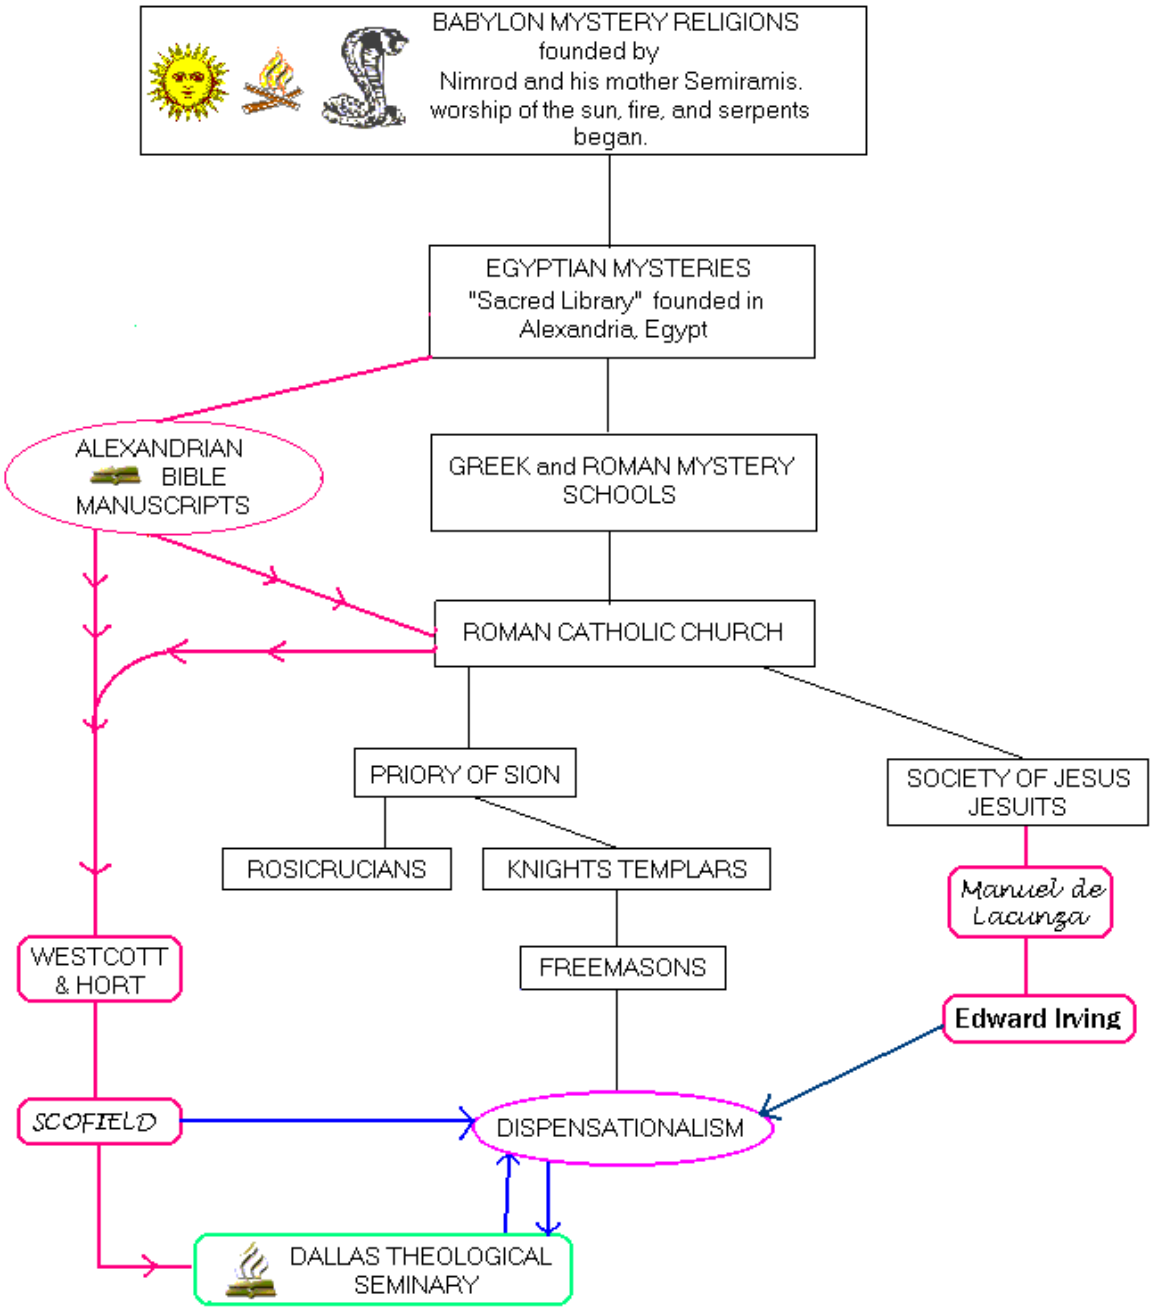
Notes:
1. The Church age is variously stated to be either the 3rd, 4th, 5th, 6th, or 9th dispensation[14]! What utter confusion for such a 'distinguishable' doctrinal scheme so 'clearly' taught in Scripture!
2. One commentator even proposes two 'Mosaic dispensations', one before the Church age and one after.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

What is Dispensationalism, How Many Dispensations Are There, & Why Is It Essential to Studying The Bible in Context?
https://www.worldviewweekend.com/news/article/what-dispensationalism-how-many-dispensations-are-there-why-it-essential-studying-bible

J. Vernon McGee - How Many Dispensations Are In The Bible?
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=9k9Ow6pT8wU [Audio]



Dispensations - J Vernon McGee - FULL Sunday Sermons
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=0_Ao97VitpQ [Audio]

Pauline Dispensationalism
http://slideplayer.com/slide/3125686/ [Slideshow]

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Dispensationalism (Critical / Preterist)

http://www.preteristarchive.com/StudyArchive/d/dispensationalism.html

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Covenant Theology

Wikipedia: Covenant Theology
https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Covenant_theology

Covenant theology (also known as Covenantalism, Federal theology, or Federalism) is a conceptual overview and interpretive framework for understanding the overall flow of the Bible. It uses the theological concept of a covenant as an organizing principle for Christian theology. The standard form of covenant theology views the history of God's dealings with mankind, from Creation to Fall to Redemption to Consummation, under the framework of three overarching theological covenants: of redemption, works, and grace.

These three covenants are called theological because, though not explicitly presented as such in the Bible, they are thought of as theologically implicit, describing and summarizing the wealth of Scriptural data. Historical Reformed systems of thought treat classical covenant theology not merely as a point of doctrine or as a central dogma, but as the structure by which the biblical text organizes itself.

Methodist hermeneutics (i.e., methods of interpretation) traditionally use a variation of this, known as Wesleyan covenant theology, which is consistent with Arminian soteriology (i.e., Arminianism study of doctrines of salvation).

What is Covenant Theology?
https://www.gotquestions.org/covenant-theology.html

A Brief History of Covenant Theology - R. Scott Clark
http://spindleworks.com/library/CR/clark.htm

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Covenant Theology

https://www.biblicaltraining.org/library/covenant-theology

Excerpt:

Sometimes called "Federal Theology," this system describes the relationship between God and man in the form of covenants. One of the features in the development of Calvinism, it was especially popular with Puritans and the Reformed theologians of Germany and Holland in the latter sixteenth and during the seventeenth century. It holds that God entered into an agreement with Adam at creation, promising him eternal life if he would obey the divine commands. Adam failed by eating the forbidden fruit and thus plunged himself and his descendants into eternal death. To remedy this, God (eternally) entered into a second agreement with Christ on behalf of the elect, promising them forgiveness and eternal life on the basis of Christ's sacrifice. The elect may have assurance of salvation with all its attendant blessing because of their faith in Christ.

This teaching helped Calvinists reconcile the sovereignty of God with man's desire for assurance. The covenant, or federal, theologians believed that man as a sinner has no right before a holy, sovereign, omnipotent God. Man ought to be perfectly obedient to the will of God, but even then there is no reward to be earned. Fellowship with God must come through a voluntary divine agreement establishing a relationship which is not necessarily according to nature. This was done by the covenant, which caused God to act in a kindly way, thus removing the uncertainty from dealing with the Almighty.

Covenant theology in a strict sense began in Germany when a number of Calvinists such as Kaspar Olevianus* and Zacharias Ursinus* emphasized the idea of the covenant of God with man and the believer's mystic union with Christ. Parallel with this German movement was the British development of covenant theology which was sometimes related to political thought (see National Covenant and Solemn League and Covenant). William Ames* became the leading British exponent of federal theology, which in a moderate form appears in both the Westminster Confession* and the Savoy Declaration.* Debtor to both British and German schools, John Cocceius* published a book, Summa Doctrinae de Foedere et Testamento Dei (1648), which has the most elaborate explanation of the covenant principle produced to that time.

Interest in covenant theology continued into the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries, but in a much diminished form. The Princeton theologians Charles and A.A. Hodge* gave it much attention, and federal theology still occupies a central position in reformed doctrine.

W.A. Brown, "Covenant Theology," Encyclopedia of Religion and Ethics (ed. J. Hastings), vol. IV, pp. 216ff.; P.Y. DeJong, The Covenant Idea in New England Theology (1945); P. Miller, The New England Mind, the Seventeenth Century (1961), pp. 365ff.; P. Toon, The Emergence of Hyper-Calvinism in English Nonconformity (1967), chap. 1.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

What is 'Covenant Theology'?

http://www.ukapologetics.net/07/COVENANTTHEOLOGY.htm

Excerpt:

> Covenant Theology (also sometimes called 'Covenantalism' or 'Federal theology' or 'Federalism') is a conceptual overview and interpretative framework for understanding the overall flow of the Bible. It is indeed a 'nuts and bolts' theology for those who want to break things down into smaller parts to see how they work. This form of theology lies at the heart of the reformed (Calvinist) school of Protestantism as developed from the 17th century, whilst having no place at all in the 16th century writings of Calvin himself.
>
> Covenant theologians see 'covenant' as the basic architectural principle through which Holy Scripture organizes itself…
>
> This approach essentially views the history of God's dealings with mankind, from Creation to Fall, on to Redemption, and on to Final Consummation, under the framework of three theological covenants.
>
> - The Covenant of Redemption (Only exists between God the Father and God the Son; mankind has no 'covenant partner' involvement here).
> - The Covenant of Works (Established with Adam).
> - The Covenant of Grace (This is an 'umbrella covenant,' and includes various sub-covenants,
>
> These three covenants are often called "theological covenants" because it is usually freely admitted that they are not explicitly presented as such in the Bible, yet they are thought to be theologically implicit, describing and summarizing the wealth of Scriptural data.
>
> Firstly, 'The Covenant of Redemption' (within this viewpoint), is not a covenant between God and Man at all but is an eternal agreement - within the Godhead - in which the Father appointed the Son Jesus Christ by the power of the Holy Spirit to redeem the elect from the guilt and power of sin. God appointed Christ to live a life of perfect obedience to the law and to die a penal, substitutionary, sacrificial death as the 'covenantal representative' for all who trust in him (all entirely biblical, of course - but can this really be called a 'covenant'?).
>
> Secondly, the 'Covenant of Works' does not cover the Mosaic period, or the 'Old Covenant' (as one might suppose from its name), but refers to God's original scheme for working with Adam and Eve.
>
> Thirdly, those specific covenants after the fall of Adam (the covenants which are actually scripturally outlined), are then seen as administered under, and enclosed within, the 'umbrella covenant' of the 'Covenant of Grace' and, in this view, they do not stand truly separate and distinct and are probably best viewed as 'sub-covenants.' Such covenants - standing within and under - the Covenant of Grace include:
>
> a. The Noahic covenant (Genesis 9),
>
> b. The Abrahamic covenant (Genesis 15),
>
> c. The Mosaic covenant (Exodus 19-24),
>
> d. The Palestinian covenant (essentially enlarging upon the Abrahamic covenant and giving the specific promise of land),
>
> e. The Davidic covenant (2 Samuel 7; establishing David and his lineage as the rightful kings of Judah and extending the covenant of Abraham to a royal lineage), and finally,

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

f. The New covenant (Jesus' promise of Eternal Life to His believers as outlined at length within the New Testament).

It may be seen at once that - within this theological schema - the Covenant of Grace covers rather a lot of things, including the New Covenant.

Inherent Problems Within Covenant Theology

There are several problems here, including:

- The three major overall covenants are not even 'covenants' according to true biblical terms of reference.
- The Covenant of Redemption is only applicable within the Godhead. In contrast, biblical covenants seem to be between God and Men.
- The New Covenant becomes a 'bit part player' and is effectively reduced and demoted in importance and authority since it is seen as forming only part of the 'Covenant of Grace.' It is because of this view that most reformed, or Calvinist, people (who have a full understanding of their theology), do not normally speak about the Mosaic covenant as fulfilled in Christ and now set aside in favour of the greater promises of Christ and the New Covenant. They cannot do so since their theology places both the Mosaic Covenant and the New Covenant within the presently existing 'Covenant of Grace.'

A far more biblical view would surely be to state that whilst there are several biblical covenants, two appear to be presented within Holy Scripture as of a more major importance:

1. The Old Covenant (the formal delivering of God's law to the Jewish people, as outlined from Exodus-Deuteronomy, during the life of Moses).

2. The New Covenant (the salvific promises of Jesus Christ and the focus of the entire New Testament).
Biblical teaching seems clear that the New Covenant has now replaced the Old, but Covenant Theologians cannot live with this law/grace tension since it throws confusion into their theological system, indeed, Covenant Theology insists that the gospel of grace has been preached since Genesis 3:15 and is not restricted to the New Covenant. It is hard to reconcile the New Testament teaching that the Christian is now part of a New Creation with the view that we continue to stand under a covenant which effectively pre-dated Noah!

> 'Therefore, if anyone is in Christ, he is a new creation; the old has gone, the new has come!' (2 Corinthians 5:17, NIV).

Many other New Testament Scriptures clearly depict the demise of the Old Covenant; 2 Corinthians 3, for example, should be consulted as should Hebrews 8:13 which clearly characterizes the Old Covenant as 'obsolete'! The Epistles, especially those of Paul, often paint a stark Old Covenant/New Covenant contrast, yet 'Covenant Theology' cannot live with this tension and so their writers and theologians prefer to ignore this biblically-depicted contrast. The entire 27 books of the New Testament focus on the New Covenant and what it means for men and women made in the image of their Maker. This abundant centrality of Christ fits in much much better with the view that the New Covenant now supercedes all others, rather than the view that both old and new covenants are no more than sub-covenants of a so-called "gospel of grace" which goes back to Noah!

Most of the more minor biblical covenants seem to reach at least some degree of fulfillment (if not entire fulfillment) in this New Covenant (the Abrahamic, Davidic and Palestinian for instance). Indeed, the New Covenant, focusing on the atonement of Jesus Christ, may now be seen as the major focus of the entire biblical revelation. In contrast, the suggested 'Covenant theology' remains essentially legalistic because - to be fully consistent within itself - law cannot simply be set aside. Yet if one, for example, sets out to read the writings of the apostle Paul at depth, it becomes plain that the great apostle of Tarsus would not have been a supporter of so-called 'covenant theology' (the books of Romans and Galatians alone contain numerous statements which simply will not fit in with the concept that both the law and the grace of Christ stand under one and the same covenant). There is no doubt that it fell to Paul to be the premier New Testament theologian and Paul (as already mentioned), is very strong on the Law/Grace tension which he presents as pivotal to Christian understanding - Luther was absolutely correct about that; but 'Covenant Theology' is totally at odds with this schema. The flawed theological approach of 'Covenant theology' (for all of its good points, and not for one moment to deny the sincerity of most of its adherents), is why reformed theology in practice is intrinsically legalistic.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

One quick example of this legalism is to compare the attitude towards the Sabbath within Christianity in general, with the Covenant Theology view. Christianity in general sees the Sabbath as fulfilled in Christ, with The Lord's Day being an entirely separate day of freedom, joy and worship. In complete contrast, covenant theologians see Sabbath observance as necessarily ongoing and now simply transferred to Sunday; they take this view without any Scriptural justification whatsoever, being perfectly content to ignore the teaching of Jesus in Matthew 5-7, several clear statements by Paul, and the complete silence on this from the writer of Hebrews whilst discussing the spiritual application of 'rest' (Hebrews 3:18-4:11). Calvin himself rejected the view that Sunday is a new Sabbath, the error came from Bullinger, being later reinforced by legalistic Puritan theology. But this is far too big a subject to consider here, for those wanting more information I advocate the reading of Why Worship on a Sunday?

…Problems with Infant and Child Baptism, …

…Writers Who Have Supported Covenant Theology…

Conclusion.

'Covenant Theology' is a theological schema for explaining the Scriptures which certainly does often contain certain strengths and insights, but it ultimately falls short through the practice of eisegesis, that is, through the practice of reading things into Holy Scripture, rather than exegesis (drawing things out of the Scriptures). The stated covenantal structure does not truly exist in the Bible in the manner in which such writers have explained it and whereas, in many areas, scriptural understanding is unaffected, in other areas it becomes compromised, indeed, occasionally quite seriously, for 'continuous covenant' teaching (of which 'covenant theology' is undoubtedly one form), takes the accent off the centrality of Christ which the New Testament unashamedly upholds; the glorious light and freedom of Christ becomes somewhat dimmed and the Christian is again placed under law.

The view which UK Apologetics upholds has been referred to as New Covenant theology. This view simply notes the clear biblical position that Christ, and the New Covenant, are revealed by the New Testament to be the primary focus of all Scripture. Sadly, a few mistakenly feel that 'New Covenant theology' is very new even when it may be seen to be fully outlined within the writings of the apostle Paul and seems to have been Martin Luther's position.

See also following chart…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Covenant Theology - Chart:

The Covenants
	1	2	3	4	5	6	7
	Edenic	Adamic	Noahic	Abrahamic	Mosaic	New	Perfect
Mediator	God	God	Noah	Abraham	Moses	Jesus	God
Results	Brought death	Brought death	Brought death	Brought death	Brought death	Brought life	Enjoyed
More Results	Gives us everything	Gives us constraint	Gives us fear	Gives us hope	Made us guilty before God	Makes us free	Lived free, enjoying everything
Tokens or Signs	Nakedness	The curses	Rainbow	New names, circumcision	The Tabernacle/Temple	Holy Spirit	God with us
Concerning Sins	No awareness of sin	Constant remembrances of sins	Constant remembrances of sins	Constant remembrances of sins	Constant remembrances of sins	No more remembering	No more remembering
Demands	Demands obedience to establish righteousness	Demands Righteousness	Demands Righteousness	Demands Righteousness	Demands righteousness	Gives Righteousness	Is righteousness
Concerning Sacrifices	No sacrifices	Many sacrifices	Many sacrifices	Many sacrifices	Many sacrifices	One Sacrifice	No more sacrifice
Was it ever completed?		Never finished	Never finished	Never finished	Never Finished	It is Finished	Only remembered
Payment for Sin	No sin	Often payment for sin	Often payment for sin	Often payment for sin	Yearly payment for sins	One payment for sin	No sin
Concerning Priests		No priests	All believers were priests	Few priests	Many priests	One Priest
Based upon what actions	Based upon simplicity	Based upon simplicity	Based upon simplicity	Based upon simplicity	Based on ceremonies and religion	Based on simplicity in Christ	Based upon simplicity
Location	Given in the Garden	Given in the Garden	Given on Mt Ararat	Given in Ur	Given at Mt Sinai	Given at Mt Calvary	Given at Mt Olivet
How to Live under each covenant	Lived by works and faith – resulted in failure	Lived by faith in obedience to God's commands – ended in failure	Lived by faith	Lived by faith	Lived by works and faith – failure	Lived by faith – success	Lived by faith and works – results in failure

[Source: http://www.biblebc.com/bbi/Courses/Disp_Cov/Dispensational%20and%20Covenant%20Theology%20-%20Student.pdf] [PDF]

For more covenant charts and comparisons with dispensationalism see:
Two Major Theological Systems: Covenant vs Dispensational Theology

Amillennialism (blog): Covenant Theology https://amillennialism.wordpress.com/tag/covenant-theology/

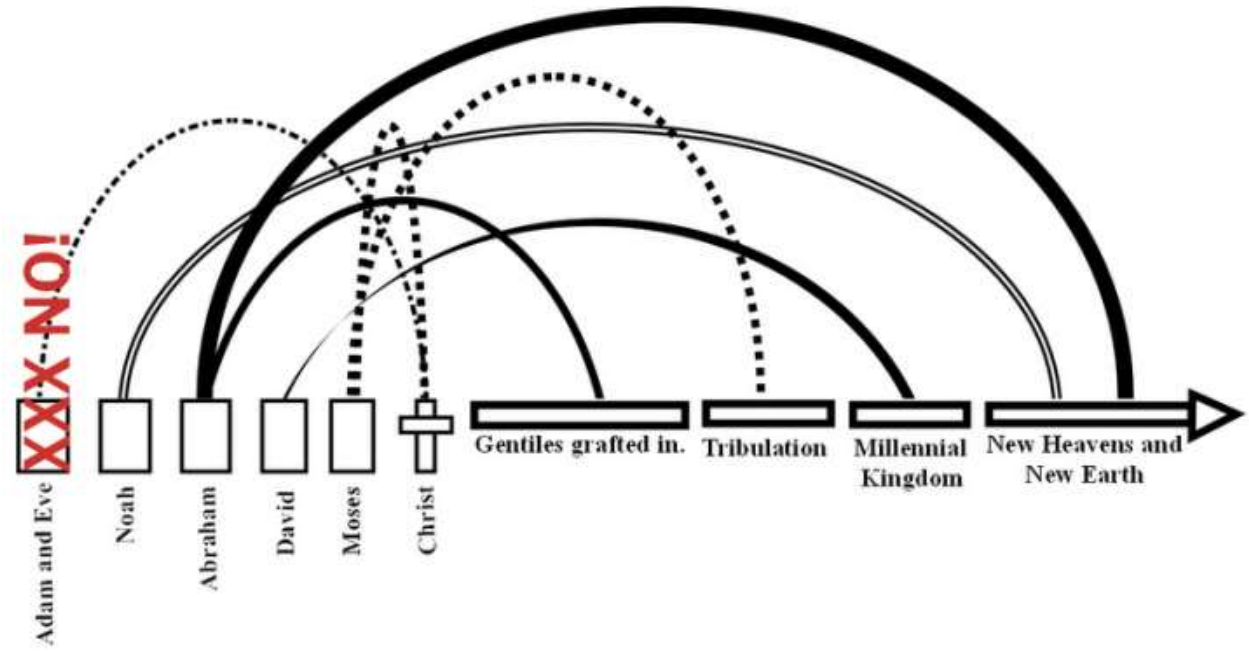
What's Wrong with Theonomic Postmillennialism [PDF]
http://www.biblicalreader.com/books/theonomy/theonomy.pdf

The Significance of Covenant Theology in Reformed Eschatology
http://www.mountainretreatorg.net/eschatology/significance_of_covenant_theology_in_eschatology.shtml

Bullinger – The First Covenant Theologian
http://www.cprf.co.uk/articles/covenant6.htm



Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Note: the following is anti-Covenant/Dispensational, anti-Reformed/Calvinism…

Biblical Covenants: An Overview and Relevance to the Gospel, Parts 1 &2

https://paulspassingthoughts.com/2015/01/04/the-potters-house-biblical-covenants-an-overview-and-relevance-to-the-gospel-parts-1-2/

Excerpts:

Note: Not sure why above chart put Moses after David, as Moses should be BEFORE David (Point is: NO Adamic Covenant)

Part 1: The Fact that Clarifies: God Never Made a Covenant with Adam

If there is an area where the laity is very confused, it is in regard to biblical covenants. This booklet seeks to clarify the issue.

So, let's get into the primary covenants. There are six, NOT seven. They follow: Noahic, Abrahamic, Palestinian, Mosaic, Davidic, and the New Covenant.

God never made a covenant with Adam. How do we know this? Because when God makes a covenant, He states it as such. God never calls any arrangement He made with Adam a "covenant."

In the Garden of Eden, God calls them "trees" not a covenant. How do we get "covenant" from "tree"? In the six actual covenants, God says, "I will make a covenant." God's work arrangement with Adam was never called a covenant. His relationship with Eve was never called a covenant. When God covered Adam and Eve's nakedness after the fall, He didn't call that a covenant either. In all cases it's pure assumption. However, when God says, "I will make a covenant," that's not an assumption.

Curiously, Adam is said to have broken the covenant, but the issue is that he disobeyed and ate from the tree of good and evil which is a separate issue from these other considerations: his task of caring for the garden, being fruitful, etc. Clarifying what this covenant was exactly and how Adam broke it by eating from the tree is speculative at best. Whenever God makes a covenant, He calls it a covenant, He specifies who the covenant is to, and also specifies the terms.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Granted, the tree of life ends up in the New Jerusalem, but what we primarily look for as Christians is the city built by God, not the tree. The tree of life is one of the results of the Abrahamic covenant, but it isn't THE covenant or even a salvific covenant. The tree is never called a covenant. Those who posit the idea that God made a covenant with Adam must now split that covenant into two different covenants: the Edenic covenant of innocence, or the covenant of works prior to the fall and the Adamic Covenant of grace. This is what happens when you make something a covenant that isn't a covenant; you have to come up with more covenants to explain the first covenant that wasn't a covenant. You search in vain for the covenants of innocence, works, or grace…

…The definition of a salvific biblical covenant follows: they are NEVER based on anything man does, nor are they predicated on an agreement between God and man. Covenants are predicated on one thing and one thing only: God's promises. The six covenants are covenants of promise. They are NOT agreements between God and man, they are promises TO man.

Where Does Election Fit In?

Furthermore, ELECTION is the means by which God executes His promises. Why must God elect the means? Because He cannot break His promises. He elected Christ to make the promises possible, He elected angels to enforce the covenants of promise, and He elected Israel to execute the covenants on a human level aided by the Holy Spirit.

God does not elect individuals, but rather the means of fulfilling His Promises. God is only limited by His character, but is not limited by any of His attributes. God cannot break a promise, and He cannot be unjust. Individuals are not elected; only the means for fulfilling His promises are elected. Otherwise, the promises cannot be to anyone in particular; in other words, if individuals are elected, they themselves cannot know definitively that the promise is to them.

Hence, the promises are to everyone who will believe. If that is predetermined, the promise is useless because it is only a promise to those who have been predestined which means the promises of God must be qualified with an "IF."

"Yes, it's a promise; you just don't know whether it's to you specifically or not." The Bible states that the promises of God are to all who believe. If the promises are only to the elect, that should be easily stated and clarified. It is worth noting that God never calls the Gentiles His elect. Why? Because they were never His means of bringing salvation to the world—they are merely recipients.

> John 4:22 – You worship what you do not know; we worship what we know, for salvation is from the Jews.

Any reference to Gentiles being elect is speaking to the salvation they obtain by inheriting the promises made to the Jews:

> Blessed be the Lord God of Israel; for he hath visited and redeemed his people, And hath raised up an horn of salvation (Jesus) for us in the house of his servant David; As he spake by the mouth of his holy prophets, which have been since the world began: That we should be saved from our enemies, and from the hand of all that hate us; To perform the mercy promised to our fathers, and to remember his holy covenant; The oath which he sware to our father Abraham (Luke 1:68-73, also see Eph 2:12).

This is much like the gospel, or "good news." Why is, "Maybe you're in, but maybe you're not" "good news"? You really have no way of knowing whether it is necessarily good news for you or not. In the same way, you are presented with THE promise without any way of knowing whether the promise is really to you. The only way you can know for certain that the promise is to you is if the "IF" relies on your choice to believe the promise which is to EVERYONE who believes. Let's look at an example of this:

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Acts 3:36 – Let all the house of Israel therefore know for certain that God has made him both Lord and Christ, this Jesus whom you crucified." 37 Now when they heard this they were cut to the heart, and said to Peter and the rest of the apostles, "Brothers, what shall we do?" 38 And Peter said to them, "Repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the forgiveness of your sins, and you will receive the gift of the Holy Spirit. 39 For the promise is for you and for your children and for all who are far off, everyone whom the Lord our God calls to himself." 40 And with many other words he bore witness and continued to exhort them, saying, "Save yourselves from this crooked generation." 41 So those who received his word were baptized, and there were added that day about three thousand souls.

See the words "the promise"? Whenever you see that in the New Testament it is referring to the Abrahamic Covenant. An example is the aforementioned 2Peter 3:13. Peter stated on Pentecost that the promise was to them, their children, and those far off which probably referred to the Jews not present that day. Yes, it could also refer to the Gentiles, but more than likely refers to the Jews who didn't make it to Jerusalem for Pentecost that year. The promise is to all of them, but the promise must be obtained by faith. God calls all men to Himself, but they must come by faith, and that being faith in the Son of God.

We will not stop here to examine all of the gospel implications of what Peter said, but a few things should be mentioned. Saving faith believes God's promises. But past a mere mental assent, I think it also involves a desire to be a recipient of the promise. Salvation does not come by any kind of obedience to the law—it comes by believing God's promises. Abraham, the father of our faith, was made righteous because he believed God's promise concerning an heir and being made a great nation (Genesis 15:1-6). Saving faith believes what God says. Saving faith believes God's promises. Why should anyone believe if they cannot be sure the promise is to them?

Also note that the promise includes the gift of the Holy Spirit. That necessarily means the new birth. That's part of the promise. This is where we must conclude that Peter is talking about more than just water baptism. Peter exhorted them with "many other words" that may have very well included more information about the new birth and baptism. The new birth means the old us dies with Christ and a new us is resurrected with Christ (Rom 6:1-14).

Let me take opportunity here to put all of this lordship salvation chaos to rest. Telling people that they have to do something in order to follow Christ and be saved is beside the point. Frankly, I don't endorse telling people that they have to do anything other than believe God's promise in order to be saved. But if they have something in their life that they don't want to give up that is clearly opposed to God's life prescription, they are basically saying they don't want the promise! The death of who you are and the resurrection of a new you is part of the promise. This is not complicated.

Before we move on, we will pause here for a moment to revisit this whole idea that God made a covenant with Adam though God never said He made a covenant with Adam. A whole bunch of this is tied up in the granddaddy of all theologies, Covenant Theology, which shows up in the 16th century. It posits the idea that the one command given to Adam about the tree of good and evil was a covenant of works, also referred to as the covenant of life, or as mentioned earlier, a covenant of innocence. Adam was promised life/blessings for obedience, and death/cursing for disobedience.

We could spend hours plunging the depths of all of this while including Dispensationalism to boot, and all of the various views on this which are myriad, as if God is a god of confusion, but let me make it really, really easy for you. As the theories go, born out of this idea that God made a covenant with Adam, when Adam sinned, and thereby breaking the first covenant, God instituted the "Covenant of Grace." And what is this Covenant of Grace? It is the promise of the seed in Genesis 3:15—that's the Covenant of Grace according to the Protestant brain trust. So, let's turn now to where that takes place:

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

> Genesis 3:14 – And Jehovah God said unto the serpent, Because thou hast done this, cursed art thou above all cattle, and above every beast of the field; upon thy belly shalt thou go, and dust shalt thou eat all the days of thy life: 15 and I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and between thy seed and her seed: he shall bruise thy head, and thou shalt bruise his heel (ASV).

Do you see the glaring problem here? Who is God talking to? When you make a covenant with someone, wouldn't it be with the person you are talking to? Note what takes place after verse 15; God then addresses Eve, and then afterward addresses Adam separately. If there is a Covenant of Grace, it was made with the serpent! Adam and Eve are right there, and according to the Covenant Theology federal headship of Adam, any covenant made at that point should be addressed to Adam, no?

This whole idea that God made a covenant with Adam is at the root of almost every errant view of biblical covenants that there is, and is also the basis of the Reformed doctrine of double imputation. This is the belief that Christ fulfilled the covenant of works that Adam violated through perfect law-keeping when He was on earth as a man. Hence, paradise is restored due to Christ fulfilling this covenant, which is a law covenant…

In addition, key to understanding the salvific covenants of promise is Ephesians 2:11,12.

> 11 Therefore remember that at one time you Gentiles in the flesh, called "the uncircumcision" by what is called the circumcision, which is made in the flesh by hands— 12 remember that you were at that time separated from Christ, alienated from the commonwealth of Israel and strangers to the covenants of promise, having no hope and without God in the world.

Notice that being unregenerate is synonymous with being alienated from the "commonwealth of Israel" and the covenants (PLURAL) of "promise." Any salvific covenant must be defined as a covenant of promise, and NOT agreement, and MUST be attached to Israel. Problem: Adam had nothing to do with Israel. And…even if God did make some kind of covenant with Adam, it depended on something Adam did and not a promise despite any action by Adam. In other words, it was supposedly an agreement that was dependent on the actions of two parties. In order for God to fulfil His promises to a certain party, they have to remain faithful to their part of the contract. When Adam supposedly violated the covenant, God replaced it with another one. This is all fraught with speculation.

At best, it would have to be some kind of law covenant, and shockingly, the Reformed crowd actually concedes this and makes the primary covenant of promise a law covenant. This is clearly a plenary affront to Scripture. Nevertheless, this is how the Reformed, and frankly many others, including dispensationalists, interpret Romans 5:18,19.

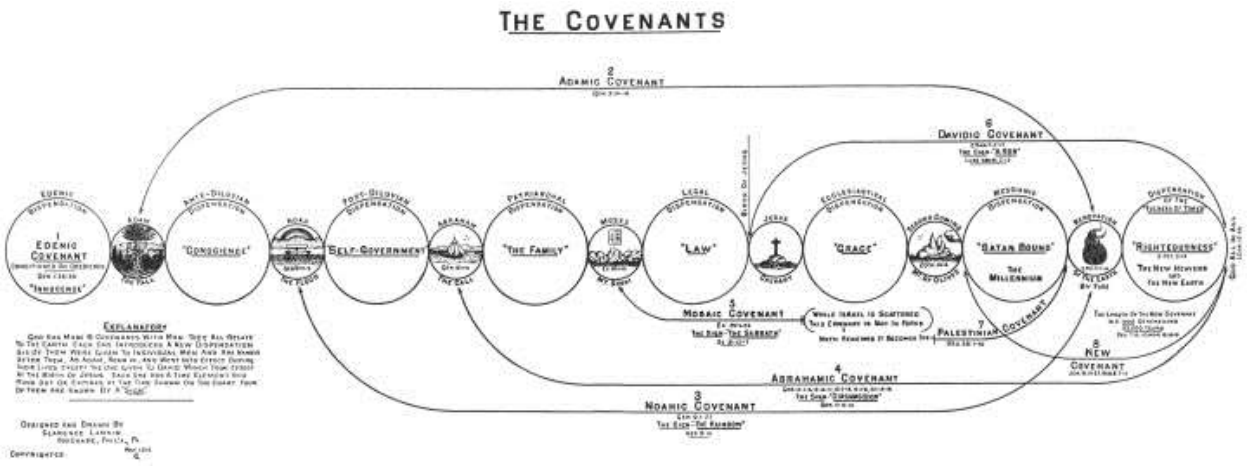
> 18 Therefore, as one trespass led to condemnation for all men, so one act of righteousness leads to justification and life for all men. 19 For as by the one man's disobedience the many were made sinners, so by the one man's obedience the many will be made righteous.

Supposedly, the one act of Christ is His "passive obedience," and the overall obedience of Christ is His "active obedience." Hence, Christ came to fulfil a law covenant. Regardless of what Protestant camp you dwell in, you hear this all the time; viz, Christ kept the law perfectly for us; viz, Christ's resurrection was proof that God was satisfied with His perfect obedience; viz, Christ had to keep the law perfectly in His life first before He could be the acceptable sacrifice; viz, we have the righteousness of Christ. Whether Calvinist or Arminian—you hear these truisms constantly.

Here is where I want to enter in a quotation from Present Truth magazine because it perfectly articulates John Calvin's view on this from his commentary on Romans:

After a man hears the conditions of acceptance with God and eternal life, and is made sensible of his inability to meet those conditions, the Word of God comes to him in the gospel. He hears that Christ stood in his place and kept the law of God for him. By dying on the cross, Christ satisfied all the law's demands.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



The Holy Spirit gives the sinner faith to accept the righteousness of Jesus. Standing now before the law which says, "I demand a life of perfect conformity to the commandments," the believing sinner cries in triumph, "Mine are Christ's living, doing, and speaking, His suffering and dying; mine as much as if I had lived, done, spoken, and suffered, and died as He did . . . " (Luther). The law is well pleased with Jesus' doing and dying, which the sinner brings in the hand of faith. Justice is fully satisfied, and God can truly say: "This man has fulfilled the law. He is justified."

We say again, only those are justified who bring to God a life of perfect obedience to the law of God. This is what faith does—it brings to God the obedience of Jesus Christ. By faith the law is fulfilled and the sinner is justified.

On the other hand, the law is dishonored by the man who presumes to bring to it his own life of obedience. The fact that he thinks the law will be satisfied with his "rotten stubble and straw" (Luther) shows what a low estimate he has of the holiness of God and what a high estimate he has of his own righteousness. Only in Jesus Christ is there an obedience with which the law is well pleased. Because faith brings only what Jesus has done, it is the highest honor that can be paid to the law (Rom. 3:31) [see The Truth About New Calvinism pp. 100, 101].

So, what does church become? Or rather, what has church in fact become? It has become a ritual that we partake in for the purpose of Christ's obedience fulfilling a law covenant. "Christians" verbalize these ideas all the time. The Reformed call this "the obedience of faith." Our faith alone in Christian living—Christ's imputed obedience to fulfill the law covenant as long as we walk by faith alone. I had one person from the anti-Calvin, anti-Lordship salvation crowd tell me that Christians only obey one time—when they believe. After that, it's all Christ's obedience perpetually imputed to our account. I had another anti-Calvinist refer to en nomos to Christ. What's that? It means in-lawed to Christ; the law is fulfilled for us in Christ. Calvinists call this the "vital union." As long as we are walking by faith alone, Christ continues to satisfy the law for us.

Listen, do you know why Calvinists and Arminians bicker back and forth in the SBC but will not separate? Do you know why an anti-Calvinist president of a major SBC seminary wrote me and stated that Calvinism isn't a false gospel? The answer is simple; they all believe in the same law covenant. When it gets right down to it—they believe the same gospel. The tie that binds is this whole idea that God made a covenant of works with Adam. Note the two different charts below; one from the dispensationalist camp disdained by the Reformed, and the other one from the latter:

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Non Dispensational Calvinistic Credobaptist Covenantalism

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Romans 11 – Replacement Theology [Slideshow]

https://www.slideshare.net/dkooyers/romans-chapter-11-replacement-theology-the-olive-tree-john-piper-israels-future-remnant-israel-hebrew-roots-movement-israel-and-the-church-eponym-separation-theology-remnant-theology

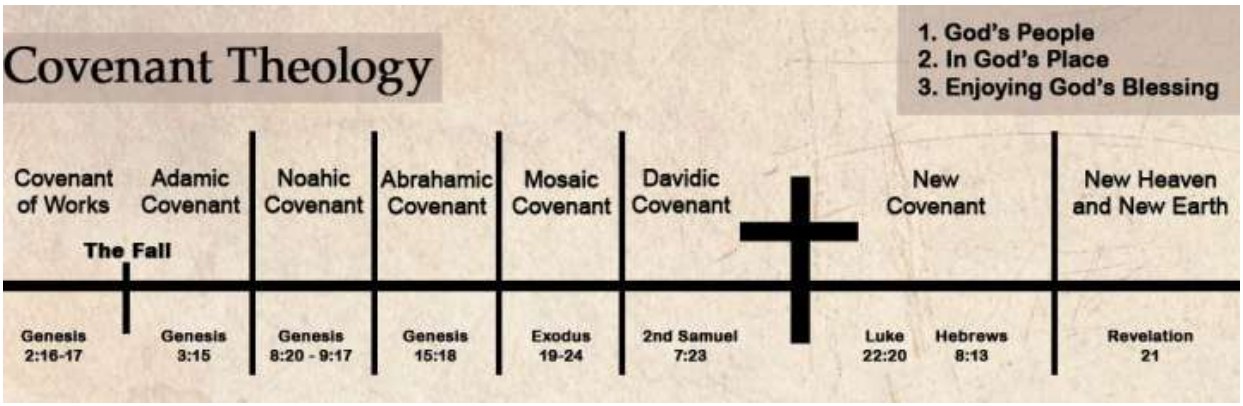
Excerpt:

BIBLICAL COVENANTS

ELEMENTS	ABRAHAMIC	MOSAIC	PRIESTLY	DEUTERONOMIC	DAVIDIC	NEW
Seed	X				X
Blessing	X	X	X	X	X	X
Land	X	X		X	X	X
Nation	X	X		X	X	X
Kingdom	X	X	X		X	X
Reference	Gen. 12:1–3; 15:1–21; 17:1–8; 22:15–18	Ex. 19–24	Num. 25:10–13; Jer. 33:17–18; Ezek. 48:11	Deut. 27–30; 29:1–9	2 Sam. 7:8–16	Jer. 31:27–40

Covenant Timing: Crisis and Change for God's People

https://dispensationalpublishing.com/covenant-timing-crisis-and-change-for-gods-people/



Excerpt:

CRISIS AND CHANGE IN THE COVENANTS

Copyright © 2016 Dispensational Publishing House, Inc.

	ABRAHAMIC	MOSAIC	PRIESTLY	DEUTERONOMIC	DAVIDIC	NEW
CRISIS	Leave homeland and follow God.	Leave Egypt and depend on God for survival.	Leave immoral living and display zeal for God's holiness.	Leave the wilderness and cross the Jordan into the Promised Land.	Leave their appointed King and live a life of godly submission to the true King, Yahweh.	Leave sin and receive the ultimate spiritual blessing: forgiveness of sins.
CHANGE	Abraham marks the beginning of a specific people for Yahweh.	The Law contained stipulations and obligations, including a sacrificial system.	The appointment of the Zadokites heralded the future discontinuation of the Aaronic high priesthood.	The new era in a new land would demand the fulfillment of the obligations of the Law, which are only valid in the Land.	God reveals the linear descent of King Messiah through one family in the tribe of Judah.	The people will receive a new heart, a new obedience, and a new forgiveness.
SCRIPTURE	Gen. 12:1–3; 15:1–21; 17:1–8; 22:15–18	Ex. 19–24	Num. 25:10–13; Jer. 33:17–18; Ezek. 48:11	Deut. 27–30; 29:1–9	2 Sam. 7:8–16	Jer. 31:27–40

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Abrahamic covenant, the covenant that all of the other covenants of promise are based on, is based on promise and NOT law. It doesn't matter who keeps it—it's NOT a law covenant. The apostle Paul spent all of his Christian life refuting this very idea.

> Galatians 3:15 – To give a human example, brothers: even with a man-made covenant, no one annuls it or adds to it once it has been ratified. 16 Now the promises were made to Abraham and to his offspring. It does not say, "And to offsprings," referring to many, but referring to one, "And to your offspring," who is Christ. 17 This is what I mean: the law, which came 430 years afterward, does not annul a covenant previously ratified by God, so as to make the promise void. 18 For if the inheritance comes by the law, it no longer comes by promise; but God gave it to Abraham by a promise.

If Christ had to keep the law for us that makes the promise what? Right, "void." Who keeps the law is not the point, law period is the point. Paul goes further to make his point with the ONE SEED argument. What's that? If the law is part of the Abrahamic covenant, there are two life-giving entities and not just one being Christ. Verse 21, the law cannot give life. We are going to come back to this text when we get to the Mosaic covenant…

…

Conclusion

Another thing we can associate with the covenants is the vanquishing of God's enemies. Christ came proclaiming the good news of the kingdom, and performed a lot of healing of diseases. This is indicative of the millennial kingdom where there will be little disease if any. The Bible states that an infant will be 100 years old. In the new heaven and new earth, the last enemy to be defeated will be death. The new heaven and new earth is the consummation of the Abrahamic covenant when the city Abraham was looking for, heavenly Jerusalem, the real bride of Christ (Rev 21: 9ff), will descend from heaven and God will dwell among men.

When Christ came and died on the cross, sin was defeated because the power of sin is the law (1Cor 15:56). That was the first enemy of God to be defeated. Why would Christ want to fulfil the law in our stead for righteousness? All that would do is empower sin that much more! "But Paul, what's Matthew 5:17 talking about?" Answer: see Romans 8:3,4.

The second enemy that will be defeated is disease in the millennial kingdom which is why healing was a major theme during Christ's ministry.

The last enemy to be defeated will be death at the consummation of the Abrahamic covenant (1Cor 15:24-28). That is also the Sabbath rest that yet remains for God's people (Heb 4:9).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

In vogue in our day is the idea that Christians are still under condemnation and must live our Christian life by grace ALONE. We hear this constantly. Why? Because the protestant gospel is clearly grounded in a law covenant, not a “holy covenant” based on promise. Living by the same gospel that saved us, or living by faith alone, keeps us in the love of Christ resulting in Christ fulfilling an Adamic covenant that never existed.

It is a gospel based on a law covenant, and not promise.

See also: Federalism / Federal Theology

Two Major Theological Systems: Covenant vs Dispensational Theology

Three Schools of Theology – Dispensational, Covenant and New Covenant

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Comparison of Theological Systems (Covenant, Dispensational, Christocentric)

Comparison Chart:

[Source: http://mattstone.blogs.com/christian/2010/05/dispensational-covenant-and-christocentric-theology.html]

also in: http://www.christinyou.net/pdfs/TheoLogyeBook.pdf [PDF]

(see following page for expanded view of above chart)

Dispensational Theology, Covenant Theology, and Christocentric Theology

A comparison of theological systems noting the overemphasis on continuity or discontinuity in the major theological systems.
http://www.christinyou.net/pages/dthcthchth.html [Recommended]

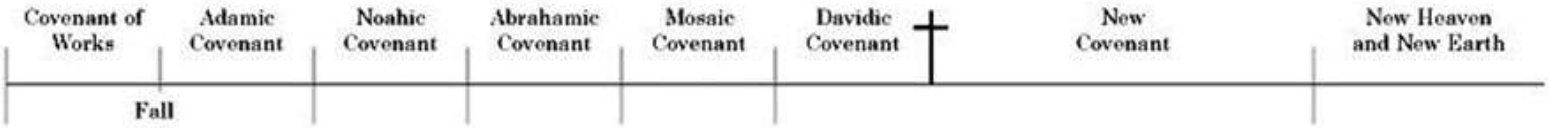
http://www.ntslibrary.com/Online-Library-Dispensational-Covenant-Christocentric-Theology.htm [Alternate site]

Is There a Future for Israel? (ref: Dispensational, Covenantal and Christocentric Theology)

https://www.russellmoore.com/2009/01/09/is-there-a-future-for-israel/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

[Go to Index]



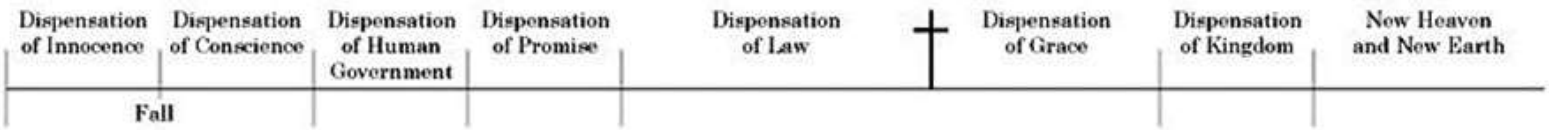
Comparison of Theological Systems

Covenant Theology

Important features:

1. Common "covenant of grace."
2. Singular "People of God."
3. Unity and Uniformity of God's People and Bible.

Primary objective of God: To develop an "elect People."



Dispensational Theology

Important features:

1. Distinct dispensations of time.
2. Dichotomy of Israel and Church.
3. Unconditional covenant of God with Israel.

Primary objective of God: To develop a Kingdom for Christocentric Theology

Important features:

1. Messianic promises fulfilled in Christ.
2. All God's activity centers in Christ.
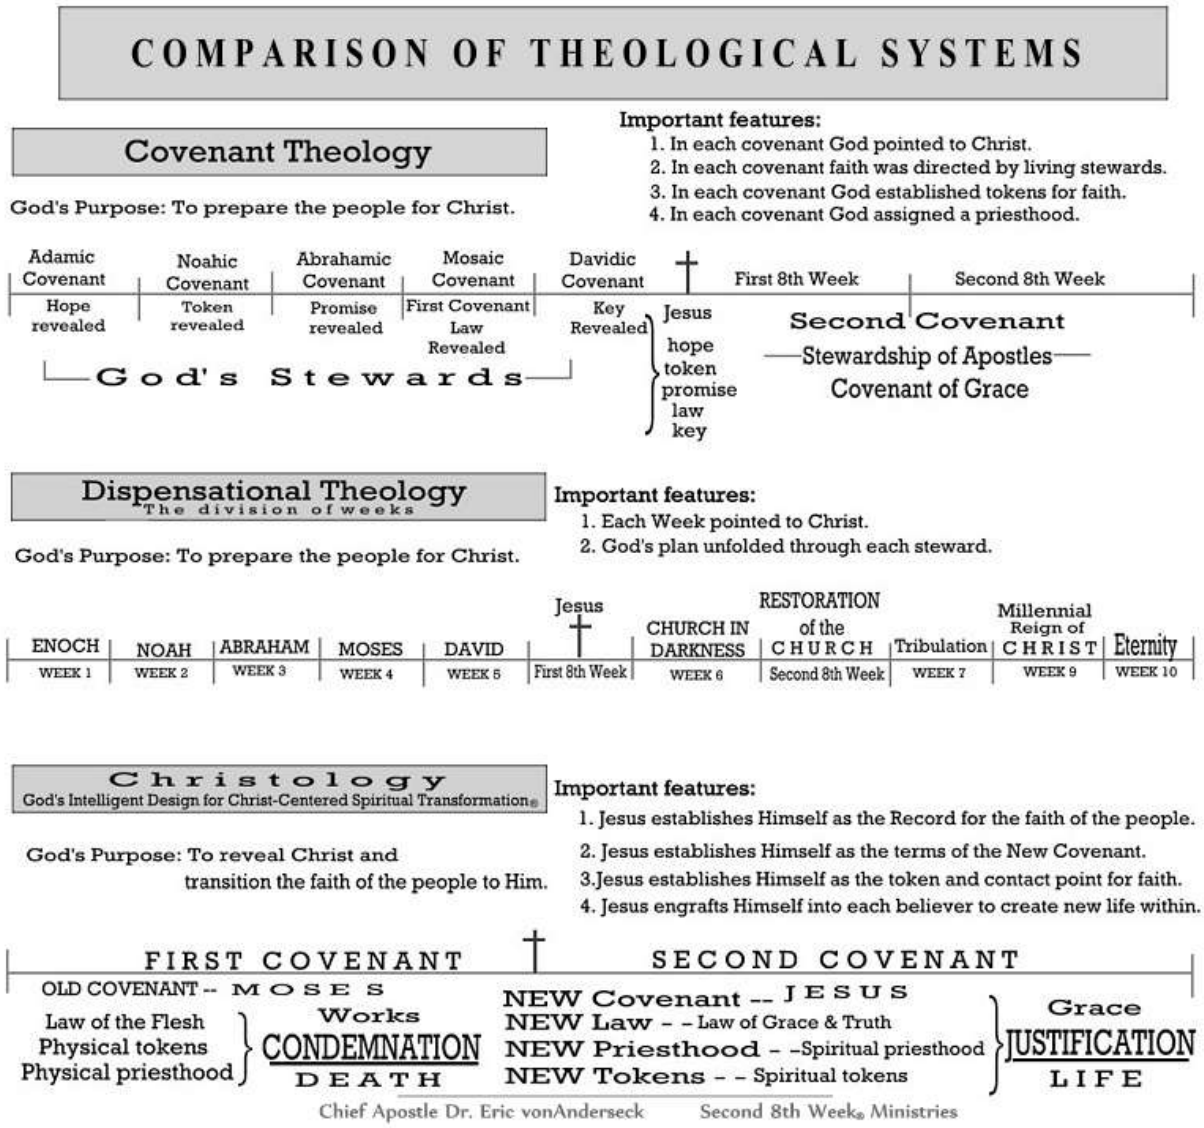
3. God continues to act in grace by the Primary objective of God: To restore His divine presence in man.

1998 by James A. Fowler. All rights reserved.

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



[Go to Top - TOC]

Comparison of Theological Systems: Covenant, Dispensational, Christology

http://www.s8wministries.org/chart.php?id=43

Chart illustrates the common thread between Covenant Theology (the division of covenants), Dispensation Theology (the division of weeks), and Christology (God's intelligent design for Christ-Centered Spiritual Transformation). In each system God provided an image of Christ to be seen for the faith and hope of the people. When Christ was manifested in the flesh, the people then were given a covenant of grace to take on His likeness. Chart helps learners understand Dispensationalism from a whole new viewpoint of God's weeks. S8W® Apostles Today Network provide detailed teaching.

Dispensationalism, Christology, and Covenant Theology share a central theme. Chart illustrates how God, through each covenant and through each dispensation, prepared the hearts of the people in faith for Jesus Christ.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Christocentric Hermeneutics (see also previous theology comparison chart)

There are two ways to read the Bible. The one way to read the Bible is that it's basically about you: what you have to do in order to be right with God, in which case you'll never have a sure and certain hope, because you'll always know you're not quite living up. You'll never be sure about that future. Or you can read it as all about Jesus. Every single thing is not about what you must do in order to make yourself right with God, but what he has done to make you absolutely right with God. And Jesus Christ is saying, "Unless you can read the Bible right, unless you can understand salvation by grace, you'll never have a sure and certain hope. But once you understand it's all about me, Jesus Christ, then you can know that you have peace. You can know that you have this future guaranteed, and you can face anything."
-Tim Keller

The hermeneutical question about the whole Bible correlates with the question, 'What do you think of Christ?' … The hermeneutical center of the Bible is therefore Jesus in his being and in his saving acts – the Jesus of the gospel. … We can say that, while not all Scripture is the gospel, all Scripture is related to the gospel that is its centre. … The Bible makes a very radical idea inescapable: not only is the gospel the interpretive norm for the whole Bible, but there is an important sense in which Jesus Christ is the mediator of the meaning of everything that exists. In other words, the gospel is the hermeneutical norm for the whole of reality. -Graeme Goldsworthy from Gospel-Centered Hermeneutics

See additional references:

https://www.monergism.com/topics/hermeneutics/christocentric-hermeneutics

Wikipedia: https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Christocentric

The Christocentric Principle: A Jesus-Centered Hermeneutic
https://www.sats.edu.za/userfiles/Peppler,%20The%20Christocentric%20Principle-A%20Jesus-Centred%20Hermeneutic.pdf

The Problem with Christocentrism
http://reknew.org/2017/05/the-problem-with-christocentrism/

Christocentric Theology – American Journal of Theology (fee required to access full article) http://www.journals.uchicago.edu/doi/pdfplus/10.1086/476592

ChristoCentric - website
http://christocentric.yolasite.com/

How Jesus Interpreted the Bible
http://faculty.gordon.edu/hu/bi/Ted_Hildebrandt/NTeSources/NTArticles/CTR-NT/Ellis-JesusBible-CTR.pdf [PDF]

Christocentrism: An Asymmetrical Trinitarianism?
http://themelios.thegospelcoalition.org/article/christocentrism-an-asymmetrical-trinitarianism

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Dispensational Theology

See also: Ephesians 1:10 – Dispensation

Three Millennial Views (and Relation to Dispensationalism and Covent Theology)
http://www.reformedreader.org/mchart.htm

Consistent Literal Interpretation (Dispensationalists)
http://www.middletownbiblechurch.org/dispen/litconsist.htm [PDF available]

What is a Dispensation?
http://amos37.com/what-is-a-dispensation/

Dispensationalism Misunderstood
http://www.biblebelievers.com/BlueDISP.html

Dispensational Theology
https://rexhowe.com/category/dispensational-theology/

Premillennialism and Covenant Theology [PDF]
http://www.wrs.edu/Materials_for_Web_Site/Journals/2-1%20Feb-1995/Battle%20-%20Premillennialsim%20&%20Covenant%20Theol.pdf

My Shift to Covenant Theology and Amillennialism (from Premillennialism) http://qqohelet.tripod.com/shift.htm

The Bible Believer's Guide to Dispensationalism
(Chp. 1 – Definition, Description & Distinction)
http://biblebelievers.com/walker/walker_disp01.html

What's Wrong with Theonomic Postmillennialism [PDF]
http://www.biblicalreader.com/books/theonomy/theonomy.pdf

Theologue – A Reformed Theology Blog: Dispensationalism Category
https://theologue.wordpress.com/category/theology/dispensationalism/

Why I Am Not a Dispensationalist [Historic Premillennialist] and Why Darrell Bock Is
http://www.christianity.com/blogs/jim-hamilton/why-i-am-not-a-dispensationalist-and-why-darrell-bock-is.html

Dispensational View of Theological Order: Why It Offends Covenant Theologians
http://www.pre-trib.org/articles/view/dispensational-view-of-theological-order-why-it-offends-covenant-theologians

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Wikipedia: Dispensationalism

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Dispensationalism

Dispensationalism is a religious interpretive system for the Bible. It considers Biblical history as divided deliberately by God into defined periods or ages to each of which God has allotted distinctive administrative principles. According to dispensationalist interpretation, each age of the plan of God is thus administered in a certain way, and humanity is held responsible as a steward during that time. The harmony of history is demonstrated as focusing on the glory of God and puts God at its center as opposed to a central focus on man and humanity's need for salvation. A dispensational perspective of scripture is evident in some early Jewish circles, as seen in the Dead Sea Scrolls like The Community Rule (1QS). The system was embraced by early Christian fundamentalists as a defense of the Bible against liberalism and modernism and became the majority position within fundamentalism.

Each dispensation is marked by a cycle: God reveals himself and his truth to humanity in a new way. Humanity is held responsible to conform to that revelation. Humanity rebels and fails the test. God judges humanity and introduces a new period of probation under a new administration. Ultimately, dispensationalism demonstrates the progress of God's revelation to man and God's sovereignty through history.

Dispensations – How Many?

http://www.teachingtheword.org/apps/articles/default.asp?articleid=66755&columnid=6211

What Is A Dispensation? (Charles C. Ryrie)

http://biblecentre.org/content.php?mode=7&item=814

Excerpt:

THE SINE QUA NON OF DISPENSATIONALISM

What marks off a person as a dispensationalist? What is the sine qua non (the absolutely indispensable part) of the system? Even though certain later discussions must be anticipated in order to answer that question, it seems appropriate to give an answer at this point.

Theoretically, the sine qua non ought to lie in the recognition of the fact that God has distinguishably different economies in governing the affairs of the world. Covenant theologians hold that there are various dispensations (and even use the word) within the outworking of the covenant of grace. Charles Hodge, for instance, believed that there are four dispensations after the Fall -- Adam to Abraham, Abraham to Moses, Moses to Christ, and Christ to the end.[36] Berkhof writes, as we have seen, of only two basic dispensations -- the Old and the New, but within the Old he sees four periods and all of these are revelations of the covenant of grace.[37] In other words, a person can believe in dispensations, and even see them in relation to progressive revelation, without being a dispensationalist.

Is the essence of dispensationalism in the number of dispensations? No, for this is in no way a major issue in the system, as will be discussed in the next chapter. It is not that Scofield taught seven dispensations and Hodge only four that makes the former a dispensationalist and the latter not.

Perhaps the issue of premillennialism is determinative. Again the answer is negative, for there are those who are premillennial who definitely are not dispensational. The covenant premillennialist holds to the concept of the covenant of grace and the central soteriological purpose of God. He retains the idea of the millennial kingdom, though he finds little support for it in the Old Testament prophecies. The kingdom in his view is markedly different from that which is taught by dispensationalists, since it loses much of its

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Jewish character due to the slighting of the Old Testament promises concerning the kingdom. Many covenant premillennialists are also posttribulationalists, and that seems to be a logical accompaniment of the nondispensational approach.[38] At any rate, being a premillennialist does not necessarily make one a dispensationalist. (However, the reverse is true -- being a dispensationalist makes one a premillennialist.)

What, then, is the sine qua non of dispensationalism? The answer is threefold.

1 A dispensationalist keeps Israel and the church distinct . This is stated in different ways by both friends and foes of dispensationalism. Fuller says that "the basic premise of Dispensationalism is two purposes God expressed in the formation of two peoples who maintain their distinction throughout eternity"[39] A. C. Gaebelein stated it in terms of the difference between the Jews, the Gentiles, and the church of God.[40] Chafer summarized it as follows:

The dispensationalist believes that throughout the ages God is pursuing two distinct purposes: one related to the earth with earthly people and earthly objectives involved which is Judaism; while the other is related to heaven with heavenly people and heavenly objectives involved, which is Christianity ... Over against this, the partial dispensationalist, though dimly observing a few obvious distinctions, bases his interpretation on the supposition that God is doing but one thing, namely the general separation of the good from the bad, and, in spite of all the confusion this limited theory creates, contends that the earthly people merge into the heavenly people; that the earthly program must be given a spiritual interpretation or disregarded altogether.[41]

This is probably the most basic theological test of whether or not a person is a dispensationalist, and it is undoubtedly the most practical and conclusive. The one who fails to distinguish Israel and the church consistently will inevitably not hold to dispensational distinctions; and one who does will.[42]

Though God's purpose for Israel and God's purpose for the church receive the most attention in Scripture, God has purposes for other groups as well. He has a purpose and plan for the angels, which in no way mixes with His purposes for Israel or the church (2 Peter 2:4; Rev. 4:11). He has a purpose for those who reject Him, which also is distinct from other purposes (Prov. 16:4). He has a plan for the nations, which continues into the New Jerusalem (Rev. 22:2), and those nations are distinct from the bride of Christ. God has more than two purposes even though He reveals more about His purposes for Israel and His purpose for the church than He does about the other groups.

Progressive dispensationalists seem to be blurring this distinction by saying that the concept is not in the same class as what is conveyed by the concepts of Gentiles, Israel, and Jews. What this means is not completely clear. (See the more complete discussion in chapter 9.) However, it does seem to imply that the classic Israel/church distinction is less clear.

2 This distinction between Israel and the church is born out of a system of hermeneutics that is usually called literal interpretation. Therefore, the second aspect of the sine qua non of dispensationalism is the matter of historical-grammatical hermeneutics. The word literal is perhaps not as good as either the word normal or plain, but in any case it is interpretation that does not spiritualize or allegorize as nondispensational interpretation often does. The spiritualizing may be practiced to a lesser or greater degree, but its presence in a system of interpretation is indicative of a nondispensational approach.[43]

Consistently literal, or plain, interpretation indicates a dispensational approach to the interpretation of Scripture. And it is this very consistency -- the strength of dispensational interpretation -- that seems to irk the nondispensationalist and becomes the object of his ridicule.[44] To be sure, literal/historical/grammatical interpretation is not the sole possession or practice of dispensationalists, but the consistent use of it in all areas of biblical interpretation is.. This does not preclude or exclude correct understanding of types, illustrations, apocalypses, and other genres within the basic framework of literal interpretation.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

3 A third aspect of the sine qua non of dispensationalism is a rather technical matter that will be discussed more fully later (see chapter 5). It concerns the underlying purpose of God in the world . The covenant theologian, in practice, believes this purpose to be salvation (although covenant theologians strongly emphasize the glory of God in their theology), and the dispensationalist says the purpose is broader than that; namely the glory of God . Progressives have a Christological center, apparently to undergird their emphasis on the Davidic covenant and on Christ as the already reigning Davidic ruler in heaven.

To the normative dispensationalist, the soteriological, or saving, program of God is not the only program but one of the means God is using in the total program of glorifying Himself. Scripture is not man-centered as though salvation were the main theme, but it is God-centered because His glory is the center. The Bible itself clearly teaches that salvation, important and wonderful as it is, is not an end in itself but is rather a means to the end of glorifying God (Eph.. 1:6, 12, 14). John F. Walvoord, Chafer's successor at Dallas Theological Seminary, puts it this way: "The larger purpose of God is the manifestation of His own glory To this end each dispensation, each successive revelation of God's plan for the ages, His dealing with the non-elect as with the elect . . . combine to manifest divine glory."[45] In another place he says:

All the events of the created world are designed to manifest the glory of God. The error of covenant theologians is that they combine all the many facets of divine purpose in the one objective of the fulfillment of the covenant of grace. From a logical standpoint, this is the reductive error -- the use of one aspect of the whole as the determining element.[46]

The essence of dispensationalism, then, is the distinction between Israel and the church. This grows out of the dispensationalist's consistent employment of normal or plain or historical-grammatical interpretation, and it reflects an understanding of the basic purpose of God in all His dealings with mankind as that of glorifying Himself through salvation and other purposes as well.

Ryrie, Dispensationalism, 1995, p.44

THE DISPENSATIONS

Name	Scripture	Responsibilities	Judgment(s)
Innocency	Genesis 1:3-3:6	Keep Garden Do not eat one fruit Fill, subdue earth Fellowship with God	Curses, and physical and spiritual death
Conscience	Genesis 3:7-8:14	Do good	Flood
Civil Government	Genesis 8:15-11:9	Fill earth Capital punishment	Forced scattering by confusion of languages
Patriarchal Rule	Genesis 11:10-Exodus 18:27	Stay in Promised Land Believe and obey God	Egyptian bondage and wilderness wanderings
Mosaic Law	Exodus 19:1-John 14:30	Keep the law Walk with God	Captivities
Grace	Acts 2:1-Revelation 19:21	Believe on Christ Walk with Christ	Death Loss of rewards
Millennium	Revelation 20:1-15	Believe and obey Christ and His government	Death Great White Throne Judgment

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Disappointment of Dispensationalism (from a Preterist perspective)
https://www.andrewcorbett.net/articles/theology/the-disappointment-of-dispensationalism/

See also*: Ephesians 1:10 – Dispensation

For charts and comparison with Covenant Theology…

See also: Two Major Theological Systems: Covenant vs Dispensational Theology

Three Schools of Theology – Dispensational, Covenant and New Covenant

Progressive Dispensationalism

History of Dispensationalism

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Dispensationalism

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Progressive Dispensationalism

What is Progressive Dispensationalism?
http://www.gotquestions.org/progressive-dispensationalism.html

http://www.theologicalstudies.org/resource-library/dispensationalism/421-what-is-dispensationalism

Problems with Progressive Dispensationalism http://www.pre-trib.org/articles/view/problems-with-progressive-dispensationalism

Progressive Dispensationalism: an Interview with Darrell Bock http://mydigitalseminary.com/progressive-dispensationalism-darrell-bock/

Excerpt:

How important should eschatology be to the Christian? What encouragement would you give to someone who sees eschatology as unimportant?

If you are saved then it is important, as salvation is about eschatology. Eschatology is about far more than what is going to happen in the future. It is about God's program to save starting in the present and rooted in past promises. How can it not be important then?

What's Progressive Dispensationalism? (at LifeCoach4God / Vertical Living Ministries)
https://verticallivingministries.com/2013/11/25/whats-progressive-dispensationalism/

What is Progressive Dispensationalism? (by Thomas Ice / Pre-Trib Research Center)
http://www.pre-trib.org/data/pdf/Ice-WhatIsProgressiveDis.pdf [PDF]

Theopedia: Progressive Dispensationalism
http://www.theopedia.com/progressive-dispensationalism

Classical vs Progressive Dispensationalism http://biblereasons.com/classical-vs-progressive-dispensationalism/

Dispensation, Israel and Scripture (Part 3., Preparing for Progressives) http://www.reformed-theology.org/ice/newslet/dit/dit08.97.htm

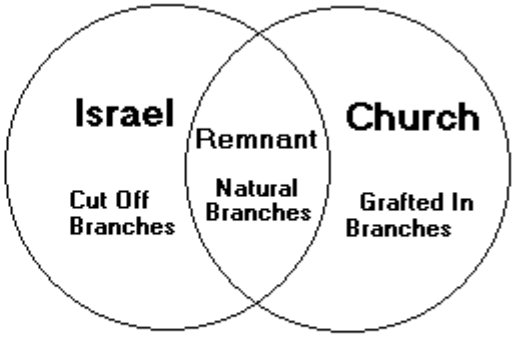
Fact Sheet: Progressive Dispensationalism
https://www.scribd.com/document/39402996/Fact-Sheet-Progressive-Dispensationalism

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Progressive Dispensationalism 101 – The Basics



http://www.pfrs.org/pd/001.html

Excerpt:

Progressive dispensationalism maintains the distinction between Israel and the Church, not by segregating them into two separate "peoples of God." But, by nationality, and recognizing that one group is merely a nation, and the other a spiritual entity. Israel is a nation made up of believers and unbelievers. The Church is a spiritual organism made up of the remnant of Jewish believers and the remnant of Gentile believers. Consequently, we have three entities - the Jews, the Gentiles, and the Church of God - the Church having members from both groups. The Jewish Millennial inheritance will be realized by the Jewish members of the Church. And the general promises of inheritance will be realized by the whole Church.

Traditional Dispensationalism

Progressive Dispensationalism

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

A Comparison of Classic Dispensationalism, Covenant Theology, and Progressive Dispensationalism

http://www.oocities.org/jeremyandrobin/systemsoftheology.htm

Let's summarize the basic tenets of each system showing the discontinuities between the three systems in chart form.

	Classic Dispensationalism	Progressive Dispensationalism	Covenant Theology
Hermeneutics	Consistent Literal	Literal + Complementary	Literal + Allegorical
Unifying Principle	Glory of God	The kingdom of God	The Two Covenants
Israel and the Church	Israel and Church Distinct	Israel and Church blurred	Church replaced Israel
God's Ultimate Purpose	Doxological	Christological / Soteriological	Soteriological
Davidic Kingdom	Future (earthly)	Present-Future (heaven-earth)	Present (heavenly)
Progressive Revelation	Consistent Recognition	Identify with complementary hermeneutic	Disregard and read NT into OT
Typical Dispensational Scheme	Innocency	Patriarchal	Old Testament Conscience
	Human Government		Covenant with Noah
	Promise or Patriarchal		Covenant with Abraham
	Law or Moses	Mosaic	The Sinaitic Covenant
	Grace or Christ	Ecclesial	New Testament
	Kingdom	Zionic: Millennium
		Zionic: Eternal State
Champions	Ryrie, Scofield, Chafer, Pentecost, Sauer	Blaising, Bock, Saucy, Gundry, Barker, Martin	Berkhof, Charles Hodge, A.A. Hodge, O. T. Allis

See also: Two Major Theological Systems: Covenant vs Dispensational Theology

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

When Progressive Is Not Progress

https://docriggs.com/2012/09/04/when-progressive-is-not-progress/

CLASSICAL DISPENSATIONALISM	PROGRESSIVE DISPENSATIONALISM	REFORMED COVENANTALISM
Scofield defined dispensation as "a period of time during which man is tested in respect of obedience to some specific revelation of the will of God." Traditional dispensationalism believes history can be broken up into usually 7 or 8 dispensations. They claim commitment to a literal interpretation of prophetic scripture and uniformly believe: 1) Distinction between prophecies of Israel in OT and the church in the NT. 2) They are premillennialists believing in a 1,000 year reign of Christ on earth. 3) Pre-tribulation rapture of the church. Two-stage return of Christ.	This revision of classical dispensationalism came about in 1980s. They part with the classicists by focusing on: 1) The "already" and the "not-yet" tension in eschatological promise. Christ for example has started His heavenly reign at the resurrection but not completely fulfilled until His return. Israel's geo-political promises not yet realized. 2) Church is not a parenthesis but like the Jews in the OT form a part of the one people of God. And yet Israel is quite distinct from the church. 3) The new covenant is being partly fulfilled by the church. 4) OT promises of Gentiles worshiping God is partly now being realized. They still agree with the classicists in that Israel will be restored, Christ's millennial return and pre-tribulation rapture.	The reformed people focus on the two covenants (Old and New or the covenant of works and grace). They see God's work through the ages as a gradual unveiling of God's great plan. In this case they see no essential difference between the believing Jews and Gentiles. God is not working with them as a distinct people any more. There are of course modifications with this perspective as in dispensationalism.

Although the Foundations for Freedom charts are instructive, you'll note that this chart shows that the Progressives hold, as a group, to the pre-tribulation Rapture. That varies based on individual beliefs but overall the writings from most Progressives simply do not put much emphasis on its importance no matter when it happens. This creates problems when literally developing the message of Revelation for the Church in heaven during the tribulation on earth.

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Progressive Dispensationalism: What is it?

http://www.endtimes.org/progressive_dispensationalism.html

Excerpt:

Summary of PD Positions

1. One plan of salvation: There is only one plan of redemption, not one for Israel and a different one for Christians. There is only one New Covenant, not two. The redemptive plan is revealed through God's covenants. It begins with Abraham's covenant, which combines physical and spiritual promises. David's covenant, as developed by the later prophets also has redemptive application, since the Savior would be the Son of David. The New Covenant obtains redemption in fulfillment of the Abrahamic and Davidic. The redemptive plan is holistic, not manifold.

2. Four dispensations: There are four dispensations:

- Patriarchal
- Mosaic
- Ecclesial (Church)
- Zionic (subdivided into millennial and eternal-kingdom phases.)

3. One people of God: The Christian Church is quite distinct from Israel, but not radically distinct. The Church is not a mere "parenthesis" in an otherwise-Jewish divine plan. The Church is not "Plan B". It is not a separate category of humanity, in the way the Bible speaks of Jews or Greeks. There is continuity between the Church and Israel, not discontinuity alone. All believers from all dispensations are united in one general assembly in heaven (Hebrews 12.)

4. Complimentary hermeneutics: The old claim that a consistent grammatical-historical method of interpretation will always produce traditional dispensationalists is demonstrably untrue. The NT doesn't follow Charles Ryrie's definition of "consistent literalism" in the way that it handles OT prophecy. The NT often expands upon the OT prophecies, without contradicting their original contexts. Implications are developed from words which were not developed in the OT. PD calls this a "complementary" hermeneutic: The NT adds onto the OT prophecies in a way complementary to their original context.

5. Already/Not Yet: The Kingdom of God's blessings are mostly reserved for Christ's second advent, but parts of it are manifested today through the Holy Spirit. The geo-political aspects will occur in the future. The Church is grafted into some key aspects of the New Covenant (justification, the gift of the Spirit, resurrection hope), but the geo-political features for Israel have not yet happened.

6. Davidic Reign Now: Christ's Davidic reign began in part when He ascended to the right hand of the Father. Some of the Davidic promises have been fulfilled, many others must wait until Christ returns. Salvation blessings are mediated to us through Jesus, who fulfilled Psalm 110:1-2. "Christ" and "Son of God" were both Davidic titles. Jesus' priesthood is that of Melchizedek, an office originally given to David. Jesus' Davidic kingship was the method by which God would fulfill all of His promises to Abraham (Luke 1:55)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Fact Sheet – Progressive Dispensationalism (MS Doc file) by David Dunlap

http://www.wheatlandbiblechapel.org/SiteData/wheatlandbiblechapel/Fact-Sheet_Prog-Dispensation-1.doc Definition: Progressive Dispensationalism teaches that there are four dispensations in Biblical history (Patriarchal, Mosaical, Ecclesial, and Zionic) in place of seven in traditional dispensationalism. Progressives set forth a unique and unorthodox method of interpreting the Bible. Progressive Dispensationalists reject the use of the historical-grammatic method— a literal form of Bible interpretation. They put forth what they call a "complementary hermeneutic". They suggest that the New Testament makes complementary changes to Old Testament promises, without setting aside those original promises. This method of interpretation appears to be a merging together of the literal method (dispensational) and the spiritualizing method (Covenant Theology). The application of this type of interpretation has led to a de-emphasis on the rapture and the differences between Israel and the church and other essential features of Dispensationalism.

Proponent: Professor Darrell L. Bock (Progressive Dispensationalism), of Dallas Theological Seminary; Craig A. Blaising (Dispensationalism, Israel and the Church), of Southern Baptist Theological Seminary; and Robert Saucy (The Case for Progressive Dispensationalism), of Talbot Theological Seminary, CA. Many professors in the Theology Department at Dallas Seminary, TX .

History: Progressive Dispensationalism began on November 20, 1986 in the Dispensational Study Group, in connection with the annual meeting of the Evangelical Theological Society in Atlanta, GA. Since its beginning, some observers have issued warnings concerning it. Respected Dispensationalist Thomas Ice warns, "No one can doubt that some are proposing radical changes within the dispensational camp. The question that arises relates to the nature and virtue of the change...I believe that these men are in the process of destroying dispensationalism"(Biblical Perspectives, Nov./Dec. 1992). Candid statements by the new president of Dallas Theological Seminary, Chuck Swindoll, have cast light on the accuracy of this suspicion. In an interview with Christianity Today, when asked about Traditional Dispensationalism at Dallas Theological Seminary, Swindoll replied, "I think that dispensations is a scare word. I'm not sure we're going to make dispensationalism a part of our marquee as we talk about our school." When asked whether the term dispensationalism would disappear, he replied, "It may and perhaps it should"(Christianity Today, Oct. 25, 1993).

Heaven is a fulfillment of the Davidic covenant of 2 Samuel 7:14. However, Progressives have further muddied the waters by teaching that Christ's millennial rule is present and is yet future at the same time. They use Acts 2:29-33, which speaks of the two thrones of Christ ; the throne of Heaven and the throne of David, an earthly throne. Progressives, have taught that these two thrones reflect two aspects of the millennial rule of Christ. They do not acknowledge careful distinctions between these two thrones of God.

Support Against: Scripture teaches clearly of a throne of God in Heaven. "The Lord is in His holy temple; the Lord's throne is in heaven"(Ps. 11:4). In contrast to this, the throne of David, Scripture teaches, is future, earthly, and literal. The careful distinction between these thrones is made in Rev. 3:21, "He who overcomes, I will(future) grant to sit down with Me on My throne(earthly), as I overcame and sat down (present) with My Father on His throne(heavenly)." Blurring these distinctions will lead to confusion concerning promises made to Israel and promises made to the Church. This confusion will greatly determine our convictions on the Lord's return, the tribulation period, and the Christian's relationship to the Mosaic law. Although Progressive Dispensationalists have ardently set forth this paradoxical "already but not yet" view, many do not see it clearly supported by Scripture. This has led the former president of Dallas Theological Seminary, John Walvoord, to write, "Progressive Dispensationalism, as it is called, is built upon a foundation of sand and is lacking specific proof" (Issues in Dispensationalism, edited by Willis and Masters, p. 90).

Many have noticed that this view moves Progressive Dispensationalism closer to Covenant Theology than to Dispensationalism (B. Waltke, Dispensationalism, Israel, and the Church, p. 348). This view forces its proponents to de-emphasize many fundamental features of Dispensationalism, including the pre-tribulational rapture of the church. What does this all mean for the future? Will other leading features of Dispensationalism fall, in favor of current theological trends? Will Progressive Dispensationalism progress even further towards classical Covenant Theology? All of this has led Dr. Walter A. Elwell, of Trinity Theological Seminary, in a book review of Progressive Dispensationalism, to surmise, "The newer dispensationalism looks so much like non-dispensational pre-millennialism that one struggles to see any real difference"(C. T., 9/12, 1994, p. 28).

May we labor to rightly divide the Word of Truth, especially as we see Progressive Dispensationalism spreading from the seminary classroom to the Christian bookstore, and then down to the local church, moving ever closer toward Covenant Theology.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Progressive Dispensationalism Compared to New Covenant Theology
(2-page Chart prepared by
http://ptstn.org/NCT%20Compared%20PDT%20-%20v.1.1%20.pdf [PDF]

(Click on above images to download a full-sized version as PDF)

See additional comparison charts in the following…

Two Major Theological Systems: Covenant vs Dispensational Theology

See also*: Three Schools of Theology – Dispensational, Covenant and New Covenant

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

New Covenant Theology

See New Covenant Theology resources at Providence Theological Institute

NCT Comparison Charts: (NCT = New Covenant Theology, CT = Covenant Theology)

NCT Compared to COVENANT THEOLOGY (CT) Open PDF
Note: CT WCF Federalism vs CT 1689 Federalism vs New Covenant Theology

NCT Compared to DISPENSATIONAL THEOLOGY (DT) Open PDF
Note: Classic Dispensationalism vs Progressive Dispensationalism vs New Covenant Theology

NCT Compared to WESTMINSTER FEDERALISM (CT) Open PDF

NCT Compared to 1689 FEDERALISM (CT) Open PDF

WESTMINSTER Compared to 1689 FEDERALISM (CT) Open PDF

NCT Compared to CLASSIC DISPENSATIONALISM (DT) Open PDF

NCT Compared to PROGRESSIVE DISPENSATIONALISM Open PDF

CLASSIC DT Compared to PROGRESSIVE DT Open PDF

Covenant Theology as Seen by the NCT
Part One: http://evangelica.de/articles/covenant-theology-as-seen-by-the-nct-part-one/
Part Two: http://evangelica.de/articles/covenant-theology-as-seen-by-new-covenant-theology-part-two/

A Brief Explanation of "New Covenant Theology" http://www.revearljackson.com/uploads/3/2/2/5/322557/a_brief_explanation_of_new_covenant_theology.pdf [PDF]

https://d3pi8hptl0qhh4.cloudfront.net/documents/tschreiner/review_WellsZaspel.pdf [PDF]

http://ids.org/what-is-new-covenant-theology/

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

New Covenant Theology
https://www.tms.edu/m/tmsj18f.pdf [PDF]

Alt: http://docplayer.net/3367182-Introduction-to-new-covenant-theology.html

http://www.redmoonrising.com/newexodus/nctbook.pdf [PDF]

http://breacenterchurch.org/pages/beliefs/new-covenant-theology.php

New Covenant Theology Compared with Covenantalism
https://www.tms.edu/m/tmsj18i.pdf

Theopedia: http://www.theopedia.com/new-covenant-theology

A Comparison of Three Systems:
Dispensationalism - Covenant Theology - New Covenant Theology
http://www.angelfire.com/ca/DeafPreterist/compare.html

Covenant Theology vs New Covenant Theology [PDF]
http://www.trinitybaptistreformed.org/files/Download/Covenant%20Theology%20Versus%20New%20Covenant%20Theology.pdf
(Note: Also goes into detail about celebrating the Sabbath)

See also*: New Calvinism

Three Schools of Theology – Dispensational, Covenant and New Covenant

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Federalism / Federal Theology (see also Covenant Theology)

What Is Federal Theology or Calvinism? A Short History
https://growrag.wordpress.com/2010/01/27/what-is-federal-theology-or-calvinism-a-short-history/

What is Federal Theology?
http://evangelicalcalvinist.blogspot.com/2012/06/what-is-federal-theology.html

John Owen and Federal Theology
http://johnowen.org/media/griffiths_owen_federal_theology.pdf [PDF]

Federal Theology
https://www.studylight.org/encyclopedias/mse/f/federal-theology.html

Why Torrance Objects To 'Westminster Calvinism' https://solabible.wordpress.com/category/federal-theology/

A Brief History of Covenant Theology - R. Scott Clark
http://spindleworks.com/library/CR/clark.htm

See also*: Federal Vision Theology

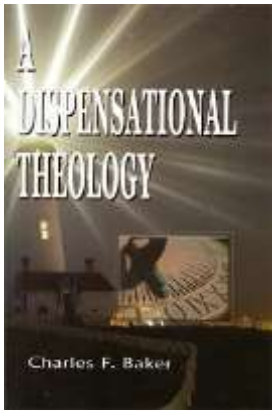
Three Schools of Theology – DIspensational, Covenant and New Covenant View

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

THREE SCHOOLS OF THEOLOGY — Dispensational, Covenant, & New Covenant Views



There are three main theological camps on the issues of law, gospel, and the structuring of God's redemptive relationship with humankind: dispensational, covenant theology, and new covenant theology. Here we outline the differences between these three views, giving an overview of each.

I. The Dispensational View

It's hard to summarize dispensational theology, because recently multiple forms have developed. In general, there are three main distinctives.

1. Dispensations--eras

First, the dispensational view sees God as structuring His relationship with mankind through several stages of revelation which mark off different periods of history, eras, "dispensations," or stewardship arrangements. Each dispensation is a "test" of mankind to be faithful to the particular revelation given at the time. Generally, seven dispensations are distinguished:

- Innocence (before the fall),
- Conscience (Adam to Noah),
- Government (Noah to Babel),
- Promise (Abraham to Moses),
- Law (Moses to Christ),
- Grace (Pentecost to the Rapture),
- Kingdom the 1,000-year millennium.

2. Literal Interpretation

Second, the dispensational view holds to a literal interpretation of Scripture. So, the millennium is viewed as a 1,000-year period during which Christ reigns on the earth. (Versus being a figure of deceased believers "reigning" with Christ now). This does not deny the existence of figures of speech and non-literal language in the Bible, but rather means that there is a literal meaning behind the figurative passages.

3. Israel & the Church Distinct

Third, as a result of this literal interpretation of Scripture, the dispensational view holds to a distinction between Israel (even believing Israel) and the church. On this view, the promises made to Israel in the OT were not intended as prophecies about what God would do spiritually for the church, but will literally be fulfilled by Israel itself (largely in the millennium). For example, the promise of the land is interpreted to mean that God will one day fully restore Israel to Palestine. In contrast, non-dispensationalists typically see the land promise as intended by

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

God to prophesy, in shadowy Old-covenant-form, the greater reality that He would one day make the entire church, Jews and Gentiles, heirs of the whole renewed world (cf. Rom. 4:13).

God's Two Peoples

In many ways it is thus accurate to say that the dispensational view believes in "two peoples of God." …Israel will be the recipient of additional "earthly" promises (such as prosperity in the specific land of Palestine, to be fully realized in the millennium) that do not apply to believing Gentiles, whose primary inheritance is thus "heavenly."

II. Covenant Theology

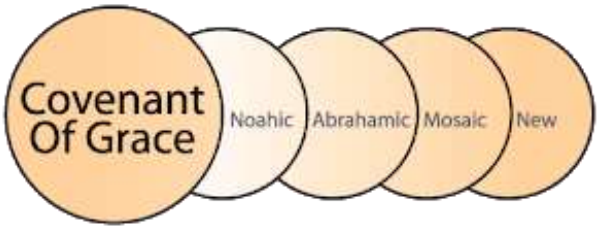
Covenant theology believes that God has structured his relationship with humanity by covenants rather than dispensations. For example, in Scripture we explicitly read of various covenants functioning as the major stages in redemptive history, such as the covenant with Abraham, the giving of the law (Moses), the covenant with David, and the new covenant. These post-fall covenants are not new tests of man's faithfulness to each new stage of revelation (as are the dispensations in the dispensational view), but are rather differing administrations of the single, overarching covenant of grace. In the Covenant view, this "over-arching covenant of grace" begins with Genesis chapter three and continues, including God's covenants with Noah, Abraham, Moses, David, etc.

Two Covenants—Works & Grace

The covenant of grace is one of two fundamental covenants in covenant theology. It structures God's post-fall relationship to mankind; pre-fall, God structured His relationship by the covenant of works. The covenant of grace is best understood in relation to the covenant of works.

Covenant of Works with Adam

The covenant of works, instituted in the Garden of Eden, was the promise that perfect obedience would be rewarded with eternal life. Adam was created sinless but with the capability of falling into sin. Covenant theology holds that had Adam remained faithful in the time of temptation in the Garden (during the "probationary period"), he would have been made incapable of sinning and secured in an eternal and unbreakable right standing with God.



Covenant of Grace after Adam's Fall

But Adam sinned and broke the Covenant of Works, and thereby subjected himself and all his descendants to the penalty for covenant-breaking--condemnation. God in His mercy therefore instituted the "covenant of grace," which is the promise of redemption and eternal life to those who would believe in the (coming) redeemer. The requirement of perfect obedience for eternal life is not annulled by the covenant of grace, but is rather fulfilled by Christ on behalf of His people, since now that all are sinners no one can meet the condition of perfect obedience by his own performance. The covenant of grace, then, does not set aside the covenant of works but rather fulfills it. It is fulfilled by Christ as our substitute. Notice that the Covenant view sees this over-arching Covenant of Grace as applying not merely during the "Age of Grace" (Pentecost to the Rapture). Rather it encompasses every era from Genesis three forwards. So the "Age of the Law" (from Moses to Christ) falls within the "Covenant of Grace," according to this view.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Covenant of Grace includes other Covenants

Covenant theology emphasizes that there is only one covenant of grace, and that all of the various redemptive covenants (Abraham, Moses, David, etc) in the Scripture are simply differing administrations of this one covenant. It holds that a covenant is in essence simply a sovereignly- given promise (usually with stipulations), and since there is only one promise of salvation (namely, by grace through faith), it follows that there's only one covenant of grace. All of the specific redemptive covenants (with Abraham, Moses, David, etc.) are various expressions of the over-arching covenant of grace.

One People of God

Since Covenant Theology holds that the over-arching Covenant of Grace covers all the eras from Genesis three forwards, it leaves little distinction between the Patriarchs (Abraham, Isaac, etc), Israel and the Church. Hence all who respond to God's grace by faith in Christ's (promised or accomplished) redemption belong to God's redeemed people. There is one people of God composed of both Old and New Testament believers. God's promises of physical and material blessings to Israel are translated into spiritual blessings to the Church.

III. New Covenant Theology

So-called "New Covenant Theology" is a modified form of the view just described. New covenant theology typically does not hold to a covenant of works or one over-arching covenant of grace (they still argue for only one way of salvation). The key difference between New Covenant Theology (NCT) and Covenant Theology (CT), however, concerns the Mosaic Law.

Covenant View of Moses' Law

Covenant Theology holds that the Mosaic Law can be divided into three groups of laws--those regulating the government of the nation of Israel (civil laws), ceremonial laws, and moral laws. The ceremonial law (e.g. diet) and civil law (e.g. the role of Israel's king) are no longer in force because the former was fulfilled in Christ and the latter only applied to Israel's theocracy, which is now defunct. But the moral law continues.

New Covenant View--Moses' Law Cancelled

New Covenant Theology argues that one cannot divide the law up in that way, as though part of the Mosaic Law can be abrogated while the rest remains in force. The Mosaic Law is a unity, they say, and so if part of it is canceled, all of it must be canceled. They also say that the New Testament clearly teaches that the Mosaic Law as a whole is superseded in Christ. It is, in other words, no longer our direct and immediate source of guidance. The Mosaic Law, as a law, is no longer binding on the believer.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Under the Law of Christ

Does this mean that believers are not bound by any divine law? No, because the Mosaic Law has been replaced by the law of Christ. New Covenant Theology makes a distinction between the eternal moral law of God and the code in which God expresses that law to us. The Mosaic Law is an expression of God's eternal moral law as a particular code which also contains positive regulations pertinent to the code's particular purpose in that era, and therefore the cancellation of the Mosaic Law does not mean that God's eternal moral law is itself canceled. Rather, upon canceling the Mosaic Law, God gave us a different expression of his eternal moral law--namely, the Law of Christ, consisting in the moral instructions of Christ's teaching and the New Testament.

Look to Moses or Christ?

The key issue that New Covenant Theology seeks to raise is: Where do we look to see the expression of God's eternal moral law today--do we look to Moses, or to Christ? New Covenant Theology says we look to Christ.

There are many similarities between the Law of Christ and Mosaic Law, but that does not change the fact that the Mosaic Law has been canceled and therefore, we are not to look to it for direct guidance but rather to the New Testament. For e.g., England and the US have many similar laws (e.g., murder is illegal in both countries). Nonetheless, the English are not under US laws, but of England. If an English citizen murders in England, he is held accountable for breaking England's law against murder, not the US law against murder.

New Covenant Theology advocates argue it solves the difficulty of trying to figure out which of the Mosaic laws apply to us today. On their view, since the Mosaic Law is no longer a direct and immediate source of guidance, we look to the Law of Christ for our direct guidance. Although the Mosaic Law is no longer a binding law code in the New Testament era, it still has the authority, not of law, but of prophetic witness. As such, it fills out and explains certain concepts in both the old and new covenant law.

Edited from What does John Piper believe about dispensationalism, covenant theology, & new covenant theology? Jan. 23, 2006, Matt Perlman, www.desiringgod.org

See also*: Two Major Theological Systems: Covenant vs Dispensational Theology

New Covenant Theology

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Confessional Baptist Covenant Theology

Covenant Theology (Baptist): 1689 Federalism vs Westminster Confession of Faith Federalism

http://www.1689federalism.com/portfolio/comparison-westminster/

See also charts:
1689 Federalism vs Dispensationalism, New Covenant Theology, 20th Century Reformed Baptists http://www.1689federalism.com/

Clarification on the Label: "1689 Federalism" (Forum)
https://www.puritanboard.com/threads/clarification-on-the-label-1689-federalism.93257/

DISCLAIMER Recapitulation: This (preceding) section was included to help explain the variation in end-time beliefs you will encounter in your independent readings. While these concepts are interesting and important to understand, they are NOT basic salvation effecting doctrines.

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Federal Vision Theology

Wikipedia: Federal Vision
https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Federal_Vision

Excerpts:

The Federal Vision (also called Auburn Avenue Theology) is a Reformed Evangelical theological conversation that focuses on covenant theology, Trinitarian thinking, the sacraments of Baptism and Communion, biblical theology and typology, justification, and postmillennialism.

A controversy arose in Calvinist, Reformed, and Presbyterian circles in response to views expressed at a 2002 conference entitled "The Federal Vision: An Examination of Reformed Covenantalism." The ongoing controversy involves several Reformed denominations including the Orthodox Presbyterian Church (OPC), the Presbyterian Church in America (PCA), the United Reformed Churches in North America (URCNA), and the Reformed Presbyterian Church in the United States (RPCUS), and the Protestant Reformed Churches in America (PRCA).

Influences

Proponents of Federal Vision theology view themselves as influenced by the Protestant Reformers, especially those responsible for drawing up the Westminster Confession.

They argue that the influences of their theology are not limited to the work of pre-Great Awakening writers, however. They find precedent for their beliefs through the Awakenings and up to the present day.

See above Wikipedia article for more details.

What is Federal Vision Theology?
https://www.gotquestions.org/federal-vision-theology.html

Federal Vision Theology – What is it?
https://www.compellingtruth.org/Federal-Vision-Theology.html

Federal Vision
https://heidelblog.net/category/federal-vision/

Federal Vision (Resources)
http://www.federal-vision.com/

Understanding the "Federal Vision" http://opc.org/nh.html?article_id=478

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Could you tell us very briefly what are: (1) The New Perspective of Paul; and (2) The Federal Vision? (2017)

http://www.pilgrim-covenant.com/ntagq/false-teaching/what-are-1-the-new-perspective-of-paul-and-2-the-federal-vision

The New Perspective of Paul, which was initiated by EP Sanders and sustained by James DG Dunn and NT Wright, promotes the idea that the apostle Paul did not teach the doctrine of justification by grace through faith alone as taught in all the Reformed Confessions. Rather, Paul was supposed to have taught that grace is experienced through corporate divine election, and one retains the title to the blessing associated with being in the corporate body through some sort of non-meritorious obedience or works of law keeping. In this thinking, one is justified when he is a faithful member of the church and obedient in law-keeping; but ceases to be justified if he leaves the church or ceases to do good works. In classic Reformed thinking, faith is the sole instrument of justification in time. Works is not a condition for justification; but one who has no good works or ceases to do good works simply exhibits spurious faith, and therefore was never justified in the first place.

The Federal Vision movement, which shares some similarities with the New Perspective people, could be said to have been sown by Norman G. Shepherd of the Westminster Seminary in 1975, but promoted by Douglas Wilson, John Barach, Steve Wilkins, and Steve Schlissel during the Auburn Avenue Presbyterian Church (PCA) pastor's conference in 2002. The key idea in Federal Vision, simply stated, is that there is no such thing as the invisible church (contra WCF 25.1). Every baptised member in the visible church is elect, regenerated and justified; and no one outside the visible church is any of these. Therefore, there is really no meaningful distinction between church visible and church invisible. The problem with this view is manifold. In the first place, what should we do with professing believers in such apostatising or apostate churches such as Charismatic and Roman Catholic Churches? Are they true believers or do we start dogmatically to declare which is a true church and which is not? In the second place, what shall we say of those who left the church? Did they lose their salvation, and become unelect and unjustified? In the third place, what do we do with members of the church who are secretly antinomian? Do we encourage them by saying that they are already in Christ, but they must now do good works if they are to be justified finally?

While we appreciate the emphasis on the visible church, which is much neglected today, we must say that the Federal Vision as a whole have largely gone off-balance in the other extreme. The Reformed Church traditionally holds to a distinction between the church visible and invisible. Baptised members are to be spoken to charitably and with divine warrant as Christians having all the benefits of the covenant. However, there must be a constant call to repentance and warning that not everyone in the church is elect, regenerated and justified. As the Lord warns us, in the visible Church, there will be wheat and tare, sheep and goats, good and bad fishes, wise and foolish virgins etc. At the last day, many will call Him "Lord, Lord" who will be disowned by the Lord as lawless false professors of faith. We can have no confidence, as such, to speak of members of apostising churches as Christians; but neither do we deny that there can be true believers in such churches, though we believe that such as are elect will by the providence of the Lord eventually be led to seek Him in a true branch of Christ's church.

A few good books to consult on the subject are: O. Palmer Robertson, The Current Justification Controversy (Trinity Foundations 2003); Brian Schwertley, Auburn Avenue Theology: A Biblical Analysis; R. Scott Clark, editor; Covenant, Justification & Pastoral Ministry (P&R 2007); Guy Prentiss Waters, The Federal Vision & Covenant Theology: A Comparative Analysis (P&R 2006); Guy Prentiss Waters, Justification & The New Perspective on Paul (P&R 2004). W

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Federal Vision vs the Reformed Faith (2017)

Federal Vision Vs Reformed Faith

By Brian Schwertley

Federal Vision Doctrine	The Reformed Faith
Covenant is relationship which is rooted in the relationship between the persons of the ontological trinity.	Covenant is an agreement. The covenant of grace is rooted in the covenant of redemption (pactum salutis).
Before the fall Adam was under a covenant of grace.	Before the fall Adam was under a covenant of works.
After the fall God requires a partial obedience to His law in order to be justified. This partial obedience is fulfilled by faithful Christians and results in final justification.	After the fall God requires a perfect and perpetual obedience to His law in thought, word and deed in order to be justified. This perfect and perpetual obedience is fulfilled by Jesus Christ and is imputed to believing sinners.
Jesus' sinless life is only an example of faithfulness for His people to follow.	Our Lord's sinless life is not only an example but is also a fulfillment of the covenant of works that is necessary if a believing sinner is to be declared righteous before God.
Christians are justified by faith and faithfulness (i.e. perseverance in personal obedience).	Christians are justified by faith alone apart from the works of the law.
Faith and obedience are necessary to obtain final justification. Faith is introspective. It is divided between Christ and the believer's faithfulness. Obedience is a co-instrument of justification.	Faith is the sole instrument which lays hold of Christ and His accomplished redemption. Faith is extraspective. Obedience is a fruit of justification.
Faith and obedience are the same thing. Faith is complex and includes the fruits of faith.	Obedience flows from true faith and is distinguishable from it. Faith is simple.
Good works or covenantal faithfulness has an important role to play in a believer's final justification.	The good works of believers are tainted with sin, are non-meritorious and only demonstrate the reality of saving faith.
Paul's condemnation of the works of the law in relation to justification concerns only the ceremonial laws or Jewish identity markers which exclude Gentiles from the covenant.	Paul's condemnation of the works of the law in relation to justification refers to the whole law: ceremonial and moral. The traditional Protestant law/gospel antithesis stands.
Justification refers only to the pardon of sins and not the imputation of Jesus' active [or preceptive] obedience. Pardon is supplemented by covenant faithfulness which results in final justification.	Justification involves the imputation of the believing sinner's guilt and liability of punishment to Christ on the cross and our Lord's perfect righteousness to the believer. The good works or covenant faithfulness of the Christian has nothing to do with justification.

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

If a person does not continue in obedience the justification received when baptized is removed and the apostate person loses his salvation.	Because a Christian's justification is achieved solely by Christ it can never be lost. People who apostatize never had saving faith and were never justified to begin with (1 Jn. 2:19; Mt. 7:23).
Sanctification if faithfully continued leads to final justification. The process which leads to justification is synergistic.	The moment a person is justified, the life-long process of sanctification begins. The justification of sinners is monergistic.
The covenant of grace includes conditions. One condition is faithful obedience or good works. The personal righteousness, obedience or good works of believers has salvific "value" (i.e. merit) before God.	The covenant of grace has only one condition which is faith. This faith is a gift. It is instrumental and non-meritorious. It merely grasps the person and work of Christ.
Since faith and obedience are the same thing and we receive glorified life in the same manner as Adam before the fall, the covenant of grace is a watered down covenant of works (i.e. a partial obedience is now required for final justification).	The covenant of grace is radically different from the covenant of works because Christ the second Adam fulfills the terms of the covenant in our place. People who are under the guilt and power of sin cannot achieve or even contribute to their own justification.

Does the Westminster Confession really explain anything?

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=_sX5CZt0org [Video] (Soteriology101.com)

Dr. Leighton Flowers has a guest on the program today, Dr. Johnathan Pritchett, Vice President of Academic Affairs for Trinity Seminary, to discuss an article written by a Calvinist over the Westminster Confession's statement on God's sovereignty and man's responsibility.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Trichotomy (Tripartite), Dichotomy (Dipartite) or Monism?

i.e, Body, Soul and Spirit; or Body and Soul(Spirit); or Union as One (inseparable)

Looking at many of the different views of the fundamental part(s) of a person, and differentiating from classical Greek perspectives.

Trichotomy or Dichotomy?

Hebrew Mind vs. Greek Mind

The Nature of Man

Trichotomy vs. dichotomy of man—which view is correct?

The Origin of the Soul (Sproul)

Christoplatonism [PDF] (Randy Alcorn) [Video]

Body and Soul – Greek and Hebraic Tensions in Scripture

Greek vs Hebrew View of Man (Ladd)

Eastern Orthodox Mind/Body (re: Unity)

1,2,3…How Many Parts Can Man Be?

Thought on the Tripartite Theory of Human Nature [PDF]

Reformed Basics on Trichotomy and Dichotomy (Berkhof)

Body, Soul, and Spirit: Monism, Dichotomy, or Trichotomy?

Restoring the Soul to Christianity

Man = Body + Soul + Spirit? (re: Conditional Unity)

Trichotomy – Beachhead for Gnostic Influences

Nature of Man (Hodge)

The Essential Nature of Man [PDF]

Heart, Mind, Soul and Spirit - Christian Forum

The Nature of Man: Body, Soul and Spirit (Trichotomy) (Chp. 1, Shearer)

Spirit, Soul and Body – How God Designed Us

Body, Soul, Spirit [Basics]

Forum: Body, Soul, Spirit

Body-Soul-Spirit (Ecclesia)

Body and Soul vs. Body, Soul, and Spirit (Catholic)

Spirit, Soul and Body – Mind, Will and Emotions [PDF]

Humans Have Thee Parts – Body, Soul and Spirit

What Happened at Creation?

The Difference Between Spirit, Soul and Body

Spirit, Soul and Body (Nee)

Spirit, Soul and Body (Ch.10, Smith) [e.g. Charts]

Man a Trinity (Body, Soul, Spirit)

Man as Body, Soul and Spirit

The Nature of Man [Audio] (Rushdoony)

Greek vs Hebrew Terms [Video] (Missler)

Body, Mind and Spirit – 1 [Video] (Womack)

Body, Mind and Spirit – 2 [Video] (Womack)

Body, Soul, Spirit Revelation [Video] (Brandt)

Terms Explained (Various Links) [Videos]

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

N.T. Wright - Mind, Spirit, Soul and Body: All for One and One for All http://ntwrightpage.com/2016/07/12/mind-spirit-soul-and-body/

Responding to N.T. Wright's Rejection of the Soul (Downloadable as PDF)
https://www.academia.edu/1966881/Responding_to_N._T._Wrights_Rejection_of_the_Soul

The Immortal Soul: Christian Doctrine or Gnostic Heresy? (as per NT Wright)
http://atthethreshold.org/2012/09/13/the-immortal-soul-christian-doctrine-or-gnostic-heresy/

Does Religion Originate in the Brain?
http://www.equip.org/article/does-religion-originate-in-the-brain/

Excerpt:

…Linguist George Lakoff and philosopher Mark Johnson boldly proclaim that a major discovery of cognitive science is that the mechanism for spirituality is neurally driven (bodily) and that mind (or soul) is "inherently embodied," being incapable of independent existence.[32] Philosopher Owen Flanagan claims that the "desouling" of personhood is "the primary operation of the scientific image [or enterprise]."[33]

Naturalism assumes that humans are physical beings in a closed physical system. One such perspective (eliminative or reductive materialism) eliminates the mind (or soul) altogether. Another soul-denying view (property* dualism) claims that the human body is a substance with two key characteristics—the physical and the mental. Self-consciousness and other mental capacities emerged from ("supervened upon") a sufficiently complex brain and nervous system in the evolutionary process. The mental, though not reducible to the purely physical, can exist only because of the physical; once the body dies, the mind ("soul") is extinguished as well. (Incidentally, more and more Christian philosophers and theologians—with theological modifications—are adopting this materialistic understanding of human personhood.)[34]

Orthodox Christianity traditionally has held to another view (substance* dualism). In this view, humans are comprised of both physical body and nonphysical soul, and the soul gives humans their continued identity even though the body may perish (e.g., during the intermediate state). Body and soul are distinct but deeply interactive, organically integrated substances—physical and nonphysical. My soul (my self or I)—not my body—gives me my personal identity. I am not my body; rather, I have a body. I am my soul, which organically belongs to a body suited to it.[35] Scripture strongly supports such a view: Jesus tells the dying criminal, whose body would soon perish, "Today you will be with me in paradise" (Luke 23:43); to be "absent from the body" is to be "present with the Lord"—despite a temporary less-than-ideal state of "nakedness" away from the body (2 Cor. 5:8); people can kill the body, not the soul—though God can destroy both (Matt. 10:28; Luke 12:4–5); Paul's third-heaven experience may have been "in the body" or "apart from" it (2 Cor. 12:2–3; cp. Rev. 6:9–10). N. T. Wright's survey of the relevant literature supports substance dualism and the intermediate state as a thoroughly biblical perspective of "life after life after death"[36] (i.e., the believer's death on earth is followed by disembodied life or soul in the intermediate state, which later becomes an embodied life—with a physical resurrection body—in the new heavens and earth). For Jew and Greek alike, death meant the soul's separation from the body.[37] Note that "the immortality of the soul" comes from Greek philosophy, not biblical theology. Even though humans can't kill the soul (Mt. 10:28), the soul is not inherently immortal; its existence is graciously sustained by God until it receives a resurrection body suited to it. As 1 Corinthians 15 indicates, "immortality" refers to a renewed physical body, resurrected by the Spirit ("spiritual")—not an everlasting soul…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

See also: Dualism (various forms) as well as Monism

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Arguments for the Existence of the Soul

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

History of Trichotomy

Most Biblical scholars in the early church saw man as a threefold (trichotomous) being. Even as late as Augustine (A.D. 354-430), the common view was that man was trichotomous - that he possessed a body, a soul, and a spirit. The words of Augustine substantiate this fact very plainly when he wrote in Faith and Creed:

> "... there are three things of which man consists - namely spirit, soul, and body ..." [Faith and the Creed (XX:23)].

But as Latin Theology (i.e., Roman Catholicism) began to take hold, most theologians abandoned trichotomy and began to see man as simply a two-fold being of soul and body (with spirit being just another name for the soul). This idea, known as dichotomy, continued as the majority opinion down through the centuries and still is the common view held by the Roman Catholic Church and most of the Protestant churches that came out of the Reformation (i.e., the Dutch Reformed, the Lutheran, the Episcopalian, the Presbyterian, etc.) - all of which, interestingly enough, hold to a post-millennial approach to eschatology [i.e., that the church must take control of the world before Christ can return (more about this later)]. It is interesting to note in this connection, however, that Martin Luther, the father (so to speak) of the Reformation, championed the view that man was trichotomous.

The Plymouth Brethern

It wasn't until the rise of evangelicalism in the 1800s [and most especially, the Plymouth Brethren, the group which is looked upon by most church historians as the parent body out from which evangelicalism sprang] and John Nelson Darby that trichotomy once again revived - and it's worth noting in this connection that along with a revived view of man as a trichotomous being, pre-millennialism also revived. Darby's teachings were popularized and gained wide acceptance and public acclaim in conservative church bodies throughout most of the 20th century. But with the rise of the modern ecumenical movement - i.e., the political movement of Protestant and Catholic bodies together to "take the nation back for Christ and the church" - post-millennialism (which "politicizing" promotes) resurfaced along with dichotomy - which post-millennialism of necessity encourages.

http://www.antipasministries.com/newantipaspapers/chapter1.htm

During the intertestamental period, two factors shaped and "enlarged the semantic domain of the Greek and Hebrew words for the parts of man" and set the stage for a more complete and accurate understanding of the nature of man. The first factor was Greek philosophy. The Greek philosophers, unlike the Greek poets, clearly distinguished the material from the immaterial part of man, defined the functions of the soul in more precise terms, and in general expanded the vocabulary for the parts of man. The second factor was the translation of the Septuagint. The translators of the Septuagint incorporated the linguistic developments of the Greek philosophers into the biblical revelation when they translated the Hebrew into Greek.

Good explains:

> Although the classical Greek writers did not arrive at the same realization as the New Testament writers, their use of certain key words in Greek gave the New Testament writers a greater and more precise vocabulary to work with in describing the parts of man. After Plato and Aristotle, there was a richer array of words to describe the inward parts of man, particularly the mind (e.g., nous, noëma, di-anoia, and phronëma).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Dichotomists often argue against the tripartite view of man by discrediting it through its apparent connection with Platonism. However, Plato and the Greek philosophers, strictly speaking, were dichotomists.[Plato did divide man into three parts, but his trichotomy was different from Paul's trichotomy in essence, function, and primacy. Plato's divisions were a tripartite division of the soul (See Plato's tripartite theory of soul). He conceived of man's soul as consisting of an appetitive, irascible (spirited), and rational element. In Timaeus 30 he also divided man into nous (mind), psychë (soul), and söma (body), with nous being the noblest part of the soul. When Plato does speak of spirit (thumos not the pneuma of Paul) he means something essentially different from Paul.

The three parts of man are not equivalent for Plato and Paul and the master faculty for Plato (nous) is a subordinate faculty for Paul. "To discredit trichotomy by a similarity with Platonism confuses similarity with source.

One could likewise attribute the source of the dichotomist view with Greek dichotomy (mater and spirit); some writers have argued for such a connection."

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Tripartite_%28theology%29#Intertestamental_Period

…Those who believe that human nature is a trichotomy typically believe the following: the physical body is what connects us with the physical world around us, the soul is the essence of our being, and the spirit is what connects us with God. This is why the unsaved can be said to be spiritually dead (Ephesians 2:1; Colossians 2:13), while they are very much physically and “soulishly” alive. Those who believe that human nature is a dichotomy would have the same understanding of the body but would view the spirit as the part of the soul that connects with God. So, the question of dichotomy vs. trichotomy is essentially whether the soul and spirit are different aspects of the immaterial human nature, or if the spirit is simply a part of the soul, with the soul being the whole immaterial part of the human nature.

Trichotomy vs. dichotomy of man—which view is correct? It would seem that it is unwise to be dogmatic. Both theories are biblically plausible. Neither interpretation is heretical. This is perhaps an issue we are unable to fully grasp with our finite human minds. What we can be certain of is that the human nature is comprised of a body, a soul, and a spirit. Whether the soul and spirit are one, or are somehow distinct, is not an issue God chose to make abundantly clear in His Word. Whether you believe in a dichotomy or trichotomy, offer your body as a living sacrifice (Romans 12:1), thank God for saving your soul (1 Peter 1:9), and worship God in spirit and truth (John 4:23–24).

https://www.gotquestions.org/trichotomy-dichotomy.html

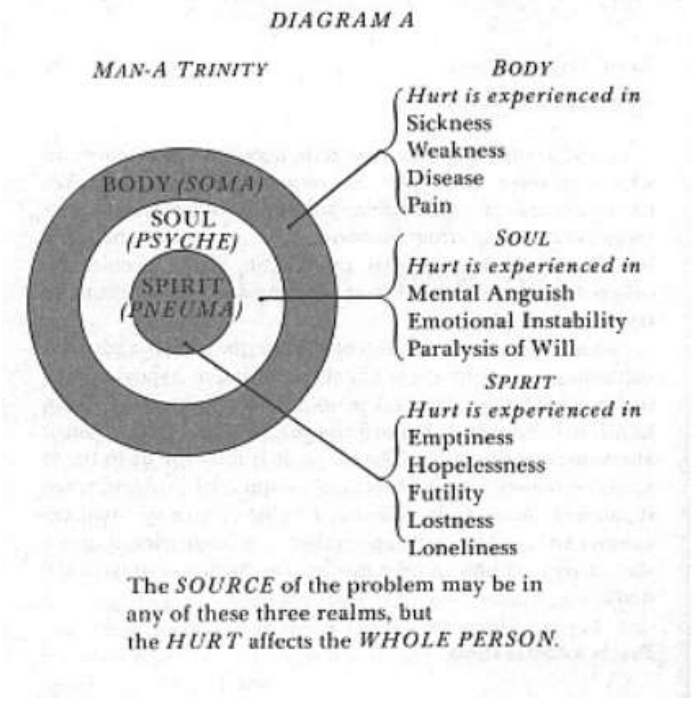
 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Many have taken the concept of the 3-part person view and applied it variously to health and counseling, for example…

http://www.faithandhealthconnection.org/the_connection/spirit-soul-and-body/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

DIAGRAM A



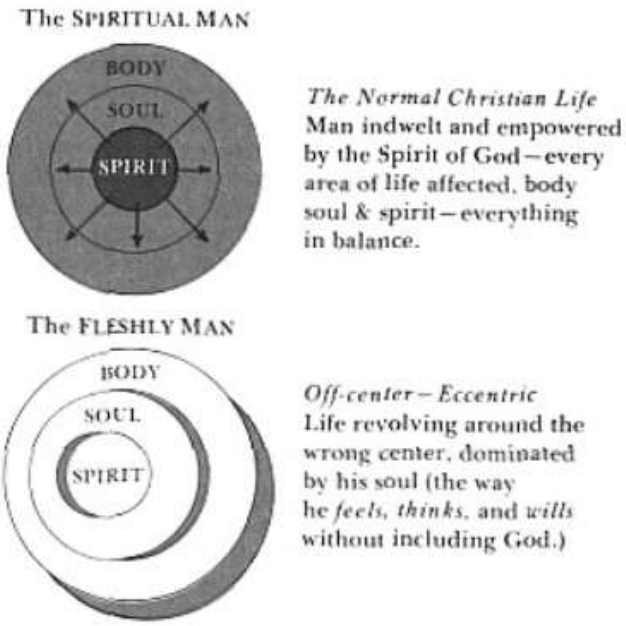


DIAGRAM B

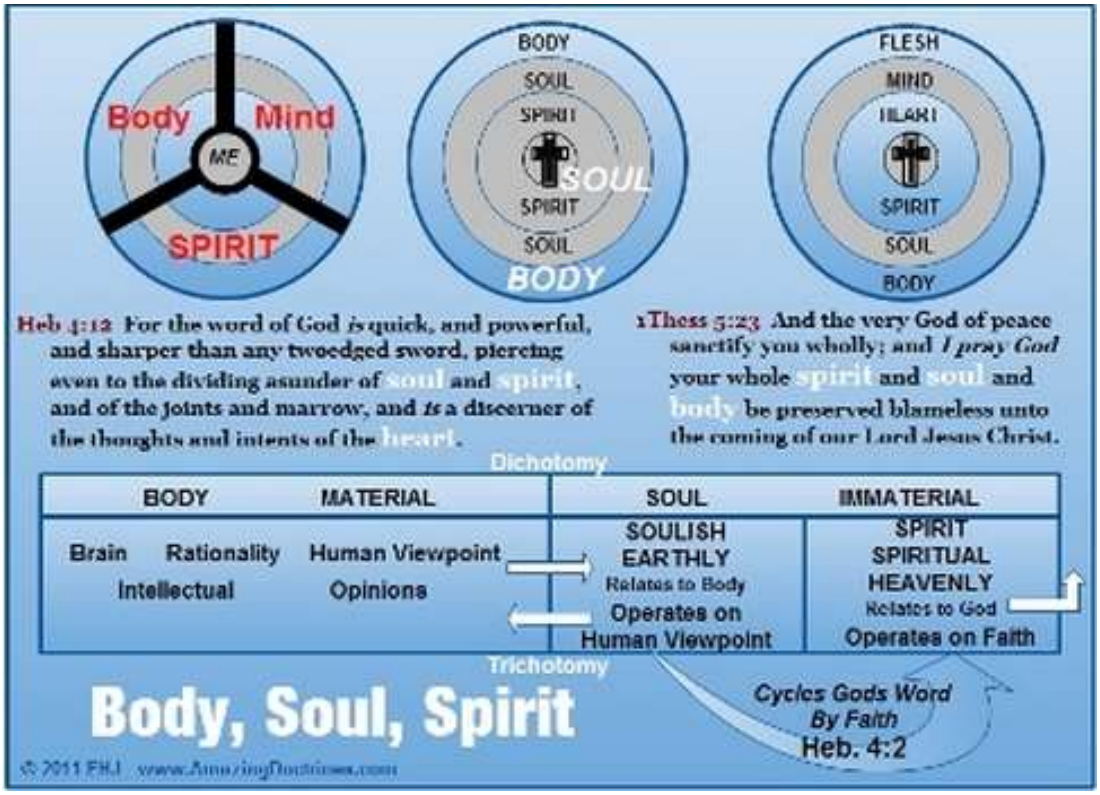
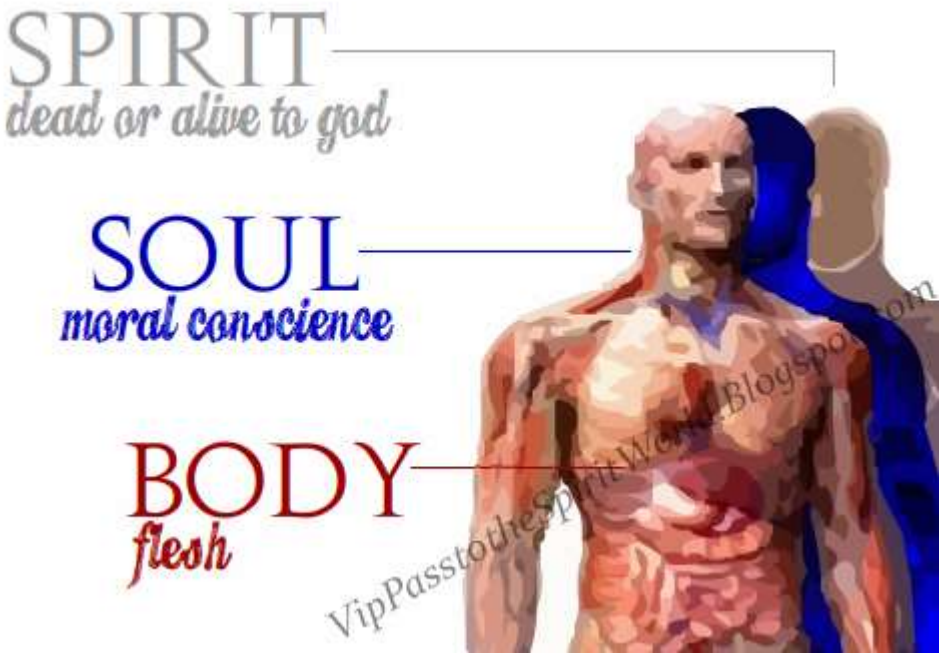
https://www.raystedman.org/leadership/smith/dyingtolive/ch10.html



From: Dying to Live by Bob Smith
https://www.raystedman.org/leadership/smith/dyingtolive/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



http://www.internetdiscipleship.com/cdn7/ediscipleship/Display_lesson.asp?D=/courses/C103/&T=2&L=1

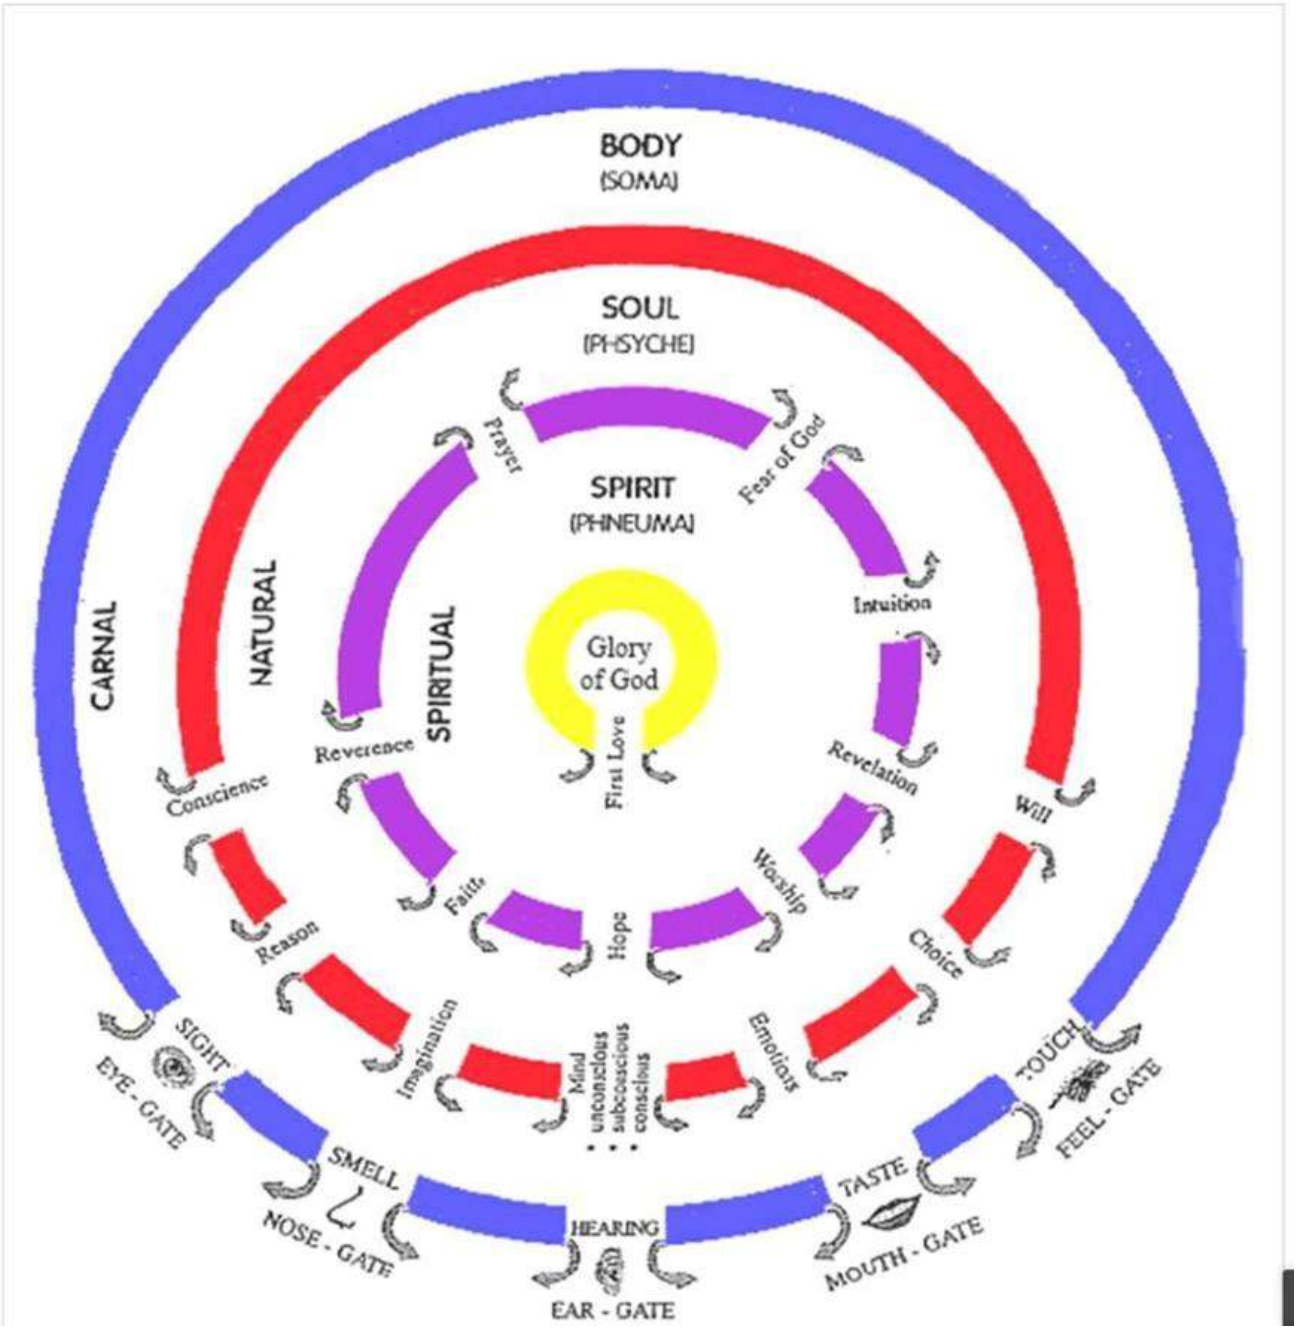
 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

http://q.likesuccess.com/88/4355546-spirit-soul-body-bible.jpg

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

http://www.ccsng.com/uploads/4/8/8/8/4888077/6472003_orig.jpg

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



Body	Soul	Spirit
❑Reason: to interact with the physical world ❑Relationship: Sensual (Eros) ❑Reaction: fight or flight ❑Refinement: touch, smell, feel, hear, and sight, physical health ❑Result: wants to fulfill the desire of the senses	❑Reason: to interact with the other souls ❑Relationship: Emotional (Phileo) ❑Reaction: reason or imagine ❑Refinement: ideas, beliefs, feelings, attitudes, demeanors, mental health, personality ❑Result: wants to connect to others and feel a belonging	❑Reason: to interact with the God ❑Relationship: Worship (Agape) ❑Reaction: faith or conviction ❑Refinement: dreams, hopes, discernment, purpose, born again (spiritual health) ❑Result: wants to do the right things

http://ideasoftimbible.blogspot.com/2015/05/87-sharper-than-any-two-edged-sword.html

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Heart, Mind, Soul and Spirit - Christian Forum - additional examples showing 'Gates'…

Gates

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

NOTE: For issues related to Heaven and life after death, as well as covering related topics and including different perspectives (including N.T. Wright) - see my separate "Reference Notes on Heaven" (based in part on the book, Heaven, by Randy Alcorn)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Treasure Principle

George Verwer [founder of Operation Mobilisation (OM)] and Randy Alcorn Speak on the Treasure Principle [Video]

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=3Zqa1H8QMIs

[Note: Includes fascinating background of George and start of OM, also Lazarus/Beggar video by Randy introducing his graphic novel, Eternity]

The Treasure Principle: Randy Alcorn Speaking at A Jesus Church [Video]

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=nWTbGSwTo4M

Stephen King, Warren Buffet, Bill Gates and Angelina Jolie: What Unbelievers Are Discovering About Giving

http://www.epm.org/blog/2009/Mar/3/stephen-king-warren-buffet-bill-gates-and-angelina

Randy Alcorn answering question: What Are the Six Treasure Principles in Your Book?
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=J7gxx_mu72w\\

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

You can't take it with you, but... you can send it on ahead.
"Store up for yourselves treasures in Heaven."
Jesus, Matthew 6:20

The 6 Treasure Principle keys:

God owns everything; I'm His money manager.

We are the managers of the assets God has entrusted–not given–to us.

My heart always goes where I put God's money.

Watch what happens when you reallocate your money from temporal things to eternal things.

Heaven–the New Earth, not the present one–is my home.

We are citizens of "a better country–a heavenly one". (Hebrews 11:16)

I should live today not for the dot, but for the line.

From the dot–our present life on earth–extends a line that goes on forever, which is eternity in Heaven.

Giving is the only antidote to Materialism.

Giving is a joyful surrender to a greater person and a greater agenda. It dethrones me and exalts Him.

God prospers me not to raise my standard of living, but to raise my standard of giving.

God gives us more money than we need so we can give–generously.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Ecclesiastes 5:10-15 on money and happiness

paraphrases by Randy Alcorn

"Whoever loves money never has money enough."

The more you have, the more you want.

"Whoever loves wealth is never satisfied with his income."

The more you have, the less you're satisfied.

"As goods increase, so do those who consume them."

The more you have, the more people (including the government) come after it.

"And what benefit are they to the owner except to feast his eyes on them?"

The more you have, the more you realize it doesn't meet your real needs.

"The sleep of a laborer is sweet, whether he eats little or much, but the abundance of a rich man permits him no sleep."

The more you have, the more you have to worry about.

"I have seen a grievous evil under the sun: wealth hoarded to the harm of its owner."

The more you have, the more you can hurt yourself by holding onto it.

"…or wealth lost through some misfortune."

The more you have, the more you have to lose.

"Naked a man comes from his mother's womb, and as he comes, so he departs. He takes nothing from his labor that he can carry in his hand."

The more you have, the more you have to leave behind.

Source: http://www.epm.org/resources/2010/Mar/16/six-principles-treasure-principle/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Small Group Discussion Guide:

https://spenceshelton.files.wordpress.com/2009/01/the-treasure-principle-discussion-guide.pdf

A Summary of Book (with comments pro/con):

http://andynaselli.com/you-cant-take-it-with-you-but-you-can-send-it-on-ahead

Small Group Bible Study on Eternal Rewards

http://www.free-bible-study.org/free-bible-study-on-blessings-lesson-3.html

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Deism

Wikipedia: Deism

Deism (/ˈdiːˌɪzəm/ DEE-iz-əm] or /ˈdeɪˌɪzəm/ DAY-iz-əm; derived from Latin "deus" meaning "god") is a philosophical position that posits that a god does not interfere directly with the world. It also rejects revelation as a source of religious knowledge and asserts that reason and observation of the natural world are sufficient to determine the existence of a single creator of the universe.

Deism gained prominence among intellectuals during the Age of Enlightenment, especially in Britain, France, Germany, and the United States. Typically, these had been raised as Christians and believed in one God, but they had become disenchanted with organized religion and orthodox teachings such as the Trinity, Biblical inerrancy, and the supernatural interpretation of events, such as miracles. Included in those influenced by its ideas were leaders of the American and French Revolutions.

Today, deism is considered to exist in the classical and modern forms, where the classical view takes what is called a "cold" approach by asserting the non-intervention of deity in the natural behavior of the created universe, while the modern deist formulation can be either "warm" (citing an involved deity) or "cold" (citing an uninvolved deity). These lead to many subdivisions of modern deism, which tends, therefore, to serve as an overall category of belief…

Theopedia: Deism

http://www.theopedia.com/deism

Deism is the belief that God has created the universe but remains apart from it and permits his creation to administer itself through natural laws. Deism thus rejects the supernatural aspects of religion, such as belief in revelation in the Bible, and stresses the importance of ethical conduct. In the eighteenth century, numerous important thinkers held deist beliefs.

Deism became prominent in the 17th and 18th centuries during the Age of Enlightenment, especially in the United Kingdom. Deism spread to France, notably via the work of Voltaire, to Germany, and to America.

Deism versus Theism

Prior to the 17th century the terms ["Deism" and "Deist"] were used interchangeably with the terms "theism" and "theist", respectively. . . Theologians and philosophers of the seventeenth century began to give a different signification to the words.... Both [theists and Deists] asserted belief in one supreme God, the Creator.... and agreed that God is personal and distinct from the world. But the theist taught that God remained actively interested in and operative in the world which he had made, whereas the Deist maintained that God endowed the world at creation with self-sustaining and self-acting powers and then abandoned it to the operation of these powers acting as second causes.

The theory of Pandeism was later developed in an effort to reconcile the conceits of Pantheism with Deism.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Deism Site
http://www.deism.com/index.html

Deism is the recognition of a universal creative force greater than that demonstrated by mankind, supported by personal observation of laws and designs in nature and the universe, perpetuated and validated by the innate ability of human reason coupled with the rejection of claims made by individuals and organized religions of having received special divine revelation. (For an outstanding article on the definition of Deism click here.)

N.T. Wright on Evolution, Deism, Separation of Church & State, & Heaven on Earth http://www.patheos.com/blogs/thepangeablog/2012/04/29/n-t-wright-on-evolution-deism-church-and-state/

Links to video: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=_yPCTnGMRFM [Video]

N.T. Wright | On Worldview (2017)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=2u-f2qmYr1s [Video]

See also: 3 Ways Arminians are Calvinists, Deists or Open Theists (for chart)

Theism

Worldviews

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Theism

Theopedia: Theism

http://www.theopedia.com/theism

Theism affirms both the existence of a transcendent God and one that is involved in Creation. Or, according to Webster's dictionary, it is "belief in the existence of one God viewed as the creative source of the human race and the world who transcends yet is immanent in the world."

Theism may be most readily understood in contrast to:

- Deism - a belief in a God, but one who is not immanent or active in the world.
- Atheism - a belief that there is no God.
- Pantheism - a belief that God is everything and everyone, and consequently, that everyone and everything is God.
- Apatheism - neither belief nor disbelief in a God, considering the issue to be unimportant.

While a strict definition of Theism may not necessarily imply belief in only one God, it is usually associated with Monotheism rather than Polytheism.

Deism versus Theism

Prior to the 17th century the terms ["Deism" and "Deist"] were used interchangeably with the terms "theism" and "theist", respectively. . . Theologians and philosophers of the seventeenth century began to give a different signification to the words.... Both [theists and Deists] asserted belief in one supreme God, the Creator.... and agreed that God is personal and distinct from the world. But the theist taught that God remained actively interested in and operative in the world which he had made, whereas the Deist maintained that God endowed the world at creation with self-sustaining and self-acting powers and then abandoned it to the operation of these powers acting as second causes.

Wikipedia: Theism

Theism is broadly defined as the belief in the existence of a deity or multiple deities. In popular parlance, or when contrasted with deism, the term often describes the classical conception of god(s) that is found in monotheistic and polytheistic religions; a belief in a god or in gods without the rejection of revelation as is characteristic of deism.

Atheism is commonly understood as rejection of theism in the broadest sense of theism, i.e. the rejection of belief in a god or gods. The claim that the existence of any deity is unknown or unknowable is agnosticism.

The term theism derives from the Greek theos meaning "god". The term theism was first used by Ralph Cudworth (1617–1688). In Cudworth's definition, they are "strictly and properly called Theists, who affirm, that a perfectly conscious understanding being, or mind, existing of itself from eternity, was the cause of all other things"

See also: Deism

Worldviews

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Theodicy

What is Theodicy?: Theodicy is a branch of philosophy dealing with the issue of evil in light of the existence of God. If God is just and holy and good, then how do evil and misery exist? That's the question theodicy wrestles with. History's most famous statement of the "problem of evil" comes from the ancient Greek philosopher Epicurus:

> Is God willing to prevent evil, but not able?
> Then he is not omnipotent.
> Is he able, but not willing?
> Then he is malevolent.
> Is he both able and willing?
> Then whence cometh evil?
> Is he neither able nor willing?
> Then why call him God?

Of course, most people have no experience with philosophers. They do, however, watch movies, and a slightly modified version of this idea came from the character of Lex Luthor in a recent action film:

> "If God is all powerful, he cannot be all good. And if he's all good, then he cannot be all powerful."
> – Batman v Superman: Dawn of Justice

The biggest hurdle in discussing theodicy is a tendency to waffle on the definitions of certain words. Or to color certain words with a meaning that is not part of the argument. So, in order to really understand the concept of theodicy, one has to carefully define his terms and then stick to those definitions…

Why Evil if God is Good? Two Approaches but which one is right? (2017)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=6xStGU11FDM&t=753s [Audio]
Dr. Leighton Flowers, plays clips of leading apologists and theologians regarding Theodicy, the problem of evil.

Soteriology101 Podcast: Theodicy: Why Evil if God is Good – Two Approaches http://traffic.cast.plus/57b5ec8fb1e770152ebcd8ae/traffic.libsyn.com/soteriology101/Theodicy_.mp3 [Audio]

50 thoughts on "Theodicy: Two Approaches but which one is right?"
https://soteriology101.wordpress.com/2017/07/27/theodicy-two-approaches-but-which-one-is-right/

See also: Predestination, Election, Chosen, and Related Terms; Calvinism vs Arminianism

Ravi Zacharias - Who is responsible for evil? (2010) https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=xUohtd2hP78 [Audio]

Ravi Zacharias - Born to be good or born to be evil (2010)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Dkp88KxhkG0 [Audio]

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Ravi Zacharias - How could an all-powerful, all-loving God allow evil to exist?
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=NAm8iK8VhV0 [Audio] Ravi on John Ankerber Show (2016)

N.T. Wright on Satan and Evil 3 (2009)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=JhrkB_55qaY [Audio]

Also, regarding the fall of Adam and Eve…

See: Lapsarianism

See also my separate resource*:

Christian Scholarship: Biblical – Theological – Philosophical

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Responding to the Problem of Evil

www.ColdCaseChristianity.com

Moral Evil: Why Would a Good God Allow People to Harm Each Other?
A Loving God would create a world in which love is possible. True love requires humans to have the ability to freely choose; love cannot be forced if it is to be heartfelt and real. A world in which people have the freedom to love and perform great acts of kindness is also, however, a world in which people have the freedom to hate and commit great acts of evil. You cannot have one without the other.

Natural Evil: Why Would a Good God Allow Earthquakes, Tsunamis and Disease?
Some "natural evil" may be the result of necessity. God may tolerate some natural evil because it is the necessary consequence of a free natural process making it possible for freewill creatures to thrive. God may also tolerate some "natural evil" because it is the necessary consequence of human free agency. Humans often rebuild along earthquake fault lines and known hurricane pathways; there are times when "natural" evil is either caused or aggravated by free human choices. In addition, God may permit some "natural evil" because it challenges people to think about Him for the first time. Finally, God may permit some "natural evil" because it provides humans with the motivation and opportunity to develop Godly character. A world such as this requires human beings to cooperate and peacefully co-exist in order to successfully respond to its challenges.

Theistic Evil: Why Would a Good God Behave So Badly in the Old Testament?
If God exists, His relationship to the Creation can be considered by way of analogies. God is the greatest artist; all art belongs to the artisan. He has the right to create and destroy what is His, even when this destruction may seem unfair to the artwork itself. God is also the greatest physician; treatment plans belong to the doctor. He has the wisdom and authority to treat us as He sees fit, even when we might not be able to understand the overarching danger we face if drastic action isn't taken. Finally, God is the greatest Savior. The Christian Worldview describes human existence as eternal. If there is a God, He is certainly more concerned about our eternal existence than He is about our mortal comfort. He is more concerned about saving us for eternity than He is about making our mortal lives safe.

Christian Evil: Why Would a Good God Allow Christians to Behave So Poorly?
History has demonstrated a human predisposition toward violence. Regardless of worldview, humans will try to find a way to justify their evil actions. The question is not which group is more violent but which worldview most authorizes and accommodates this violence. Christians who commit horrific evil toward other humans actually have to act in opposition to the teaching of their Master, Jesus Christ. But in an atheistic worldview (where humans are not specially designed in the image of God), there is little or no reason why any of us should feel compelled to treat other people with the respect that Jesus taught his followers to have for their enemies. Unlike Christians, atheists can commit genocide without ignoring their worldview; atheists have the freedom to eliminate competing groups as a faithful expression of their worldview.

Bodily Evil: Why Would a Good God Allow Pain and Suffering At All?
A good God values character over comfort. Creature comforts are temporary, but character transcends time. Unfortunately, character is often best developed as a result of our temporary pain and suffering. In addition, a transcendent God understands love is the perfect balance between mercy and justice. We could hardly say we loved our children if we didn't care enough about their future to discipline them, and discipline often feels painful. Finally, an eternal God provides humans with an existence beyond the grave. Our desire for happiness, love, mercy and justice need not be satisfied in this life; all these desires can (and will) be satisfied in eternity. God, therefore, may allow some level of pain and suffering because he knows (and has communicated) the fleeting, short nature of our mortal experience.

COLD-CASE CHRISTIANITY:
A Homicide Detective Investigates the Claims of the Gospels

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Dualism

CARM: What is dualism?

https://carm.org/questions-dualism

Dualism designates “two parts” and is the position that the universe consists of two opposing principles--though not limited to only two. There are variations within dualism. Moral dualism would see the opposites of good and evil. Personal dualism (Mind-Body-Dualism) would deal with the human being as consisting of mind and body. There are property dualists (the mind is a property of physical matter) and substance dualists (the mind is a different substance than physical matter) [Cartesian dualism]. Religious dualism is the belief that there are two opposite powers in the universe: good and evil. Some say that this is manifested in the biblical revelation of God versus Satan. A common representation of these opposites is known from the Taoist religion as Yin and Yang.

Dualism is unbiblical since Scripture does not teach that the universe consists of opposites, nor does it affirm that Satan and God are equal and opposing forces. God, according to Scripture, is infinitely greater than Satan and will eventually cast Satan into hell. This could not be done if they were equal and opposing forces.

Wikipedia: Dualism

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Dualism

The dualism between God and Creation has existed as a central belief in multiple historical sects and traditions of Christianity, including Marcionism, Catharism, Paulicianism, and Gnostic Christianity. Christian dualism refers to the belief that God and creation are distinct, but interrelated through an indivisible bond. In sects like the Cathars and the Paulicians, this is a dualism between the material world, created by an evil god, and a moral god. Historians divide Christian dualism into absolute dualism, which held that the good and evil gods were equally powerful, and mitigated dualism, which held that material evil was subordinate to the spiritual good. The belief, by Christian theologians who adhere to a libertarian or compatibilist view of free will, that free will separates humankind from God has also been characterized as a form of dualism. The theologian Leroy Stephens Rouner compares the dualism of Christianity with the dualism that exists in Zoroastrianism and the Samkya tradition of Hinduism. The theological use of the word dualism dates back to 1700, in a book that describes the dualism between good and evil.

The tolerance of dualism ranges widely among the different Christian traditions. As a monotheistic religion, the conflict between dualism and monism has existed in Christianity since its inception. The 1912 Catholic Encyclopedia describes that, in the Catholic Church, "the dualistic hypothesis of an eternal world existing side by side with God was of course rejected" by the thirteenth century, but mind-body dualism was not. The problem of evil is difficult to reconcile with absolute monism, and has prompted some Christian sects to veer towards dualism. Gnostic forms of Christianity were more dualistic, and some Gnostic traditions posited that the Devil was separate from God as an independent deity. The Christian dualists of the Byzantine Empire, the Paulicians, were seen as Manichean heretics by Byzantine theologians. This tradition of Christian dualism, founded by Constantine-Silvanus, argued that the universe was created through evil and separate from a moral God.

The Cathars, a Christian sect in southern France, believed that there was a dualism between two gods, one representing good and the other representing evil. The Roman Catholic Church denounced the Cathars as heretics, and sought to crush the movement in the 13th century. The Albigensian Crusade was initiated by Pope Innocent III in 1208 to remove the Cathars from Languedoc in France, where they were known as Albigesians. The Inquisition, which began in 1233 under Pope Gregory IX, also targeted the Cathars.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Alternatively, in ontological dualism, the world is divided into two overarching categories. The opposition and combination of the universe's two basic principles of yin and yang is a large part of Chinese philosophy, and is an important feature of Taoism. It is also discussed in Confucianism.

Theopedia – Dualism in the Development of Trinitarian Theology

http://www.theopedia.com/development-of-trinitarian-theology

Before the Nicene Creed

Since Christianity is a religion derived from Judaism, it should not be a surprise that from the beginning it has been adamantly monotheistic. The early 2nd century Apologists like Justin Martyr rejected Marcionite and Gnostic dualism wholeheartedly and asserted the oneness of God in strong, almost Platonistic language.

The difficulty present in early Christianity was integrating this strongly monotheistic tradition with the new revelation available in Jesus Christ. Essentially, this new revelation was that God had made Himself known through and in the person of Jesus of Nazareth, the hoped-for Messiah of Israel. This God-Man was clearly described as being divine, yet was presented as a distinct person from God the Father. Christ himself revealed the coming Spirit of God who also possessed divine attributes and too was spoken of as distinct from the Father. These statements of Jesus, along with the teaching of the epistles of Paul and John, presented a unique theological challenge to the early Christians.

By the close of the New Testament era, there were clear statements of Christ's pre-existence and His role in the creation of the world (cf. John 1). From the words of the NT Scriptures alone there were nascent suggestions of Trinitarianism in various liturgical formulations of the early church; for instance, baptisms in the Church were always done in the name of the Father, the Son and the Holy Spirit.

Speaking of Trinitarianism in the ante-Nicene period is somewhat anachronistic, since the word Trinity (Lat. trinitas) was first coined by the Latin father Tertullian in the 2nd century, and the Trinitarian doctrine was not solidified as dogma until the early 4th century. A systematic presentation of the development of Trinitarian theology is best seen in a roughly chronological fashion, from the the Canon of Scripture, through the early church fathers, and the world-defying Athanasius. However, Roger Olson reminds us that "Christian belief in God as triune did not arise in the fourth century with Roman emporer Constantine and the Christian bishops that he dominated. Belief that it arose then as part of a vague paganizing or Hellenizing of Christianity is a caricature often promoted by anti-trinitarian cults and sects" (Roger Olson, The Mosaic of Christian Belief, p. 135)…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

N.T. Wright on Dualism

http://girardianlectionary.net/res/wright_dualism.htm

http://mattstone.blogs.com/christian/2016/08/n-t-wright-on-dualism.html

Excerpt:

Excerpt from N. T. Wright's The New Testament and the People of God, Vol. 1 of the series "Christian Origins and the Question of God" (Minneapolis: Fortress, 1992), pages 252-256.

(iv) Types of Duality

It is often said that some types of Judaism are characterized by 'dualism', or are in danger of falling into it. 'Apocalyptic' is still often spoken of in this way; it is thought to be pessimistic, envisaging the only hope for the world in terms of a coming cosmic catastrophe; to have a distant view of Israel's god which needs to be filled out by the presence of angelic mediators; and to divide the world into two, in the style of the Qumranic 'War of the Sons of Light against the Sons of Darkness' (1QM). Further, it used to be said, and still is in some quarters, that all this shows a derivation from the dualism of ancient Iranian Zoroastrianism.

The problem with this is that the word 'dualism' is used in several quite different senses, by no means always differentiated. Furthermore, the word 'dualism' itself is heavily loaded in some circles, often indicating disapproval; but several of the things which are asserted to be 'dualistic' are perfectly normal features of most if not all biblical theology, and we must make a careful distinction between that which the great majority of Jews accepted as normal and that with which some, exceptionally, flirted. I propose therefore that, to begin with, we refer to 'dualities', rather than 'dualisms', and save the latter term for certain specific dualities. There are at least ten types of duality, as follows.

1. Theological/ontological duality. The postulation of heavenly beings other than the one god, even if these beings exist at his behest and to do his will. This belief is called 'dualism' in some recent scholarship.

2. Theological/cosmological duality. If pantheism is a classic form of monism, the differentiation between the creator god and the created order is often seen as itself a sort of 'dualism'.

3. Moral duality. The positing of a firm distinction between good and evil, e.g. in the realm of human behaviour. Most religions maintain some such distinction, but some forms of pantheism have tried to remove it, not least by labelling it 'dualism' and associating it with other dualisms that are deemed to be unwelcome.

4. Eschatological duality. The distinction between the present age and the age to come, usually reckoning the present age as evil and the age to come as good.

5. Theological/moral duality. Expressed classically in Zoroastrianism and some forms of Gnosticism, this view postulates that there are two ultimate sources of all that is: a good god and a bad god. In 'hard' versions, the two are locked in struggle for ever; in 'soft' versions, the good one will eventually win.

6. Cosmological duality. The classic position of Plato: the world of material things is the secondary copy or shadow of the 'real' world of the Forms, which are perceived by the enlightened mind. In many different versions, this view filtered down as a mainline belief of the Greco-Roman (and the modern Western) world: that which can be observed in the physical world is secondary and shabby compared with that which can be experienced by the mind or spirit. (In some modern versions the order is reversed, putting the material first and the spiritual second.)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

7. Anthropological duality. The human-centred version of cosmological dualism. Humans are bipartite creatures, a combination of body and soul, which are arranged in a hierarchy: soul ahead of body in many religions and philosophies, body ahead of soul in many political agendas.

8. Epistemological duality. The attempt to differentiate sharply between that which can be known by means of human observation and/or reason and that which can be known only through divine revelation.

9. Sectarian duality. The clear division of those who belong to one socio-cultural-religious group from those who belong to another.

10. Psychological duality. Humans have two inclinations, a good one and a bad one; these are locked in combat, and the human must choose the good and resist the evil.

Where did first-century Judaism stand in relation to these bewildering and often-confused types of duality? There are at least four types that are embraced by most Jews of the period, and at least three that are usually rejected, with possibility of debate about the other three.

We have already made it clear that in rejecting pantheism Judaism embraced the distinction between the creator god and the created world (type 2). This reveals itself in the normal biblical language about heaven and earth: heaven is created by the one creator in order to be the location of himself and his entourage, whereas earth is where humans live. This is not, however, to be equated with cosmological duality (type 6), on which see below. It is, further, clear throughout Judaism that a distinction was maintained between good and evil in the realm of human actions: even Josephus, with his strong doctrine of divine providence, clearly thinks that some humans act wickedly (type 3). Many if not most Jewish writings of the period show a belief in angels and other 'supernatural' beings (type 1). Virtually all second-temple Jews, with the possible exception only of the aristocracy, believed that they were living in a 'present age' which was a time of sorrow and exile, and which would be succeeded by an 'age to come' in which wrongs would be righted and Israel's god would set up his kingdom (type 4). If any or all of this deserves to be called 'dualism', then most first-century Jews (and most early Christians) were dualists.

However, I think this would be a confusing conclusion. The word 'dualism' has obtained its primary force in modern discussion from three of the other types, which were emphatically rejected by most Jews of the period. In respect of type 5, we will search for a long time through first-century Jewish literature without finding any evidence of the belief that there is an evil force which is equal in power to the creator god, and when we do find such evidence we are justified in supposing that the majority of Jews would have regarded the idea as outside the limit of legitimate speculation. Type 5 is thus widely rejected. Equally, Philo again provides the exception that proves the rule when it comes to types 6 and 7: Jews in general did not divide the world rigidly into the physical and the noumenal/spiritual, and even Philo himself shows at various points that, even if the 'real meaning' of a passage of scripture, or a Jewish ritual, is to be found in a spiritualized sphere, the material sense and performance are by no means to be despised or neglected. He thus offers a soft version of types 6 and 7; most Jews would have rejected both in favour of a more integrated cosmology and anthropology. Most Jews would have held that heaven and earth, though themselves distinct, both reveal the divine glory; humans, though thoroughly at home in the space-time universe, are also open to the world of heaven, to the presence and influence of the divine. Worship and prayer are not attempts to reach across a void, but the conscious opening of human life to the god-dimension which is ever-present.

The remaining three types are harder. With reference to epistemological duality (type 8), it is clear that many Jews of this period did make a fairly sharp distinction between what can be known by human observation and/or reason and what can only be known by divine revelation. This distinction has a long history, going back (for instance) to the story of Joseph in Genesis 41.14-28. An apocalypse claims to unveil secrets otherwise unknowable; a pesher commentary, the 'true' hidden meaning of a biblical prophecy; a discussion of halakah, that which was given orally by Israel's god to Moses on Mount Sinai; a Philonic allegory, the secret hidden meaning of the text. Even Josephus appears to place considerable value on the ability to foretell the future, an ability which he claimed for himself as well as for others. Yet many Jews, such as Josephus himself, make the attempt to see what Israel's god is doing within the ordinary world of observation, and devise logical rules whereby, with the aid of human reason, truth and holiness can be perceived. We will therefore probably not go far wrong if we postulate a wide spectrum of opinion on type 8. Similarly, sectarian duality (type 9) is obviously embraced by some, notably the Essenes and, to some extent, the Pharisees, and is rejected by those Jews who were in favour of a relaxed attitude towards their pagan neighbours. Finally, psychological duality (type 10) was held by the rabbis, with their doctrine of the two 'inclinations'. But there is little early evidence for it.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

These distinctions between different types of duality, and the analysis I have suggested, is not simply undertaken out of curiosity or for the sake of intellectual tidiness. It is most important in understanding the theological options that lay before first-century Jews, and the close interrelation of those options with the socio-political reality that they faced. It may therefore help if we set out these types of duality in their three columns. Those on the left are more or less normal to all mainline Judaism; those on the right, definitely marginal. Those in the centre are held by some, but not all. It is only those on the right, I propose, that deserve the title 'dualism' proper; only they posit a radical split in the whole of reality.

regularly accepted	possible	marginal
1. theological/ontological		5. theological/moral
2. theological/cosmological		6. cosmological
3. moral		7. anthropological
4. eschatological
	8. epistemological
	9. sectarian
	10. psychological

Notes

1. e.g., recently, Hayman 1991; Sanders 1992, 249f.

2. An example almost at random: Conzelmann 1969, 24; cf. Sanders 1992, 249. Sometimes quoted in this connection is 4 Ezra 7.50: 'the Most High has made not one world but two'. See below, category (9).

3. The fullest brief account I know in relation to our literature is that of Charlesworth 1969, 389 n.1, distinguishing ten types which correspond quite closely with those below, which I worked out independently before coming across his article. Sanders (1992, 523 n.21) says that he has discussed the relation of monotheism and dualism in his forthcoming Anchor Bible Dictionary article on 'Sin/Sinners (NT)'. In his present work he uses 'dualism' in a variety of senses in the same passage.

4. See again Hayman 1991.

5. e.g. Schürer 3.881, referring to Philo.

6. See von Rad 1965, 301ff. This feature is referred to as 'dualism' in e.g. E. Isaac's introduction to 1 En. (in Charlesworth 1983), 9f.

7. cf. Perrin 1983 [1974], 128; Charlesworth 1985, 48 (on Jubilees). It is sometimes said that the Scrolls exemplify this sort of 'dualism': e.g. Schürer 2.589; Urbach 1987, 162f. For a sensitive discussion of this see Charlesworth 1969.

8. For the (standard) use of 'dualism' here; cf. e.g. Urbach 1987, 26, 75, etc.; and cp. Nickelsburg 1984, 216 on I En. 42.

9. The first of these is the classic Gnostic account of anthropology.

10. e.g. C. Burchard in Charlesworth 1985, 190f.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

11. Charlesworth 1969, 389. This may apply in particular to the 'two spirits' doctrine in 1QS (discussed, but rejected, in ibid., 395f.); it certainly applies to the 'two inclinations' doctrine of the rabbis (cf. Schechter 1961 [1909] chs. 15, 16; Urbach 1987 [1975, 1979], 471-83).

12. e.g. the 'two ways' scheme in 1QS.

13. See the discussion in Rowland 1982, 92, with Mart. Isa. 2.4; 4.2 as examples of passages which perhaps go beyond this limit.

14. e.g. de Migr. 89-93, discussed in this context by Borgen 1984, 260f.

15. A good example of this belief in the immediate presence of the god-dimension of reality is 2 Kgs. 6.17.

16. See Segal 1986, 178: 'the issue of monotheism was parallel to the issue of community composition.'

Are You a Dualist? Is that Bad? Just ask N.T. Wright

https://derekzrishmawy.com/2012/11/09/are-you-a-dualist-is-that-bad-just-ask-n-t-wright/

Excerpt:

I was reminded of this little discussion when reading this article by Wright on anthropology, or the theology of humanity, in the Apostle Paul's thought. In it, he offers this helpful summary of his own discussion in NTPG [The New Testament and the People of God, Vol. 1].

So let's run through these types of dualism or duality, beginning with four types that would be comfortably at home within ancient Jewish thought:

1. a heavenly duality: not only God exists, but also angels and perhaps other heavenly beings;
2. a theological or cosmological duality between God and the world, the creator and the creature;
3. a moral duality between good and evil;
4. an eschatological duality between the present age and the age to come.

All of these dualities a first-century Jew would take for granted. But none of them constitutes a dualism in any of the following three senses:

1. a theological or moral dualism in which a good god or gods are ranged, equal and opposite, against a bad god or gods;
2. a cosmological dualism, a la Plato, in which the world of space, time and matter is radically inferior to the noumenal world; this would include, perhaps, dualisms of form and matter, essence and appearance, spiritual and material, and (in a Platonic sense) heavenly/earthly (something like this would be characteristic of Philo);
3. an anthropological dualism which postulates a radical twofoldness of soul and body or spirit and body (this, too, would be familiar in Philo).

Then there are three more which might be possible within ancient Judaism:

1. epistemological duality as between reason and revelation – though this may be problematic, since it's really the epistemological face of the cosmological dualism which I suggest ancient Jews would mostly reject;

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

2. sectarian duality in which the sons of light are ranged against the sons of darkness, as in Qumran;
3. psychological duality in which the good inclination and the evil inclination seem to be locked in perpetual struggle, as in Rabbinic thought.

It's important to know about these different sorts dualisms in order to keep a clear theological head on your shoulders wading into these discussions–which I know you do everyday. But seriously, for Christians wanting to understand reality out of a properly Christian worldview, or theological framework, we have to keep in mind what Wright underlines here:

The radical rejection by most ancient Jews, in particular, of what we find in Plato and in much oriental religion, and the radical embrace of space, time and matter as the good gifts of a good creator God, the place where this God is known and the means by which he is to be worshipped – all this remains foundational, and is firmly restated and underlined in the New Testament. Creational, providential and covenantal monotheism simply leave no room for those four dualisms in the middle. In particular, I argued that such dualisms tend to ontologize evil itself, whereas in first-century Judaism evil is not an essential part of the creation, but is the result of a radical distortion within a basically good created order.

While we might not all agree with his judgments on Plato's dualisms or body and soul, it's important to keep distinct the things that ought to be distinct (God/creation, good/evil, present age/age to come, etc.) while avoiding tearing apart those things that should be kept together. That basic creational framework of a good God who creates a good world that gets distorted by sin is the backdrop of God's redemption of all things in Christ. This is what the ancient gnostics missed when they created a Jesus who was simply a redeemer who saved people's souls from their bodies–in which case, who cares what you do with your body? This is what is absent in pantheistic theologies that drag God into the world, who end up giving us a "compassionate" God that, in the end, is just as trapped in the world's agony as we are, instead of being the distinct, but sovereign redeemer who can fix it. This is what modern Evangelicals sometimes miss with their tendency for evacuating from the world, despising creation, and simply waiting for Jesus to come back and rapture them out of their nicely air-conditioned churches they hide in most of the week.

God freely created the world distinct from himself, he loves it–he's going to save it. He wants his people out in the world, in it, but not of it, proclaiming that good news, and working for it out in the world.

The bottom-line is: if you don't keep your dualisms straight, you might lose the Gospel.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Homiletics Interview: N. T. Wright (2006) [See also: N.T. Wright on Dualism]

https://www.homileticsonline.com/subscriber/interviews/wright.asp

(which includes discussion re: dualism)

Excerpt:

HOMILETICS: One of the things that was going on early on, were varieties of the Gnostic experience. Yet one can make a case that Gnosticism is still alive and well. It seems paradoxical to find strains of Gnosticism — "we know something" — thriving in a postmodern, in many ways, agnostic — "we don't know anything" — world.

WRIGHT: There are all sorts of paradoxes which slosh around as soon as you get into Gnosticism, because there are different types and varieties. It's a very slippery thing. But the constant is the dualism. And within post-modernity the dualism begets this conspiracy theory, or conspiracy quest: What you see isn't actually as real as it may appear and we're going to tell you the story which enables you to get around the back and find out what's really going on. That's very post modern, but it's also very gnostic.

HOMILETICS: But also, what's very postmodern is that there's no meta-narrative and there's no sense of absolutes; questions, no answers. Yet in Gnosticism there is a meta-narrative and knowledge and the acquisition thereof is that toward which we should aspire.

WRIGHT: That's absolutely right and one of the features of postmodernity is that people pick and choose bits of everything, and a lot of people today within postmodernity are given permission to have a bit of this and a bit of that. So at key moral points, for instance, they might actually pick up some of the gnostic rhetoric because it happens to fit with the other things they're going after.

But yes, you're absolutely right. Any serious postmodernist faced with a serious Gnostic would say: "What do you mean a spark of light deep within your self? I can deconstruct that just as well as I can deconstruct anything else!" So there is an uneasy juxtaposition of contemporary Gnosticism and postmodernity, although, in a sense, where they both meet is that both of them sustain empire, or at least, ironically, can't critique empire.

[See also: Worldviews]

HOMILETICS: When you talk about Dan Brown and The Da Vinci Code, clearly that strikes a chord because you can see how Gnosticism is at work in the culture.

WRIGHT: Absolutely.

HOMILETICS: Did you see the movie?

WRIGHT: Oh yes, I did. I did. Pity about all the gratuitous violence. But also, it shows only too clearly what a silly string of conspiracy theories and secrets-to-be-pierced it is, you know. You just run from one to the next, to the next, to the next, and it becomes more and more fanciful. And in the end, what have we discovered? Are we talking about the Holy Grail? Have we found the blood line of Mary Magdalene? What are we talking about? It wasn't clear in the book and it wasn't terribly clear in the film.

HOMILETICS: Speaking of what are you talking about … [laughs] could you explain what you mean when you refer to the "Gnosticism" of the religious right?

WRIGHT: Oh yes! Like all varieties of Gnosticism, it doesn't press all the buttons, but it certainly presses some. The religious right has routinely lived with quite a radical dualism of "this world is not my home, we're just a-passin' through," we got to get to heaven, that's what it's all about. If you believe in heaven and hell, you're a real Christian; if you don't, you're not. They believe in salvation by grace, which is not a Gnostic belief because the Gnostic believes that he or she is a spark of light as they are in the present, and they don't need grace for that, so that's a major disjunction.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

But then, there is this idea that the world is just really so much rubbish, this is just a silly old world, God is going to throw in the trash can. We're going to be raptured up to heaven and then there will be a great Armageddon and the sooner the better.

HOMILETICS: So eschatology is a big part of this?

WRIGHT: Eschatology is a very big part of it.

HOMILETICS: Very popular.

WRIGHT: Very popular, but it's an eschatology of the wrong kind of judgment. It's a judgment of smash, bang, you're finished. As opposed to the judgment you find in the Bible, where, if you read the Psalms, the animals and the trees of the fields are going to clap their hands because Yahweh is coming to judge the world. In other words, Yahweh is coming to sort it out!

HOMILETICS: So when you use the word "judgment," you're reminding us that judgment is really the good news.

WRIGHT: Judgment is part of the good news. Judgment is the other end of the story that begins with the good creation. Then the "putting to right" of creation in the New Creation. That's absolutely critical. It's possible for people to think they're orthodox because they've ticked the right boxes. Creation: Yeah, I'm a creationist. Judgment: Yeah, I believe all those guys are going to get their comeuppance, et cetera. And they tick the right boxes but they mean the wrong things by them.

If you join up those boxes in a more biblical way, you get a strong view of creation, a strong view of judgment as putting creation to rights, and resurrection as where those two things meet in the middle. The resurrection of Jesus is the advance "putting to rights" of the cosmos.

HOMILETICS: Let's go to your latest book. The title is Judas and the Gospel of Jesus.

WRIGHT: Well, we played around with different titles. It could have been called Jesus and the Gospel of Judas. But the publishers pointed out to me that what I was actually doing was hinting at the gospel of Judas, which is what the book is about, of course, but really, when you understand the gospel of Jesus — the genuine gospel of Jesus — this puts the gospel of Judas in its place in the shade, and shows up the posturing of those who would have us believe it's the next greatest thing.

HOMILETICS: And yet it is being proclaimed as the latest great thing. Why do we jump over this sort of thing?

WRIGHT: That's the question I am trying to answer in the book. That's really why I read the gospel of Judas. When I first saw this gospel of Judas I thought, "Oh, another of these gospels" — just like the gospel of Thomas and all the rest, with slight variations but not particularly interesting. But then I was more interested in why people like Marvin Meyer and Bart Ehrman got so excited about it and were trying to make out — and are still trying to make out — that the gospel of Judas will really help us address and solve some key issues within early Christianity.

For excellent details and counter to Bart Ehrman, et al: [Recommended]
Evidence that Demands a Verdict (Revised, 2017) by Josh McDowell and his son, Sean, PhD

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

For instance, the question of whether Christianity is inherently anti-Semitic or anti-Jewish. Erhmann and Meyer have said that in this gospel, Judas is the loyal disciple who does what Jesus wants. This will enable us to erase the slur that Judas is the wicked Jew who caused Jesus to be killed.

And that is just complete rubbish! Jewish scholars have "rubbished" it already. But the thing is that, as with the Western world in general at the moment where everyone is happy to have some kind of religion as long it's not Christianity, people are happy to have the gospels as long as they're not Matthew, Mark, Luke and John, because the church has domesticated and flattened down Matthew, Mark, Luke and John and people don't realize just how exciting and dramatic and extraordinary they are.

So people go for this kind of crazy document which basically says "This world is a stupid, dark place and the sooner we can get out, the better, and you, Judas, will be the one who sacrifices me, Jesus, and that will help me to attain my immortal bliss." And that is just the complete antithesis of "Thy kingdom come on earth as in heaven."

HOMILETICS: Not good news at all.

WRIGHT: Not good news at all. No. So you can only make it into good news by appealing to a kind of late modern or postmodern world in which this world is so dark and messy and gloomy that here is an escapist spirituality that will enable you to feel good about yourself in the present and have a glorious future in the long term.

HOMILETICS: In your lecture last night, you referenced C.S. Lewis, and in any event, I was going to ask you about Lewis. Two part question. I would like you to comment about Lewis' contribution to his own time — an enduring contribution, I'm sure, and I'd also like you to respond to those who have said that what Lewis did for his own generation, N.T. Wright is doing for his.

See also my separate references resource*: Mere Christianity – C. S. Lewis

WRIGHT: Lewis was an extraordinary man is his own day because Oxford where he lived and worked for most of his adult life — he only went to Cambridge in the last few years — was pretty cynical, pretty skeptical, pretty anti-Christian, or at least Christianity was all right as long as it stayed in the college chapel and you didn't jump up and down and frighten the horses about it.

In other words, you could go and have these nice old-fashioned prayers and sing a few hymns and the music would be jolly good, but don't actually allow it to infect anything else in the world.

And Lewis clearly wasn't satisfied with that. Having himself been a skeptic and then becoming converted, he realized that the Jesus he was following was either the Lord of Everything or he wasn't the Lord at all. He has that famous line that "every square inch of space and every split second of time is claimed by God and counter-claimed by Satan." In other words, there's no neutral territory.

So Lewis found himself compelled to accept invitations to go on the radio, to write these books of apologetics, even though his colleagues at Oxford sneered at him and scorned him and were jealous of his literary success — he was a brilliant writer. They were jealous to the point where when the relevant chair came up at Oxford (in Oxford only the very senior people have professorships) and he was the natural candidate for it, he was passed over. "He's been talking about God on the radio; that will never do." There was a sort of social stigma as well as an ideological stigma. It was as though he had used the wrong fork for the fish or something like that. You could see all the people on High Table looking down their nose saying, "Oh dear, poor chap, he doesn't know his manners. What a shame!" That was the attitude.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

So I have enormous respect for Lewis. He was a man of great courage who with a small group of friends whom he needed — he was a bachelor for most of his life — he had the courage to go on doing what he did.

At the same time, some elements of his apologetics seem to me simply not to work. He wasn't a first-century historian. He could have been. He was a voracious reader. He knew an enormous amount of material. He had a photographic memory — I'm hugely jealous of that myself. But when he's writing about Jesus, he really doesn't understand what was going on in first-century Judaism, he doesn't understand what the real issues were around the kingdom of God, and I think that although he is robust is his belief in the bodily resurrection, I think he still thinks in terms of a heaven/hell polarization, although he was pushing the boundaries in The Great Divorce where heaven is more real and more solid and more like what I would call the new heaven and new earth. But I don't think he'd fully worked all that out and there is a kind of residual dualism within Lewis which I think was not fully resolved.

There's the line at the end of one of the children's stories, there's the old professor says, "It's all in Plato, it's all in Plato. What do they teach them in these schools?" And I think, "Well, it is and it isn't, actually." There's stuff in the New Testament that would horrify a good Platonist.

HOMILETICS: But his work made a lot of sense to those who were trying to make sense of their faith.

WRIGHT: Oh yes, and still does. His book, Miracles, is the only book I knew when I was an undergraduate, which actually took seriously what it means to think of the miraculous. Many of his Christian friends would say, "Well, if you believe in God, then God can do anything, so of course miracles happen." Lewis wouldn't be content with that. He's actually wrestling with the issue. "What's going on here?" And especially his treatment of the resurrection, I found very profound. …

HOMILETICS: So what about N.T. Wright?

WRIGHT: I had a godfather who died nearly two years ago — God rest his soul. He was a priest and he often used to say to me, "We need someone else to do the apologetics task." He'd read my stuff on the New Testament, but he was saying that we need someone to doubt the doubter, question the questioners, out skeptic the skeptics and show that it can be done.

HOMILETICS: And it seems that your collaboration with Marcus Borg achieves this.

WRIGHT: I have an odd "bits and pieces" background. I've got a lot of friends across the spectrum in the church and in the wider world. I've taught in universities where I've been rubbing shoulders with a lot of people who aren't Christians at all. So I'm used to mixing it up with folks from all kinds of backgrounds. I used to run a group called Agnostics Anonymous when I was a college chaplain, which was wonderful. Some of those guys became Christians; some didn't. But we had a great time wrestling with the issues. So that's always been a part of who I am.

I am not quite sure about apologetics as a genre, because some apologetics tend to pull itself into the box that says, "We are going to prove that Christianity is true according to the canons and criteria that the people of the world out there are expecting." Actually you can't do that with integrity.

HOMILETICS: But I think that what was happening in Lewis' time — and perhaps in our own time — is that there was this feeling that Christianity wasn't an intellectually defensible position to adopt. Christians want to feel that taking a faith position is a reasonable choice.

WRIGHT: It all depends on what you mean. If you mean, "Will it stand up to certain criteria set up by Hume and his anti-miraculous treatises or by Voltaire or some of the other Enlightenment thinkers?" The answer is "No, it won't fit into that box." But, too bad for that box.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Christianity actually claims to trump those boxes and to say that it is the genuine reason and that it will stretch the human mind and human reason to the right shape. That's always kind of a big argument that you have to live within and see what it does. I've been accused of this with my book on the resurrection. Some people have said, "You've just tried to prove the resurrection according to the canons of Enlightenment historiography." I say, "No, what I've done is use the canons of Enlightenment historiography to disprove all the alternative theories that arise from time to time as to how Christianity got going, but where you're left then is the same place as Thomas, thinking, "Is this a ghost I see before me, or what?"

HOMILETICS: How did your collaboration with Borg begin?

WRIGHT: He had studied with George Caird, though we never met during that period. We were actually at Oxford at the same time, I was an undergraduate and he was a post-graduate. Then, when in 1984 I think it was, he published his dissertation about a dozen years too late (he'd got the degree ages before), it was right on the button for what I was working on at the time (this was his first book on Jesus). And I grabbed it and devoured it and thought "This is just amazing!"

I don't remember if I wrote to him or met him at the Society of Biblical Literature the next year, but I sought him out and said, "This is so exciting!" Of course he was saying this and this and this — which really helped me in my own thinking about Jesus, all except for the last chapter of the book where he goes into Jesus the Sage, and I remember thinking, "Too bad about that last chapter!" But the rest of the book was terrific; good historical research.

Of course, tragically — from my point of view — it was the last chapter which became the basis of all the other stuff he subsequently did, which was a little odd.

We just hit it off. We met at SBL, and the Jesus Seminar had just got going and he was obviously part of it. And Marcus was kind of on the right wing of the Jesus Seminar because he was one of the few in the Jesus Seminar who would actually put his hand up and say he was a practicing Christian — which is his self-description. Whereas most of them come out of fundamentalist backgrounds and hate the church and religion and everything to do with it.

So Marcus would see himself on the right wing of that movement. But naturally he and I disagreed about a lot and we had got in various debates at SBL and elsewhere and then we were together in Oxford once — he comes over to Oxford a certain amount — and we were having a drink and he said, "Why don't we do a dialogue book?" It seemed like a good idea. So a bit later he came over again and we spent a week and mapped it out, and then we wrote our chapters and sent them to each other and that's how that happened.

HOMILETICS: I think people enjoy that, because these days the rhetoric is hot.

WRIGHT: We realized that we needed to model how to have the conversation for a church that often doesn't know how to have a conversation. In America, you don't know how to have the conversation. In Britain, we don't know that there's a conversation to be had. Most people in our churches are unaware that there are issues like this, and if they're aware of issues, they quickly dismiss them. "We know we're right, so bang! That's it. The other lot must be crazy."

I've often said in my diocese, "I believe in the authority of Scripture. I also believe in the authority of reason. Not autonomous reason. But if you don't have reason on the table, the whole thing degenerates into what T.S. Eliot calls "undisciplined squads of emotion," people lashing out at each other.

And that's postmodernity, where the only moral high ground, the only intellectual high ground, is the scream of the victim. "I'm a victim, I'm a bigger victim than you. So you've got to listen to me. So I must be right." It's a pretty stupid way to do ethics.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

HOMILETICS: When you and your church buddies back in the U.K. meet to lift up a pint and talk about the American church, what do you say?

WRIGHT: I say all sorts of things. I love coming to America. There's so much energy and relentless cheerfulness about so much compared to the rather gloomy and often cynical English worldview, but that relent-less energy drives people into very polarized camps. In America you have an extreme right/left polarization; In England, if it isn't too paradoxical, we have a strong center/center polarization with Tony Blair and David Cameron each trying to inch on to the center ground and elbow the other off of it because they're both frightened about getting out any way to the traditional right and left because the newspapers will make mincemeat of anyone that goes there. So we're very different in that way.

When I look at the American church, I see all this energy. I see people who say to themselves, "If I'm a Christian, then it's up to me to make sure that I know what's going on about Christ and culture. What are the top 10 books? Let's look them up on Amazon and order them up, I'll read them up this next month, and then I'll have some hard questions." I know a lot of people in America who live their lives like that. I know virtually no people in England who live their lives like that. I'm jealous of that — that relentless, questing energy. Takes a lot of people into some strange places, but it has to be better to be open in the mind and reading this stuff.

At the same time, your culture wars in America, your extreme right and left polarization which really has divided you — and the more I've come to America the more I've seen that. This polarization, of course, both does and doesn't correspond to your north and south; the Mason-Dixon line has a lot to answer for and in some ways that answers to right and left but not entirely. But in some ways, you're still playing out both your own Civil War and your War of Independence from Britain. I feel both of those in the America culture.

The result is that, for instance, it's very, very hard for someone who basically sits to the left of center on several other issues, suddenly to say: "Oh, by the way, I believe in the bodily resurrection," because that is perceived to be the position of a right-wing fundamentalist. You're one of those guys who believe in the rapture, hell and all that rubbish. We've now grown up, and we're the modern ones and we don't believe all that.

On the other hand, if you basically sit on the right politically, it's hard to have a critique of the Republican party because then you're perceived to be a part of the liberal left.

So, the polarization in the culture has led to a polarization in the church. When I look at my own church in America [Episcopal], I grieve, because it's really, really in bad shape. These polarizations have inflicted themselves on the church because for whatever reason they want to be out of the right, just cannot take anything from the left, and vice versa, and that's no way to do a healthy church.

HOMILETICS: What about this proposal in the Anglican community for a "church within a church"?

WRIGHT: We don't have a proposal for a "church within a church." That's one of the possible unfortunate results that might happen if the proposals that are on the table don't work.

The proposal is for an Anglican covenant. The bizarre thing is that we're in covenant with the Methodists, and we're in ecumenical covenant with all sorts of people, but we should be able to be in covenant with ourselves. The point is this: What happened three years ago with the election and consecration of Gene Robinson, to everyone's surprise in America but to no one's surprise in the rest of the world, tore the fabric of communion at the deepest level. The Anglican primates said that in a meeting in October of 2003. The result of this was that we had a very expensive, long, drawn-out year in 2004 when the Lambeth Commission met and produced the Windsor Report. That cost a lot of money to get 20 theologians together from around the world three times to discuss everything. It ate up the budget for several other things that should have been going on. But we couldn't not do it because we had to have some way of addressing the issue.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

But we can't afford to do that again every two or three years whenever something like this happens. So we have to have some way of setting up ground rules of how we can live together as a communion. The covenant is a minimalist proposal for ground rules to enable us to explore, to push the boundaries if we want to, but to do so without throwing all the china off the table — as has happened.

The question of how you know which issues are "china-off-the-table" issues and which ones aren't is the critical thing. In other words, the real issue is: How do you tell which issues make a difference and which issues don't make a difference? The example I've often used is: If someone says, "We have flowers on the altar at our church and you don't." Well, come on. Get used to it. Grow up. This is not a communion-breaking issue. It's a local option.

If someone says, "You read Matthew, Mark, Luke and John in your services and we always read the gospel of Thomas, the gospel of Judas and the gospel of Mary." Well then you say, "Not sure we're talking about the same religion here. Are we really in fellowship with you guys or not?" In other words, that would be a communion-breaking issue.

The question is: On that scale, where do you locate the other issues that are in front of us? Lay presidency of the Eucharist being an obvious one. Some want to do it; most say you shouldn't. Ordaining practicing homosexuals as priests and bishops. It's happened in some quarters; it would be unthinkable in other quarters.

So the question is: How do you tell? The covenant is not a way of saying, "Let's have a church within a church." The covenant is a way of saying, "We want to be a church where we can have these discussions without the china getting tossed off the table."

If in the process someone says, "We know that, covenant or no covenant, we're going to have to push ahead and do this, because we're going to be prophetic and we know we're right," then the rest of the communion might say, "That's horrible because you are actually thereby breaking the covenant that the rest of us think we have with each other." And if that then creates a church within a church, or a church outside the church, that is tragic. It's not the aim.

We haven't got there yet, and I pray God we won't.

Middleton's "Strange Views" on Eschatology: The Tom Wright Connection, Part 1
https://jrichardmiddleton.wordpress.com/2014/04/14/the-tom-wright-connection-part-1/

My Introduction to Tom Wright: The Tom Wright Connection, Part 2
https://jrichardmiddleton.wordpress.com/2014/04/15/the-tom-wright-connection-part-2/

A Bunch of "Shout Outs" from Wright: The Tom Wright Connection, Part 3
https://jrichardmiddleton.wordpress.com/2014/04/21/the-tom-wright-connection-part-3/

What's Dualism Got to Do with It? The Tom Wright Connection, Part 4
https://jrichardmiddleton.wordpress.com/2014/04/23/the-tom-wright-connection-part-4/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Dualism (Catholic perspective)

http://www.newadvent.org/cathen/05169a.htm

Excerpt:

(From Latin duo, two).

Like most other philosophical terms, has been employed in different meanings by different schools.

First, the name has been used to denote the religious or theological system which would explain the universe as the outcome of two eternally opposed and coexisting principles, conceived as good and evil, light and darkness, or some other form of conflicting powers. We find this theory widely prevalent in the East, and especially in Persia, for several centuries before the Christian Era. The Zend-Avesta, ascribed to Zoroaster, who probably lived in the sixth century B.C. and is supposed to be the founder or reformer of the Medo-Persian religion, explains the world as the outcome of the struggle between Ormuzd and Ahriman. Ormuzd is infinite light, supreme wisdom, and the author of all good; Ahriman is the principle of darkness and of all evil. In the third century after Christ, Manes, for a time a convert to Christianity, developed a form of Gnosticism, subsequently styled Manichaeism, in which he sought to fuse some of the elements of the Christian religion with the dualistic creed of Zoroastrianism (see MANICHAEISM and ZOROASTER). Christian philosophy, expounded with minor differences by theologians and philosophers from St. Augustine downwards, holds generally that physical evil is the result of the necessary limitations of finite created beings, and that moral evil, which alone is evil in the true sense, is a consequence of the creation of beings possessed of free wills and is tolerated by God. Both physical and moral evil are to be conceived as some form of privation or defect of being, not as positive entity. Their existence is thus not irreconcilable with the doctrine of theistic monism.

Second, the term dualism is employed in opposition to monism, to signify the ordinary view that the existing universe contains two radically distinct kinds of being or substance — matter and spirit, body and mind. This is the most frequent use of the name in modern philosophy, where it is commonly contrasted with monism. But it should not be forgotten that dualism in this sense is quite reconcilable with a monistic origin of all things. The theistic doctrine of creation gives a monistic account of the universe in this sense. Dualism is thus opposed to both materialism and idealism. Idealism, however, of the Berkeleyan type, which maintains the existence of a multitude of distinct substantial minds, may along with dualism, be described as pluralism…

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Dualism in Philosophy

The Mind-Body Problem

http://www.philosophy-index.com/philosophy/mind/mind-body.php

The mind-body problem is an ongoing problem in the philosophy of mind and in metaphysics, concerning the nature of the relationship between the mind, or conciousness, and the physical world.

The mind-body problems asks a number of questions: Are the mind and body are separate substances or elements of the same substance? What is their relationship to each other? What is conciousness? And how can conciousness arise out of ordinary matter?

There are a number of responses to the mind-body problem, though none have universal acceptance. A number of these positions are outlined below:

- Dualism, the position that the mind is essentially not physical, and exists separately from the body. Dualism comes in various forms:
    - Interactionism, which states that the mind and body have causal interaction.
    - Occasionalism, which states the apparently causal links between mind and body are actually divine intervention.
    - Parallelism, which states that the apparent causal link between mind and body is an illusion, and that mind and body run parallel to one another.
    - Property dualism, which holds that the mind emerges from the body, and obtains status as something separate.
- Monism, the position that the mind and body are not fundamentally separate. There are several types of mind-body monism:
    - Physicalism, including most commonly-held positions today, which asserts that the mind may be reduced to the physical processes of the brain.
        - Behaviourism, which holds that talk about mental states can be reduced to talk about behaviours.
        - Functionalism, which states that mental states are caused by behaviours, senses and other mental states.
        - Type physicalism, which argues that mental states are equivalent to brain states.
    - Idealism, which claims that the mind is all that exists.
        - Phenomenalism, which reduces the physical world to perceptions which exist within the mind alone.

The mind-body problem was brought up in antiquity, and can be seen in the works of Plato, though its modern formulation can be credited to René Descartes, who also presents a dualist response.

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Substance Dualism

http://www.philosophy-index.com/philosophy/mind/substance-dualism.php

Substance Dualism is a variety of dualism in the philosophy of mind which states that two sorts of substances exist: the mental and the physical.

Substance dualism is a fundamentally ontological position: it states that the mental and the physical are separate substances with independant existence. Physical things are extended in space and do not possess any thought. Mental things have thought as their very essence, but do not have any extension in the physical world.

Substance dualism is a position favoured by various religions, because the distinct mind can easily by synonymous with the soul. Plato was similarly a substance dualist, believing that the soul inhabits the body temporarily, and otherwise exists in the infinite metaphysical realm of the forms (or rational knowledge).

Opposed to substance dualists (aside from monists) are property dualists, who argue that the mind emerges from the arrangement of the physical as a property of it. Property dualists also place an ontological distinction between mind and body, but deny that they are separate, independant substances.

The Mind-Body Problem, Part 1: Substance Dualism

https://www.philosophytalk.org/blog/mind-body-problem-part-1-substance-dualism

Excerpt:

You have a mind and you have a body. What's the connection between the two? All of us are aware of our physical being—our bodies—and we also have an immediate experience of our mental states—our thoughts, emotions, and sensations—but figuring out the relation between these has not been easy.

The oldest and by far the most popular explanation of the relationship between mind and body is called substance dualism. Let's unpack this term, starting with the notion of "substance." Philosophers use the term "substance" differently than it's used in ordinary speech. In the vernacular, substances are stuff like toothpaste or olive oil, but in philosophical jargon, substances are just things. Your left foot, the planet Neptune, and Donald Trump's hair are substances in this technical, philosophical sense.

The term "dualism" refers to kinds of substances. If you're a substance dualist you think that there are two kinds of things. There are physical things and there non-physical things. Imagine that you are taking an inventory of everything in the entire universe. You are holding a clipboard with a piece of paper that's divided into two columns. Column One is labeled "physical" and Column Two is labeled "non-physical." If you are a substance dualist, you think that some things belong in Column One (for example, your body, Neptune, and Trump's hair) while other things belong in Column Two (for example, God, souls, and minds). Alternatively, if you are a physicalist—someone who believes that everything is physical—then you believe that everything belongs in Column One and nothing belongs in Column Two (we will be exploring physicalism in a future installment of this blog).

Of course, the part of your body that's most relevant to this discussion is the squishy piece of matter that's lodged between your ears—your brain. If you're a substance dualist you believe that your mind and your brain are not the same thing. Your brain is a physical thing—to put it crudely, it's a piece of meat—while your mind, the locus of your conscious experiences, isn't a physical thing at all.

There are powerful reasons why substance dualism has been so attractive to so many people for so long. To many (probably, most) people, this view of things just seems obviously true. Think about it. Your body has characteristics that your mind doesn't seem to have. It's palpable. It's extended in space. It has surfaces, mass, and volume. You can touch it, weigh it, and measure it. But the mind that you are using right now to think about your body seems like a totally different kind of thing…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Descartes, Elisabeth, and My Left Foot
https://www.philosophytalk.org/blog/descartes-elisabeth-and-my-left-foot

Dualism (links to video; has listening notes) https://www.philosophytalk.org/shows/dualism

Dualism and Mind
http://www.iep.utm.edu/dualism/

Excerpt:

Dualists in the philosophy of mind emphasize the radical difference between mind and matter. They all deny that the mind is the same as the brain, and some deny that the mind is wholly a product of the brain. This article explores the various ways that dualists attempt to explain this radical difference between the mental and the physical world. A wide range of arguments for and against the various dualistic options are discussed.

Substance dualists typically argue that the mind and the body are composed of different substances and that the mind is a thinking thing that lacks the usual attributes of physical objects: size, shape, location, solidity, motion, adherence to the laws of physics, and so on. Substance dualists fall into several camps depending upon how they think mind and body are related. Interactionists believe that minds and bodies causally affect one another. Occasionalists and parallelists, generally motivated by a concern to preserve the integrity of physical science, deny this, ultimately attributing all apparent interaction to God. Epiphenomenalists offer a compromise theory, asserting that bodily events can have mental events as effects while denying that the reverse is true, avoiding any threat to the scientific law of conservation of energy at the expense of the common sense notion that we act for reasons.

Property dualists argue that mental states are irreducible attributes of brain states. For the property dualist, mental phenomena are non-physical properties of physical substances. Consciousness is perhaps the most widely recognized example of a non-physical property of physical substances. Still other dualists argue that mental states, dispositions and episodes are brain states, although the states cannot be conceptualized in exactly the same way without loss of meaning.

Dualists commonly argue for the distinction of mind and matter by employing Leibniz's Law of Identity, according to which two things are identical if, and only if, they simultaneously share exactly the same qualities. The dualist then attempts to identify attributes of mind that are lacked by matter (such as privacy or intentionality) or vice versa (such as having a certain temperature or electrical charge). Opponents typically argue that dualism is (a) inconsistent with known laws or truths of science (such as the aforementioned law of thermodynamics), (b) conceptually incoherent (because immaterial minds could not be individuated or because mind-body interaction is not humanly conceivable), or (c) reducible to absurdity (because it leads to solipsism, the epistemological belief that one's self is the only existence that can be verified and known)…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

1. Dualism

The most basic form of dualism is substance dualism, which requires that mind and body be composed of two ontologically distinct substances. The term "substance" may be variously understood, but for our initial purposes we may subscribe to the account of a substance, associated with D. M. Armstrong, as what is logically capable of independent existence. (Armstrong, 1968, p. 7). According to the dualist, the mind (or the soul) is comprised of a non-physical substance, while the body is constituted of the physical substance known as matter. According to most substance dualists, mind and body are capable of causally affecting each other. This form of substance dualism is known as interactionism.

Two other forms of substance dualism are occasionalism and parallelism. These theories are largely relics of history. The occasionalist holds that mind and body do not interact. They may seem to when, for example, we hit our thumb with a hammer and a painful and distressing sensation occurs. Occassionalists, like Malebranche, assert that the sensation is not caused by the hammer and nerves, but instead by God. God uses the occasion of environmental happenings to create appropriate experiences.

According to the parallelist, our mental and physical histories are coordinated so that mental events appear to cause physical events (and vice versa) by virtue of their temporal conjunction, but mind and body no more interact than two clocks that are synchronized so that the one chimes when hands of the other point out the new hour. Since this fantastic series of harmonies could not possibly be due to mere coincidence, a religious explanation is advanced. God does not intervene continuously in creation, as the occasionalist holds, but builds into creation a pre-established harmony that largely eliminates the need for future interference.

Another form of dualism is property dualism. Property dualists claim that mental phenomena are non-physical properties of physical phenomena, but not properties of non-physical substances. Some forms of epiphenomenalism fall into this category. According to epiphenomenalism, bodily events or processes can generate mental events or processes, but mental phenomena do not cause bodily events or processes (or, on some accounts, anything at all, including other mental states). (McLaughlin, p. 277) Whether an epiphenomenalist thinks these mental epiphenomena are properties of the body or properties of a non-physical mental medium determines whether the epiphenomenalist is a property or substance dualist.

Still other dualists hold not that mind and body are distinct ontologically, but our mentalistic vocabulary cannot be reduced to a physicalistic vocabulary. In this sort of dualism, mind and body are conceptually distinct, though the phenomena referred to by mentalistic and physicalistic terminology are coextensive.

The following sections first discuss dualism as expounded by two of its primary defenders, Plato and Descartes. This is followed by additional arguments for and against dualism, with special emphasis on substance dualism, the historically most important and influential version of dualism.

Substance Dualism

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=RS4PW35-Y00 [Video]

Consciousness and the Brain – Substance Dualism

http://consciousnessandthebrain.com/substance-dualism/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Substance Dualism

http://cw.routledge.com/textbooks/alevelphilosophy/data/A2/Mind/SubstanceDualism.pdf [PDF]

René Descartes: The Mind-Body Distinction

http://www.iep.utm.edu/descmind/

Dualism in the Philosophy of Mind (2005) (Encyclopedia of Philosophy)

http://fas-philosophy.rutgers.edu/zimmerman/Dualism.in.Mind.pdf [PDF]

Excerpt:

Mind-body dualism is the doctrine that human persons are not made out of ordinary matter, at least not entirely. Every person has—or, on many versions of the view, simply is identical to—a soul. A soul is said to have little in common with human bodies and other material objects but is in one way or another responsible for a person's mental life.

Mind-body dualism is sometimes called "substance dualism," to distinguish the view from "property dualism"—the thesis that mental properties (such as being in pain, thinking of Vienna) are in some way significantly different from or independent of physical properties (such as having neurons firing in one's brain in a certain pattern). Property dualism is meant to allow for what is often called "dual-aspect theory": persons are material objects with a nonphysical, mental "aspect" but no nonphysical parts—that is, no immaterial soul.

The entry begins with a brief discussion of property dualism, only to set it to one side in order to examine substance dualism in detail: its varieties, the traditional objections to the view, and the most popular arguments in its favor…

Property and Substance Dualism

https://www.philosophybro.com/archive/property-and-substance-dualism

According to substance dualism, mental things and physical things are two totally different kinds of things. It would probably mean that no matter how much we study the brain, even if we managed to achieve a perfect understanding of the brain's crazy intricate inner workings, it won't be enough to understand the mind, or our mental experiences of subjective consciousness, because we're looking at the wrong fucking thing. "Hey, quit studying that brain, it's not even the right…substance, you idiot." Maybe if we figured out how the brain and the mind hook up, we'd learn something about the mind, but if substance dualism is true, then no amount of information about the brain would ever be enough to fully explain how the mind works.

According to property dualism, though, there's only one kind of substance, and it just has different kinds of properties. So we only have to look at one thing, the brain, and that's where we'd find both mental properties and physical properties. If we fully understood the brain, we'd have enough information to also explain but also, it would mean there's a bunch more shit to understand about the brain than if substance dualism is true.

So, in short: substance dualism says "Oh no you've got the wrong thing entirely, stupid" and property dualism says "yeah, no, go on, keep looking at the brain, we'll get it eventually."

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

That seems simple enough – let's just keep looking at the brain and if we get to the end and we still don't understand the mind, we're done, right? But here's the problem: how do we know when we're at the end?

[Warning: the above article contains course language.]

Is Property Dualism Better Off than Substance Dualism? (2012) (Student Paper?)

https://www.unc.edu/~ujanel/Is%20Property%20Dualism%20Better%20Off%20than%20Substance%20Dualism_January%202012.pdf [PDF[

Case for Dualism

http://www.newdualism.org/papers/S.Brisbane/case_for_dualism.html

Excerpt:

Issues within the mind-body debate generally surround two predominant ones. The first concerns whether a human is made of only one component, such as matter, or two components, such as mind and matter. The second is, if there are two components and they affect each other, then how do they interact? Being aware of these issues, I now turn to briefly describe substance dualism and the varieties that this paper is concerned with.

Substance Dualism

Substance dualism generally holds that the body is a physical object having physical properties and that the mind is a mental substance containing mental properties irreducible to the physical.[1] When one experiences pain for example, the body may incur certain electrical and chemical stimuli (physical properties), which results in the self or soul consciously experiencing the felt quality and awareness of pain (mental property). Thus, it is argued within substance dualism that the soul and brain closely interact with each other, though they are different substances with differing properties.

In defending substance dualism, I will be specifically siding with the "essence" of the Cartesian and Thomistic forms, without further developments such as Parallelism and Occasionalism which attempt to provide solutions specifically for the mind-body interaction problem. Although it is beyond this paper to explore all the distinctions between the Cartesian and Thomistic sides, it is worth noting two.

Firstly, Cartesians tend to reduce the soul to the mind, whereas Thomists believe the mind to be a faculty of the soul that requires certain physical states to obtain in the brain and central nervous system before the mind can function.[2] Being aware of these differences between the soul, mind and body, the second distinction is that Cartesians view the mind as a substance separate from the body which is considered to be a purely physical object. Thomists however, will insist upon a more intimate relationship where the soul provides the form or essence of the body. As such, Thomists believe that the soul can exist in a disembodied form, although as philosopher Scott B. Rae writes, "the body is an ensouled biological and physical structure that depends on the soul for its existence."[3] (emphasis mine)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Dualism – Swineburne's Position

http://tedsider.org/teaching/415/HO_dualism.pdf [PDF]

Note: Swineburn, an Orthodox Christian, is a defender of substance dualism

Excerpt:

Objections to Dualism

(a) The epistemological objection
(i) If Dualism is true, then we have no knowledge of personal identity
(ii) But we do have some knowledge of personal identity
(iii) Therefore, Dualism is false

(b) The traditional problem of skepticism

Idealism: Reality is entirely mental Realism: A large part of reality is non-mental. This part would be exactly as it actually is if there were no minds.

(i) If Realism is true, then we have no knowledge of the external world
(ii) But we do have some knowledge of the external world
(iii) Therefore, Realism is false

(c) The problem of interaction
Soul theorists must account for causal interaction between souls and physical objects, despite the fact that souls lack the physical properties involved in familiar causal interactions

(d) Souls are gratuitous

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Encyclopedia Britannica: Dualism

https://www.britannica.com/topic/philosophy-of-mind/Explanatory-gaps#ref1052210

Excerpts:

Substance dualism and property dualism

…Confronted with the problems about identity and explanatory gaps, some philosophers have opted for one version or another of mind-body dualism, the view that mental phenomena cannot in any way be reduced to physical phenomena. In its most radical form, proposed by Descartes and consequently called Cartesianism, dualism is committed to the view that mind constitutes a fundamentally different substance, one whose functioning cannot be entirely explained by reference to physical phenomena alone. Descartes went so far as to claim (in accordance with contemporary church doctrine) that this substance was an immortal soul that survived the dissolution of the body. There are, however, much more modest forms of dualism—most notably those concerned with mental properties (and sometimes states and events)—that need not involve any commitment to the persistence of mental life after death.

Causal relations and epiphenomenalism

It is important to distinguish such claims about the dualistic nature of mental phenomena from claims about their causal relations. In Descartes's view, mental phenomena, despite their immateriality, can be both causes and effects of physical phenomena ("dualistic interactionism"). The dualist does not ipso facto deny that physical phenomena in the brain quite regularly cause events in the mind and vice versa; he merely denies that those phenomena are identical to anything physical.

A problem with dualistic interactionism, however, concerns the evident lack of any causal break in the internal processes of the human body. So far as is known, there is no particular state of any part of the body—no action of any muscle, no secretion of any substance, no change in any cell—that cannot in principle be explained by existing physical theories, assuming it can be explained at all (quantum indeterminacy is irrelevant to the present point). Serious evidence of so-called "paranormal" phenomena, such as telepathy, is yet to be found. More generally, there seems to be very good reason to think that the physical world forms a closed system, obeying conservation laws such as the conservation of mass and the conservation of energy. Consequently, there would appear to be no explanatory need to introduce nonphysical phenomena, whether substances or properties, into any account of human activities. (In contrast, before the introduction of electromagnetism in the late 19th century, there were myriad phenomena that could not be explained without supposing the existence of another force in addition to gravitation.)

In response to this difficulty, dualists have tried to exempt the mental from any causal role. Leibniz claimed that mental events were neither causes nor effects of any physical events—they were simply "synchronized" by God with physical phenomena, a view known as "parallelism." A more moderate position, originally advocated by the English biologist T.H. Huxley (1825–95) and revived by the Australian philosopher Frank Jackson in the late 20th century, is that mental phenomena are the effects, but not the causes, of physical phenomena. Known as "epiphenomenalism," this view allows for the evident causal laws relating physical stimuli and perceptual experiences but does not commit the dualist to claims that might conflict with the closure of physics.

These responses, however, may serve only to make the problem worse. If the mental really does not have any effects, then it becomes entirely unclear why one should believe that it exists. What possible reason could there be for believing in the existence of something in the spatiotemporal world that does not affect anything in that world in any way? Epiphenomenal mental phenomena would seem to be no different in this respect from epiphenomenal angels who accompany the planets without actually pushing them. At this point it becomes hard to resist the invitation that dualism extends to eliminativism, the view that mental phenomena do not exist at all…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Dualism by Branch / Doctrine

http://www.philosophybasics.com/branch_dualism.html

Excerpt:

Introduction

Dualism in Metaphysics is the belief that there are two kinds of reality: material (physical) and immaterial (spiritual). In Philosophy of Mind, Dualism is the position that mind and body are in some categorical way separate from each other, and that mental phenomena are, in some respects, non-physical in nature.

It can be contrasted (both as a metaphysical concept and as regards Philosophy of Mind) with various kinds of Monism (including Physicalism and Idealism), and with Pluralism, which holds that ultimately there are many kinds of substance, rather than just two.

Dualism appeals to the common-sense intuition of the vast majority of non-philosophically-trained people, and the mental and the physical do seem to most people to have quite different, and perhaps irreconcilable, properties. Mental events have a certain subjective quality to them (known as qualia or "the ways things seem to us"), whereas physical events do not. Critics of dualism have often asked how something totally immaterial can affect something totally material (the problem of causal interaction). With the knowledge gained from modern science, few, if any, neuroscientists would consider taking a dualist position, and Monistic beliefs like Physicalism are now much more common within the field of philosophy.

History of Dualism

Dualism can be traced back to Plato and Aristotle, and also to the early Sankhya and Yoga schools of Hindu philosophy.

Plato first formulated his famous Theory of Forms, distinct and immaterial substances of which the objects and other phenomena that we perceive in the world are nothing more than mere shadows. He argued that for the intellect to have access to these universal concepts or ideas, the mind must itself be a non-physical, immaterial entity.

Aristotle argued that if the intellect were a specific material organ (or part of one) then it would be restricted to receiving only certain kinds of information (in the same way as the eye is restricted to receiving visual data). Since the intellect is capable of receiving and reflecting on all forms of data, then it must not be a physical organ and so must be immaterial.

Neo-Platonic Christians identified Plato's Forms with souls and believed that the soul was the substance of each individual human being, while the body was just a shadow or copy of these eternal phenomena. For St. Thomas Aquinas, the soul was still the substance of the human being but, similar to Aristotle's proposal, it was only through its manifestation inside the human body that a person could be said to be a person.

However, Dualism was most precisely formulated by René Descartes in the 17th Century. Descartes was the first to formulate the mind-body problem in the form in which it exists today, and the first to clearly identify the mind with consciousness and self-awareness, and to distinguish this from the brain, which was the physical seat of intelligence. He realized that he could doubt whether he had a body (it could be that he was dreaming of it or that it was an illusion created by an evil demon), but he could not doubt whether he had a mind, which suggested to him that the mind and body must be different things.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

However, the immaterial mind and the material body, while being ontologically distinct substances, causally interact in some unspecified way through the pineal gland.

Types of Dualism

- Substance Dualism (or Cartesian Dualism) argues that the mind is an independently existing substance - the mental does not have extension in space, and the material cannot think. This is the type of Dualism most famously defended by Descartes, and it is compatible with most theologies which claim that immortal souls occupy an independent "realm" of existence distinct from that of the physical world.
- Property Dualism (also sometimes known as Token Physicalism) maintains that the mind is a group of independent properties that emerge from the brain, but that it is not a distinct substance. Thus, when matter is organized in the appropriate way (i.e. in the way that living human bodies are organized), mental properties emerge.
  There are three main types of Property Dualism:
  - Interactionism, which allows that mental causes (such as beliefs and desires) can produce material effects, and vice-versa. Descartes believed that this interaction physically occurred in the pineal gland.
  - Occasionalism, asserts that a material basis of interaction between the material and immaterial is impossible, and that the interactions were really caused by the intervention of God on each individual occasion. Nicholas Malebranche was the major proponent of this view.
  - Parallelism (or Psychophysical Parallelism), holds that mental causes only have mental effects, and physical causes only have physical effects, but that God has created a pre-established harmony so that it seems as if physical and mental events (which are really monads, completely independent of each other) cause, and are caused by, one another. This unusual view was most prominently advocated by Gottfried Leibniz.
  - Epiphenomenalism, which asserts that mental events are causally inert (i.e. have no physical consequences). Physical events can cause other physical events, and physical events can cause mental events, but mental events cannot cause anything, since they are just causally inert by-products of physical events which occur in the brain (i.e. epiphenomena) of the physical world. This doctrine was first formulated by Thomas Henry Huxley in the 19th Century, although based on Thomas Hobbes' much earlier Materialism theories.
- Predicate Dualism argues that more than one predicate (how we describe the subject of a proposition) is required to make sense of the world, and that the psychological experiences we go through cannot be redescribed in terms of (or reduced to) physical predicates of natural languages.
- Epistemological Dualism (also known as Representationalism or Indirect Realism) is the view in Epistemology that the world we see in conscious experience is not the real world itself, but merely a miniature virtual-reality replica of that world in an internal representation.

Dualism – Powerpoint Presentation
http://michaeljohnsonphilosophy.com/wp-content/uploads/2013/09/Ch-1-Dualism.pptx [PPT]
(From Chp. 1 of Philosophy of a Mind: A Beginner's Guide, by Ian Ravenscroft)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Substance Dualism (Part One): The Basic Argument

http://philosophicaldisquisitions.blogspot.com/2011/05/substance-dualism-part-one-basic.html

The Argument for Substance Dualism

(1) If we can exist without bodies, then we cannot be bodies.

(1.1) If x and y are identical, then x cannot exist without y; but if x and y are not identical, then x can exist without y (axioms of identity).

(1.2) Therefore, if we are identical to our bodies, then we cannot exist without them; but if we are not identical to our bodies, we can exist without them.

(2) We can exist without bodies.

(2.1) If it is conceivable that x can exist without y, then it is possible that x can exist without y.

(2.2) It is conceivable that we could exist without bodies (including brains).

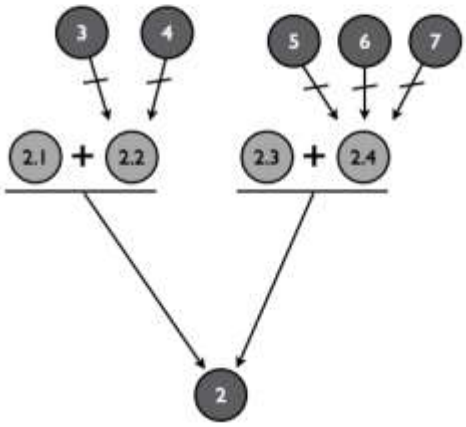
(2.2.1) The Afterlife Example

(2.2.2) The Annihilation Example

(2.2.3) The Cartesian Demon Example

(2.3) An object, event or state of affairs can exist without its accidental properties; it cannot exist without its essential properties.

(2.4) An essential property of beings like us is that of thought or thinking; having a body is a strictly accidental property of beings like us.



(3) Therefore, we cannot be bodies.

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Substance Dualism (Part Two): Criticisms of The Basic Argument

http://philosophicaldisquisitions.blogspot.com/2011/05/substance-dualism-part-two-criticisms.html

Criticisms of Premise 2 of the Substance Dualist Argument

(2.1) If it is conceivable that x can exist without y, then it is possible that x can exist without y.

(2.2) It is conceivable that we could exist without bodies (including brains).

(2.3) An object, event or state of affairs can exist without its accidental properties; it cannot exist without its essential properties.

(2.4) Having a body is a strictly accidental property of beings like us.

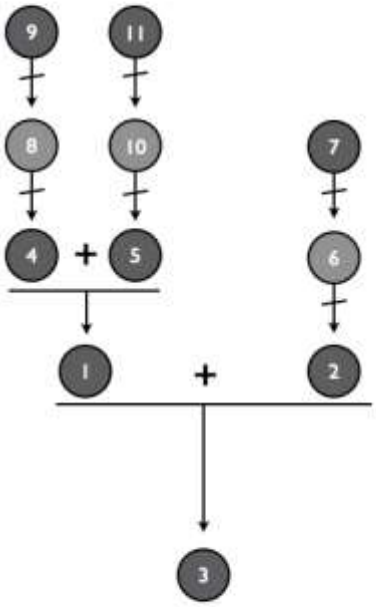
(2) Therefore, we can exist without bodies.

(3) Our imagining of the possibilities might be too vague and superficial to count as true conceivability.

(4) While conceivability might be a reliable guide to some types of metaphysical possibility, it is not a reliable guide to all types. Furthermore, it might be that the mind-body relation is a type of metaphysical necessity that can only be established through empirical investigation.

(5) The conceptual method is an insufficient method for establishing the essential properties of all objects.

(6) The reliance on the conceptual method is question-begging.



(7) Descartes's procedure may lead us to miss out on some of the essential properties of persons.

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Substance Dualism (Part Three): The Problem of Other Minds

http://philosophicaldisquisitions.blogspot.com/2011/05/substance-dualism-part-three-problem-of.html

Substance Dualism - The Problem of Other Minds

(1) If substance dualism is true, then we cannot know the mental states of others.

(2) We do, on at least some occasions, know the mental states of others.

(3) Therefore, substance dualism is false.

(4) For knowledge of the mental states of others to be possible, there must be a reliable connection between certain physical indicators and mental entities.

(5) If substance dualism is true, there is no reliable relationship between the mental and the physical.

(6) Our belief that we can know the minds of others is part of our intuitive, pre-theoretical worldview - this is not a reliable guide to truth.

(7) We should only discard parts of our pre-theoretical worldview if we have compelling reasons to do so - such reasons do not exist in the case of substance dualism.

(8) Inference from physical indicators in not the only way to know the minds of others; we could acquire such knowledge through, for example, ESP.

(9) Evidence for ESP is patchy at best; furthermore people who don't have ESP still appear to, occasionally, know the minds of others solely by inference from physical indicators.

(10) The substance dualist can, by inductive inference, argue that the one-mind-for-every-human-body-relation is the most plausible.

(11) This inference is not warranted because the reference sample is too small.

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Substance vs Property Dualism and Religion (From a Student's Perspective)

http://u.osu.edu/philosophy1100h/2014/11/13/substance-vs-property-dualism-and-religion/

Today in class we had a very engaging discussion on substance and property dualism philosophical thought and how it pertains to our perception of the human soul, an important religious concept. Substance dualism claims that the mind (soul) is a separate identity than the physical human being that will live on past their deterioration of our bodies, while Property dualism claims that the mind, although different than the physical human frame, is still linked and thus will end with our death. To me, this argument sounds incredibly similar to a classic argument between atheists and theists: is our soul able to continue on without our physical frame? Coming from a religious background, I always favored the theists when regarding the separate nature of our souls, something that science can't explain. Yet. When viewing this same argument with the substance vs property dualism thought patterns, I actually found myself favoring the property dualist thought. With the forward progress of technology, scientists and doctors can examine our brain at microscopic levels to see how our brain functions and how our thoughts and memories are processed. If they eventually prove that the mind and our thoughts are all a function of the physical brain and our personal identity is not as unique as originally thought, how can our soul be able to live on past death? If our mind/soul is connected to our physical body and property dualists are correct on their thinking, how can substance dualism offer a rebuttal? This perplexing question, though, relies on the eventual scientific discovery of the connection between thoughts and the mind, while religion is more along the lines of belief until proven otherwise. So for now, I personally side with the substance dualists, but I hope everyone else will keep their mind open to change just like I plan too.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

An Overview of the Monism-Dualism Debate on Human Composition (2013)

https://cct.biola.edu/overview-monism-dualism-debate-human-composition/

Excerpt:

For two thousand years Christians of all stripes (clergy and laypersons, scholars and uneducated, young and old, and across denominations) have traditionally understood human beings to be composed of two substances: a physical body and a spiritual soul. While some have argued that the non-physical substance includes two different kinds of non-body parts (i.e., a soul and a separate spirit), the point is that humans have been understood as consisting of a physical body on one hand and some non-physical something on the other. This two-fold understanding of human composition is sometimes referred to as "substance dualism."

But recently a number of different challenges to substance dualism have been articulated by scholars in various academic disciplines. Questions have arisen in the historical and theological disciplines. Biblical scholars have observed that terms like "soul" and "spirit" have flexible uses in the Bible and sometimes refer simply the whole person and not parts of persons. Theologians note that in the Bible, especially the Old Testament, God seems to deal with humans in a more holistic way, and certainly theology affects the whole person. Historians have suggested that dualistic thinking about human composition entered Christian thinking from Greek philosophy and not from Scripture.

Questions have also been raised in the philosophical disciplines. Metaphysicians suggest that the notion of a non-physical substance seems rather incoherent, and even if granted, the ability for the immaterial to interact with the material (presumed by dualistic views) seems untenable. Ethicists note that dualistic thinking has had negative impacts in that the soul has been over-emphasized and the body undervalued to the point of neglect and/or abuse. Others propose that dualism seems unnecessarily complex for understanding human existence since the complexities of human existence seem to be adequately accounted for by "levels" of experience rather than some completely other substance.

Most recently, questions have been raised in the scientific disciplines. In the expanding research of neuroscientists, experiments seem to indicate that consciousness is entirely a physical occurrence (as is the thing that has consciousness, i.e., the physical brain), and that mental states are dependent upon particular brain states. For psychologists, the human being seems to have every experience, including emotions, in the body; and even "out-of-body" experiences are reported with references to physicality.

While versions of these kinds of questions about substance dualism have been around for a long time, the last few decades have seen a rise in such concerns in thinking about the body–soul question (a.k.a. the mind–body problem). So much so that philosophers, scientists, and theologians have been proposing monistic views of human composition over against substance dualism. That is, more and more scholars—including Christian thinkers in these disciplines—are suggesting that humans are not composed of two substances (physical and non-physical) but of one substance (physical).

Now, to be clear, there are not just two options here, substance dualism or monism. Rather, there are a variety of dualistic views and a variety of monistic views about what human persons are. We can place the variety of views about human composition on a left-to-right continuum with the strongest monistic views on one end and the strongest dualistic views on the other end. Here is a sketch of such a continuum that identifies eight different explanations of the body–soul question (acknowledging that there are other more nuanced positions between those marked here).

For those interested in investigating book-length treatments on these positions, here are prime examples of each of the eight views:

1. Reductive Materialism: Francis H. Crick, The Astonishing Hypothesis: The Scientific Search for the Soul (New York: Simon & Schuster, 1994).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

2. Nonreductive Physicalism: Nancey Murphy, Bodies and Souls, or Spirited Bodies? (Current Issues in Theology; New York: Cambridge University Press, 2006).
3. Constitution View: Kevin J. Corcoran, Rethinking Human Nature: A Christian Materialist Alternative to the Soul (Grand Rapids: Baker, 2006).
4. Emergent Dualism: William Hasker, The Emergent Self (Ithaca, NY: Cornell University Press, 1999).
5. Holistic Dualism: John W. Cooper, Body, Soul & Life Everlasting: Biblical Anthropology and the Monism-Dualism Debate (rev. ed.; Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 2000).
6. Substance Dualism: J. P. Moreland and Scott B. Rae, Body and Soul: Human Nature and the Crisis in Ethics (Downers Grove: InterVarsity Press, 2000).
7. Radical Dualism: Sir John Eccles and Daniel N. Robinson, The Wonder of Being Human: Our Brain and Our Mind (New York: Free Press, 1984).
8. Idealism: Keith Ward, More than Matter? Is There More to Life Than Molecules? (Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 2011). We can note here that idealism is a monistic view that stresses the non-physical rather than the physical. Thus, at idealism our continuum curves back on itself into a circle with position eight standing next to position 1.

Should a Christian Be a Mind-Body Dualist? — NO' (2000) (Student Paper?)

http://people.umass.edu/lrb/files/bak04shoM.pdf [PDF]

Excerpt:

Through the ages, Christians have almost automatically been Mind-Body dualists. The Bible portrays us as spiritual beings, and one obvious way to be a spiritual being is to be (or to have) an immaterial soul. Since it is also evident that we have bodies, Christians naturally have thought of themselves as composite beings, made of two substances—a material body and a nonmaterial soul. Despite the historical weight of this position, I do not think that it is required either by Scripture or by Christian doctrine as it has developed through the ages. So, I want to argue that there is a Christian alternative to Mind-Body Dualism, and that the reasons in favor of the alternative outweigh those in favor of Mind-Body Dualism.

The version of Mind-Body Dualism that has attracted Christians is Substance Dualism. Substance Dualism is the thesis that there are two kinds of finite substances: material (e.g., bodies) and nonmaterial (e.g., souls). On this view, we human persons are fundamentally, at least in part, nonmaterial substances. A Substance Dualist holds either that a human person is identical to a nonmaterial soul or is identical to a composite of a nonmaterial soul and a material body...

[The above article goes on to propose a “Constitutional View” ???]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Descartes, dualism and monism

http://mindandphilosophy.blogspot.com/2012/07/descartes-dualism-and-monism.html

Excerpt:

Let's assume that both you and me do have minds; I guess it would be way easier to think this post over if you had some free mind to use. Otherwise the idea of thought without a mind might get a little bit tricky – but as you're about to see, thought could exist without a mind. Anyway, before I become completely incomprehensible let's start on with our bodies.

René Descartes
(1596-1650)

You probably do not have to think much to say what your body really is. You know that you've just used a hand to open this blog and you'll probably use it again to scroll this blog for other posts or maybe to close this window (but please don't do it now). You know your body is something physical – you can touch it, you can see it, sometimes you can even smell it, and if you were desperate enough you could try to taste it. However the problem of what exactly made you open this blog, read it, and finally close it is more complex. I guess most people, probably including you as well, would say that they did so because they wanted to. They thought that this blog would be interesting to read so they gave it a try. You may therefore argue that because you are able to think you have also your own mind. That would mean that everyone of us has the mind and the body. In the philosophy of mind this view is called dualism. It means that the body and the mind (not to be confused with the brain which is a part of the body!) are not the same and that mind is not something physical thus it can't be neither touched nor seen (and you can't taste it either). One of the most famous philosophers who believed in dualism and who is often regarded as the father of this mind-body problem is a French philosopher René Descartes (he was the first philosopher whose works I began to read, and if you still haven't read any of his texts, I really recommend that you start with "Discourse on the Method" – you can easily find it on the Internet).

Other philosophers, however, argue that the mind and the body are actually identical. Personally, I don't agree with them but you're free to choose which theory you find to be the right one. The theory I'm talking about is called monism. As you probably might have guessed, apart from the view that the body and the mind are real there are also two other theories: physicalism stating that only body is real and idealism whose supporters maintain that the reality we can now is mental in its nature. A physicalist would argue that seeing your own body has nothing to do with your mind. He would explain that this is strictly a physical process which involves the light, your retina, nerves and finally your brain which creates the image of your body. You may think "All right, I could believe that seeing is – at least to some extent – a physical process (a blind dualist would not be able to see his body!) but what about the feelings? Love, sadness, happiness? They are mental states!". A physicalist is prepared and would answer that this is all about the hormones, for instance endorphins make you happy. There are also idealists who believe that the nature of the reality is mental – however weird may it sound it is quite an interesting theory to study (even though I'm not an idealist). Most idealists admit that the thinking process cannot exist without a thinker, what makes their theory different from the physicalism is that the source of thought is not a body. Thinking depends entirely on the mind and not on the brain. Some idealists claim that the physical reality is no more than an illusion of the mind. It is as difficult to argue with this view as it is in the case of physicalism. One cannot prove that the physical process is not a mental state nor that a mental process is not a physical process. I believe this is a vicious circle and the number of counterarguments is practically infinite.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

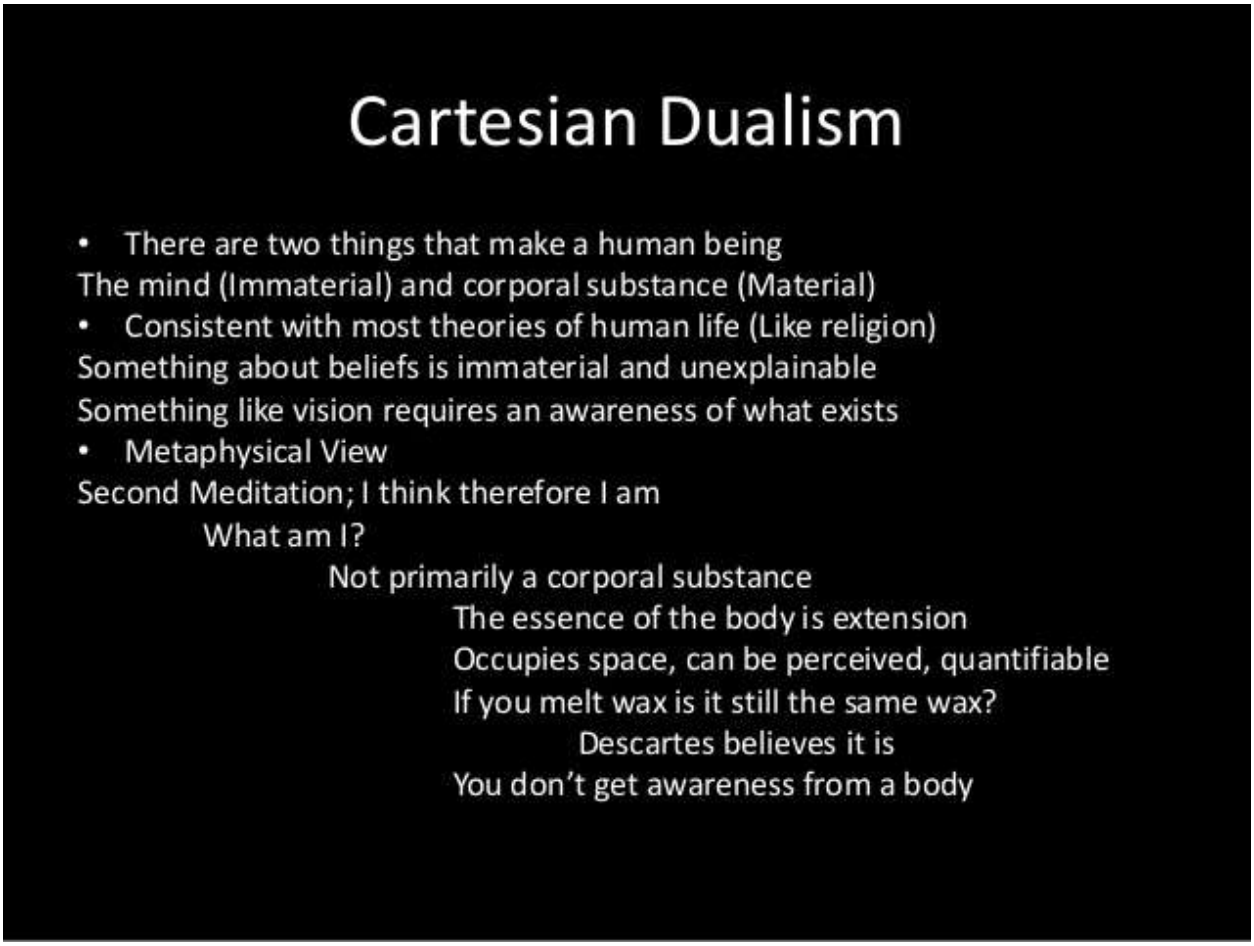
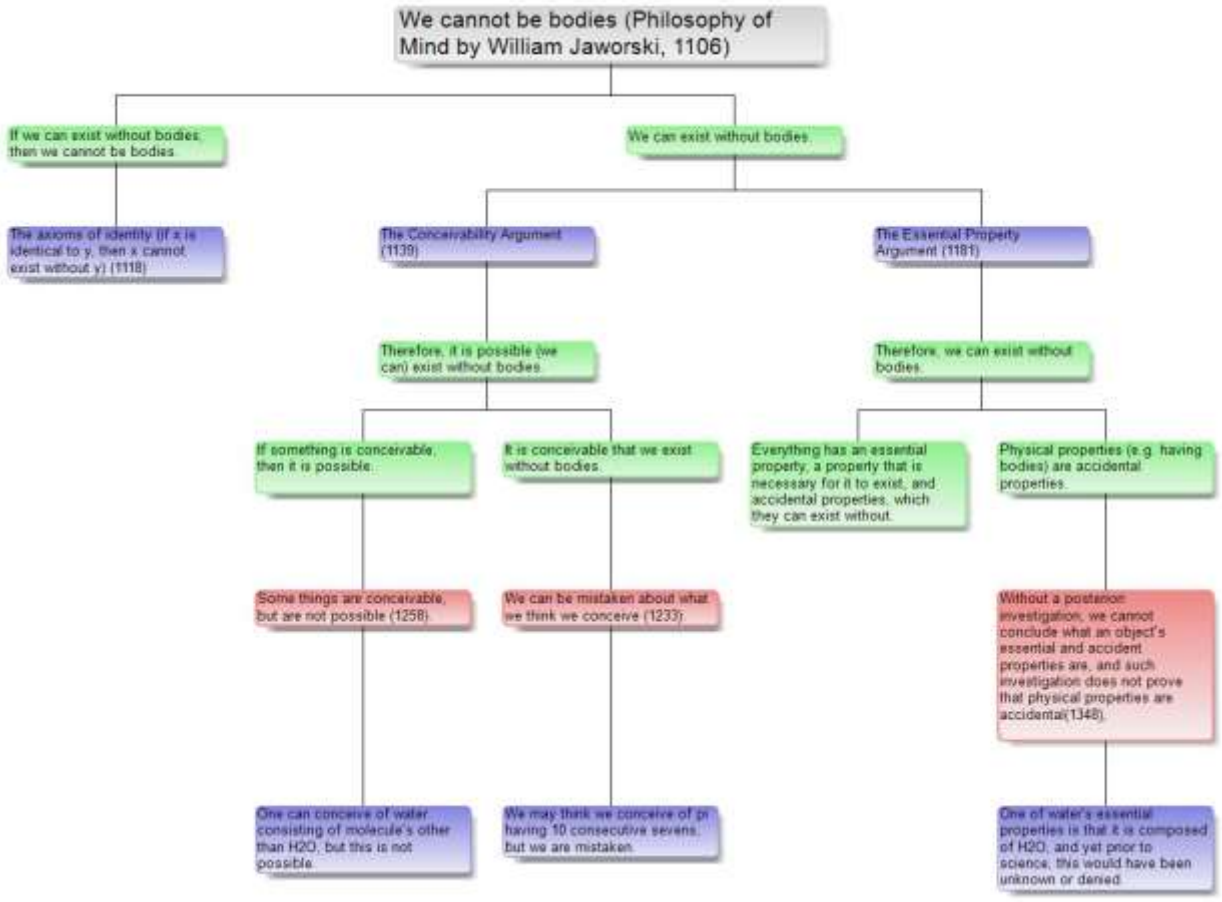
So to sum up – the two major theories in the philosophy of mind are dualism (mind and body) and monism (mind or body). It is up to you which theory you will choose – and to be honest, probably nobody will be able to prove you're wrong. I think it's all about what you feel is right… oops, physicalists don't feel – my bad!



The differences between dualism, idealism, materialism and neutral monism

https://fascinatingfuture.wordpress.com/2015/02/14/the-differences-between-dualism-idealism-materialism-and-neutral-monism/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



Philosophy 101: Introduction to Philosophy
https://www.slideshare.net/jcklp1/philosophy-101-27845564

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Philosophy of Mind 3: Substance Dualism

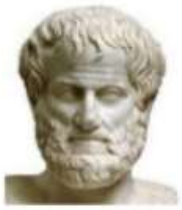
https://mountincompetence.wordpress.com/2014/08/28/philosophy-of-mind-3-substance-dualism/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Philosophy of Mind & Cognitive Psychology
https://www.slideshare.net/scaruffi/tat1-47012477 (Slideshow)

The Mind-Body Debate

- Is our mind made of matter?
- Is it made of a different substance?
- What differentiates the mental from the non-mental?
- How do our mind and our body relate?
- Is our mind inside our body?
- Is our mind born with the body?
- Will it die with the body?
- Does it grow with the body?

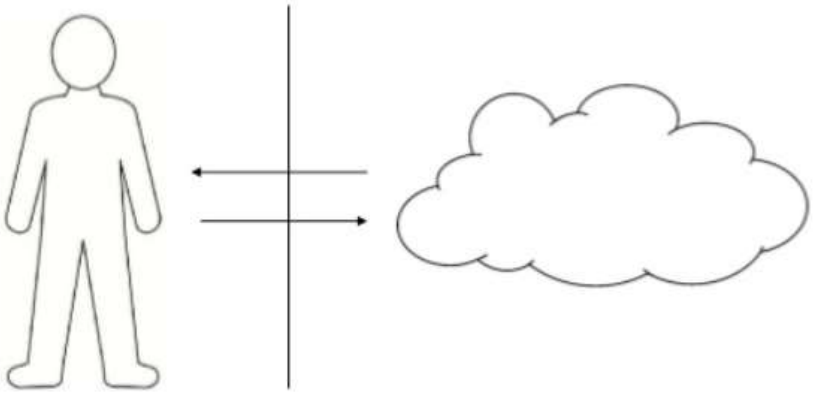


Dualism

- Dualism: mind and body are made of two different substances
  - Substance dualism: the mind is a different (nonphysical) substance altogether from the brain
    - René Descartes (1649)
      - "Res extensa" (things that have an extension) and "res cogitans" (things that think) belong to two separate realms, and cannot be studied with the same tools

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Dualism



- Substance Dualism
  - Aristoteles: living and nonliving things
  - Descartes:
    - Emphasis on mind, not on life
    - The brain is the seat of the body-mind interaction
  - Newton's Physics is a direct consequence of that approach: Physics studies the realm of matter, and only deals with matter

Dualism

- Dualism
  - The Dualist's dilemma: how do mind and body interact?

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Dualism

- Epiphenomenalism (Charles Bonnet - 1754)
  - The mind if an accidental product of the brain
  - The mind merely observes the behavior of the body, although it believes that it actually causes it.
  - Donald Davidson's anomalous monism (1970)

Dualism

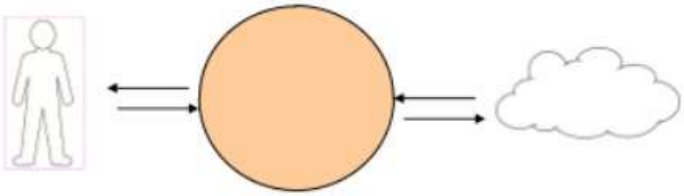
- Property Dualism: the mind is the same substance as the brain, but comes from a different class of properties (that are exclusive of the brain).

  - Charles Dunbar Broad (1925):
    - The universe is inherently layered
    - Each layer has its own properties
    - Each layer yields the following layer but cannot explain the new properties that emerge with it
    - At each level some properties apply, but at the immediately higher level some other properties apply
  - Supervenience/ Jaegwon Kim (1984)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Dualism

- Supervenience/ examples
  - Biological properties "supervene" (or "are supervenient") on physical properties, because the biological properties of a system are determined by its physical properties.
  - Biological and physical properties of an organism are different sets of properties, but the physical ones determine the biological ones.
  - Chemical compounds have density and conductivity, whereas biological organisms have growth and reproduction.
  - Another example: electrons have mass and spin, but electricity has potential and intensity



Dualism

- Trialism: another way to explain how mind and body interact
  - Karl Popper's and John Eccles' world of ideas (1977)
  - Rudy Rucker's mindscape (1982)
  - Roger Penrose's protoconsciousness (1989)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Monism

- Monism: only one substance exists
  - Materialism: only matter exists
  - Idealism: only mind exists

Monism

- Monism
  - Baruch Spinoza (17th century)
    - God is all that exists (he is what is), there is nothing that is not God ("pantheism")

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

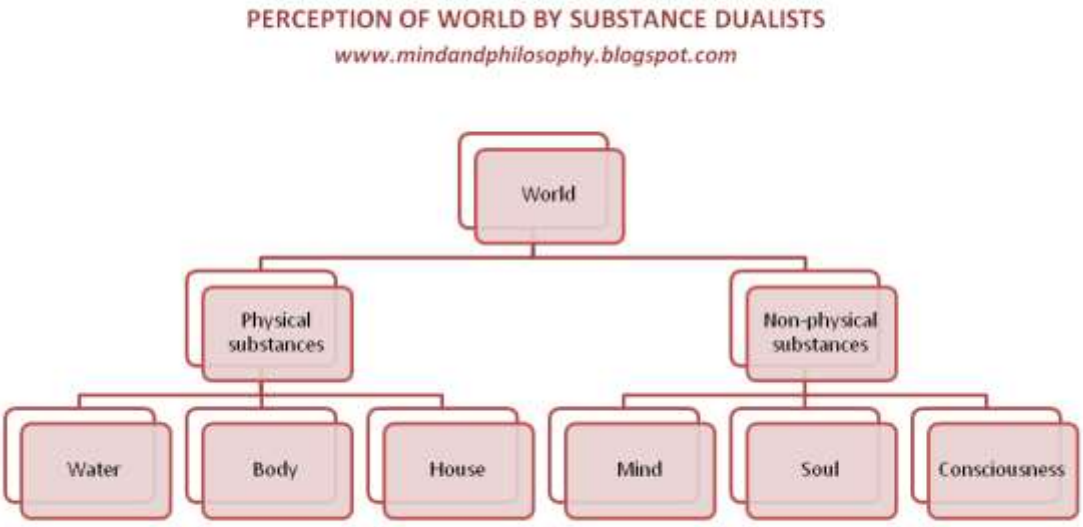
Idealism

- Idealism: only mind exists
  - Gottfried Leibniz (17th c)
    - Everything has a mind ("panpsychism")
    - Minds come in degrees, starting with matter (whose minds are very simple) and ending with God (whose mind is infinite)

  - George Berkeley (18th c)
    - All we know is our perceptions ("esse est percipi")
    - The only thing that exists is the experiences of our mind

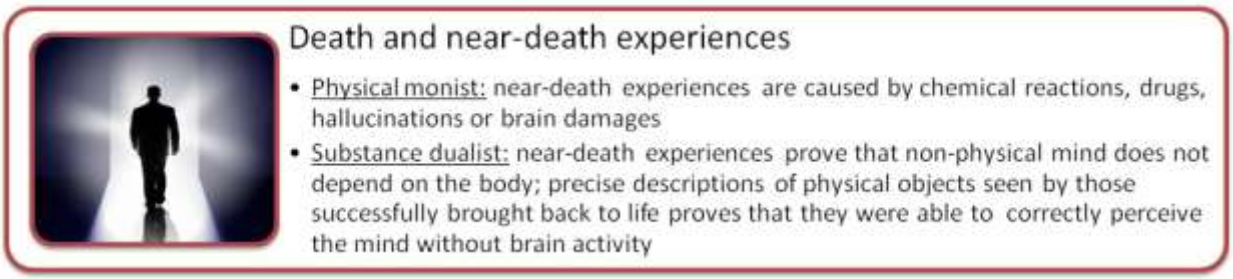
Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Dualism	Substance Dualism	Descartes
	Property Dualism	Broad
		Supervenience	Kim
	Trialism	Popper, Penrose, Rucker
	Epiphenomenalism	Bonnet
Monism	Idealism	Berkeley
		Panpsychism	Leibniz
	Pantheism	Spinoza
	Neutral Monism	Russell
	Materialism
	Identity Theory		Place, Feigl, Smart
	Anomalous Monism		Davidson
Behaviorism	Ryle
	Eliminative Materialism	(Feyerabend, Rorty, Churchland)
Functionalism
	Computational Functionalism	Putnam, Fodor, Stich, Block
	Homuncular Functionalism	Dennett, Lycan, Minsky



Mind–body problem
https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Mind%E2%80%93body_problem

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



Physical monism vs. substance dualism - arguments

http://mindandphilosophy.blogspot.co.uk/2012/07/physical-monism-vs-substance-dualism.html

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Monism vs. Dualism?

http://personalitycafe.com/critical-thinking-philosophy/93771-monism-vs-dualism.html

The following chart outlines all the major theories of the relationships between the mind and the body discussed by modern Western thinkers. "Monist" theories argue there is basically only one thing or substance in us, and that it's either physical or mental or a combination of both. "Dualist" theories argue that there are two such substances.

Positions on Mind/Body Problem
Mind/Body Theory	Type	Central Claims
1. Materialism, or Phyiscalism	Monist	Only bodies and their brains exist. Mental states are somehow reducible to physical states. The "soul" or "mind" is just an illusion. Comes in many varieties.
a. Identity Theory/Reductive Materialism	Monist	Each type of mental state is identical to a type of brain state. One day neurological science will be able to precisely map out this indentity.
b. Functionalism/Anomalous Monism	Quasi-Monist	Functionalism: Mental states are functional states that might be realized in different ways in different organisms. Anamalous Monism: Mental states "supervene" upon physical ones, though they cannot be fully translated into physical descriptions. (A "weak" form of materialism.)
2. Interactionism	Dualist	Mind and body are separate substances that interact casually. Sometimes referred to as "Cartesian Dualism" or simply "Dualism".
3. Epiphenomenalism	Monist	The mind is a mere epiphenomenon, or by-product, of physical processes. It does not cause physical actions.
4. Phenomenalism, or "Dual Aspect Theory".	Quasi-Dualist	All we really know are our mental phenomena. Though physical processes probably cause mental events, there is an irreducible subjective quality to an individual's thought and experience. We don't know what it's like to be a bat (Nagel).
5. The New Mysterians	Unclear	Our limited human intellects cannot comprehend how a piece of meat – our brains – could be conscious. Yet we can be sure that strict materialism and dualism are both hopelessly flawed.
6. Double Aspect Theory, or Neutral Monism	Monist	Mind and body are two distinct aspects of a single neutral substance.
7. Idealism	Monist	Only minds and their thoughts exist. Physical things exist insofar as they are perceived.
8. Parallelism or Preestablished Harmony	Dualist	Mind and body are separate things, but physical events parallel mental events, perhaps guaranteed by a preestablished harmony.
9. Occasionalism	Dualist	Physical events take place on the same occasion as their corresponding mental events, perhaps guaranteed by God's will.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Monism

Monism (Catholic Perspective)

http://www.newadvent.org/cathen/10483a.htm

Excerpt:

(From the Greek monos, "one", "alone", "unique").

Monism is a philosophical term which, in its various meanings, is opposed to Dualism or Pluralism. Wherever pluralistic philosophy distinguishes a multiplicity of things, Monism denies that the manifoldness is real, and holds that the apparently many are phases, or phenomena, of a one. Wherever dualistic philosophy distinguishes between body and soul, matter and spirit, object and subject, matter and force, the system which denies such a distinction, reduces one term of the antithesis to the other, or merges both in a higher unity, is called Monism.

In metaphysics

The ancient Hindu philosophers stated as a fundamental truth that the world of our sense-experience is all illusion (maya), that change, plurality, and causation are not real, that there is but one reality, God. This is metaphysical Monism of the idealistic-spiritual type, tending towards mysticism.

Among the early Greek philosophers, the Eleatics, starting, like the Hindus, with the conviction that sense-knowledge is untrustworthy, and reason alone reliable, reached the conclusion that change, plurality, and origination do not really exist, that Being is one, immutable, and eternal. They did not explicitly identify the one reality with God, and were not, so far as we know, inclined to mysticism. Their Monism, therefore, may be said to be of the purely idealistic type.

These two forms of metaphysical Monism recur frequently in the history of philosophy; for instance, the idealistic-spiritual type in neo-Platonism and in Spinoza's metaphysics, and the purely idealistic type in the rational absolutism of Hegel.

Besides idealistic Monism there is Monism of the materialistic type, which proclaims that there is but one reality, namely, matter, whether matter be an agglomerate of atoms, a primitive, world-forming substance (see IONIAN SCHOOL OF PHILOSOPHY), or the so-called cosmic nebula out of which the world evolved.

There is another form of metaphysical Monism, represented in these days by Haeckel and his followers, which, though materialistic in its scope and tendency, professes to transcend the point of view of materialistic Monism and unite both matter and mind in a higher something. The weak point of all metaphysical Monism is its inability to explain how, if there is but one reality, and everything else is only apparent there can be any real changes in the world, or real relations among things. This difficulty is met in dualistic systems of philosophy by the doctrine of matter and form, or potency and actuality, which are the ultimate realities in the metaphysical order. Pluralism rejects the solution offered by scholastic dualism and strives, with but little success, to oppose to Monism its own theory of synechism or panpsychism (see PRAGMATISM). The chief objection to materialistic Monism is that it stops short of the point where the real problem of metaphysics begins.

In theology

The term Monism is not much used in theology because of the confusion to which its use would lead. Polytheism, the doctrine that there are many gods, has for its opposite Monotheism, the doctrine that there is but one God. If the term Monism is employed in place of Monotheism, it may, of course, mean

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Theism, which is a monotheistic doctrine, or it may mean Pantheism, which is opposed to theism. In this sense of the term, as a synonym for Pantheism, Monism maintains that there is no real distinction between God and the universe. Either God is indwelling in the universe as a part of it, not distinct from it (pantheistic Immanentism), or the universe does not exist at all as a reality (Acosmism), but only as a manifestation or phenomenon of God. These views are vigorously combated by Theism, not only on considerations of logic and philosophy, but also on considerations of human life and conduct. For the ethical implications of pantheism are as detrimental to it as its shortcomings from the point of view of consistency and reasonableness. Theism does not deny that God is indwelling in the universe; but it does deny that He is comprised in the universe. Theism does not deny that the universe is a manifestation of God; but it does deny that the universe has no reality of its own. Theism is, therefore, dualistic: it holds that God is a reality distinct from the universe and independent of it, and that the universe is a reality distinct from God, though not independent of Him. From another point of view, theism is monistic; it maintains that there is but One Supreme Reality and that all other reality is derived from Him. Monism is not then an adequate equivalent of the term Theism.

Physical monism vs. substance dualism - arguments

http://mindandphilosophy.blogspot.co.uk/2012/07/physical-monism-vs-substance-dualism.html

Monism vs. Dualism?

http://personalitycafe.com/critical-thinking-philosophy/93771-monism-vs-dualism.html

Opinions on Monism

http://www.writeopinions.com/monism

Expert:

For the academic journal, see The Monist.

Monism is the philosophical view that a variety of existing things can be explained in terms of a single reality or substance. The wide definition states that all existing things go back to a source which is distinct from them (e.g. in Neoplatonism everything is derived from The One). A commonly-used, restricted definition of monism asserts the presence of a unifying substance or essence.

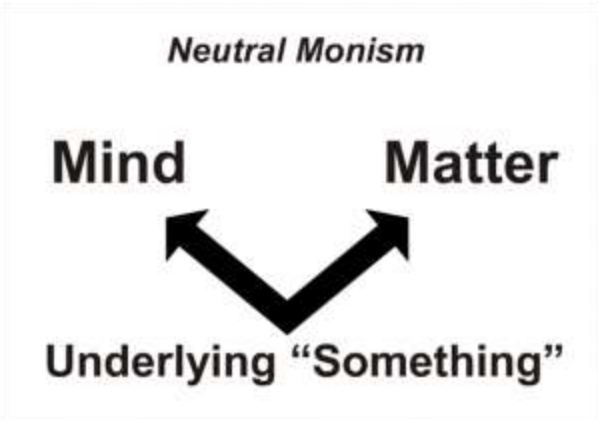
One must distinguish "stuff monism" from "thing monism". Stuff monism posits that only one kind of stuff (e.g. matter or mind) exists, although many things may be made out of this stuff. Thing monism posits that, strictly speaking, there exists only a single thing (e.g. the universe), which can only be artificially and arbitrarily divided into many things.

In contrast to monism are metaphysical dualism and metaphysical pluralism.

The term monism originated from Western philosophy, and has often been applied to various religions.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Philosophy of Mind & Cognitive Psychology
https://www.slideshare.net/scaruffi/tat1-47012477 (Slideshow)



Monism

- Monism: only one substance exists
  - Materialism: only matter exists
  - Idealism: only mind exists

Monism

- Monism
  - Baruch Spinoza (17th century)
    - God is all that exists (he is what is), there is nothing that is not God ("pantheism")

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

There is no One!

https://magagpa.wordpress.com/2017/04/22/there-is-no-one/

Excerpt:

In an earlier letter on my worldview, I labelled myself as a monist. Recently, I found that this needs further elaboration and maybe a correction. Maybe I had a wrong idea of what is “monism”, a term with a long history in western philosophical discourse. The two fields of inquiry we are interested in, here, are ontology (the question of what is real) and epistemology (what is knowledge, what are we able to know about reality).

Basic terminology in Western metaphysics.

Western philosophy is predominantly characterised by the dichotomy of mind and matter. This ontological dualism is built on a strong substance metaphysics: The materialist believes that the one underlying substance of everything is matter and that mental phenomena arise from material processes (for example, thoughts and imagination are the effect of neuronal activity in the brain). The idealist believes the opposite – that the one substance is mind and that the entire perception of the phenomenon “matter” is a mental creation. Both are, in their own way, monists – there is only one substance. Attempts to moderate between the two are dual-aspect monism or neutral monism, for example in Spinoza’s work. Furthermore, there is a strong religious association with the term monism: those who believe that there is only one almighty divine entity as the substance-creator (a god) are religious monists.

Strictly speaking, monistic idealists and materialists are still dualists since they obviously separate mind and matter. What I had in mind when calling my metaphysical viewpoint monistic was a non-separation of the two, a strict non-dualism. Perhaps, I may call it “dialectic monism” to make it clearer: For me as a convinced epistemological constructivist (all we know is constructed by our mind on the foundations of our experiences and formations) and holist (everything is interconnected in a net of conditionality), both mind and matter are embedded into an ultimate reality that “works” by only one set of mechanisms (are call it “laws”). As described earlier, the emergent character of an ever-changing world – the dependent arising in Buddhist philosophy – brought about the feature of conscious perception and cognitive processes. This is the origin of our mind. With our current knowledge about “nature” we may say that it arises from matter. However, at the same time – that is: dialectically – the whole concept of “matter” is the product of our mental reflections on our surrounding. And here my “monism” – thought of as “non-separation” or “emptiness” – comes into play: We easily fall victim of the illusion that our mental processing of the world is somehow separated from the “real” world outside of our mind. We separate into me and you, me and the world, inside and outside, and so forth. This conscious ontology is the phenomenal or conventional reality, but not the ultimate reality or actuality. The call for oneness is, therefore, a prescriptive one: If our goal is to progress towards enlightenment, we need to understand that there is no metaphysical substance, permanence and separable identity of things, but emptiness, impermanence and interconnectedness. In this respect, my “monism” may not be understood as “there is only one”, but as “there is only everything”.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

A next question would be if there is an analogous insight for epistemological monism: The “mind-monist” – the rationalist – would claim that all knowledge is a result of mental reasoning (rationality). The “matter-monist” – the (traditional) empiricist – would understand all knowledge as the result of incoming experiential triggers that are caused by matter (for example, light, sound waves, molecular exchange, etc.). Again, dialectic monism replies that both are working interconnectedly. Ratio needs experience from interaction with the surrounding, while the processing of the experience itself is enabled through a sense-making by our conscious rationality (as depicted in my tree of knowledge). Again, there is no one (ratio or experience), but only everything (the experiential margin of our perception, the pattern formations of the past, our choice of strategies for sense-making and meaning-construction, etc.).

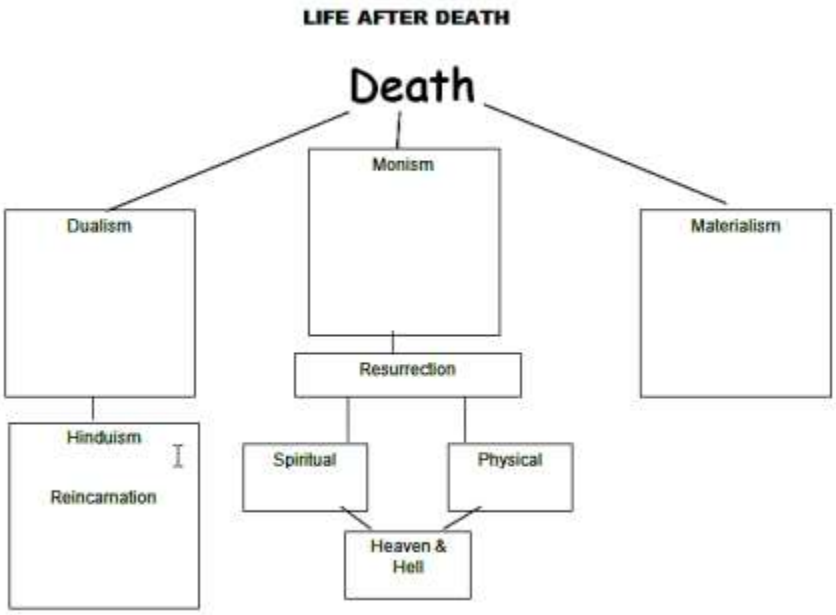
Review and the Intermediate State

http://metaschema.blogspot.com/2017/04/the-consummation-class-11-review-and.html

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

See also:

Dualism section for comparisons with Monism



Body, Soul and/or Spirit? (Trichotomy/Tripartite, Dichotomy/Dipartite, Monism)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Life After Death

https://hokmahrevision.wordpress.com/2013/10/28/life-after-death/

Excerpt:

Dualism and back to Plato

Plato believed that people were made up of a body and a soul. The soul, he believed, was imprisoned in the body and desired release. The soul was very much the guiding principle of the person. Obviously there was a link between the soul and the world of Forms.

At death the soul was released and returned to the world of Forms. It could then return and inhabit another body.

Essentially the soul was thought to be immortal.

Descartes 1596-1650

When studying Descartes we talk about substance dualism. According to substance dualism, our minds and our bodies are two distinct substances capable of existing apart…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Points to be made supporting dualism

1. It is central to the beliefs of at least two major eastern world religions.
2. It is a popular way of coping with death among many westerners – the belief that a loved one's spirit has "gone to heaven" after death.
3. It is also incorporated into the religion of spiritualism.
4. There are some people who talk of having "out of body experiences."

Against dualism

1. Some materialists suggest there is no life after death and therefore no need for the division between body and soul.
2. Peter Geech raises the question of recognition of a disembodied soul.
3. The Christian church teaches about resurrection, including bodily resurrection. In reality much of the language of Christianity in this area is veiled and obscure and the church does little to dispel what it regards as the myth of dualism.

Monism and Religion

This maintains the integrity of body and soul. Christianity would wish to place itself in this category, but at times not only is a concise understanding difficult to ascertain, but the language used to describe life after death is obscure.

Old Testament

In most of the Old Testament there is no belief in life after death. The only clear reference to it in the Protestant Bible is in the Book of Daniel 12:2-4. This is a late work of Apocalyptic literature.

New Testament

Jesus rose from the dead at the end of the gospels. (Matthew 28, Mark 16, Luke 24 and John 20-21).

Gospel evidence

There are two views about the nature of Jesus' resurrection. Some see this as a spiritual event whereby Jesus appears and disappears…Luke 24:13-35. At other times Jesus demands to be touched and eats with the disciples … a sort of bodily proof… Luke 24:36-43. This debate is one which is closely argued by New Testament theologians. While the details need not concern us here, it is as well to know that the debate exists about the nature of Jesus' resurrection.

St Paul's letters

1. St Paul accepted that he was called to be an apostle by the risen Jesus who appeared to him from heaven on the road to Damascus. Acts 9. For Paul the resurrection of Jesus was an undisputed fact. He also said if Jesus had not risen from the dead the Christianity would be a waste of time. 1 Corinthians 15:12-19.
2. Paul also believed that because of Jesus' resurrection, believers hope that they will rise from the dead to be with Christ 1 Corinthians 15:20-22.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

3. He even speculated about the nature of the resurrection body that awaits believers. 1 Corinthians 15:35-46. On earth one has a physical body; yet there awaits in heaven a spiritual body for each person.

Paul is quite complex in this matter, but it is worth knowing his main points in detail. It helps to understand his position and goes some way to explaining the various strands of thinking in Christianity.

Heaven, Hell and Purgatory
Heaven was traditionally the place of God and the place to which Christians hope they will go after death.
Hell – this became in Christian thinking a place of punishment and torture, ruled over by the devil. A great deal of the imagery of Hell depends on Jewish thinking about Gehenna, (a valley near Jerusalem), legends about the underworld and Christian thinking about the fate of Satan.
Many 20th century thinkers, in an attempt to make primitive imagery more acceptable to the modern world prefer to talk about Hell as a place of separation from God.

Purgatory – a belief among some Christians, who think that it is a place where people who die go after death, where their relationship with God is tested and purified so that they may eventually progress to heaven.

Judgement – again a cornerstone of Christian teaching, but not one I would recommend you dig too deeply over on this topic – briefly for the following reasons.

1. Some Christian teachings imply that there is a judgemnent after death (see above)
2. The New Testament seems to imply that judgement comes at the end of the world…the final judgement.
3. Philosophically the concept of judgement depends rather on the nature of one's decision about freewill. If, as a Determinist would claim, we have no freewill then judgement of God on human actions would be unjust and irrelevant for God would be judging actions which were not the responsibility of the person concerned!

Predestination and Divine Election See*: Theodicy
One can trace this back as far as Augustine's Theodicy on the question of evil. You may remember Augustine's ideas about the privation theory of evil and the belief that none of us is worth of heaven because all humans bear the sin of Adam and deserve to be condemned. However through the action of God's grace and the human response to this some may be saved.

This basic idea was developed at the time of the Reformation by John Calvin 1509-1564 into the theory of Divine Election. Some people are destined for heaven because of their relationship with God and some are not. God chooses!

One of Calvin's followers Theodore Beza 1519-1605 developed the full blown doctrine of predestination. All human acts are controlled by God – including one's final destination – heaven or hell.

Monism and Materialism
Generally this is much more straightforward. Monism again refers to a person being a single entity. The body cannot be divorced from the soul at death. Materialists therefore claim that any form of life after death must be physical and for most this means that they reject the idea of an after-life.

NOTE: For issues and details related to Heaven and life after death, as well as covering related topics and including different perspectives (including N.T. Wright) - see my separate "Reference Notes on Heaven" (based in part on the book, Heaven, by Randy Alcorn)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Materialism (Philosophical)

NDT: Materialism

The doctrine that whatever exists is either physical matter, or depends upon physical matter. Thus stated, the doctrine is vague enough to have had numerous expressions from the materialism of Democritus (c. 460-c. 370 BC) and Epicureanism, in which everything is reducible to the movements of atoms, to the mechanical materialism of Thomas Hobbes (1588-1679) and the physicalism both of logical positivism and the dialectical materialism of Karl Marx. Besides being a philosophical position with definite ontological explanations (the denial of the existence of minds or spirits), materialism may also be regarded as a research program and research methodology with no such implications.

Materialism is opposed both by forms of mind-body dualism (e.g. that of Descartes) and by a more general anti-reductionism, which warns that although the universe has a materialistic aspect it is invalid to conclude that it is 'nothing but' matter. At first glance the biblical stress on humanity as part of the creation may seem hospitable to a wholly material creation, but the biblical doctrine of personal continuity after bodily death (2Co 5:1-10) appears to rule this out (see Immortality; Intermediate State).

'Materialism' may also refer to an ethical outlook which regards the only worth-while pursuit to be that of wealth and sensual gratification, but there is no logical connection between the philosophical doctrine of materialism and this ethical stance.

Bibliography: J. R. Smythies (ed.), Brain and Mind (London, 1965). P.H.

NOTE: For issues and details related to Heaven, life after death, the Intermediate State, as well as covering related topics and including different perspectives (including N.T. Wright) - see my separate "Reference Notes on Heaven" (based in part on the book, Heaven, by Randy Alcorn)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Existential Theology (and Philosophy)

Wikipedia: Christian Existentialism

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Christian_existentialism

Excerpt:

Christian existentialism is a theo-philosophical movement which takes an existentialist approach to Christian theology. The school of thought is often traced back to the work of the Danish philosopher and theologian Søren Kierkegaard (1813–1855), who some consider the father of existentialism.[1]

The existential approach to Christian theology has a long and diverse history including Augustine, Aquinas, Pascal and Maritain...

Existential Christianity

http://existentialchristianity.net/

Excerpt:

…I have established this website in order to explore the idea that Christianity is an existential communication. The existential has been ignored in Christianity for centuries, and it is my hope to continue the work of Soren Kierkegaard and other Christian Existentialists in locating the essence of Christianity in our existence within the world. Thus, in an Existential Christianity; doctrine, dogma, and systematic theology becomes sub-ordinated. The existential ideals that Jesus espoused should be the core of any Christian philosophy, and the true way to follow Jesus.

It was Soren Kierkegaard that analytically revitalised the existential nature of Jesus Christ. The formal philosophy of Christian Existentialism was birthed from Kierkegaard, and he is indeed a major inspiration for this website and the articles therein. No man has helped me more in my attempt to follow Jesus.

Existential Theology

http://onlinelibrary.wiley.com/doi/10.1002/9780470670606.wbecc0525/abstract

Excerpt:

Existentialism is generally regarded as having its modern origins in the thought of Danish Lutheran lay theologian Søren Kierkegaard (1813–1855). In reaction both to “dead orthodoxy” in the state church and even more to Hegelian “essentialism” (one can rationally come to understand the cosmos), Kierkegaard argued that it is in fact impossible to get beyond one's own finite and sinful “existence.” In Kierkegaard's celebrated aphorism, “truth is subjectivity.” To think that one is capable of setting forth a necessarily true universal metaphysic is to misunderstand the human condition of estrangement and angst and to fall into egoistic hubris. The only hope for fallen mankind is to recognize one's fall from essence to existence and to seek personal, existential salvation through Jesus Christ.

Existential Theology Topics

https://www.academia.edu/Documents/in/Existential_Theology

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Existential Theology-Why Does It Make Everyone So Uptight? (2011)

https://existentialtheology.wordpress.com/2011/06/13/existential-theology-why-does-it-make-everyone-uptight/

https://existentialtheology.wordpress.com/

Why Existential Theology Is Bankrupt

http://www.presenttruthmag.com/archive/XXV/25-3.htm

It is true to say that an existentialist perspective has permeated the human disciplines.[1] Whether this fact is acclaimed or lamented will depend upon the outlook of the onlooker. It is my opinion that the dominance of existentialism as an evaluative starting point — especially as applied to the discipline of theology — is tragic, and I hope to suggestively demonstrate that existential theology leaves men as they exist in the world totally bankrupt and without hope. This bankruptcy emerges in the following points…

Investigating Existentialism: A Theological Critique of Existential Philosophy

https://www.academia.edu/4755230/Investigating_Existentialism_A_Theological_Critique_of_Existential_Philosophy

Excerpt:

…The principles found in Scripture clearly teach that humanity's essence precedes existence; furthermore, humanity's purposes are found throughout the bible and summed up by Jesus in the New Testament. Jesus clearly taught that loving and glorifying God is the a priori essence of human existence and it is only because of that essence do humans exist. Therefore, it has been shown that existentialism is incongruent with at least two foundational tenets of biblical theology.

Existentialism: How it has affected modern Christianity [Recommended]

https://thechristianwatershed.com/2008/04/08/existentialism-how-it-has-affected-modern-christianity/

Excerpt:

When one thinks of the 19th Century, one often imagines the end of the Enlightenment within philosophy along with scientific positivism as the grand utopian hope for Western people; however, Existentialism finds its roots in the 19th Century as a response to the rampant rationalism that was left over from the Enlightenment. Existentialism was born out of the mind of Soren Kierkegaard as a Christian philosophy. It places a high emphasis on irrational faith that one acts on and does not study, thus rationality is devalued in theistic existentialism. Though born out of a 19th Century response to rationalism, its impact has spread into the 21st century and is finding its way into popular Christian books. Though Existentialism is helpful in reminding Christians that rationalism is inadequate, it destroys the idea that Christians can truly have a relationship with God.

Theistic existentialism is a system that devalues the rationality of faith – sometimes to the point of denying that faith is rational at all – and places a heavy reliance on experience within the faith. Francis Schaeffer defines existentialism as a "…theory of man that holds that human experience is not describable in scientific or rational terms."[1] According to Schaeffer theistic existentialism seeks to deny that "faith" is something that can be rationally explained or studied and instead seeks to have nothing but an experience. This seems to be in line with the Swiss existentialist Karl Jaspers, who believed, "the claim of philosophy to prove or disprove God's existence and agrees with Kant in rejecting this. For 'a proved God would be no God but merely a thing in the world'."[2] Whereas the orthodox faith prior to the 19th century attempted to prove the existence of God through appeals to nature, 'orthodox' theology, through the existentialists, appealed to nothing other than experience arguing that nothing could prove God, because He is beyond understanding.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

It does make sense that existentialism would find its roots in Christianity because of Christianity's emphasis on experience and having a personal relationship with God; Christianity is more than a philosophy, but a way of life. One existentialist sums up Christianity as, "… a type of experience, a dimension of life-in-the-world, an intention to do something in the world, a vision that is at the same time an action. Christianity is not a science to be studied, but an activity that involves the would-be 'Christian' in the whole of his being and alters his very existence."[3] One accusation that has been levied against conservative Christians is that they are too focused on the "theories" of Christianity and the doctrines while ignoring the importance of actions. In fact, one anecdote is often a misquotation of St. Francis that says, "At all times preach the Gospel; if necessary, use words." Though a misquote of St. Francis, it appeals to the idea of working toward something instead of sitting back and figuring out how that something works. The question, according to existentialists, is why would one want to sit back and study God when one could just go out and live in a relationship with Him?

Another key element of theistic existentialism is that it whole-heartedly embraces what they call the "absurd." The absurd can sometimes refer to a self-contradiction or inconsistency in life.[4] For the theistic existentialist, the absurd is accepting faith when all evidence points against faith. Materialistic science ultimately turns man into nothing more than a highly evolved animal, incapable of true morality, true goodness, or true beauty. Rationalism destroys all emotions, making all emotions irrational and inadequate. Both science and rationalism show that there is no God, or at least if there is a God He doesn't care about this world and is distant from it. The existentialist looks at this, agrees that all of it seems logical, but then turns the other way and rebels against the rational system. He seeks after the absurd and embraces it, taking comfort in his experience though it contradicts what he knows to be logical.

The birth of existentialism in the 19th century was a reaction to the Enlightenment thinking. As one author put it, "Both systems fought against by existentialism have one common assumption. It is the absolute primacy and superiority of man's reason and intellect over the rest of man's psychic dispositions, such as imagination, feelings, and intuition."[5] The Enlightenment had left man as nothing more than a machine and the existentialists desperately wanted to avoid falling into that trap. If man is just a machine then art, love, emotions and all the other things that distinguish man from all other animals are just illusions. Unable to accept such a proposition, the existentialists chose to live life 'irrationally' as opposed to rationally.

The father of existentialism, Soren Kierkegaard, proposed his theory late in the 19th century as a response to the Enlightenment finding its way into Christianity. By the mid 19th century, Christianity had succumbed to German higher criticism. Most 'Christians' during that period denied the historicity of the Bible, the miracles claimed in the Bible, treated God as though He were some distant being that man could not relate to, and functioned as atheists. Kierkegaard, saddened by what he saw, developed a system of belief that counteracted the rationalism of his day.

Kierkegaard taught that all of Christianity was based on experience and that one could not prove God existed or even make a rational claim about doctrine within Christianity. He did this because the arguments for God's existence had belittled God and torn away His majestic character. Kierkegaard believed that if people would stop trying to prove God and instead experience Him, the world would be better. As one author puts it, "SK emphasizes that it is impossible to know God from nature, or even to prove His existence."[6] On top of denying that man could prove the existence of God (outside of experience), he also taught that one could not systematize Christianity. As Kierkegaard said in Fear and Trembling, "Even if one were able to render the whole of the content of faith into conceptual form, it would not follow that one had grasped faith, grasped how one came to it, or how it came to one."[7] Though rationality could give a person an idea of what faith was, without an experience, according to Kierkegaard, there was no faith at all.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Finally, Kierkegaard even applied his view to Scripture – though he believed the Bible was infallible (based on a leap, not on any rational ground or evidential ground) he also believed that Christians must interpret the Bible through their own experiences and use the Bible to validate their own experiences. On author sums up Kierkegaard's view of the Bible by saying, "The only interpretation of the Bible that can claim truth and validity belongs in the existential context where it represents with authority the ideal norm for the striving that expresses personal appropriation, and to which it is committed."[8] The Bible has truth for 'today' because it can be experienced. When one comes across a passage, one should not try to decide what it meant, but instead what it means. In other words, looking to the historical meaning is pointless as modern man does not live in the historical context of the Bible, thus it is better for man to read the Bible as a tool to discover what to do now.

Kierkegaard's application of existentialism to theology is not an anomaly – those who have come after Kierkegaard have continued the trend of separating faith and rationality. For theistic existentialists since Kierkegaard, to "live by faith" is not living rationally, but instead is living by action and passion.[9] The rationalists of the 19th century robbed Christianity of its action and relationship, thus the existentialists have responded by making Christianity solely action or solely relational and removing the intellect from the faith. One does not live the Christian life because it makes sense, but instead because one is passionate about it. Even if those passions are wrong, so long as one is passionate it does not matter…

Many modern existential writers follow the idea that one cannot prove the existence of God through evidential appeals or logic. Don Miller, in discussing an evangelism experience he had with an atheistic friend and her intellectual objections to the faith, says, "My belief in Jesus did not seem rational or scientific, and yet there was nothing I could do to separate myself from this belief…Love, for example, is a true emotion, but is not rational. What I mean is, people actually feel it…I think one of the problems Laura was having was that she wanted God to make sense. He doesn't."[10] Rob Bell takes an even more drastic approach, asking that if the virgin birth were proven to be false beyond a shadow of a doubt, would Christians abandon the faith? He concludes that Christians should live the Christian faith regardless of its historical accuracy.[11] In both instances, not only is the Christian faith and proof of God's existence views as unimportant, they are also viewed as unnecessary to living a proper Christian life.

For these modern theistic existentialist the experience of Christianity is the best experience a human can have, but not the only experience. Bell even says, "As a Christian, I am simply trying to orient myself around living a particular kind of way, the kind of way that Jesus taught is possible. And I think that the way of Jesus is the best possible way to live."[12] Why would Jesus be the best way to experience life and not the only way? The flaw, according to Miller, is in the question itself. It assumes that we can know something about the faith – in this instance, its exclusivity – when there are some things about the faith that the mind will simply never understand.[13] Though Kierkegaard taught that Christianity was worthy of all people because it was the most absurd (anti-logical) faith, the modern day followers merely believe Christianity to be the best way, not the only way.

Finally, modern day existentialists draw from Kierkegaard in the way they view Scripture. Just as Kierkegaard viewed Scripture as something human experience validates, modern day existentialists teach that human experience is to shape the understanding of the Bible. Rob Bell even goes so far as to say, "The Bible has to be interpreted. Decisions have to be made about what it means now, today."[14] He goes on to say that the story of Adam and Eve isn't true because it happened, but because it continues to happen to modern man.[15] Likewise, Miller argues that the experience with Jesus is too personal to put on paper. He states, "I think Christian spirituality is like jazz music. I think loving Jesus is something you feel. I think it is something very difficult to get on paper."[16] Thus, the Christian's experience is read into Scripture instead of comparing the experience to Scripture.

The benefit of existentialism is that it brings rationalists back to earth and helps them understand that Christianity is more than a philosophy. In Kierkegaard's time Christianity had become a dead faith, one that was rationally deducted to the point there was no mystery. Eventually, that which was mysterious within the Christian faith became declared “irrational” and therefore true. Kierkegaard was right in acting out against such a belief and showing the limits of man’s rationality. Existentialism does help show Christians that their faith isn’t just conceptual, but is also a faith that requires actions.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Though existentialism brings some good, it also ruins any idea of hope, especially hope in knowing God. As one existential author puts it, “We live in darkness, and we are ourselves full of darkness. Lost in some corner of a silent universe, we can only imagine a God who himself is lost, and whom only the heart can reach, reason being powerless and misleading.”[17] The author sums up the existential condition adequately; though poetic to think of pursuing an unknown God, ultimately it leaves man in a state of despair. Man feels lost and alone, absent of hope, and attempting to find God merely by feeling around for God. This is what Schaeffer calls the “line of despair.”[18] Though man may live happily, Schaeffer argues, if he ever sat and considered his condition he would be brought to tears. This is because the existential condition ultimately leaves man without hope of knowing God.

Another problem that Schaeffer points out is that Kierkegaard was ultimately wrong. Kierkegaard’s idea of faith being a leap into the absurd is presented as a metaphor in the story of Abraham – Abraham, against reasoning and ethics – agreed to offer up his son Isaac as a sacrifice to God. Kierkegaard argued that this was the ultimate display of irrational faith.[19] Schaeffer, however, counters that, “Before Abraham was asked to move toward the sacrifice of Isaac…he had much propositional revelation from God, he had seen God, God had fulfilled promises to him. In short, God’s words at this time were in the context of Abraham’s strong reason for knowing that God both existed and was totally trustworthy.”[20] According to Schaeffer, Abraham had already established a rational basis from which he could trust God without questioning God. Kierkegaard’s original idea – that Abraham acted on blind faith – is faulty and thus, so is existentialism.

One of the most damning things that Schaeffer points out against existentialism is that they (existentialists) are not really experiencing God. “They have not touched the personal God who exists, but for a fleeting moment they have touched the existence of true personality in their love…It is true that in these experiences man has touched something, not nothing; but what he has touched is not God, but the objective reality of the external world and the ‘manishenss’ of man that God has creation.”[21] The reason for this is that existentialists have denied the rationality of the faith, but God is a reasonable God who calls man to reason with Him (Isaiah 1:18). To reason with someone includes propositional thought, logic, truth, and experience. The problem with existentialists is that they still accept the Enlightenment view of epistemology – they begin with man as the center. If man is the center of thinking then rationality cannot operate with God. If, however, God is the center of thinking and imparts man’s rational character onto him, then it makes sense that rationality – even if fallen – can play a part in faith. When one denies that logic plays a part in a relationship with God, then one is not truly experiencing God.

The ultimate solution is to realize that both reasoning and experience play a vital role in the Christian faith. Jesus commands His disciples to love God with all their heart, mind, and soul (Matthew 22:37). Schaeffer argues that this means Christianity is not rationalistic, but does contain a reasonable element to the faith – for Christians A is A and not non-A. Christianity does not end at rationality, but includes the entirety of a person’s being.[22] Schaeffer actually uses the analogy of an artist by saying, ““The artist, to be an artist, needs to be free. On the other hand, if there is no form to his painting, the artist loses all communication with the viewers. The form makes it possible for the artist to have freedom plus communication. In the same way, rationality is needed to open the door to a vital relationship to God.”[23] In other words, without rationality there is no form, no way to function, and thus no way to have a proper relationship. Just like in a human relationship there is a rational element through communication and knowledge of who a person is, in Christianity there is a rational element through communication with God and knowledge of who He is. What makes Christianity so great, however, is that it does not stop with rationality, but includes every aspect of “manishness.”

Existentialism was a reactionary philosophy to the Enlightenment, born in the 19th century, but affecting many 21st century thinkers. It reacted out against the scientific positivism of its day and declared that man is more than a machine, but that humans cannot know how this occurs. It was born within the Christian system and influences Christianity in the modern era. These Christians deny the rational basis of their faith and continue on without truly knowing who God is. Though they seek after an experience with God, they find they cannot have one. The solution is realizing that faith is an experience built upon rational grounds. It is only when one comes to know the true God that one can begin to experience Him.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

[1] Schaeffer, Francis, The Complete Works of Francis A. Schaeffer, ed. Francis Schaeffer, The God Who is There (Wheaton: Crossway Books, 1990), 200.

[2] E.L Allen, Existentialism from Within (London: Routledge and Kegan Paul LTD, 1953), 122.

[3] William Earle, Edie, James M., and Wild, John, Christianity and Existentialism (Chicago: Northwestern University Press, 1963), 5.

[4] Ibid. 9-10

[5] Frederick Patka, Existentialist Thinkers and Thoughts (New York: Philosophical Library, 1962), 14-15.

[6] Marie Mikulova Thulstrup, comp., Bibliotheca Kierkegaardiana: The Sources and Depths of Faith in Kierkegaard (Copenhagen: C.A. Reitzels Boghandel, 1978), 7.

[7] Soren Kierkegaard, Fear and Trembling (London: Penguin Books, 1985), 43.

[8] Sources and Depths, 54

[9] Christianity and Existentialism, 28

[10] Donald Miller, Blue Like Jazz: Nonreligious Thoughts on Christian Spirituality (Nashville: Thomas Nelson Publishers, 2003), 54.

[11] Rob Bell, Velvet Elvis (Grand Rapids: Zondervan, 2005), 26-27.

[12] Ibid. 20

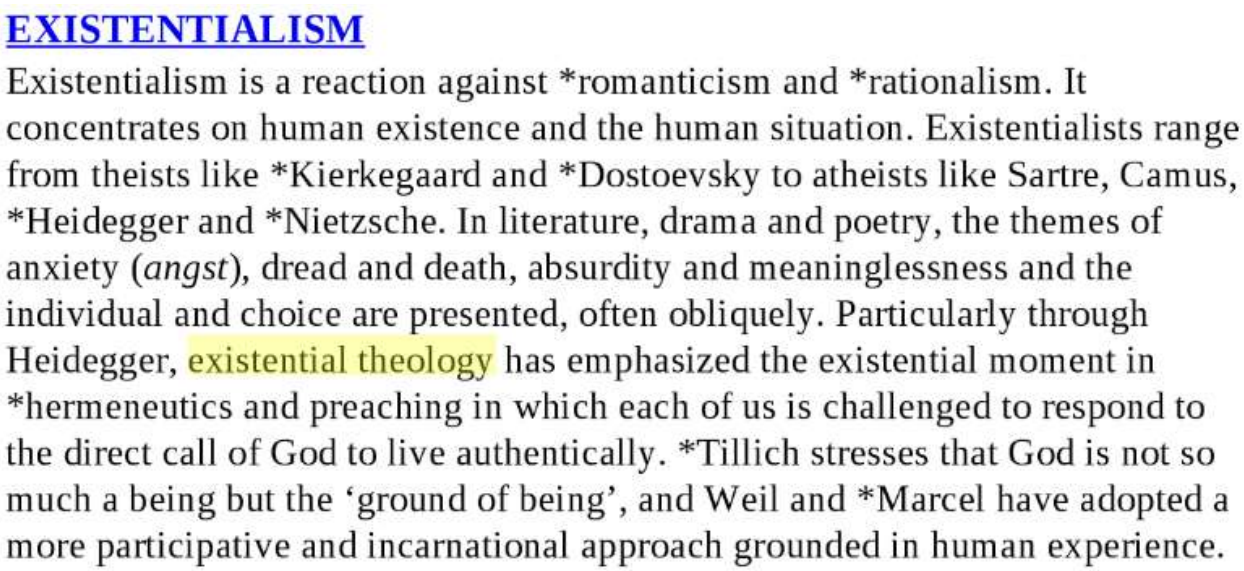
[13] Miller, 205

[14] Bell, 55

[15] Ibid. 58

[16] Miller, 239

[17] Ralph Harper, The Existential Experience (Baltimore: Johns Hopkins University Press, 1972), 68.



[18] Schaeffer, 8

Ventures in Existential Theology: The Wesleyan Quadrilateral and the Heideggarian Lenses of John Macquarrie, Rudolf Bultmann, Paul Tillich, and Karl Rahner (a student thesis – Master of Theology in History and Theology - 2015)
https://repository.tcu.edu/handle/116099117/8355 [PDF]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

http://www.omnilexica.com/?q=existential+theology

Excerpt (Image):

EXISTENTIALISM

Existentialism is a reaction against *romanticism and *rationalism. It concentrates on human existence and the human situation. Existentialists range from theists like *Kierkegaard and *Dostoevsky to atheists like Sartre, Camus, *Heidegger and *Nietzsche. In literature, drama and poetry, the themes of anxiety (angst), dread and death, absurdity and meaninglessness and the individual and choice are presented, often obliquely. Particularly through Heidegger, existential theology has emphasized the existential moment in *hermeneutics and preaching in which each of us is challenged to respond to the direct call of God to live authentically. *Tillich stresses that God is not so much a being but the 'ground of being', and Weil and *Marcel have adopted a more participative and incarnational approach grounded in human experience.

See also: Paul Tillich

Theology of Preaching (2008)
https://www.workingpreacher.org/craft.aspx?post=2079

Excerpt:

Theology of Preaching: The preacher's understanding of the kind of theological event or transaction with God taking place during preaching.

Theologies of preaching ask questions such as: What is God doing during the sermon? What is the nature of the Word of God in preaching? It is important for preachers to consider how to understand preaching as God's Word.

Recently, the homiletic conversation about the theology of preaching has revolved around the type of theological imagination developed by the preacher. Mary Catherine Hilkert speaks of two basic forms of theological imagination in preaching: a dialectical imagination which locates God's redemptive work more narrowly in the redemptive actions of God in and through Jesus Christ, and a sacramental imagination which locates God's Word more widely within the whole of God's creation. This dichotomy is helpful, but it paints in rather broad strokes and can obscure a more detailed range of theologies of preaching currently in existence.

First, there is the existential* theology of preaching. In this theology, preaching supplies a divine Word that answers a crisis or conflict at the heart of human existence. Theologians such as Paul Tillich encouraged this way of thinking about preaching. Human beings are finite, attempting to secure themselves in the world via any number of self-securing idolatries in order to deflect, if only for a while, the deep sense that life is ultimately meaningless and ruled by despair and death. What sermon listeners need, therefore, is a Word of redemption and meaning from outside this situation that will answer their deepest questions about life and death. Preaching brings this Word. The ancient biblical model for this theology of preaching is found in the oracular prophets. Oracle is a form of prophetic or redemptive speech occurring at the center of some process of human inquiry (in Hebrew, darash YHWH or inquiring of God). There are many instances of oracle throughout the biblical witness, including the interpretation of dreams (Joseph and Daniel), divination, interpretation of lots cast or the oracle of the ephod, Saul and the woman of Endor, and those instances in which Jesus answers an existential question in a way that opens up a new set of redemptive possibilities (the healing of the paralytic, Zaccheus, Nicodemus, the Syrophonecian Woman, the woman at the well, the woman with the flow of blood, and so on)…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Salvation Today: Some Reflections on the Christian Doctrine of Salvation

http://www.biblicalstudies.org.uk/pdf/ijt/37-1_082.pdf [PDF]

Looks at contemporary approaches: Existential Theology, Liberation Theology, Process Theology, Evangelical Theology and calls for a "biblically justifiable and contextually relevant understanding of salvation."

Concepts of Salvation

https://quizlet.com/86820998/introducing-christian-doctrine-chapter-31-conceptions-of-salvation-flash-cards/

Existential Theology

http://truthpatrol.blogspot.com/2006/07/existential-theology.html

Existentialist Theology

https://www.rep.routledge.com/articles/thematic/existentialist-theology/v-1

Existentialist theology is a term used to describe the work of a number of theologians, chiefly from the twentieth century, whose writings were strongly influenced by the literary and philosophical movement known as existentialism. Because of the diversity of the movement, it is difficult to say much that is illuminating about existentialist theology as a whole. In general, however, these theologians attempt to understand God in relation to the situation of the concretely existing human individual. Their analysis of human existence is one that emphasizes the freedom of individuals to shape their own identities through choices, and the paradoxical, ambiguous or even absurd character of the reality that humans encounter. Religious faith is seen as closely related to feelings of alienation and despair; faith may grow out of such emotions or it may provide the key to overcoming them, or both these relations may be present at once.

Though the designation of any particular theologian as 'existentialist' is a controversial matter, Karl Barth, Rudolf Bultmann and Paul Tillich are among the more important thinkers whose work exhibits existentialist themes. The entire movement has been strongly influenced, directly or indirectly, by the nineteenth-century Danish philosopher-theologian Søren Kierkegaard, while the works of the Russian novelist Fëdor Dostoevskii and the [atheist] German philosopher Friedrich Nietzsche, both from the late nineteenth century, have also been important.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Existential Theology: Bultmann and Tillich https://quizlet.com/140144489/unit-4-existential-theology-bultmann-and-tillich-flash-cards/

Existentialism
https://carm.org/dictionary-existentialism

Existentialism is a philosophical viewpoint based on Soren Kierkegaard's philosophical work and emphasizes human freedom and abilities. Subjectivity and individual choice are elevated often above conceptual and moral absolutes because truth is found within personal experience. Existentialism would deny objective moral truths.

Existentialism – Stanford Encyclopedia of Philosophy https://plato.stanford.edu/entries/existentialism/

Existentialism – Internet Encyclopedia of Philosophy http://www.iep.utm.edu/existent/

Theopedia: Soren Kierkegaard
http://www.theopedia.com/soren-kierkegaard

Alienation, Existentialism, and the Theological Hole http://www.christianhumanist.org/2010/03/alienation-existentialism-and-the-theological-hole/

Philosophy Basics: Existentialism
http://www.philosophybasics.com/branch_existentialism.html

Excerpts:

Introduction

Existentialism is a philosophy that emphasizes individual existence, freedom and choice. It is the view that humans define their own meaning in life, and try to make rational decisions despite existing in an irrational universe. It focuses on the question of human existence, and the feeling that there is no purpose or explanation at the core of existence. It holds that, as there is no God or any other transcendent force, the only way to counter this nothingness (and hence to find meaning in life) is by embracing existence.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Thus, Existentialism believes that individuals are entirely free and must take personal responsibility for themselves (although with this responsibility comes angst, a profound anguish or dread). It therefore emphasizes action, freedom and decision as fundamental, and holds that the only way to rise above the essentially absurd condition of humanity (which is characterized by suffering and inevitable death) is by exercising our personal freedom and choice (a complete rejection of Determinism).

Often, Existentialism as a movement is used to describe those who refuse to belong to any school of thought, repudiating of the adequacy of any body of beliefs or systems, claiming them to be superficial, academic and remote from life. Although it has much in common with Nihilism, Existentialism is more a reaction against traditional philosophies, such as Rationalism, Empiricism and Positivism, that seek to discover an ultimate order and universal meaning in metaphysical principles or in the structure of the observed world. It asserts that people actually make decisions based on what has meaning to them, rather than what is rational.

Existentialism originated with the 19th Century philosophers Søren Kierkegaard and Friedrich Nietzsche, although neither used the term in their work. In the 1940s and 1950s, French existentialists such as Jean-Paul Sartre, Albert Camus (1913 - 1960), and Simone de Beauvoir (1908 - 1986) wrote scholarly and fictional works that popularized existential themes, such as dread, boredom, alienation, the absurd, freedom, commitment and nothingness.

Criticisms

Herbert Marcuse (1898 - 1979) has criticized Existentialism, especially Sartre's "Being and Nothingness", for projecting some features of living in a modern oppressive society (features such as anxiety and meaninglessness) onto the nature of existence itself.

Roger Scruton (1944 -) has claimed that both Heidegger's concept of inauthenticity and Sartre's concept of bad faith are both self-inconsistent, in that they deny any universal moral creed, yet speak of these concepts as if everyone is bound to abide by them.

Logical Positivists, such as A. J. Ayer and Rudolf Carnap (1891 - 1970), claim that existentialists frequently become confused over the verb "to be" (which is meaningless if used without a predicate) and by the word "nothing" (which is the negation of existence and therefore cannot be assumed to refer to something).

Marxists, especially in post-War France, found Existentialism to run counter to their emphasis on the solidarity of human beings and their theory of economic determinism. They further argued that Existentialism's emphasis on individual choice leads to contemplation rather than to action, and that only the bourgeoisie has the luxury to make themselves what they are through their choices, so they considered Existentialism to be a bourgeois philosophy.

Christian critics complain that Existentialism portrays humanity in the worst possible light, overlooking the dignity and grace that comes from being made in the image of God. Also, according to Christian critics, Existentialists are unable to account for the moral dimension of human life, and have no basis for an ethical theory if they deny that humans are bound by the commands of God. On the other hand, some commentators have objected to Kierkegaard's continued espousal of Christianity, despite his inability to effectively justify it.

In more general terms, the common use of pseudonymous characters in existentialist writing can make it seem like the authors are unwilling to own their insights, and are confusing philosophy with literature.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Hubert Dreyfus on Existential Phenomenology (Videos) [Recommended]

https://philosophytheology.wordpress.com/2012/09/20/hubert-dreyfus-on-existential-phenomenology/

Existential graph

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Existential_graph

New Dictionary of Theology (NDT): Existentialism

Existentialism covers a wide range of themes and authors, Christian, Jewish to atheistic; from Kierkegaard, K. Jaspers, (1883-1969), J. P. Sartre (1905-80) and M. Heidegger (1889-1976) to A. Camus (1913-60), G. Marcel (1889-1973) and S. Weil (1909-43). It finds its expression in and through drama, literature, poetry, art, music, psychoanalysis and philosophy. The variety of authors is bound together by the refusal to belong to any school of thought or philosophy, the denial of the adequacy of any and every system and set of beliefs, and dissatisfaction with traditional philosophy as superficial and remote from real life. Essentially existentialism is a revolt against rationalism, with its stress on reason alone, for its failure to progress beyond the obvious, its lack of engagement with people, and its ignoring of their real needs. Existentialism revolts against romanticism on the grounds of its self-deceptive escape from the horrors of life in the here and now, and its unjustifiable optimism about people.

Given the existentialist rejection of systems, the main common thread lies in the themes on which the existentialist expresses his view obliquely. Existentialism is to be experienced directly rather than taught.

Main themes

1. Anxiety (Angst), dread and death

Existentialist thinking is intended to appeal to the whole personality of a person. It involves one's whole life. One thinks existentially when matters of life and death are at stake. These fundamental realities and our experience of them evoke overwhelming feelings of anxiety, dread and ontological wonderment—amazement at being. The experience of suffering and the meaninglessness of life cause such feelings.

2. Being and existence

Existentialism is concerned with the nature of being and nonbeing. These realities always evade our concepts and cannot be reduced to neat formulae. Sartre distinguishes the being of objects, which is being en soi . This is being which rests in itself and is present, at hand, for humanity to use or abuse. In contrast, human being is being pour soi . It is self-awareness, and the capacity to shape other beings and one's own being. For Heidegger, being is understood through an analysis of time. Temporality is basic to the very constitution of existence in terms of past, present and future. This he calls ‘care'. Past, present and future are paralleled by facticity, fallenness (forfeiture) and possibility. Humanity is possibility, because it stands before an open future in which it is always in process and incomplete. Humanity is facticity, because its past in terms of heredity, environment and previous experience inevitably shapes what we are and may become. Humanity is ‘fallen' in its tendency to shrink from responsibility to the past and the future by hiding in the present. Humanity is faced with a choice in existence. Unauthentic existence lacks will (irresoluteness), lives in the present, the past or the future, and refuses to acknowledge facticity and possibility. Authentic existence is resolute and makes choices in the present in light of the past and open to the future. The authentic self is a unitary, stable, and relatively abiding structure, in which the polarities of existence are held in balance and its potentialities are brought to fulfilment.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

3. Intentionality

Existentialism focuses on the inner experiences of will, emotions, beliefs, imagination and intention. These are understood by examination of the individual consciousness. The key to understanding all knowledge is the study of internal phenomena, rather than the external behaviour which appears to follow such states.

4. Absurdity

The existentialist believes that there is no meaning in any one thing, or in everything put together. The world is absurd and pointless. To be human is to choose in the light of the absurdity of the world.

5. Choice and the individual

Choice is the centre of human existence. Self-conscious being is being which chooses. We are what we choose. We make ourselves by our choices. Not to choose is itself a choice. Choices have no rational basis or purpose, so it does not matter what we choose, only that we choose. Thus in drama, literature and poetry the existentialist often focuses on impossible choices, especially of the moral variety, and the human necessity to choose in the face of absurdity. The individual agent is the one who has to choose, for the crowd is a lie and offers an escape from responsibility. Individual responsibility for one's own existence is necessary.

Impact on theology

Existentialism, through Heidegger, has influenced and formed existential theology especially in the work of Barth, Bultmann, Tillich and Macquarrie. This approach stresses the existential moment in hermeneutics and preaching, in which humanity is summoned to respond to the call of God to live an authentic life. Jesus is the perfect example of an authentic existence. The nature of being, as outlined by existentialism, has led Tillich to interpret God as the ‘ground of our being' rather than as a being at all. This affects both theological epistemology and ontology (see Being). Existentialist philosophy asks the fundamental human questions of existence. Theology's task is to provide the answers.

Other writers such as Marcel and Weil have adopted an existential approach to theology in contrast to a clinically abstract theology. For them, theology is participative and incarnational, emphasizing the ontological weight of human experience. The key is dialogue and communication as an individual (the ‘I') with the eternal ‘Thou'. This leads to faith and assurance.

Critical reflections

Positively, the existentialist reminds us that true religion must be individual, involved with the real needs of people, and lived out authentically. The existentialist paints an accurate picture of life without God. It is no accident that many find in existentialism the roots of the ‘Death of God' theology. Negatively, the philosophy is self-contradictory in its basic statement that ‘everything is meaningless'. It isolates the will from the whole personality, the individual from the community, and the inner life from the outer life. it concentrates on the exceptional and unusual and gives too little systematic understanding of the nature of being itself. In theological terms, the danger is of a loss of objectivity and any genuine understanding of God and of an amalgamation of a philosophy which is at root anthropocentric and atheistic with an approach to theology which is too individualistic and experience-oriented, and allows modern culture to operate a critical function as a standard by which to judge biblical and theological understandings and expressions.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Bibliography

J. Macquarrie, An Existentialist Theology (London, 1955); idem , Existentialism (London, 1972); D. E. Roberts, Existentialism and Religious Belief (New York, 1957); J.-P. Sartre, Existentialism and Humanism (ET, London, 1948); M. Warnock, Existentialism (London, 1970).

E.D.C.

Ancient existentialism (Ecclesiastes 2:1-11).

This recent philosophical school holds that life is meaningless, but that a person can affirm his or her significance by acting. Solomon tried. He tested sensual pleasures; he undertook great building projects; he assembled wealth-he denied himself nothing his heart desired. And all the while he felt as empty as ever. In the darkness of night he thought about his experiences and accomplishments and was filled with a sense of futility: "Everything was meaningless" (v. 11).

Even the wealthiest and most successful men and women of today, in their quiet moments, feel what Solomon felt. There is a void in every life that only God can fill. [BBRC]

See also my other separate reference resources*:

Christian Scholarship: Biblical – Theological – Philosophical

The Complete Sayings of Jesus – NKJV (with Appendix)

(Note: NKJV is primary text to make reading easier, except when it varies significantly from the original KJV or a different translation text is clearer and/or deemed more accurate.)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Neo-Orthodox Theology

Wikipedia: Neo-Orthodoxy

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Neo-orthodoxy

Neo-orthodoxy, in Europe also known as theology of crisis and dialectical theology, was a theological movement developed in the aftermath of the First World War. The movement was largely a reaction against doctrines of 19th-century liberal theology and a reevaluation of the teachings of the Reformation. Karl Barth is the leading figure associated with the movement.

(A similar title has been given to the unrelated Eastern Orthodox theology of Christos Yannaras and John Romanides.)

What is Neo-Orthodoxy?

https://www.gotquestions.org/neoorthodoxy.html

Neo-Orthodoxy

http://www.ligonier.org/learn/devotionals/neo-orthodoxy/

> "You shall love the Lord your God with all your heart and with all your soul and with all your mind. This is the great and first commandment" (Matt. 22:37–38).

If you were to ask scholars who the most important theologian of the twentieth century was, some would answer "Karl Barth." Barth was the most important proponent of neo-orthodoxy during the first half of the twentieth century, and his work continues to influence the church today.

Neo-orthodoxy was a reaction to the Protestant liberalism of the nineteenth century, which denied biblical supernaturalism and defined faith solely as a "feeling of absolute dependence." The bankruptcy of such views in light of the horrors of two world wars led Barth and others to try to restore the Bible to prominence in the church.

While neo-orthodox theologians take a step in the right direction, they do not go far enough. While neo-orthodoxy does not deny the supernatural character of the Bible, it does deny that its propositions are objective, inerrant truth. Its proponents redefine truth as an "encounter" or an "event." For the neo-orthodox, the Bible becomes the Word of God when the Holy Spirit uses the words of Scripture to bring us into an encounter with Christ. They say that the Bible as an objective source of propositions is never in and of itself God's revelation because God only reveals Himself in the events of redemptive history and in His interactions with us today.

The neo-orthodox maintain that passion for Christ comes from a fervent encounter with the living Christ and not from the acceptance of propositional truth. However, this dichotomy between event and proposition is a false one. The Bible never calls us to study its propositions without fervor. As today's passage teaches, we are to love God with our minds. This involves the study of propositional truth.

Moreover, while God does reveal Himself in the events of redemptive history, these events are not enough by themselves. We also need the authoritative, propositional interpretation of these events. Jesus

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Christ, the living Word of God revealed Himself in the events of His life and in propositions interpreting those events, (Luke 24:36–49). Without the propositional interpretation of these events, we would never fully understand them (1 John 1:1–4; 5:20).

Coram Deo

We do well to remember that true faith is not merely an assent to propositions. It is also a living and active trust in the Lord Jesus. Yet we must never separate these two things, for we cannot truly assent to Scripture's teaching without trusting in Jesus, nor can we really trust in Jesus without being persuaded by biblical propositions. As you endeavor to defend biblical authority, remember that we do this in order that we might have a firm foundation for trusting in Jesus.

Neo-orthodoxy – What is it?

https://www.compellingtruth.org/neoorthodoxy.html

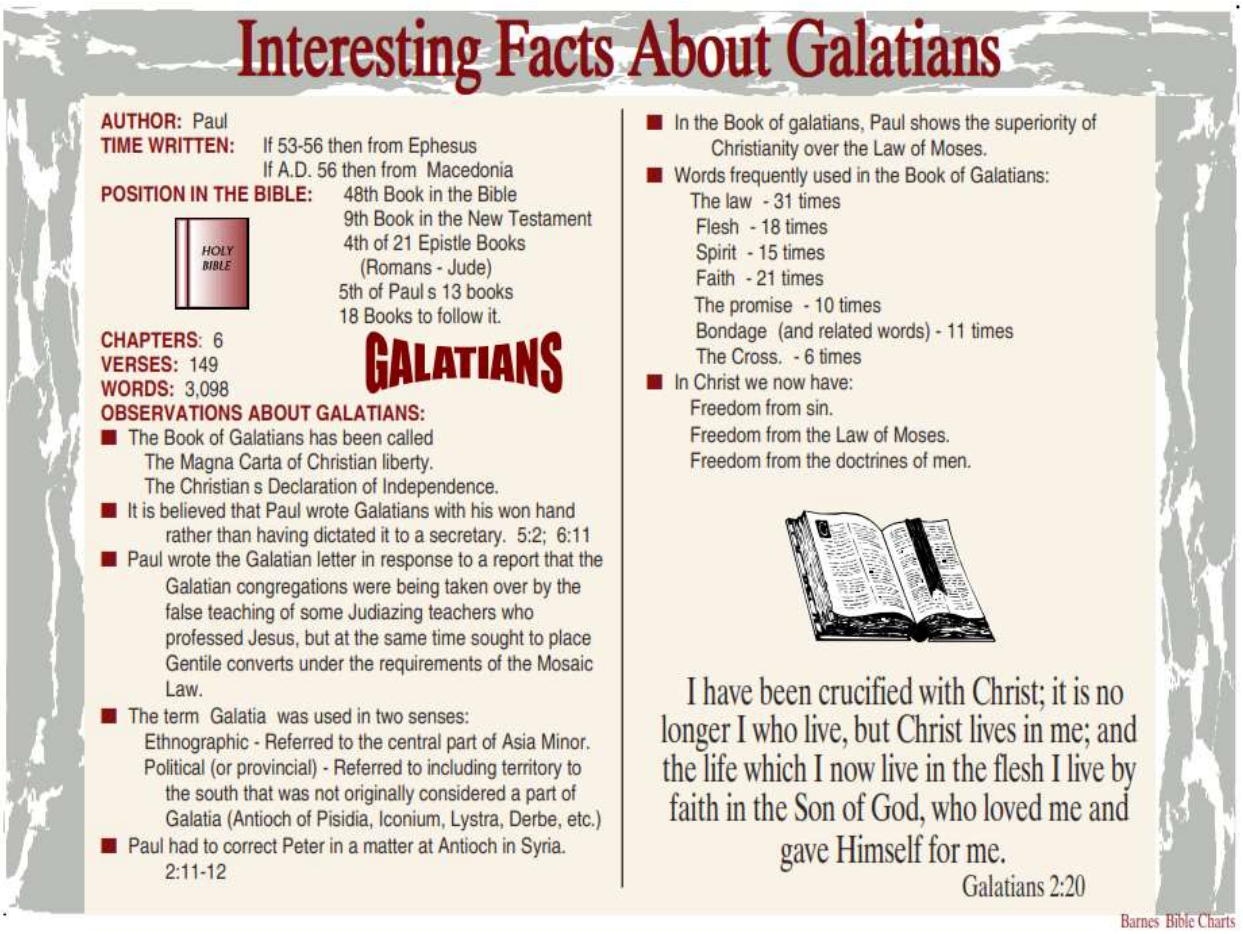
Neo-orthodoxy is a theological approach that arose following World War I in response to the liberal Protestantism of the early Twentieth Century. It was popularized by two major European theologians, Karl Barth and Emil Brunner.

Neo-orthodoxy emphasizes the revelation of God Himself as the source and foundation of Christian beliefs. In other words, rather than reason or Scripture as the foundation of belief, the teaching is that God Himself is the revelation. Barth was known for popularizing the idea of revelation being "the Word within the word" rather than Scripture itself as the focus. The focus on the transcendence of God and His being "wholly other" stood as a point of importance.

The term "Neo-orthodoxy" developed because some Reformed writers saw this approach to God and theology as a new form of orthodoxy in contrast with the liberal Protestantism that was common in European theological studies at that time. While this was an accurate description, many theologians dispute whether the views of Neo-orthodoxy are fully orthodox in comparison with biblical teachings.

Neo-orthodoxy teaches that the Scripture is a communicator or medium revealing God rather than being revelation by itself. The Word of God is Jesus Himself rather than Scripture serving as God's Word. The emphasis is on an encounter with God rather than a focus on the inspired words of Scripture. While it is true that Scripture communicates revelation about God, Scripture itself teaches that its words are "God-breathed" or an extension of God Himself. Second Timothy 3:16-17 states, "All Scripture is breathed out by God and profitable for teaching, for reproof, for correction, and for training in righteousness, that the man of God may be complete, equipped for every good work."

Some have attempted to teach that Neo-orthodoxy is a middle ground between liberalism and evangelicalism. However, this is not completely accurate as the views of Neo-orthodoxy stand on their own and have never sought to provide any such bridge. Instead, it is perhaps better to evaluate Neo-orthodoxy by its own descriptions as a worldview that affirms parts of biblical teachings, while neglecting others.



In addition, the focus on an encounter with Jesus as emphasized in Neo-orthodoxy must be based on the teachings found in the Bible itself. Romans 10:17 (NIV) teaches that, "faith comes from hearing the message, and the message is heard through the word about Christ." The facts upon which a person believes and comes to faith in Christ are rooted in historical actions affirmed by the early Christians as being of primary importance (1 Corinthians 15:3-4).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Galatians related

[Romans related] [Ephesians Related]

Charts and other Resources on the Book of Galatians

[See: Galatians Menu on next page]

Paul and His Letter to the Galatians (N.T. Wright Galatians study welcome video) http://ntwrightonline.org/galatians/
"Being Transformed by the Renewing of the Mind"

See also*: Paul: Background/Maps

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Wikipedia: Galatians (Paul's Letter to the Galatians)

Galatians – Beginning (Top)
Galatians – Maps
Galatians – Intro
Galatians – Charts
Galatians – Overviews
Galatians – Getz Videos
Galatians – NT Wright related
Galatians - Commentary
Galatians – Related Topics

The Epistle to the Galatians, often shortened to Galatians, is the ninth book of the New Testament. It is a letter from Paul the Apostle to a number of Early Christian communities in Galatia. Scholars have suggested that this is either the Roman province of Galatia in southern Anatolia, or a large region defined by an ethnic group of Celtic people in central Anatolia.

Paul is principally concerned with the controversy surrounding Gentile Christians and the Mosaic Law during the Apostolic Age. Paul argues that the Gentile Galatians do not need to adhere to the tenets of the Mosaic Law, particularly circumcision, by contextualizing the role of the law in light of the revelation of Christ. Galatians has exerted enormous influence on the history of Christianity, the development of Christian theology, and the study of the apostle Paul.

Composition

No original of the letter is known to survive. The earliest reasonably complete version available to scholars today, named P46, dates to approximately the year 200 AD, approximately 150 years after the original was presumably drafted. This papyrus is fragmented in a few areas, causing some of the original text carefully preserved over the years to be missing, "however, through careful research relating to paper construction, handwriting development, and the established principles of textual criticism, scholars can be rather certain about where these errors and changes appeared and what the original text probably said."

Some scholars date the original composition to c. 50–60 AD. Other scholars agree that Galatians was written between the late 40s and early 50s.

Authenticity

Biblical scholars agree that Galatians is a true example of Paul's writing. The main arguments in favor of the authenticity of Galatians include its style and themes, which are common to the core letters of the Pauline corpus. Moreover, Paul's possible description of the Council of Jerusalem (Gal.2:1–10) gives a different point of view from the description in Acts 15:2–29, if it is, in fact, describing the Jerusalem Council.

The central dispute in the letter concerns the question of how Gentiles could convert to Christianity, which shows that this letter was written at a very early stage in church history, when the vast majority of Christians were Jewish or Jewish proselytes, which historians refer to as the Jewish Christians. Another indicator that the letter is early is that there is no hint in the letter of a developed organization within the Christian community at large. This puts it during the lifetime of Paul himself.

Tom Wright: Galatians Introduction (2011 St Andrews)

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=IZUDuBu1xvY [Video]

See also: Gene Getz Life Application videos on Galatians (Principle #1 Video)

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Background: Galatia

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Galatia

Ancient Galatia (/gəˈleɪʃə/; Greek: Γαλατία) was an area in the highlands of central Anatolia (Ankara, Çorum, Yozgat Province) in modern Turkey. Galatia was named for the immigrant Gauls from Thrace (cf. Tylis), who settled here and became its ruling caste in the 3rd century BC, following the Gallic invasion of the Balkans in 279 BC. It has been called the "Gallia" of the East, Roman writers calling its inhabitants Galli (Gauls or Celts).

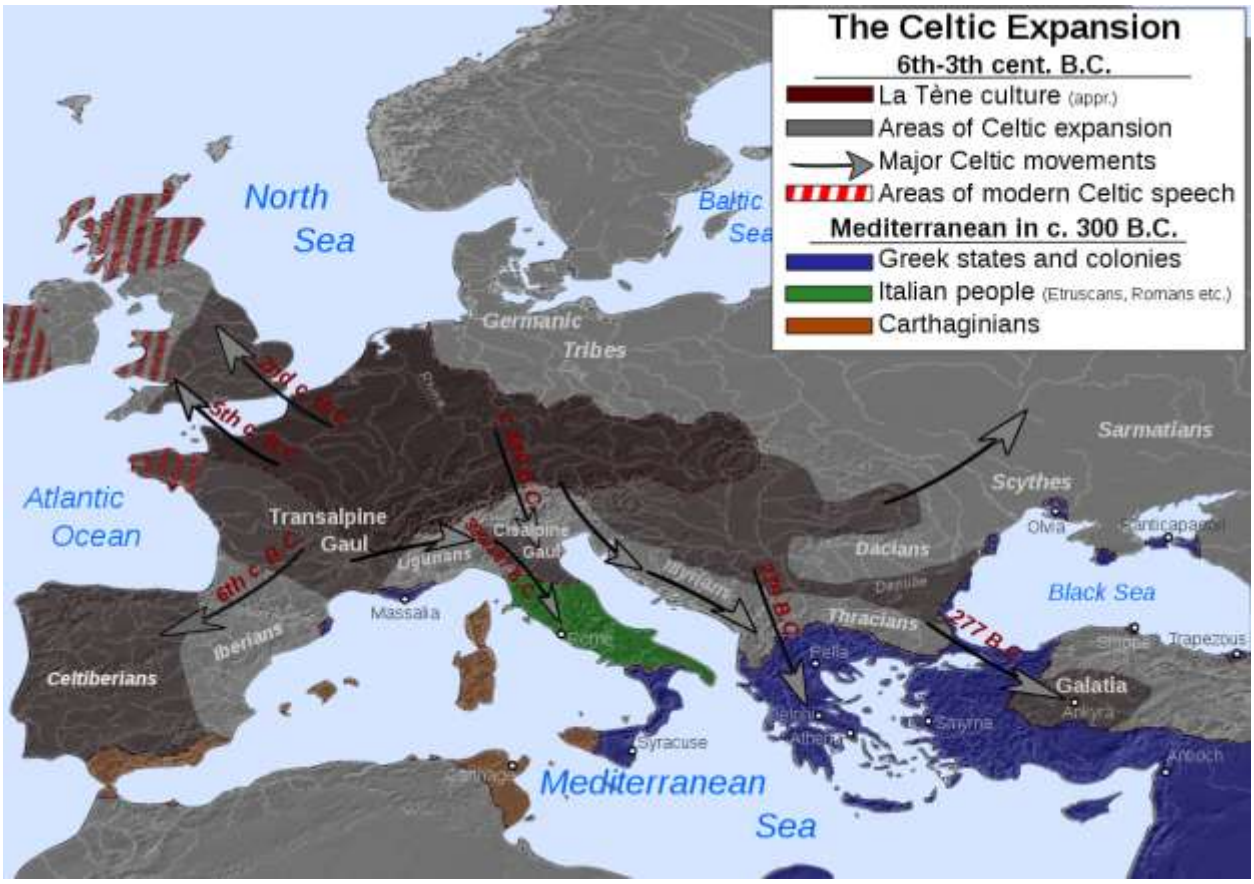
Galatians – Beginning (Top)

Galatians – Maps

Galatians – Intro

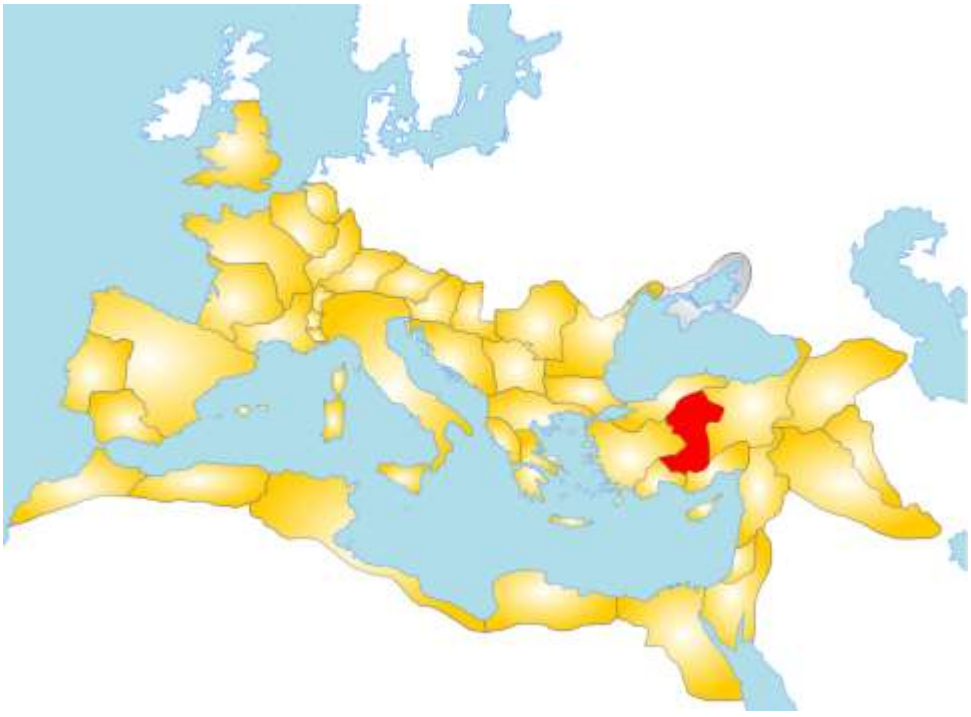
Galatians – Charts

Galatians – Overviews



Galatians – Getz Videos

Galatians – NT Wright related



Galatians - Commentary

Galatians – Related Topics

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Galatia as a Roman Province 117 AD

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Maps of Galatia
http://www.christinyou.net/pages/galmaps.html

Three maps showing the geographical region of Galatia in different periods of Roman history.

Map #1
Ethnic Kingdom of Galatia
c. 278 to 25 B.C.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Map #2
Roman Province of Galatia
25 B.C. to 137 A.D.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Map #3
Roman Province of Galatia
After 137 A.D.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Galatians – Background

https://www.studylight.org/commentaries/bnb/galatians-0.html

Excerpt:

The Country. (1) Politically it was the Roman province which included Lycaonia, Isauria, and parts of Phrygia and Pisidia. (2) Geographically it was the center of the Celtic tribes, and in this sense it seems to be used in this epistle and in Acts (Gal. 1:1; Acts. 13:14; 14:6; 16:6).

The Celtic [Gaulic] People. They were descended from the Gauls [hence, the name of the area, Galatia] who sacked Rome in the fourth century B. C. and in the third century B. C. invaded Asia Minor and northern Greece. A part of them remained in Galatia. predominating in the mixed population formed out of the Greek, Roman and Jewish people. They were quick-tempered, impulsive, hospitable and fickle people. They were quick to receive impressions and equally quick to give them up. They received Paul with enthusiastic joy, and were then suddenly turned from him (Gal. 4:13-16).

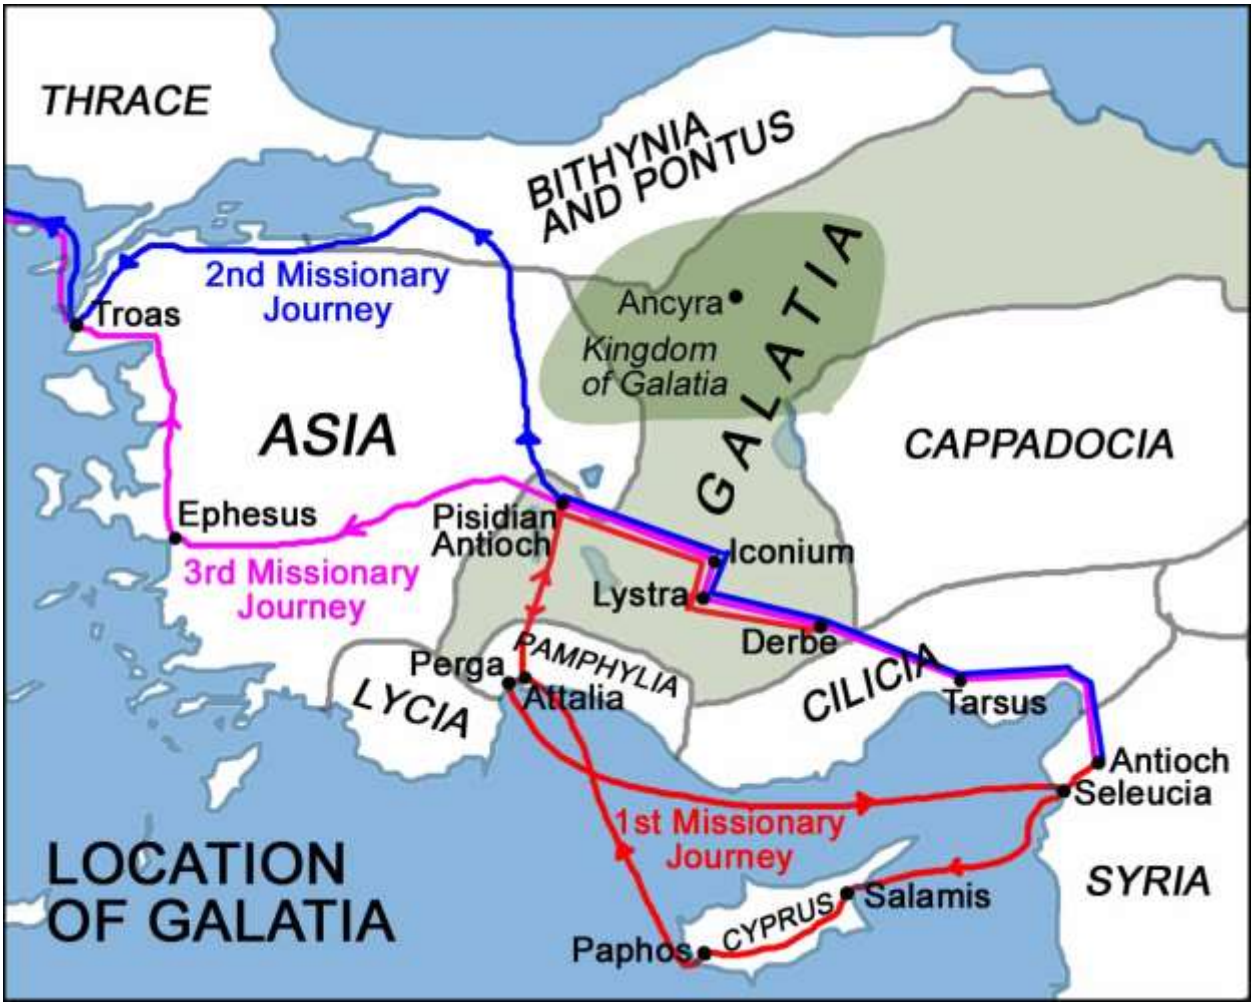
The Churches of Galatia. Just how and by whom these churches were established we do not know. The great highway from the East to Europe passed through this region, making it possible for some of those present at Pentecost to have sown the seed of the gospel there. It could have sprung up from work done by Paul while at Tarsus from the time of his return from Arabia to his going to Antioch with Barnabas. But the scripture gives us no word about this.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Geography relevant to Paul's life, stretching from Jerusalem to Rome

Source: Wikipedia

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



Roman Provinces in the NT: Cappadocia - Cilicia – Lycia http://www.biblestudy.org/roman-empire/roman-provinces-in-new-testament/cilicia-lycia-cappadocia.html

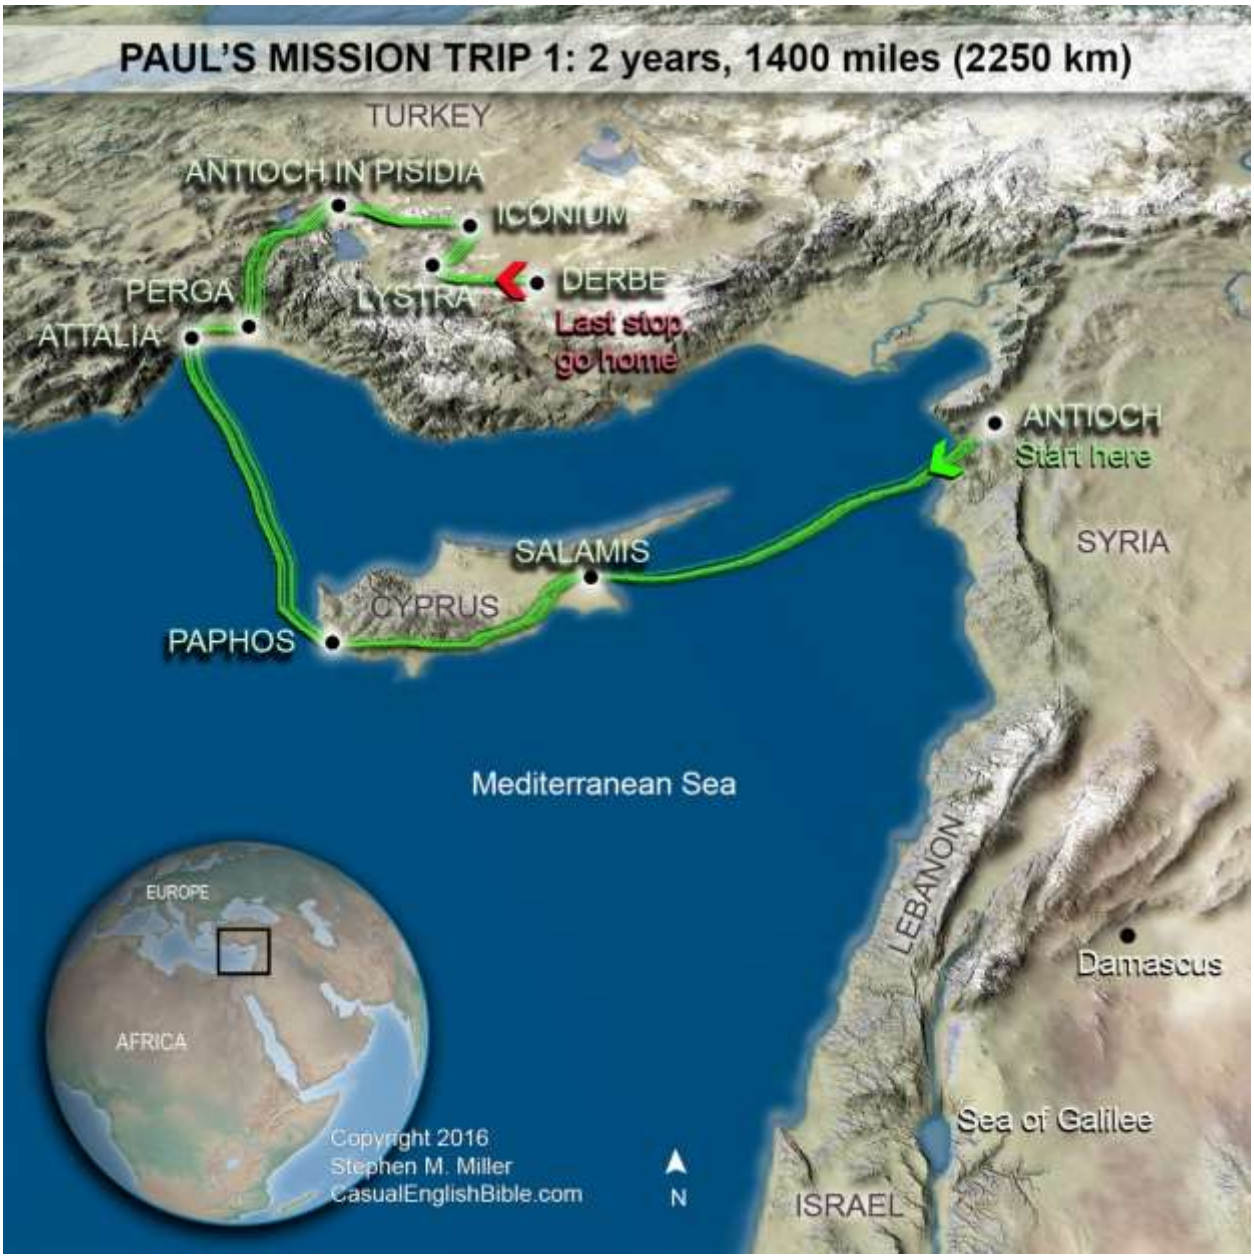
The Four Cities of Galatia
http://www.mastertoolkit.com/vcmedia/2378/2378037.pdf [PDF]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Paul's Journeys Across Galatia
http://www.jesuswalk.com/galatians/



Source: http://www.jesuswalk.com/galatians/maps/galatians-map-1200x959x300.jpg

Engaging the Bible in Mission Theology: Scholarship, James M. Scott
REVIEW: James M. Scott, Paul and the Nations: The Old Testament and Jewish Background of Paul's Mission to the Nations with Special Reference to the Destination of Galatians
https://bibleandmission.blogspot.com/2013/05/engaging-bible-in-mission-theology_17.html

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

https://www.casualenglishbible.com/casual-english-bible-maps-galatians/

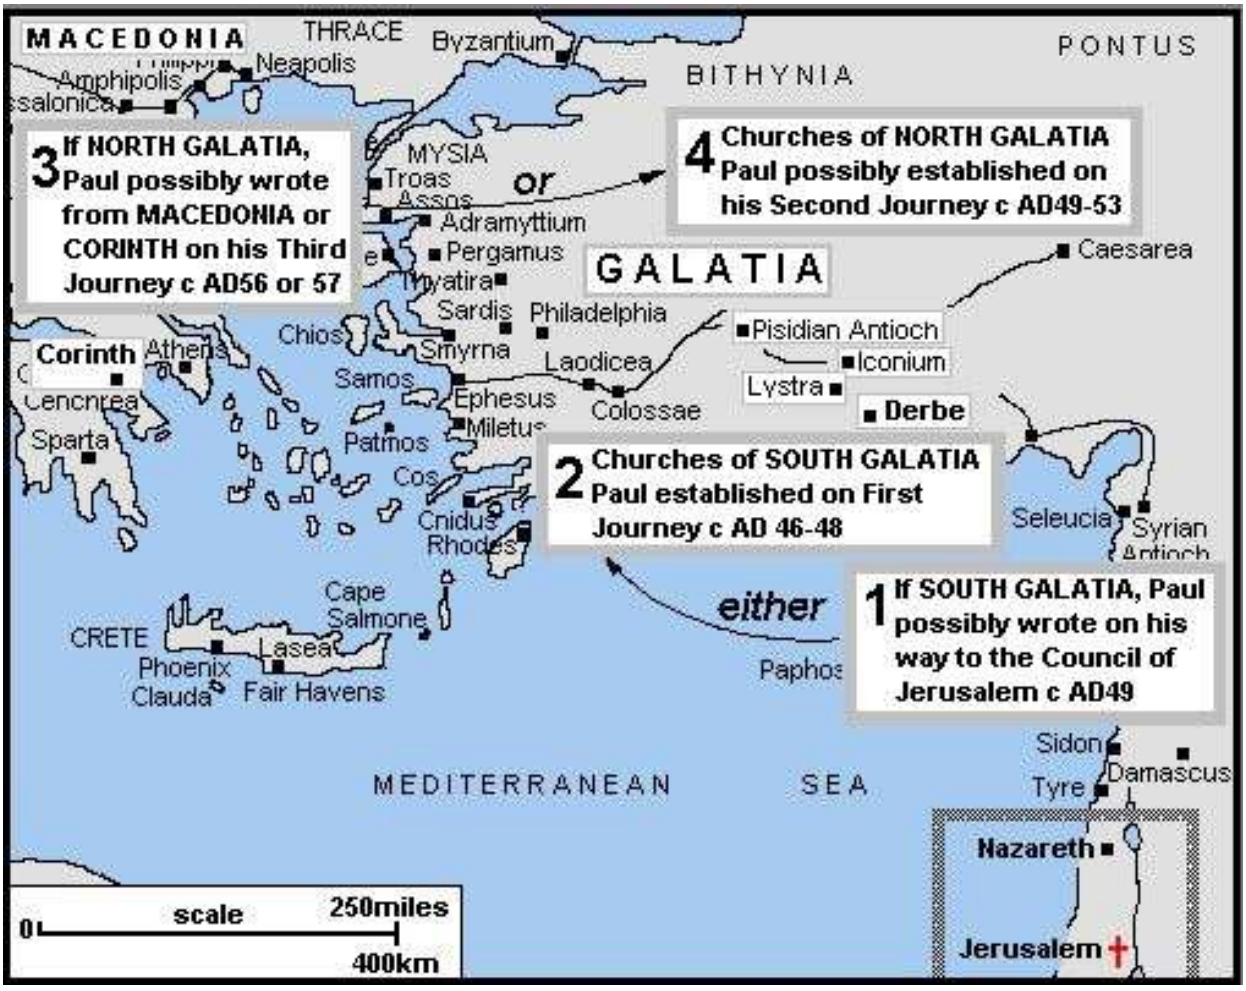
 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

See also: Maps and Timelines related to Paul

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Introduction to Galatians



http://christchurchreformed.com/bible-studies/galatians-introduction-01/

Excerpt:

AUDIENCE

A. Paul wrote to the churches of Galatia (Galatians 1:2; 3:1).
B. Were these churches were situated in 'North Galatia' (i.e. Ancyra, Pessinus, Tavium [modern Turkey]) or 'South Galatia' (i.e. Pisidian Antioch, Iconium, Lystra, Derbe). The uncertainty is because "Galatia" could refer to northern Asia Minor founded by the "Gauls" OR to the Roman territory which included parts of southern Asia Minor (e.g. Pisidian Antioch, Iconium, Lystra and Derbe).

> "If the Epistle to the Galatians was indeed addressed to the churches of Pisidian Antioch, Iconium, Lystra and Derbe, then we have important historical, geographical, literary and epigraphic data which will provide material for its better understanding" (F.F. Bruce, The Epistle to the Galatians, 18).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

1. North Galatia (churches of churches of Ancyra, Pessinus, Tavium [modern Turkey])
    a. Understands Acts 16:6 and 18:23 as alluding to Paul's ministry in North Galatia (cf. Gal.4:13).
    b. strengths:
        i. Galatians 4:13 indicates Paul visited the northern churches twice (cf. Acts 16:6; 18:23).
        ii. This was the view almost all commentators until the 18th century.
    c. Proponents: Assumed view of commentators until the 18th century; J.B. Lightfoot, Betz
    d. Ramifications:
        i. Paul wrote Galatians while on his 3rd Missionary Journey (Acts 18:23-21:17) and therefore after the Jerusalem Synod of Acts 15.
2. South Galatia
    a. Planted during Paul & Barnabas' first missionary journey (Acts 13:14-14:26). Paul then revisited the church in Acts 16:6; 18:23.
    b. strengths:
        i. In Acts, Luke mentions churches in southern Galatia but not northern (Acts 16:6; 18:23).
    c. objections:
        i. It's hard for some to believe Paul circumcised Timothy (Acts 16:3) after writing Gal.5:2). However, Timothy is not mentioned in Galatians and it is possible that Galatians was written before Timothy jointed Paul in Acts 16:1-5.
    d. Ramifications:
        i. Galatians 2:1-10 is not to be allied with Acts 15 but Acts 11:30.
        ii. Paul could have written Galatians before or after the Jerusalem Synod of Acts 15. The North Galatian view only allows for a date of Galatians after Acts 15.
    e. Proponents: William Ramsay, F.F. Bruce, Donald Guthrie, Colin Hemer, Richard Longenecker [and N.T. Wright]
3. We can't be dogmatic about either theory.

The Date and Destination of Galatians

https://bible.org/article/date-and-destination-galatians (downloadable as MS Word doc)

Excerpt:

Conclusion

This paper has taken up the issue of the destination and date of Galatians. The best reckoning of the data as far as the destination is concerned is to see the letter being sent to churches that existed in the south Galatia district. These would include the churches of Antioch (Pisidia); Iconium, Lystra and Derbe. These churches would have been founded by the apostle Paul on his first missionary journey (cf. Acts 13, 14).

The date of the letter depends on the destination of the letter. The South Galatia theory opens the door for the possibility of an early date. Since this theory is the most tenable, in conjunction with the fact that the letter probably preceded the Jerusalem Council, the best date for Galatians is around A. D. 49, just before the Council and after Paul's first missionary journey.

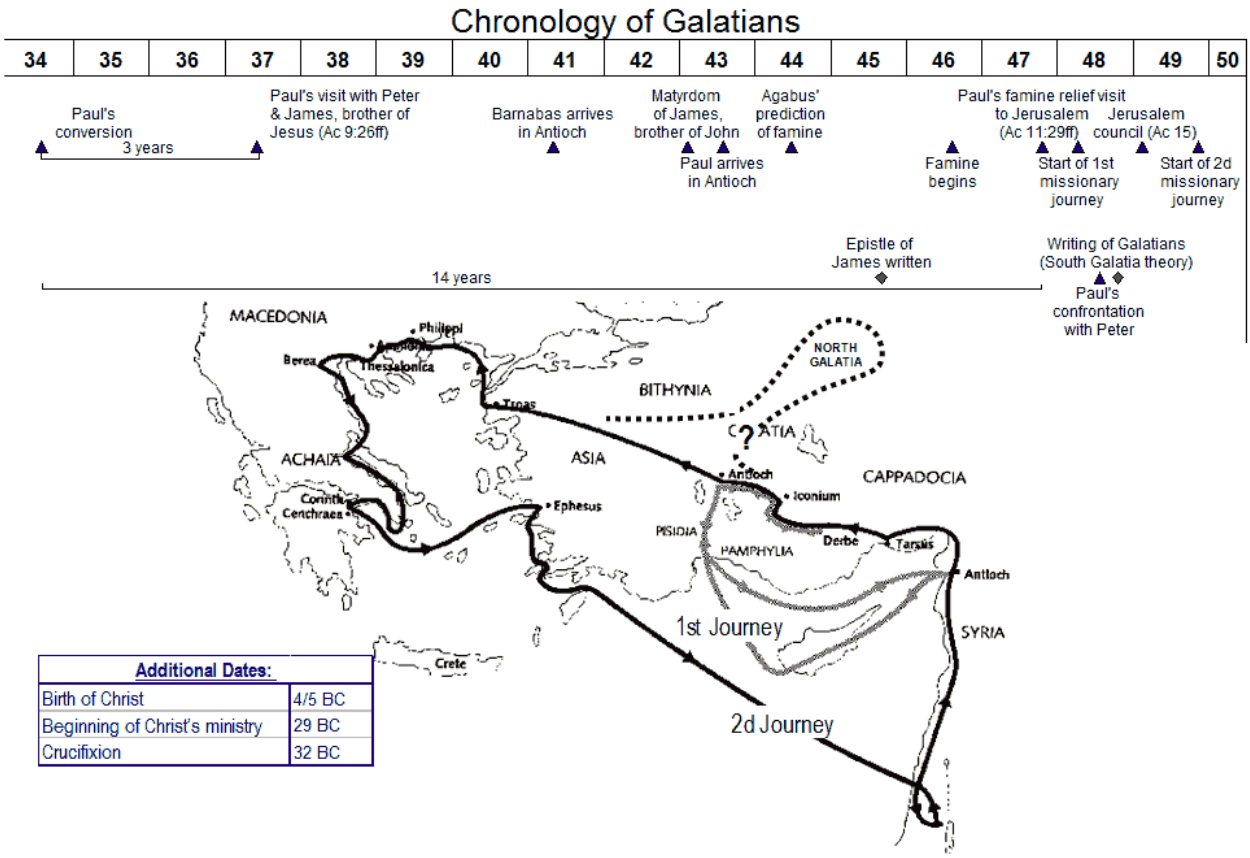
 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Galatians and Chronology

https://historeo.com/web/?p=1714

In terms of authorship, Paul's letter to the Galatians is one of the least disputed writings in the NT.

Date of authorship, however, has been a subject for lively debate. Two theories loosely correlate with early and late dates for the letter's origin.

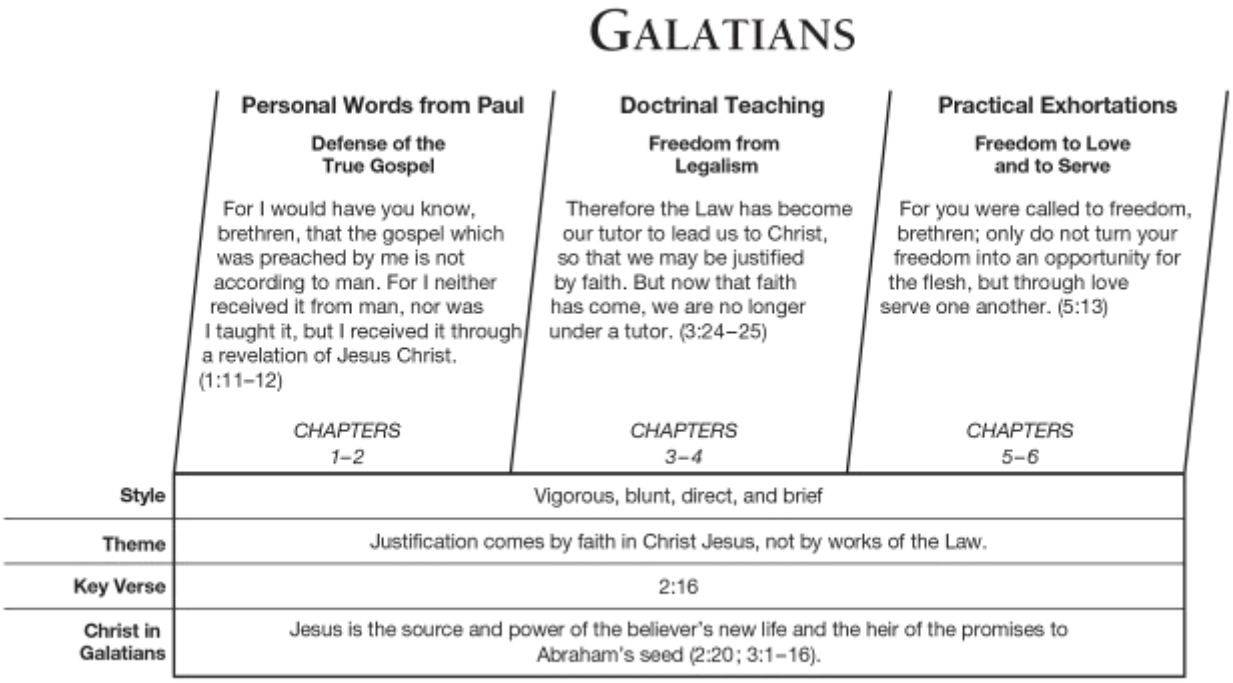


The North Galatia theory asserts the Galatian churches were founded on Paul's second missionary journey during an undocumented excursion into the northern part of an ancient geographical region known as Galatia.

The South Galatia theory, on the other hand, asserts they were established on his first journey while in the Roman provincial region known as Galatia.

The difference between these alternatives is not critical but it does color one's understanding of the text.

For example, if the North Galatia theory is true, then the Jerusalem council had already given its judgment on the relationship between Jewish and Gentile Christians prior to Paul's letter.



Also, the power behind Paul's reference to Barnabas is diminished because the north Galatian churches would not have known him personally.

Other examples are possible, but modern readers are fortunate in that the major truths in Galatians are not dependent on a precise date for its authorship.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Chart: Outline of the Book of Galatians (Charles Swindoll)

Copyright © 1982, 1997, 2010 by Charles R. Swindoll, Inc. All rights reserved worldwide.

1-2 PERSONAL WORDS	3-4 THEOLOGICAL TEACHING	5-6 PRACTICAL APPLICATION
PAUL'S AUTHORITY	JUSTIFICATION BY FAITH	BIBLICAL FREEDOM (LIBERTY ≠ LICENCE)
1:1-5 Greeting	3:1-9 Faith or Works	5:1-15 Free From Law
1:6-10 No Other Gospel	3:10-14 The Righteous Shall Live by Faith	5:16-25 Free to Live Under the Control of the Holy Spirit
1:11-21 Paul's Backstory	3:15-29 Law and Faith	6:1 Free to Restore Others
2:1-10 Affirmed by the Disciples	4:1-7 Heirs Through Christ	6:2-5 Free to Help Others
2:11-21 Confrontation with Peter	4:8-20 Paul's Caution	6:6-10 Free to be Generous in Word and Deed
	4:21-31 Justification by Faith Illustrated	6:11-18 Conclusion

Source: https://thewellcommunity.org/bible-charts

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Simple Chart of Galatians

http://bereanadvocate.blogspot.com/2016/12/chart-of-galatians.html

The book of Galatians is a defense of the truth of justification by faith, which is the heart of the gospel of grace. It presents a defense of Paul, his message, and the believer's liberty in grace. It deals with two main problems: (1) The so-called lack of the authority of Paul. (2) Circumcision, representing legalism and the Law.

The structure of the book is somewhat simple. It could be outlined as such:

Salutation 1:1-10	Defense of Paul's Authorship 1:11-2:21	Defense of the Message of Grace 3:1-4:41	Defense of Our Liberty in Grace 5:1-6:10	Conclusion 6:11-18
	Independent Revelation 1:11-12	Gospel of Grace Vindicated 3:1-29	Liberty apart from the Law 5:1-12
	Independent Apostleship 1:13-2:21	Gospel of Grace Illustrated 4:1-20	Warning: Liberty is not License 5:13-25
			Liberty is Life in the Spirit 5:16-26
			Liberty to Service 6:1-10

Galatians – Beginning (Top)

Galatians – Maps

Galatians – Intro

Galatians – Charts

Galatians – Overviews

Galatians – Getz Videos

Galatians – NT Wright related

Galatians - Commentary

Galatians – Related Topics

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Galatians - Freedom series – "Paul comes out of hiding - briefly" Gal. 1:18-24

http://biblefood.blogspot.com/2011/02/galatians-freedom-series-paul-comes-out.html

Excerpt:

Verse 21 Afterward I went into the regions of Syria and Cilicia.

From Jerusalem, you would go through Syria first to get to Cilicia.

Interesting facts about Cilicia: Paul, known as Saul prior to conversion, was from Cilicia.

"But Paul said, I am a man which am a Jew of Tarsus, a city in Cilicia (modern day Turkey) …" - Acts 21:39 (Also see Acts 22:3)

Among the men of Cilicia who martyred Stephen was Saul (later called Paul), a man with a murderous hatred toward Christians (Acts 7:58) and yet a man who, after his conversion, became one of the greatest Christians that the world will ever know.

Verse 22 And I was unknown by face to the churches of Judea which were in Christ.

Still at this point Paul was "unknown by face" to the Christians in Judea.

Verse 23 But they were hearing only, "He who formerly persecuted us now preaches the faith [refers to the Message of Christ] which he once tried to destroy."

Can you even imagine them getting this report! People coming to Judea and saying, "Hey, guys, you're not going to believe this, but Saul who we all know was adamant about destroying Christians, who then just disappeared for a few years, well he's back and he's now preaching Christ!!!" Can you imagine getting that report!

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Bible Project: Galatians

https://thebibleproject.com/explore/galatians/

https://d1bsmz3sdihplr.cloudfront.net/media/Posters%20Download/54-Galatians-FNL.jpg (Poster)

See next page for larger view…

Galatians – Beginning (Top)

Galatians – Maps

Galatians – Intro

Galatians – Charts

Galatians – Overviews

Galatians – Getz Videos

Galatians – NT Wright related

Galatians - Commentary

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

PAUL'S LETTER TO THE
GALATIANS
THE BACKGROUND
THE DEBATE (ACTS 15)
NON-JEWISH CHRISTIANS
1-2 THE GOSPEL OF THE CRUCIFIED MESSIAH...
YOU'VE EMBRACED A DIFFERENT GOSPEL!?!
PAUL DEFENDS HIS MESSIAH & APOSTLES
PETER'S HYPOCRISY IN ANTIOCH
BETRAYAL OF THE GOSPEL DECLARED RIGHTEOUS
- IN RIGHT RELATIONSHIP WITH GOD
- FORGIVEN & GIVEN A PLACE IN GOD'S FAMILY
- RESULTS IN TRANSFORMATION BY GRACE
THE HEART OF PAUL'S GOSPEL ...BECOMES TRUE OF THEM
3-4 ...CREATES A NEW, MULTI-ETHNIC FAMILY...
GOD
ABRAHAM (GENESIS 12, 15)
GOD'S PURPOSE: ONE LARGE, MULTI-ETHNIC FAMILY RELATING TO HIM ON THE BASIS OF FAITH POSITIVE ROLE
NEGATIVE ROLE
FAILURE
SIN
THE LAWS IMPRISONED EVERYONE UNDER THE POWER OF SIN" (3:22)
...UNTIL THE OFFSPRING COMES.
STAY IN LINE
GOD'S BLESSING TO ALL (3:28)
5-6 ...THAT IS TRANSFORMED BY THE SPIRIT
THE LAWS ARE GOOD
THROUGH THE SPIRIT OF JESUS!
TRUE GOOD NEWS
OLD NATURE
FRUIT OF THE SPIRIT
THIS FRUIT REQUIRES CULTIVATION
"IF WE LIVE BY THE SPIRIT, LET US ALSO KEEP IN STEP WITH THE SPIRIT" (5:25)
THROUGH THE SPIRIT, JESUS MAKES US INTO PEOPLE WHO LOVE GOD & OTHERS, AND FULFIL THE TORAH OF THE MESSIAH! created by the Bible Project
"WHAT MATTERS IS GOD'S NEW CREATION"
THE NEW, MULTI-ETHNIC FAMILY OF THE MESSIAH...
...FULL OF FAITH IN JESUS...
...LOVING GOD & OTHERS IN THE POWER OF THE SPIRIT

[G C]

Galatians – A Summary (Overviews)

http://biblehub.com/summary/galatians/1.htm

Chapter 1
Chapter 2
Chapter 3
Chapter 4
Chapter 5
Chapter 6

The book of Galatians is a Pauline Epistle (letter from Paul). It was written by the Apostle Paul about 49 A.D. prior to the Jerusalem Council which had taken place in 50 A.D. This quite possibly could have been Paul's first letter. The key personalities of this book are the Apostle Paul, Peter, Barnabas, Abraham, Titus, and false teachers. Paul writes this book to deal with the problem of circumcision and Jewish legalism toward Gentile believers.

- In chapters 1-2, Paul's gives his testimony about how he had received the authentic Gospel message. He warns that if anyone presents another Gospel message other than the one he was preaching, that person is "As we have said before, so I say again now, if any man is preaching to you a gospel contrary to what you received, he is to be accursed!" (1:9). Paul was speaking of the one true Gospel that he had received; Please read 1st Corinthians 15:1-4.

Paul then declares that Christ now lives within him, and directs, and empowers him to live as Christ's ambassador and instrument: "I have been crucified with Christ; and it is no longer I who live, but Christ lives in me; and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by faith in the Son of God, who loved me and gave Himself up for me" (2:2o).

- Chapters 3-5:12, Paul begins by declaring that salvation is through faith and trust in Jesus Christ "Alone", and cannot be obtained through the keeping of the Law. "Fou foolish Galatians! Who put you under a spell? Was not Jesus the Messiah clearly portrayed before your very eyes as having been crucified? I want to learn only one thing from you: Did you receive the Spirit by doing the works of the law or by believing what you heard? Are you so foolish? Having started out with the Spirit, are you now ending up with the flesh? (Galatians 3:1-3). The Law (10 Commandments) is our tutor to lead us to salvation in Jesus Christ, "the Law has become our tutor to lead us to Christ, so that we may be justified by faith" (3:24). No one can obey the 10 Commandments. It is impossible. Every person has broken them; therefore, we can only attain salvation through trusting in our Savior Christ Jesus.

- Chapters 5:13-6, He teaches the Fruits of the Spirit and tells us to "walk by the Spirit, and you will not carry out the desire of the flesh" (5:16). Good works does not save, but a Christian must have the desire to produce good fruit, obey God's Law and live a holy and righteous life in the eyes of God. Christians should live this redeemed life.

Galatians Summary Intro (Andrew Womack)

https://www.awmi.net/reading/teaching-articles/galatians/?utm_referrer=https://duckduckgo.com

Excerpt:

The book of Romans is Paul's masterpiece on the study of grace, but the book of Galatians is his strongest teaching on the subject. Paul takes off the gloves and gets brutal in his teaching about the grace of God. I believe that a study on the grace of God from the book of Galatians combined with the teaching from Romans could be a one-two punch that knocks out condemnation in your life. Praise the Lord!...

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Overview of the book of Galatians

https://overviewbible.com/galatians/

Excerpt:

Paul is angry.

Some false teacher has pressured the churches in Galatia (a region in the Roman Empire) to follow the Jewish Law. They're teaching that salvation comes through the Law of Moses, and not through Christ—the exact opposite of what Paul had taught them. So Paul writes a letter to bring them back to the truth.

This letter isn't about Paul's ego or preferences: it's about understanding why Jesus had to die and how it affects us.

The Jews had been living under the Law since the days of Moses. The Law was a set of expectations for God's people: commands that, when followed, would distinguish Israel from all other nations as a people that belonged to God. However, Israel couldn't keep the Law. Nobody could: everyone was a sinner.

So God sent Jesus. Jesus lived the Law, died for our sins, and rose again—He fulfilled the Law.

The Galatians' new teacher completely disregards and disrespects God's grace, Christ's sacrifice, and the Holy Spirit's work. That's why Paul is so upset.

This book explains the believer's new relationship with God. We're freed from sin. We're freed from the Law. We're adopted as children of God. We're counted as spiritual children of Abraham, whether we're Jews or non-Jews. And we're all empowered by the Holy Spirit to do good works, something sin prevented us from doing and the Law never enabled us to do.

Christ's death is important, and Paul won't let anyone forget it.

Theme verse of Galatians

The verse that demonstrates the theme of this book is Galatians 5:1, which reads:

It was for freedom that Christ set us free; therefore keep standing firm and do not be subject again to a yoke of slavery.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Galatians' role in the Bible

Galatians is the fourth of Paul's letters. Of the 27 New Testament books, Paul wrote 13. Nine of these book are letters to local churches (like the ones in Galatia).

The Galatians felt pressured to seek salvation from the Law of Moses, even though they had already accepted the grace of Christ. The book of Galatians succinctly outlines the relationship between the Law of Moses and God's New Covenant with the Church.

Paul defends the true gospel, and deals with a few questions that would naturally arise in an argument of Law vs. grace:

What about God's promises to Abraham?

God made an everlasting covenant (a pact or agreement) with Abraham in the book of Genesis. This was a promise to bless Abraham, his descendants, and the world (Gn 15). Abraham's descendants, the Hebrews, were considered God's special people, and God set them apart from the world with the Law at Mount Sinai (this happened in Exodus). Paul teaches that faith in Christ does not cancel out God's promises to Abraham; rather, it extends the blessings of that covenant beyond Israel. Now, anyone who believes in Christ is a spiritual son of Abraham (Ga 3:29).

What is my relationship with God?

Paul teaches that faith in Jesus makes us not only children of Abraham, but also children of God. It's a radical shift in identity: we are adopted into God's family (Ga 4:5–6).

Why make the Law in the first place?

The Law is a tutor that taught us two things: (1) God is holy and expects His people to be holy, and (2) we cannot live up to His standards. The Law makes it clear that we need a savior.

What about sin?

We're being changed, but we still sin. Paul explains how the Holy Spirit works in us to battle our sinful desires. It's in Galatians that we find the fruit of the Spirit (Ga 5:22–23).

If we're free from the Law, are we free to sin?

No way. "God is not mocked," and we all reap what we sow (Ga 6:7). Paul finishes his letter with a strong call to do what's right and not lose heart as a community of believers: "Let us do good to all people, and especially to those who are of the household of the faith" (Ga 6:9–10).

Paul acknowledges that those who advocate the Law may still try to refute his letter, but urges the church to lean on the true gospel of grace in Jesus.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Galatians Commentary and Summary

https://www.whatchristianswanttoknow.com/galatians-commentary-summary-and-key-verses/

Excerpt:

Galatians Commentary

Paul's purpose for writing the book of Galatians, scholars believe around A.D. 49, was to reveal that Paul's apostleship was from Jesus Christ and not from men. But Paul's real emphasis was that salvation is not works oriented and that the Galatians liberty should not be used as an excuse to continue in sin. There is also the fact that Paul stresses that Christian liberty is not a license to sin or to live as they choose. A great analogy is that people have the right to drive if they have a license, however this license does not give the driver the right to indiscriminately break the traffic laws.

Paul saw grace being trampled under foot by the Galatians and to a certain extent, this is happening today in many Christian circles. Since the Galatians knew that they were not saved by works, they equated this freedom as a license to sin. It is true that salvation is by grace alone, found in faith alone, from Christ alone and believers are not saved by works; they are saved for works. Even so, Paul still reminded the church that salvation is not from any works of the law but from Christ's own redemptive work. They went from one extreme; works based salvation, to another; using grace as a license to not worry about doing any good works at all.

This works-based salvation was brought in by the traditional Jews who thought that the Galatians, largely Gentiles, should be circumcised and not base their salvation on Jesus Christ alone (2:3-5, 5:2, 6:12-15). Certain Jewish groups were still trying to convert the Gentiles into the Jewish customs which were becoming points of agitation with Paul since Jesus Christ is the One and only way to salvation.

Galatians Summary

Paul was so concerned that the Galatians were already turning from grace to works so soon after he had planted that church; that it was turning into another gospel (1:6). They were perverting the gospel so badly that Paul addresses the problems of trying to gain salvation through works in several different areas:

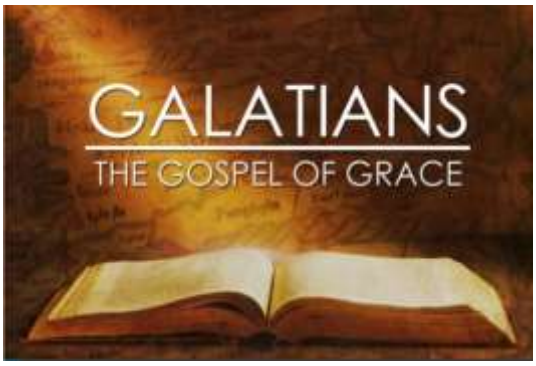
The first thing Paul did was to vindicate the doctrine of justification by faith in Christ alone. To gain salvation by the Mosaic Law meant that Christ died for nothing. Even the Holy Spirit came as a free gift to the church at Galatia. The Holy Spirit and Jesus' death were both unmerited by works.

He kept reminding them that the works of the Law can not help sanctify a believer nor was it of any help toward their ongoing sanctification. Even miracles are not a result of law keeping but by divine power alone and unmerited.

Another way was to remind them of Abraham's example of faith and not of works of the Law. Abraham had saving faith long before any Mosaic Law ever existed. Saving faith is a provision of God and not of man. Besides the Law brought a curse upon any who could not keep it and no human could ever keep it perfectly. Only Jesus Christ fulfilled the Law in a perfect way. The idea that human performance could help acquire salvation was shattered in the Old Testament and only served to condemn men and that throwing themselves upon the mercy of God in faith was the only means possible.

Another way that Paul mentioned was that Christ's work is the only work that can save a person and no person's own work can ever save them since our best efforts are like filthy rags before a holy God. The curse of the Law brought death but Christ became a curse for our sake. The curse was borne by Christ instead of believers or in place of the believers.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



Another way Paul tried to make the Galatians understand this point was to understand the purpose of the Law. The Law would never be permanent since it was intended to serve the people only until the Promised Messiah (the Seed) would come. The Law was never intended to bring eternal life or an eternal promise in faith. Even the old sacrifices could never permanently leave the people free from the penalty of sin. The Law held captive all the world and only Christ and faith in Him could set the believer free from this curse. The Law was intended to be the schoolmaster and disciplinarian until Christ could justify us by His sacrifice and by faith. If they want to start keeping the Mosaic Law they would have to keep the whole Law which is associated with its curse if kept imperfectly. Paul asks them if salvation is by grace or by works? If it is works, Paul tells them clearly that they've fallen from grace

Finally our incorporation into God's family came after we were children and grown up into Christ and baptized into Him. When we reached this relationship, being clothed in Christ, we had the full standing of being justified before the Father and we were then incorporated into His family. If we are believers in Christ, God sees us as Abraham's seed (3:29). Abraham's faith was a saving faith. Abraham's faith came before the Law was established. Legalism and grace do not mix. The cross put an end to the Old Covenant works and the obligatory rituals, washings, and sacrifices so it made no sense to keep pursuing righteousness through works of the Law.

There are no shortages of churches and Christians today that say "we don't do that, we don't that this, we don't do such and such" but one evangelist said there is another group of people that are just like that; they are in the cemetery.

Did You Know?

The book of Galatians was written "to the churches in Galatia" (1:2), indicating not one specific congregation but a number of churches in a large region. All these churches were under similar pressures from outsiders to change their beliefs, which caused confusion in their meetings.

Paul - His Letter to Galatia (Slide Show)
https://www.slideshare.net/CliveAshby/new-testament-survey-no13-paul-his-letter-to-galatia

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Importance of Galatians

http://www.fbccs.org/resources/studyguides/galatians_sg00.htm

Excerpt:

The early Christian spokesmen Marcion (140 AD) and Tertullian put Galatians first among the New Testament epistles (now we have them in descending order of length). They felt it was not only chronologically first, but primary in order of importance. Martin Luther, perhaps more than any key figure in church history, loved Galatians almost as much as he loved his wife! He said, "The epistle to the Galatians is my epistle. To it I am as it were in wedlock. It is my Katherine." Galatians has been called the battle-cry of the Reformation, the Magna Carta of spiritual emancipation, and spiritual dynamite! It's message - Are we saved, and are we accepted, by believing or achieving? - is foundational to both the doctrines of justification and sanctification. Some have said that without the strong letter of Galatians, Christianity might have remained a minor branch of Judaism.

In stating the central themes of Christianity, Galatians reminds us of some other New Testament letters.JB Lightfoot said that Galatians is like a "rough draft" of Romans. But it is unique in its treatment of the necessity to "protect" Christianity from any false, legalistic, "lookalike" versions of the gospel. Freedom, which occurs more in this book than any other in the New Testament, was of paramount importance to Paul. Grace, in contrast to works, is described as the touchstone of Biblical Christianity. And the Spirit, whose fruit is evident in those who live by faith, is portrayed as the One who makes it all happen.

Study of Galatians

http://www.fbccs.org/resources/studyguides/galatians.asp

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Getting The Most Out of Galatians [NTWGAL]

Imagine you're in South Africa in the 1970s. Apartheid is at its height. You are embarked on a risky project: to build a community center where everybody will be equally welcome, no matter what their color or race. You've designed it; you've laid the foundation in such a way that only the right sort of building can be built. Or so you think.

You are called away urgently to another part of the country. A little later you get a letter. A new group of builders are building on your foundation. They have changed the design, and are installing two meeting rooms, with two front doors, one for whites only and one for blacks only. Some of the local people are mightily relieved. They always thought there was going to be trouble, putting everyone together like that. Others, though, asked the builders why the original idea wouldn't do. Oh, said the builders airily, that chap who laid the foundation, he had some funny ideas. He didn't really have permission to make that design. He'd got a bit muddled. We're from the real authorities. This is how it's got to be.

That was the sort of situation in which Paul found himself, almost two thousand years ago in what is now south central Turkey. He was building with people, not bricks and mortar, laying the foundation of the good news. The one creator God had unveiled his long-awaited plan for the world in his son Jesus who was executed by the Romans but raised by God. The good news doesn't end there either. Jesus' death and resurrection mean that God is now building a new family, a single family, a family with no divisions, no separate races, no Jews at this table and Gentiles at another.

Afterward others came in saying Paul didn't really know what he was doing. He didn't have proper authority from the apostles in Jerusalem. Yes, we all believe that Jesus is the Messiah, they said; but we can't have Jewish believers and Gentile believers living as though they were part of the same family. If the Gentile believers want to be part of the real inner circle, they have to become Jews first.

Paul was so incensed that he wrote a sharp letter to the Galatians—one of the first, perhaps the very first, that Paul ever wrote to one of the young churches he planted on the eastern rim of the Mediterranean. (For more on this letter also see my Paul for Everyone: Galatians and Thessalonians, published by SPCK and Westminster John Knox, on which this guide is based.) That means it is among the very earliest documents we possess from the beginning of the church's existence.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Summary of Chapter 1

Paul begins his letter to the churches of Galatia immediately addressing a key issue of the epistle: that he is an apostle "not from men nor through man, but through Jesus Christ..." (v1). Joined by unnamed brethren, he sends grace and peace from God and Christ, making reference to the deliverance made possible by Jesus' death for our sins in keeping with God's will (2-4). This in turns leads to a short doxology (5).

Without any thanksgiving or prayer for his recipients as found in other epistles, Paul expresses his amazement that they are so soon turning to a different gospel being offered by those who wish to pervert the gospel of Christ (6-7). This is followed by a condemnation repeated for emphasis of anyone, even an apostle or angel, who would preach a different gospel than they had already received (8-9). Strong words, yes, but as a servant of Christ Paul is seeking to please God, not man (10).

The gospel preached by Paul was being twisted by those who challenged his authority as an apostle. Therefore Paul proceeds to defend both the gospel and his apostleship by stressing that his gospel was by revelation, and not from man (11-12). As evidence, Paul relates his conduct prior to his conversion, and how by the grace of God he was called to preach the gospel to the Gentiles (13-14). That his gospel was not from man is supported by the scarcity of opportunities he had to be around Peter or the other apostles (15-20). In the early years after his conversion, most of his time was spent in Syria and Cilicia, with the churches of Judea knowing Paul only by what they heard. And what they heard led them to glorify God (21-24)!

Paul Meets Peter and James (Galatian 1:18-20)

http://www.ligonier.org/learn/devotionals/paul-meets-peter-and-james/

Excerpt:

Neither Galatians 1:17 nor Acts 9:19b–25 give us all of the details about Paul's experiences in Arabia and Damascus in the period immediately following his conversion. We know, of course, that the apostle preached in many of the synagogues in Damascus (Acts 9:19b–22), and it would not be a stretch to assume he did the same in Arabia. Undoubtedly, Paul also spent time in study and prayer, and it may be that Jesus appeared to him several more times (2 Cor. 12:2).

The three years to which Paul refers in today's passage (Gal. 1:18–19) began when he saw Christ on the Damascus Road and include his sojourn in Arabia and his ministry in the Syrian city. Thus, Paul was a mature believer when he met Cephas (Peter) and James the Lord's brother in Jerusalem. The contrast between Paul's fifteen-day stay in the Holy City and the three years he was on his own reveals that he did not go there to learn the gospel or to have James or Peter appoint him as an apostle. Remember that Paul is dealing with false teachers who are undermining his authority, claiming that the other apostles commissioned him, not the Savior Himself. The Judaizers probably knew that Paul visited Jerusalem after his conversion and likely claimed he received his call there. Paul is setting the record straight, indicating that his visit was too short for him to have learned his gospel from Peter and James. Matthew Henry says Paul mentions these time frames and swears an oath regarding the truth of his words "so that it could not well be claimed that he was indebted to any other either for his knowledge of the gospel or his authority to preach it."

Why, then, did Paul go to Jerusalem on this occasion? Galatians 1:18 is the only place in the New Testament where the Greek verb historeō ("visit") is found, indicating that Paul probably chose it with care. Of the various Greek words for visit, this one carries with it the idea of getting to know someone; thus, Paul went to Jerusalem to meet and greet other church leaders. He probably wanted to learn about Peter's and James' experiences with Jesus and some of the details of Christ's earthly ministry. But this data only added color to the basic theological content of the gospel that Paul learned from Jesus Himself (v. 12).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Coram Deo

As a minister of Christ Jesus, Paul knew that he could not succeed in his calling all by himself. And if an apostle needed fellowship with others to fulfill the commission Jesus gave to him, how much more do we who rely upon the words of the apostles need Christian brothers and sisters around us for support and fellowship? Do you have close Christian friends who pray for you and help you to fulfill your calling? Whose ministry are you supporting in the body of Christ?

A Different Gospel? – Ga 1 [NTWGAL] (Chp 1)

Imagine that you are in central south Turkey during the reign of the Roman emperor Claudius. Most in the town worship one or other of the local gods or goddesses, several of whom claim the loyalty of particular racial groups. Some have started to worship the emperor himself, and with him the power of Rome.

There is also a significant minority of Jews, with their own synagogue. They are threatened by the growing power of the imperial cult, on top of the usual pagan idolatry and wickedness. And into this town has come a funny little Jew called Paul. According to Paul, there is one God, the world's creator, and this one God has now unveiled his long-awaited plan for the world. The unveiling took place in a Jew called Jesus, whom Paul says is the Jewish Messiah, a kind of king-to-end-all-kings.

Read Ga 1:1-9. The word apostle means "one who is sent," and came to be a technical term in early Christianity for the original ones whom Jesus sent out after his resurrection. Paul's opponents had persuaded the Galatians that Paul was only a secondhand apostle, that he got his apostleship and his message from other early Christians, not from Jesus himself.

What could be attractive to people about a "gospel" which involved becoming a member of a family that followed the Law of Moses?

> Jews believed that when the Messiah came he would be Lord of all the world; so, Paul argues, the Messiah would have to have just one family. So although this family is the fulfillment of what God had promised to the Jews, because of Jesus you don't have to be a Jew to belong. Paul's opponents insisted that if Gentile believers wanted to be part of the real inner circle, they had to become Jews. The "good news" according to his opponents was that you're welcome into God's family if you follow the Law of Moses.
>
> For Paul the gospel isn't a system of salvation or a new way of being religious. It's the announcement that Jesus, the crucified Messiah, is exalted as Lord of the whole world; therefore he is calling into existence a single worldwide family.

God revealed his Son to Saul of Tarsus in order that Saul, an ultra-orthodox Jew, might tell the pagan nations that Israel's God loved them just as much as he loved Israel. Paul must have learned his sense of irony from God himself!

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

"Then, after three years" (v. 18) refers to the aftermath of the events of Ga 1:17. Paul had gone away to Arabia (probably Sinai) and then returned to Damascus before going to Jerusalem.

Galatians – Beginning (Top)

Galatians – Maps

Galatians – Intro

Galatians – Charts

Galatians – Overviews

Galatians – Getz Videos

Galatians – NT Wright related

Galatians - Commentary

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Summary of Chapter 2

http://www.ccel.org/contrib/exec_outlines/ga/ga_02.htm

Excerpt;

As Paul continues defending his apostleship, he describes a meeting in Jerusalem fourteen years after the one with Peter related in chapter one. It was prompted by a revelation, and Barnabas and Titus went with him to meet "those who were of reputation". The meeting was private, but some false brethren were secretly brought in who sought to demand that Titus, a Gentile, be circumcised. Paul refused, viewing it as an effort to bring them back into bondage from which Christ set them free (1-5).

The result of the meeting was that "those who seemed to be something" added nothing to Paul. In fact, once they saw that the gospel of the uncircumcised had been given to him just as the gospel of the circumcised had been given to Peter, and once James, Cephas, and John perceived the grace that had been given to Paul, he was extended the right hand of fellowship. They only asked that Paul be mindful of the poor, something he was very eager to do (6-10).

The rest of the chapter describes a confrontation in Antioch between Peter and Paul. Peter, who was visiting, at first was willing to eat with the Gentiles; but when some came from James, out of fear he withdrew himself. Through his influence the rest of the Jews, even Barnabas, were carried away into hypocrisy. This prompted Paul to withstand Peter "to his face", and to rebuke him in the presence of all. In the course of his rebuke, Paul stressed that we are justified by faith in Christ, and not by the works of the law, otherwise Christ died in vain (11-24).

Quote by N.T. Wright:

"At the heart of Galatians 2 is not an abstract individualized salvation, but a common meal. Paul does not want the Galatians to wait until they have agreed on all doctrinal arguments before they can sit down and eat together. Not to eat together is already to get the answer wrong. The whole point of his argument is that all those who belong to Christ belong at the same table with one another.

The relevance of this today should be obvious. The differences between us, as twentieth-century Christians, all too often reflect cultural, philosophical and tribal divides, rather than anything that should keep us apart from full and glad Eucharistic fellowship. I believe the church should recognize, as a matter of biblical and Christian obedience, that it is time to put the horse back before the cart, and that we are far, far more likely to reach doctrinal agreement between our different churches if we do so within the context of that common meal which belongs equally to us all because it is the meal of the Lord whom we all worship. Intercommunion, in other words, is not something we should regard as the prize to be gained at the end of the ecumenical road; it is the very paving of the road itself. If we wonder why we haven't been travelling very fast down the road of late, maybe it's because, without the proper paving, we've got stuck in the mud." — N.T. Wright, For All God's Worth: True Worship and the Calling of the Church

N. T. Wright on Justification and Sanctification (incl. Galatians 2:11 – 21) (2011)

(References Galatians 2:11-21 and Ephesians 2:1-10 and Romans 3)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=ii5YHwrkEpQ [Video] (5 min.)
Renowned Author and speaker N.T. Wright sits down with J.D. Walt, Maxie Dunnam and interviewer Ben Ben Witherington III to talk about his view on justification and salvation. In part two of this four part series, Wright explains how many people have misread Paul's letters in light of justification and salvation.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

N. T. Wright on Paul and the Faithfulness of God: A Conversation with Richard B. Hays – Justification and Spirit in Galatians 2 and Romans 8 with Richard B. Hays (2014)

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=JM8DGAnUq2k [Recommended]

Includes discussion of Galatians 2, Romans 8; Gal. 3:22, Rom. 3:22; and also discuss pistis Christou

Discussion Guide (for above video):

http://www.augsburgfortress.org/media/downloads/NTWright_VideoDiscussionGuide_Hays.pdf [PDF]

Galatians 2: 11-21

1. Richard Hays outlines four important aspects of his interpretation of Paul's understanding of justification as found in Galatians 2:11-21.

a) In Hays's first point, what is Paul's understanding of the "truth of the Gospel"? In Paul's eyes how has Peter's table fellowship practice denied that truth? For Paul, how is the practice of table fellowship central to questions of justification?
b) Paul, says Hays, does not reject his Jewish identity but rather relies on Torah to say that justification comes, not from the law, but from God's faithfulness. How does Hays then tie participation in the new life of Christ and Jesus' act of loving and giving of himself to the faithfulness of God?
c) Summarize Hays's understanding of Paul's theology of justification as outlined in Galatians 2:11-21.
d) Which of N. T. Wright's responses to the points made by Dr. Hays were most helpful to you? Why?
e) Which points made by Dr. Hays or Dr. Wright do you want to think about or inquire into further?

2. N. T. Wright says that while justification and being in Christ are joined at the hip for Paul, justification and participation are not synonymous. Some scholars have argued that justification and participation are in opposition to each other, but Hays and Wright agree that the fusion of the two is a better interpretation. What are your thoughts? Why is this argument important in interpreting Paul's theology?

3. How, in your understanding, are the faithfulness of God, the faithfulness of Christ, and human faith/faithfulness intimately connected in Paul's theology as outlined in these Galatians verses? In one or two sentences, summarize your understanding of Paul's theology of justification.

Romans 8

1. In this conversation about Romans 8 you see leading Paul scholars working through questions that they are still exploring and questions about which they wonder. What do you take away from observing this animated and candid exchange? What further questions does the conversation raise for you?

2. N. T. Wright and Richard Hays each identify why Paul's writings "light them up" and why they have given so much of their scholarly careers to thinking and writing about Paul. What is it about Paul and his letters that raises interest and passion in you?

The Kingdom New Testament – N.T. Wright (referenced in above video)

https://redeeminggod.com/kingdom-new-testament/http://www.internetmonk.com/archive/n-t-wrights-the-kingdom-new-testament

https://www.readthespirit.com/explore/interview-nt-tom-wright-on-kingdom-new-testament/

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

NT Wright on Justification in Galatians 2 (2009)

https://paulvanderklay.me/2009/05/01/nt-wright-on-justification-in-galatians-2/
(Text from Wright's book, Justification, pages 116-117)

I thought this [quote from book] was a superbly clear passage on delimiting the definition of justification in Paul in Galatians 2. Very helpful. Again from NT Wright's Justification pages 116, 117.

[Beginning of quote]

So something has happened to Peter—something so profound that he now has a new identity, which affects key behavior patterns and taboos about that very central human activity, sitting down to a meal. And it is on that "something," that change of identity, that transfer from one family to another, and the new position which membership in the new family creates, that Paul now concentrates, broadening what he has said to Peter (and hence, in the context of the letter, what he has said about Peter) to a more general statement (Galatians 2:15-16) about all those who, though born Jewish, have become Christians.

"We are Jews by nature," he writes, "and not 'Gentile sinners' (Galatians 2:15). That last phrase is a technical term: "lesser breeds," as it were, "outside the law." It represents, as do the boasts cataloged in Romans 2:17-20, what Paul knew to be a standard Jewish attitude, rooted of course in the Scriptures themselves. He is talking about ethnic identity, and about the practices that go with that. And he is about to show that in the gospel this ethnic identity is dismantled, so that a new identity may be constructed, in which the things that separated Jew from Gentile (as in Ephesians 2:14-16, on which see below) no longer matter. This, and only this, is the context in which we can read the famous and dense verse 2:16 with some hope of success.
Despite the fact that "we are Jews by nature [i.e., by birth], not 'Gentile sinners," "we nevertheless know," he says, "that a person is not justified by works of the law." Here it is: the first statement of the Christian doctrine of justification by faith. Or rather, the first statement of its negative pole, that one cannot be justified by works of "the law"—which, by the way, for Paul, always means "the Jewish Law, the Torah."

Now: another thought experiment. Let us suppose we only had a fragment of this letter, consisting of 2:11-16a, and stopping right here, "not justified by works of the law." What would we conclude about the meaning of "justified"? We might well know, from extraneous verbal evidence, that "justified" was a lawcourt term meaning "given the status of being 'in the right.'" But Paul is not in a lawcourt, he is at a dinner table. The context of his talking about "not being justified by works of the law" is that he is confronted with the question of ethnic taboos about eating together across ethnic boundaries. The force of his statement is clear: "Yes, you are Jewish; but as a Christian Jew you ought not to be separating on ethnic lines." Reading Paul strictly in his own context—as John Piper rightly insists we must always ultimately do—we are forced to conclude, at least in a preliminary way, that "to be justified" here does not mean "to be granted free forgiveness of your sins," "to come into a right relation with God" or some other near- synonym of "to be reckoned 'in the right' before God," but rather, and very specifically, "to be reckoned by God to be a true member of his family, and hence with the right to share table fellowship." This does not clinch the argument for my reading of the whole doctrine. But the first signs are that, for Paul, "justification," whatever else it included, always had in mind God's declaration of membership, and that this always referred specifically to the coming together of Jews and Gentiles in faithful membership of the Christian family.

[End of Quote]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Agreement and Confrontation – Ga 2:1-14 [NTWGAL] (Chp 2)

A good deal of the letter to the Galatians hinges on the fact that circumcision was the key issue, almost to the point of obsession, in the churches where Gentiles had become members, including of course the churches founded by Paul himself. It was all a question of identity, of knowing not only who you were yourself but who else belonged in your group, your tribe, your ethnic family. It didn't matter in the very early church, because all the first Christians were Jews, so all the males were circumcised anyway. But as soon as non-Jews heard the good news of Jesus, believed it and got baptized, the question of group identity-markers surfaced, and surfaced quite violently.

Circumcision wasn't just a matter of keeping part of the Law of Moses. It was this sign of membership in the covenant family of God, which some Jewish Christians (who Paul calls false family members) said was also essential to the gospel. Over the centuries circumcision had become the marker of Israel's racial identity. Paul will insist in the course of this letter, however, that one does not need to become part of a certain race to join God's family.

The writing in verses 1-5 is jerky and difficult. Perhaps it reflects Paul's anger and frustration at the allegations against him. Yet Paul, unlike some Christians today, did not dispute with his opponents for the sake of arguing, but "so that the truth of the gospel might be maintained for you" (v. 5). How can you or your church become known more for grace and truth?

How did the leaders respond to what Paul told them?

> If Paul stressed too much the fact that James, Peter (also called Cephas) and John approved of his preaching the gospel to the Gentiles, his opponents would say "There you are! We told you! He just got it from them and now he's muddled it up, as we said!" But if he labored the point that God doesn't care who's who in the church, that all are equal in his sight and that the Jerusalem apostles are ultimately no more important than anyone else, he ran the risk of breaking fellowship with the center of Christian faith. For Paul the unity of the church was absolutely vital. Paul made it clear that he was not in the pocket of the Jerusalem apostles. But he also made it clear that they were very happy about him and his work.

Paul and Barnabas went to Jerusalem from Antioch not only to meet with the apostles but to deliver an offering (Ac 11:27-30). They returned to Antioch; later Peter followed them there.

What is Paul referring to in verse 14 when he says they were out of line with gospel truth?

> It's hard for Westerners today to see how serious a matter table fellowship was in the early church. If we are eating with colleagues from work, we don't stop to inquire about their ethnic background. A moment's thought, however, will remind us that there have been and continue to be places in the world where if your skin is the wrong color, or if you are known to belong to the wrong religion, or perhaps simply if your accent gives you away as the wrong sort of person, there will be some who will not sit down and eat with you. Eating with people is one of the most powerful symbols of association.

Why would this story of Paul's confrontation with Peter be important to the church in Galatia—the recipients of this letter from Paul?

> The real Peter is the Peter who knows in his bones that, in Jesus the Messiah, God has created one new family of Jews and Gentiles. It's hard to live like that after a lifetime of looking at Gentiles as almost a different species; but Peter has been doing it. When hard-liners arrive who wouldn't approve of the Antioch practice, Peter holds the mask of Jewish respectability in front of his real face, which means that for the moment he will separate himself from the Gentile Christians. So convincing is his mask that the other Jewish Christians are taken in by it, even Barnabas.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Paul's confrontation with Peter wasn't just a squabble between two ways of interpreting one comparatively trivial point; it involved the very heart of the gospel.

Note on Ga 2:14

What does Paul mean when he accuses Peter of living like a pagan or a Gentile? That Peter is eating pork or other forbidden food? Possible, but pretty unlikely. That Peter is disobeying the moral laws in Torah? Certainly not—Paul would have had other sharp words for that, as indicated in Ga 5. That Peter is no longer saying his prayers? Highly unlikely.

Far and away the most likely solution is that Peter is no longer observing standard Jewish taboos. Peter was likely by now well and truly used to eating with Gentile Christians, and to making no difference between himself and them. That, after all, is what Acts says Peter had learnt in the house of Cornelius (Ac 10:28; 11:9). Paul is pointing out that Peter is acting like a hypocrite, deceitfully acting a part that he doesn't actually believe in. First Peter ate with non-Jewish people (which Paul says the gospel makes possible) and then Peter refused to do so for fear of what the circumcision group would think (which Paul condemns).

As we proceed to verse 16, the force of Paul's statement that we are not justified by works of the Mosaic Law is this: "Yes, you are Jewish; but as a Christian Jew you ought not to be separating on ethnic lines." In the immediate context Paul is saying that to be justified means, "to be reckoned by God to be a true member of his family, and hence with the right to share table fellowship." For Paul, "justification," whatever else it included, always had in mind God's declaration of membership, and that this always referred specifically to the coming together of Jews and Gentiles in faithful membership of the Christian family. (See my book Justification: God's Plan and Paul's Vision , chapter 5, for further comment on this passage.)

"Paul on the Unity of the Church" by N.T. Wright - Session One (2014)

Why Unity Mattered to Paul

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=1NZ2epO9cjI [Video]

Galatians 2, 1 Corinthians 8-10, etc.

"Paul on the Unity of the Church" by N.T. Wright - Session Two (2014)

Path to Unity: Messiah and the Spirit

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=cnB0j0HQa8Q [Video]

Galatians – Beginning (Top)
Galatians – Maps
Galatians – Intro
Galatians – Charts
Galatians – Overviews
Galatians – Getz Videos
Galatians – NT Wright related
Galatians - Commentary

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Paul and Peter (Gal 2:6-19)

http://executableoutlines.com/gal/ga2_6.htm

INTRODUCTION

1. Paul's defends his apostleship in Galatians by recounting...
   a. His limited contact with the other apostles, in particular Peter - Ga 1:11-24
   b. Two episodes when he met with the apostles, especially Peter – Ga 2:1-21

2. The relationship between Paul and Peter has often been misrepresented...
   a. That Peter had primacy over Paul (Catholicism)
   b. That they had doctrinal differences (Criticism)

[The Biblical evidence shows otherwise. Both in Galatians and elsewhere in the Scriptures, we note their equality and respect for one another. From our text (Ga 2:6-19), consider first...]

I. PAUL'S VISIT TO JERUSALEM

A. THE OCCASION...
1. Paul, Barnabas and Titus had gone to Jerusalem by revelation - cf. Ga 2:1-2
   a. Likely the visit to Jerusalem described in Ac 15:2-4
   b. Though some think it may have occurred earlier - cf. Ac 11:29-30; 12:25
2. Paul withstood pressure by false teachers - cf. Ga 2:2-5
   a. In a private meeting, he spoke with those "of reputation" (Peter? James?)
   b. False brethren sought to compel Titus to be circumcised
   c. Paul refused to yield to their demands
3. Paul met with Peter, James, and John, who "seemed to be pillars" - cf. Ga 2:6,9

B. THE OUTCOME...
1. With those "who seemed to be something" (James, Cephas, John) - Ga 2:6-10
   a. They added nothing to Paul (made no demands, gave no instructions or authority)
   b. They saw that Paul had been given the gospel to the uncirmcumcision
   c. Paul recognized God's effective work in Peter's ministry and Peter's apostleship to the circumcision
   d. James, Cephas (Peter) and John perceived the grace given to Paul
   e. They extended the right hand of fellowship to Paul
   f. They asked only that Paul remember the poor, which he was eager to do
2. Of the meeting together with all the apostles and elders at Jerusalem - Ac 15:6-29
   a. Peter related his preaching to the Gentiles, and their salvation without circumcision
   b. Paul and Barnabas related their ministry and God's working among the Gentiles
   c. James offered scriptural support, and then a letter to which all agreed
   d. The letter confirmed the ministry of "beloved Barnabas and Paul"

[Paul's visit to Jerusalem certainly illustrated that he and Peter were in doctrinal agreement regarding the gospel they preached. The nature of their relationship is made clearer with...]

II. PETER'S VISIT TO ANTIOCH

A. THE OCCASION...
1. Peter played the hypocrite - Ga 2:11-13
   a. He had come to Antioch (some think this was during Ac 15:1; others think it was later)
   b. At first he ate with the Gentiles
   c. After certain men came from James, Peter withdrew and separated himself
   d. He feared those of the circumcision
   e. His actions encouraged other Jews to be hypocrites, even Barnabas

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

2. Paul confronted Peter - Ga 2:11,14-19
   a. He withstood Peter to his face, because he was to be blamed
   b. He rebuked Peter before them all, showing him to be inconsistent
   c. Paul's gospel (justification by faith in Christ, not by the works of the Law) vindicated by Peter, who normally lived like a Gentile himself - cf. Peter also, in Ac 15:7-11

B. THE OUTCOME...
1. Paul's equality with Peter demonstrated - Ga 2:11,14
   a. Paul had the authority to withstand him to his face
   b. Paul had the authority to charge him with hypocrisy before all
2. Peter's respect for Paul undiminished - cf. 2 Pe 3:15-16
   a. Peter later described Paul as "our beloved brother Paul"
   b. Peter acknowledged the wisdom given to Paul
   c. Peter recognized Paul's epistles as "Scriptures"

[Peter's visit to Antioch was not a happy occasion, but it did provide an opportunity to illustrate the equality of Peter and Paul, and that despite Peter's momentary lapse, his overall life demonstrated that his gospel was the same as Paul's. Finally, some thoughts regarding a couple of...]

CONCLUSION

1. The relationship between Paul and Peter illustrates the power of Christ...
   a. To turn persecutor and persecuted into coworkers for the gospel
   b. To help brethren at odds work through their problems to become brethren beloved

2. While Paul and Peter had a different focus in their respective ministries...
   a. They served the same Lord, preached the same gospel
   b. One was not superior to the other, they were fellow-apostles in the kingdom of God

Rather than trying to find some perceived 'rift' between two faithful apostles, may we use their examples to motivate us in our service to the Lord and to one another...

Galatians – Beginning (Top)

Galatians – Maps

Galatians – Intro

Galatians – Charts

Galatians – Overviews

Galatians – Getz Videos

Galatians – NT Wright related

Galatians - Commentary

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

False Brethren in Acts 15 and Galatians 2

https://realityisnotoptional.com/2013/02/16/false-brethren-in-acts-15-and-galatians-2/

> Act 15:1 And certain men which came down from Judaea taught the brethren, and said, Except ye be circumcised after the manner of Moses, ye cannot be saved.
> Act 15:2 When therefore Paul and Barnabas had no small dissension and disputation with them, they determined that Paul and Barnabas, and certain other of them, should go up to Jerusalem unto the apostles and elders about this question.

These events in Acts 15 is parallel to events described in Galatians 2. In Galatians 2, Paul is recounting the reasons he journeyed back to Jerusalem to meet with the church leaders. He writes of these "certain men":

> Gal 2:4 And that because of false brethren unawares brought in, who came in privily to spy out our liberty which we have in Christ Jesus, that they might bring us into bondage:

He calls them false brethren. So we know they were representing themselves as brethren. It also appears from the Acts passage that they accept the authority of those in Jerusalem. Why else would a journey to Jerusalem solve the issue? Even if the journey was intended to satisfy Paul's converts, and not the false brethren, the false brethren must have accepted the authority of those in Jerusalem, how else are they convincing those who are Paul's converts and who do accept the authority of Jerusalem?

Once in Jerusalem, two more contextual clues tell us about these false brethren. The first is that an entirely new contingent arises preaching the exact same thing. Luke, the author of Acts, calls them believers:

> Act 15:5 But there rose up certain of the sect of the Pharisees which believed, saying, That it was needful to circumcise them, and to command them to keep the law of Moses.

Compare the teachings of this sect of "Pharisees which believed" to the teachings of these "false brethren". We know from Gal 2:3 that it had to do with circumcision, and we know from Acts 15 that it definitely was about needing circumcision to be saved:

> Act 15:1 And certain men which came down from Judaea taught the brethren, and said, Except ye be circumcised after the manner of Moses, ye cannot be saved.

The next piece of evidence is that Peter claims the men were from the congregation headed by him and James. These very men were believers who communed with Peter and James:

> Act 15:24 Forasmuch as we have heard, that certain which went out from us have troubled you with words, subverting your souls, saying, Ye must be circumcised, and keep the law: to whom we gave no such commandment:

I had a conversation with a pastor who claimed that these were heretics that were casted out by Peter and James, but the text in no way indicates this. The text indicates that they are still accepted (just not their proselytizing Paul's converts), not to mention that a contingent of James and Peter mentioned in Acts 15:5 preached the exact same thing and are considered believers. The men from Judea were brethren. Why does Paul call them false? Because Paul was extremely protective of his converts:

> Gal 1:6 I marvel that ye are so soon removed from him that called you into the grace of Christ unto another gospel:
> Gal 1:7 Which is not another; but there be some that trouble you, and would pervert the gospel of Christ.
> Gal 1:8 But though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

> Gal 1:9 As we said before, so say I now again, If any man preach any other gospel unto you than that ye have received, let him be accursed.

Paul states that even if he was preaching another gospel that they should not believe him. He states that even an angel from heaven were preaching another gospel, not to believe him. Paul curses these people. Is it any stretch of the imagination to contend that he would call James and Peter's acolytes false brethren if they attempted to preach a different gospel to Paul's converts?

Note that Paul says the gospel they teach is "not another". This makes sense of James and Peter's converts. They are still teaching the death and resurrection of Christ (the gospel), only they are adding in conditions for salvation. Paul goes on to label the gospel being taught as the "Gospel of Christ", only perverted.

One further clue is that Galatians describes an incident well after the events in Acts 15 in which "men from James" came again to Antioch, but this time Peter is there. Peter, it seems, pre-emptively withdrawals from the Gentiles and the following happens:

> Gal 2:11 But when Peter was come to Antioch, I withstood him to the face, because he was to be blamed.
> Gal 2:12 For before that certain came from James, he did eat with the Gentiles: but when they were come, he withdrew and separated himself, fearing them which were of the circumcision.

Who is this "them which were of the circumicision"? It is the same as the men from James. What are they teaching and what do they believe? Could it have to do with circumcision? Why does Peter, a leader in the church, react to what these certain men would think? Paul refutes Peter to his face:

> Gal 2:14 But when I saw that they walked not uprightly according to the truth of the gospel, I said unto Peter before them all, If thou, being a Jew, livest after the manner of Gentiles, and not as do the Jews, why compellest thou the Gentiles to live as do the Jews?

Peter was compelling Gentiles to be circumcised, through withdrawing from uncircumcised Gentiles. Paul links this to the gospel. Paul claims Peter did not live according to the truth of the Gospel. Paul goes on:

> …Gal 2:16 Knowing that a man is not justified by the works of the law, but by the faith of Jesus Christ, even we have believed in Jesus Christ, that we might be justified by the faith of Christ, and not by the works of the law: for by the works of the law shall no flesh be justified…
> Gal 2:19 For I through the law am dead to the law, that I might live unto God…
> Gal 2:21 I do not frustrate the grace of God: for if righteousness come by the law, then Christ is dead in vain.

Paul talks about Law and Works. This is how he is withstanding Peter to his face. So men from James came, and Peter responded by mimicking a gospel of law and works. Isn't this is a settled issue? Doesn't James and Peter teach salvation by faith alone and that works are dead? It is obvious that they did not. Both James and Peter, and their converts, seem to have been teaching something which Paul did not teach.

Paul spends Galatians 3 then explaining further that works and law are not required. With all this in mind, we can get a clear picture of who the false brethren were, where they came from, who their teachers were, and the extent they were affected by the Jerusalem council (not much).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Ephesians 2:15-21 – The Two Roads to God

http://www.fbccs.org/resources/studyguides/galatians_sg04.htm

Excerpt:

Perhaps this chart from Larry Richards' Expository Dictionary of Bible Words will help you think through these issues.

	Grace	Religion
View of mankind	basically sinful, unable to please God	basically good, able to please God
Associated concepts	promise gift faith	law works obligation
Focus	Jesus	self
Result	forgiveness life righteousness	condemnation sin death
Definition	God's free action - based on Jesus' death and motivated by love - to redeem all who believe and to make them righteous.	Man's effort to do good and by his own works to merit salvation as a deserved reward for his behavior.

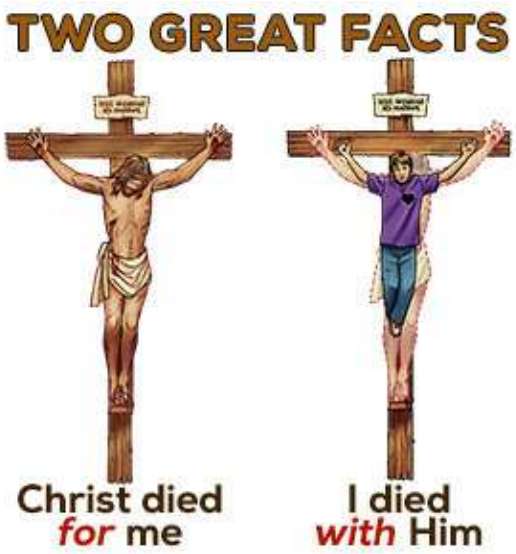
APPLICATION:

Verse 20 is one of the key verses in the New Testament. What difference does it make in your life right now?

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Galatians 2:20 "I have been crucified with Christ"

http://bible-forum.invisionzone.com/topic/1256-galatians-220-i-have-been-crucified-with-christ/



I have been crucified with Christ; and it is no longer I who live, but Christ lives in me: and that[/size]life which I now live in the flesh I live in faith,[/size]the faith which is in the Son of God, who loved me, and gave himself up for me. I do not make void the grace of God: for if righteousness is through the law, then Christ died for nought.

The verse says nothing about a Christian needing to crucify himself. You cannot crucify yourself. It refers to a past event that has present consequences: "I have been crucified," not "I am being crucified," nor "I need to be crucified." Now to be sure, often Christians don't act like they have been crucified nor like Christ is living in them.

One may compare Romans 6:

We who died to sin, how shall we any longer live therein? 3 Or are ye ignorant that all we who were baptized into Christ Jesus were baptized into his death? 4 We were buried therefore with him through baptism into death: that like as Christ was raised from the dead through the glory of the Father, so we also might walk in newness of life. 5 For if we have become 1united with him in the likeness of his death, we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection; 6 knowing this, that our old man was crucified with him, that the body of sin might be done away, that so we should no longer be in bondage to sin; 7 for he that hath died is justified from sin. 8 But if we died with Christ, we believe that we shall also live with him; 9 knowing that Christ being raised from the dead dieth no more; death no more hath dominion over him. 10 For the death that he died, he died unto sin once: but the life that he liveth, he liveth unto God. 11 Even so reckon ye also yourselves to be dead unto sin, but alive unto God in Christ Jesus.

I don't know what this picture below is supposed to mean, but you cannot crucify yourself. You could put a nail through your feet, but how can you nail your hands??? & then how will you get the cross lifted up???

Is this the picture of a man who tried to crucify Himself with Christ, but had to give up since he found out he just could not do it? Crucifixion with Christ is something done to us -- and it happened 2000 years ago~~, if it happened at all~~.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

A Summary of the Christian Life In One Verse

http://www.middletownbiblechurch.org/christia/livfaith.htm

Galatians 2:20 "…Not I, But Christ…"

NOT I WHY IS IT NO LONGER I? BECAUSE . . .	BUT CHRIST WHY IS IT CHRIST LIVING IN ME? BECAUSE . . .
In me (that is in my flesh) dwelleth no good thing . . . O wretched man that I am! (Rom. 7:18,24)	The law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death (Rom. 8:2).
All my righteousnesses are as filthy rags (Isaiah 64:6).	I am in Christ Jesus who of God is made unto me wisdom and righteousness (1 Cor. 1:30).
Sin dwelleth in me (Rom. 7:20).	Christ liveth in me (Gal. 2:20).
I live for myself (2 Cor. 5:15).	I live for the One who died and rose again for me (2 Cor. 5:15).
The works of the flesh are adultery, fornication, uncleanness . . . (Gal. 5:19).	The fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace . . . (Gal. 5:22-23).
Those that are in the flesh cannot please God (Rom. 8:8).	I am not in the flesh but in the Spirit. The Spirit of God dwells in me (Rom. 8:9).
I have put off the old man with his deeds (Col. 3:9).	I have put on the new man which is renewed in knowledge after the image of Him that created him (Col. 3:10).
My old man is corrupt according to the deceitful lusts (Eph. 4:22).	My new man is created in righteousness and true holiness (Eph. 4:24).
My old man was crucified with Him (Rom. 6:6).	My life is hidden with Christ in God (Col. 3:3).
I died with Christ (Col. 2:20).	I am risen with Christ (Col. 3:1).
I've been baptized into His death (Rom. 6:3; Gal. 2:20).	I've been planted together in the likeness of His resurrection (Rom. 6:5).
I have been crucified with Christ (Gal. 2:20).	Nevertheless I live . . . and the life that I now live I live by the faith of the Son of God (Gal. 2:20).
Old things passed away (2 Cor. 5:17).	All things have become new! I am a new creature in Christ (2 Cor. 5:17).

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

I am dead unto sin (Rom. 6:11).	I am alive unto God (Rom. 6:11).
I am dead in Adam (1 Cor. 15:22).	I am made alive in Christ (1 Cor. 15:22).
I once was a slave of sin (Rom. 6:17,20).	I am now free from sin and a slave of God (Rom. 6:18,22).

Galatians – Beginning (Top)

Galatians – Maps

Galatians – Intro

Galatians – Charts

Galatians – Overviews

Galatians – Getz Videos

Galatians – NT Wright related

Galatians - Commentary

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

A New Identity – Ga 2:15-3:9 [NTWGAL] (Chp 3)

Beginning again from scratch to learn who you are is a strange idea for most of us. It is precisely what people who have suffered severe memory loss need to do. It is what people who have suffered other kinds of loss also need to do: the refugee without home, country or family is only one example. Precisely this sort of exercise, losing one identity and reconstructing another, is what Paul is explaining in this dense and complex passage. It isn't a matter of a few twists and turns in the interpretation of the gospel or the Jewish Law. It isn't about one style of missionary policy as against another. It is a matter of who you are in the Messiah.

Read Ga 2:15-21. Often Paul's dense passages like this one yield their secrets if you approach them from near the end, where he sums up everything in a single great climactic statement.

My translation of verse 2:20 is, "And the life I do still live in the flesh, I live within the faithfulness of the son of God, who loved me and gave himself for me." How does this verse speak to the issue of whether only Jewish Christians belong to the true people of God or whether in Christ non-Jews can also belong without first becoming Jews?

> One of Paul's most well-known ideas remains difficult for modern Western minds to come to terms with. Those who belong to the Messiah (Christ in Greek) are in the Messiah , so that what is true of him is true of them. The roots of this idea are in the Jewish beliefs that the king represents his people, as David represented Israel against the Philistines when he fought Goliath. What is true of the king is true of them.

Now we can go back to 2:15-16. Justified or justification means "being declared righteous." Consider this translation of the Greek text in verse 16:

> But we know that a person is not declared "righteous" by works of the Jewish Law, but through the faithfulness of Jesus the Messiah.
>
> That is why we too believed in the Messiah, Jesus: so that we might be declared "righteous" on the basis of the Messiah's faithfulness, and not on the basis of works of the Jewish Law. On that basis, you see, no creature will be declared "righteous."

The heart of Paul's argument is that one must lose everything, including the memory of who one was before, and one must accept and learn to live by a new identity with a new foundation. What old identities have you discarded or should you discard because of being in Christ?

> Paul's head-on clash with Peter in Antioch (2:11-14) was about Christian identity. His passionate appeal to the Galatians is about their Christian identity. The question Paul and Peter have run into, which was focused on whether Jewish and Gentile Christians were allowed to eat at the same table, is the question "Who is God's true Israel? Who are the true people of God?" Paul's answer is simple: all who are "in the Messiah" are the true people of God. That means believing Gentiles as well as believing Jews.

Read Ga 3:1-9. What is Paul's reaction to the news that his beloved Galatians are thinking of getting circumcised and trying to become part of the physical family of Israel (3:1-4)?

Paul lines up "Spirit" and "faith" on the one hand, and "flesh" and "law" on the other. Why do you think human beings are so prone to fall back onto the flesh and law even after beginning with the Spirit and faith (3:3)?

How is it that the Galatians are already children of Abraham without being circumcised (3:6-9)?

How does Paul further make his case in verses 3:8-9 that national or ethnic identity with Israel is not necessary?

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

> Genesis 12 promises that God will bless all the nations through Abraham. Genesis 15 describes the covenant God made with Abraham, promising him a great family and the land as its inheritance. The critical move was that when God made the first promise, Abraham believed it. That doesn't mean his faith earned him his membership in God's covenant; the promise was already made. It was rather the badge that showed he was now in covenant with God.

Note on Ga 2:17-18

Paul is demonstrating to Peter that even Jewish Christians have lost their old identity, defined by the Law of Moses, and have come into a new identity, defined only by the Messiah. This doesn't mean, as he says in verses 17-18, that by losing Jewish identity we are "sinners," as the Jews had regarded the Gentiles. On the contrary, if like Peter you reconstruct the wall between Jews and Gentiles, all you achieve is to prove that you yourself are a lawbreaker. If the Jewish Law is what really matters, then look out: you've broken it!

But the Jewish Law isn't now the thing that matters. "If righteousness (covenant membership, in other words, justification) came by the Jewish Law, then the Messiah wouldn't have needed to die." To have separate tables within the church is to spurn the generous love of the Messiah. One of the marks of Jesus' public career was open table-fellowship. God intends it to be a mark of Jesus' people from that day to this.

Galatians – Beginning (Top)

Galatians – Maps

Galatians – Intro

Galatians – Charts

Galatians – Overviews

Galatians – Getz Videos

Galatians – NT Wright related

Galatians - Commentary

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Summary of Chapter 3

Galatians Chapter 3:1-14 – Paul and the Foolish Galatians: An Exegetical Analysis

The Historical and Cultural Context of the Text

https://www.whitehorseinn.org/images/Horton-WrightReview.pdf [PDF]

Excerpt:

Why making reference to Abraham?

> a. at the very beginning of Israel's history it is clearly evident that God had chosen this one nation in order that in and through its great "seed" it might not only receive a blessing but also become a blessing to the world;
>
> b. that equally from the very beginning the divinely appointed means of receiving this blessing, so as to be able to impart it to nations, was faith, not works. (italics original)

To press this further, it might be the fact that the opponents or the Judaizers so to speak, were using Abraham as their pace setter or religious figure in order to argue their case, thus perpetually boasting about their descent from Abraham. Their error was in the perception that their natural/biological tie to Abraham would guarantee their favorable standing before God (Gal 2:3; 5:2, 3; 6:12, 15; cf. Matt. 3:9; Luke 3:8; John 8:33, 39, 40, 53), "and as if the righteousness which Jehovah had „reckoned" to Abraham (Gen. 15:6) had been a debt which God owed him for his work (cf. Rom. 4:4)." In response to their argument, Paul uses that same premise which is their common ground to demonstrate how it opposes their teachings, because the emphasis of the text is on faith and not on works. "…this faith, says Paul, in complete harmony with Gal 3:1-5, was not a matter of merit on Abraham's part, but was by God graciously „reckoned" or „imputed" to for righteousness." So if the opponents think that their clamoring on the necessity of circumcision in order to enhance salvation by appealing on the life of Abraham (Gen. 17:23-27), it is indeed a lost battle because Abraham's circumcision was preceded by justification many years (Gen 15:6; 16:16; 17:24). Due to Abraham's justification he became the "daddy" of all who would share in his faith both the circumcised and the uncircumcised alike.

"According to Jewish interpretation at the time of Paul, Abraham's faith was a meritorious work: Abraham "put his faith in God," and therefore God counted that act of faith for what it was, as righteousness." Paul's employment of quotation from Gen. 15: 6 in confirmation of the implied answer to the question in vv 2, 5 (by "hearing of faith" and not by "works of the law) stands against such presupposition. The reason is not farfetched in that Paul does not "take the „counting" as an accounting of Abraham's merit, or even in the sense that Abraham's faith was regarded or estimated by God as if it were righteousness."

Many explanations have been offered for the role of Abraham in the argument Paul mounts in Galatians 3. But all of them hitherto have missed the centrality of ethnicity and collective memory in understanding what Paul says and how he says it. Abraham was central to the ethnic identity of the Judeans of his time, as Paul was only too aware. He knew that in Galatia his opponents were using this glorious figure from the collective memory and mnemonic tradition of Israel in their attempt to persuade Paul's non-Judean converts to become Judeans through circumcision. To counter this threat he had to detach Abraham from Israel and its collective memory and attach it to the Christ-movement and its collective memory. Central to his argument is the claim that Christ is the seed referred to in the scriptural promises made "to Abraham and his seed" and that Christ-followers receive these promises because through baptism they are all one in Christ Jesus. In addition, Paul reinterprets these promises to connect them with the dramatic gifts of the Holy Spirit that were characteristic of his congregations. Paul's entire argument represents a daring essay in the contestation and re-application of the collective memory of Abraham, away from the ethnic group where it arose to his socioreligious Christ-movement groups in Galatia.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Galatians 3:6-9

Journal of the Grace Evangelical Society (GES):
Does Your Mind Need Changing? Repentance Reconsidered by Robert (Bob) Wilkin (1998)
https://faithalone.org/journal/1998i/Wilkin.html

Excerpt:

Repentance "Strikingly Absent" from Paul

One NT scholar wrote that whereas the Judaism of Paul's day emphasized the need to repent to get into the kingdom, the idea of repentance is "a category strikingly absent from Paul."[8]

Consider for example Gal 3:6-9:

> Abraham "believed God, and it was accounted to him for righteousness." Therefore know that only those who are of faith are sons of Abraham. And the Scripture, foreseeing that God would justify the Gentiles by faith, preached the gospel to Abraham beforehand, saying, "In you all the nations shall be blessed." So then those who are of faith are blessed with believing Abraham.

Ten times in those four verses we find the words believe and faith. Not once do we find the words repent or repentance. In fact, those words are not to be found anywhere in the entire Epistle to the Galatians.

The Book of Galatians is a defense of the gospel against the attacks of the Judaizers. Paul argues that the gospel of Jesus Christ is foundational to the Christian life. There is no other gospel. It is indeed significant that repentance is absent in a book where Paul is presenting and defending the gospel message he received directly from the Lord. Surely if repentance were a part of Paul's gospel, he would have said so in his defense of his gospel in Galatians.

See also*: Repentance

The Gospel

Galatians – Beginning (Top)
Galatians – Maps
Galatians – Intro
Galatians – Charts
Galatians – Overviews
Galatians – Getz Videos
Galatians – NT Wright related
Galatians - Commentary

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Galatians 3 graphic:

Galatians – Beginning (Top)

Galatians – Maps

Galatians – Intro

Galatians – Charts

Galatians – Overviews

Galatians – Getz Videos

Galatians – NT Wright related

Galatians - Commentary

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

(See also prior pages and section with Wright and Hayes on Faithfulness / Justification)

N.T. Wright and the Faithfulness of Paul: Part 6: Election, the Spirit, and Justification – Summary by Derek Vreeland

https://derekvreeland.com/2014/10/n-t-wright-faithfulness-paul-part-6-election-spirit-justification/

Excerpt:

B. Justification at work in Galatians 2:15-4:11

"We ourselves are Jews by birth and not Gentile sinners; yet we know that a person is not justified by works of the law but through [the] faith[fulness of] Jesus Christ, so we also have believed in Christ Jesus, in order to be justified by faith in Christ and not by works of the law, because by works of the law no one will be justified." (Galatians 2:15 ESV)

The context was the "Antioch incident" where Peter was not sharing a table with Gentile Christians. Paul confronts Peter, because his sin was fundamentally a gospel issue as he explains in Galatians 2:15. We are not justified—declared righteous and therefore members of God's people—because we keep the law, but because of the faithfulness of Jesus. We believe in Jesus and are justified. Our justification is based on Jesus' faithful death. Our faith is the badge indicated we are members of God's people.

"Paul's whole argument is about membership in the single family, sharing the same table-fellowship, not primarily about the way in which sins are dealt with and the sinner rescued from them." (969) There is little mention of sin, and no mention of death, in Galatians. The letter focuses on the definition of Christian community, that is, what does it mean to be the people of God? What are the markers that define Christian community? This definition has been reworked around Jesus the Messiah and the coming of the Spirit. "Are you so foolish? Having begun by the Spirit, are you now being perfected by the flesh?" (Galatians 3:3) Paul is addressing the Galatians (plural) according to 3:1. This new shape of the people of God is the work of the Spirit.

This called people, the children of Abraham, redefined by Jesus and the Spirit will be the means by which God blesses the nations (Galatians 3:8). The promise given to Abraham was not merely for one ethnic people (the Jews) in one particular land (Israel); the promise was for the whole world. Jesus became a curse for us (N.T. Wright notes the "us" refers to Jewish people), redeeming them from the curse of the law so that "the blessing of Abraham may come to the Gentiles" (Galatians 3:13), so that "we (both Jews and Gentiles) might receive the promised Spirit through faith" (Galatians 3:14).

To be declared righteous members of God's chosen people (election) has been redefined. Members who once were marked by keeping the torah are now marked by both faith in Jesus as Messiah whose faithful death demonstrated God's faithfulness to the torah and the reception of God's Spirit.

Note: Part of a 9-Part series summarizing Wright's book, N.T. Wright and the Faithfulness of Paul. Part 9 has links to the prior 8 articles, here is the link:
https://derekvreeland.com/2014/11/paul-in-history/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

A Promise Fulfilled – Ga 3:10-22 [NTWGAL] (Chp. 4)

God's promise to Abraham wasn't simply about the Jews; it was designed for all the nations. Abraham's family was to bring God's plan of salvation to the rest of the world. That's why there was such a family in the first place. But what had happened to this family? And what, in consequence, had happened to God's plan and purpose? The physical family of Abraham, the Jewish people, had overturned like a huge truck in the road and were now blocking the original intention. God's promise still held good; God still intended to bless the whole world through Abraham's family; but Israel, the promise bearers, were not only themselves failing, but getting in the way of the wider fulfillment.

How do you react to the statement that Christ himself became "a curse on our behalf" (v. 13)?

> We should look back to Ga 3:7-9 to answer, What is the problem to which the curse-bearing death of the Messiah is the answer? The problem is that the Mosaic Law looked as if it would prevent the Abrahamic promises of blessing from getting out to the nations, and thus prevent the plan God always had for blessing the nations through Israel from coming to pass.
>
> In short, the Law pronounced a curse on all who failed to keep it, so that Israel could not fulfill God's purpose. Instead, Paul insists, the Messiah has taken that curse upon himself, as Israel's representative. Jesus took the weight of Israel's curse on himself, not just in some abstract theological sense but quite literally and historically, when he died on the cross. The roadblock has been taken out of the way. The traffic can flow as God always intended it: from the promise of Abraham, through his family, his "seed" (in the person of Israel's representative, the Messiah) and out to the all the nations. Because of him, both Jews and Gentiles are offered full membership in his family.

Note on Ga 3:19-20

> The Mosaic Law was given through the agency not only of angels (that is, for Paul, a way of saying that the Law was indeed God’s Law, wonderful and holy) but also of the “mediator,” that is, Moses. Moses, though, cannot be the mediator through whom God creates the “one,” the single family he always wanted; but God is one, and so (as Paul explains in Ro 3:29-30) he desires a single family, not many families. Left to itself, the Law, putting Israel in quarantine as it did, would have created at least two families (Israel and believing Gentiles) and possibly many more.

What is the relationship between the Law of Moses and promise (vv. 21-22)?

> The Mosaic Law was a necessary part of the intervening story between the giving of the promise and its fulfillment. Paul is quite clear that the human race as a whole is sinful, under God's judgment. He is also clear that God called Abraham so that eventually, through his family, the remedy might be found for the problem of human beings and indeed the cosmos as a whole. But Abraham's family was also part of the human race. The people who carried the solution were themselves part of the problem. The Mosaic Law was given because of the in-between state of Abraham's physical family, the people of Israel. It was given for a set period of time until the single family intended and promised by God (of both Jew and Gentile) should arrive with the Messiah.

Note on Ga 3:19-20

The Mosaic Law was given through the agency not only of angels (that is, for Paul, a way of saying that the Law was indeed God's Law, wonderful and holy) but also of the "mediator," that is, Moses. Moses, though, cannot be the mediator through whom God creates the "one," the single family he always wanted; but God is one, and so (as Paul explains in Ro 3:29-30) he desires a single family, not many families. Left to itself, the Law, putting Israel in quarantine as it did, would have created at least two families (Israel and believing Gentiles) and possibly many more.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Coming of Faith – Ga 3:23-4:7 [NTWGAL] (Chp 5)

One of the worst evenings of my daughter's young life was when she was asked to be a babysitter for some friends—a job she had often done before, happily and successfully. Unknown to them or us, the two young children were in a very cross mood, and resented their parents going out for the evening. They took out their sulks and anger on my daughter. She had a miserable time, but managed to prevent the children doing anything too drastically wicked. She—and, I think, the children—were extremely relieved when the evening was over.

Paul pictures the Mosaic Law in the role of a babysitter until Israel should grow up. So Paul now asks the Galatians, do you want to go back to being a child, when you could be grown up? Do you want to go back to being a slave, when you could be free?

How have both Jew and Gentile become part of God's family (3:25-27)?

> The word translated "guardian," "disciplinarian" or "babysitter" in verses 24-25 would normally, in Paul's world, refer to a slave whose task it was to look after the children day by day on the parents' behalf, taking them to school, making sure they were safe, keeping them out of mischief and so on. Many cultures still have people who fulfill such functions, who sometimes become honored members of the family after their child-related duties come to an end. The fact that Israel needed a babysitter during the period of childhood did not mean that the babysitter should continue to do the job once the child had grown up.
>
> Paul is claiming throughout the letter that, with the coming of the Messiah, Israel was at last God's grown-up child. The badge of the grown-up child of God, the badge of God's free people, is that he trusts them with responsibility. They are people of faith, of trust. They believe the gospel.

How does Paul express the unity which Christ has brought about among believers (3:26-29)?

> What matters to Paul is that someone is in the Messiah or belongs to the Messiah. This is not merely a spiritual state resulting from or consisting in a certain type of inner experience. For Paul it is a matter of belonging to a particular community, the new royal family, the Messiah's people; and this family is entered through baptism. Paul knew that some people were slaves and others free. But the point is that all these are irrelevant for your status in the family of the Messiah. There aren't two families, one more privileged than the other. There is only one.

Read Ga 4:1-7. Though in verse 3 Paul is talking about Jews ("we"), what he says about these Jews who have become Christians is designed to make their story as alike as possible to that of Gentile Christians. How were Jews and Gentiles both enslaved, according to Paul?

> These verses are full of the language of Exodus. God called Moses to lead Israel out of slavery in Egypt into freedom to inherit the Promised Land. Freedom was secured through Passover with the sacrifice of the lambs and the slaying of Egypt's firstborn. Then, when the people had left Egypt, they came to Sinai forty days after Passover, and they were given the Law by Moses as their guide through the wilderness to their inheritance. But then comes the new Passover. God sent out, not Moses, but his own Son, Jesus the Messiah, so that through his death freedom could be bought and the slaves could become true children. Forty days after Passover, on the feast of Pentecost, God gave, not the Law, but his own Spirit, the spirit of his Son, to turn his people into his true children in their innermost beings as well as in legal status.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

N.T. Wright: Historical Paul and 'Systematic Theology' (2014) [Recommended]

http://ntwrightpage.com/2017/02/24/historical-paul-and-systematic-theology/

Excerpt:

Another passage, which is very different on the surface and very similar underneath is Galatians 4:1-11. Here Paul tells the story of the world as the story of God's freeing of slaves and his making them his children, his heirs. As in the Exodus, the true God reveals himself as who he is, putting the idols to shame (4:8-11). But the God who has now revealed himself in this way is the God who "sends the son" (4:4) and then "sends the Spirit of the Son" (4:6). In these passages we have, within thirty years of Jesus' death, what would later be called a very high christology. It is very early and very Jewish. The logic of the passage is that the Galatians must either learn to know the one true God in terms of Jesus and the Spirit or they will be in effect turning back to the principalities and powers to which they were formerly subject. Their choice is either incipient trinitarianism or a return to paganism.

N.T. Wright: How to Hear the Other Half of the Bible's Conversation (Galatians 4:1-8) (Brief intro.)

http://ntwrightonline.org/how-to-hear-the-other-half-of-the-bibles-conversation/ [Video]

See*: Adoption

Galatians – Beginning (Top)
Galatians – Maps
Galatians – Intro
Galatians – Charts
Galatians – Overviews
Galatians – Getz Videos
Galatians – NT Wright related
Galatians - Commentary
Galatians – Related Topics

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Galatians 4:4-5

Adoption through Jesus the Son of God

Even though υἱοθεσία in Paul's understanding is primarily and profoundly a salvific act on the part of the father, the apostle also makes it clear that there is an inextricable link between the sonship of Jesus and the adopted sonship of Christians.[42] This is seen in the double ἵνα purpose clause in Gal 4:4–5:[43] "But when the time had fully come, God sent his Son born under law in order to redeem those under law in order that we may receive the adoption as sons." The connection between God's Son and the adopted sons of God is clearly evident in the chiastic structure of these verses, as recognized by J. B. Lightfoot:[44]

A God sent his Son
  B born under law
  B[1] in order to redeem those under law
A[1] in order that we may receive the adoption as sons

The key point lies with the two statements situated at the extremity of the chiasm—"God sent His Son…in order that we may receive the adoption as sons"—but it is not the mere sending or appearance of the Son of God in the last days which ipso facto brings about the adoption of the sons of God. Paul's emphasis lies not merely with the incarnational, the eschatological appearing of the Son of God in human flesh, but also with the sacrificial (cf. Rom 8:3) which brings about the redemption unto adoption. Paul goes on to demonstrate in clear soteriological terms the work of God's Son as the means through whom the adoption of sons and daughters is effected. In so doing he does not confuse his metaphors for there is a definite link between the redemptive work of Christ the Son of God and the adoption that is brought about.

By sounding a note of redemption (Gal 4:5) Paul has probably got in view the Roman legal practice of adoption in mind. …

See*: Adoption for more details [See also*: Chiasm]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

No Turning Back – Ga 4:8-20 [NTWGAL] (Chp. 6)

The Galatian Christians have come out of the "Egypt" of idolatry, of worshiping false gods. They have been set free, redeemed by the personal action of the one true God in his Son and his Spirit (Ga 4:4-7). Now it seems they have had a look at the wide and worrying world of freedom, and they don't like what they see. They are determined to return once more to the world where life seems safer, more regulated, where you know where you are: in other words, to the life of slavery. They are, Paul declares, choosing to go back where they were before, back to the old pagan gods they had worshiped until the time when they were set free by the living God.

Why do you think Paul corrects himself from "you've come to know God" to "to be known by God" (v. 9)?

The Galatians are insisting on keeping the Jewish festivals (v. 10). Those festivals all looked forward to the great act of redemption which God would one day accomplish. So how can the Galatians keep the festivals when God's future has already arrived in Jesus Christ? By these observances they are saying that they aren't sure if God really has done what he said he would, whereas the whole point of the gospel is that he has!

Even when it looked like your time and energy might turn out to be wasted, what gave you hope?

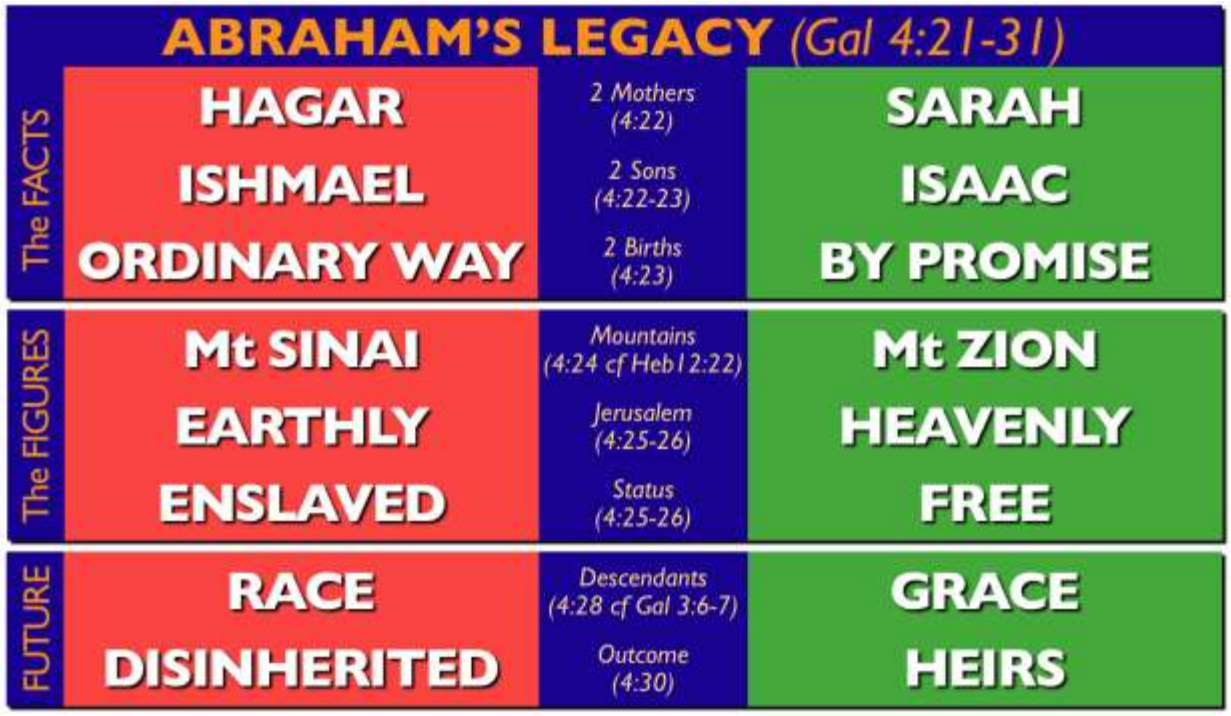
> It's easier to rule your life by the old line-up of options: racial or tribal identity, geographical or territorial loyalty, the demands of money, sex and power. It's much harder to follow the God revealed in Jesus and the Spirit and to learn true freedom, true humanness, in the fellowship of other followers. But, as Paul will go on to say, there is no alternative. God has acted; we have tasted the effect of that action. If we go back now, we are denying not only ourselves and our Christian experience, but God himself.

Note on Ga 4:10

> From very early on the Christian church kept various festivals: Paul himself speaks of the first day of the week as special (1Co 16:2), the day that had been made special forever by Jesus' resurrection. Likewise, Easter quickly became an important annual festival. So it can't be that all observances of days and times was to be banned. In any case, Paul himself says in Ro 14:5-6 that observing days or not observing them is something for individual Christians to decide as a matter of their own personal discipleship. The issue for Paul is also not that the Galatians might start to worship their old pagan deities, but that they want to become Jews. Circumcision was one evidence of that (Ga 2:3,12) and not eating with Gentiles was another (Ga 2:12-14). Here is a third.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Facts and Figures of Galatians 4: why Abraham takes precedence over Moses



https://markmeynell.wordpress.com/2011/02/11/the-facts-and-figures-of-galatians-4-why-abraham-takes-precedence-over-moses/

This one was a sweat, if I'm honest. But last Sunday, we recommenced our Galatians series after a 2 month break (the result of that little inconvenience alternatively known as Christmas and New Year). And the passage felt a bit like a minefield because it includes Paul's notorious figurative use of the 2 families descended from Abraham. I think too many come down far too hard on Paul's OT handling here – for he is completely open about what he is doing and his points made are entirely valid.

It struck me forcibly again that, in his disputes with the Judaizes, the key issue is the relationship between Abraham and Moses. It was only after I started to build a passage summary table (below) that the full shock of Paul's shocking (and even apparently mistaken) inclusion of Mount Sinai in the 'red' Hagar column became apparent. If Moses is a biological descendent of Sarah & Isaac's line (which he was), the God-ordained leader of God's people (which he was), and he received the God-given law on Mt Sinai (which he did), then surely Sinai should be in the green column.

But this is Paul's point – being a child of Abraham depends not on bloodline and being descended by race (and figuratively, by depending on law); it depends on trusting God (having faith) and being dependent on grace (and thus figuratively, depending on promise). As he says earlier in the letter:

> Consider Abraham: "He believed God and it was credited to him as righteousness." Understand, then that those who believe are children of Abraham. (Gal 3:6, quoting Genesis 15:6)

Anyway – here is the talk, such as it is. I was certainly glad to have it over with! Am posting the table because a number of people asked for it after seeing it on Sunday. Hope it's of use to a few.

See also*: Zion / Mount Zion

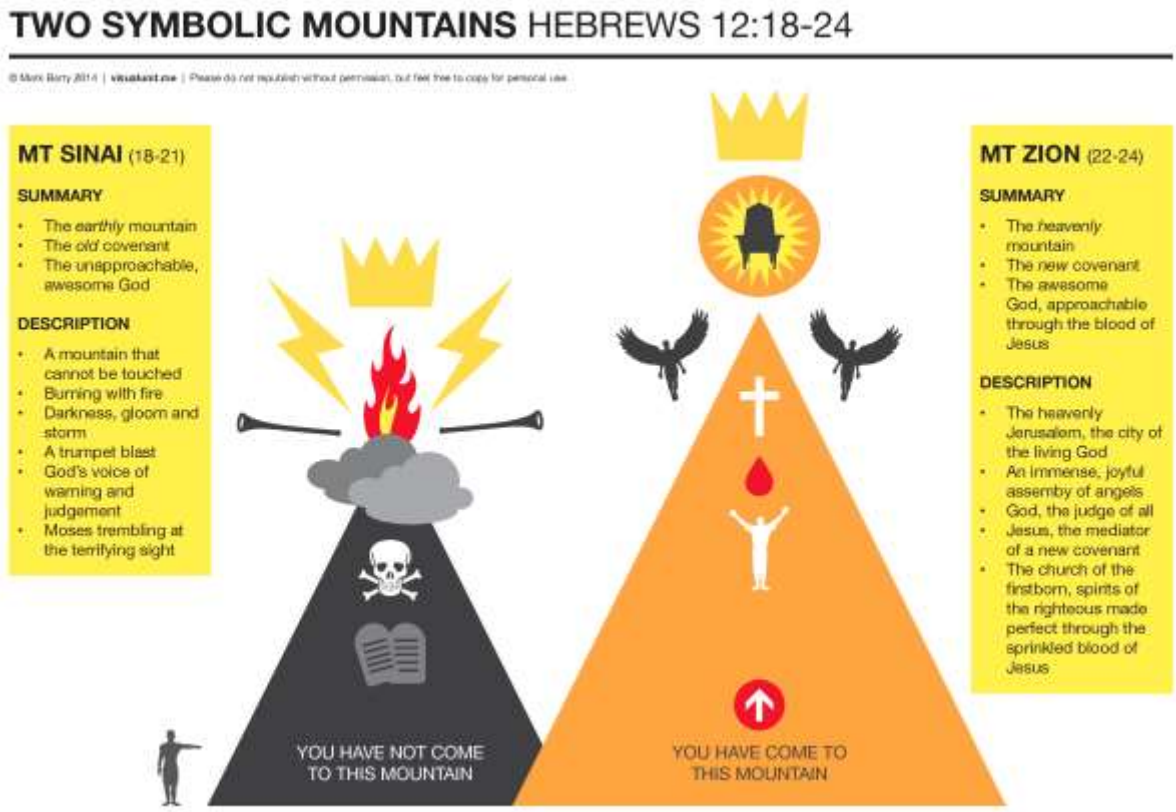
 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

TWO WAYS TO LIVE: LAW & FAITH

GALATIANS 4



© Mark Barry 2014 | visualunit.me | Please do not republish without permission, but feel free to copy for personal use.

* Although Mt Zion is not mentioned explicitly in the text, it is assumed in contrast to Mt Sinai (see Hebrews 12:18-29).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Hebrews also talks about Mt. Sinai vs Mt. Zion

See also*: Zion / Mount Zion

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Freedom in Christ – Ga 4:21-5:6 [NTWGAL] (Chp. 7)

Paul now offers a new picture to make his case about freedom in Christ. Back he goes to one of the least happy episodes in Genesis (Chps 16 and 21): the story of Abraham's wife, Sarah, and Abraham's concubine, Hagar, and their sons. God had promised Abraham a son (Ge 15), but rather than wait Sarah suggested that, according to the customs of the time, he should have a child through her slave girl, Hagar. Abraham agreed, and Hagar gave birth to Ishmael.

Afterward Sarah too became pregnant and gave birth to Isaac. Some time later Sarah became jealous of Ishmael, because of her son Isaac, and dismissed him and his mother. Ishmael became the father of the peoples of Arabia: Isaac became the father of the people of Israel.

It is possible that Paul's opponents had been using the story of Abraham, Hagar and Sarah to reinforce their point that, though the Galatians might have come into God's people through believing the gospel, it looked as if there were now two families, both claiming to be Abraham's children. If that was so, they may have said, then the Jewish Christians must be the true free children, the descendants of Isaac; Gentile Christians, still uncircumcised, must be the children of Ishmael, the outsiders, the foreigners.

Physically, the people promoting circumcision are Jews and are descendants of Isaac. How does Paul turn their argument on its head and say they are really descendants of Ishmael?

Ga 5:1-6

What either-or choice does Paul then put before the Galatian Christians?

How does that either-or choice strike you?

> If you get circumcised, Paul says, you are committing yourself to keeping the whole Law, the entire Jewish Torah. It isn't just a minor ritual requirement which can go comfortably alongside commitment to the Messiah. That is what the "agitators" have implied. But the only point of getting circumcised is if you are then intending to submit, in every other way as well, to the full discipline of the Jewish synagogue. For Paul the choice is absolute.

Note on Ga 5:4

> Being "alienated" or "severed" or "cut off" from the Messiah is not merely a theological category. It is something you can see going on when you sit down and eat. Here are the Messiah's family, this motley crew, eating together: Peter, Paul and Barnabas, mixed up with Gentile Christians in Antioch; the Galatian Christians, mostly ex-pagans, prior to the arrival of the "agitators." This is the Messiah's family. And if you separate yourself from this family, you separate yourself from the Messiah. That's what's going on.

Note on Ga 5:5

> The hope of righteousness? Has Paul not declared in chapters 2,3 that those who believe in the Messiah already have "righteousness," already hear the verdict in their favor, "you are my children, my justified ones"? Yes, but Paul has not forgotten that this remains a future reality, inaugurated indeed in the Messiah but awaiting its full consummation, and that there is still to come a moment when the secrets of all hearts will be revealed, when the verdict issued in the present will be reaffirmed at last. And the proper stance of the Christian in this interim period, this now-and-not-yet time, remains one characterized by three things: the Spirit, faith and patient waiting. (See my book Justification: God's Plan and Paul's Vision, chapter 5, for further comment on Ga 5.)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Spirit and Flesh – Ga 5:7-21 [NTWGAL] (Chp. 8)

For Paul the Galatian controversy isn't a matter of people choosing one religious option or another, finding a way forward on a spiritual journey; it's a matter of truth. If it is true that the Messiah has died and been raised (and if that isn't true Paul knows he would be wasting his time and his life), then this in turn establishes a network of truth that carries its own persuasive power. The Galatians, however, have been persuaded for the moment by some "agitator" not to believe it (Ga 5:7,10). If the Galatians give in on this one thing, circumcision, they won't simply be all right in everything else, with one little blemish. Their mistake will be like leaven in dough, and it will change everything.

Why do you think Paul expressed such extreme views as in verse 12?

> Church people and theologians can become so affable, so friendly, so nice to everybody that we fail to confront head-on false teachings that can do lasting damage to churches and individual Christians. Maybe the only way we can get our message through is by vivid language, multiple imagery, not just keeping people awake but shocking them into seeing what the real issues are.

Why and how (according to Paul) is strife among Christians so destructive?

> As so often in Paul, flesh and spirit are in opposition to each other. This isn't a matter of the material world against the non-material. A wicked disembodied spirit could practice many of the works of the flesh. It is rather a matter of where your true identity lies, where your deepest motivation comes from and where the power that rules your life is found.

Galatians – Beginning (Top)
Galatians – Maps
Galatians – Intro
Galatians – Charts
Galatians – Overviews
Galatians – Getz Videos
Galatians – NT Wright related
Galatians - Commentary
Galatians – Related Topics

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Galatians 5:12 – Paul Tells Judaizers to Castrate Themselves

https://realityisnotoptional.com/2013/11/19/paul-tells-judaizers-to-castrate-themselves/

Excerpt:

There is a very interesting point made in Reading Through Galatians by C.R. Hume. It brings up the interpretation of Paul's statement in Galatians 5:12:

> Gal 5:12 I could wish that those who trouble you would even cut themselves off!

In the context of this quote, Paul is talking about Circumcision. There were individuals, disciples of the 12 apostles, who were teaching that people must be circumcised to be saved. The entire book of Galatians is Paul's response to this. In chapter 6, Paul writes:

> Gal 5:11 And I, brethren, if I still preach circumcision, why do I still suffer persecution? Then the offense of the cross has ceased.

A few things to note: Paul states that he is being persecuted by those who advocate circumcision. Paul indicates that some people claim even Paul is teaching circumcision (a claim Paul is refuting). The one thing that Paul would have to stop in order to stop be persecuted is his insistence against circumcision.

Paul follows it up with this statement about the same individuals "cutting themselves off".

But the word for "cutting off" is apokopto, which literally means to cut off. It is the same word always used in the Bible for chopping off things (like a body part):

> Mar 9:43 If your hand causes you to sin, cut it off…
> Mar 9:45 And if your foot causes you to sin, cut it off…
> Joh 18:10 Then Simon Peter, having a sword, drew it and struck the high priest's servant, and cut off his right ear…
> Joh 18:26 One of the servants of the high priest, a relative of him whose ear Peter cut off, said, "Did I not see you in the garden with Him?"
> Act 27:32 Then the soldiers cut away the ropes of the skiff…

The author of Reading Through Galatians writes:

The verb is not used metaphorically in the NT, and the middle form apokoptomai used here frequently refers to self-castration.

While modern Christians might want to sanitize Paul and say that Paul was referring to people cutting themselves off from Christianity. Paul was using a crude joke: "You know the people who want you to cut off the ends of your penis? I wish they would go all the way and castrate themselves."

[Gal. 5:12] I wish those agitators [18] would go so far as to [19] castrate themselves! [20] [NET]

[18] tn Grk "the ones who are upsetting you." The same verb is used in Ac 21:38 to refer to a person who incited a revolt. Paul could be alluding indirectly to the fact that his opponents are inciting the Galatians to rebel against his teaching with regard to circumcision and the law.

[19] tn Grk "would even."

[20] tn Or "make eunuchs of themselves"; Grk "cut themselves off." This statement is rhetorical hyperbole on Paul's part. It does strongly suggest, however, that Paul's adversaries in this case ("those agitators") were men. Some interpreters (notably Erasmus and the Reformers) have attempted to soften the meaning to a figurative "separate themselves" (meaning the opponents would withdraw from fellowship) but such an understanding dramatically weakens the rhetorical force of Paul's argument. Although it has been argued that such an act of emasculation would be unthinkable for Paul, it must be noted that Paul's statement is one of biting sarcasm, obviously not meant to be taken literally. See further G. Stählin, TDNT 3:853-55.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Galatians 5:19-21 – Vices:

[19] Now the works of the flesh [32] are obvious: [33] sexual immorality, impurity, depravity, [20] idolatry, sorcery, [34] hostilities, [35] strife, [36] jealousy, outbursts of anger, selfish rivalries, dissensions, [37] factions, [21] envying, [38] murder, [39] drunkenness, carousing, [40] and similar things. I am warning you, as I had warned you before: Those who practice such things will not inherit the kingdom of God! [NET Bible]

Similar vices are found in:

Romans 1:29-31 A list of vices similar to those found in 13:13; 1Co 5:10-11; 6:9-10; 2Co 12:20-21; Ga 5:19-21; Ep 4:31; 5:3-5; Col 3:5,8; 1Ti 1:9-10; 2Ti 3:2-5; Rev 21:8; 22:15.

Galatians 5:22-23 – Fruits of the Spirit:

The Fruit of the Spirit

The aspects of the fruit of the Spirit advocated by Paul in Galatians 5:22 – 23 occur not only here but also elsewhere in the Scriptures. Most of the attributes are those by which God himself lives.

Aspect	GK number*	Definition	Attribute of God	Attribute for Christians
love	26	sacrificial, unmerited deeds to help a needy person	Ex 34:6; Jn 3:16; Ro 5:8; 1Jn 4:8,16	Jn 13:34 – 35; Ro 12:9,10; 1Pe 1:22; 1Jn 4:7,11 – 12,21
joy	5915	an inner happiness not dependent on outward circumstances	Ps 104:31; Isa 62:5; Lk 15:7,10	Dt 12:7,12,18; Ps 64:10; Isa 25:9; Php 4:4; 1Pe 1:8
peace	1645	harmony in all relationships	Isa 9:6 – 7; Eze 34:25; Jn 14:27; Heb 13:20	Isa 26:3; Ro 5:1; 12:18; 14:17; Eph 2:14 – 17
patience	3429	putting up with others, even when one is severely tried	Ro 9:22; 1Ti 1:16; 1Pe 3:20; 2Pe 3:9,15	Eph 4:2; Col 1:11; Heb 6:12; Jas 5:7 – 8,10
kindness	5983	doing thoughtful deeds for others	Ro 2:4; 11:22; Eph 2:7; Tit 3:4	1Co 13:4; Eph 4:32; Col 3:12
goodness	20	showing generosity to others	Ne 9:25,35; Ps 31:19; Mk 10:18	Ro 15:14; Eph 5:9; 2Th 1:11 faithfulness	4411	trustworthiness and reliability	Ps 33:4; 1Co 1:9; 10:13; Heb 10:23; 1Jn 1:9	Lk 16:10 – 12; 2Th 1:4; 2Ti 4:7; Tit 2:10
gentleness	4559	meekness and humility	Zec 9:9; Mt 11:29	Isa 66:2; Mt 5:5; Eph 4:2; Col 3:12
self-control	1602	victory over sinful desires		Pr 16:32; Tit 1:8; 2:12; 1Pe 5:8 – 9; 2Pe 1:6

Taken from The Expositor's Bible Commentary - Abridged Edition: Old Testament, by Kenneth L. Barker; John R. Kohlenberger III. Copyright © 1994 by the Zondervan Corporation. Used by permission of Zondervan. *The numbers refer to the Greek dictionary entry numbers in Goodrick & Kohlenberger, The NIV Exhaustive Concordance.

Source: NIV Study Bible Notes 2008

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Galatians 5:19-26 – Flesh Versus Spirit

When "flesh" referred to people in the Old Testament , it meant humans viewed in terms of their finiteness, creatureliness and mortality. The Dead Sea Scrolls thus often apply this idea especially to the moral weakness of humans in themselves, their susceptibility to sin.

The Spirit of God, however, energized people in the Old Testament to speak and do God's works miraculously. In the Old Testament, flesh and Spirit had nothing in common (Ge 6:3). (The view that Paul contrasts the human body with the human spirit, rather than human weakness and God's Spirit, is based on a Platonic misreading of Paul, the sort that led to Gnosticism . Despite its strong condemnation of Gnosticism, the later church was influenced by some of the same Greek philosophical ideas.) Paul thus declares that those who have God's presence living inside them by the Spirit have new moral ability (cf. Eze 36:25-27) and are able to reflect God's own character; for Paul, this was the only way for believers to live out the new life.

Ga 5:19-21. Ancient writers commonly used lists of vices, as here, although Paul is much more forceful (v. 21) than most Gentile writers (who often said one merely needed to avoid excess in most vices). Ancient moralists also could use lists of virtues (5:22-23; Dead Sea Scrolls 1QS 4. 3 ; in the Old Testament, cf. Ps 15). Some writers, like here, laid vice and virtue lists side by side to contrast them. The standard moral image of the "two ways" (the good and bad ways) or two dominions is frequent in both Jewish and non-Jewish texts. "Works" (KJV) recalls the "works of the law " that Paul has challenged throughout the letter (2:16; 3:2,5,10,12), but "of the flesh" (KJV, NASB, NRSV) tells why: they are merely human, without God's empowerment.

Ga 5:22. The Old Testament also uses the metaphor of God's people bearing "fruit" (e.g., Isa 27:6; Ho 10:1; 14:8); Greek sometimes employed the term figuratively. Here Paul contrasts "fruit" with "works" (5:19) because fruit is simply produced by the nature of the tree, and for Paul, believers' nature has been made new in Christ (5:24). Philosophers sometimes contrasted positive and negative emotions (Peripatetics trying to rule the latter, and Stoics rejecting the latter wholesale); some of their positive ones correspond with much of Paul's fruit of the Spirit, although his concern is moral more than emotional (e.g., "peace" may be at least partly relational, Ro 12:18; 14:19; 2Co 13:11).

Ga 5:23. Self-control was one of the virtues most emphasized by philosophers and respected in Roman society. Philosophers often taught that the wise needed no law to regulate them, because their virtue itself was a law. Paul says that people of the Spirit fulfill the moral intent of the law (5:14) by means of the Spirit guiding their lives.

Ga 5:24. Philosophers warned about the dangers of unchecked passions; Stoics (the most popular philosophic school of the era) spoke of all passions (negative emotions) being eradicated in the (ideal) wise person, although generally not claiming to have attained this themselves. Paul speaks here not of controlling or overcoming passions, however, but of a completed death with Christ in principle (2:20; 6:14). Paul nearly always uses verbs in the past tense for this death; one does not die to sin gradually (which the imperfect or present tense would suggest) by works, but one accepts one's completed (the aorist and perfect tenses he uses signify the action is completed) righteousness by faith and learns to live accordingly (5:19-23).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Ga 5:25. Believers "live" or "have life" by the Spirit; they should then "behave" or "walk" (KJV, NASB) the Spirit's way, which will fulfill the moral principles of biblical law (5:16).

Ga 5:26. Paul returns (5:15) to a call to harmony, a common theme of ancient speakers. For Paul, true depth of relationship with God must be expressed in one's relationships with others.

Source: IVP Bible Background Commentary 2nd Ed. [BBC2]

Vice and Virtue Lists of the New Testament [Recommended]
http://bcresources.net/app/2200000-nts-frg12-lit-frm-vv-lists-nt-art-bcrx/

Virtues Leading to Christlikeness
https://bible.org/seriespage/8-virtues-leading-christlikeness

Ben Franklin's 13 Virtues Chart - Knowledge House
http://www.knowledgehouse.info/Ben%20Franklin%27s%2013%20Virtues%20Chart.pdf [PDF]

Virtue and Vice Lists in the Bible (Catholic) http://catholic-resources.org/Bible/Epistles-VirtuesVices.htm

Excerpt:

Christian morality is not only based foundationally on the Ten Commandments (see Exod 20 & Deut 5), but also focuses traditionally on what are called the seven "Capital Sins" or "Deadly Sins," often pairing and contrasting these with seven "Principal Virtues":

Capital/Deadly Sins:	pride/arrogance superbia	avarice/greed avaritia	envy/jealousy invidia	wrath/anger ira	lust/impurity luxuria	gluttony/voracity gula	sloth/laziness acedia
Principal Virtues:	humility/modesty humilitas	generosity/charity liberalitas	kindness/gratitude humanitas	patience/compassion patientia	chastity/purity castitas	temperance/moderation temperantia	diligence/fervor industria

The "capital sins" (or at least the idea of listing seven major vices) are based in part on a passage from the Book of Proverbs of the Hebrew Bible/Old Testament: "There are six things that the LORD hates, seven that are an abomination to him: haughty eyes, a lying tongue, and hands that shed innocent blood, a heart that devises wicked plans, feet that hurry to run to evil, a lying witness who testifies falsely, and one who sows discord in a family" (Prov 6:16-19).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The main virtues discussed in Christian moral theology are often listed differently, not in direct contrast to the seven "deadly sins," but rather as a combination of the three "Theological Virtues" (faith, hope, and love; as discussed by St. Paul in 1 Cor 13) and the four "Cardinal Virtues" (prudence, justice, fortitude, and temperance; as developed by various Church fathers and theologians). These virtues are discussed in the Catechism of the Catholic Church, Articles 1805-1845, while the "capital sins" are listed in Article 1866. Moreover, the Septuagint and Vulgate version of Isaiah 11:1-3 lists seven items that are traditionally called the "gifts of the Spirit": wisdom, understanding, counsel, fortitude, knowledge, piety, and fear of the Lord" (see CCC, Article 1831).

The Hebrew Bible contains very few extended lists of virtues and/or vices, aside from the Ten Commandments and related passages, probably since the ethical discussion of virtues and vices did not become popular until the Hellenistic period (3rd century BCE and later). In contrast, many New Testament writings contain short lists or more extended discussions of vices and/or virtues, habitual actions and ethical attitudes to be avoided and/or practiced, respectively. One of the most familiar short virtue lists is what Paul himself calls the "fruits of the Spirit," which include "love, joy, peace, patience, kindness, generosity, faithfulness, gentleness, and self-control" (Gal 5:22-23; the Vulgate translation also includes goodness, modesty, and chastity, for a total of twelve).

Virtues and Vices (Catholic)

http://www.lastofall.net/2010/10/virtues-and-vices.html

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Vice Vs. Virtue (Catholic)
http://aspenglow24.blogspot.com/2015_02_01_archive.html

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Galatians 5:19-21 – Characteristics of the Sin Nature

http://www.lbible.org/index.php?proc=msg&sf=vw&tid=14

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Nine Fruits of the Holy Spirit (Galatians 5:22-23) and Nine Gifts of the Holy Spirit (1 Corinthians 12:4-11)

Fruit Of The Spirit

https://www.allaboutgod.com/fruit-of-the-spirit.htm

Excerpt:

"Fruit of the Spirit" is a biblical term that sums up the nine visible attributes of a true Christian life. Using the King James Version of Galatians 5:22-23, these attributes are: love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness and temperance. We learn from scripture that these are not individual "fruits" from which we pick and choose. Rather, the fruit of the Spirit is one ninefold "fruit" that characterizes all who truly walk in the Holy Spirit. Collectively, these are the fruits that all Christians should be producing in their new lives with Jesus Christ.

Fruit of the Spirit - The Nine Biblical Attributes
The fruit of the Spirit is a physical manifestation of a Christian's transformed life. In order to mature as believers, we should study and understand the attributes of the ninefold fruit…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Question: "What is the fruit of the Holy Spirit?"

https://www.gotquestions.org/fruit-of-the-Holy-Spirit.html

Answer: Galatians 5:22-23 tells us, “But the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, patience, kindness, goodness, faithfulness, gentleness and self-control.” The fruit of the Holy Spirit is the result of the Holy Spirit’s presence in the life of a Christian. The Bible makes it clear that everyone receives the Holy Spirit the moment he or she believes in Jesus Christ (Romans 8:9; 1 Corinthians 12:13; Ephesians 1:13-14). One of the primary purposes of the Holy Spirit coming into a Christian's life is to change that life. It is the Holy Spirit's job to conform us to the image of Christ, making us more like Him.

The fruit of the Holy Spirit is in direct contrast with the acts of the sinful nature in Galatians 5:19-21, “The acts of the sinful nature are obvious: sexual immorality, impurity and debauchery; idolatry and witchcraft; hatred, discord, jealousy, fits of rage, selfish ambition, dissensions, factions and envy; drunkenness, orgies, and the like. I warn you, as I did before, that those who live like this will not inherit the kingdom of God.” This passage describes all people, to varying degrees, when they do not know Christ and therefore are not under the influence of the Holy Spirit. Our sinful flesh produces certain types of fruit that reflect our nature, and the Holy Spirit produces types of fruit that reflect His nature.

The Christian life is a battle of the sinful flesh against the new nature given by Christ (2 Corinthians 5:17). As fallen human beings, we are still trapped in a body that desires sinful things (Romans 7:14-25). As Christians, we have the Holy Spirit producing His fruit in us and we have the Holy Spirit's power available to conquer the acts of the sinful nature (2 Corinthians 5:17; Philippians 4:13). A Christian will never be completely victorious in always demonstrating the fruits of the Holy Spirit. It is one of the main purposes of the Christian life, though, to progressively allow the Holy Spirit to produce more and more of His fruit in our lives—and to allow the Holy Spirit to conquer the opposing sinful desires. The fruit of the Spirit is what God desires our lives to exhibit and, with the Holy Spirit's help, it is possible!

Recommended Resource: The Wonderful Spirit-Filled Life by Charles Stanley

Galatians – Beginning (Top)

Galatians – Maps

Galatians – Intro

Galatians – Charts

Galatians – Overviews

Galatians – Getz Videos

Galatians – NT Wright related

Galatians - Commentary

Galatians – Related Topics

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Fruit of the Spirit – Ga 5:22-6:5 [NTWGAL] (Chp. 9)

If Paul is famous for his contrast of flesh and spirit, he is also famous for the key words he uses that go with them both. He speaks of the works of the flesh, but the fruit of the Spirit. Compare artificial Christmas trees with ordinary but real fruit trees in an orchard. The Christmas trees look wonderful for a short while, but then they get packed away or thrown out. The fruit trees may not look so spectacular, but if they are properly cared for they will go on bearing fruit year after year. Which is more important? You hardly have to ask.

Often when people emphasize the need for love, patience, gentleness and the like, this goes with an attitude to truth and the gospel which says that we shouldn't stress the things we disagree on. Equally, when people are passionate for the truth of the gospel, they often allow that zeal to betray them into the kind of anger and even malice that are listed under the works of the flesh.

> In specific ways, how can we balance love with our passion for truth?

In what areas of life can you more fully line up with the Spirit?

> The nine qualities in verses 22-23 are not things which, if we try hard enough, we could simply do without help, without the Spirit. The point of all of them is that when the Spirit is at work they will begin to happen; new motivations will appear. When these qualities appear, with all their quiet joy, all their rich contribution to the sort of community God intends and will eventually produce, they come like the fruit in an orchard, not like the baubles on a Christmas tree. They will truly be part of who we will have become. Equally, as Paul shows by putting "self-control" at the end of the list, the way we become this kind of person is through Spirit-led hard moral choices.

In Galatia people saw themselves as one particular type of Christian and looked down on the other types (6:3). If they saw one of the others doing something wrong, they would feel smug; that, they would think, is not the way "we" behave. At the same time, these groups were defined in terms of status, not detailed behavior; "we" (the Jewish Christians among them or the richer Christians or the ones who were also Roman citizens?) were simply different because they were different. Instead of the community Paul had established, where all were equal at the foot of the cross, all equally "in Christ," all equally members of Abraham's family (3:26-29), the work of the agitators had left a legacy of division based on non-theological factors.

> After encouraging humility in verse 6:3, Paul immediately says we can also have reason for pride in verse 6:4. How do these fit together?

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Galatians 5, Laughter and an Austrian-Jewish Comedian (Gal. 5:26; 6:1, 7, 14)

https://rodlampard.com/2013/09/30/galatians-5-laughter-and-an-austrian-jewish-comedian/

One evening while watching [the TV show, Hogan's Heros], I came across this rather cool phrase and pondered the depths of its significance:

Hollywood Palace / Hogan's Heroes
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=w5kIlcrgHS8

My first thoughts about this statement went along these lines: the words remind us to look at where pride may have snuck into our view of ourselves. This introspective challenge includes how well we think we have grasped knowledge of a particular issue or fact. Secondly, the words remind us of how liberating it is to realise, that as individuals we don't have to have all the answers.

We are allowed to lighten up and laugh at ourselves from time to time, because not having all the answers is partly what it means to be vulnerable and therefore be able to participate fully in community (Brene Brown's – Gifts of Imperfection).

Sample of Book (online)
Sample of Book [PDF]
Brene Brown TED Talk – The Power of Vulnerability [Video]
[Alt. Link for Video]
Downloads - Resources
Summary and Application in a Collaborative Law Practice [PDF]
Facebook

For instance: we don't stand alone but before a great cloud of witnesses. Among other examples, we could also say that we "stand on the shoulders of intellectual giants" as we participate, for example, in the cycle of the trivium (classical education).

> Note: The trivium is the lower division of the seven liberal arts and comprises grammar, logic, and rhetoric (input, process, and output)

In my current understanding, true, raw laughter requires honesty. An acknowledgement grounded on some form of reminder or newly discovered knowledge. You know the kind – the elusive "ah-Haaa-lol-I should have known that" moment.

Worth noting here is this: responsible self-care is not selfish care (David Brenner, 1998). For example I would illustrate self-care as talking about your problems with a trusted husband/wife/parent/s and/or caring professional. The very people who will help you pull through by giving you strategies and support in order for you to manage those problems. People who are prepared to joyfully work with you, and who are NOT inwardly energized by your problem/s or negative situation. This is also opposed to dwelling on the worst and ingesting whatever self prescribed numbing agent there is.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

In its Christian form as taught by scripture it is a reasoned goodness: I.e.: telling yourself the truth or seeking the truth, outside what you may feel at the time. This is a form of self-care, with the added benefit that being able to do for yourself will enable you to do for others. This is the actuality of 'kindness, goodness, self-control, gentleness, peace, patience, and love' (Gal.5:22). Which as shown is not only something enacted in how we treat others but also how we treat ourselves.

In a similar way I believe this is what Paul's admonition to the Galatian Church teaches us:

> 'let us not become conceited, provoking one another, envying one another…if anyone is caught in transgression, you who are spiritual should restore him in a spirit of gentleness. Keep watch on yourself, lest you to be tempted…Bear one another's burdens, and so fulfil the law of Christ. For if anyone thinks he or she is something when they are nothing, each one deceives themselves …. Do not be deceived: God is not mocked, for whatever one sows, that will they also reap … Far be it from me to boast except in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ' (Gal. 5:26; 6:1,7,14 ESV)

When we have our broken understanding met with a redeemed correction that is fuelled by joy, kindness and gentleness, one absent of arrogance and indifference, the event bears witness to the fruits of the Spirit. Especially when that proper alignment comes from a person gracious enough to stand with us, even though they may well be more advanced than us. There can be no stronger example here than that of God's revelation that is Jesus the Christ; God-with-us (see also James 1:2-5).

It's a curious thing that one of Banner's most repeated lines in Hogan's Heroes is "jolly jokers". This is something he says jovially (might I even say lovingly?) and often in response to the quips of the sojourners from barracks 2 as he passes by them. In defending his role on the series Banner is quoted to have said:

"Schultz is not a Nazi. I see Schultz as the representative of some kind of goodness in any generation."(Shultz was played by Jewish actor, John Banner – who incidentally fled Austria from the Nazis in 1938).

If you are familiar with the series, I am certain you will capture the humanity, contrasts and warmth within those words, and if so their significance for theological reflection as well.

There is a lot more that could be said, but "I think I can say almost positively that I believe" I got to the gist of it.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Galatians 6:1 (Example of Impact of Singular/Plural versions of "You")

http://www.millpark.org/bible/doctrine-critical/_FAITHFUL_TRANSLATIONS.html

Excerpt:

OK, here is one more from Galatians 6:1. Suppose your translation is worded something like this:

> Brothers and sisters, if someone in your group does something wrong, you who are spiritual should go to that person and gently help make him right again. But be careful, because you might be tempted to sin, too.

Now then, is the first "you" singular or plural? What about the second "you?" Maybe they are both plural or both singular? How do you know? Well the underlying Greek makes it clear that the first "you" is plural and the last "you" is singular, but following standard English grammar rules, deciding if "you" is singular or plural is impossible.

Now here it is in the Jubilee 2000:

> "Brethren, if anyone is overtaken in a fault, ye who are spiritual restore such a one in the spirit of meekness, considering thyself lest thou also be tempted."

In this English form, "ye" is always plural and "thyself" is singular, corresponding to the underlying Greek. Hence, the Jubilee 2000 is not ambiguous. (And BTW, "you" is also used in old English (KJV and others), but it is always plural, never singular!)

Now the significance of this text has to do with church doctrine and spiritual health. You see, the plural "ye" indicates that multiple spiritual persons should be involved in an "overtaken" believer's restoration to bring that person back to good spiritual health, while the singular "thyself" clearly says each individual is personally accountable for their own well-being, avoiding being "sucked into" the same temptation that caused this person to be "overtaken" in the first place.

In essence, believers should not "go-it-alone" if possible in helping the "overtaken" person, but also cannot blame the other spiritual persons if they get "sucked in" but must take care of their own spiritual health, seeing that they are supposed to be mature believers in Christ.

See also*: Thou, Thee, Thy, Thine and Ye; and the Advantage of King James English

FYI: e.g., the NET Bible translates Gal. 6:1 as follows:

Brothers and sisters, if a person is discovered in some sin, you who are spiritual restore such a person in a spirit of gentleness. Pay close attention to yourselves, so that you are not tempted too.

Galations 6:2 Carry One Another – Lesson 7 by Marty Berglund, FAC

Scripture: Romans 15:1, Galatians 6:2

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Galatians 6:14

Sermon: Romans 5:1-5, Jim Thompson – The Peace of Justification

Excerpts:

The Roman Empire ruled the known world during the first century, and the Empire had its own language. Caesar called himself "lord" and "savior." Others called Caesar "son of God" and "king of kings." When Caesar won a battle, the announcement of his victory was called "gospel." For a Roman citizen, loyalty and allegiance to Caesar and his empire was called pistis, which is the Greek word the New Testament translates as "faith." And the banner over all of this is the Latin phrase Pax Romana, which means The Roman Peace. Rome's peace was peace by means of force and violence. However, the Hebrew view of peace was very different.

The Hebrew idea of shalom was the fabric of Eden. It's what Adam and Eve inhaled and exhaled as they walked with God in the garden. Shalom is about harmony, oneness, welfare, and potentiality–all under God's kind rule. The Roman view of peace needs war and violence, but the Hebrew view of peace is something that God hardwired into creation.However, in our experience, the peace that we were designed for is often so elusive. Relational peace seems just out of reach. Political peace is just a dream. Financial peace is evasive. Spiritual peace is only intermittent. So what do we do? How do we taste and experience the Eden–like peace God…

Boasting is the key that (un)locks the experience of true peace.

Meaning, if we do the wrong kind of boasting, we won't rightly understand and sense the peace that is available in Jesus. But, if we do the right kind of boasting - rejoicing in, delighting in, having humble confidence in the gospel–this right kind of boasting unlocks the door to rich and sweet experiences of God's peace in your life. And all of these things are ultimately true in and because of the gospel.

Paul writes in Galatians 6:14,

> "God forbid that I should boast except in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ." [NKJV]

Meaning, the gospel is the supreme focal point of all Christian rejoicing and boasting, and boasting in anything else must serve our boasting in Jesus.

Similarly, in Colossians 1, Paul writes that Jesus has "made peace through the blood of his cross."

Jesus took Rome's peace through violence and crucifixion' and turned it upside down. He was enthroned as Lord and Savior and King of kings, not by means of force and oppression, but by taking all of our rebellion upon himself. He has won the battle over sin and death, and the announcement of his victory is called gospel. Now, to be a citizen of his kingdom, we owe him all of our loyalty and allegiance–all of our faith. And when we understand happened in the cross and resurrection, peace is ours. And when we boast supremely in Jesus, our experience of God's peace is tangible and transformative in our lives.

See also: Gospel of Jesus the Messiah (Christ)

Justification

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Practical Words In Closing – Ga 6:6-18 [NTWGAL] (Chp. 10)

It is difficult to ask people to give money, even for the best of causes. In this passage Paul manages to write about money without ever mentioning the word. Clearly the subject was as delicate in his world as it is in ours. Although the first part of this passage has wider applications, its central point is the quite specific one of financing the ministry and life of the church.

General phrases like "do good to everybody" (v. 10) were in regular use in Paul's world, referring to financial contributions in civic and community life. How do Paul's images of reaping and sowing fit into this context?

In verse 9 Paul warns against losing enthusiasm and becoming weary of right living. What has caused you to become weary and caused your enthusiasm to lag?

How have you been encouraged again?

> The Christian view of money is that it is a responsibility given by God. It is never purely for one's own enjoyment; it is held in trust. If church members sow to the Spirit by giving solid practical support to the church's ministry, especially in teaching and preaching, they themselves will in due course bring in a harvest. If, however, they sow to the flesh, then all they will have to show for it will be the corruption and decay to which everything in the world is ultimately subject. The ministry of the word builds up people and communities. The life they then have will gloriously outlast death itself.

You know a letter is from a real, living, breathing human being when your correspondent takes the trouble not only to sign his or her name but also to add a few final sentences in personal handwriting. While Paul had been dictating this letter to a scribe, he now takes up his pen to write more than just his name. Read Ga 6:11-18.

> As Paul concludes his letter to the Galatian church, what is uppermost in his mind?

Paul writes that if it's bodily marks you want, it is the signs of the cross, not the circumciser's knife, that matter. The signs of the cross are the marks of persecution, the "wounds of Jesus" (v. 17).

> How have you been wounded for Christ, whether physically, emotionally, financially or in some other way?

The final lines of the letter are a benediction not only on the Galatians but on all of us who read these words. It is all of grace from start to finish: the grace of our Lord Jesus, the Messiah. The gospel does not come from human sources, and membership in the Messiah's people is not defined by human categories. Grace reaches out and embraces the whole world. The sign of that embrace is the presence and joy of the Spirit.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Wounds of Jesus

https://www.wacriswell.com/sermons/1989/the-wounds-of-jesus/ [Sermon, Audio, Notes] (1989)

https://www.wacriswell.com/sermons/1972/the-wounds-of-jesus-2/ [Sermon, Audio, Notes] (1966)

https://www.wacriswell.com/sermons/1966/the-wounds-of-jesus-3/ [Sermon, Audio, Notes] (1972)

http://newlifesantafe.org/Seven%20Wounds.pdf [PDF]

The Scarlet Thread – Through the Bible (W.A. Criswell)

http://storage.cloversites.com/firstchurchofchrist1/documents/The%20Scarlet%20Thread.pdf [PDF]

http://storage.cloversites.com/firstchurchofchrist1/documents/The%20Scarlet%20Thread.pdf [PDF]

https://www.wacriswell.com/sermons/1961/the-scarlet-thread-through-the-bible-part-2/ [Sermon, Audio, Transcript]

https://www.scribd.com/document/296447994/The-Scarlet-Thread-Through-the-Bible

https://www.scribd.com/document/270228389/The-Scarlet-Thread-Through-the-Bible

https://www.wacriswell.com/sermons/1995/the-scarlet-thread-through-the-bible/ [Sermon, Audio, Transcript]

The Scarlet Thread Through the Bible is, first and foremost, a sermon. The original sermon skips over some parts of the biblical narrative, leading us to scratch our heads at times. He passes over the story of Abraham being called to sacrifice Isaac (where Isaac asks his father, "Where is the lamb?") yet devotes space to the intertestamental period. It's also puzzling that Criswell devotes more space to Revelation than he does to the life of Jesus. In the fuller versions of The Scarlet Thread delivered by Criswell in later years (where the clock wasn't inching toward midnight!), the biblical narrative is fleshed out in more detail. But it's the original sermon that started Criswell on this journey of preaching the Bible as one story. And it's the original that we are pleased to present to another generation of Christians who are rediscovering the scarlet thread of atonement that takes us from Genesis to Revelation.

Alt. Source: https://www.gospelproject.com/criswell/ (downloadable as PDF or ePUB; registration may be required)

http://www.lifeway.com/Product/the-scarlet-thread-through-the-bible-P005695958

Summary: https://www.scribd.com/document/270228389/The-Scarlet-Thread-Through-the-Bible [PDF]

Question: "What is the significance of a scarlet thread?"

https://www.gotquestions.org/scarlet-thread.html

Answer: The Bible mentions a scarlet thread in several different contexts, from an unusual childbirth to the high priestly garments to the conquest of Canaan.

One reference to the scarlet thread in the Bible occurs during the birth of the twin sons of Judah and Tamar (Genesis 38:27–30). As Tamar was giving birth, the arm of one twin, Zerah, reached out of the birth canal, and immediately the midwife tied a scarlet thread to the baby's wrist to designate Zerah as the firstborn. As it turned out, however, Zerah was not the firstborn; the arm was withdrawn into the womb, and the other twin, Perez, was born first.

In the case of Perez and Zerah, the scarlet thread was to indicate who was to have the designation and privileges of the firstborn. To all appearances, Zerah seemed to be the one, but God had different plans, and Perez was the firstborn. In God's providence, it was through Perez that the line of the Lord Jesus Christ proceeded (Matthew 1:3).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Bible also mentions scarlet thread or scarlet yarn as part of the tabernacle's curtains (Exodus 26:1) and the high priest's ephod (Exodus 28:6), along with threads of gold, blue, and purple. Scripture does not comment on the significance of those colors in the curtains or ephod, but some commentators surmise that the gold, blue, and purple foreshadow Christ's glory, heavenly origin, and kingly position, while the scarlet thread represents Christ's atoning work on the cross through the shedding of His blood.

Another significant mention of scarlet thread is in Joshua 2. Two spies had been sent to Jericho in advance of the Israelites' taking of that city. The spies were hidden in Jericho by Rahab the harlot, who expressed her faith in Israel's God and protected the spies (see Hebrews 11:31). Rahab allowed the Hebrew spies to escape from Jericho by letting them down through her window by means of a rope made of scarlet thread. As they departed, the spies told Rahab, "Tie this cord of scarlet thread in the window" (Joshua 2:18), with the promise that she and her household would be kept safe in the coming invasion. By faith, Rahab obeyed: "And she tied the scarlet cord in the window" (verse 21).

Later, when the walls of Jericho fell down and the Israelites took the city, Joshua commanded that Rahab and her family be spared (Joshua 6:22–23). Marking her home was, of course, the "cord of scarlet thread." It's easy to dismiss the color of Rahab's rope as mere coincidence, but the scarlet color is significant. The rope in her window was a sign of her faith and led to her salvation, as she was not destroyed with the rest of Jericho. The scarlet rope—the color of blood—worked for Rahab much as the blood of the Passover lamb had worked during the exodus: every home marked with blood was spared death that night (Exodus 12:13). God's mercy and forgiveness of Rahab the harlot was signified by a rope of scarlet thread, which becomes a symbol of the blood of Christ.

Theologians and Bible students sometimes refer to "the scarlet thread running through the Bible." By this they mean that the Bible's theme is Jesus Christ and His sacrifice for the redemption of mankind. The blood of Christ runs throughout the entire Bible, symbolically. It is seen in the animals killed in Eden to provide garments for Adam and Eve, the ram that took Isaac's place on the altar of Moriah, the Passover lamb, the institution of the sacrificial system, the scarlet rope of Rahab, and the thousands of years of sacrifices performed at the tabernacle and temple. The scarlet thread runs all the way up to John the Baptist's declaration, "Look, the Lamb of God, who takes away the sin of the world!" (John 1:29) and to the foot of the cross, where Jesus finally says, "It is finished" (John 19:30).

"Without the shedding of blood there is no forgiveness" (Hebrews 9:22), and that's why the symbolism of the scarlet thread in the Bible is significant. The scarlet thread is the theme of atonement found throughout the pages of Scripture.

The Scarlet Thread of Redemption

http://amitrulyfollowingjesus.org/wp-content/uploads/2010/08/B-The-Scarlet-Thread-of-Redemption-1st-edition.pdf
[PDF]

http://salvationlinks.com/discussions/the-scarlet-thread-through-the-bible/

https://www.lightsource.com/ministry/love-worth-finding/articles/the-scarlet-thread-through-the-bible-12838.html

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Galatian Letter and N.T. Wright (2008)

http://christianmonthlystandard.com/index.php/galatian-letter-and-nt-wright/

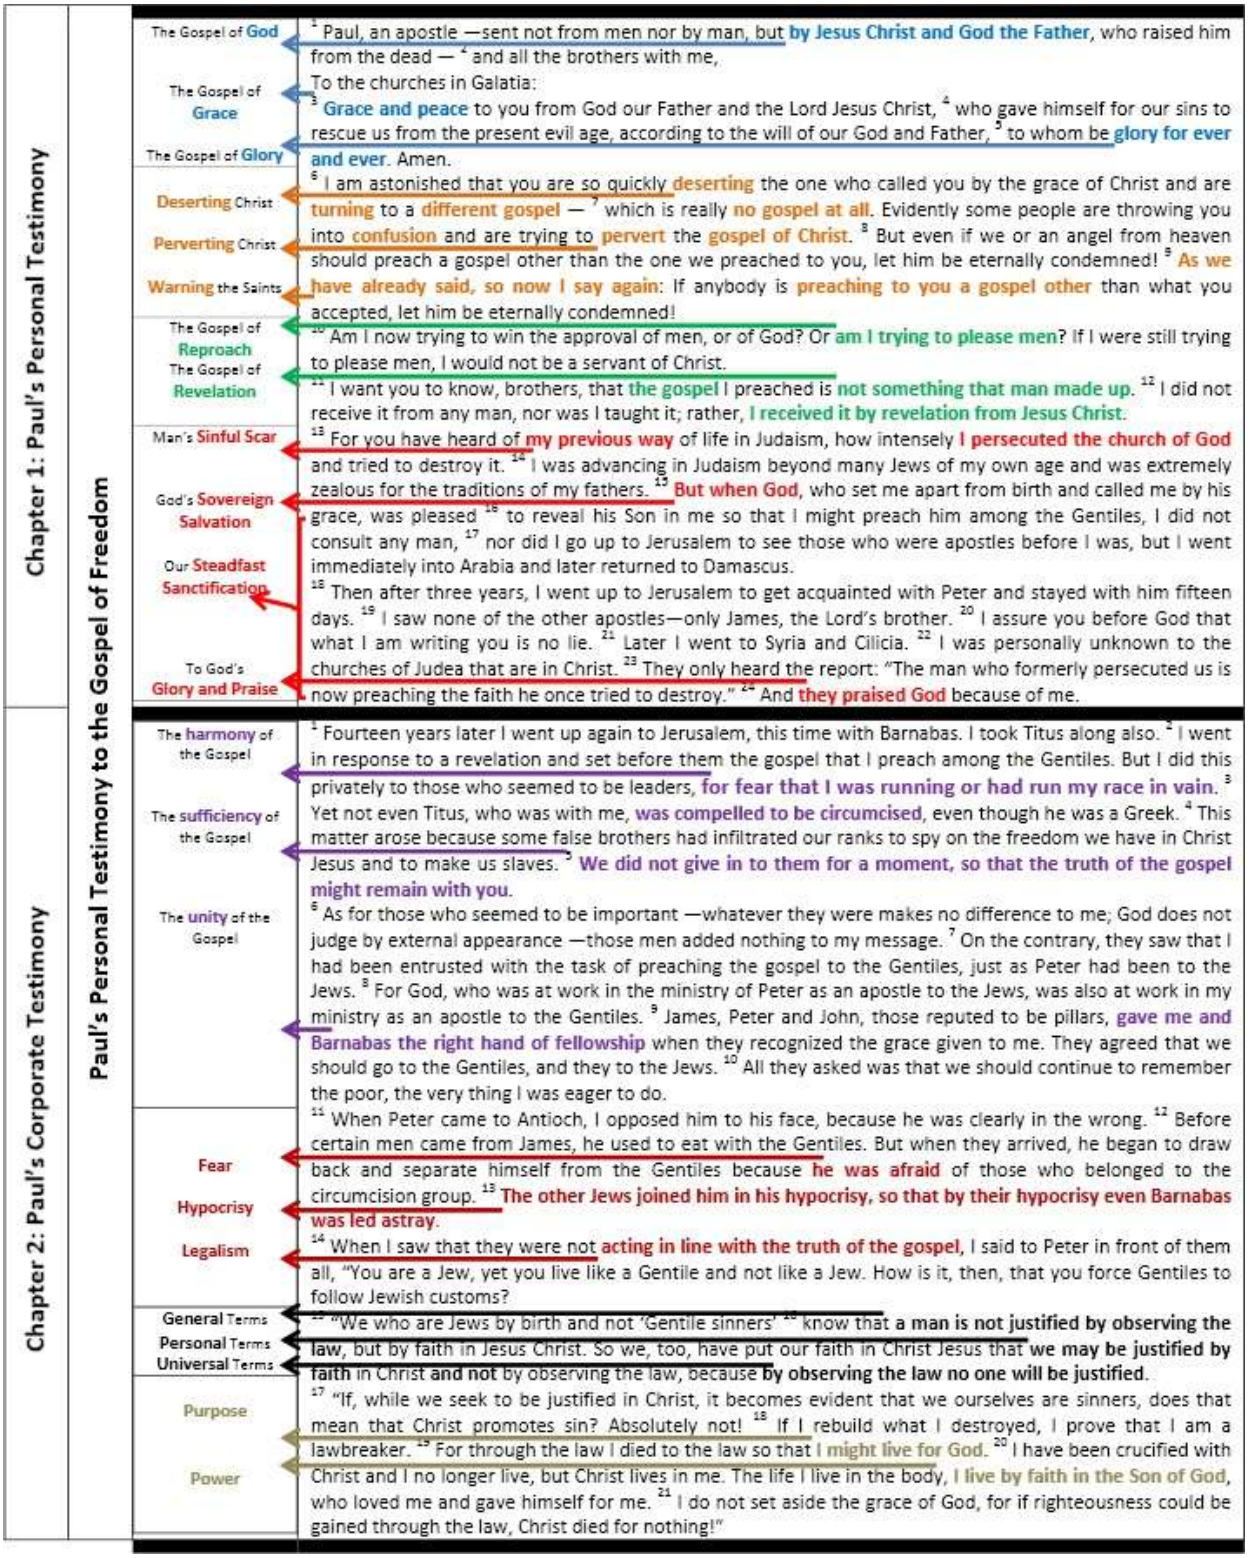
Excerpt:

…I have gone through the study Bibles and commentaries that I own and they all pretty much say the same thing, which is somewhat disappointing. Perhaps the reformed theological view on Galatians is the majority view, which can loosely be summarized as Paul fighting legalism because Judaizers are distorting the gospel to include necessity of works of the law.

N.T. Wright has another take on the theme of Galatians in his work, The Letter to the Galatians: Exegesis and Theology. While it is impossible to summarize his 22 page work, I would like to reproduce a few paragraphs.

Although this account (Gal. 2:15-21) is not itself about soteriology per se, it carries, of course, huge soteriological implications. If one has already died and risen with the Messiah, and if one has been grasped by the grace of God and enabled to come to faith and (by implication, brought into daylight in) baptism (3:26-28), then one is marked out thereby precisely as a member of the renewed, eschatological community of Israel, one for whom the act of God in the Messiah has dealt finally with one's sinful past, one who is assured of God's salvation on the Last Day. But the point of justification by faith, in this context, is not to stress this soteriological aspect, but to insist that all those who share this Christian faith are members of the same single family of God in Christ and therefore belong at the same table. This is the definite, positive, and of course deeply polemical thrust of the first-ever exposition of the Christian doctrine of justification by faith.

I have already provided a summary account of Galatians 3 and 4, seen as a narrative, or part of a larger implicit narrative, about the promises of God to Abraham and the way in which these are fulfilled in Jesus the Messiah. It remains here simply to note the way in which justification emerges within this structure of thought, which itself is grounded in Paul's sense of the community he is addressing.



His emphasis throughout is that the true people whom God promised to Abraham are defined by their faith. He is not here concerned with how one enters the family, but with how, once one has entered, the family is then defined, assured of its status as God's people.The arguments in chapter 3 about the curse of the law, and how it is exhausted in the death of Jesus, and about the apparent tension between the promise and the law, are not primarily abstract statements about the atonement on the one hand and about the existential or spiritual superiority or preferability of trusting promises rather than keeping moral codes on the other. No doubt they contribute to discussions at these more abstract levels, but such matters were not what Paul was basically talking about. And in the great climactic passage at the end of chapter 3 and the start of chapter 4, the question of justification is set within the narrative about slavery and sonship – that is, the exodus story, in which the key interlocking categories for the present status of Christians are incorporation into Christ and the indwelling of the Spirit. These are not "about" something other than justification. Rather, justification by faith itself, in the letter to Galatia, is all about the definition of the community of the people of the true God.

I am exploring this alternative idea for the theme of Galatians. It certainly does reconcile some of the problems that the typical reformed theological view cannot avoid and have troubled me for quite some time (I don't have time or space now to present those problems). It certainly offers the best bridge of chapters 1-2 to chapters 3-4 that I have read. While Wright may not be right, we always need to be open-minded to other ideas and not so dogmatic that we will not listen to alternatives.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Galatians Outline Notes

https://markpenrith.wordpress.com/tag/galatians/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

[1] You foolish Galatians! Who has bewitched you? Before your very eyes Jesus Christ was clearly portrayed as crucified. [2] I would like to learn just one thing from you: Did you receive the Spirit by observing the law, or by believing what you heard? [3] Are you so foolish? After beginning with the Spirit, are you now trying to attain your goal by human effort? [4] Have you suffered so much for nothing—if it really was for nothing? [5] Does God give you his Spirit and work miracles among you because you observe the law, or because you believe what you heard?
[6] Consider Abraham "He believed God, and it was credited to him as righteousness." [7] Understand, then, that those who believe are children of Abraham. [8] The Scripture foresaw that God would justify the Gentiles by faith, and announced the gospel in advance to Abraham: "All nations will be blessed through you." [9] So those who have faith are blessed along with Abraham, the man of faith.
[10] All who rely on observing the law are under a curse, for it is written: "Cursed is everyone who does not continue to do everything written in the Book of the Law." [11] Clearly no one is justified before God by the law, because, "The righteous will live by faith." [12] The law is not based on faith; on the contrary, "The man who does these things will live by them." [13] Christ redeemed us from the curse of the law by becoming a curse for us, for it is written: "Cursed is everyone who is hung on a tree." [14] He redeemed us in order that the blessing given to Abraham might come to the Gentiles through Christ Jesus, so that by faith we might receive the promise of the Spirit.
[15] Brothers, let me take an example from everyday life. Just as no one can set aside or add to a human covenant that has been duly established, so it is in this case. [16] The promises were spoken to Abraham and to his seed. The Scripture does not say "and to seeds," meaning many people, but "and to your seed," meaning one person, who is Christ. [17] What I mean is this: The law, introduced 430 years later, does not set aside the covenant previously established by God and thus do away with the promise. [18] For if the inheritance depends on the law, then it no longer depends on a promise; but God in his grace gave it to Abraham through a promise.
[19] What, then, was the purpose of the law? It was added because of transgressions until the Seed to whom the promise referred had come. The law was put into effect through angels by a mediator. [20] A mediator, however, does not represent just one party; but God is one.
[21] Is the law, therefore, opposed to the promises of God? Absolutely not! For if a law had been given that could impart life, then righteousness would certainly have come by the law. [22] But the Scripture declares that the whole world is a prisoner of sin, so that what was promised, being given through faith in Jesus Christ, might be given to those who believe.
[23] Before this faith came, we were held prisoners by the law, locked up until faith should be revealed. [24] So the law was put in charge to lead us to Christ that we might be justified by faith. [25] Now that faith has come, we are no longer under the supervision of the law.
[26] You are all sons of God through faith in Christ Jesus, [27] for all of you who were baptized into Christ have clothed yourselves with Christ. [28] There is neither Jew nor Greek, slave nor free, male nor female, for you are all one in Christ Jesus. [29] If you belong to Christ, then you are Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise.

[1] What I am saying is that as long as the heir is a child, he is no different from a slave, although he owns the whole estate. [2] He is subject to guardians and trustees until the time set by his father. [3] So also, when we were children, we were in slavery under the basic principles of the world. [4] But when the time had fully come, God sent his Son, born of a woman, born under law, [5] to redeem those under law, that we might receive the full rights of sons. [6] Because you are sons, God sent the Spirit of his Son into our hearts, the Spirit who calls out, "Abba, Father." [7] So you are no longer a slave, but a son; and since you are a son, God has made you also an heir.
[8] Formerly, when you did not know God, you were slaves to those who by nature are not gods. [9] But now that you know God—or rather are known by God —how is it that you are turning back to those weak and miserable principles? Do you wish to be enslaved by them all over again? [10] You are observing special days and months and seasons and years! [11] I fear for you, that somehow I have wasted my efforts on you.
[12] I plead with you, brothers, become like me, for I became like you. You have done me no wrong. [13] As you know, it was because of an illness that I first preached the gospel to you. [14] Even though my illness was a trial to you, you did not treat me with contempt or scorn. Instead, you welcomed me as if I were an angel of God, as if I were Christ Jesus himself. [15] What has happened to all your joy? I can testify that, if you could have done so, you would have torn out your eyes and given them to me. [16] Have I now become your enemy by telling you the truth?
[17] Those people are zealous to win you over, but for no good. What they want is to alienate you from us, so that you may be zealous for them. [18] It is fine to be zealous, provided the purpose is good, and to be so always and not just when I am with you. [19] My dear children, for whom I am again in the pains of childbirth until Christ is formed in you, [20] how I wish I could be with you now and change my tone, because I am perplexed about you!
[21] Tell me, you who want to be under the law, are you not aware of what the law says? [22] For it is written that Abraham had two sons, one by the slave woman and the other by the free woman. [23] His son by the slave woman was born in the ordinary way; but his son by the free woman was born as the result of a promise.
[24] These things may be taken figuratively, for the women represent two covenants. One covenant is from Mount Sinai and bears children who are to be slaves: This is Hagar. [25] Now Hagar stands for Mount Sinai in Arabia and corresponds to the present city of Jerusalem, because she is in slavery with her children. [26] But the Jerusalem that is above is free, and she is our mother. [27] For it is written:
"Be glad, O barren woman, who bears no children;
break forth and cry aloud,
you who have no labor pains;
because more are the children of the desolate woman than of her who has a husband."
[28] Now you, brothers, like Isaac, are children of promise. [29] At that time the son born in the ordinary way persecuted the son born by the power of the Spirit. It is the same now. [30] But what does the Scripture say? "Get rid of the slave woman and her son, for the slave woman's son will never share in the inheritance with the free woman's son." [31] Therefore, brothers, we are not children of the slave woman, but of the free woman.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Galatians Study Videos by Gene Getz from his Life Applications Study Bible

http://www2.bhpublishinggroup.com/QR/GetzBible/1282/ (Galatians#1 – God's Free Gift)

http://www2.bhpublishinggroup.com/QR/GetzBible/1283/ (Galatians#2 – Messages from God)

http://www2.bhpublishinggroup.com/QR/GetzBible/1284/ (Galatians#3 – Doctrinal Compromise)

http://www2.bhpublishinggroup.com/QR/GetzBible/1285/ (Galatians#4 – The Abrahamic Covenant)

http://www2.bhpublishinggroup.com/QR/GetzBible/1286/ (Galatians#5 – Justification by Faith)

http://www2.bhpublishinggroup.com/QR/GetzBible/1287/ (Galatians#6 – Unity in Christ)

http://www2.bhpublishinggroup.com/QR/GetzBible/1288/ (Galatians#7 – A Pastoral Passion)

http://www2.bhpublishinggroup.com/QR/GetzBible/1289/ (Galatians#8 – Bible Interpretation)

http://www2.bhpublishinggroup.com/QR/GetzBible/1290/ (Galatians#9 – Freedom to Serve) http://www2.bhpublishinggroup.com/QR/GetzBible/1291/ (Galatians#10 – Life in the Spirit)

http://www2.bhpublishinggroup.com/QR/GetzBible/1292/ (Galatians#11 – The Process of Restoration)

http://www2.bhpublishinggroup.com/QR/GetzBible/1293/ (Galatians#12 – Pure Motives in Ministry)

Bio: http://www2.bhpublishinggroup.com/qr/GetzBible/author.asp

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Regarding Dr. Gene Getz and the above videos: [Recommended]
Gene now serves as President of the Center for Church Renewal and has completed a 7-year Bible project using the Holman Christian Standard Bible. The "Life Essentials Study Bible" is the first Multi-Media Study Bible which contains 1,500 principles from Genesis to Revelation. Using QR codes associated with each biblical principle, the reader can access over 250 hours of video teaching on these principles by Dr. Getz. Gene also airs a 2-minute daily feature on numerous radio stations called "Bible Principles" which can also be accessed by going to www.bibleprinciples.org where you'll also discover information about Gene's Life Essentials Study Bible.

See https://bibleprinciples.org/ for access to the same teaching videos for Galatians (as above) and also for all the other books of the bible. (Video Search)

Here is the corresponding list of videos for Galatians from the site:

Galatians; Principle #1; Gal. 1:1-9; p. 1613 (Note: also a good introduction)
God's Free Gift: When presenting the gospel message, we must make sure we clearly explain that salvation is God's free gift.
Video

Galatians; Principle #2; Gal. 1:10-2:10; p. 1614
Messages from God: If we think God has spoken to us directly, we must always verify our experiences by consulting the Scriptures and other mature Christian leaders.
Video

Galatians; Principle #3; Gal. 2:11-16; p. 1615
Doctrinal Compromise: Even prominent and sincere Christian leaders must be on guard against compromising the message of salvation because of social pressure.
Video

Galatians; Principle #4; Gal. 2:17-3:9; p. 1615
The Abrahamic Covenant: To communicate the gospel comprehensively, we must understand God's unconditional promise to Abraham.
Video

Galatians; Principle #5; Gal. 3:10-26; p. 1616
Justification by Faith: When explaining that salvation is a free gift, we must also clarify that this gift can only be received by faith in Jesus Christ
Video

Galatians; Principle #6; Gal. 3:27-4:7; p. 1617
Unity in Christ: Regardless of our ethnic background, cultural upbringing, or gender, when we are saved we are to function as one unified family in Christ.
Video

Galatians; Principle #7; Gal. 4:8-20; p. 1618
A Pastoral Passion: To minister to people effectively, we must develop pastoral hearts.
Video

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Galatians; Principle #8; Gal. 5:21-31; p. 1619
Bible Interpretation: We are free to illustrate biblical truths from scriptural incidents that do not teach these truths directly, but we should do so cautiously and sparingly.
Video

Galatians; Principle #9; Gal. 5:1-15; p. 1619
Freedom to Serve: To be set free from the bondage of sin, we must become servants of God and one another.
Video

Galatians; Principle #10; Gal. 5:16-26; p. 1620
Life in the Spirit: To experience true freedom in our relationships with one another, we must reflect the fruit of the Spirit.
Video

Galatians; Principle #11; Gal. 6:1-10; p. 1621
The Process of Restoration: As we live by the Spirit, we are to help our fellow Christians who are in bondage to works of the flesh to experience true freedom in Christ.
Video

Galatians; Principle #12; Gal. 6:11-18; p. 1621
Pure Motives in Ministry: To counter false teaching in the church, we must keep our motives pure.
Video

Galatians – Beginning (Top)
Galatians – Maps
Galatians – Intro
Galatians – Charts
Galatians – Overviews
Galatians – Getz Videos
Galatians – NT Wright related
Galatians - Commentary
Galatians – Related Topics

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Galatians: Introduction to Galatians [Recommended] (2015)
https://www.fulcrum-anglican.org.uk/new-testament/galatians-introduction-to-galatians/

Introducing the Letter to the Galatians – Resources – to major theologian scholars (Wright, Dunn, Moo, Schreiner, Powell) that have current published commentaries on Galatians. (Includes videos/audio by these corresponding theologians.)

Paul and His Letter to the Galatians (N.T. Wright Galatians study welcome video [1 min.])
Galatians – An Invitation (2015)
http://ntwrightonline.org/galatians/
"Being Transformed by the Renewing of the Mind"

Tom Wright: Galatians Introduction (2011 St Andrews) (Galatians Overview in < 10 min.!)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=IZUDuBu1xvY [Video]

NT Wright: The Letter to the Galatians: Exegesis and Theology (2000) http://ntwrightpage.com/2016/07/12/the-letter-to-the-galatians-exegesis-and-theology/

(includes comments re: pistis Christou)

See:* Paul Receives the Gospel Resurrection Creed within Five Years of the Crucifixion

NT Wright on Justification in Galatians 2 (2009)
https://paulvanderklay.me/2009/05/01/nt-wright-on-justification-in-galatians-2/
(Text from Wright's book, Justification, pages 116-117)

N. T. Wright on Justification and Sanctification (incl. Galatians 2:11 – 21) (2011)
(References Galatians 2:11-21 and Ephesians 2:1-10 and Romans 3)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=ii5YHwrkEpQ [Video] (5 min.)
Renowned Author and speaker N.T. Wright sits down with J.D. Walt, Maxie Dunnam and interviewer Ben Ben Witherington III to talk about his view on justification and salvation. In part two of this four part series, Wright explains how many people have misread Paul's letters in light of justification and salvation.

Tom Wright & James Dunn The New Perspective on Paul (2009)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=cqZYbcvANhM [Video]
In this video first Tom Wright and then James Dunn explain the broader debates about "works of the law" and "The New Perspective on Paul" which are important in discussions about what Paul is saying in Galatians

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Tom Wright: The Shape of Paul's Theology (2011)

Paul and the Faithfulness of God
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=jN_LSIF9ySk [Video]
For the bigger picture of Paul's theology from Tom Wright

N. T. Wright on Paul and the Faithfulness of God: A Conversation with Richard B. Hays – Justification and Spirit in Galatians 2 and Romans 8 with Richard B. Hays (2014)

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=JM8DGAnUq2k [Recommended]
Includes discussion of Galatians 2, Romans 8; Gal. 3:22, Rom. 3:22; and also discuss pistis Christou

Discussion Guide (for above video):

http://www.augsburgfortress.org/media/downloads/NTWright_VideoDiscussionGuide_Hays.pdf [PDF]

Galatians 2: 11-21

1. Richard Hays outlines four important aspects of his interpretation of Paul's understanding of justification as found in Galatians 2:11-21.

a) In Hays's first point, what is Paul's understanding of the "truth of the Gospel"? In Paul's eyes how has Peter's table fellowship practice denied that truth? For Paul, how is the practice of table fellowship central to questions of justification?
b) Paul, says Hays, does not reject his Jewish identity but rather relies on Torah to say that justification comes, not from the law, but from God's faithfulness. How does Hays then tie participation in the new life of Christ and Jesus' act of loving and giving of himself to the faithfulness of God?
c) Summarize Hays's understanding of Paul's theology of justification as outlined in Galatians 2:11-21.
d) Which of N. T. Wright's responses to the points made by Dr. Hays were most helpful to you? Why?
e) Which points made by Dr. Hays or Dr. Wright do you want to think about or inquire into further?

2. N. T. Wright says that while justification and being in Christ are joined at the hip for Paul, justification and participation are not synonymous. Some scholars have argued that justification and participation are in opposition to each other, but Hays and Wright agree that the fusion of the two is a better interpretation. What are your thoughts? Why is this argument important in interpreting Paul's theology?

3. How, in your understanding, are the faithfulness of God, the faithfulness of Christ, and human faith/faithfulness intimately connected in Paul's theology as outlined in these Galatians verses? In one or two sentences, summarize your understanding of Paul's theology of justification.

Romans 8

1. In this conversation about Romans 8 you see leading Paul scholars working through questions that they are still exploring and questions about which they wonder. What do you take away from observing this animated and candid exchange? What further questions does the conversation raise for you?

2. N. T. Wright and Richard Hays each identify why Paul's writings "light them up" and why they have given so much of their scholarly careers to thinking and writing about Paul. What is it about Paul and his letters that raises interest and passion in you?

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

N.T. Wright: Gospel and Theology In Galatians (1994)
http://ntwrightpage.com/files/2016/05/Wright_Gospel_Theology_Galatians.pdf [PDF]

See also: Gospel of Jesus the Messiah (Christ)

Galatians – Beginning (Top)

Galatians – Maps

Galatians – Intro

Galatians – Charts

Galatians – Overviews

Galatians – Getz Videos

Galatians – NT Wright related

Galatians - Commentary

Galatians – Related Topics

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Jewish Roots of Galatians (2013) (Book Endorsements) http://www.netivyah.org/book/the-jewish-roots-of-galatians/

Excerpt:

Galatians is probably one of the most misunderstood and misused books of the New Testament because of the lack of understanding of its literary style and original context. Paul's Epistle to the Galatians is a fiery literary composition that was meant to grip its original readers with the importance of freedom from most of the commandments of the Torah that the Gospel offered its non-Jewish recipients. Like all the other Jewish polemical writers of his time, Paul used midrashic methods of interpretation as well as the language of passion, conflict, and exaggeration to pour forth his heart when he felt his congregation was being threatened by a Gospel of Works. This commentary helps the reader understand the delicate balance Paul sought between the Torah and the grace of Yeshua through its analysis of his literary methods and comparison to other Jewish texts from his time, especially 4QMMT from Qumran. The relevance of the necessary balance between faith and works is increasing in our own time as people seek Restoration to G-d's original plan for his people, both in the Jewish people and in the Church. It shows both Paul's love for the Torah and his awareness of its limitations to make a person righteous in the eyes of a holy G-d…

Galatians – Beginning (Top)
Galatians – Maps
Galatians – Intro
Galatians – Charts
Galatians – Overviews
Galatians – Getz Videos
Galatians – NT Wright related
Galatians - Commentary
Galatians – Related Topics

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Introducing the New Testament chapter 15: Galatians (Mark Allan Powell) (2013) https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=fEt8IGwCzio [Video]

N.T. Wright On Justification - Al Mohler, Brian Vickers, Denny Burk, Mark Seifrid, Tom Schreiner (2012)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=tA-2PjalU6E [Audio]
This video contains a panel discussion and critique regarding the views of New Testament scholar N.T. Wright and his interpretation of justification on the letters of the Apostle Paul. The panel is Al Mohler, Brian Vickers, Denny Burk, Mark Seifrid, and Tom Schreiner.

Paul and the Foolish Galatians: An Exegetical Analysis of Galatians 3:1-14
http://www.biblicaltheology.com/Research/OlajideM01.pdf [PDF]

N. T. Wright, Apocalyptic and Galatians (Critical Review)
https://readingacts.com/2011/10/07/n-t-wright-apocalyptic-and-galatians/

A Little Wright to Help With Some Wrong: comments on Galatians with regard to NT Wright's commentary, Paul for Everyone: Galatians and 1 Thessalonians https://plaintalkingpastor.wordpress.com/2012/08/31/a-little-wright-to-help-with-some-wrong/

Excerpt:

His commentary on Galatians has been extremely helpful. There was one line that really stuck out to me in his commentary on Galatians 4:8-11. He says,

"Paul is quite clear that the Jewish law was given by God, with a purpose within his overall plan. But now that the plan has been fulfilled, anyone who goes back to the earlier stage is treating the law as though it were something independent that could stand for all time; treating it, in other words, as a god."

…It has been interesting for me to go back and consider the fact that Jesus has fulfilled all of the law and that if we are "in" Him as Ephesians 1 tells us, we have fulfilled ALL of the law. Do you really understand that concept? If you're in Christ you have fulfilled the Law. You have met its requirements. So, to put it bluntly, that means we are not under the authority of the 10 Commandments anymore. That's a bold statement for a pastor to make but that is precisely the message of Galatians 3:23-25,

> 23 Before the coming of this faith, we were held in custody under the law, locked up until the faith that was to come would be revealed. 24 So the law was our guardian until Christ came that we might be justified by faith. 25 Now that this faith has come, we are no longer under a guardian.

That is a truly radical message! It's no wonder Jesus was crucified and Paul martyred!

Now, some might say Paul isn't talking about the 10 Commandment here when he mentions "the law." They would say Paul is referring to all the extra man-made rules in Scripture. That is a misunderstanding of Paul. He clearly has the 1o Commandments in mind or he wouldn't have made mention of the covenant of Mount Sinai in chapter 4:21-31. Mount Sinai is where Moses received the 10 Commandments. I would refer to Wright here who says Paul is talking about the 10 Commandments and the entire Torah (first 5 books of the OT) when he uses the phrase "the law." Clearly, something new and radical has happened. As Christians, we are children of Isaac and not Ishmael (4:21-31).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Douglas Moo, author of a recent commentary on Galatians, is more critical of the New Perspective. He gave a series of 8 lectures on Galatians at Oak Hill theological college in July 2014. The first, looking at Galatians in its original setting, exploring the conversation between Paul and two groups: the Galatians themselves and the false teachers who were agitating the local church is below, the others which offer an exposition of the text can be accessed via the link above or from Soundcloud.

Galatians – Beginning (Top)

Galatians – Maps

Galatians – Intro

Galatians – Charts

Galatians – Overviews

Galatians – Getz Videos

Galatians – NT Wright related

Galatians - Commentary

Galatians – Related Topics

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

A Shorter Commentary on Galatians by Don Garlington

http://www.thepaulpage.com/Shorter_Galatians.pdf [PDF]

("Shorter" as in 193 pages, a less technical version of a commentary that was reduced from its original 440 pages)

Excerpt:

The core issue in Galatians thus boils down to a simple but profound choice—Christ or the Torah (see Gordon, "Problem"). From Romans 14, it is clear enough that Paul was willing to allow Jewish Christians (and others) to practice the law as a matter of personal lifestyle, if they chose. But he drew the line when Torah observance was made the indispensable condition for entering and remaining within the people of God. In short, he repudiated the law as the "Jewish gateway to salvation." At one time, the community of the saved was in fact constituted of circumcised and law-observant people. But with the coming of Jesus the Messiah, who himself began to relax the Mosaic strictures (e.g., Matt 8:3; Mark 7:18-19; Luke 7:14; 13:10-17; John 5:9b-18), the demand of the Jewish Christian missionaries for circumcision and law-obedience is not only obsolete, it actually impedes access to God and is tantamount, no less, to idolatry and apostasy (see on 3:1013; 4:8-10).

At this juncture, it is important to underscore that the bottom line issue in Galatians is soteriology. Sanders is doubtlessly correct to maintain that "Paul's argument is not in favor of faith per se, nor is it against works per se. It is much more particular: it is against requiring the Gentiles to keep the law of Moses in order to be 'sons of Abraham'" (Paul, the Law, 19). He adds further that "we have become so sensitive to the theological issue of grace and merit that we often lose sight of the actual subject of the dispute" (ibid.). Thus, the subject of Galatians is "the condition on which Gentiles enter the people of God" (ibid., 18). Nevertheless, much more is at stake than a sociology or group identity, one enclave distinguishing itself from another. If the topic under discussion is "how to enter the body of those who would be saved," then "the topic is, in effect, soteriology" (ibid., 45, 46). Cousar speaks to the same effect: "The issue under debate, raised by the agitators' demand for circumcision, was basically soteriological, how God saves people" (Coursar, 61). See Acts 15:1.

This affirmation of soteriology as lying at the root of Galatians is a necessary corrective to N. T. Wright's otherwise excellent treatment of justification and righteousness language in the NT. Wright is insistent that justification, and consequently the subject matter of Galatians, does not tell us how to be saved; it is, rather, a way of saying how you can tell that you belong to the covenant community, or, in other words, How do you define the people of God (e.g., Paul, 119, 120-22, 131)?

To be sure, such issues are to be judged in light of the covenant context of "the righteousness of God" and similar ideas. On this Wright is undoubtedly correct, and the ensuing exposition is much in his debt in this regard. Indeed, Galatians does address the question, "Who is a member of the people of God" (ibid., 121). Likewise, it is true that "justification, in Galatians, is the doctrine which insists that all who share faith in Christ belong at the same table, no matter what their racial differences, as together they wait for the final new creation" (ibid., 122).

This much said, it must be countered that Wright has constructed a false dichotomy between the identity of the people of God and salvation. Sanders is closer to the mark: Galatians has to do with how to enter the body of those who would be saved. This means that to belong to the new covenant is to be among the community of the saved. And justification does indeed tell us how to be saved, in that it depicts God's method of saving sinners—by faith in Christ, not by works of the law—and placing them in covenant standing with himself. If justification is by faith, then in point of fact a method of salvation is prescribed: one enters into the realm of salvation by faith.

It is just because the bedrock of Galatians is soteriology, and it is just because Paul sees defection from Christ to the law as taking place "so quickly" in the Galatian congregations that he writes with an intense awareness of the plight of his "children" in the gospel who are in danger of forsaking their Lord for what effectively is no better than their former bondage to pagan deities (4:8-10). In plain terms, the letter is written to avert the apostasy in Galatia. No wonder, then, Paul's passions are white hot in this letter.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Dating Galatians – Before or After Acts 15?
https://readingacts.com/2009/10/02/dating-galatians-before-or-after-acts-15/

See also:
Wallace Commentary
Constable Commentary

The "Righteousness" of Romans and Galatians, and the Gospel of Christ http://www.thepaulpage.com/the-righteousness-of-romans-and-galatians-and-the-gospel-of-christ/includes several perspectives, including the alternative of the New Perspective on Paul and section on "resolving the tensions".

Paul's View of Law in Galatians and Romans (1999)
http://hermeneutics.kulikovskyonline.net/hermeneutics/law.pdf [PDF]

Excerpt:

It should be noted that nowhere does Paul state a systematic doctrine of the Law. Rather, he seeks to "destabilize an enthroned position that associates the Law with the privileged status of the elect Jewish people."

While the Law is an unattainable standard, it also reflects the will of God as well as His holiness and righteousness. While the Law is a curse which leads to sin and death, it is also good, holy, righteous and spiritual. While the Law, as a code, has been abolished, many of its individual commands are still applicable.

But the most important truth about the Law presented in Galatians and Romans, is that we are not required to obey it in order to gain salvation. Because the Law results in slavery, Christ has released us from its bondage. The work of Christ signals the end of Law as a means of justification. Salvation can only be gained through faith and not by observance of the Law.

Justification in Paul: A Comparison of Galatians with Romans
https://www.academia.edu/10100395/Justification_in_Paul_A_Comparison_of_Galatians_with_Romans_paper_SBL_San_Diego_2014_?auto=download [PDF] (Note: Registration/Login may be required)

The Junia Project: The Logic of Galatians 3:30
http://juniaproject.com/logic-galatians-328/

Taking the concept of NT Wright re uncirmcised having equal part in the church and applying to women in the church.

Galatians – Week 1: Introduction – Riverview Church (Foundations 3 Series)
http://media.riverviewchurch.com.au/podcast/accelerate/20150504_3141.pdf [PDF] and Audio available

Main Menu Page: https://www.riverviewchurch.com.au/watch-listen/podcasts/foundations-3.html

The mediator in Galatians 3:20 http://www.lionelwindsor.net/2010/04/20/the-mediator-in-galatians-320/

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Executive Outlines: The Epistle to the Galatians – Copeland
http://executableoutlines.com/pdf/ga_sg.pdf [PDF]

The Gospel According to Paul: Romans (Commentary by Dr. Bob Utley)
http://www.ibiblio.org/freebiblecommentary/pdf/EN/VOL07.pdf [PDF]

Bible Study Questions on 2 Corinthians and Galatians http://www.biblestudylessons.com/classbooks/epistles/galatians-questions.pdf [PDF]

Paul's Letter to the Galatians – How to Understand It http://www.eternalgod.org/lit/booklets/Galatians_view.pdf [PDF]

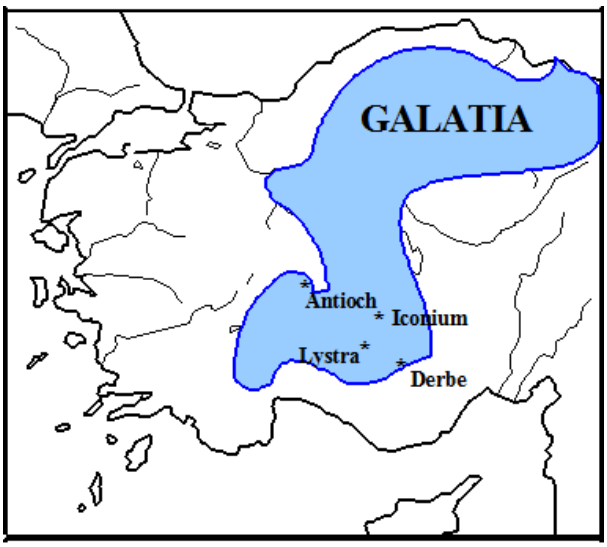
Best Commentaries on Galatians https://www.bestcommentaries.com/galatians/

Galatians – Beginning (Top)
Galatians – Maps
Galatians – Intro
Galatians – Charts
Galatians – Overviews
Galatians – Getz Videos
Galatians – NT Wright related
Galatians - Commentary
Galatians – Related Topics

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Dr. Thomas Constable's Notes on Galatians

http://www.soniclight.com/constable/notes/htm/NT/Galatians/Galatians.htm [also available: PDF]



Excerpt:

Historical Background

Galatians has been the least disputed of any of Paul's epistles.

"The most uncontroverted matter in the study of Galatians is that the letter was written by Paul, the Christian apostle whose ministry is portrayed in the Acts of the Apostles."[1]

The Apostle Paul directed this epistle to the churches of Galatia (1:2), and he called its recipients "Galatians" (3:1). However, who these people were, and where they lived, are problems that have proved difficult to pinpoint.

The traditional opinion held that the recipients lived in the geographical district known as "Galatia," located in the northern part of the Roman province, also called "Galatia," in Asia Minor.[2] This view holds that Paul founded these churches on his second missionary journey, after the Spirit forbade him to preach in the province of Asia (Acts 16:6). Paul therefore could have written this epistle during his third journey, either from Ephesus about A.D. 54, or from Corinth about A.D. 57.[3]

The main arguments for this "North Galatian theory" are as follows: First, the popular use of the term "Galatians" usually signified people in this area. Second, in writing Acts, Luke normally referred to geographical districts, rather than Roman provinces. Third, there is some similarity between the "Galatians," as Paul referred to them in this epistle, and the Gallic inhabitants of northern Galatia. Fourth, Paul traveled through this region during his second journey (Acts 16:6-8).

The more popular view today, since about the middle of the eighteenth century, maintains that Paul wrote to the churches, located in the Roman province of Galatia, that he founded on his first missionary journey (cf. Acts 13:38-39, 46, 48; 14:3, 8-10).[4] The arguments for this "South Galatian theory" are as follows:

First, Acts 16:6 and 18:23 offer no support to the theory that Paul ever made a trip to the northern part of provincial Galatia. Second, there is no specific information about the northern Galatian churches in Acts. Third, the geographic isolation of the North Galatia district makes a visit by Paul improbable. Fourth, Paul usually referred to provincial titles in his writings. Fifth, the name "Galatians" was appropriate for people living in the southern area. Sixth, the mention of "Barnabas" in Galatians 2 suggests that the Galatians had met him—on Paul's first journey. Seventh, the absence of a North Galatian representative, with the collection delegation referred to in 1 Corinthians 16:1, implies that the target readership was not an evangelized area. Eighth, the influence of the Judaizers was extensive in South Galatia.

If Paul wrote this epistle to the churches of South Galatia, as I think he did, he probably did so at one of two times. If Paul's visit referred to in Galatians 4:13 is the same one described in Acts 16:6, he must have written this epistle after the Jerusalem Council (i.e., in or after A.D. 49). Rendall and Ridderbos believed that Paul wrote it from Corinth, probably in A.D. 50 or 51.[5] Nevertheless, it seems more likely that Galatians 4:13 refers to the visit described in Acts 14:21, so Paul must have written the epistle before the Jerusalem Council (i.e., before or in A.D. 49). Assuming the earlier date, Paul probably wrote Galatians from Antioch of Syria, shortly after his first missionary journey, and before the Jerusalem Council.[6] This would make "Galatians" Paul's first inspired epistle. Another, less likely possibility, is that he wrote it from Ephesus during his third missionary journey.[7]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The dating of the epistle affects the occasion for writing. Assuming the South Galatian theory, and an early date of writing, Paul wrote mainly to stem the tide of the Judaizing heresy, to which he referred throughout the letter. Romans and 1 and 2 Corinthians also deal with the Judaizing controversy to some degree. Paul mentioned people who opposed him in every chapter (1:6-7; 2:4-5; 3:1; 4:17; 5:7-12; 6:12-13).

The identity of the "Judaizers" is also important. Their method included discrediting Paul. The first two chapters of Galatians especially deal with criticisms leveled against him personally. His critics appear to have been Jews who claimed to be Christians, and who wanted Christians to submit to the authority of the Mosaic Law and its institutions. They probably came from Jerusalem, and evidently had a wide influence (cf. Acts 15). One man seems to have been their spokesman (3:1; 5:7, 10), though there were several Judaizers in Galatia, as the many references to "them" and "they," scattered throughout the epistle, suggest.[8]

"This short letter has an importance out of all proportion to its size. There is always a need for Paul's forthright setting out of the truth that justification comes only through faith in Christ, not by works."[9]

Paul wrote much about the law in both Galatians and Romans. Ridderbos distinguished his emphases in these two similar epistles:

". . . what is indicated in the letter to the Galatians is the inadequacy of the law for salvation, and . . . what gets the emphasis in the letter to the Romans is this: that there is salvation despite the transgression of God's holy law."[10]

On the subject of the authenticity of Galatians, the same author wrote:

". . . there is not a single letter that is so generally regarded as authentic as is Paul's letter to the Galatians."[11] …

Notes:

[1]Richard N. Longenecker, Galatians, p. lvii. See also Donald Guthrie, Galatians, pp. 1-7.

[2]John Eadie, Commentary on the Epistle of Paul to the Galatians, p. xxviii; A. T. Robertson, Word Pictures in the New Testament, 4:272-73.

[3]W. J. Conybeare, in The Life and Epistles of St. Paul, p. 477, preferred Corinth, as did J. B. Lightfoot, The Epistle of St. Paul to the Galatians, p. 55, and H. A. Ironside, Expository Messages on the Epistle to the Galatians, p. 9. Eadie, p. lii, preferred Ephesus.

[4]F. Rendall, "The Epistle to the Galatians," in The Expositor's Greek Testament, 3:127; E. de W. Burton, A Critical and Exegetical Commentary on the Epistle to the Galatians, p. xliv; Herman Ridderbos, The Epistle of Paul to the Churches of Galatia, pp. 22-31; F. F. Bruce, The Epistle to the Galatians, pp. 3-18; Merrill C. Tenney, Galatians: The Charter of Christian Liberty, pp. 51-54; James M. Boice, "Galatians," in Romans-Galatians, vol. 10 of The Expositor's Bible Commentary, pp. 412-17; Ronald Y. K. Fung, The Epistle to the Galatians, pp. 1-3; Longenecker, pp. lxiii-lxx; Leon Morris, Galatians: Paul's Charter of Christian Freedom, pp. 15-20; Donald K. Campbell, "Galatians," in The Bible Knowledge Commentary: New Testament; Guthrie, Galatians, p. 27; Donald A. Carson and Douglas J. Moo, An Introduction to the New Testament, pp. 458-61; Warren W. Wiersbe, The Bible Exposition Commentary, 1:683; Howard F. Vos, Galatians: A Call to Christian Liberty, pp. 9-13.

[5]Rendall, 3:17; Ridderbos, p. 31.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

[6]Fung, pp. 22, 28; Longenecker, p. lxxxviii; Morris, p. 22; Campbell, p. 588; et al.

[7]See Richard B. Rackham, The Acts of the Apostles, p. 360; J. Vernon McGee, Thru the Bible with J. Vernon McGee, 5:148..

[8]For fuller discussions of these matters, see Donald Guthrie, New Testament Introduction, 2:72-89; Bruce, pp. 3-32, 41-56; Boice, pp. 412-20, and Fung, pp. 1-28.

[9]Carson and Moo, p. 473.

[10]Ridderbos, p. 22.

[11]Ibid., p. 36.

Galatians – Beginning (Top)
Galatians – Maps
Galatians – Intro
Galatians – Charts
Galatians – Overviews
Galatians – Getz Videos
Galatians – NT Wright related
Galatians - Commentary
Galatians – Related Topics

Galatians – An Inductive Bible Study
http://www.grace-bible.org/uploads/publications/galatians_final_8-22-15.pdf [PDF]

Sha'ul's Letter to the Galatians – A Torah-Positive Summary
http://torahresourcesinternational.info/pdf/galatians_summary.pdf [PDF]

An Introduction to the Book of Galatians https://bible.org/article/introduction-book-galatians

Introduction to Galatians (2009) (Catholic) https://www.catholicnewsagency.com/column/introduction-to-galatians-496

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Doug Moo's 'must-read' commentary on Galatians (2013)

http://www.dennyburk.com/doug-moos-must-read-commentary-on-galatians/

Excerpt:

When it comes to commentaries on Paul, one of the first questions that the critical reader asks is this: "How does the 'new perspective' on Paul factor into the commentary?" Readers familiar with Moo's work will not be surprised to learn that he is generally not sympathetic to new perspective readings on the Galatians. In fact, Moo takes a fairly traditional approach while carefully engaging alternative voices in the literature.

Moo recognizes, for example, that "works of law" is a specific reference to the Mosaic law. But for Moo, contemporary interpreters go too far when they insist that the phrase can only refer to the Torah (p. 160). A reference to Mosaic law does not rule out the implication that Paul means to make a "distinction between human doing and human believing" (p. 31). In short, the old law-gospel antithesis is very much the substructure of Paul's concern in Galatians.

Moo also understands the disputed phrase "faith of Christ" in the traditional sense. Against Richard Hays and others who have argued to the contrary, Moo contends that the key phrase means "faith in Christ" not "faithfulness of Christ" (p. 161). Thus for Paul, justification is by "faith in Christ" not by doing "works of the law."

Moo also disagrees with the understanding of justification made popular by N. T. Wright. Whereas Wright views justification as the divine verdict as to who will be declared to be members of God's people, Moo flatly disagrees and says this about justification in Galatians:

> [The] issue is the terms on which people can expect to find right standing with God… There is no good contextual reason to insist that "justify" in 2:16 must be redefined to mean, or to include, the notion of membership in God's people. There is no need to collapse the two concepts into one… The flow of the text makes perfect sense if Paul in 2:16 is using DIKAIOO language in its well-attested sense "declare righteous" (p. 55; cf. 161-62).

Moo takes the South Galatian view of the letter's recipients and dating. In short, he believes this letter was addressed to Christians living in the southern part of the Roman province Galatia. A careful comparison of Galatians to the events in Acts reveals that the letter was likely written in AD 48 just prior to the Jerusalem Council of Acts 15. Thus Galatians is the "earliest extant letter of Paul" (p. 18).

There is much more that can and should be said about this book, but I will finish with this. We owe Doug Moo a debt of gratitude for this important contribution. This book is an important work of scholarship on a critical Pauline text. If you are looking for a solid exposition of the Greek text of Galatians from a non-New Perspective perspective, this commentary (along with Tom Schreiner's Galatians) is the one you'll want to consult.

N.T. Wright: Gospel and Theology In Galatians (1994)

http://ntwrightpage.com/files/2016/05/Wright_Gospel_Theology_Galatians.pdf [PDF]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Galatians: Introduction, Argument, and Outline (Dr. Daniel B. Wallace) [Recommended]

https://bible.org/seriespage/9-galatians-introduction-argument-and-outline

Excerpts:

A. The Author

Galatians is without a doubt the most secure of all Paul's letters and perhaps of all books of the NT. Even F. C. Baur, the father of the Tübingen school accepted its authenticity. Still, it may be helpful to examine in brief the reasons that have been given for such acceptance.

1. External Evidence

Galatians is quoted or alluded to in 1 Peter, Barnabas, 1 Clement, Polycarp's letter to the Philippians, Justin Martyr, Irenaeus, Clement of Alexandria, and Origen. Both Marcion's and the Muratorian canon list it.

2. Internal Evidence

The internal grounds for asserting authenticity are four: (1) "Paul, as author, is mentioned by name not only at the beginning (1:1) but also toward the end of the letter (5:2), and the whole from beginning to end breathes such an intensely personal and unconsciously autobiographical note that only a genuine historical situation involving the true founder of the Gentile mission within the church accounts for it. (2) There are several coincidences (conceptual, verbal, historical, etc.) with what we know of Paul from Acts and other Pauline letters which are so unobtrusive as to be undesigned that they bear the stamp of genuineness. (3) There is controversy in the letter: Paul defends himself and his gospel as though both were doubted; further, he says some rather unflattering things to his audience which would be difficult for a later writer to get away with. And the nature of the controversy is something that hardly existed after 70 CE. A later writer would not only not be able to pass off this work as genuine, but he would have virtually no motive for writing it. (4) There is nothing negative in the epistle regarding authorship (historical discrepancies, language, theological development, etc.) to cast any doubts on authenticity.

B. Destination/Audience

The key introductory issue in Galatians is the destination. Until comparatively recent times, biblical scholars assumed that this epistle was sent to the churches in the geographical region known as Galatia, in north central Asia Minor. Thus, Paul would have visited the region on his second missionary journey (cf. Acts 16:6; 18:23) and his visit to Jerusalem (recorded in Gal. 2) would correspond to Acts 15. The epistle would then be sent sometime on Paul's third missionary journey, perhaps from Corinth (Acts 20:3), in 55/56 CE. This view is known as the "North Galatian Theory" since the churches would be in the geographical Galatia, which was in the north.

But in fairly recent times, largely due to the archeological efforts of Sir William Ramsey, a new theory has been proposed—the "South Galatian Theory." Not only Ramsey, but the majority of NT scholars today, would hold that Paul wrote this letter to the churches in the political province of Galatia—i.e., an area which the Roman government designated as Galatia. This province included cities substantially to the south of the geographical region of Galatia, including Lystra, Derbe, and Iconium. Paul had visited these cities on his first missionary journey. If the south Galatian theory is true, then there is no need to identify Gal. 2 with Acts 15, for the events described in Gal. 2 may well have happened on an earlier visit to Jerusalem. The letter would then have been written sometime before the events of Acts 15. The date of Galatians could then be as early as 47-49 CE, depending on when the Council at Jerusalem in Acts 15 is to be dated.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

What is at stake here is both the date of this epistle and the interpretation of Gal. 2:1-10 (in terms of its historical setting). Less directly, the historical value of Acts is involved, as well as how to evaluate the theological development in the mind of Paul between the writing of Galatians and Romans. Finally, if Galatians is dated early (a la the south Galatian theory), then this letter becomes the first canonical Pauline epistle…

…In sum, the south Galatian theory, though not unassailable, seems by far the most satisfactory. In particular, the arguments that seem most compelling on its behalf are: (1) the number of visits implied in Gal. 2:1 and mentioned in Acts; (2) Paul's proven use of Roman provincial terms to describe what Luke would normally describe with geographical/ethnic terms; and (3) the absence of any mention of the decree in Gal. 2:1-10 which would so dramatically serve Paul's purposes and prove, once and for all, that the Judaizers were not really representative of James or apostolic/Jerusalem Christianity.

D. Occasion/Purpose

Bruce has a nice summary:

When, as we are told in Acts 15:1, Judaean visitors came to Syrian Antioch and started to teach the Christians there that those who were not circumcised in accordance with the law of Moses could not be saved, it is antecedently probable that others who wished to press the same line visited the recently formed daughter-churches of Antioch, not only in Syria and Cilicia, as the apostolic letter indicates (Acts 15:23), but also in South Galatia. If so, then the letter to the Galatians was written as soon as Paul got news of what was afoot, on the even of the Jerusalem meeting described in Acts 15:6ff. This, it is suggested, would yield the most satisfactory correlation of the data of Galatians and Acts and the most satisfactory dating of Galatians. It must be conceded that, if this is so, Galatians is the earliest among the extant letters of Paul.
F. F. Bruce, Commentary on Galatians (NIGNT), 55.

The purpose of this letter was obviously, then, to refute the Judaizers' false gospel — a gospel in which these Jewish Christians felt that circumcision was essential to salvation — and to remind the Galatians of the real basis of their salvation. It was the urgency of the situation which moved Paul to write even before the Jerusalem Council convened, for the churches of Galatia were at stake.

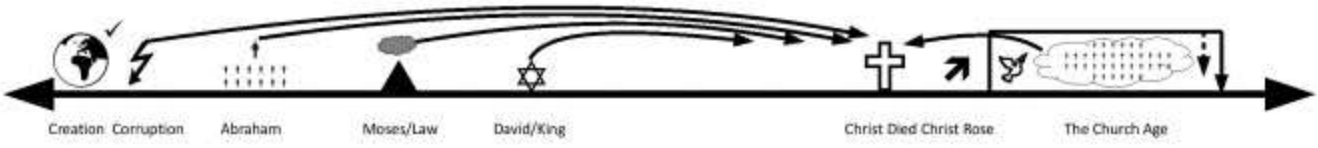
E. Theme

Galatians has been called "the Magna Carta of the Reformation" and Luther's "Katie von Bora." It is the book on which the Protestant Reformation was founded. The key to this epistle is seen in 2:16: "Know that a man is not justified on the basis of the works of the Law, but on the basis of the faithfulness of Jesus Christ. So we, too, have put our faith in Christ Jesus that we may be justified on the basis of Christ's faithfulness, and not on the basis of the works of the Law—for no flesh will be justified on the basis of the works of the Law." Paul thus links Christ's complete faithfulness to the old covenant as grounds for the abolition of the old covenant and as the basis for our salvation. In a nutshell, we are justified by faith in Christ because Christ was faithful.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Other Related Topics of Interest to a Study of Galatians

Galatians (Beginning)
Romans



See: Gospel of Jesus the Messiah (Christ)

Systematized propositional statements vs a Gospel story of salvation

https://markpenrith.wordpress.com/

Excerpt:

The diagram below represents the major events I think need to be highlighted and I've given some indication as to why in the key below. But what have I missed? What needs expanding?

1. Creation: Theology proper. Who is God? The Creator. Our Creator. And His creation is very good. He is perfect, eternal, transcendent and immanent.
2. Corruption: Harmatology. Who is man? Corrupted, conceited, and cursed. In every faculty of his being. Sinful. Yet, in the midst of the curse you have God pointing to the cross.
3. Abraham: The People of God, elected and loved, despite their stiff-neckedness. And in the covenant promise of God you have a clear point to the Seed, Christ, the cross, and blessing to come.
4. Moses/Law: The 10 Commandments. The impossible standard, blessing on/curse received. The Law which can't save but can drive to the cross.
5. David/King: The promise of an eternal throne and a righteous King to come.
6. Christ Died: Christology. The person of Christ, Emmanuel, God with us. The work of Christ, Savior, God died for us.
7. Christ Rose: Victory. The sacrifice is accepted. Heaven's gates flung open wide.
8. The Church: The Body of Christ, the Bride of Christ, the great commission, the bold proclamation. Repent for the forgiveness of sins!

Systematized propositional statements vs a Gospel story of salvation? That's a ridiculous title. It's not an either or answer. It's a both and. Note how I crafted my Eschatology into the diagram. :). Maybe I will grow up to be the Theologian after all.

See: Gospel of Jesus the Messiah (Christ) (Following)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Gospel of Jesus the Messiah (Christ)

Galatians (Beginning)

Romans

[See Definitions: Messiah / Christ]

Christ

What is the Gospel?

I was always hesitant to share the Gospel. I was never confident that I was reciting what I was trained via Evangelism Explosion, the Four Spiritual Laws, Billy Graham's Bridge to Life, the Roman Way and many others (the companion to these Reference Notes has these sharing aids and many others if interested). While they have been effectively used by many to share the Gospel and lead others to a saving faith in Christ Jesus, they left me with concentrating on the particular method and the pressure of making sure I got the words and their sequence just right. Was I following the right plan? Did the plan include everything necessary?

Eventually, I realized the it might be a good idea to read the Bible and see what Paul and Peter considered to be the Gospel. Which "Plan" did they follow? Were they the same or different? Much to my relief, the points they shared when presenting the Gospel are similar and straightforward…

The following is a compiled summary chart of the Gospel as shared by Paul and Peter in Acts and Paul's letters.

Everyone is saved who believes in Jesus Christ: that He…

	Died on a cross / for the Forgiveness of our Sins [as foretold by OT Prophets in Scripture],
	He was Buried / then was Raised up on the 3rd day (Resurrection) [as per OT Prophets].
	Witnesses after Jesus arose: Apostles ate and drank with Him; over 500 men/women saw.
	Why Preach? – commanded by Jesus; of first/highest importance; and to warn you that Jesus was appointed by God to reign over everything and to judge the living and the dead.

NOTE: The order of this information does NOT matter. NO gospel presentation is complete without emphasizing Jesus' resurrection and the Jesus was appointed ruler (Lord) and judge over all.

Exact wording is not required as long as the essence of the message is clear and complete.

The above summary of the Gospel of Jesus Christ is based on Paul's and Peter's (via Luke's Book of Acts) explicit statements of the Gospel (see: 1 Cor. 15:1-11, 20-28; Acts 10:34-38, 39-45 re: Peter's presentation of the Gospel to the Gentile Roman Centurion Cornelius). Other similar statements of the Gospel are found in Rom. 1:1-5; Acts 17:16-34 (Paul's speech at Mars Hill, Athens) and to a lesser extent, 2 Tim. 2:8-10.

["Christ" = from Christos, the Greek word for the Hebrew "Messiah" = "Anointed One of God"; i.e., Jesus the Messiah]

For chart details (and explanation of color codes) see:* Gospel of Paul vs Peter

See also*: Christ

Resurrection of Jesus the Messiah (Christ)

Occurrences of Jesus Risen/Resurrected Mentioned by Apostles in the Bible

More about what is the Gospel…

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

What is it? (Various perspectives)

N.T. Wright: What is the gospel, and why is it the "good news"? (2009)

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=cWoezpvlEz4 [Video] (Clip from Paul Ankerberg Show appearance)

What is the Gospel? NT Wright (2013)

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=ICHovRHJAYY [Video]

https://vimeo.com/54601664 [Video]

https://vimeo.com/54601664 [Video]

Wright addresses the following questions:

- Why do we need to ask the question "what is the gospel"?
- What is the gospel according to the gospels?
- If you only had a couple of minutes, how would you communicate the gospel with someone?
- Do we need to talk about repentance when we present the gospel?
- Why do you emphasize the importance of talking about Jesus' life, as well as his death, when presenting the gospel?
- Is the gospel of Paul different to the gospel of Jesus?
- What would your advice be to a young evangelist?

The Gospel of Jesus the Messiah (Christ)

The Gospel that Paul Preached

The Gospel that Peter Preached

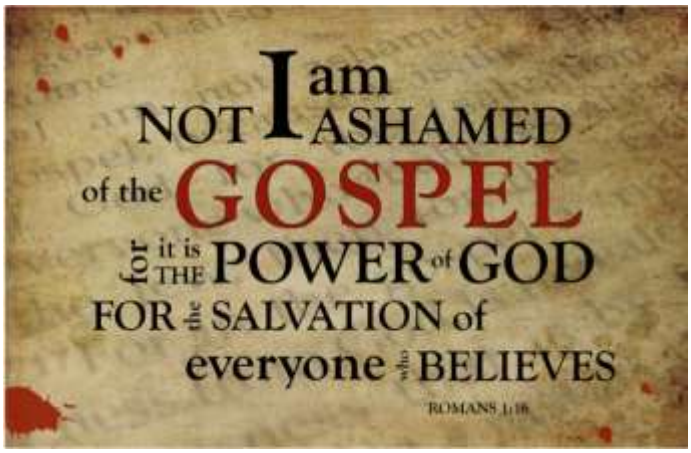
Gospel of Paul vs Peter (includes Charts)

Gospel of Jesus vs Paul

Faith (Pistis and Fides; Roman Imperial vs Christian Faith)

Repentance

What is the Gospel (Various Video Presentations)



More about what is the Gospel…

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

N.T. Wright: What is the "Gospel of God"? (in Romans)
http://ntwrightonline.org/what-is-the-gospel-of-god/ [links to video] See also*: Gospel of God

See:* Paul Receives the Gospel Resurrection Creed within 5 Years of Crucifixion

See also my other separate references resource*:
The Gospel, Salvation and Evangelism

See also*: Christ

ABC's of Salvation

The Gospel of Jesus the Messiah (Christ)

The Gospel that Paul Preached

The Gospel that Peter Preached

Gospel of Paul vs Peter (includes Charts)

Gospel of Jesus vs Paul

Faith (Pistis and Fides; Roman Imperial vs Christian Faith)

Repentance

What is the Gospel (Various Video Presentations)

Baptism (Christian, Water)

More about what is the Gospel…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

What is the Gospel? The Gospel is the Good News that God has made a way for all people to be declared right with himself through faith in Jesus. The Gospel is not good religious teaching—not even, the good teaching of Jesus. No, the Gospel is news—an announcement—a special alert. God has made a way for everyone who believes in Jesus to live in and enjoy a personal relationship with God. Romans 3:21-26 is the clearest explanation of that simple definition of the Gospel in all the Bible—an explanation with rich theological significance so we will have to dig underneath words like righteousness, faith, justification, propitiation, redemption, and atonement along the way. – Charlies Boyd, Fellowship Greenville See*: Glossary - Romans (the Gospel)

Note: Here are the above referenced verses from three different versions of the Bible:

[21] But now apart from the law the righteousness of God (which is attested by the law and the prophets) has been disclosed – [22] namely, the righteousness of God through the faithfulness of Jesus Christ for all who believe. For there is no distinction, [23] for all have sinned and fall short of the glory of God. [24] But they are justified freely by his grace through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus. [25] God publicly displayed him at his death as the mercy seat accessible through faith. This was to demonstrate his righteousness, because God in his forbearance had passed over the sins previously committed. [26] This was also to demonstrate his righteousness in the present time, so that he would be just and the justifier of the one who lives because of Jesus' faithfulness. [Net Bible]

[21] But now the righteousness of God without the law is manifested, being witnessed by the law and the prophets; [22] Even the righteousness of God which is by faith of Jesus Christ unto all and upon all them that believe: for there is no difference: [23] For all have sinned, and come short of the glory of God; [24] Being justified freely by his grace through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus: [25] Whom God hath set forth to be a propitiation through faith in his blood, to declare his righteousness for the remission of sins that are past, through the forbearance of God; [26] To declare, I say, at this time his righteousness: that he might be just, and the justifier of him which believeth in Jesus. [KJV]

[21] But now the righteousness of God has been manifested apart from the law, although the Law and the Prophets bear witness to it— [22] the righteousness of God through faith in Jesus Christ for all who believe. For there is no distinction: [23] for all have sinned and fall short of the glory of God, [24] and are justified by his grace as a gift, through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus, [25] whom God put forward as a propitiation by his blood, to be received by faith. This was to show God's righteousness, because in his divine forbearance he had passed over former sins. [26] It was to show his righteousness at the present time, so that he might be just and the justifier of the one who has faith in Jesus. [ESV]

For details about why the variances in the above versions, see: Pistis Christou

See*: Glossary - Romans (the Gospel) See also*: Gospel of Paul vs Peter

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Question: "What is the gospel of Jesus Christ?"

https://www.gotquestions.org/gospel-of-Jesus-Christ.html

Answer:

The word gospel means “good news,” so the gospel of Christ is the good news of His coming to provide forgiveness of sins for all who will believe (Colossians 1:14; Romans 10:9). Since the first man’s sin, mankind has been under the condemnation of God (Romans 5:12). Because everyone breaks God’s perfect law by committing sin (Romans 3:23), everyone is guilty (Romans 5:18). The punishment for the crime of sin is physical death (Romans 6:23) and then an eternity spent in a place of punishment (Revelation 20:15; Matthew 25:46). This eternal separation from God is also called the “second death” (Revelation 20:14–15).

The bad news that all are guilty of sin and condemned by God is countered by the gospel, the good news of Jesus Christ. God, because of His love for the world, has made a way for man to be forgiven of their sins (John 3:16). He sent His Son, Jesus Christ, to take the sins of mankind on Himself through death on a cross (1 Peter 2:24). In placing our sin on Christ, God ensured that all who will believe in the name of Jesus will be forgiven (Acts 10:43). Jesus’ resurrection guarantees the justification of all who believe (Romans 4:25).

The Bible specifies the content of the gospel message: “Now, brothers and sisters, I want to remind you of the gospel I preached to you, which you received and on which you have taken your stand. By this gospel you are saved, if you hold firmly to the word I preached to you. Otherwise, you have believed in vain. For what I received I passed on to you as of first importance: that Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures, that he was buried, that he was raised on the third day according to the Scriptures, and that he appeared to Cephas, and then to the Twelve. After that, he appeared to more than five hundred of the brothers and sisters at the same time” (1 Corinthians 15:1–6). In this passage, Paul emphasizes the primacy of the gospel—it is of “first importance.” The gospel message contains two historical facts, both supported by Scripture: Christ’s death and His resurrection. Both those facts are bolstered by other proofs: Christ’s death is proved by His burial, and His resurrection is proved by the eyewitnesses.

The gospel of Jesus Christ is the good news that God provided the way for man to be freed from the penalty of sin (John 14:6; Romans 6:23). But not all people will be saved from hell; only those who place their faith in Jesus will go to heaven when they die (Acts 4:12).

The gospel of Jesus Christ is the best news anyone will ever hear, and what a person does with this news will determine where he or she spends eternity. God is calling you to choose life. Call on the name of the Lord and be saved (Romans 10:13).

What is the Gospel?

https://bible.org/article/what-gospel

Excerpt:

Actually, the central ingredient of the gospel message is a two-fold confession: (1) Christ died for our sins and (2) He was raised on the third day. The reality of these two elements can be verified by the Scriptures (cf. Ps. 16:10; Isa. 53:8-10) and by such awesome historical evidence as the empty tomb and the eye witnesses. Thus, the other two elements mentioned here accomplish two important facts regarding the gospel. The fact that He was buried verified His death, and the fact that He appeared to others verified His resurrection.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

What Does the Word "Gospel" Mean in the New Testament?
http://www.ligonier.org/blog/what-does-word-gospel-mean-new-testament/

What Is the Christian Gospel? (John Piper) (2002)
https://www.desiringgod.org/articles/what-is-the-christian-gospel

Excerpt:

…This is why the New Testament often defines the gospel as, simply, Christ. The gospel is the "gospel of Christ" (Romans 15:19; 1 Corinthians 9:12; 2 Corinthians 2:12; 9:13; 10:14; Galatians 1:7; Philippians 1:27; etc.). Or, more specifically, the gospel is "the gospel of the glory of Christ" (2 Corinthians 4:4). And even more wonderfully, perhaps, Paul says that the preaching of the gospel is the preaching of "the unsearchable riches of Christ" (Ephesians 3:8).

Therefore to believe the gospel is not only to accept the awesome truths that 1) God is holy, 2) we are hopeless sinners, 3) Christ died and rose again for sinners, and 4) this great salvation is enjoyed by faith in Christ-but believing the gospel is also to treasure Jesus Christ as your unsearchable riches. What makes the gospel Gospel is that it brings a person into the everlasting and ever-increasing joy of Jesus Christ…

What Is the Gospel? (Gospel in 6 minutes – John Piper) (2007)
https://www.desiringgod.org/articles/the-gospel-in-6-minutes

Excerpt:

What is the gospel? I'll put it in a sentence.

The gospel is the news that Jesus Christ, the Righteous One, died for our sins and rose again, eternally triumphant over all his enemies, so that there is now no condemnation for those who believe, but only everlasting joy.

That's the gospel.

You Can't Outgrow the Gospel

You never, never, never outgrow your need for the gospel. Don't ever think of the gospel as, "That's the way you get saved, and then you get strong by leaving it and doing something else."

No! We are strengthened by God through the gospel every day, till the day we drop.

You never outgrow the need to preach to yourself the gospel…

Note: Piper mentions his prostate cancer that occurred in 2006 (that was successfully treated by surgery).

See also: Resurrection of Jesus the Messiah (Christ)

Glossary - Romans

Return to the beginning: Gospel of Jesus the Messiah (Christ)

Galatians (Beginning)

Romans

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Bible: Gospel, Guide, or Garbage? (2013)
Veritas Forum: NT Wright and Sean Kelly at Harvard University https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=CTpgvI_vUjc [Video]

The Bible: Gospel, Guide, or Garbage? (2014)
Veritas Forum: NT Wright and Sean Kelly at Univ. of Texas, Austin https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=w1wqG2PbwNQ [Video]

How God Became King : Why We've All Misunderstood the Gospels | N. T. Wright
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Mks4gYcjpXc [Video] (2012) (Calvin College) [Recommended]

You're Included: How God Became King (N.T. Wright, interviewed by Dr. Gary Deddo)
Part 1: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=IEHliSDNxa4 [Video] (2016)

Part 2: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=FEmIQspS6xc [Video]

N.T. Wright: Imagining the Kingdom: Mission and Theology in Early Christianity http://ntwrightpage.com/2016/07/12/imagining-the-kingdom/ (2011)

Synergism vs Monergism: The View of the Gospel

See also my other separate references resource*:
The Gospel, Salvation and Evangelism

Galatians – Beginning (Top)
Galatians – Maps
Galatians – Intro
Galatians – Charts
Galatians – Overviews
Galatians – Getz Videos
Galatians – NT Wright related
Galatians - Commentary
Galatians – Related Topics

The Gospel of Jesus the Messiah (Christ)
The Gospel that Paul Preached
The Gospel that Peter Preached
Gospel of Paul vs Peter (includes Chart)
Gospel of Jesus vs Paul
Faith (Pistis and Fides; Roman Imperial vs Christian Faith)
Repentance
What is the Gospel (Various Video Presentations)
Baptism (Christian, Water)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

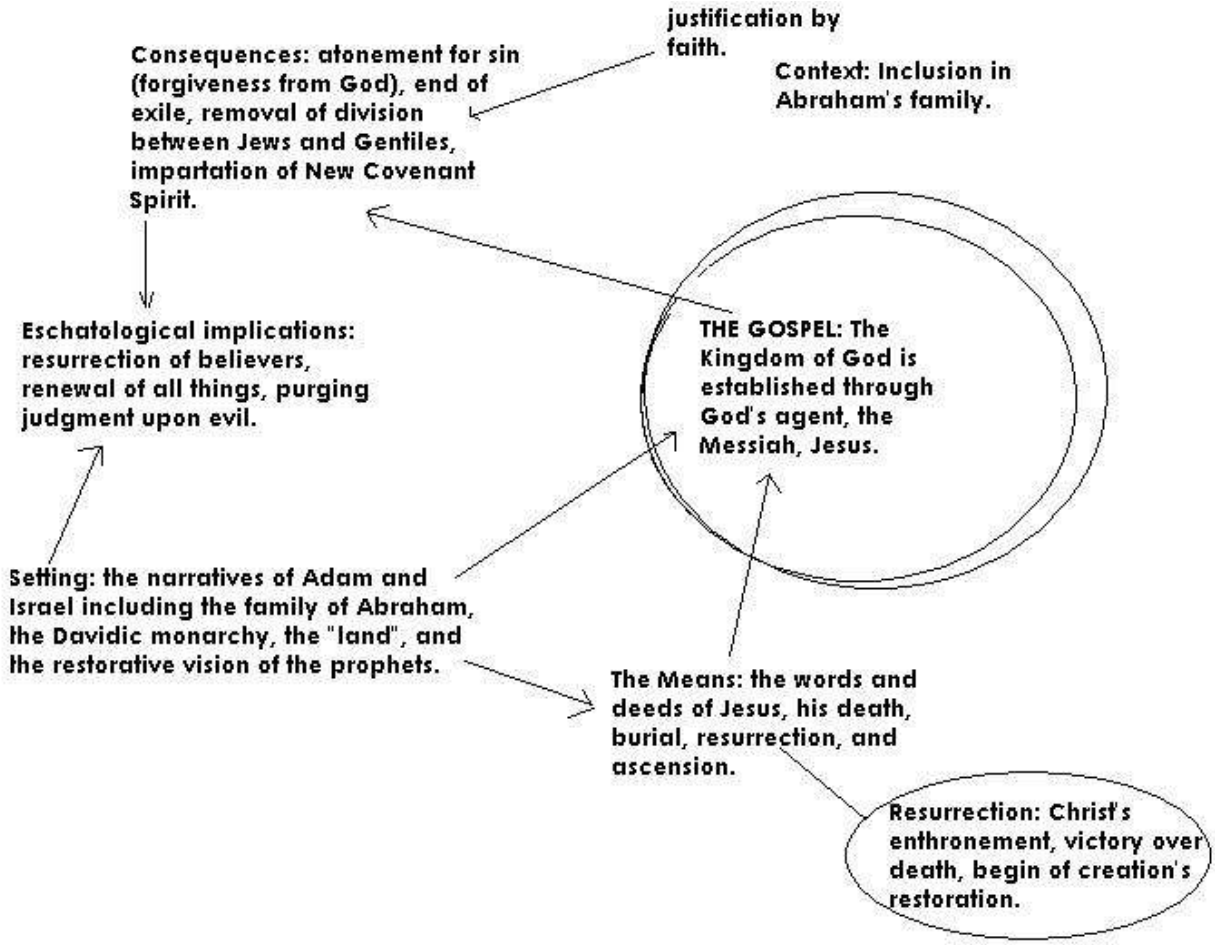
N.T. Wright, Scot McKnight and the Gospel: Compared and Contrasted (2011)

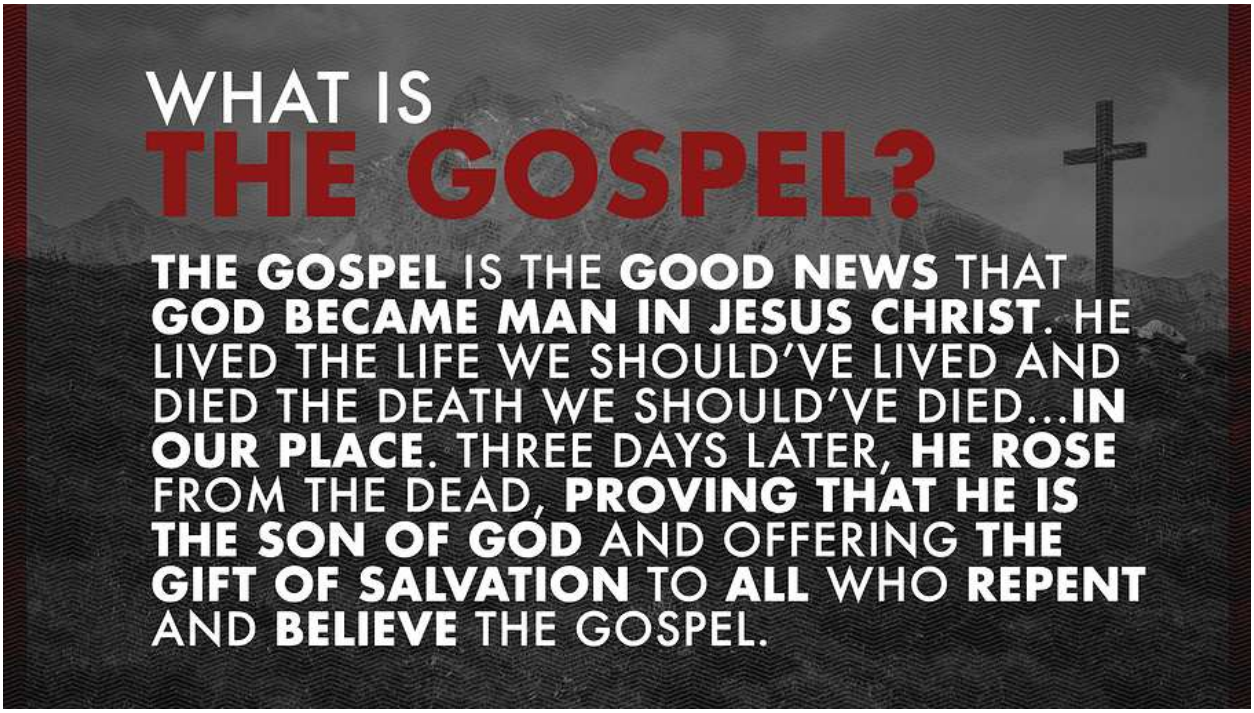


http://www.covenantoflove.net/gospel/n-t-wright-scot-mcknight-and-the-gospel-compared-and-contrasted/

At first glance it appears that Scot McKnight's gospel proposal in his recent book, The King Jesus Gospel, is very much "Wrightian". But the more I reflected on what McKnight had to say, and the more I perused much of what Wright says throughout his work, the wider a contrast between the two developed. These two scholars have many points of agreement though, and so much so that it may be suggested that McKnight's gospel proposal was an outworking of Wright's influence on his thinking. But Scot is a superb scholar in his own right, so it might simply be suggested that his understanding of the gospel developed independent of Wright, whom he sources simply as a scholar in agreement. (Note: Covers their Agreements and Disagreements)

A Gospel Diagram

https://nearemmaus.wordpress.com/2011/10/29/a-gospel-diagram/



Note from author: I acknowledge influence from N.T. Wright and Scot McKnight primarily.

See also*: Gospel of Paul vs Peter

Gospel of Jesus vs Paul (with Christianity Today Feature Articles regarding McNight)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Source: http://mountzionchurchoxnard.org/the-gospel

What Is The Gospel?
http://jesus-is-savior.com/BTP/Dr_Harry_Ironside/what_is_the_gospel.htm

Defending the Resurrection
http://www.becomingcloser.org/life_of_christ_2/defending_the_resurrection.html

The Gospel of Jesus the Messiah (Christ)

The Gospel that Paul Preached

The Gospel that Peter Preached

Gospel of Paul vs Peter (includes Charts)

Gospel of Jesus vs Paul

Faith (Pistis and Fides; Roman Imperial vs Christian Faith)

Repentance

What is the Gospel (Various Video Presentations)

Baptism (Christian, Water)

Galatians (Beginning)

Romans

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Source: http://www.websiteforgod.net/The_Gospel_of_Christ.html

Quote by N.T. Wright on the Bodily Resurrection of Jesus:

"You see, the bodily resurrection of Jesus isn't a take-it-or-leave-it thing, as though some Christians are welcome to believe it and others are welcome not to believe it. Take it away, and the whole picture is totally different. Take it away, and Karl Marx was probably right to accuse Christianity of ignoring the problems of the material world. Take it away, and Sigmund Freud was probably right to say that Christianity is a wish-fulfillment religion. Take it away, and Friedrich Nietzsche was probably right to say that Christianity was a religion for wimps. Put it back, and you have a faith that can take on the postmodern world that looks to Marx, Freud and Nietzsche as its prophets, and you can beat them at their own game with the Easter news that the foolishness of God is wiser than men, and the weakness of God is stronger than men." — N.T. Wright, For All God's Worth: True Worship and the Calling of the Church

See also: Resurrection of Jesus the Messiah (Christ)

Return to the beginning: Gospel of Jesus the Messiah (Christ)

Galatians (Beginning)

Romans

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Gospel of Jesus In Genesis 5

http://deeprootsathome.com/the-gospel-of-jesus-in-genesis/

http://www.khouse.org/articles/2000/284/

Excerpt:

The background behind the genealogy in Genesis 5 is one of our most frequently asked questions.

Since the ten Hebrew names are proper names, they are not translated but only transliterated to approximate the way they were pronounced. The meaning of proper names can be a difficult pursuit since direct translations are not readily available. Many study aids, such as conventional lexicons, can prove superficial when dealing with proper names. Even a conventional Hebrew lexicon can prove disappointing. A study of the original roots, however, can yield some fascinating insights. (It should be recognized, however, that the views concerning the meaning and significance of the original roots are not free of controversy and are subject to variant readings. This is why we receive so many questions or comments on variations.)

Here is a summary of God's plan of redemption, hidden here within a genealogy in Genesis! You will never convince me that a group of Jewish rabbis deliberately "contrived" to hide the "Christian Gospel" right here in a genealogy within their venerated Torah!

Evidences of Design

The implications of this discovery are far more deeply significant than may be evident at first glance. It demonstrates that in the earliest chapters of the Book of Genesis, God had already laid out His plan of redemption for the predicament of mankind. It is the beginning of a love story, ultimately written in blood on a wooden cross which was erected in Judea almost 2,000 years ago.

This is also one of many evidences that the Bible is an integrated message system, the product of supernatural engineering. This punctures the presumptions of many who view the Bible as a record of an evolving cultural tradition, noble though it may be. It claims to be authored by the One who alone knows the end from the beginning,[12] despite the fact that it is composed of 66 separate books, penned by some 40 authors, spanning several thousand years.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Problems with this…
http://www.isitinthebible.com/ot/Names%20in%20Genesis%20predict%20the%20coming%20messiah%20by%20Chuck%20Missler.pdf

http://mayimhayim.org/Shemology/Genesis5.htm

Remembering that the number five is the number of "grace" in the Scriptures, Mahalalel (the blessed God) is the fifth name in chapter five, and from it, we can clearly see God's grace flowing out from this chapter. Five is the Hebrew letter hey ה, and it stands for: "to behold" i.e., revelation in its most ancient form. It also expresses; "thought, speech and action on behalf of the Divine. We can indeed see this in this Shemology sentence as well.

This revelation came by way of a rabbi in the late eighteen hundreds. His name I do not know, however, bible teacher Chuck Missler picked up on it many years later and put it into a few of his books. It was this that started me on the road with God looking for sentences in the Biblical names. It is only thru God's leading, that I look for "Shemology" sentences in His Scriptures

https://drmsh.com/allegorical-interpretation-names-genesis-5/
To be direct, this conclusion doesn't follow from the data. That is, it's a non sequitur. The reason is that both the approach and the data are problematic.1 The goal of using this analysis as some sort of proof for a "cosmic code" is also untenable

https://christianchat.com/bible-discussion-forum/a-hidden-message-in-genesis.200747/

Continued next page…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

https://alltheangelsshoutedforjoy.blogspot.com/2019/06/the-meaning-of-first-ten-patriarchs.html

- The Gospel of Jesus the Messiah (Christ)
- The Gospel that Paul Preached
- The Gospel that Peter Preached
- Gospel of Paul vs Peter (includes Charts)
- Gospel of Jesus vs Paul
- Faith (Pistis and Fides; Roman Imperial vs Christian Faith)
- Repentance
- What is the Gospel (Various Video Presentations)
- Baptism (Christian, Water)

More about what is the Gospel…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

What is the gospel?

https://www.9marks.org/answer/what-gospel/

Excerpt:

The gospel is the good news about what Jesus Christ has done to reconcile sinners to God. Here's the whole story:

1. The one and only God, who is holy, made us in his image to know him (Gen. 1:26-28).
2. But we sinned and cut ourselves off from him (Gen. 3; Rom. 3:23).
3. In his great love, God sent his Son Jesus to come as king and rescue his people from their enemies—most significantly their own sin (Ps. 2; Luke 1:67-79).
4. Jesus established his kingdom by acting as both a mediating priest and a priestly sacrifice—he lived a perfect life and died on the cross, thus fulfilling the law himself and taking on himself the punishment for the sins of many (Mark 10:45; John 1:14; Heb. 7:26; Rom. 3:21-26, 5:12-21); then he rose again from the dead, showing that God accepted his sacrifice and that God's wrath against us had been exhausted (Acts 2:24, Rom. 4:25).
5. He now calls us to repent of our sins and trust in Christ alone for our forgiveness (Acts 17:30, John 1:12). If we repent of our sins and trust in Christ, we are born again into a new life, an eternal life with God (John 3:16).

Now that's good news.

A good way to summarize this good news is to biblically unpack the words God, Man, Christ, Response.

1. God. God is the creator of all things (Gen. 1:1). He is perfectly holy, worthy of all worship, and will punish sin (1 John 1:5, Rev. 4:11, Rom. 2:5-8).
2. Man. All people, though created good, have become sinful by nature (Gen. 1:26-28, Ps. 51:5, Rom. 3:23). From birth, all people are alienated from God, hostile to God, and subject to the wrath of God (Eph. 2:1-3).
3. Christ. Jesus Christ, who is fully God and fully man, lived a sinless life, died on the cross to bear God's wrath in the place of all who would believe in him, and rose from the grave in order to give his people eternal life (John 1:1, 1 Tim. 2:5, Heb. 7:26, Rom. 3:21-26, 2 Cor. 5:21, 1 Cor. 15:20-22).
4. Response. God calls everyone everywhere to repent of their sins and trust in Christ in order to be saved (Mark 1:15, Acts 20:21, Rom. 10:9-10).

(Some of this material has been adapted from The Gospel and Personal Evangelism by Mark Dever, p. 43)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Shaped by the Gospel: Doing Balanced, Gospel-Centered Ministry in Your City by Timothy Keller https://zondervanacademic.com/products/shaped-by-the-gospel

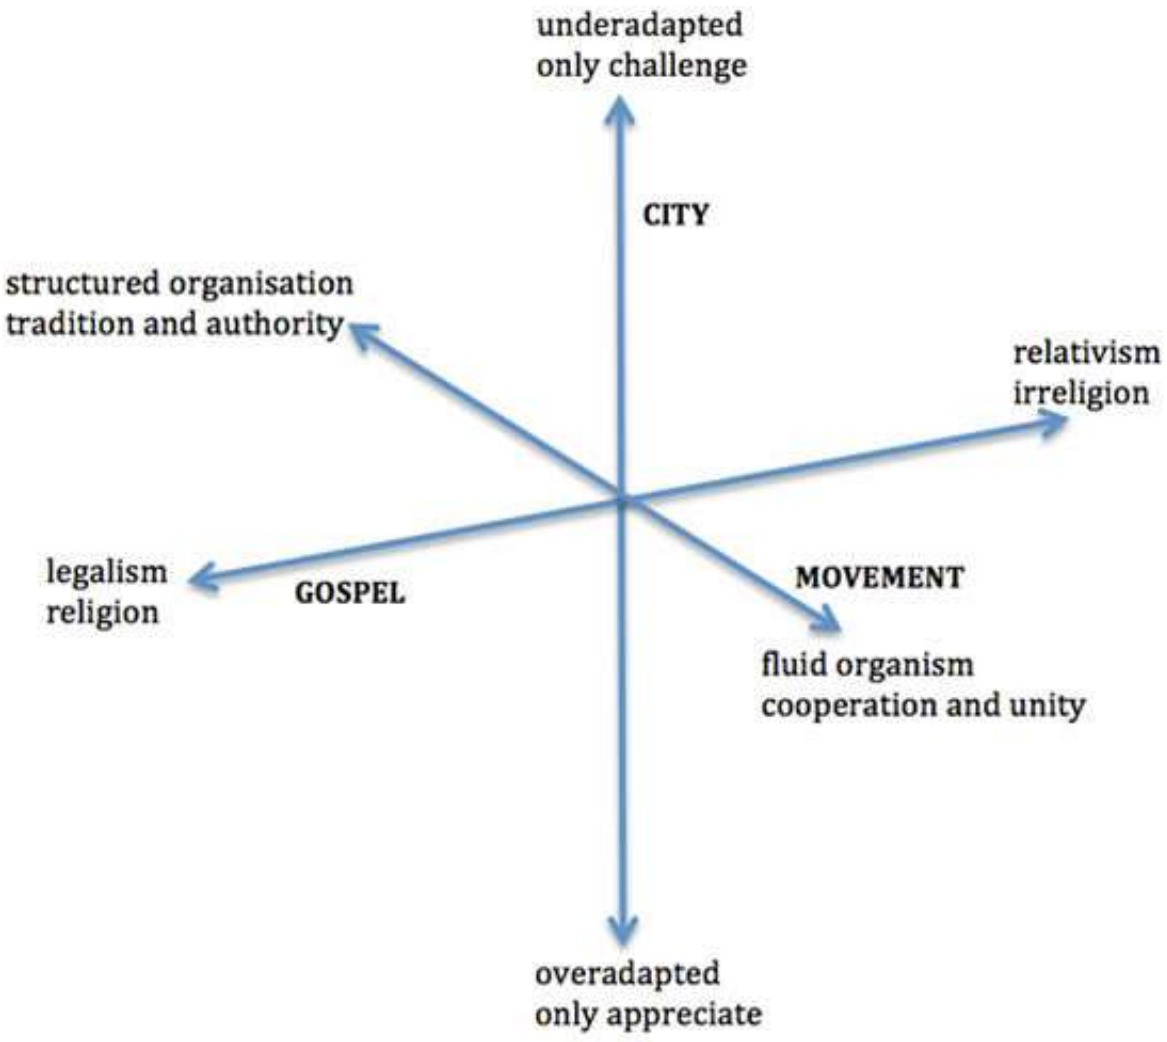
https://www.thriftbooks.com/w/shaped-by-the-gospel-doing-balanced-gospel-centered-ministry-in-your-city_timothy-keller/9951001/item/12749043/#idiq=12749043&edition=9405804

It is easy to assume that if we understand the gospel and preach it faithfully, our ministry will necessarily be shaped by it-but this is not true. Many churches claim to be gospel-centered but do not have a ministry that is shaped by, centered on, and empowered through the gospel. The implications of the gospel have not yet worked their way into the fabric of how that church does ministry.

Gospel-centered ministry is more theologically driven than program driven. To pursue it, we must spend time reflecting on the essence, the truths, and the very patterns of the gospel itself. The gospel is neither religion nor irreligion, but something else entirely-a third way of relating to God through grace. In Shaped by the Gospel, bestselling author and pastor Timothy Keller addresses several current discussion and conflicts about the nature of the gospel and shows how faithful preaching of the gospel leads to individual and corporate renewal.

Timothy Keller continued on next page…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



Center Church:

Book Review: Center Church: Doing Balanced, Gospel-Centered Ministry in Your City, by Tim Keller ("lovingly" critical) https://www.9marks.org/review/center-church-doing-balanced-gospel-centered-ministry-your-city/

Book Review: Timothy Keller's Center Church (pro)
https://www.theologyofwork.org/the-high-calling/blog/book-review-timothy-kellers-center-church

Center Church: Doing Balanced, Gospel-Centered Ministry in Your City (semi-pro)
https://www.wisluthsem.org/rewiring-your-preaching-how-the-brain-processes-sermons-2/

A Book Review of "Center Church" by Tim Keller (very mild criticism)
https://stape-patterson.medium.com/a-book-review-of-center-church-by-tim-keller-32e9b547eb5e

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Source: https://www.pinterest.com/randyalcorn/

The Gospel of Jesus the Messiah (Christ)

The Gospel that Paul Preached

The Gospel that Peter Preached

Gospel of Paul vs Peter (includes Charts)

Gospel of Jesus vs Paul

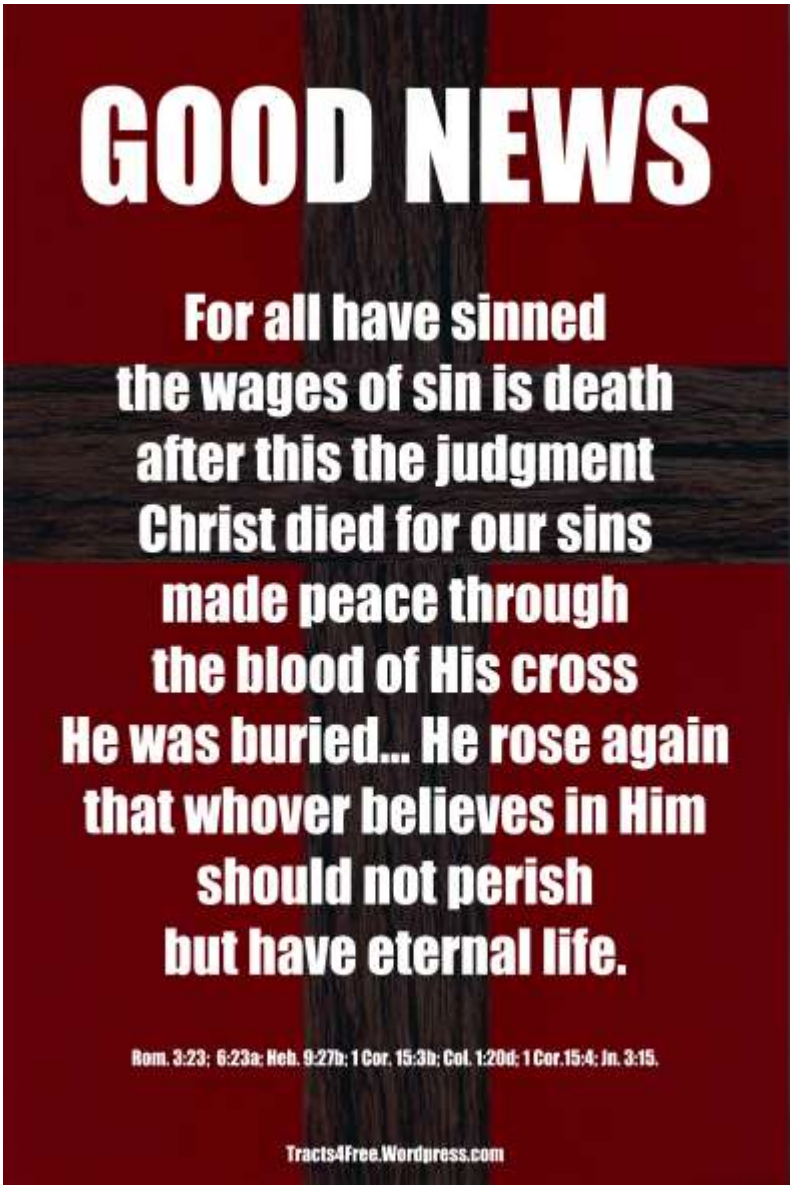
Faith (Pistis and Fides; Roman Imperial vs Christian Faith)

Repentance

What is the Gospel (Various Video Presentations)

Baptism (Christian, Water)

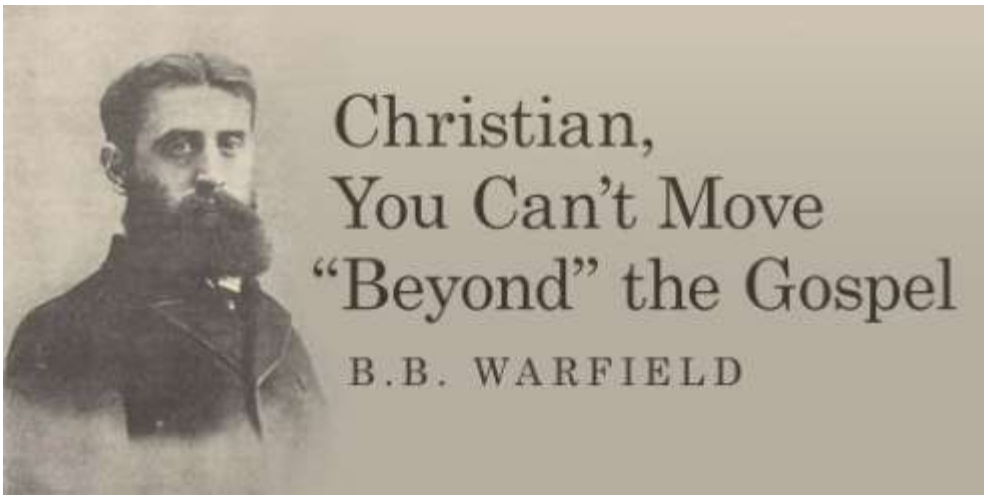
Galatians (Beginning)



Romans

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Gospel: Is Jesus the Answer to Your Problems?
https://christiananswers.net/gospel/



The Gospel Story – A visual exploration of God's revelations in chronological order https://christiananswers.net/godstory/home.html

Christian Gospel Posters
https://tracts4free.wordpress.com/christian-gospel-posters-1/

The Gospel in 7 Minutes
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=cNxLDzpxsaw [Video]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Source: http://www.bloggingtheologically.com/2010/03/05/bb-warfield-christian-you-cant-move-beyond-the-gospel/

James - Christian Gospel Bible Song (by Randy Vid)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=5LEcytJ-xoM [Video]

What are the essentials of the Christian faith?
https://www.gotquestions.org/essentials-Christian-faith.html

The Simple Gospel in 10 Points
http://www.patheos.com/blogs/adrianwarnock/2005/02/simple-gospel-in-10-points/

The Simple Gospel Explained
http://www.patheos.com/blogs/adrianwarnock/2005/02/simple-gospel-explained/

The Simple Gospel
http://thesimplegospel.org/wp-content/uploads/2015/11/The-Simple-Gospel.pdf [PDF]

See also*: Gospel of God

Return to the beginning:* Gospel of Jesus the Messiah (Christ)

Galatians (Beginning)
Romans

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Gospel of God
(also Gospel of: Jesus Christ / Grace of God / Kingdom of God / etc.)

N.T. Wright: What is the "Gospel of God"? (in Romans)
http://ntwrightonline.org/what-is-the-gospel-of-god/ [links to video]

What is the Gospel?
https://bible.org/article/what-gospel

Excerpt:

Actually, the central ingredient of the gospel message is a two-fold confession: (1) Christ died for our sins and (2) He was raised on the third day. The reality of these two elements can be verified by the Scriptures (cf. Ps. 16:10; Isa. 53:8-10) and by such awesome historical evidence as the empty tomb and the eye witnesses. Thus, the other two elements mentioned here accomplish two important facts regarding the gospel. The fact that He was buried verified His death, and the fact that He appeared to others verified His resurrection.

Modifying Terms

While gospel is often found alone, it is very often modified by various terms that focus on a particular aspect of the gospel.

It is modified by various descriptive phrases, such as, "the gospel of God" (Mk 1:14, ASV; Rom 15:16), "the gospel of Jesus Christ," (Mk 1:1; I Cor 9:12), "the gospel of his Son" (Rom 1:9), "the gospel of the kingdom " (Mt 4:23; 9:35; 24:14), "the gospel of the grace of God" (Acts 20:24), "the gospel of the glory of Christ" (II Cor 4:4, ASV), "the gospel of peace" (Eph 6:15), "an eternal gospel" (Rev 14:6, RSV). Although distinctive aspects of the message are indicated by the various modifiers, the gospel is essentially one. Paul speaks of "another gospel" which is not an equivalent, for the gospel of God is His revelation, not the result of discovery (Gal 1:6–11).[5]

In the New Testament, the various modifiers bring out some aspect of the gospel that is being stressed in the context and is a part of the good news of what God offers us in Christ.

(1) The gospel of Jesus Christ (Mark 1:1; 1 Cor. 9:12) and the gospel of His Son (Rom. 1:9). These two descriptions speak of the good news of salvation that comes through the person and work of Jesus Christ who is the very Son of God in human flesh. Again, this is a good news of deliverance from sin's penalty, power and presence through the two advents of Christ.

(2) The gospel of the grace of God (Acts 20:24) emphasizes that salvation in all of its aspects is on the basis of grace rather than on some meritorious system of works.

(3) The gospel of the kingdom (Matt. 4:23; 9:35; 24:14) is the good news that God will establish His kingdom on earth through the two advents of the Lord Jesus Christ.

(4) The gospel of peace (Eph. 6:15) describes how this good news of salvation in Christ brings peace in all its many aspects (peace with God, the peace of God, peace with others, and world peace) through the victory accomplished by the Savior.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

(5) The eternal or everlasting gospel (Rev. 14:6) expands our perspective of gospel as we normally think of it. This gospel as proclaimed by the angel has several key elements of gloriously good news that are developed in three commands and two reasons:

- Command #1: "Fear God." This refers to a holy reverence that recognizes the sovereign authority and power of God to deal with man in His holy wrath and thus, to bring an end to the world of sin as we now know it. To fear God is to recognize Him as the true God who can destroy the soul and not just the body as God will do with the beast of Revelation and His anti-God system.
- Command #2: "Give Him glory." This refers to the praise and honor that should accrue to God from mankind due to our recognition and high estimation of God as the sovereign Creator of the universe.
- Command #3: "And worship Him who made …" The word "worship" means to show reverence or respect. This word emphasizes the external display as seen in our obedience, prayer, singing, and formal worship. The word "fear" emphasizes the reverential mental attitude behind the worship. In the Tribulation people will be forced to fear and formally acknowledge the beast and his image. In this message the angel is demanding that mankind reject the beast and formally turn to God to worship Him (cf. Rev. 14:11).
- Reason #1: "The hour of his judgment has come" is a reference to the final judgments of the Tribulation—the bowl judgments—which are about to occur that will put an end to the system of the beast and bring the rule the Lord Jesus, the King of kings. These will conclude with the return of Christ Himself (Rev. 19) and lead to the removal of all unbelievers from the earth. The emphasis is to not delay because the time is short.
- Reason #2: This is seen in the reference to God as the Creator in verse 7b. Here we are called to pay attention to the ageless and universal message of the creation itself. Age after age creation has called mankind to recognize God's existence and to seek after Him (cf. Acts 17:26-27 with Psalm 19:1-6). This means people are without excuse and that, when the angel proclaims this gospel, the hour of the Creator's judgment is about to fall (see Rom. 1:18f). Though this is the essential and primary element of the angel's everlasting gospel, perhaps he will say more than this for from age to age a person's capacity to reverence, glorify and worship God has come only through believing and knowing Christ (cf. John 14:6 with Acts 4:12; John 4:23-24).

The Gospel of the Grace of God (InTouch / Charles Stanley)

https://www.intouch.org/read/magazine/daily-devotions/the-gospel-of-the-grace-of-god

Excerpt:

Acts 20:16-24

The apostle Paul was consumed by a passion that was even greater than his desire for life or the dread of suffering. He had a ministry to fulfill and a message of salvation to deliver. His words in Acts 20:24 help us understand the foundational concept involved in our salvation. Paul called it "the gospel of the grace of God."

We're saved simply because the Lord is gracious. He knew we could never be good enough to bridge the gap between our sin and His holiness. That's why you will never hear of "the gospel of the Law of God." That would not be good news at all! Can you imagine singing, "Amazing law, how fearful the sound, that saved a wretch like me"? We could never fulfill the requirements, especially the way Jesus enlarged the meaning of the law in the Sermon on the Mount (Matthew 5-7). But grace—that's totally different. It has nothing to do with our worthiness or good performance but is solely based on God's unmerited favor towards us.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

What's most amazing is that the avenue for our salvation is through faith alone. The grace that God extends in saving us is His gift, and there's nothing we can add by our works (Ephesians 2:8-9). Otherwise, we'd have to clean up our lives in order to be saved, and that would nullify grace.

Lesson 1: Romans: The Gospel of God (Romans 1:1, Introduction)

https://bible.org/seriespage/lesson-1-romans-gospel-god-romans-11-introduction

Source: https://michaeljeshurun.wordpress.com/2014/05/09/the-gospel-a-manifestation-of-the-grace-of-god/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Gospel that Paul Preached

See also and compare*:
The Gospel that Peter Preached

also*: Gospel of Paul vs Peter

Gospel of N.T. Wright / What Paul Preached – An Interview (email exchange) (2017) http://uncommonlegacy.com/gospel-ntw-interview/

Excerpt:

What is the Gospel?

The message that the crucified and risen Jesus is the world's true Lord, having overcome all other 'powers' through bearing human sin and its consequences. The early church presented this as a story about things that had actually happened, rooted in the story of Israel's scriptures, things that had changed the world (1 Cor 15.3-11)".

1 Corinthians 15: [1] Now I want to make clear for you, brothers and sisters, the gospel that I preached to you, that you received and on which you stand, [2] and by which you are being saved, if you hold firmly to the message I preached to you – unless you believed in vain. [3] For I passed on to you as of first importance what I also received – that Christ died for our sins according to the scriptures, [4] and that he was buried, and that he was raised on the third day according to the scriptures, [5] and that he appeared to Cephas, then to the twelve. [6] Then he appeared to more than five hundred of the brothers and sisters at one time, most of whom are still alive, though some have fallen asleep. [7] Then he appeared to James, then to all the apostles. [8] Last of all, as though to one born at the wrong time, he appeared to me also. [9] For I am the least of the apostles, unworthy to be called an apostle, because I persecuted the church of God. [10] But by the grace of God I am what I am, and his grace to me has not been in vain. In fact, I worked harder than all of them – yet not I, but the grace of God with me. [11] Whether then it was I or they, this is the way we preach and this is the way you believed. [NET Bible]

See corresponding chart in*: Gospel of Paul vs Peter

See*: McKnight's 3-part separation of Gospel text in 1 Cor. 15:1-11.

See also*:
Paul Receives the Gospel Resurrection Creed within 5 Years of Crucifixion

Gospel of Paul vs Peter

Gospel of Jesus vs Paul

Galatians (Beginning)

Romans

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Chart of Paul's Gospel Presentation

(For comparison with Paul, see: Gospel of Paul vs Peter)

Paul (1 Corinthians 15:1-2, 3-11, 20-28)
Now I want to make clear for you, brothers and sisters, the gospel that I preached to you, that you received and on which you stand, and by which you are being saved, if you hold firmly to the message I preached to you – unless you believed in vain.
For I passed on to you as of first importance what I also received – that Christ died for our sins according to the scriptures, and he was buried, and that he was raised on the third day according to the scriptures
he appeared to Cephas [Peter], then to the twelve. Then he appeared to more than five hundred of the brothers and sisters at one time, most of whom are still alive, though some have fallen asleep. Then he appeared to James, then to all the apostles.
Last of all, as though to one born at the wrong time, he appeared to me also. For I am the least of the apostles, unworthy to be called an apostle, because I persecuted the church of God. But by the grace of God I am what I am, and his grace to me has not been in vain. In fact, I worked harder than all of them – yet not I, but the grace of God with me.
Whether then it was I or they, this is the way we preach and this is the way you believed.
But now Christ has been raised from the dead, the firstfruits of those who have fallen asleep. For since death came through a man, the resurrection of the dead also came through a man. For just as in Adam all die, so also in Christ all will be made alive. But each in his own order: Christ, the firstfruits; then when Christ comes, those who belong to him. Then comes the end, when he hands over the kingdom to God the Father, when he has brought to an end all rule and all authority and power. For he must reign until he has put all his enemies under his feet. The last enemy to be eliminated is death. For he has put everything in subjection under his feet. But when it says "everything" has been put in subjection, it is clear that this does not include the one who put everything in subjection to him. And when all things are subjected to him, then the Son himself will be subjected to the one who subjected everything to him, so that God may be all in all.

Legend:

	Saved / Believes in Jesus:
	Died/Sins/Scriptures
	Buried/Resurrection
	Witnesses
	Why Preach
	Appointed by God / Lord

See and compare:
The Gospel that Peter Preached

Return to the beginning*:
The Gospel that Paul Preached

See also*: Gospel of Paul vs Peter

The Gospel According to Paul (chart of all occurrences by Paul of "Gospel" in the Bible)

Paul and the Gospel on Mars Hill (Areopagus) (with Chart)

Return to the beginning: Gospel of Jesus the Messiah (Christ)

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Gospel According to Paul [Recommended]

https://www.gci.org/gospel/paul

Excerpt:

Let us see how Paul describes the gospel. We'll proceed book by book, just skimming the surface, looking primarily at verses [source: Net Bible] that use the Greek word for gospel or for preaching…

(See also: Occurrences of Jesus Risen/Resurrected Mentioned by Apostles in the Bible)

Romans	1: 1-5	[Ro 1:1] From Paul, [1] a slave [2] of Christ Jesus, [3] called to be an apostle, [4] set apart for the gospel of God. [5] [2] This gospel [6] he promised beforehand through his prophets in the holy scriptures, [3] concerning his Son who was a descendant [7] of David with reference to the flesh, [8] [4] who was appointed the Son-of-God-in-power [9] according to the Holy Spirit [10] by the resurrection [11] from the dead, Jesus Christ our Lord. [5] Through him [12] we have received grace and our apostleship [13] to bring about the obedience [14] of faith [15] among all the Gentiles on behalf of his name.
	1:15-17	[15] Thus I am eager [32] also to preach the gospel to you who are in Rome. [33] [16] For I am not ashamed of the gospel, for it is God's power for salvation to everyone who believes, to the Jew first and also to the Greek. [34] [17] For the righteousness [35] of God is revealed in the gospel [36] from faith to faith, [37] just as it is written, " The righteous by faith will live ." [38]
	2:16	[16] on the day when God will judge [33] the secrets of human hearts, [34] according to my gospel [35] through Christ Jesus.
	10:11-17	[11] For the scripture says, " Everyone who believes in him will not be put to shame ." [13] [12] For there is no distinction between the Jew and the Greek, for the same Lord is Lord of all, who richly blesses all who call on him. [13] For everyone who calls on the name of the Lord will be saved . [14] [14] How are they to call on one they have not believed in? And how are they to believe in one they have not heard of? And how are they to hear without someone preaching to them [15] ? [15] And how are they to preach unless they are sent? As it is written, " How timely [16] is the arrival [17] of those who proclaim the good news ." [18] [16] But not all have obeyed the good news, for Isaiah says, " Lord, who has believed our report ?" [19] [17] Consequently faith comes from what is heard, and what is heard comes through the preached word [20] of Christ. [21]
	15:15-16	[15] But I have written more boldly to you on some points so as to remind you, because of the grace given to me by God [16] to be a minister of Christ Jesus to the Gentiles. I serve [13] the gospel of God [14] like a priest, so that the Gentiles may become an acceptable offering, [15] sanctified by the Holy Spirit.
	15:20-21	Christ. [20] And in this way I desire to preach where Christ has not been named, so as not to build on another person's foundation, [21] but as it is written: " Those who were not told about him will see, and those who have not heard will understand ." [18]
	16:25	[25] [20] Now to him who is able to strengthen you according to my gospel and the proclamation of Jesus Christ, according to the revelation of the mystery that had been kept secret for long ages,
1 Corinthians	1:14-25	[14] I thank God [19] that I did not baptize any of you except Crispus and Gaius, [15] so that no one can say that you were baptized in my name! [16] (I also baptized the household of Stephanus. Otherwise, I do not remember whether I baptized anyone else.) [17] For Christ

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

		did not send me to baptize, but to preach the gospel – and not with clever speech, so that the cross of Christ would not become useless. [20] [18] For the message about the cross is foolishness to those who are perishing, but to us who are being saved it is the power of God. [19] For it is written, " I will destroy the wisdom of the wise, and I will thwart the cleverness of the intelligent ." [21] [20] Where is the wise man? Where is the expert in the Mosaic law? [22] Where is the debater of this age? Has God not made the wisdom of the world foolish? [21] For since in the wisdom of God the world by its wisdom did not know God, God was pleased to save those who believe by the foolishness of preaching. [22] For Jews demand miraculous signs and Greeks ask for wisdom, [23] but we preach about a crucified Christ, [23] a stumbling block to Jews and foolishness to Gentiles. [24] But to those who are called, both Jews and Greeks, Christ is the power of God and the wisdom of God. [25] For the foolishness of God is wiser than human wisdom, [24] and the weakness of God is stronger than human strength. [25]
	2:1-5	[2:1] When I came [1] to you, brothers and sisters, [2] I did not come with superior eloquence or wisdom as I proclaimed the testimony [3] of God. [2] For I decided to be concerned about nothing [4] among you except Jesus Christ, and him crucified. [3] And I was with you in weakness and in fear and with much trembling. [4] My conversation and my preaching were not with persuasive words of wisdom, but with a demonstration of the Spirit and of power, [5] so that your faith would not be based on human wisdom but on the power of God.
	15:1-7	[15:1] Now I want to make clear for you, [1] brothers and sisters, [2] the gospel that I preached to you, that you received and on which you stand, [2] and by which you are being saved, if you hold firmly to the message I preached to you – unless you believed in vain. [3] For I passed on to you as of first importance [3] what I also received – that Christ died for our sins according to the scriptures, [4] and that he was buried, and that he was raised [4] on the third day according to the scriptures, [5] and that he appeared to Cephas, then to the twelve. [6] Then he appeared to more than five hundred of the brothers and sisters [5] at one time, most of whom are still alive, [6] though some have fallen asleep. [7] [7] Then he appeared to James, then to all the apostles.
	15:12-15	[12] Now if Christ is being preached as raised from the dead, [9] how can some of you say there is no resurrection of the dead? [13] But if there is no resurrection of the dead, then not even Christ has been raised. [14] And if Christ has not been raised, then our preaching is futile and your faith is empty. [15] Also, we are found to be false witnesses about God, because we have testified against God that he raised Christ from the dead, when in reality he did not raise him, if indeed the dead are not raised.
2 Corinthians	1:19-22	[19] For the Son of God, Jesus Christ, the one who was proclaimed among you by us – by me and Silvanus [38] and Timothy – was not "Yes" and "No," but it has always been "Yes" in him. [20] For every one of God's promises are "Yes" in him; therefore also through him the "Amen" is spoken, to the glory we give to God. [21] But it is God who establishes [39] us together with you in Christ and who anointed us, [40] [22] who also sealed us and gave us the Spirit in our hearts as a down payment. [41]
	4:2-4	[2] But we have rejected [3] shameful hidden deeds, [4] not behaving [5] with deceptiveness [6] or distorting the word of God, but by open proclamation of the truth we commend ourselves to everyone's conscience before God. [3] But even if our gospel is veiled, it is veiled only to those who are perishing, [4] among whom the god of this age has blinded the minds of those who do not believe [7] so they would not see the light of the glorious gospel [8] of Christ, [9] who is the image of God.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

	11:4	[4] For if someone comes and proclaims [8] another Jesus different from the one we proclaimed, [9] or if you receive a different spirit than the one you received, [10] or a different gospel than the one you accepted, [11] you put up with it well enough! [12]
Galatians	1:6-11 (added by LY)	[6] I am astonished that you are so quickly deserting the one [4] who called you by the grace of Christ [5] and are following [6] a different [7] gospel – [7] not that there really is another gospel, [8] but [9] there are some who are disturbing you and wanting [10] to distort the gospel of Christ. [8] But even if we (or an angel from heaven) should preach [11] a gospel contrary to the one we preached to you, [12] let him be condemned to hell! [13] [9] As we have said before, and now I say again, if any one is preaching to you a gospel contrary to what you received, let him be condemned to hell! [14] [10] Am I now trying to gain the approval of people, [15] or of God? Or am I trying to please people? [16] If I were still trying to please [17] people, [18] I would not be a slave [19] of Christ! [11] Now [20] I want you to know, brothers and sisters, [21] that the gospel I preached is not of human origin. [22] [12] For I did not receive it or learn it from any human source; [23] instead I received it [24] by a revelation of Jesus Christ. [25]
	1:15-16	[15] But when the one [31] who set me apart from birth [32] and called me by his grace was pleased [16] to reveal his Son in [33] me so that I could preach him [34] among the Gentiles, I did not go to ask advice from [35] any human being, [36]
	2:1-10 (added by LY)	[2:1] Then after fourteen years I went up to Jerusalem [1] again with Barnabas, taking Titus along too. [2] I went there [2] because of [3] a revelation and presented [4] to them the gospel that I preach among the Gentiles. But I did so [5] only in a private meeting with the influential people, [6] to make sure that I was not running – or had not run [7] – in vain. [3] Yet [8] not even Titus, who was with me, was compelled to be circumcised, although he was a Greek. [4] Now this matter arose [9] because of the false brothers with false pretenses [10] who slipped in unnoticed to spy on [11] our freedom that we have in Christ Jesus, to make us slaves. [12] [5] But [13] we did not surrender to them [14] even for a moment, [15] in order that the truth of the gospel would remain with you. [16] [6] But from those who were influential [17] (whatever they were makes no difference to me; God shows no favoritism between people [18]) – those influential leaders [19] added [20] nothing to my message. [21] [7] On the contrary, when they saw [22] that I was entrusted with the gospel to the uncircumcised [23] just as Peter was to the circumcised [24] [8] (for he who empowered [25] Peter for his apostleship [26] to the circumcised [27] also empowered me for my apostleship to the Gentiles) [28] [9] and when James, Cephas, [29] and John, who had a reputation as [30] pillars, [31] recognized [32] the grace that had been given to me, they gave to Barnabas and me [33] the right hand of fellowship, agreeing [34] that we would go to the Gentiles and they to the circumcised. [35] [10] They requested [36] only that we remember the poor, the very thing I also was eager to do.
Ephesians	3:7-12	[7] I became a servant of this gospel [16] according to the gift of God's grace that was given to me by [17] the exercise of his power. [18] [8] To me – less than the least of all the saints [19] – this grace was given, [20] to proclaim to the Gentiles the unfathomable riches of Christ [9] and to enlighten [21] everyone about God's secret plan [22] – a secret that has been hidden for ages [23] in God [24] who has created all things. [10] The purpose of this enlightenment is that [25] through the church the multifaceted wisdom [26] of God should now be disclosed to the rulers and the authorities in the heavenly realms. [11] This was according to [27] the eternal purpose that he accomplished in Christ Jesus our Lord, [12] in whom we have boldness and confident access [28] to God [29] because of [30] Christ's [31] faithfulness. [32]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Philippians	1:12-18	[12] I want you to know, brothers and sisters, [17] that my situation has actually turned out to advance the gospel: [18] [13] The [19] whole imperial guard [20] and everyone else knows [21] that I am in prison [22] for the sake of Christ, [14] and most of the brothers and sisters, [23] having confidence in the Lord [24] because of my imprisonment, now more than ever [25] dare to speak the word [26] fearlessly. [15] Some, to be sure, are preaching Christ from envy and rivalry, but others from goodwill. [16] The latter do so from love because they know that I am placed here for the defense of the gospel. [17] The former proclaim Christ from selfish ambition, not sincerely, because they think they can cause trouble for me in my imprisonment. [27] [18] What is the result? Only that in every way, whether in pretense or in truth, Christ is being proclaimed, and in this I rejoice.
Colossians	1:12-20	[12] giving thanks to the Father who has qualified you to share [23] in the saints' [24] inheritance in the light. [13] He delivered us from the power of darkness and transferred us to the kingdom of the Son he loves, [25] [14] in whom we have redemption, [26] the forgiveness of sins. [15] [27] He is the image of the invisible God, the firstborn [28] over all creation, [29] [16] for all things in heaven and on earth were created by him – all things, whether visible or invisible, whether thrones or dominions, [30] whether principalities or powers – all things were created through him and for him. [17] He himself is before all things and all things are held together [31] in him. [18] He is the head of the body, the church, as well as the beginning, the firstborn [32] from among the dead, so that he himself may become first in all things. [33] [19] For God [34] was pleased to have all his [35] fullness dwell [36] in the Son [37] [20] and through him to reconcile all things to himself by making peace through the blood of his cross – through him, [38] whether things on earth or things in heaven.
	1:21-29	[21] And you were at one time strangers and enemies in your [39] minds [40] as expressed through [41] your evil deeds, [22] but now he has reconciled you [42] by his physical body through death to present you holy, without blemish, and blameless before him – [23] if indeed you remain in the faith, established and firm, [43] without shifting [44] from the hope of the gospel that you heard. This gospel has also been preached in all creation under heaven, and I, Paul, have become its servant. [24] Now I rejoice in my sufferings for you, and I fill up in my physical body – for the sake of his body, the church – what is lacking in the sufferings of Christ. [25] I became a servant of the church according to the stewardship [45] from God – given to me for you – in order to complete [46] the word of God, [26] that is, the mystery that has been kept hidden from ages and generations, but has now been revealed to his saints. [27] God wanted to make known to them the glorious [47] riches of this mystery among the Gentiles, which is Christ in you, the hope of glory. [28] We proclaim him by instructing [48] and teaching [49] all people [50] with all wisdom so that we may present every person mature [51] in Christ. [29] Toward this goal [52] I also labor, struggling according to his power that powerfully [53] works in me.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

1 Timothy	3:14-16	[14] I hope to come to you soon, but I am writing these instructions [19] to you [15] in case I am delayed, to let you know how people ought to conduct themselves [20] in the household of God, because it is [21] the church of the living God, the support and bulwark of the truth. [16] And we all agree, [22] our religion contains amazing revelation: [23] He [24] was revealed in the flesh, vindicated by the Spirit, [25] seen by angels, proclaimed among Gentiles, believed on in the world, taken up in glory.
2 Timothy	1:6-14	[6] Because of this I remind you to rekindle God's gift that you possess [9] through the laying on of my hands. [7] For God did not give us a Spirit [10] of fear but of power and love and self-control. [8] So do not be ashamed of the testimony about our Lord [11] or of me, a prisoner for his sake, but by [12] God's power accept your share of suffering [13] for the gospel. [9] He is the one who saved us [14] and called us with a holy calling, not based on [15] our works but on his own purpose and grace, granted to us in Christ Jesus before time began, [16] [10] but now made visible through the appearing of our Savior Christ Jesus. He [17] has broken the power of death and brought life and immortality to light through the gospel! [11] For this gospel [18] I was appointed a preacher and apostle and teacher. [19] [12] Because of this, in fact, I suffer as I do. [20] But I am not ashamed, because I know the one in whom my faith is set [21] and I am convinced that he is able to protect what has been entrusted to me [22] until that day. [23] [13] Hold to the standard [24] of sound words that you heard from me and do so with the faith and love that are in Christ Jesus. [25] [14] Protect that good thing [26] entrusted to you, through the Holy Spirit who lives within us.
	2:8 (added by LY)	[8] Remember Jesus Christ, raised from the dead, a descendant of David; [11] such is my gospel, [12] [9] for which I suffer hardship to the point of imprisonment [13] as a criminal, but God's message [14] is not imprisoned! [15] [10] So I endure all things for the sake of those chosen by God, [16] that they too may obtain salvation in Christ Jesus and its eternal glory.

Comment: A more thorough study would lead to the same conclusion: The gospel that Paul preached was about Jesus Christ, specifically his death and resurrection, and the good news that we can be saved through what he has done. Whether we look at the sermons of Paul, or in his letters, we see a consistent focus on Jesus Christ.

The disciples originally did not understand everything Jesus taught, especially about his death and resurrection. Although he told them, they did not accept or understand this part of the message. His crucifixion was a tremendous shock to them. His resurrection was also a tremendous surprise.

Since Jesus was not able to teach his disciples about the fact of his death and resurrection, he could not teach them about the significance of these events, either. But after Jesus rose, and after the Holy Spirit came, the disciples understood. They saw that Jesus' death and resurrection were necessary for people to have the salvation that Jesus had taught about. His death and resurrection were the key to the kingdom of God.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Jesus preached about salvation, repentance and faith. He taught that he was the key to eternal life, and he taught about his own death and resurrection. In all these things Paul preached the same thing as Jesus did.

After his resurrection, Jesus reminded his disciples what he had taught them about himself: "This is what I told you while I was still with you: 'Everything must be fulfilled that is written about me in the Law of Moses, the Prophets and the Psalms.'… This is what is written: The Christ will suffer and rise from the dead on the third day" (Luke 24:44, 46).

Jesus commissioned the apostles to preach this message about salvation through him: "Repentance and forgiveness of sins will be preached in his name to all nations, beginning at Jerusalem. You are witnesses of these things" (verses 47-48).

George Ladd summarizes by saying that the message of Paul > is essentially the same as that of Jesus: that in the person and mission of Jesus, God has visited human beings to bring them the messianic salvation. But there is one great difference. Paul stands on the other side of the cross and resurrection and is able to see…that what was being accomplished in Jesus' life was incomplete apart from the cross and empty tomb. While the blessings of the Kingdom of God were present in Jesus' words and deeds, the greatest blessing of God's Kingdom was the conquest of death and the gift of life; and this was accomplished only by Jesus' death and resurrection. (G.E. Ladd, Theology of the New Testament, 1993, page 453)

The apostles also saw that, to bring this good news to the world, they did not have to use the word kingdom. That word was only one of several legitimate pictures of the good news of what God is doing. The apostles were free to use other descriptions of the salvation that Jesus makes possible through his death and resurrection.

Paul occasionally used the term "kingdom of God," but it was not his most common term for describing the gospel. He was not preaching about a future geographic territory. He was talking about an eternal kingdom that we may enter in this age (Colossians 1:13). He was talking about a King who is already ruling—a Lord who is alive and may be accepted as Lord even in this age. We do not have to wait for Jesus to return before we experience blessings in the gospel.

If we assume that God's kingdom is like human kingdoms, with a geographical base, as many first century Jews did, then we will find it difficult to understand some of Jesus' parables about the kingdom. The kingdom Jesus described doesn't fit well into a message about a territory-based kingdom, and neither does the preaching of the early church and of the apostle Paul.

If we assume that the kingdom is exclusively future, we will also find it hard to understand some of the things Jesus and Paul said. But when we understand the kingdom of God to be God's rule, not dependent on territory, then we can see how the kingdom can exist in this age as well as in the future. People who accept Jesus as Lord accept his rule over their lives, and they thereby enter his kingdom. They come willingly under his rule now, and they await the gift of immortality at the resurrection. This is what Jesus talked about—and Paul is talking about the same thing, but with more details.

In terms of God's kingdom and salvation, the most significant event of all time happened between Jesus and Paul. That event was the death and resurrection of Jesus Christ. That event brought the old covenant to an end. It marked a dramatic change in the way God deals with his people.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

That event marked a dramatic shift in the understanding of the apostles and of the message God inspired them to preach. That event was the key to the kingdom, the key to salvation, and it has become key to the message we preach: salvation has been made possible through the death and resurrection of Jesus Christ.

This article was written by Michael Morrison in 1998 and updated in 2014. Copyright Grace Communion International. All rights reserved. If you'd like to learn more about the Bible, check out Grace Communion Seminary. It's accredited, affordable, and all online. www.gcs.edu (link is external).

See also*: What is the Gospel?

Gospel of Paul vs Peter

Gospel of Jesus vs Paul

Paul and the Gospel on Mars Hill (Areopagus) (with Chart)

Jesus Risen/Resurrected Mentioned by Paul and Other Apostles
(List of NT Occurrences)

Galatians
(Beginning)

Romans

Return to the beginning: The Gospel According to Paul

Return to the beginning*:
The Gospel that Paul Preached

Jesus Raised Up (Resurrected) from the Dead [using WEB Version]

(Sections of the NT Bible where the Resurrection of Jesus is Mentioned.)

Acts	1:15-22 (Peter)	[15] In these days, Peter stood up in the midst of the disciples (and there was a multitude of persons gathered together, about one hundred twenty), and said, [16] "Brothers, it was necessary that this Scripture should be fulfilled, which the Holy Spirit spoke before by the mouth of David concerning Judas, who was guide to those who took Jesus. [17] For he was numbered with us, and received his portion in this ministry. [18] Now this man obtained a field with the reward for his wickedness, and falling headlong, his body burst open, and all his intestines gushed out. [19] It became known to everyone who lived in Jerusalem that in their language that field was called 'Akeldama,' that is, 'The field of blood.' [20] For it is written in the book of Psalms, 'Let his habitation be made desolate. Let no one dwell therein;' and, 'Let another take his office.' [21] "Of the men therefore who have accompanied us all the time that the Lord Jesus went in and out among us, [22] beginning from the baptism of John, to the day that He was received up from us, of these one must become a witness with us of His resurrection."
	2:22-39 (Peter)	[22] "Men of Israel, hear these words! Jesus of Nazareth, a man approved by God to you by mighty works and wonders and signs which God did by him in the midst of you, even as you yourselves know, [23] him, being delivered up by the determined counsel and foreknowledge of God, you have taken by the hand of lawless men, crucified and killed; [24] whom God raised up, having freed him from the agony of death, because it was not possible that he should be held by it. [25] For David says concerning him, *'I saw the Lord always before my face, For he is on my right hand, that I should not be moved. [26] Therefore my heart was glad, and my tongue rejoiced. Moreover my flesh also will dwell in hope; [27] because you will not leave my soul in Hades, neither will you allow your Holy One to see decay. [28] You made known to me the ways of life. You will make me full of gladness with your presence.' [29] "Brothers, I may tell you freely of the patriarch David, that he both died and was buried, and his tomb is with us to this day. [30] Therefore, being a prophet, and knowing that God had sworn with an oath to him that of the fruit of his body, according to the flesh, he would raise up the Christ to sit on his throne, [31] he foreseeing this spoke about the resurrection of the Christ, that neither was his soul left in Hades, nor did his flesh see decay. [32] This Jesus God raised up, to which we all are witnesses. [33] Being therefore exalted by the right hand of God, and having received from the Father the promise of the Holy Spirit, he has poured out this, which you now see and hear. [34] For David didn't ascend into the heavens, but he says himself,

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

		'The Lord said to my Lord, "Sit by my right hand, [35] until I make your enemies a footstool for your feet."' [36] "Let all the house of Israel therefore know certainly that God has made him both Lord and Christ, this Jesus whom you crucified." [37] Now when they heard this, they were cut to the heart, and said to Peter and the rest of the apostles, "Brothers, what shall we do?" [38] Peter said to them, "Repent, and be baptized, every one of you, in the name of Jesus Christ for the forgiveness of sins, and you will receive the gift of the Holy Spirit. [39] For to you is the promise, and to your children, and to all who are far off, even as many as the Lord our God will call to himself."
	4:1-4 (Apostles)	[4:1] As they spoke to the people, the priests and the captain of the temple and the Sadducees came to them, [2] being upset because they taught the people and proclaimed in Jesus the resurrection from the dead. [3] They laid hands on them, and put them in custody until the next day, for it was now evening. [4] But many of those who heard the word believed, and the number of the men came to be about five thousand.
	4:10-12 (Peter)	[10] be it known to you all, and to all the people of Israel, that in the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, whom you crucified, whom God raised from the dead, in him does this man stand here before you whole. [11] He is 'the stone which was regarded as worthless by you, the builders, which has become the head of the corner.' [12] There is salvation in none other, for neither is there any other name under heaven, that is given among men, by which we must be saved!"
	5:29-32 (Peter and the Apostles)	[29] But Peter and the apostles answered, "We must obey God rather than men. [30] The God of our fathers raised up Jesus, whom you killed, hanging him on a tree. [31] God exalted him with his right hand to be a Prince and a Savior, to give repentance to Israel, and remission of sins. [32] We are His witnesses of these things; and so also is the Holy Spirit, whom God has given to those who obey him."
	10:34-48 (Peter)	…[40] God raised him up the third day, and gave him to be revealed,… (see Gospel of Paul vs Peter chart for details)
	13:16-41 (Paul)	[16] Paul stood up, and beckoning with his hand said, "Men of Israel, and you who fear God, listen. [17] The God of this people chose our fathers, and exalted the people when they stayed as aliens in the land of Egypt, and with an uplifted arm, he led them out of it. [18] For a period of about forty years he put up with them in the wilderness. [19] When he had destroyed seven nations in the land of Canaan, he gave them their land for an inheritance, for about four hundred fifty years. [20] After these things he gave them judges until Samuel the prophet. [21] Afterward they asked for a king, and God gave to them Saul the son of Kish, a man of the tribe of Benjamin, for forty years. [22] When he had removed him, he raised up David to be their king, to whom he also testified, 'I have found David the son of Jesse, a man after my heart, who will do all my will.' [23] From this man's seed, God has brought salvation to Israel according to his promise, [24] before his coming, when John had first preached the baptism of repentance to Israel. [25] As John was fulfilling his course, he said,

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

		'What do you suppose that I am? I am not he. But behold, one comes after me the sandals of whose feet I am not worthy to untie.' [26] Brothers, children of the stock of Abraham, and those among you who fear God, the word of this salvation is sent out to you. [27] For those who dwell in Jerusalem, and their rulers, because they didn't know him, nor the voices of the prophets which are read every Sabbath, fulfilled them by condemning him. [28] Though they found no cause for death, they still asked Pilate to have him killed. [29] When they had fulfilled all things that were written about him, they took him down from the tree, and laid him in a tomb. [30] But God raised him from the dead, [31] and he was seen for many days by those who came up with him from Galilee to Jerusalem, who are his witnesses to the people. [32] We bring you good news of the promise made to the fathers, [33] that God has fulfilled the same to us, their children, in that he raised up Jesus. As it is also written in the second psalm, 'You are my Son. Today I have become your father.' [34] "Concerning that he raised him up from the dead, now no more to return to corruption, he has spoken thus: 'I will give you the holy and sure blessings of David.' [35] Therefore he says also in another psalm, 'You will not allow your Holy One to see decay.' [36] For David, after he had in his own generation served the counsel of God, fell asleep, and was laid with his fathers, and saw decay. [37] But he whom God raised up saw no decay. [38] Be it known to you therefore, brothers, that through this man is proclaimed to you remission of sins, [39] and by him everyone who believes is justified from all things, from which you could not be justified by the law of Moses. [40] Beware therefore, lest that come on you which is spoken in the prophets: [41] 'Behold, you scoffers, and wonder, and perish; for I work a work in your days, a work which you will in no way believe, if one declares it to you.'"
	17:1-3 (Paul)	[17:1] Now when they had passed through Amphipolis and Apollonia, they came to Thessalonica, where there was a Jewish synagogue. [2] Paul, as was his custom, went in to them, and for three Sabbath days reasoned with them from the Scriptures, [3] explaining and demonstrating that the Christ had to suffer and rise again from the dead, and saying, "This Jesus, whom I proclaim to you, is the Christ."
	17:16-31 (Paul)	…[31] because he has appointed a day in which he will judge the world in righteousness by the man whom he has ordained; of which he has given assurance to all men, in that he has raised him from the dead."… (see Paul and the Gospel on Mars Hill (Areopagus) for more details)
	24:10-22 (Paul)	[10] When the governor had beckoned to him to speak, Paul answered, "Because I know that you have been a judge of this nation for many years, I cheerfully make my defense, [11] seeing that you can recognize that it is not more than twelve days since I went up to worship at Jerusalem. [12] In the temple they didn't find me disputing with anyone or stirring up a crowd, either in the synagogues, or in the city. [13] Nor can they prove to you the things of which they now accuse me. [14] But this I confess to you, that after the Way, which they call a sect, so I serve the God of our fathers, believing all things which are according to the law, and which are written in the prophets; [15] having hope toward God, which these also themselves look for, that there will be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and unjust. [16] Herein I also practice always having a conscience void of offense toward God and men. [17] Now after some years, I came to bring gifts for the needy to my nation, and offerings; [18] amid which certain Jews from Asia found me purified in the temple, not with a mob, nor with turmoil. [19] They ought to have been here before you, and to make accusation, if they had anything against me. [20] Or else let these men themselves say what injustice they found in me when I stood before the council, [21] unless it is for this one thing that I cried standing among them, 'Concerning the resurrection of the dead I am being judged before you today!'" [22] But Felix, having more exact knowledge concerning the Way, deferred them, saying, "When Lysias, the commanding officer, comes down, I will decide your case."

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

	26:1-30 (Paul)	[26:1] Agrippa said to Paul, "You may speak for yourself." Then Paul stretched out his hand, and made his defense. [2] "I think myself happy, King Agrippa, that I am to make my defense before you this day concerning all the things that I am accused by the Jews, [3] especially because you are expert in all customs and questions which are among the Jews. Therefore I beg you to hear me patiently. [4] "Indeed, all the Jews know my way of life from my youth up, which was from the beginning among my own nation and at Jerusalem; [5] having known me from the first, if they are willing to testify, that after the strictest sect of our religion I lived a Pharisee. [6] Now I stand here to be judged for the hope of the promise made by God to our fathers, [7] which our twelve tribes, earnestly serving night and day, hope to attain. Concerning this hope I am accused by the Jews, King Agrippa! [8] Why is it judged incredible with you, if God does raise the dead? [9] "I myself most certainly thought that I ought to do many things contrary to the name of Jesus of Nazareth. [10] This I also did in Jerusalem. I both shut up many of the saints in prisons, having received authority from the chief priests, and when they were put to death I gave my vote against them. [11] Punishing them often in all the synagogues, I tried to make them blaspheme. Being exceedingly enraged against them, I persecuted them even to foreign cities. [12] "Whereupon as I traveled to Damascus with the authority and commission from the chief priests, [13] at noon, O King, I saw on the way a light from the sky, brighter than the sun, shining around me and those who traveled with me. [14] When we had all fallen to the earth, I heard a voice saying to me in the Hebrew language, 'Saul, Saul, why are you persecuting me? It is hard for you to kick against the goads.' [15] "I said, 'Who are you, Lord?'

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

		"He said, 'I am Jesus, whom you are persecuting. [16] But arise, and stand on your feet, for I have appeared to you for this purpose: to appoint you a servant and a witness both of the things which you have seen, and of the things which I will reveal to you; [17] delivering you from the people, and from the Gentiles, to whom I send you, [18] to open their eyes, that they may turn from darkness to light and from the power of Satan to God, that they may receive remission of sins and an inheritance among those who are sanctified by faith in me.' [19] "Therefore, King Agrippa, I was not disobedient to the heavenly vision, [20] but declared first to them of Damascus, at Jerusalem, and throughout all the country of Judea, and also to the Gentiles, that they should repent and turn to God, doing works worthy of repentance. [21] For this reason the Jews seized me in the temple, and tried to kill me. [22] Having therefore obtained the help that is from God, I stand to this day testifying both to small and great, saying nothing but what the prophets and Moses said would happen, [23] how the Christ must suffer, and how, by the resurrection of the dead, he would be first to proclaim light both to these people and to the Gentiles." [24] As he thus made his defense, Festus said with a loud voice, "Paul, you are crazy! Your great learning is driving you insane!" [25] But he said, "I am not crazy, most excellent Festus, but boldly declare words of truth and reasonableness. [26] For the king knows of these things, to whom also I speak freely. For I am persuaded that none of these things is hidden from him, for this has not been done in a corner. [27] King Agrippa, do you believe the prophets? I know that you believe." [28] Agrippa said to Paul, "With a little persuasion are you trying to make me a Christian?" [29] Paul said, "I pray to God, that whether with little or with much, not only you, but also all that hear me this day, might become such as I am, except for these bonds." [30] The king rose up with the governor, and Bernice, and those who sat with them. [31] When they had withdrawn, they spoke one to another, saying, "This man does nothing worthy of death or of bonds." [32] Agrippa said to Festus, "This man might have been set free if he had not appealed to Caesar."
Romans	1:1-5	[Ro 1:1] Paul, a servant of Jesus Christ, called to be an apostle, set apart for the Good News of God, [2] which he promised before through his prophets in the holy Scriptures, [3] concerning his Son, who was born of the seed of David according to the flesh, [4] who was declared to be the Son of God with power, according to the Spirit of holiness, by the resurrection from the dead, Jesus Christ our Lord, [5] through whom we received grace and apostleship, for obedience of faith among all the nations, for his name's sake; …(see Gospel – Romans 1:1-5 chart for details)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

	4:13-25 (Paul)	[13] For the promise to Abraham and to his seed that he should be heir of the world wasn't through the law, but through the righteousness of faith. [14] For if those who are of the law are heirs, faith is made void, and the promise is made of no effect. [15] For the law works wrath, for where there is no law, neither is there disobedience. [16] For this cause it is of faith, that it may be according to grace, to the end that the promise may be sure to all the seed, not to that only which is of the law, but to that also which is of the faith of Abraham, who is the father of us all. [17] As it is written, "I have made you a father of many nations." This is in the presence of him whom he believed: God, who gives life to the dead, and calls the things that are not, as though they were. [18] Who in hope believed against hope, to the end that he might become a father of many nations, according to that which had been spoken, "So will your seed be." [19] Without being weakened in faith, he didn't consider his own body, already having been worn out, (he being about a hundred years old), and the deadness of Sarah's womb. [20] Yet, looking to the promise of God, he didn't waver through unbelief, but grew strong through faith, giving glory to God, [21] and being fully assured that what he had promised, he was able also to perform. [22] Therefore it also was "reckoned to him for righteousness." [23] Now it was not written that it was accounted to him for his sake alone, [24] but for our sake also, to whom it will be accounted, who believe in him who raised Jesus, our Lord, from the dead, [25] who was delivered up for our trespasses, and was raised for our justification.
	6:4-11 (Paul)	[4] Therefore we have been buried with him through baptism into death, in order that just as Christ was raised from the dead through the glory of the Father, so we too may live a new life. [5] For if we have become united with him in the likeness of his death, we will certainly also be united in the likeness of his resurrection. [6] We know that our old man was crucified with him so that the body of sin would no longer dominate us, so that we would no longer be enslaved to sin. [7] (For someone who has died has been freed from sin.) [8] Now if we died with Christ, we believe that we will also live with him. [9] We know that since Christ has been raised from the dead, he is never going to die again; death no longer has mastery over him. [10] For the death he died, he died to sin once for all, but the life he lives, he lives to God. [11] So you too consider yourselves [8] dead to sin, but [9] alive to God in Christ Jesus.
	7:4 (Paul)	[4] Therefore, my brothers, you also were made dead to the law through the body of Christ, that you would be joined to another, to him who was raised from the dead, that we might bring forth fruit to God.
	8:11 (Paul)	[11] But if the Spirit of him who raised up Jesus from the dead dwells in you, he who raised up Christ Jesus from the dead will also give life to your mortal bodies through his Spirit who dwells in you.
	8:34 (Paul)	[34] Who is he who condemns? It is Christ who died, yes rather, who was raised from the dead, who is at the right hand of God, who also makes intercession for us.
	9:15 (Paul)	[17] For the Scripture says to Pharaoh, "For this very purpose I caused you to be raised up, that I might show in you my power, and that my name might be proclaimed in all the earth."
1 Corinthians	6:14 (Paul)	[14] Now God indeed raised the Lord and he will raise us by his power.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

	15:1-11 (Paul)	…[4] that he was buried, that he was raised on the third day according to the Scriptures, …(see Gospel of Paul vs Peter chart for details)
	15:12-52 (Paul)	[12] Now if Christ is preached, that he has been raised from the dead, how do some among you say that there is no resurrection of the dead? [13] But if there is no resurrection of the dead, neither has Christ been raised. [14] If Christ has not been raised, then our preaching is in vain, and your faith also is in vain. [15] Yes, we are found false witnesses of God, because we testified about God that he raised up Christ, whom he didn't raise up, if it is so that the dead are not raised. [16] For if the dead aren't raised, neither has Christ been raised. [17] If Christ has not been raised, your faith is vain; you are still in your sins. [18] Then they also who are fallen asleep in Christ have perished. [19] If we have only hoped in Christ in this life, we are of all men most pitiable. [20] But now Christ has been raised from the dead. He became the first fruits of those who are asleep. [21] For since death came by man, the resurrection of the dead also came by man. [22] For as in Adam all die, so also in Christ all will be made alive. [23] But each in his own order: Christ the first fruits, then those who are Christ's, at his coming. [24] Then the end comes, when he will deliver up the Kingdom to God, even the Father; when he will have abolished all rule and all authority and power. [25] For he must reign until he has put all his enemies under his feet. [26] The last enemy that will be abolished is death. [27] For, "He put all things in subjection under his feet." But when he says, "All things are put in subjection," it is evident that he is excepted who subjected all things to him. [28] When all things have been subjected to him, then the Son will also himself be subjected to him who subjected all things to him, that God may be all in all. [29] Or else what will they do who are baptized for the dead? If the dead aren't raised at all, why then are they baptized for the dead? [30] Why do we also stand in jeopardy every hour? [31] I affirm, by the boasting in you which I have in Christ Jesus our Lord, I die daily. [32] If I fought with animals at Ephesus for human purposes, what does it profit me? If the dead are not raised, then "let us eat and drink, for tomorrow we die." [33] Don't be deceived! "Evil companionships corrupt good morals." [34] Wake up righteously, and don't sin, for some have no knowledge of God. I say this to your shame. [35] But someone will say, "How are the dead raised?" and, "With what kind of body do they come?" [36] You foolish one, that which you yourself sow is not made alive unless it dies. [37] That which you sow, you don't sow the body that will be, but a bare grain, maybe of wheat, or of some other kind. [38] But God gives it a body even as it pleased him, and to each seed a body of its own. [39] All flesh is not the same flesh, but there is one flesh of men, another flesh of animals, another of fish, and another of birds. [40] There are also celestial bodies, and terrestrial bodies; but the glory of the celestial differs from that of the terrestrial. [41] There is one glory of the sun, another glory of the moon, and another glory of the stars; for one star differs from another star in glory. [42] So also is the resurrection of the dead. It is sown in corruption; it is raised in incorruption. [43] It is sown in dishonor; it is raised in glory. It is sown in weakness; it is raised in power. [44] It is sown a natural body; it is raised a spiritual body. There is a natural body and there is also a spiritual body.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

		[45] So also it is written, "The first man, Adam, became a living soul." The last Adam became a life-giving spirit. [46] However that which is spiritual isn't first, but that which is natural, then that which is spiritual. [47] The first man is of the earth, made of dust. The second man is the Lord from heaven. [48] As is the one made of dust, such are those who are also made of dust; and as is the heavenly, such are they also that are heavenly. [49] As we have borne the image of those made of dust, let's also bear the image of the heavenly. [50] Now I say this, *brothers, that flesh and blood can't inherit the Kingdom of God; ne [56] The sting of death is sin, and the power of sin is the law. [57] But thanks be to God, who gives us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ. [58] Therefore, my beloved brothers, be steadfast, immovable, always abounding in the Lord's work, because you know that your labor is not in vain in the Lord.
2 Corinthians	4:14-18 (Paul)	[14] knowing that he who raised the Lord Jesus will raise us also with Jesus, and will present us with you. [15] For all things are for your sakes, that the grace, being multiplied through the many, may cause the thanksgiving to abound to the glory of God. [16] Therefore we don't faint, but though our outward man is decaying, yet our inward man is renewed day by day. [17] For our light affliction, which is for the moment, works for us more and more exceedingly an eternal weight of glory; [18] while we don't look at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen. For the things which are seen are temporal, but the things which are not seen are eternal.
	5:14-15 (Paul)	[14] For the love of Christ constrains us; because we judge thus, that one died for all, therefore all died. [15] He died for all, that those who live should no longer live to themselves, but to him who for their sakes died and rose again.
Galatians	1:1-5 (Paul)	Paul, an apostle (not from men, neither through man, but through Jesus Christ, and God the Father, who raised him from the dead), [2] and all the *brothers who are with me, to the assemblies of Galatia: [3] Grace to you and peace from God the Father, and our Lord Jesus Christ, [4] who gave himself for our sins, that he might deliver us out of this present evil age, according to the will of our God and Father-- [5] to whom be the glory forever and ever. Amen.
Ephesians	1:14-23 (Paul)	[15] For this cause I also, having heard of the faith in the Lord Jesus which is among you, and the love which you have toward all the saints, [16] don't cease to give thanks for you, making mention of you in my prayers, [17] that the God of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of glory, may give to you a spirit of wisdom and revelation in the knowledge of him; [18] having the eyes of your *hearts enlightened, that you may know what is the hope of his calling, and what are the riches of the glory of his inheritance in the saints, [19] and what is the exceeding greatness of his power toward us who believe, according to that working of the strength of his might [20] which he worked in Christ, when he raised him from the dead, and made him to sit at his right hand in the heavenly places, [21] far above all rule, and authority, and power, and dominion, and every name that is named, not only in this age, but also in that which is to come. [22] He put all things in subjection under his feet, and gave him to be head over all things for the assembly, [23] which is his body, the fullness of him who fills all in all.
	2:4-10 (Paul)	[4] But God, being rich in mercy, for his great love with which he loved us, [5] even when we were dead through our trespasses, made us alive together with Christ (by grace you have been saved), [6] and raised us up with him, and made us to sit with him in the heavenly places in Christ Jesus, [7] that in the ages to come he might show the exceeding riches of his grace in kindness toward us in Christ Jesus; [8] for by grace you have been saved through faith, and that not of yourselves; it is the gift of God, [9] not of works, that no one would boast. [10] For we are his workmanship, created in Christ Jesus for good works, which God prepared before that we would walk in them.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Philippians	3:7-12	[7] However, what things were gain to me, these have I counted loss for Christ. [8] Yes most certainly, and I count all things to be loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus, my Lord, for whom I suffered the loss of all things, and count them nothing but refuse, that I may gain Christ [9] and be found in him, not having a righteousness of my own, that which is of the law, but that which is through faith in Christ, the righteousness which is from God by faith; [10] that I may know him, and the power of his resurrection, and the fellowship of his sufferings, becoming conformed to his death; [11] if by any means I may attain to the resurrection from the dead. [12] Not that I have already obtained, or am already made perfect; but I press on, if it is so that I may take hold of that for which also I was taken hold of by Christ Jesus.
Colossians	2:8-15 (Paul)	thanksgiving. [8] Be careful that you don't let anyone rob you through his philosophy and vain deceit, after the tradition of men, after the elements of the world, and not after Christ. [9] For in him all the fullness of the Godhead dwells bodily, [10] and in him you are made full, who is the head of all principality and power; [11] in whom you were also circumcised with a circumcision not made with hands, in the putting off of the body of the sins of the flesh, in the circumcision of Christ; [12] having been buried with him in baptism, in which you were also raised with him through faith in the working of God, who raised him from the dead. [13] You were dead through your trespasses and the uncircumcision of your flesh. He made you alive together with him, having forgiven us all our trespasses, [14] wiping out the handwriting in ordinances which was against us; and he has taken it out of the way, nailing it to the cross; [15] having stripped the principalities and the powers, he made a show of them openly, triumphing over them in it.
	3:1-4 (Paul)	[1] If then you were raised together with Christ, seek the things that are above, where Christ is, seated on the right hand of God. [2] Set your mind on the things that are above, not on the things that are on the earth. [3] For you died, and your life is hidden with Christ in God. [4] When Christ, our life, is revealed, then you will also be revealed with him in glory.
1 Thessalonians	1:9-10 (Paul)	[9] For they themselves report concerning us what kind of a reception we had from you; and how you turned to God from idols, to serve a living and true God, [10] and to wait for his Son from heaven, whom he raised from the dead--Jesus, who delivers us from the wrath to come.
2 Timothy	2:8-10 (Paul)	[8] Remember Jesus Christ, risen from the dead, of the seed of David, according to my Good News, [9] in which I suffer hardship to the point of chains as a criminal. But God's word isn't chained. [10] Therefore I endure all things for the chosen ones' sake, that they also may obtain the salvation which is in Christ Jesus with eternal glory. (see Gospel – 2 Timothy 2:8-10 chart for details)

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

1 Peter	1:1-5	[1Pe 1:1] Peter, an apostle of Jesus Christ, to the chosen ones who are living as foreigners in the Dispersion in Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Asia, and Bithynia, [2] according to the foreknowledge of God the Father, in sanctification of the Spirit, that you may obey Jesus Christ and be sprinkled with his blood: Grace to you and peace be multiplied. [3] Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who according to his great mercy became our father again to a living hope through the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead, [4] to an incorruptible and undefiled inheritance that doesn't fade away, reserved in Heaven for you, [5] who by the power of God are guarded through faith for a salvation ready to be revealed in the last time.
	1:21 (Peter)	[17] If you call on him as Father, who without respect of persons judges according to each man's work, pass the time of your living as foreigners here in reverent fear: [18] knowing that you were redeemed, not with corruptible things, with silver or gold, from the useless way of life handed down from your fathers, [19] but with precious blood, as of a faultless and pure lamb, the blood of Christ; [20] who was foreknown indeed before the foundation of the world, but was revealed at the end of times for your sake, [21] who through him are believers in God, who raised him from the dead, and gave him glory; so that your faith and hope might be in God.
	3:21-22 (Peter)	[21] This is a symbol of baptism, which now saves you--not the putting away of the filth of the flesh, but the answer of a good conscience toward God, through the resurrection of Jesus Christ, [22] who is at the right hand of God, having gone into heaven, angels and authorities and powers being made subject to him.

See also: What is the Gospel?

Gospel of Paul vs Peter

Gospel of Jesus vs Paul

Paul and the Gospel on Mars Hill (Areopagus) (with Chart)

Galatians (Beginning)

Romans

Return: Occurrences of Jesus Risen/Resurrected Mentioned by Apostles in the Bible

Return to the beginning:
The Gospel that Paul Preached

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Gospel According to Paul

http://sigler.org/walter/gospel_according_to_paul.htm

Excerpt:

The Greek word for Gospel is EU-ANGGLEION. The prefix EU means WELL or GOOD, as in Matt 25:21. The word ANGGELION means a message, and is connected with the word "LOGOS." 1Jn 1:5. So the Bible definition of the word GOSPEL is "A MESSAGE of GOOD NEWS." The first four Books in the New Testament are called "GOSPELS," but this is not to be considered an exclusive use of this word. In Rom 4:3 it speaks of the GOSPEL that God brought to Abraham. Gen 12:3. Then there is the GOSPEL Gabriel brought to Zachariah in Luke 2:10-12. Paul speaks about the GOSPEL OF THE CIRCUMCISION in Gal 2:7, and also the GOSPEL OF THE UNCIRCUMCISION. In the book of Revelation there is THE EONIAN GOSPEL, to name just a few of the Gospels that are mentioned in the Bible. How interesting it is to note that in none of these "Gospels" is there mention of judgment or a burning eternal hell as part of the message. The Gospel is all GOOD NEWS.

In this study we will deal mainly with the TWO GOSPELS mentioned in Gal 2:7-9. The Gospel of the CIRCUMCISION that was delivered by Peter to the Jewish people, who were the people of the CIRCUMCISION, and the Gospel of the UNCIRCUMCISION given to Paul for the Gentiles or nations. Because of the divergent nature of these two Gospels, it was necessary for the Lord to use two separate men to deliver these messages to men. The separation of these two messages and the men involved, is outlined for us in Gal 2:7-9. It is obvious that Peter, James and John all recognized God′s choice in the matter, so that Paul was sent to the NATIONS, whilst Peter was sent to the CIRCUMCISION.

Paul Preaches the Good News — Good News for Bad People

https://www.gci.org/gospel/badpeople3

Return to the beginning*:
The Gospel that Paul Preached

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

John Macarthur: The Gospel According to Paul (Interview) (links to a video) https://www.biblegateway.com/blog/2017/05/the-gospel-according-to-paul-an-interview-with-john-macarthur

Excerpt:

What did the Apostle Paul mean when he wrote that Christ died for our sins? How is the gospel profound and at the same time simple? What exactly is the gospel?

In this video interview, John MacArthur talks about his book, The Gospel According to Paul: Embracing the Good News at the Heart of Paul's Teaching (Thomas Nelson, 2017).

Romans: The Gospel According to Paul (12-Part Series)
https://gracethrufaith.com/series/romans/
(Note: Pre-millennial, Pre-Tribulation perspective)

Excerpt:

The over riding message, woven through out, is that the Gospel is not a set of laws to be obeyed, nor is it a creed to be accepted. It's not advice to be taken, a religion to be believed, or a social order to be lived. It's a message about a person, a love story written in blood on a cross of wood. It's about God who became a man and died for us so that we could live with Him. Let's begin…

See Section on Romans

See: Paul Receives the Gospel Resurrection Creed within 5 Years of Crucifixion

The Gospel of Jesus the Messiah (Christ)

The Gospel that Paul Preached

Paul and the Gospel on Mars Hill (Areopagus)

The Gospel that Peter Preached

Gospel of Paul vs Peter (includes Charts)

Gospel of Jesus vs Paul

Faith (Pistis and Fides; Roman Imperial vs Christian Faith)

Repentance

What is the Gospel (Various Video Presentations)

Baptism (Christian, Water)

Galatians (Beginning)

Romans

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Paul Testified: Repentance Toward God and Faith in our Lord Jesus

Acts 20:13-36 – The Voyage to Miletus [NET Bible]

[13] We went on ahead [49] to the ship and put out to sea [50] for Assos, [51] intending [52] to take Paul aboard there, for he had arranged it this way. [53] He [54] himself was intending [55] to go there by land. [56] [14] When he met us in Assos, [57] we took him aboard [58] and went to Mitylene. [59] [15] We set sail [60] from there, and on the following day we arrived off Chios. [61] The next day we approached [62] Samos, [63] and the day after that we arrived at Miletus. [64] [16] For Paul had decided to sail past Ephesus [65] so as not to spend time [66] in the province of Asia, [67] for he was hurrying [68] to arrive in Jerusalem, [69] if possible, [70] by the day of Pentecost. [17] From Miletus [71] he sent a message [72] to Ephesus, telling the elders of the church to come to him. [73]

[18] When they arrived, he said to them, "You yourselves know how I lived [74] the whole time I was with you, from the first day I set foot [75] in the province of Asia, [76] [19] serving the Lord with all humility [77] and with tears, and with the trials that happened to me because of the plots [78] of the Jews. [20] You know that I did not hold back from proclaiming [79] to you anything that would be helpful, [80] and from teaching you publicly [81] and from house to house, [21] testifying [82] to both Jews and Greeks about repentance toward God and faith in our Lord Jesus. [83] [22] And now, [84] compelled [85] by the Spirit, I am going to Jerusalem [86] without knowing what will happen to me there, [87] [23] except [88] that the Holy Spirit warns [89] me in town after town [90] that [91] imprisonment [92] and persecutions [93] are waiting for me. [24] But I do not consider my life [94] worth anything [95] to myself, so that [96] I may finish my task [97] and the ministry that I received from the Lord Jesus, to testify to the good news [98] of God's grace.

[25] "And now [99] I know that none [100] of you among whom I went around proclaiming the kingdom [101] will see me [102] again. [26] Therefore I declare [103] to you today that I am innocent [104] of the blood of you all. [105] [27] For I did not hold back from [106] announcing [107] to you the whole purpose [108] of God. [28] Watch out for [109] yourselves and for all the flock of which [110] the Holy Spirit has made you overseers, [111] to shepherd the church of God [112] that he obtained [113] with the blood of his own Son. [114] [29] I know that after I am gone [115] fierce wolves [116] will come in among you, not sparing the flock. [30] Even from among your own group [117] men [118] will arise, teaching perversions of the truth [119] to draw the disciples away after them.
[31] Therefore be alert, [120] remembering that night and day for three years I did not stop warning [121] each one of you with tears. [32] And now I entrust [122] you to God and to the message [123] of his grace. This message [124] is able to build you up and give you an inheritance among all those who are sanctified. [33] I have desired [125] no one's silver or gold or clothing. [34] You yourselves know that these hands of mine [126] provided for my needs and the needs of those who were with me. [35] By all these things, [127] I have shown you that by working in this way we must help [128] the weak, [129] and remember the words of the Lord Jesus that he himself said, 'It is more blessed to give than to receive.'" [130]

[36] When [131] he had said these things, he knelt down [132] with them all and prayed. [37] They all began to weep loudly, [133] and hugged [134] Paul and kissed him, [135] [38] especially saddened [136] by what [137] he had said, that they were not going to see him [138] again. Then they accompanied [139] him to the ship.

Note: Bolded words are added be LY.

Acts 20:17-36 – The Ephesian Elders Exhorted [NKJV]

[17] From Miletus he sent to Ephesus and called for the elders of the church. [18] And when they had come to him, he said to them: "You know, from the first day that I came to Asia, in what manner I always lived among you, [19] "serving the Lord with all humility, with many tears and trials which happened to me by the plotting of the Jews; [20] “how I kept back nothing that was helpful, but proclaimed it to you, and taught you publicly and from house to house, [21] “testifying to Jews, and also to Greeks, repentance toward God and faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ. [22] “And see, now I go bound in the spirit to Jerusalem, not knowing the things that will happen to me there, [23] “except that the Holy Spirit testifies in every city, saying that chains and tribulations await me. [24] “But none of these things move me; nor do I count my life dear to myself, * so that I may finish my race with joy, and the ministry which I received from the Lord Jesus, to testify to the gospel of the grace of God. [25] “And indeed, now I know that you all, among whom I have gone preaching the kingdom of God, will see my face no more. [26] “Therefore I testify to you this day that I am innocent of the blood of all men. [27] “For I have not shunned to declare to you the whole counsel of God. [28] “Therefore take heed to yourselves and to all the flock, among which the Holy Spirit has made you overseers, to shepherd the church of God * which He purchased with His own blood. [29] “For I know this, that after my departure savage wolves will come in among you, not sparing the flock. [30] “Also from among yourselves men will rise up, speaking perverse things, to draw away the disciples after themselves. [31] “Therefore watch, and remember that for three years I did not cease to warn everyone night and day with tears. [32] “So now, brethren, I commend you to God and to the word of His grace, which is able to build you up and give you an inheritance among all those who are sanctified. [33] “I have coveted no one's silver or gold or apparel. [34] “Yes, * you yourselves know that these hands have provided for my necessities, and for those who were with me. [35] “I have shown you in every way, by laboring like this, that you must support the weak. And remember the words of the Lord Jesus, that He said, ‘It is more blessed to give than to receive.’” [36] And when he had said these things, he knelt down and prayed with them all. [37] Then they all wept freely, and fell on Paul's neck and kissed him, [38] sorrowing most of all for the words which he spoke, that they would see his face no more. And they accompanied him to the ship.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Note: Bolded words are added be LY.

Acts 20:20-21

[YLT] [20] how nothing I did keep back of what things are profitable, not to declare to you, and to teach you publicly, and in every house, [21] testifying fully both to Jews and Greeks, toward God reformation, and faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ.

[NLTse] [20] I never shrank back from telling you what you needed to hear, either publicly or in your homes. [21] I have had one message for Jews and Greeks alike–the necessity of repenting from sin and turning to God, and of having faith in our Lord Jesus.

Acts 20:21 Commentary

[NET] [83] tc Several mss, including some of the more important ones (P [74] א A C [D] E 33 36 323 945 1175 1241 1505 1739 pm and a number of versions), read Χριστόν (Christon , “Christ”) at the end of this verse. This word is lacking in B H L P Ψ 614 pm . Although the inclusion is supported by many earlier and better mss, internal evidence is on the side of the omission: In Acts, both “Lord Jesus” and “Lord Jesus Christ” occur, though between 16:31 and the end of the book “Lord Jesus Christ” appears only in 28:31, perhaps as a kind of climactic assertion. Thus, the shorter reading is to be preferred.

sn Repentance toward God and faith in our Lord Jesus. Note the twofold description of the message. It is a turning to God involving faith in Jesus Christ.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

[JFB] 21. …repentance toward God, and faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ —(See note on Ac 5:31). Repentance , as distinguished from faith, is that state of the "honest and good heart" which arises from a discovery of one's contrariety to the righteous demands of the divine law. This is said to be " toward God, " because seeing Him to be the party dishonored by sin, it feels all its acknowledgments and compunctions to be properly due to Him, as the great Lawgiver, and directs them to Him accordingly; condemning, humbling itself, and grieving before Him, looking also to Him as its only Hope of deliverance. Faith is said to be " toward our Lord Jesus Christ, " because in that frame of mind just described it eagerly credits the testimony of relief divinely provided in Christ, gladly embraces the overtures of reconciliation in Him, and directs all its expectations of salvation, from its first stage to its last, to Him as the one appointed Medium of all grace from God to a sinful world. Thus we have here a brief summary of all Gospel preaching. And it is easy to see why repentance is here put before faith; for the former must of necessity precede the latter. There is a repentance subsequent to faith, the fruit of felt pardon and restoration. It was this which drew the tears with which the Saviour's feet were once so copiously moistened. (Lk 7:37,38,47; and compare Eze 16:63). But that is not the light in which it is here presented.

[JNTC] Acts Chapter 20 Commentary

3 A plot against him by the unbelieving Jews . “Unbelieving” is not in the Greek text; see 9:22-23 . We have read of a number of plots, some originated by Jews, some by Gentiles. We have seen in general that sometimes people receive the Gospel and sometimes they reject it (see Yn 7:43 N). Their rejection can be either active or passive, the latter expressing itself as indifference, apathy or a feeling of superiority even while approving of the believers. The following table presents instances of each, showing the verses in the book of Acts and the locations of the Jewish and Gentile responses to the Gospel:

RESPONSE	JEWS	GENTILES
Believing the Gospel	2:41 . Jerusalem 13:43 . Pisidian Antioch 14:1 . Iconium 17:4 . Thessalonica 17:11-12 . Berea 18:8 . Corinth 19:9 . Ephesus 28:24 . Rome	14:1 . Iconium 16:14 , 30 . Philippi 17:4 . Thessalonica 17:11-12 . Berea 17:34 . Athens 18:8 . Corinth 19:17-20 . Ephesus
Rejecting the Gospel (active opposition)	4:1ff ., 5:17ff ., 6:11-14 , 7:54-8:3 , 9:29 , 12:3-4 , 21:27ff . Jerusalem 9:23-24 . Damascus 13:45 , 13:50 , 14:19 . Pisidian Antioch 14:2 , 5 , 19 . Iconium 17:5-8 , 13 . Thessalonica 18:6 , 12-13 . Corinth 19:9 . Ephesus 20:3 . Greece	12:1-4 . Jerusalem 14:5 , 19 . Iconium 16:16ff . Philippi 19:23ff . Ephesus
Rejecting the Gospel (passive opposition, indifference, etc.)	2:47 , 4:21 ?, 5:34-39 . Jerusalem 28:24 . Rome	26:24 , 28 . Caesarea 17:32 . Athens

6 After the days of Matzah , that is, after Passover. See Mt 26:2 N, 26:17 ; 1C 5:6-8 &N. Sha’ul, the observant Jew (13:9), kept Pesach .

7 Motza’ei-Shabbat in Hebrew means “departure of the Sabbath” and refers to Saturday night. The Greek text here says, “the first day of the sabbaton ,” where Greek sabbaton transliterates Hebrew

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Shabbat and may be translated “Sabbath” or “week,” depending on the context. Since Shabbat itself is only one day, “the first day of the sabbaton ” must be the first day of the week.

But what was meant by “the first day of the week”? Or, to make the question's relevance to Messianic Judaism clearer, were the believers meeting on Saturday night or on Sunday night? (It is clear from the verse that the meeting was in the evening.) A Saturday night meeting would fit more naturally with Jewish Shabbat observance, wherein the restful spirit of Shabbat is often preserved into Saturday evening, after the official end of Shabbat itself, which occurs after sunset when it gets dark enough to see three stars. It would be natural for Jewish believers who had rested on Shabbat with the rest of the Jewish community to assemble afterwards to celebrate their common faith in Yeshua the Messiah. The Gentile believers who came along later would join in the already established practice, especially since many of them would have been “God-fearers” (10:2) already accustomed to following the lead of the Jews in whose company they had chosen to place themselves. And since by Jewish reckoning days commence after sunset, the sense of the Greek text seems best rendered by “ Motza'ei-Shabbat, ” not “Sunday.”

In various places this commentary notes the Christian Church's tendency to expunge Jewish influences, and I think an instance arises when the present verse is understood to refer to Sunday night. A Sunday night meeting would imply a break of one full day of work between the Jewish Shabbat and the gathering at which Sha'ul spoke. Although Sha'ul cautions Gentiles against being “Judaized” into legalistic observance of the Jewish Sabbath (Co 2:16-17 &NN, and possibly Ga 4:8-10 &N), although he asks the believers in Corinth to set aside money for the Jewish poor of Jerusalem also on “the first day of the sabbaton ” (1C 16:2 &N), and although Yochanan at Rv 1:10 speaks of what most translators render as “the Lord's day” (I translate it “the Day of the Lord”; see note there), nevertheless the meeting in Ephesus must have been on Saturday night. For in this city, as in other places, Jewish believers constituted the core of the congregation—Sha'ul “took the talmidim with him” from the synagogue (19:8-9), with many Gentiles coming to faith later (19:17 , 20). The Jewish believers, as explained, would have been accustomed to prolonging Shabbat , so that they would probably not have minded Sha'ul's talking till midnight. A Saturday night meeting would continue the God-oriented spirit of Shabbat , rather than require the believers to shift their concern from workaday matters, as would be the case on Sunday night.

I do not find the New Testament commanding a specific day of the week for worship. There can be no objection whatever to the practice adopted later by a Gentile-dominated Church of celebrating “the Lord's Day” on Sunday, including Sunday night; but this custom must not be read back into New Testament times. On the other hand, Messianic Jews who worship on Saturday night rather than Sunday can find warrant for their practice in this verse.

8-9 The many oil lamps burning made the room smoky and stuffy and depleted the oxygen. I suppose Eutychus was sitting on the window sill to get some air. Unfortunately it still didn't keep him from going sound asleep and falling to his death.

10 Compare Kefa's raising Tavita from the dead (9:35-41 ; see 19:11-12) and Yeshua's raising three people from the dead; see Yn 11:17 N.

16 Shavu'ot (“Weeks,” Pentecost; see 2:1). Sha'ul's desire to hurry to Yerushalayim for Shavu'ot shows that as a Messianic Jew he remained devoted to the Torah and to Jewish practice (see 13:9). We can see this also from the fact that on another occasion he felt he had to justify a decision to remain in Ephesus and not go up to Jerusalem for this pilgrim festival (1C 16:8-9 &N).

18-19 You yourselves know how...I was with you...serving...with much humility. Sha'ul does not indulge in self-praise but appeals to the judgment of the Ephesian congregation's elders, who had known and experienced him for three years (v. 31). While often accused, even in the New Testament itself (2C 10:1-13:10), of pride in his accomplishments, nevertheless, like Moses, who could write that he was “the meekest of all men on the face of the earth” (Numbers 12:3 , Mt 11:28-30 &N), Sha'ul had reached a point where he could speak of himself without either undue praise or undue modesty. (He had also learned not to be unduly affected by physical circumstances and possessions, Pp 4:12 .)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

21 The Gospel is the same for Jews as for non-Jews: repentance and trust in God through Yeshua the Messiah. The Two-Covenant theory (see Yn 14:6 N [see below]) is wrong.

22-23 See 19:21 for Sha'ul's first statement of this intention, and 21:4 , 10 -14for further interaction with the Holy Spirit on the matter. The rest of the book of Acts deals with the dramatic outworking of this plan and premonition.

26-27 I am innocent of the blood of all. To the unbelieving Jews of Corinth Sha'ul had said, "Your blood be on your own heads; for my part, I am clean" (18:6 &N). At the outset the Corinthians had refused to hear him; these Ephesian elders, attentive till now, still risk falling away and having blood guilt on their heads. The serious problems that will arise in Ephesus after he leaves (vv. 28-31) he has tried to avert by proclaiming the whole plan of God ; their responsibility is to remain in "the care of the Lord and the message of his love and kindness" (v. 32).

33-35 Sha'ul earned his own living and did not become a burden to the Ephesians (see 18:3 &N).

35 The words of the Lord Yeshua himself, " There is more happiness in giving than in receiving. " These words of Yeshua's appear nowhere else in the New Testament—that is, they are not found in the Gospels. There are many apocryphal New Testament books which contain numerous purported other sayings of Yeshua. See Lk 2:52 N.

36 Sha'ul kneeled down with them all and prayed. See Lk 22:41 &N.

[JNTC] Commentary re: John 14:6

Yeshua said, " I AM the Way—and the Truth and the Life; no one comes to the Father except through me. " This challenge strikes at the heart of non-Messianic Judaism's denial of Yeshua as Messianic mediator. Some try to ignore this challenge by denying its authenticity: either the Gospel of Yochanan is historically untrustworthy or the words are not Yeshua's but placed in his mouth by early church theologians. This view, of course, denies the divine inspiration of the New Testament.

More interesting is Two-Covenant theology, originated by Rabbi Moshe Ben-Maimon ("The RaMBaM ," Maimonides, 1135-1204), pioneered in this century by the non-Messianic Jewish philosopher Franz Rosenzweig (1886-1929), and since elaborated by such liberal Christian theologians as Reinhold Niebuhr and James Parkes. This theory holds that the Jewish people were brought close to God by means of the covenant with Avraham and the Torah of Moshe, so that they have no need to "come" to the Father through Yeshua or anyone else, because they are already with him. Accordingly, Yeshua's word is not for Jews but for Gentiles and is to be understood thusly: "I am the way, the truth and the life; and no Gentile comes to the Father except through me."

The Two-Covenant theory may be understood as a modern variant of the Talmudic doctrine stating that Jews are bound by the Torah of Moshe, but Gentiles share in the world to come if they obey the seven "Noachide laws" given after the flood to Noah for all mankind—prohibitions against idolatry, murder, incest, theft, blasphemy and eating the flesh of a living animal; and the positive command to promote justice, i.e., to institute government (Sanhedrin 56a, cited and discussed in Ac 15:20 N).

The Two-Covenant theory enables the Jewish Community to live in apparent peace (from its own point of view) with its Christian neighbors by alleviating the pressure on Judaism to downgrade Jesus, the New Testament and Christianity; for a non-Messianic Jew can say, “We Jews have our way, Judaism; and you Gentiles have your way, Christianity. We will each serve God best by following the way provided for us. It is a manifestation of God's grace that he has provided Jesus for you Gentiles and Torah for us Jews.” Thus Jesus can be held in high regard, because his claims are not taken as posing any threat to the structure of non-Messianic Judaism.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Unfortunately for this theory, it does not fit the New Testament facts at all. The “tolerance for Christianity” that it produces is not tolerance of what the New Testament states is true. For Yeshua was a Jew who presented himself to Jews, and these Jews remained Jewish after they came to trust in him. He rarely presented the Gospel to Gentiles; indeed, it was only with difficulty and supernatural intervention that his Jewish disciples came to realize that Gentiles could join God's people through trusting Yeshua without converting to Judaism (see Acts 10-11, 15). In the book of Acts Kefa's initial sermons presented Yeshua to Jews as the Jewish Messiah (Ac 2:14-40, 3:12-26; especially Ac 2:36 &N, 3:25-26), as did Sha’ul's (Ac 9:20-22, 13:16-43). In his letter to the Romans Sha’ul states that salvation through Yeshua is God's Good News “to the Jew especially”; however, since he is stressing that Gentiles too may be part of the people of God, he immediately adds, “but equally to the Gentile” (Ro 1:16). In sum, replacing Yeshua's “No one comes to the Father except through me” with “No Gentile comes...” does unacceptable violence to the plain sense of the text and to the whole New Testament.

Actually Rosenzweig's theory reflects his own personal history. A German Jew raised in an assimilated family, he seriously considered the claims of Christianity, particularly in an exchange of letters with a Jewish Christian named Eugen Rosenstock. He was on the verge of “converting to Christianity”—I put the phrase in quotation marks to emphasize that conversion in Europe, with its state churches, could never have been perceived as a Jewish thing to do—when he decided to give traditional Judaism one last chance. He went to a synagogue on Yom-Kippur, experienced the resonant depths of meaning in the liturgy of the Machzor (prayer book for the High Holy Days), and decided to cast his lot with his ancient heritage and with his own people. A noble sentiment, but what a pity that there did not exist in his society a vibrant Messianic Judaism which he could have perceived as being just as Jewish as what he did participate in, while being coupled with the efficacious spiritual power that God gives only through Yeshua, who is the Way, the Truth and the Life!

If the words of this verse are authentically Yeshua's, and if the Two-Covenant theory does not fit the facts, then we are left with a statement whose audacity, breadth, apparent arrogance and sheer chutzpah pose a serious problem. What exclusivity, what intolerance for a religion to accept Yeshua's claim to be the only way to God! It requires a decision either to acknowledge Yeshua's position as the Messiah, the Son of God, or to reject him as a madman or a fraud and to reject religion centering on him as deceptive at best. There is no tertium quid (see 5:17-18). For if one holds that Yeshua was a “great teacher,” the unavoidable question is, “Then why don't you believe and act on his ‘great teaching,’ ‘ I AM the Way—and the Truth and the Life; no one comes to the Father except through me ’?”

Messianic Judaism and Christianity, which accept this teaching, are indeed in a sense exclusive, for they deny that there are other men, other religious leaders, who have come from God and paid the death penalty for mankind's sins. In this sense, then, Yeshua is the way; and it is not true that “on the mountaintop all paths meet,” for only Yeshua's path arrives there. Nevertheless this exclusivity is tempered by three factors:

1. The path is open to everyone (Ro 10:9-13).

2. 2.Yeshua's path sets no precondition except turning from sin to the one true God. In particular it does not require Gentiles to stop being Gentiles or Jews to stop being Jews.

3. 3.It is God's one true path; it exists. This simply means that, rather than complaining about exclusivity, one should be profoundly grateful to God for providing a way out of the sinful condition that besets every human being.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

True exclusivity would be either God's providing no path whatsoever, instead of one which suffices for all, or providing it for some but not for everyone. To want some way other than that which God has offered is simply to want to play God, to design one's own remedy for sin, and ultimately not to take the evil of sin seriously (on the New Testament's remedy for sin, see Ro 5:12-21 &N). This is true arrogance and chutzpah.

Messianic Judaism and Christianity, properly taught and practiced, are intolerant of sin and of the just mentioned varieties of arrogance and chutzpah, but not of other religions, in the sense usually meant. Messianic Jews and Gentile Christians acknowledge not only the freedom of religion guaranteed by the constitutions of nations but also the de facto right and capacity each individual has to seek the truth as best he can. Other religions have the right, within the framework of law, to communicate their views, to seek, gain and hold adherents, and to minister to them. This is tolerance. But tolerance does not and cannot mean agreeing that other religions are true.

The positive message of this verse is available to everyone. Yeshua is the Way by which everyone comes to the Father: his work and his very person both show us and give us all we need to be in a right personal relationship with God. More than that, he is not merely a way, a path, but the goal itself—Truth and eternal Life. And all this is conditioned only on our holding to our trust in him, so that we keep God's commands.

For more see the pamphlet by the Messianic Jew Louis Goldberg, Are There Two Ways of Atonement? (Baltimore: Lederer Publications, 1990).

The Gospel of Jesus the Messiah (Christ)

The Gospel that Paul Preached

Paul and the Gospel on Mars Hill (Areopagus)

The Gospel that Peter Preached

Gospel of Paul vs Peter (includes Charts)

Gospel of Jesus vs Paul

Faith (Pistis and Fides; Roman Imperial vs Christian Faith)

Repentance

What is the Gospel (Various Video Presentations)

Baptism (Christian, Water)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Gospel that Peter Preached

See also and compare:
The Gospel that Paul Preached

Peter Preaches The Simple Gospel [Recommended]

http://www.jesusisprecious.org/articles/simple_gospel.htm

Excerpt:

…This leads me to the heart of this article that I'm writing. In a vision God appeared to Cornelius and told him to go see the Apostle Peter, so that Peter could witness the Gospel to him. Here is the Biblical account of the matter . . .

> Acts 10:30-45, "And Cornelius said, Four days ago I was fasting until this hour; and at the ninth hour I prayed in my house, and, behold, a man stood before me in bright clothing, And said, Cornelius, thy prayer is heard, and thine alms are had in remembrance in the sight of God. Send therefore to Joppa, and call hither Simon, whose surname is Peter; he is lodged in the house of one Simon a tanner by the sea side: who, when he cometh, shall speak unto thee. Immediately therefore I sent to thee; and thou hast well done that thou art come. Now therefore are we all here present before God, to hear all things that are commanded thee of God. Then Peter opened his mouth, and said, Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons: But in every nation he that feareth him, and worketh righteousness, is accepted with him. The word which God sent unto the children of Israel, preaching peace by Jesus Christ: (he is Lord of all:) That word, I say, ye know, which was published throughout all Judaea, and began from Galilee, after the baptism which John preached; How God anointed Jesus of Nazareth with the Holy Ghost and with power: who went about doing good, and healing all that were oppressed of the devil; for God was with him. And we are witnesses of all things which he did both in the land of the Jews, and in Jerusalem; whom they slew and hanged on a tree: Him God raised up the third day, and shewed him openly; Not to all the people, but unto witnesses chosen before of God, even to us, who did eat and drink with him after he rose from the dead. And he commanded us to preach unto the people, and to testify that it is he which was ordained of God to be the Judge of quick and dead. To him give all the prophets witness, that through his name whosoever believeth in him shall receive remission of sins. While Peter yet spake these words, the Holy Ghost fell on all them which heard the word. And they of the circumcision which believed were astonished, as many as came with Peter, because that on the Gentiles also was poured out the gift of the Holy Ghost." [KJV] [See also: NET version]

What I want you to notice, and this is my sermon, is the simple plan of salvation that the Apostle Peter gave to Cornelius. Remember, God sent Cornelius to go find Peter, so that he could learn how to be saved and go to Heaven.

Continued…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Carefully notice that:

- Peter didn't tell Cornelius to follow Jesus.
- Peter didn't tell Cornelius to surrender all to God.
- Peter didn't tell Cornelius to get water baptized.
- Peter didn't tell Cornelius to make Jesus his Lord.
- Peter didn't tell Cornelius to join a church.
- Peter didn't tell Cornelius to get religion.
- Peter didn't tell Cornelius to publicly confess Christ as his Savior.
- Peter didn't tell Cornelius to invite Jesus into his heart.
- Peter didn't tell Cornelius to start a relationship with Jesus.
- Peter didn't tell Cornelius to change his life.
- Peter didn't tell Cornelius to turn away from his sins.
- Peter didn't tell Cornelius to forsake the world.

In fact, Peter DIDN'T TELL CORNELIUS TO DO ANYTHING!!! Peter simply told the story of Jesus of Nazareth, Who went about doing good and healing the sick, but the unbelieving Jews had Him crucified on a cross for our sins. Jesus bled and DIED on the cross. He was BURIED. And then Christ miraculously RESURRECTED bodily from the dead three days later. This is "the Gospel" [i.e., Good News] according to the Holy Scriptures [as preached by Paul]:

> 1st Corinthians 15:1-4, "Moreover, brethren, I declare unto you the gospel which I preached unto you, which also ye have received, and wherein ye stand; By which also ye are saved, if ye keep in memory what I preached unto you, unless ye have believed in vain. For I delivered unto you first of all that which I also received, how that Christ died for our sins according to the scriptures; And that he was buried, and that he rose again the third day according to the scriptures." [emphasis added]

See also:
The Gospel that Paul Preached

In Acts 10:30-45 Peter said that anyone who believes on the name of Jesus, Who died on the cross for our sins and raised up the third day, shall receive a pardon for their sins. That was the simple Gospel message, which Cornelius simply and quietly BELIEVED and was immediately saved. Amen!!! Whew, that's good stuff! Peter never told Cornelius to do anything to be saved, he simply preached the Gospel of Christ's death on the cross for our sins, His burial, and bodily resurrection the third day. The very moment that Cornelius believed, he was forever born-again and saved. The hardest part about salvation for people to understand is that you get it by DOING NOTHING!!! You simply REST COMPLETELY in the finished work of Jesus Christ, and then God does the saving... ALL OF IT!!!

Every false religion in the world teaches a whole bunch of things that a person must DO to get to Heaven. But as we just saw for ourselves in the wonderful Scriptures in Acts 10:30-45, Peter simply preached the truth of the Gospel, and Cornelius BELIEVED and was instantly and forever born-again and saved. Salvation is not doing your best, it is having Christ's best put to your account through receiving Him by faith. God will not save anyone who is trying to be saved, He will only save those who are trusting to be saved. Religion is man trying to reach God through human effort, but Christianity is God trying to reach man by the sacrifice of His only begotten Son on the cross.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Chart of Peter's Gospel Presentation (For comparison with Paul, see: Gospel of Paul vs Peter)

Peter (Acts 10:34-38, 39--45)
God does not show favoritism in dealing with people, but in every nation the person who fears him and does what is right is welcomed before him. You know the message he sent to the people of Israel, proclaiming the good news of peace through Jesus Christ (he is Lord of all)— you know what happened throughout Judea, beginning from Galilee after the baptism that John announced: with respect to Jesus from Nazareth, that God anointed him with the Holy Spirit and with power. He went around doing good and healing all who were oppressed by the devil, because God was with him.
We are witnesses of all the things he did both in Judea and in Jerusalem.
They killed him by hanging him on a tree [cross] but God raised him up on the third day and caused him to be seen, not by all the people, but by us, the witnesses God had already chosen, who ate and drank with him after he rose from the dead.
He commanded us to preach to the people and to warn them that he is the one appointed by God as judge of the living and the dead.
About him all the prophets testify, that everyone who believes in him receives forgiveness of sins through his name

Legend:

	Saved / Believes in Jesus:
	Died/Sins/Scriptures
	Buried/Resurrection
	Witnesses
	Why Preach
	Appointed by God / Lord

Return to the beginning:
The Gospel that Peter Preached

See also and compare:
The Gospel that Paul Preached

See also*: Gospel of Paul vs Peter

Return to the beginning: Gospel of Jesus the Messiah (Christ)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

NET Version of Acts 10:30-45…

[30] Cornelius [79] replied, [80] "Four days ago at this very hour, at three o'clock in the afternoon, [81] I was praying in my house, and suddenly [82] a man in shining clothing stood before me [31] and said, 'Cornelius, your prayer has been heard and your acts of charity [83] have been remembered before God. [84]
[32] Therefore send to Joppa and summon Simon, who is called Peter. This man is staying as a guest in the house of Simon the tanner, [85] by the sea.' [33] Therefore I sent for you at once, and you were kind enough to come. [86] So now we are all here in the presence of God [87] to listen [88] to everything the Lord has commanded you to say to us." [89]

[34] Then Peter started speaking: [90] "I now truly understand that God does not show favoritism in dealing with people, [91] [35] but in every nation [92] the person who fears him [93] and does what is right [94] is welcomed before him. [36] You know [95] the message [96] he sent to the people [97] of Israel, proclaiming the good news of peace [98] through [99] Jesus Christ [100] (he is Lord [101] of all) – [37] you know what happened throughout Judea, beginning from Galilee after the baptism that John announced: [102] [38] with respect to Jesus from Nazareth, [103] that [104] God anointed him with the Holy Spirit and with power. He [105] went around doing good and healing all who were oppressed by the devil, [106] because God was with him. [107] [39] We [108] are witnesses of all the things he did both in Judea [109] and in Jerusalem. [110] They [111] killed him by hanging him on a tree, [112] [40] but [113] God raised him up on the third day and caused him to be seen, [114] [41] not by all the people, but by us, the witnesses God had already chosen, [115] who ate and drank [116] with him after he rose from the dead. [42] He [117] commanded us to preach to the people and to warn [118] them [119] that he is the one [120] appointed [121] by God as judge [122] of the living and the dead. [43] About him all the prophets testify, [123] that everyone who believes in him receives forgiveness of sins [124] through his name."

[44] While Peter was still speaking these words, the Holy Spirit fell on [125] all those who heard the message. [126] [See following verses 45-48, below]

Return to:
The Gospel that Peter Preached

Some verse notes:

[89] tn The words "to say to us" are not in the Greek text, but are implied. Cornelius knows Peter is God's representative, bringing God's message.

[90] tn Grk "Opening his mouth Peter said" (a Semitic idiom for beginning to speak in a somewhat formal manner). The participle ἀνοίξας (anoixas) has been translated as a finite verb due to requirements of contemporary English style.

[91] tn Grk "God is not one who is a respecter of persons," that is, "God is not one to show partiality" (cf. BDAG 887 s.v. προσωπολήμπτης). L&N 88.239 translates this verse "I realize that God does not show favoritism (in dealing with people)." The underlying Hebrew idiom includes the personal element ("respecter of persons") so the phrase "in dealing with people" is included in the present translation. It fits very well with the following context and serves to emphasize the relational component of God's lack of partiality. The latter is a major theme in the NT: Ro 2:11; Ep 2:11-22; Col 3:25; Jas 2:1; 1Pe 1:17. This was the lesson of Peter's vision. (see previous verses of chapter, below)

[101] sn He is Lord of all. Though a parenthetical remark, this is the theological key to the speech. Jesus is Lord of all, so the gospel can go to all. The rest of the speech proclaims Jesus' authority.

[103] sn The somewhat awkward naming of Jesus as from Nazareth here is actually emphatic. He is the key subject of these key events.

[106] sn All who were oppressed by the devil. Note how healing is tied to the cosmic battle present in creation. Christ's power overcomes the devil and his forces, which seek to destroy humanity.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

[112] tn Or “by crucifying him” (“hang on a tree” is by the time of the 1st century an idiom for crucifixion). The allusion is to the judgment against Jesus as a rebellious figure, appealing to the language of Dt 21:23. The Jewish leadership has badly “misjudged” Jesus.

[113] tn The conjunction “but” is not in the Greek text, but the contrast is clearly implied in the context. This is technically asyndeton , or lack of a connective, in Greek.

[120] tn Grk “that this one is the one,” but this is awkward in English and has been simplified to “that he is the one.”

[121] tn Or “designated.” BDAG 723 s.v. ὁρίζω 2.b has “ the one appointed by God as judge ” for this phrase.

[122] sn Jesus has divine authority as judge over the living and the dead: Ac 17:26-31; Ro 14:9; 1Th 5:9-10; 1Ti 4:1; 1Pe 4:5.

[123] tn Or “All the prophets testify about him.” Although modern English translations tend to place “about him” after “testify” (so NIV, NRSV) the phrase “about him” has been left at the beginning of v. 43 for emphatic reasons.

[124] sn Forgiveness of sins. See Lk 24:47; also Ac 14:23; 19:4; 9:42; 11:17; 16:31. The gospel is present in the prophetic promise, Ro 1:1-7. The message is in continuity with the ancient hope.

Following verses 45-48:

[45] The [127] circumcised believers [128] who had accompanied Peter were greatly astonished [129] that [130] the gift of the Holy Spirit [131] had been poured out [132] even on the Gentiles, [46] for they heard them speaking in tongues and praising [133] God. Then Peter said, [47] “No one can withhold the water for these people to be baptized, who have received the Holy Spirit just as we did, [134] can he?” [135] [48] So he gave orders to have them baptized [136] in the name of Jesus Christ. [137] Then they asked him to stay for several days. [back]

Preceeding verses 10:1-29:

[10:1] Now there was a man in Caesarea [1] named Cornelius, a centurion [2] of what was known as the Italian Cohort. [3] [2] He [4] was a devout, God-fearing man, [5] as was all his household; he did many acts of charity for the people [6] and prayed to God regularly. [3] About three o'clock one afternoon [7] he saw clearly in a vision an angel of God [8] who came in [9] and said to him, “Cornelius.” [4] Staring at him and becoming greatly afraid, Cornelius [10] replied, [11] “What is it, Lord?” The angel [12] said to him, “Your prayers and your acts of charity [13] have gone up as a memorial [14] before God. [5] Now [15] send men to Joppa [16] and summon a man named Simon, [17] who is called Peter. [6] This man is staying as a guest with a man named Simon, a tanner, [18] whose house is by the sea.” [7] When the angel who had spoken to him departed, Cornelius [19] called two of his personal servants [20] and a devout soldier from among those who served him, [21] [8] and when he had explained everything to them, he sent them to Joppa.

[9] About noon [22] the next day, while they were on their way and approaching [23] the city, Peter went up on the roof [24] to pray. [10] He became hungry and wanted to eat, but while they were preparing the meal, a trance came over him. [25] [11] He [26] saw heaven [27] opened [28] and an object something like a large sheet [29] descending, [30] being let down to earth [31] by its four corners. [12] In it [32] were all kinds of four-footed animals and reptiles [33] of the earth and wild birds. [34] [13] Then [35] a voice said [36] to him, “Get up, Peter; slaughter [37] and eat!” [14] But Peter said, “Certainly not, Lord, for I have never eaten anything defiled and ritually unclean!” [38] [15] The voice [39] spoke to him again, a second time, “What God has made clean, you must not consider [40] ritually unclean!” [41] [16] This happened three times, and immediately the object was taken up into heaven. [42]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

[17] Now while Peter was puzzling over [43] what the vision he had seen could signify, the men sent by Cornelius had learned where Simon's house was [44] and approached [45] the gate. [18] They [46] called out to ask if Simon, known as Peter, [47] was staying there as a guest. [19] While Peter was still thinking seriously about [48] the vision, the Spirit said to him, “Look! Three men are looking for you. [20] But get up, [49] go down, and accompany them without hesitation, [50] because I have sent them.” [21] So Peter went down [51] to the men and said, “Here I am, [52] the person you're looking for. Why have you come?” [22] They said, “Cornelius the centurion, [53] a righteous [54] and God-fearing man, well spoken of by the whole Jewish nation, [55] was directed by a holy angel to summon you to his house and to hear a message [56] from you.” [23] So Peter [57] invited them in and entertained them as guests.

On the next day he got up and set out [58] with them, and some of the brothers from Joppa [59] accompanied him. [24] The following day [60] he entered Caesarea. [61] Now Cornelius was waiting anxiously [62] for them and had called together his relatives and close friends. [25] So when [63] Peter came in, Cornelius met [64] him, fell [65] at his feet, and worshiped [66] him. [26] But Peter helped him up, [67] saying, “Stand up. I too am a mere mortal.” [68] [27] Peter [69] continued talking with him as he went in, and he found many people gathered together. [70] [28] He said to them, “You know that [71] it is unlawful [72] for a Jew [73] to associate with or visit a Gentile, [74] yet God has shown me that I should call no person [75] defiled or ritually unclean. [76] [29] Therefore when you sent for me, [77] I came without any objection. Now may I ask why [78] you sent for me?”

The Gospel of Jesus the Messiah (Christ)

The Gospel that Paul Preached

Paul and the Gospel on Mars Hill (Areopagus)

The Gospel that Peter Preached

Gospel of Paul vs Peter (includes Charts)

Gospel of Jesus vs Paul

Faith (Pistis and Fides; Roman Imperial vs Christian Faith)

Repentance

What is the Gospel (Various Video Presentations)

Baptism (Christian, Water)

See also: Occurrences of Jesus Risen/Resurrected Mentioned by Apostles in the Bible

See more regarding the Gospels of Paul and Peter…

Galatians (Beginning)

Romans

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Gospel of Paul vs Peter [See also: Gospel Paul Preached and Peter Preached]

In the following chart we are comparing what Paul considered to be the Gospel with the Gospel Peter preached.. (See the additional charts of what Paul also preached in different situations following this.)

Paul (1 Corinthians 15:1-2, 3-11, 20-28)	Peter (Acts 10:34-38, 39--45)
Now I want to make clear for you, brothers and sisters, the gospel that I preached to you, that you received and on which you stand, and by which you are being saved, if you hold firmly to the message I preached to you – unless you believed in vain.
For I passed on to you as of first importance what I also received –
	God does not show favoritism in dealing with people, but in every nation the person who fears him and does what is right is welcomed before him. You know the message he sent to the people of Israel, proclaiming the good news of peace through Jesus Christ (he is Lord of all)—
	you know what happened throughout Judea, beginning from Galilee after the baptism that John announced: with respect to Jesus from Nazareth, that God anointed him with the Holy Spirit and with power. He went around doing good and healing all who were oppressed by the devil, because God was with him.
	We are witnesses of all the things he did both in Judea and in Jerusalem.
that Christ died for our sins according to the scriptures,	They killed him by hanging him on a tree [cross]
and he was buried, and that he was raised on the third day according to the scriptures	but God raised him up on the third day
he appeared to Cephas [Peter], then to the twelve. Then he appeared to more than five hundred of the brothers and sisters at one time, most of whom are still alive, though some have fallen asleep. Then he appeared to James, then to all the apostles.	and caused him to be seen, not by all the people, but by us, the witnesses God had already chosen, who ate and drank with him after he rose from the dead.
Last of all, as though to one born at the wrong time, he appeared to me also. For I am the least of the apostles, unworthy to be called an apostle, because I persecuted the church of God. But by the grace of God I am what I am, and his grace to me has not been in vain. In fact, I worked harder than all of them – yet not I, but the grace of God with me.
Whether then it was I or they, this is the way we preach and this is the way you believed.
	He commanded us to preach to the people and to warn them that he is the one appointed by God as judge of the living and the dead.

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

	About him all the prophets testify, that everyone who believes in him receives forgiveness of sins through his name
But now Christ has been raised from the dead, the firstfruits of those who have fallen asleep. For since death came through a man, the resurrection of the dead also came through a man. For just as in Adam all die, so also in Christ all will be made alive. But each in his own order: Christ, the firstfruits; then when Christ comes, those who belong to him. Then comes the end, when he hands over the kingdom to God the Father, when he has brought to an end all rule and all authority and power. For he must reign until he has put all his enemies under his feet. The last enemy to be eliminated is death. For he has put everything in subjection under his feet. But when it says "everything" has been put in subjection, it is clear that this does not include the one who put everything in subjection to him. And when all things are subjected to him, then the Son himself will be subjected to the one who subjected everything to him, so that God may be all in all.	Legend: Saved / Believes in Jesus: Died/Sins/Scriptures Buried/Resurrection Witnesses Why Preach Appointed by God / Lord Notes: Order does not matter. No gospel presentation is complete without emphasizing the resurrection of Jesus and that Jesus was appointed ruler (Lord) and judge over all. Exact wording is not required as long as the essence of the gospel is clear and complete.

Note: Keep in mind that Paul was writing (above) to people already saved by his preaching of the Gospel and reflecting back on what he originally shared with them, while Peter was talking to those not yet saved – until he completes his presentation – whereupon they are saved.

Summary of above (and following) charts:

Everyone is saved who believes in Jesus Christ: that He…

	Died on a cross / for the Forgiveness of our Sins [as foretold by OT Prophets in Scripture],
	He was Buried / then was Raised up on the 3rd day (Resurrection) [as per OT Prophets].
	Witnesses after Jesus arose: Apostles ate and drank with Him; over 500 men/women saw.
	Why Preach? – commanded by Jesus; of first/highest importance; and to warn you that Jesus was appointed [Lord] by God to reign over everything and to judge the living and the dead

["Christ" = from Christos, the Greek word for the Hebrew "Messiah" = "Anointed One of God"; i.e., Jesus the Messiah]

Additional (following) Charts:
Romans 1:1-5

Acts 17:22-31 (Mars Hill)

See more regarding the Gospels of Paul and Peter on next page…

The Gospel of Jesus the Messiah (Christ)

The Gospel that Paul Preached

Paul and the Gospel on Mars Hill (Areopagus)

The Gospel that Peter Preached

Gospel of Paul vs Peter (includes Charts)

Gospel of Jesus vs Paul

Faith (Pistis and Fides; Roman Imperial vs Christian Faith)

Repentance Baptism (Christian, Water)

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

In addition to the above example of 1 Corinthians 15:3-11, Paul mentions aspects of the Gospel he preached numerous times in his letters (see: The Gospel According to Paul for list).

Another example is in Romains:

Romans 1:1-5

[1] From Paul, a slave of Christ Jesus, called to be an apostle, set apart for the gospel of God.
[2] This gospel he promised beforehand through his prophets in the holy scriptures,
[3] concerning his Son who was a descendant of David with reference to the flesh,
[4] who was appointed the Son-of-God-in-power according to the Holy Spirit by the resurrection from the dead, Jesus Christ our Lord.
[5] Through him we have received grace and our apostleship to bring about the obedience of faith among all the Gentiles on behalf of his name.

The Gospel as mentioned in this example from Romans was directed to those that had already accepted the Gospel and did not need proof, just a reminder of what they had believed. In 1 Corinthians, he was summarizing the Gospels that he had shared to them and other non-belivers. The example from Acts 10 is a reporting of what Peter actually said to a Gentile who had not heard the Gospel.

Keeping that mind, here is the Romans example in similar form to the table above. Regarding "witnesses", it may be a 'stretch', but since witnesses to confirm his message were not necessary to be mentioned (as they had already accepted), and were not incorporated into this letter, one might go out on a limb and use the witness to the natural law that is provided by our conscious (2:15) and the witness of the Spirit to our spirit (8:16) that Paul discusses later in the epistle.

From Paul, a slave of Christ Jesus, called to be an apostle, set apart for the Gospel of God.
This gospel he promised beforehand through his prophets in the holy scriptures; concerning his Son who was a descendant of David with reference to the flesh,
Who was appointed the Son-of-God-in-power according to the Holy Spirit by the resurrection from the dead,
Jesus Christ our Lord.
Through him we have received grace
And our apostleship to bring about the obedience of faith among all the Gentiles on behalf of his name.
Witness of the natural law by our conscious; the witness of the Spirit to our spirit.

Here's another short recap of the Gospel by Paul (again, retold to believers) …

2 Timothy 2:8-10

[8] Remember Jesus Christ, raised from the dead, a descendant of David; such is my gospel, [9] for which I suffer hardship to the point of imprisonment as a criminal, but God's message is not imprisoned!
[10] So I endure all things for the sake of those chosen by God, that they too may obtain salvation in Christ Jesus and its eternal glory.

See also: Occurrences of Jesus Risen/Resurrected Mentioned by Apostles in the Bible

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Paul and the Gospel on Mars Hill (Areopagus) Athens, Greece Act 17:16-34

Luke's account of Paul's comments on Athen's Areopagus (Mars Hill) is as much about apologetics and evangelism as it is the Gospel.

Here the basic Gospel model highlighted in previous pages needed to be 'augmented''/adjusted as the Greeks in Athens had no frame of reference of the Jewish scriptures from which to understand who Jesus was and what he had accomplished. Here Paul needed to adapt his presentation to the situation.

For corresponding Chart see*:
Table Breadown of the Message by Paul on Mars Hill (Areopagus)

Background

The Unknown God (by David Padfield)
http://padfield.com/2000/unknown.html

Excerpt:

Luke's estimation of the residents of Berea was that they "were more fair-minded than those in Thessalonica, in that they received the word with all readiness, and searched the Scriptures daily to find out whether these things were so" (Acts 17:11). Then the Jews from Thessalonica came to Berea and stirred up the crowds again and the brethren "who conducted Paul brought him to Athens" (Acts 17:15). The distance between Berea and Athens was 250 Roman miles -- a journey of three days by sea or twelve days by land.

Idolatry In Athens

Supposing Paul arrived by ship, he would have landed at Piraeus and would have gone north from the harbor and entered Athens by the "Double Gate" on the west side of the city, where four highways converged. Before passing the gate, however, he would have gone through an extensive cemetery, where he would have noticed the graves of many distinguished Athenian citizens, the most famous being Menander, the son of Diopithes.

Passing through the gates, Paul would have seen the Temple of Demeter with statues of the goddess and her daughter. A little further on he would have passed the statue of Poseidon hurling his trident. Beyond this, he would have seen the statues of Healing Athena, Zeus, Apollo, and Hermes standing near the Sanctuary of Dionysus.

While Paul waited for Silas and Timothy, whom he had instructed to join him as soon as possible (Acts 17:15), he must have explored the city in the same manner in which tourists do today. He could have visited the Royal Colonnade (or Stoa), the Metroum (Metroon) or Sanctuary of the Mother of the Gods with her image.

In the agora the Apostle would have passed what sometimes called "the Music Hall at Athens," the odeon, a small roofed theater. In the agora the Athenians had an altar of Mercy, which stood in a grove of laurels and olives. Close to the agora, in the gymnasium of Ptolemy, there was a stone statue of Hermes, and a bronze statue of Ptolemy.

Wherever Paul turned, he must have seen statues, temples, and shrines. There was the Sanctuary of the Dioscuri, the Serapeum in the lower part of this city, the Temple of Olympian Zeus southeast of the

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Acropolis, the Pythium on the southern side of the Acropolis, the Sanctuary of Dionysus at the foot of the Acropolis, and many more.

Entering the Acropolis he would have passed two statues of horsemen facing each other on opposite sides of the road. On his right, on the western edge of the Acropolis, was the Temple of Victory Athena, the so-called Wingless Victory. Paul would have looked towards the sea and seen the Bay of Phaleron, perhaps with grain ships from Alexandria, Egypt.

He would have visited the most famous and beautiful of all Greek temples, the Parthenon, and then the Erechtheum standing on the northern edge of the Acropolis. Here his eyes must have fallen on the oldest and most venerated statue of Athena, which like that of Diana of Ephesus, was believed to have fallen from heaven (cf. Acts 19:35). Finally, there was the most conspicuous statue of the city-goddess, a dedication from the spoils of the Battle of Marathon.

An ancient proverb declared that there were more gods in Athens than men, and wherever the Apostle looked, in niches and on pedestals, in temples and on street corners, were gods and demigods. Busts of Hermes were on every corner and statues and altars were in the courtyard of every home.

Among this forest of deities Paul discovered one altar dedicated to the "unknown god." There are many examples of similar inscriptions in the Greco-Roman world. The idea, of course, was that these altars to the "unknown gods" ensured that no deity was omitted from worship.

Paul In Athens

Paul must have been appalled as he looked upon all this idolatry, for "his spirit was provoked within him when he saw that the city was given over to idols" (Acts 17:16). Paul, a devout Jew, had been taught from childhood that, "You shall have no other gods before Me. You shall not make for yourself any carved image, or any likeness of anything that is in heaven above, or that is in the earth beneath, or that is in the water under the earth." (Exo. 20:3-4).

He turned to his task preaching and first went into "the synagogue with the Jews and with the Gentile worshipers," then in the marketplace (Acts 17:17-21).

Certain "Epicurean and Stoic philosophers encountered him" and brought him to the Areopagus (Mar's Hill, KJV), where the supreme court of Athens had often met. The hill is in the middle of the city -- sixteen well worn steps lead to the summit from a plateau between the Areopagus and the Acropolis. The King James Version of the New Testament calls this place Mars' Hill, while most other translations call it the Areopagus. Greeks called their god of war "Ares," while he was called "Mars" by the Romans. While on the Areopagus, in the shadow of the Acropolis, Paul preached one of the most memorable sermons recorded in the Bible (Acts 17:22-31).

See*: Occurrences of Jesus Risen/Resurrected Mentioned by Apostles in the Bible

See also my other separate reference resources*:

The Gospel, Salvation and Evangelism

Christian Scholarship: Biblical – Theological – Philosophical

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Mars' Hill (Areopagus)

[see also previous page]

[Source: http://cafn.us/2014/02/26/biblical-nuggets-mars-hill-in-athens/]

Philosophy and Superstition (Paul on Mars' Hill – the Areopagus)

http://www.ligonier.org/learn/devotionals/philosophy-and-superstition/

Excerpt:

> "While Paul was waiting for them in Athens, he was greatly distressed to see that the city was full of idols" (v. 16). - Acts 17:16–21

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The city of Athens was the seat of Greek philosophy. Socrates, Plato, and Aristotle had lived and taught there. Before them Thales, Anaximander, Parmenides, Heraclitus, and many others had practiced philosophy there. Each was seeking the one ultimate principle of which all things were supposedly composed. Thales believed that ultimately, everything is water, while in a more sophisticated way, Plato and Aristotle claimed that ultimately, everything is "being."

By focusing on this one ultimate aspect of reality, the philosophers were pushing against the worship of particular things like idols. In time, however, idolatry returned even stronger than before. After all, if everything in the world is a piece of the Ultimate, then everything is divine to some degree. Things that have more "being" are more divine, and so for our own good we had better worship them. Eventually, Athens, the city of philosophy, also became the city of idols. Greek philosophy led straight to superstition.

The Bible has very little admiration for Greek philosophy, though unfortunately, many in the history of the Christian church have not shared the Bible's viewpoint. Paul was not impressed by what he saw in Athens. He was distressed. He did not say, "Athens, at last! The home of the wonderful philosophers Plato and Parmenides." He did not try to meld the Gospel to the thinking of Aristotle. Instead, he confronted the Athenians head-on.

The philosophers in Athens at this time were organized into two groups. The Epicureans argued that men should seek pleasure, and that the best way to do that is to live moderately. The Stoics argued that men should seek independence and self-sufficiency, and suppress their desires. Both groups were continually seeking new things, the Epicureans because of their quest for new pleasures, and the Stoics because of curiosity about nature. Thus, when Paul arrived in their midst with a strange new teaching, they rapidly brought him to the Council of the Areopagus, which supervised the religions and foreign gods in Athens. They wanted to hear about this new "manifestation of being."

Epicurean…philosophers: Epicureanism was a popular school of Greek philosophy, founded by Epicurus (341-270 BC). Epicureans believed that the principal aim of life was to secure happiness. They thought of pleasure not in terms of sensual indulgence, as their critics charged, but in terms of tranquility. Their contemporaries often called them atheists; in their view, there were no gods to fear, and death simply marked the end of human existence. They sought their security in organized communities where they could live in contentment apart from society.

Stoic philosophers: Stoicism was founded by Zeno of Citium (335-263 BC) and became the most influential philosophy in the Greco-Roman world. It viewed the universe as permeated by Reason (sometimes referred to as God or Providence). Stoicism saw divine Reason as expressed in human reason and held that as humans made progress, they could advance from ignorance (the source of vice) to true knowledge (the source of virtue). They developed extensive lists of virtues and vices and produced detailed household codes to guide family behavior. Paul's teaching resembles that of the Stoics in his use of household codes and lists of virtues and vices (Ga 5:19-23; Ep 5:22-33; Col 3:18-4:1; 1Ti 3:1-13; 5:1-6:1). However, the message of Good News focusing on the life, death, and resurrection of Jesus Christ was strange and foreign to these Greek philosophers. • The air of superiority with which they addressed Paul as this babbler indicates the arrogance of some of these men.

[Source: NLT Study Bible Notes]

See*: Greek Philosophy and The Use of Greek Philosophy by Paul in the Bible

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Acts 17:15-34

[15] Those who accompanied Paul escorted him as far as Athens, [57] and after receiving an order for Silas and Timothy to come to him as soon as possible, they left. [58]

[16] While Paul was waiting for them in Athens, [59] his spirit was greatly upset [60] because he saw [61] the city was full of idols. [17] So he was addressing [62] the Jews and the God-fearing Gentiles [63] in the synagogue, [64] and in the marketplace every day [65] those who happened to be there. [18] Also some of the Epicurean [66] and Stoic [67] philosophers were conversing [68] with him, and some were asking, [69] "What does this foolish babbler [70] want to say?" Others said, "He seems to be a proclaimer of foreign gods." [71] (They said this because he was proclaiming the good news about Jesus and the resurrection.) [72] [19] So they took Paul and [73] brought him to the Areopagus, [74] saying, "May we know what this new teaching is that you are proclaiming? [20] For you are bringing some surprising things [75] to our ears, so we want to know what they [76] mean." [21] (All the Athenians and the foreigners who lived there used to spend their time [77] in nothing else than telling [78] or listening to something new.) [79]

[22] So Paul stood [80] before the Areopagus and said, "Men of Athens, I see that you are very religious [81] in all respects. [82] [23] For as I went around and observed closely your objects of worship, [83] I even found an altar with this inscription: [84] 'To an unknown god.' Therefore what you worship without knowing it, [85] this I proclaim to you. [24] The God who made the world and everything in it, [86] who is [87] Lord of heaven and earth, does not live in temples made by human hands, [88] [25] nor is he served by human hands, as if he needed anything, [89] because he himself gives life and breath and everything to everyone. [90] [26] From one man [91] he made every nation of the human race [92] to inhabit the entire earth, [93] determining their set times [94] and the fixed limits of the places where they would live, [95] [27] so that they would search for God and perhaps grope around [96] for him and find him, [97] though he is [98] not far from each one of us. [28] For in him we live and move about [99] and exist, as even some of your own poets have said, 'For we too are his offspring.' [100] [29] So since we are God's offspring, we should not think the deity [101] is like gold or silver or stone, an image [102] made by human [103] skill [104] and imagination. [105] [30] Therefore, although God has overlooked [106] such times of ignorance, [107] he now commands all people [108] everywhere to repent, [109] [31] because he has set [110] a day on which he is going to judge the world [111] in righteousness, by a man whom he designated, [112] having provided proof to everyone by raising [113] him from the dead."

[32] Now when they heard about [114] the resurrection from the dead, some began to scoff, [115] but others said, "We will hear you again about this." [33] So Paul left the Areopagus. [116] [34] But some people [117] joined him [118] and believed. Among them [119] were Dionysius, who was a member of the Areopagus, [120] a woman [121] named Damaris, and others with them.

[NET Bible]

Here (next page) is a table 'breakdown' of the message by Paul that Luke recorded.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Table 'breakdown' of the message by Paul at Mars Hill that Luke recorded

Acts 17: 22-31

[22] …"Men of Athens, I see that you are very religious in all respects. [23] For as I went around and observed closely your objects of worship, I even found an altar with this inscription: 'To an unknown god.' Therefore, what you worship without knowing it, this I proclaim to you.
[24] The God who made the world and everything in it, who is Lord of heaven and earth, does not live in temples made by human hands, [25] nor is he served by human hands, as if he needed anything, because he himself gives life and breath and everything to everyone.
[26] From one man he made every nation of the human race to inhabit the entire earth, determining their set times and the fixed limits of the places where they would live, [27] so that they would search for God and perhaps grope around for him and find him, though he is not far from each one of us.
[28] For in him we live and move about and exist, as even some of your own poets have said, 'For we too are his offspring.' [29] So since we are God's offspring, we should not think the deity is like gold or silver or stone, an image made by human skill and imagination.
Therefore, although God has overlooked such times of ignorance, he now commands all people everywhere to repent, [31] because he has set a day on which he is going to judge the world in righteousness, by a man whom he designated, having provided proof to everyone by raising him from the dead."

Notes:

Paul cited three elementary facts about God tailored for them: (1) He is the creator of everything and everyone, (2) He does not dwell in temples, and (3) He is not served by human hands.

The quotation "For we too are his offspring" is from Aratus (ca. 310-245 B.C.), Phaenomena 5.
Paul asserted a general relationship and accountability to God for all humanity. (It also showed he had some knowledge/understanding of their philosophy.)

Repent – God is now asking all mankind to turn to him. No nation or race was excluded.
(Implies belief/trust) [ref: Article]

> Repentance means changing your mind, turning away from our sins -- turning toward God. We do this as Christians and as unbelievers.
>
> That is what repentance means -- a change of mind toward God. You are responsible to change your mind and lay hold of that which God has provided in Jesus Christ ["Messiah" or "anointed one"]. Paul gives us here three great facts which underscore the importance of repentance:
>
> First, there is an inescapable day coming. God has fixed a day when he will judge the world. Everyone knows this. You know it, don't you? You know there is a day coming when your life is going to be laid open before everyone, and all the value of it, or the lack of value, will be evident. There is coming a day when every life will be evaluated. Second, there is an unchallengeable Judge. The One who will do the evaluating will not be a god, remote upon Mount Olympus, but he will be a Man, someone who has lived right here with us, who knows what human life is like, who has felt everything we feel. He will be the One who passes judgment on that day. Third, God has made this evident to all by an irrefutable fact: He raised that Man from the dead. [i.e., Jesus – the Son of God, the Messiah (Christ)!]
>
> See also*: Repentance

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Paul's Sermon on Mars Hill: A Biblical Model for Practical Apologetics

[Recommended]

http://jmsmith.org/downloads/Paul-at-Mars-Hill.pdf [PDF]

Excerpts:

1. Paul didn't travel to Athens with the intention of preaching there…Paul was embodying the principal set forth by his fellow apostle Peter which states that a believer should "Always be ready to make your defense to anyone who demands from you and accounting for the hope that is in you…" (1 Peter 3:15)

2. Paul argued; and not only that, but he argued with the Jews in the synagogue as well as the people in the market place. Many within the Church's ranks today feel that arguing is not Christ-like and has no place in sharing the Gospel. This is unfortunately due to the fact that at times Christians have replaced the conviction of the Holy Spirit in regards to a person's conversion experience with argument and reasoning. As a result, many Christians have taken the opposite path and abandoned the use of argumentation and reason altogether as unbiblical, or useful only when discoursing in the halls of academia. This is in clear contrast with Scripture for here we see the apostle arguing not just with the "intellectual folk" (the Stoics and Epicureans) or the "religious folk" (in the synagogue), but also with the "everyday folk" (in the market place). For Paul, despite the fact that the Gospel did not rest solely on "wise and persuasive words," it could certainly be, and often was, proclaimed using reason and argumentation.

3. Moving on in the text, we find another curios phenomenon. Though the Athenian philosophers considered Paul's talk of Jesus and the resurrection "Idle babbling" about "strange deities" they nevertheless took him to Mars Hill (the Areopagus) and asked if he would explain his "new teaching." Luke parenthetically tells us that the Athenians were always looking for opportunities to say something different or hear something new. This is interesting because Athens was considered the center of knowledge in the ancient world. And yet, despite being immersed in the various religions and philosophies of the day, the Athenian philosophers still had a craving for some kind of new truth. Amidst an extremely pluralistic society there was still something about the message of the Gospel that intrigued them. This is very much the case within modern academia.

4. Later in his sermon, Paul goes on to tell us that people everywhere are searching and even groping for God. In his mind, the Athenians' temple to the unknown god no doubt provides an example of such searching. According to his letter to the church in Rome, God's presence is a reality that even the most callous skeptic is aware of. All of this should serve as a constant reminder to the Christian that no matter how much people ridicule or revile the message of the cross, there is still a yearning for truth in our culture that only the Gospel can fulfill.

   It is also worth noting the beliefs of Paul's listeners and their similarity to the ideals prevalent in our society. The Epicureans adhered to a naturalistic philosophy that deemed pleasure the ultimate goal. The Stoics, though also naturalistic, saw virtue as the highest good. The current philosophies of hedonism and humanism…have much in common with these philosophies of old.

5. Right from the start, one cannot help but notice the politeness with which Paul addresses his listeners. Though his spirit was deeply distressed by their idolatry, he still addresses them with respect. It is a common temptation, especially in an argumentative atmosphere, to see nonbelievers as "the enemy" and to speak to them as such. This is not Paul's tactic in this passage or in any of his epistles for that matter. In fact, throughout his writings it can be argued that his harshest words are directed at those who claim to be believers. We, as Christians, must remember this as we engage the nonbeliever. It should be the Gospel that offends rather than the one who proclaims the Gospel.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

However, lest we think that the Christian should sacrifice truth on the altar of politeness, we now turn to an equally visible aspect of Paul's message: his incredible boldness. Paul doesn't beat around the bush, so to speak, in dealing with the religion of the Athenians. He tells them in no uncertain terms that the faith they possess in their idols is not only misplaced, but also foolish seeing as that the idols they worship as gods were fashioned by their very own hands. Though undoubtedly offensive to his audience, this was truth that they needed to hear. At the opposite end of the spectrum from those seeking to offend are those Christians who feel that an unbeliever should never be told anything they might object to. This extreme form of seeker-sensitive apologetics is foreign not only to Paul, but to the entire witness of scripture. Many may be offended, but the Christian's responsibility is to proclaim this message lovingly and faithfully, seeking neither to offend nor to appease those listening.

The Bible Reader's Commentary (BBRCC)

More noble character (Acts 17:11). The Berean Jews were "more noble" because they valued truth and so daily tested Paul's teaching against their standard of truth, the O.T. The Thessalonian Jews had been more concerned with the number of Greeks who showed respect for Judaism! than with truth.

You and I are "more noble" when we too set aside personal considerations in order to discern, and do, God's will.

Gentile evangelism (Acts 17:22-31). Paul's address was before Athens' "Council of Ares," the government of this Gk. city-state. His strategy was: (1) seek a point of contact, which here was an altar dedicated to an "unknown god," v. 22-23; (2) discuss the nature of God and His relationship to the creation, showing that even Gk. poets and philosophers have glimpsed the truths Paul now presents, v. 24-28; and (3) affirm that God, who calls on all to reject idolatry and repent, has not only appointed a day of judgment but has proven His intervention in human affairs by the resurrection of Jesus, v. 29-31.

While the form of Paul's sermon is philosophical and ideally suited for its context, the content remains totally biblical. We can change approach to suit an audience. We can never change the message itself.

Judgment day (Acts 17:31). One basic element in the Christian message is that God, though more intent on repentance than punishment, will judge human beings (cf. 1Pe 4:5; Heb 10:30). As Ro 2:8 says, "For those who are self-seeking and who reject the truth and follow evil, there will be wrath and anger." The fact is that as sinners every human being is already condemned, already under the wrath of God. Only trust in Christ can provide forgiveness and acquittal on judgment day.

Return to the beginning*: Gospel of Jesus the Messiah (Christ)

Paul and the Gospel on Mars Hill

Mars Hill continued on next page…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Did Paul Make a Fundamental Mistake in Athens? – Paul the Philosopher (Part I) https://credohouse.org/blog/did-paul-make-a-fundamental-mistake-in-athens-paul-the-philosopher-part-i

Bottom-line: NO! See details below (Part 1 and Part 2)…

Paul as a Culturally-Relevant Bridge-Builder: Paul the Philosopher (Part II)
https://credohouse.org/blog/paul-as-a-culturally-relevant-bridge-builder-paul-the-philosopher-part-ii

Paul, the New Socrates in Athens: Paul as Philosopher (Part III)
https://credohouse.org/blog/paul-the-new-socrates-in-athens-paul-as-philosopher-part-iii

Part 1 – Details

1. The charge is an argument from silence: We could ask why Luke would devote so much space to Paul's speech when the message ran contrary to the preaching of the cross—and could undermine Luke's own theological strategy in the book of Acts.

2. The claim reads into Acts a specific situation in Corinth: In 1 Corinthians, Paul was addressing the congregation's arrogance and one-upmanship—a complete departure from dependence on the sufficiency of Christ's cross-work and the Spirit's power. They had emphasized their giftedness in knowledge and wisdom and rhetoric. They glorified speaking in tongues, elevating this over other spiritual gifts; they considered themselves as having "arrived": "you have become kings without us," Paul told them (1 Cor. 4:8). They elevated social status so highly that they were willing to tolerate—even boast about—gross immorality in one of its prominent members (ch. 5).[3] And the new covenant blessings through the Spirit overshadowed any sense that a future bodily resurrection was still needed (15:12). The Corinthians' skewed theological perspective emphasized the "already" but ignored the "not yet"—a view known as "over-realized eschatology."[4]

Yes, the Corinthians believed they had all blessings in Christ—and nothing was left for the new heaven and new earth! The point is this: we should treat Paul's writing about the Corinthian situation on its own terms and not read Paul's correspondence back into Luke's theological strategy in Acts.

We could add that in 1 Corinthians itself, Paul is still quoting pagans! He cites Menander when he writes, "Bad company corrupts good character" (15:33). Paul uses the same strategy of quoting pagans in Corinth—just as he did in Athens! For good measure, we could also throw in Paul's citing the Cretan thinker Epimenides in Titus 1:12.

3. A review of Paul's ministry in Acts shows this charge to be inaccurate; Paul uses the same general approach before and after Athens: Before Athens, Paul would "reason" with people in an attempt to "persuade" them (cp. 28:23). He does so in Thessalonica (17:2) and during his visit to Athens (17:19). Also, Paul continues to do so after Athens—in Corinth (18:4) and Ephesus (18:19; 19:8,9).

4. When we compare Paul's message at Lystra (Acts 14) with the one at Athens, the theological themes—rooted in the Old Testament—are the same. Paul's apologetic at Lystra includes the witness of God in creation—among other themes echoed in Athens.

Continued next page…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

PAUL AT LYSTRA: ACTS 14:15-17	PAUL AT ATHENS: ACTS 17:24-28
1. GOD AS CREATOR: "… preach the gospel to you that you should turn from these vain things to a living God, who made the heaven and the earth and the sea and all that is in them*"* [5] (15).	"The God who made the world and all things in it, since He is Lord of heaven and earth, does not dwell in temples made with hands" (24).[6]
2. GOD AS LIFE-GIVER TO (NON-DIVINE) HUMANS: "We are also men of the same nature as you" (15).	"He made from one man every nation of mankind to live on all the face of the earth, having determined their appointed times and the boundaries of their habitation. He Himself gives to all people life and breath . . ." (25-6).[7]
3. THE WITNESS OF GOD IN CREATION: "and yet He did not leave Himself without witness, in that He did good and gave you rains from heaven and fruitful seasons, satisfying your hearts with food and gladness" (17).	"He Himself gives to all people life and breath and all things; that they would seek God, if perhaps they might grope for Him and find Him, though He is not far from each one of us" (26-7).
4. PREVIOUS IGNORANCE: "In the generations gone by He permitted all the nations to go their own ways" (16).	"Therefore having overlooked the times of ignorance . . ." (30)
5. CALL TO REPENTANCE: ". . . turn from these vain things to a living God" (15).	". . . declaring to men that all people everywhere should repent" (30)

Paul used the same basic approach in both places. In fact, at Athens he even had opportunity to mention Jesus and his resurrection—which is more than he was able to do at Lystra![8]

5. The "failure" charge misses the point of Paul's own goal to contextualize the gospel: In 1 Corinthians itself, Paul declared himself a slave of all so that he might win some—a Jew to the Jew and a Greek to the Greeks (9:19-27). Paul adapted to his audiences. When Paul wrote to the Corinthians, the Athenian strategy would not have been far from his mind.

6. Paul's approach in Athens resulted in a far more positive response than Paul has in other places in his travels: Paul and Barnabas at Lystra were worshiped as Zeus and Hermes—and then Paul was stoned when he and Barnabas resisted (ch. 14)! Paul's speech to Jewish people would result in a riot in Jerusalem in chapter 21!

7. Luke refers to the gospel as "the word of God" throughout Acts, and this is the message of Jesus (in Luke) and his messengers (in Acts): The "word of God" (cp. the sower and the seed in Lk. 8:8; cp. Jesus' message as the "word of God" [5:2]) multiplies and bears much fruit throughout the book of Acts (5:31; 6:7; 12:24; 13:7, 15,44, 46, 48, 49; 19:20). This is the general theme of Acts, and Paul's speech at Athens is no exception. In fact, in 17:18, we're told that Paul is preaching the good news about "Jesus and his resurrection." Contrary to detractors, Paul's preaching in Athens is quite orthodox.[9]

8. Paul, who usually sought out any available synagogues on his journeys (where he reasoned, dialogued, and persuaded) needed to take a different strategy with pagans at Mars Hill—though he still carried out this task in dependence upon the Spirit. Notice that Paul quoted pagan thinkers, but he still ended with Christ and the resurrection, calling for repentance—the very theme that the other sermons in Acts called for.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

In my experience, I regularly find Christians resistant to Christian philosophy (after all, doesn't Colossians 2 tell us to "beware of philosophy"?!), and they view apologetics as a "work" that diminishes the "grace of God." People need to hear "the gospel"—end of story. However, unless God's Spirit works, "giving the gospel" or engaging in apologetics will amount to nothing. And why can't God use objective, checkable evidences and arguments to reveal to people the intellectual integrity of the Christian faith? As we read the Scriptures, we see that proclaiming the gospel and evidences often go hand-in-hand. In the book of Acts we see the apostles engaging in a defense of the Christian faith on a regular basis, appealing to evidences and events that were not done in a corner.

And what about 1 Corinthians, which so strongly emphasizes the centrality of the cross and the Spirit's power? In chapter 15, Paul gives his strongest apologetic for the resurrection, appealing to its historicity and objectivity—complete with lists of eyewitnesses, including Paul's own testimony!

Paul's Mars Hill address truly reflects the very heart of Paul's cross-centered theological and missiological strategy. As N.T. Wright observes: "Much Pauline scholarship in the last generations has ignored this [Areopagus] speech . . . . But when we begin . . . with the Jewish doctrine of monotheism and its Christian redefinition, the speech makes a great deal of sense as a summary of exactly the kind of thing Paul might well have said."

Part 2 – Details

In 1 Corinthians 9, Paul affirms the goal of becoming "all things to all people" when communicating the gospel. Providentially, Paul's own cultural background enabled him to speak with credibility in Athens—one of the Roman Empire's cultural centers (Alexandria and Tarsus being the other key cultural hubs at this time). According to Ben Witherington, "Paul was in the upper 1-2 percent of well-educated people of his day."[1] For one thing, Paul had studied under the noted rabbi, Gamaliel I (Ac. 22:3). Also, being from Tarsus—"a citizen of no insignificant city" (Acts 21:39)—Paul could speak to the cultural élites of his day.

Why was Tarsus so significant philosophically, politically, and culturally?

- It was the native city of various famous philosophers, including Zeno (the founder of Stoicism), Antipater, Athenagoras, and Nestor.
- The Stoic poet Aratus (whom Paul cites [Acts 17:28]) was from Soli in Cilicia, near Tarsus.
- The noted orator Cicero governed Tarsus in the mid-50s BC.
- Mark Antony met Cleopatra here in 41 BC.
- Josephus said that the Jewish community here was quite prominent. He called it "the noblest city" the Cilicians had (Antiquities 1.6.1). It had prominent Jewish community. Jerome Murphy-O'Connor has observed: "As a centre of learning [stagnant Athens] had been surpassed even by Tarsus."[2]

Because of his background, Paul was a Tarsian, a well-educated Jew, and a Roman citizen—a noteworthy convergence of influences vital to Paul's ministry to the Gentiles. Being an extremely well-lettered and –credentialed man (2 Cor. 11:21-22; Phil. 3:4-6), God strategically used him as an instrument in cultural centers such as Athens, Corinth, and Ephesus. This is in contrast to, say, Peter, James, and John, who would work primarily amongst the circumcised/Jews (Gal. 2:9). Again, as Witherington points out,

No doubt [Paul's background] provided him with a broader view of Jews and Greeks, women and men, slaves and free persons (cf. 1 Cor. 9:18ff.) than would be the case if he had been raised in a cultural

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

backwater somewhere in the rural parts of the Holy Land, as some of the early Jewish Christians apparently were.[3]

When Paul encountered Stoics and Epicureans at Athens, he was by no means out of his element. In fact, he has greater theological sympathy with the Stoics than the Epicureans. On the one hand, the Epicureans were atomistic materialists (all reality is comprised of atoms). Whereas Paul believed that we came from Adam, the Epicureans maintained that humans come from atoms. We come to know through our sense perceptions (and we formulate "concepts" based on those perceptions). Also, the Epicureans were concerned with a life of pleasure and an avoidance of pain. Theologically, they believed that the gods exist, but they are utterly uninvolved in the world (a perspective somewhat resembling the deistic viewpoint). There is no such thing as an active, engaged divine providence. According to the Epicureans, religion is detrimental in that (a) it creates an unhealthy fear of post-mortem uncertainties and (b) a preoccupation with the prying, interfering gods, which terrorizes humans and destroys their happiness. In terms of eschatology, there is no final judgment; death is the last word.

By contrast, the Stoics were materialistic pantheists (e.g., Marcus Aurelius, Seneca, Epictetus).[4] The divine pervaded everything and (in the form of fate) governed all. God was considered the Soul of the universe and the universe as the body of God. Unlike Epicurean pursuit of pleasure, the Stoics pursued self-preservation through contemplative, practical, and rational reason. There was for them a kind of divine providence, but no real judgment. At death, the individual soul was reabsorbed into the ever-living Fire.

In what ways did Paul try to connect with the Stoics? Paul was truly a discerning Christian thinker. He embraced the view that all truth is God's truth, which meant sorting out the intellectual and spiritual wheat from the chaff. For example, like Seneca the Stoic, Plutarch viewed humanity in its diversity and urged it to think of itself as one community, "even as a herd that feeds together and shares the pasturage of a common field."[5] Likewise, Paul tells the Athenians, "He made from one man every nation of mankind to live on all the face of the earth, having determined their appointed times and the boundaries of their habitation. He Himself gives to all people life and breath . . ." (25-6). Paul here affirms both the unity and diversity of humanity. He refers to the "harmonious patchwork of diversity" of human cultures that cover the face of the earth (Gen. 1:28; 9:1, 7; 10:5, 20, 31-2) under God's governance.[6]

On the other hand, though Paul quotes Aratus, the Stoic Cilician poet, he does not quote him fully. Notice how he cites the second part without quoting the first: "It is with Zeus that every one of us in every way has to do, for we are also his offspring."[7] Also, unlike the Stoics' belief in an impersonal fate, Paul's affirms the biblical message of a personal providence. Furthermore, Paul outdoes the Stoics of his day by sending them back to their original sources and earliest beliefs. Zeno, the founder of Stoicism, rejected the building of temples to the gods. Later Plutarch would mock the Stoics for doing the opposite of what their founder said: "The Stoics, while applauding this [anti-temple building] as correct, attend the mysteries in the temples, go up to the Acropolis, do reverence to statues, and place wreaths upon shrines, though these are works of builders and mechanics."[8] The Stoic Dio Chrysostom at the end of the first century would even defend the use of images.[9] Again, Paul is calling his Stoic hearers back to their philosophical roots—roots that are much closer to biblical revelation.

Finally, Paul's belief in the resurrection is quite a different view from that of his audience, and Paul isn't going to compromise on this fundamental point either. For Greeks, especially Epicureans, the idea of a bodily resurrection was impossible. Aeschylus said that at the inauguration of the Areopagus court, Apollo stated, "Once a man is slain, there is no resurrection."[10] By contrast, Paul is not unwilling to say something that is philosophically out of vogue or disagreeable because of his commitment to the cross of Christ.

Paul's ministry at Athens reminds us that some worldviews may more closely resemble the biblical worldview than others. For example, Islam's view of God has greater similarities to the Jewish-Christian faith than Buddhism or animism. Such similarities often make for easier bridge-building in certain respects. It appears that the mocking of Paul's being a "babbler" probably comes from the Epicureans (with whom Paul has the strongest disagreement); it is likely the Stoics who are open to hearing more of what he has to say.[11]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Paul does this in a Jewish context as well. For example, Paul says that he was on trial because he affirmed his "hope of the resurrection of the dead" (23:6-7). In doing so, he sides with the Pharisees against the Sadducees before the Jewish Sanhedrin.

As witnesses for Christ, we should be prepared to utilize philosophical and cultural tools to build bridges while offering good reasons for our faith—just as the apostle Paul did.

---

[1] Ben Witherington III, Paul's Narrative Thought World (Lousiville, KY: Westminster John Knox, 1994), 216.

[2] Jerome Murphy-O'Connor, Paul: A Critical Life (Oxford: Oxford University Press, 1996), 108.

[3] Ibid., 216.

[4] There were three phases in the development of Stoicism: the Early Stoa (300-200 BC), Middle Stoa (150-1 BC), and the Later Stoa (AD 1-180).

[5] Plutarch, Moralia 329B.

[6] William Larkin, Acts (Downers Grove, IL: InterVarsity, 1995), 257-8.

[7] Aratus, Phaenomena 5; cp. Cleanthes (c. 331-233 BC), Hymn to Zeus 4.

[8] Plutarch, Moralia 1034B.

[9] Oration 12.

[10] Aeschylus, Eumenides 648.

[11] G. Walter Hansen, "The Preaching and Defence of Paul," in Witness to the Gospel: The Theology of Acts, eds. I.H. Marshall and David Peterson (Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1998), 313.

See*: Greek Philosophy and The Use of Greek Philosophy by Paul in the Bible

See also*: Gospel of Paul vs Peter

Gospel of Jesus vs Paul

Return to the beginning*: Gospel of Jesus the Messiah (Christ)

Paul and the Gospel on Mars Hill

For additional information about Paul, the Gospel, Mars Hill, Athens and more, see my other separate references resource*:

The Gospel, Salvation and Evangelism

Christian Scholarship: Biblical – Theological – Philosophical

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Jesus Raised Up (Resurrected) from the Dead [using WEB Version]

(Sections of the Bible where the Resurrection of Jesus is Mentioned.)

See also*: Resurrection of Jesus the Messiah (Christ)

Matthew	17:9-13 (Matthew)	[9] As they were coming down from the mountain, Jesus commanded them, saying, "Don't tell anyone what you saw, until the Son of Man has risen from the dead." [10] His disciples asked him, saying, "Then why do the scribes say that Elijah must come first?" [11] Jesus answered them, "Elijah indeed comes first, and will restore all things, [12] but I tell you that Elijah has come already, and they didn't recognize him, but did to him whatever they wanted to. Even so the Son of Man will also suffer by them." [13] Then the disciples understood that he spoke to them of John the Baptizer.
	27:50-54 (Matthew)	[50] Jesus cried again with a loud voice, and yielded up his spirit. [51] Behold, the veil of the temple was torn in two from the top to the bottom. The earth quaked and the rocks were split. [52] The tombs were opened, and many bodies of the saints who had fallen asleep were raised; [53] and coming out of the tombs after his resurrection, they entered into the holy city and appeared to many. [54] Now the centurion, and those who were with him watching Jesus, when they saw the earthquake, and the things that were done, feared exceedingly, saying, "Truly this was the Son of God."
	28:6-8 (Matthew)	[6] “He is not here; for He is risen, as He said. Come, see the place where the Lord lay. [7] “And go quickly and tell His disciples that He is risen from the dead, and indeed He is going before you into Galilee; there you will see Him. Behold, I have told you.” [8] So they went out quickly from the tomb with fear and great joy, and ran to bring His disciples word.
Mark	9:7-9 (Mark)	[7] A cloud came, overshadowing them, and a voice came out of the cloud, "This is my beloved Son. Listen to him." [8] Suddenly looking around, they saw no one with them any more, except Jesus only. [9] As they were coming down from the mountain, he commanded them that they should tell no one what things they had seen, until after the Son of Man had risen from the dead. [10] They kept this saying to themselves, questioning what the "rising from the dead" meant.
	16:5-8, 14, 19-20 (Mark)	[5] And entering the tomb, they saw a young man clothed in a long white robe sitting on the right side; and they were alarmed. [6] But he said to them, “Do not be alarmed. You seek Jesus of Nazareth, who was crucified. He is risen! He is not here. See the place where they laid Him. [7] “But go, tell His disciples—and Peter—that He is going before you into Galilee; there you will see Him, as He said to you.” [8] So they went out quickly * and fled from the tomb, for they trembled and were amazed. And they said nothing to anyone, for they were afraid. … [14] Later He appeared to the eleven as they sat at the table; and He rebuked their unbelief and hardness of heart, because they did not believe those who had seen Him after He had risen. … [19] So then, after the Lord had spoken to them, He was received up into heaven, and sat down at the right hand of God. [20] And they went out and preached everywhere, the Lord working with them and confirming the word through the accompanying signs. Amen.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Luke	24:3-7 (Luke)	[4] It happened, while they were greatly perplexed about this, behold, two men stood by them in dazzling clothing. [5] Becoming terrified, they bowed their faces down to the earth. They said to them, "Why do you seek the living among the dead? [6] He isn't here, but is risen. Remember what he told you when he was still in Galilee, [7] saying that the Son of Man must be delivered up into the hands of sinful men, and be crucified, and the third day rise again?"
	24:33-35; 44-53 (Luke)	us?" [33] They rose up that very hour, returned to Jerusalem, and found the eleven gathered together, and those who were with them, [34] saying, "The Lord is risen indeed, and has appeared to Simon!" [35] They related the things that happened along the way, and how he was recognized by them in the breaking of the bread. … [44] He said to them, "This is what I told you, while I was still with you, that all things which are written in the law of Moses, the prophets, and the psalms, concerning me must be fulfilled." [45] Then he opened their minds, that they might understand the Scriptures. [46] He said to them, "Thus it is written, and thus it was necessary for the Christ to suffer and to rise from the dead the third day, [47] and that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name to all the nations, beginning at Jerusalem. [48] You are witnesses of these things. [49] Behold, I send forth the promise of my Father on you. But wait in the city of Jerusalem until you are clothed with power from on high." [50] He led them out as far as Bethany, and he lifted up his hands, and blessed them. [51] It happened, while he blessed them, that he withdrew from them, and was carried up into heaven. [52] They worshiped him, and returned to Jerusalem with great joy, [53] and were continually in the temple, praising and blessing God. Amen.
John	2:19-22; 20:11-31 (John)	[19] Jesus answered them, "Destroy this temple, and in three days I will raise it up." [20] The Jews therefore said, "Forty-six years was this temple in building, and will you raise it up in three days?" [21] But he spoke of the temple of his body. [22] When therefore he was raised from the dead, his disciples remembered that he said this, and they believed the Scripture, and the word which Jesus had said.
Acts	1:15-22 (Peter)	[15] In these days, Peter stood up in the midst of the disciples (and there was a multitude of persons gathered together, about one hundred twenty), and said, [16] "Brothers, it was necessary that this Scripture should be fulfilled, which the Holy Spirit spoke before by the mouth of David concerning Judas, who was guide to those who took Jesus. [17] For he was numbered with us, and received his portion in this ministry. [18] Now this man obtained a field with the reward for his wickedness, and falling headlong, his body burst open, and all his intestines gushed out. [19] It became known to everyone who lived in Jerusalem that in their language that field was called 'Akeldama,' that is, 'The field of blood.' [20] For it is written in the book of Psalms, 'Let his habitation be made desolate. Let no one dwell therein;' and, 'Let another take his office.' [21] "Of the men therefore who have accompanied us all the time that the Lord Jesus went in and out among us, [22] beginning from the baptism of John, to the day that He was received up from us, of these one must become a witness with us of His resurrection."

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

	2:22-39 (Peter)	[22] "Men of Israel, hear these words! Jesus of Nazareth, a man approved by God to you by mighty works and wonders and signs which God did by him in the midst of you, even as you yourselves know, [23] him, being delivered up by the determined counsel and foreknowledge of God, you have taken by the hand of lawless men, crucified and killed; [24] whom God raised up, having freed him from the agony of death, because it was not possible that he should be held by it. [25] For David says concerning him, *'I saw the Lord always before my face, For he is on my right hand, that I should not be moved. [26] Therefore my heart was glad, and my tongue rejoiced. Moreover my flesh also will dwell in hope; [27] because you will not leave my soul in Hades, neither will you allow your Holy One to see decay. [28] You made known to me the ways of life. You will make me full of gladness with your presence.' [29] "Brothers, I may tell you freely of the patriarch David, that he both died and was buried, and his tomb is with us to this day. [30] Therefore, being a prophet, and knowing that God had sworn with an oath to him that of the fruit of his body, according to the flesh, he would raise up the Christ to sit on his throne, [31] he foreseeing this spoke about the resurrection of the Christ, that neither was his soul left in Hades, nor did his flesh see decay. [32] This Jesus God raised up, to which we all are witnesses. [33] Being therefore exalted by the right hand of God, and having received from the Father the promise of the Holy Spirit, he has poured out this, which you now see and hear. [34] For David didn't ascend into the heavens, but he says himself, 'The Lord said to my Lord, "Sit by my right hand, [35] until I make your enemies a footstool for your feet."' [36] "Let all the house of Israel therefore know certainly that God has made him both Lord and Christ, this Jesus whom you crucified." [37] Now when they heard this, they were cut to the heart, and said to Peter and the rest of the apostles, "Brothers, what shall we do?" [38] Peter said to them, "Repent, and be baptized, every one of you, in the name of Jesus Christ for the forgiveness of sins, and you will receive the gift of the Holy Spirit. [39] For to you is the promise, and to your children, and to all who are far off, even as many as the Lord our God will call to himself."
	4:1-4 (Apostles)	[4:1] As they spoke to the people, the priests and the captain of the temple and the Sadducees came to them, [2] being upset because they taught the people and proclaimed in Jesus the resurrection from the dead. [3] They laid hands on them, and put them in custody until the next day, for it was now evening. [4] But many of those who heard the word believed, and the number of the men came to be about five thousand.
	4:10-12 (Peter)	[10] be it known to you all, and to all the people of Israel, that in the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, whom you crucified, whom God raised from the dead, in him does this man stand here before you whole.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

		[11] He is 'the stone which was regarded as worthless by you, the builders, which has become the head of the corner.' [12] There is salvation in none other, for neither is there any other name under heaven, that is given among men, by which we must be saved!"
	5:29-32 (Peter and the Apostles)	[29] But Peter and the apostles answered, "We must obey God rather than men. [30] The God of our fathers raised up Jesus, whom you killed, hanging him on a tree. [31] God exalted him with his right hand to be a Prince and a Savior, to give repentance to Israel, and remission of sins. [32] We are His witnesses of these things; and so also is the Holy Spirit, whom God has given to those who obey him."
	10:34-48 (Peter)	…[40] God raised him up the third day, and gave him to be revealed,… (see Gospel of Paul vs Peter chart for details)
	13:16-41 (Paul)	[16] Paul stood up, and beckoning with his hand said, "Men of Israel, and you who fear God, listen. [17] The God of this people chose our fathers, and exalted the people when they stayed as aliens in the land of Egypt, and with an uplifted arm, he led them out of it. [18] For a period of about forty years he put up with them in the wilderness. [19] When he had destroyed seven nations in the land of Canaan, he gave them their land for an inheritance, for about four hundred fifty years. [20] After these things he gave them judges until Samuel the prophet. [21] Afterward they asked for a king, and God gave to them Saul the son of Kish, a man of the tribe of Benjamin, for forty years. [22] When he had removed him, he raised up David to be their king, to whom he also testified, 'I have found David the son of Jesse, a man after my heart, who will do all my will.' [23] From this man's seed, God has brought salvation to Israel according to his promise, [24] before his coming, when John had first preached the baptism of repentance to Israel. [25] As John was fulfilling his course, he said, 'What do you suppose that I am? I am not he. But behold, one comes after me the sandals of whose feet I am not worthy to untie.' [26] Brothers, children of the stock of Abraham, and those among you who fear God, the word of this salvation is sent out to you. [27] For those who dwell in Jerusalem, and their rulers, because they didn't know him, nor the voices of the prophets which are read every Sabbath, fulfilled them by condemning him. [28] Though they found no cause for death, they still asked Pilate to have him killed. [29] When they had fulfilled all things that were written about him, they took him down from the tree, and laid him in a tomb. [30] But God raised him from the dead, [31] and he was seen for many days by those who came up with him from Galilee to Jerusalem, who are his witnesses to the people. [32] We bring you good news of the promise made to the fathers, [33] that God has fulfilled the same to us, their children, in that he raised up Jesus. As it is also written in the second psalm, 'You are my Son. Today I have become your father.' [34] "Concerning that he raised him up from the dead, now no more to return to corruption, he has spoken thus: 'I will give you the holy and sure blessings of David.' [35] Therefore he says also in another psalm, 'You will not allow your Holy One to see decay.' [36] For David, after he had in his own generation served the counsel of God, fell asleep, and was laid with his fathers, and saw decay.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

		[37] But he whom God raised up saw no decay. [38] Be it known to you therefore, brothers, that through this man is proclaimed to you remission of sins, [39] and by him everyone who believes is justified from all things, from which you could not be justified by the law of Moses. [40] Beware therefore, lest that come on you which is spoken in the prophets: [41] 'Behold, you scoffers, and wonder, and perish; for I work a work in your days, a work which you will in no way believe, if one declares it to you.'"
	17:1-3 (Paul)	[17:1] Now when they had passed through Amphipolis and Apollonia, they came to Thessalonica, where there was a Jewish synagogue. [2] Paul, as was his custom, went in to them, and for three Sabbath days reasoned with them from the Scriptures, [3] explaining and demonstrating that the Christ had to suffer and rise again from the dead, and saying, "This Jesus, whom I proclaim to you, is the Christ."
	17:16-31 (Paul)	…[31] because he has appointed a day in which he will judge the world in righteousness by the man whom he has ordained; of which he has given assurance to all men, in that he has raised him from the dead."… (see Paul and the Gospel on Mars Hill (Areopagus) for more details)
	24:10-22 (Paul)	[10] When the governor had beckoned to him to speak, Paul answered, "Because I know that you have been a judge of this nation for many years, I cheerfully make my defense, [11] seeing that you can recognize that it is not more than twelve days since I went up to worship at Jerusalem. [12] In the temple they didn't find me disputing with anyone or stirring up a crowd, either in the synagogues, or in the city. [13] Nor can they prove to you the things of which they now accuse me. [14] But this I confess to you, that after the Way, which they call a sect, so I serve the God of our fathers, believing all things which are according to the law, and which are written in the prophets; [15] having hope toward God, which these also themselves look for, that there will be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and unjust. [16] Herein I also practice always having a conscience void of offense toward God and men. [17] Now after some years, I came to bring gifts for the needy to my nation, and offerings; [18] amid which certain Jews from Asia found me purified in the temple, not with a mob, nor with turmoil. [19] They ought to have been here before you, and to make accusation, if they had anything against me. [20] Or else let these men themselves say what injustice they found in me when I stood before the council, [21] unless it is for this one thing that I cried standing among them, 'Concerning the resurrection of the dead I am being judged before you today!'" [22] But Felix, having more exact knowledge concerning the Way, deferred them, saying, "When Lysias, the commanding officer, comes down, I will decide your case."
	26:1-30 (Paul)	[26:1] Agrippa said to Paul, "You may speak for yourself." Then Paul stretched out his hand, and made his defense. [2] "I think myself happy, King Agrippa, that I am to make my defense before you this day concerning all the things that I am accused by the Jews,

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

		[3] especially because you are expert in all customs and questions which are among the Jews. Therefore I beg you to hear me patiently. [4] "Indeed, all the Jews know my way of life from my youth up, which was from the beginning among my own nation and at Jerusalem; [5] having known me from the first, if they are willing to testify, that after the strictest sect of our religion I lived a Pharisee. [6] Now I stand here to be judged for the hope of the promise made by God to our fathers, [7] which our twelve tribes, earnestly serving night and day, hope to attain. Concerning this hope I am accused by the Jews, King Agrippa! [8] Why is it judged incredible with you, if God does raise the dead? [9] "I myself most certainly thought that I ought to do many things contrary to the name of Jesus of Nazareth. [10] This I also did in Jerusalem. I both shut up many of the saints in prisons, having received authority from the chief priests, and when they were put to death I gave my vote against them. [11] Punishing them often in all the synagogues, I tried to make them blaspheme. Being exceedingly enraged against them, I persecuted them even to foreign cities. [12] "Whereupon as I traveled to Damascus with the authority and commission from the chief priests, [13] at noon, O King, I saw on the way a light from the sky, brighter than the sun, shining around me and those who traveled with me. [14] When we had all fallen to the earth, I heard a voice saying to me in the Hebrew language, 'Saul, Saul, why are you persecuting me? It is hard for you to kick against the goads.' [15] "I said, 'Who are you, Lord?' "He said, 'I am Jesus, whom you are persecuting. [16] But arise, and stand on your feet, for I have appeared to you for this purpose: to appoint you a servant and a witness both of the things which you have seen, and of the things which I will reveal to you; [17] delivering you from the people, and from the Gentiles, to whom I send you, [18] to open their eyes, that they may turn from darkness to light and from the power of Satan to God, that they may receive remission of sins and an inheritance among those who are sanctified by faith in me.' [19] "Therefore, King Agrippa, I was not disobedient to the heavenly vision, [20] but declared first to them of Damascus, at Jerusalem, and throughout all the country of Judea, and also to the Gentiles, that they should repent and turn to God, doing works worthy of repentance. [21] For this reason the Jews seized me in the temple, and tried to kill me. [22] Having therefore obtained the help that is from God, I stand to this day testifying both to small and great, saying nothing but what the prophets and Moses said would happen, [23] how the Christ must suffer, and how, by the resurrection of the dead, he would be first to proclaim light both to these people and to the Gentiles."

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

		[24] As he thus made his defense, Festus said with a loud voice, "Paul, you are crazy! Your great learning is driving you insane!" [25] But he said, "I am not crazy, most excellent Festus, but boldly declare words of truth and reasonableness. [26] For the king knows of these things, to whom also I speak freely. For I am persuaded that none of these things is hidden from him, for this has not been done in a corner. [27] King Agrippa, do you believe the prophets? I know that you believe." [28] Agrippa said to Paul, "With a little persuasion are you trying to make me a Christian?" [29] Paul said, "I pray to God, that whether with little or with much, not only you, but also all that hear me this day, might become such as I am, except for these bonds." [30] The king rose up with the governor, and Bernice, and those who sat with them. [31] When they had withdrawn, they spoke one to another, saying, "This man does nothing worthy of death or of bonds." [32] Agrippa said to Festus, "This man might have been set free if he had not appealed to Caesar."
Romans	1:1-5 (Paul)	[Ro 1:1] Paul, a servant of Jesus Christ, called to be an apostle, set apart for the Good News of God, [2] which he promised before through his prophets in the holy Scriptures, [3] concerning his Son, who was born of the seed of David according to the flesh, [4] who was declared to be the Son of God with power, according to the Spirit of holiness, by the resurrection from the dead, Jesus Christ our Lord, [5] through whom we received grace and apostleship, for obedience of faith among all the nations, for his name's sake; …(see Gospel – Romans 1:1-5 chart for details)
	4:13-25 (Paul)	[13] For the promise to Abraham and to his seed that he should be heir of the world wasn't through the law, but through the righteousness of faith. [14] For if those who are of the law are heirs, faith is made void, and the promise is made of no effect. [15] For the law works wrath, for where there is no law, neither is there disobedience. [16] For this cause it is of faith, that it may be according to grace, to the end that the promise may be sure to all the seed, not to that only which is of the law, but to that also which is of the faith of Abraham, who is the father of us all. [17] As it is written, "I have made you a father of many nations." This is in the presence of him whom he believed: God, who gives life to the dead, and calls the things that are not, as though they were. [18] Who in hope believed against hope, to the end that he might become a father of many nations, according to that which had been spoken, "So will your seed be." [19] Without being weakened in faith, he didn't consider his own body, already having been worn out, (he being about a hundred years old), and the deadness of Sarah's womb. [20] Yet, looking to the promise of God, he didn't waver through unbelief, but grew strong through faith, giving glory to God, [21] and being fully assured that what he had promised, he was able also to perform. [22] Therefore it also was "reckoned to him for righteousness." [23] Now it was not written that it was accounted to him for his sake alone, [24] but for our sake also, to whom it will be accounted, who believe in him who raised Jesus, our Lord, from the dead,

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

		[25] who was delivered up for our trespasses, and was raised for our justification.
	6:4-11 (Paul)	[4] Therefore we have been buried with him through baptism into death, in order that just as Christ was raised from the dead through the glory of the Father, so we too may live a new life. [5] For if we have become united with him in the likeness of his death, we will certainly also be united in the likeness of his resurrection. [6] We know that our old man was crucified with him so that the body of sin would no longer dominate us, so that we would no longer be enslaved to sin. [7] (For someone who has died has been freed from sin.) [8] Now if we died with Christ, we believe that we will also live with him. [9] We know that since Christ has been raised from the dead, he is never going to die again; death no longer has mastery over him. [10] For the death he died, he died to sin once for all, but the life he lives, he lives to God. [11] So you too consider yourselves [8] dead to sin, but [9] alive to God in Christ Jesus.
	7:4 (Paul)	[4] Therefore, my brothers, you also were made dead to the law through the body of Christ, that you would be joined to another, to him who was raised from the dead, that we might bring forth fruit to God.
	8:11 (Paul)	[11] But if the Spirit of him who raised up Jesus from the dead dwells in you, he who raised up Christ Jesus from the dead will also give life to your mortal bodies through his Spirit who dwells in you.
	8:34 (Paul)	[34] Who is he who condemns? It is Christ who died, yes rather, who was raised from the dead, who is at the right hand of God, who also makes intercession for us.
	9:15 (Paul)	[17] For the Scripture says to Pharaoh, "For this very purpose I caused you to be raised up, that I might show in you my power, and that my name might be proclaimed in all the earth."
1 Corinthians	6:14 (Paul)	[14] Now God indeed raised the Lord and he will raise us by his power.
	15:1-11 (Paul)	…[4] that he was buried, that he was raised on the third day according to the Scriptures, …(see Gospel of Paul vs Peter chart for details)
	15:12-52 (Paul)	[12] Now if Christ is preached, that he has been raised from the dead, how do some among you say that there is no resurrection of the dead? [13] But if there is no resurrection of the dead, neither has Christ been raised. [14] If Christ has not been raised, then our preaching is in vain, and your faith also is in vain. [15] Yes, we are found false witnesses of God, because we testified about God that he raised up Christ, whom he didn't raise up, if it is so that the dead are not raised. [16] For if the dead aren't raised, neither has Christ been raised. [17] If Christ has not been raised, your faith is vain; you are still in your sins. [18] Then they also who are fallen asleep in Christ have perished. [19] If we have only hoped in Christ in this life, we are of all men most pitiable. [20] But now Christ has been raised from the dead. He became the first fruits of those who are asleep. [21] For since death came by man, the resurrection of the dead also came by man. [22] For as in Adam all die, so also in Christ all will be made alive. [23] But each in his own order: Christ the first fruits, then those who are Christ's, at his coming. [24] Then the end comes, when he will deliver up the Kingdom to God, even the Father; when he will have abolished all rule and all authority and power. [25] For he must reign until he has put all his enemies under his feet. [26] The last enemy that will be abolished is death. [27] For, "He put all things in subjection under his feet." But when he says, "All things are put in subjection," it is evident that he is excepted who subjected all things to him. [28] When all things have been subjected to him, then the Son will also himself be subjected to him who subjected all things to him, that God may be all in all. [29] Or else what will they do who are baptized for the dead? If the dead aren't raised at all, why then are they baptized for the dead? [30] Why do we also stand in jeopardy every hour? [31] I affirm, by the boasting in you which I have in Christ Jesus our Lord, I die daily. [32] If I fought with animals at Ephesus for human purposes, what does it profit me? If the dead are not raised, then "let us eat and drink, for tomorrow we die." [33] Don't be deceived! "Evil companionships corrupt good morals." [34] Wake up righteously, and don't sin, for some have no knowledge of God. I say this to your shame. [35] But someone will say, "How are the dead raised?" and, "With what kind of body do they come?" [36] You foolish one, that which you yourself sow is not made alive unless it dies. [37] That which you sow, you don't sow the body that will be, but a bare grain, maybe of wheat, or of some other kind. [38] But God gives it a body even as it pleased him, and to each seed a body of its own. [39] All flesh is not the same flesh, but there is one flesh of men, another flesh of animals, another of fish, and another of birds. [40] There are also celestial bodies, and terrestrial bodies; but the glory of the celestial differs from that of the terrestrial. [41] There is one glory of the sun, another glory of the moon, and another glory of the stars; for one star differs from another star in glory. [42] So also is the resurrection of the dead. It is sown in corruption; it is raised in incorruption. [43] It is sown in dishonor; it is raised in glory. It is sown in weakness; it is raised in power. [44] It is sown a natural body; it is raised a spiritual body. There is a natural body and there is also a spiritual body. [45] So also it is written, "The first man, Adam, became a living soul." The last Adam became a life-giving spirit. [46] However that which is spiritual isn't first, but that which is natural, then that which is spiritual. [47] The first man is of the earth, made of dust. The second man is the Lord from heaven. [48] As is the one made of dust, such are those who are also made of dust; and as is the heavenly, such are they also that are heavenly. [49] As we have borne the image of those made of dust, let's also bear the image of the heavenly. [50] Now I say this, *brothers, that flesh and blood can't inherit the Kingdom of God; ne [56] The sting of death is sin, and the power of sin is the law. [57] But thanks be to God, who gives us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ. [58] Therefore, my beloved brothers, be steadfast, immovable, always abounding in the Lord's work, because you know that your labor is not in vain in the Lord.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

2 Corinthians	4:14-18 (Paul)	[14] knowing that he who raised the Lord Jesus will raise us also with Jesus, and will present us with you. [15] For all things are for your sakes, that the grace, being multiplied through the many, may cause the thanksgiving to abound to the glory of God. [16] Therefore we don't faint, but though our outward man is decaying, yet our inward man is renewed day by day. [17] For our light affliction, which is for the moment, works for us more and more exceedingly an eternal weight of glory; [18] while we don't look at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen. For the things which are seen are temporal, but the things which are not seen are eternal.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

	5:14-15 (Paul)	[14] For the love of Christ constrains us; because we judge thus, that one died for all, therefore all died. [15] He died for all, that those who live should no longer live to themselves, but to him who for their sakes died and rose again.
Galatians	1:1-5 (Paul)	Paul, an apostle (not from men, neither through man, but through Jesus Christ, and God the Father, who raised him from the dead), [2] and all the *brothers who are with me, to the assemblies of Galatia: [3] Grace to you and peace from God the Father, and our Lord Jesus Christ, [4] who gave himself for our sins, that he might deliver us out of this present evil age, according to the will of our God and Father-- [5] to whom be the glory forever and ever. Amen.
Ephesians	1:14-23 (Paul)	[15] For this cause I also, having heard of the faith in the Lord Jesus which is among you, and the love which you have toward all the saints, [16] don't cease to give thanks for you, making mention of you in my prayers, [17] that the God of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of glory, may give to you a spirit of wisdom and revelation in the knowledge of him; [18] having the eyes of your *hearts enlightened, that you may know what is the hope of his calling, and what are the riches of the glory of his inheritance in the saints, [19] and what is the exceeding greatness of his power toward us who believe, according to that working of the strength of his might [20] which he worked in Christ, when he raised him from the dead, and made him to sit at his right hand in the heavenly places, [21] far above all rule, and authority, and power, and dominion, and every name that is named, not only in this age, but also in that which is to come. [22] He put all things in subjection under his feet, and gave him to be head over all things for the assembly, [23] which is his body, the fullness of him who fills all in all.
	2:4-10 (Paul)	[4] But God, being rich in mercy, for his great love with which he loved us, [5] even when we were dead through our trespasses, made us alive together with Christ (by grace you have been saved), [6] and raised us up with him, and made us to sit with him in the heavenly places in Christ Jesus, [7] that in the ages to come he might show the exceeding riches of his grace in kindness toward us in Christ Jesus; [8] for by grace you have been saved through faith, and that not of yourselves; it is the gift of God, [9] not of works, that no one would boast. [10] For we are his workmanship, created in Christ Jesus for good works, which God prepared before that we would walk in them.
Philippians	3:7-12 (Paul)	[7] However, what things were gain to me, these have I counted loss for Christ. [8] Yes most certainly, and I count all things to be loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus, my Lord, for whom I suffered the loss of all things, and count them nothing but refuse, that I may gain Christ [9] and be found in him, not having a righteousness of my own, that which is of the law, but that which is through faith in Christ, the righteousness which is from God by faith; [10] that I may know him, and the power of his resurrection, and the fellowship of his sufferings, becoming conformed to his death; [11] if by any means I may attain to the resurrection from the dead. [12] Not that I have already obtained, or am already made perfect; but I press on, if it is so that I may take hold of that for which also I was taken hold of by Christ Jesus.
Colossians	2:8-15 (Paul)	thanksgiving. [8] Be careful that you don't let anyone rob you through his philosophy and vain deceit, after the tradition of men, after the elements of the world, and not after Christ. [9] For in him all the fullness of the Godhead dwells bodily, [10] and in him you are made full, who is the head of all principality and power; [11] in whom you were also circumcised with a circumcision not made with hands, in the putting off of the body of the sins of the flesh, in the circumcision of Christ; [12] having been buried with him in baptism, in which you were also raised with him through faith in the working of God, who raised him from the dead. [13] You were dead through your trespasses and the uncircumcision of your flesh. He made you alive together with him, having forgiven us all our trespasses, [14] wiping out the handwriting in ordinances which was against us; and he has taken it out of the way, nailing it to the cross; [15] having stripped the principalities and the powers, he made a show of them openly, triumphing over them in it.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

	3:1-4 (Paul)	[1] If then you were raised together with Christ, seek the things that are above, where Christ is, seated on the right hand of God. [2] Set your mind on the things that are above, not on the things that are on the earth. [3] For you died, and your life is hidden with Christ in God. [4] When Christ, our life, is revealed, then you will also be revealed with him in glory.
1 Thessalonians	1:9-10 (Paul)	[9] For they themselves report concerning us what kind of a reception we had from you; and how you turned to God from idols, to serve a living and true God, [10] and to wait for his Son from heaven, whom he raised from the dead--Jesus, who delivers us from the wrath to come.
2 Timothy	2:8-10 (Paul)	[8] Remember Jesus Christ, risen from the dead, of the seed of David, according to my Good News, [9] in which I suffer hardship to the point of chains as a criminal. But God's word isn't chained. [10] Therefore I endure all things for the chosen ones' sake, that they also may obtain the salvation which is in Christ Jesus with eternal glory. (see Gospel – 2 Timothy 2:8-10 chart for details)
1 Peter	1:1-5 (Paul)	[1Pe 1:1] Peter, an apostle of Jesus Christ, to the chosen ones who are living as foreigners in the Dispersion in Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Asia, and Bithynia, [2] according to the foreknowledge of God the Father, in sanctification of the Spirit, that you may obey Jesus Christ and be sprinkled with his blood: Grace to you and peace be multiplied. [3] Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who according to his great mercy became our father again to a living hope through the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead, [4] to an incorruptible and undefiled inheritance that doesn't fade away, reserved in Heaven for you, [5] who by the power of God are guarded through faith for a salvation ready to be revealed in the last time.
	1:21 (Peter)	[17] If you call on him as Father, who without respect of persons judges according to each man's work, pass the time of your living as foreigners here in reverent fear: [18] knowing that you were redeemed, not with corruptible things, with silver or gold, from the useless way of life handed down from your fathers, [19] but with precious blood, as of a faultless and pure lamb, the blood of Christ; [20] who was foreknown indeed before the foundation of the world, but was revealed at the end of times for your sake, [21] who through him are believers in God, who raised him from the dead, and gave him glory; so that your faith and hope might be in God.
	3:21-22 (Peter)	[21] This is a symbol of baptism, which now saves you--not the putting away of the filth of the flesh, but the answer of a good conscience toward God, through the resurrection of Jesus Christ, [22] who is at the right hand of God, having gone into heaven, angels and authorities and powers being made subject to him.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

See also*: Resurrection of Jesus the Messiah (Christ)

The Gospel of Jesus the Messiah (Christ)

The Gospel that Paul Preached

Paul and the Gospel on Mars Hill (Areopagus)

The Gospel that Peter Preached

Gospel of Paul vs Peter (includes Charts)

Gospel of Jesus vs Paul

Faith (Pistis and Fides; Roman Imperial vs Christian Faith)

Repentance

What is the Gospel (Various Video Presentations)

Baptism (Christian, Water)

Galatians (Beginning)

Romans

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Simple Gospel According to the Bible

http://www.jesusisprecious.org/fundamentals/gospel.htm

Excerpt:

What exactly is the Gospel? The word “Gospel” means “Good News” or “Glad Tidings.” There is no need to guess what the “Gospel” is because the Bible plainly tells us. The “Gospel” is the Good News of Christ's DEATH on the cross for our sins, His BURIAL and bodily RESURRECTION three days later:

1st Corinthians 15:1-4, “Moreover, brethren, I declare unto you the gospel which I preached unto you, which also ye have received, and wherein ye stand; By which also ye are saved, if ye keep in memory what I preached unto you, unless ye have believed in vain. For I delivered unto you first of all that which I also received, how that Christ died for our sins according to the scriptures; And that he was buried, and that he rose again the third day according to the scriptures.”

We are saved by BELIEVING “the Gospel,” which is the power of God unto salvation. Romans 1:16, “For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; to the Jew first, and also to the Greek.” John 6:28-29, “Then said they unto him, What shall we do, that we might work the works of God? Jesus answered and said unto them, This is the work of God, that ye believe on him whom he hath sent.” It is that simple to be saved. If you admit that you are a needy sinner in God's sight, and you receive Christ's sacrifice on the cross as payment for your sins, believing that He was buried and bodily resurrected three days later, YOU ARE IMMEDIATELY, SECURELY AND FOREVER SAVED!!!

What About Repentance and Salvation?

In the Gospel of John, the words “believe” and “believed” are mentioned 85 times, but the word “repent” is not mentioned even once. Clearly, the person who BELIEVES has also repented. This is not difficult to understand, when you learn the truth that the Greek meaning of “repent” in the Bible to be saved is metanoia, which is simply “a change of mind.” Repentance is a change of mind unto the Gospel itself.

We learn in the Bible that God gave His law to humanity, to show us our sinnership. Romans 3:19, “Now we know that what things soever the law saith, it saith to them who are under the law: that every mouth may be stopped, and all the world may become guilty before God.” The law of God shows us that we are guilty sinners in God's sight (see also Galatians 3:24-26). We are woeful sinners, deserving of death and punishment in the Lake of Fire (i.e., Hell). This is the BAD NEWS! No one ever got saved who didn't admit to being a sinner in God's eyes. 1st John 1:7, “If we say that we have no sin, we deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in us. If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness. If we say that we have not sinned, we make him a liar, and his word is not in us.” To be saved, you MUST realize that you are a guilty sinner for breaking God's commandments. We are all horrible sinners! We've all lied! We've all coveted! We've all sinned! Romans 3:23, “For all have sinned, and come short of the glory of God.” This is the BAD NEWS!!!

Repentance is simply the admission that I am as guilty a sinner as God has declared me to be in His Word. Let me make it very simple—YOU ARE A GUILTY SINNER IN GOD'S SIGHT, and unless you accept Christ's sacrifice on the cross as full-payment for your sins, you will spend eternity burning in the fires of Hell.

What Repentance is Not!

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Repentance is NOT turning away from sinful behavior, not reformation, not a desire to clean up one's life of sin, not forsaking the world, not turning over a new leaf, not a willingness to turn away from sin, not a change of heart toward sinful bad habits, not a change of life, et cetera. As we have already learned from examining the Greek word, metanoia, repentance is simply a change of mind. Acts 20:21, speaks of "repentance toward God." Repentance is toward God by faith in the Gospel, evidenced by the hundreds of New Testament Scriptures that simply tell us to BELIEVE to be saved. For example: 1st Corinthians 1:21, "For after that in the wisdom of God the world by wisdom knew not God, it pleased God by the foolishness of preaching TO SAVE THEM THAT BELIEVE."

Also, please notice that the entire purpose for which the Epistle of 1st John was written, is so that "ye may know that ye have eternal life" (1st John 5:13). Yet, carefully notice that the apostle John doesn't mention the word "repent" even once in all of 1st John. THAT SPEAKS VOLUMES!!! If turning away from sinful behavior was required to be saved, then no doubt John would have made a big deal of it in his Epistle.

The Gospel of Jesus the Messiah (Christ)

The Gospel that Paul Preached

Paul and the Gospel on Mars Hill (Areopagus)

The Gospel that Peter Preached

Gospel of Paul vs Peter (includes Charts)

Gospel of Jesus vs Paul

Faith (Pistis and Fides; Roman Imperial vs Christian Faith)

Repentance

What is the Gospel (Various Video Presentations)

Baptism (Christian, Water)

Galatians (Beginning)

Romans

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Did Peter and Paul Preach Different Gospels? [PDF]
https://www.bereanbiblesociety.org/wp-content/uploads/2012/10/DID-PETER-AND-PAUL-PREACH-DIFFERENT-GOSPELS.pdf

Did Peter and Paul Preach the Same Gospel? (?? Not sure about this ???) https://ambassadorsfortherisenchristministries.org/2009/03/02/did-peter-and-paul-preach-the-same-gospel/

https://endofdaysprophecy.wordpress.com/2016/09/19/is-there-only-one-gospel-in-the-bible-did-peter-and-paul-preach-the-same-gospel/

https://forwhatsaiththescriptures.org/2014/01/25/peter-and-paul-same-gospel/

(Raises some good points, but seems a little arrogant or at the least dogmatic at points to me.)

What is the Gospel?
http://www.faithfacts.org/bible-101/what-is-the-gospel
(Appears to have a Preterist perspective)

Did Peter and Paul Preach Different Gospels? [PDF]
https://www.bereanbiblesociety.org/wp-content/uploads/2012/10/DID-PETER-AND-PAUL-PREACH-DIFFERENT-GOSPELS.pdf

Peter vs. Paul: Did Paul Change the Gospel Message?
http://theheraldofgrace.blogspot.com/2012/06/peter-vs-paul-did-paul-change-gospel.html

Excerpt:

III. The Gospel presentation of Peter Vs. the Gospel presentation of Paul

This now brings us to the issue of what was the original Gospel message and what was the Gospel message that the Apostle Paul preached. Is there any difference? If so why, and was it necessary? Does it prove the argument that Paul changed the Gospel message? In order to determine the answers to these questions we need to see the elements of the preaching of Peter in comparison with that of the Preaching of Paul. The way we must investigate this issue is comparing the Gospel elements in Peter's Preaching to the Gospel elements in Paul's preaching.

Peter's elements of the Gospel are as follows:

1) That Jesus is Lord [God] and Messiah [Christ] -Acts 2:36
2) That Jesus is God's appointed servant which was slain- Acts 3:22+23
3) That Jesus is God's resurrected Son- Acts 3:26
4) That Jesus is God's chosen Savior [Christ, Messiah]of Mankind- Acts 4:12

These listed above were the elements that made up Peter's Gospel message. So what is Paul's elements of the Gospel?

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Paul's elements of the Gospel are as follows:

1) That Jesus is the Christ [Messiah], the Son of God- Acts 9:20, 13:33
2) That Jesus is the promised Messiah [Christ]- Acts 13:33
3) That Jesus is the slain Messiah [Christ]-Acts 13:27-29
4) That Jesus is the resurrected Messiah [Christ]- Acts 13:30+31

These listed above were the elements that made up Paul's Gospel message. We must note here that the Apostle Paul spent some time being discipled by the believers in Damascus before he began to make his Gospel presentation after he converted to faith in Jesus as the Messiah. The question is, is the same Gospel as the one Peter preached? When we closely compare the Gospel presentations of Peter and Paul, we find the following points between the respective elements of their Gospel messages to be similar.

1) The Divinity of Jesus

a Peter states that Jesus' status is elevated to that of "Lord" in Acts 2:36. The Greek word that is translated to this English word "Lord", I have discovered that it also means "Supreme over all" and "God". Peter therefore testifies therefore that God elevated Jesus to divine status equal to His own divine status.

b) Paul states that Jesus' status is elevated to that of being "the Son of God" by reason of Jesus' relationship to God the Creator. God is the Father of Jesus, naturally born to Him and thereby Jesus is the only begotten Son of God. God the creator made Jesus divine, through the process of natural child birth He made him God and man -Acts 9:20, 13:33

2) The Messiah ship of Jesus

a) Peter states that Jesus was Christ. Christ is the English translation of the Greek word which is also a translation of the Hebrew word that is again translated into the English word Messiah. In other words, Christ and Messiah are terms that refer to the same thing. They are exchangeable in English. It is notable that Peter only uses the word "Christ" when speaking in reference to Jesus when he needs to communicate to an audience that knows Greek and or Hebrew.- Acts 2:36, 4:12

b) Paul also states that Jesus was Christ [Messiah] that was prophesied about by the Holy Prophets in his Gospel message.-Acts 13:23

3) The Death of Jesus, the Messiah [Christ]

a) Peter states that Jesus, the chosen Messiah [Christ] was slain -Acts 3:22+23

b) Paul also states that Jesus, the Messiah was slain-Acts 13:27-29

4) The Resurrection of Jesus the Messiah [Christ], God's Son

a) Peter states that Jesus, God's son and appointed Messiah was resurrected from the dead by God the Creator.- Acts 3:32

b) Paul also states that Jesus was raised up from the dead by God the Creator- Acts 13:30+31

As we can see, Peter and Paul used the same four elements in their Gospel presentations: 1)The Divinity of Jesus, 2)The Messiah ship of Jesus, 3) The death of Jesus, the Messiah and 4) The Resurrection of

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Jesus, the Messiah. Seeing that they used the same elements in their Gospel presentations, this proves again that the Apostle Paul did not change the Gospel Message in any elementary way. However, there is a noticeable difference between their Gospel presentations. The difference is seen in the perspectives they each preached from as well as the audience they preached to.

IV. The Differences Between the Gospel Presentations

When Peter preached the Gospel, he preached it from the perspective of being an eye witness. When Paul preached the Gospel, he preached it from the perspective of being a second-hand witness. The difference between that being a first-hand witness and a second-hand witness is the quality and the credibility of sources. Peter quality of sources were the other Apostles who walked with Jesus, heard Jesus teach, seen Jesus suffer and seen Jesus be crucified. He and the Apostles also seen Jesus alive after his passion and fellowshipped with Jesus for 40 days (Acts 1, John 21). So Peter's sources for his Gospel presentation are of the highest quality and authenticity. Now this is important to understand, the second-hand witness presentation of Paul rests upon the quality and authenticity of his sources. If there is a degree of a lesser quality of credibility, then Paul's Gospel presentation is of lesser credibility than that of Peters. So what are the Apostle Paul's sources for his Gospel presentations? They are the same Apostles of Christ and the disciples who heard Jesus speak, seen Jesus suffer and die on the cross and seen him be raised from the dead. Paul's Gospel presentation was not questioned by the Apostles of Christ when He and Barnabas made their missionary report to them. (Acts 15) After Peter presented the argument to not burden the Gentile believers in Christ with the keeping of the Law of Moses, which no one Jew of them could keep. The salvation of God was presented to the Jews not on the basis of keeping the Law of Moses' administration, but rather it was offered to them on the basis of faith on the death and resurrection of Jesus, the Messiah [Christ]. It appeared to them that God made the same offer to the Gentiles who would choose to believe in Jesus, the Christ and to make them observe the law that no one could keep except for Jesus was not just or fair or right. This was also the offer of salvation in Paul's presentation of the Gospel to the Gentiles and Jews outside of Israel. So, we see here that the quality and credibility of Paul's presentation of the Gospel is equal of that of Peter's for they both testified from the same sources. Even though Paul is preaching from the perspective of a second-hand witness, his Gospel presentation is equal to Peter's Gospel presentation.

Another difference between the Gospel presentations of Peter and Paul is that Peter's presentations were geared toward the Jewish audience until he was directed to make a presentation to the Gentiles in Ceasarea. Paul's Gospel presentations took on the added elements of preaching against idolatry and Paganism, elements that Peter never had the opportunity to develop in his early Gospel presentation. Peter's missionary work did not start until Paul met his end. Peter's work was more about the encouragement of the believers that Paul and Barnabas were used of God to reach with the Gospel presentation. This however. does not indicate a change in the Gospel message by Paul, for Peter did not come behind Paul to change what he had preached to them for them to believe for their salvation. Peter rather came behind Paul to confirm what he taught in those fledgling churches. When Peter preached his Gospel message, he emphasized the knowledge of the ministry of God through Christ to the Jews and accused the Jews of slaying Christ. Paul used the knowledge of his audience conscience of righteousness, their spiritual awareness and revelation of the mystery of the Gospel when preaching his Gospel to the Jews and Gentiles outside of Israel.

V. The Verdict

So the question is, was this enough of a change to make Paul guilty of changing the Gospel message? The answer is no. Why? Because when Peter had to make a Gospel presentation to the Gentiles in Ceasarea under the direction of God, he adjusted his message and did not accuse the Gentiles of slaying Jesus. He left that accusation squarely up his Jewish brethren that did not believe in Christ. He rather told the Gentiles what the Jews did to Jesus, the Messiah. They heard, and believed and thereby received

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Christ. Paul preached and those who heard him also believed the Gospel of Jesus, the Christ, the Son of God. Since then the Gospel message has been presented in various ways but always remaining true to the fundamental elements of the Gospel of Jesus the Christ which always contains the four elements first proclaimed by Apostles Peter and Paul. To them and the rest of the Apostles the Church of Christ owes its growth and founding beliefs that has lasted for over 2000 years without change.

Two Gospels – The Apostle Peter's and The Apostle Paul's (by Steve Santini)

http://www.musterion8.com/two.html

In the development of the first century church there were two gospels. The first gospel was that of the apostle Peter and the eleven other apostles. The second gospel was that of the apostle Paul and others who were, in time, raised up to teach this gospel with Paul. It seems to this author that the simplest and most effective manner in which to communicate this subject is to list corresponding differences in these two gospels with a concluding commentary.

Peter's gospel was a reiteration of all Jesus said and did while in the world. It is supported by the Holy Spirit through its gift to the souls of those who believe.

Paul's gospel was a revelation through the Spirit of Christ from the ascended Lord seated at the right hand of the Father.

Peter's gospel is a continuation from the beginning when man was made a living soul.

Paul's gospel has its beginnings before the foundations of the world in the generation of the mystery of the Spirit of Christ. (This Spirit of Christ was known as the Spirit of Truth in John's gospel.)

Peter's gospel comes from his acquired faith.

Paul's gospel comes from his gifted inherent faith.

Peter's gospel is from the Holy Spirit comforter.

Paul's gospel is from the subsequent Spirit of Truth comforter.

Peter's gospel is the foundation for the household of God.

Paul's gospel is the edifice of the household of God.

Peter's gospel holds the keys to the kingdom of God.

Paul's gospel reveals the kingdom of God.

Peter's gospel is one of entrance.

Paul's gospel is one of establishment.

Peter's gospel begins in spiritual power.

Paul's gospel ends in spiritual understanding.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Peter's gospel ministers to the children coming into the family of God.

Paul's gospel brings the family of God unto maturity.

Paul was a saint

Peter became one faithful in Christ Jesus

Peter's gospel raised Paul up unto the revelation from Jesus Christ. Peter's foundational gospel was preached by Paul when he first went into a new area to establish a church. Before Peter completely relinquished his misdirected loyalty to Jewish supremacy in the church, he resisted Paul's revelation where there was no difference between Jew and Gentile. Paul's gospel was never preached by Peter. In his last epistle written near the end of his life, Peter acknowledged the validity of Paul's gospel by stating Paul had written the same things yet in a different manner.

In Paul's ministration these two gospels came together as the one contiguous gospel for the growth of the household of God.

Commentary: In the epistle to the Ephesians, Paul makes evident the sources of these two gospels. In Ephesians 2:20 he writes to the faithful in Christ Jesus:

> And (ye) are built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone.

Then in Ephesians 3:4,5 he writes:

> Whereby when you read, ye may understand my knowledge in the mystery of Christ, which in other ages was not made known unto the sons of men as it is now revealed unto his holy apostles and prophets.

Paul used words very purposefully. Notice this difference between verses 2:20 and 3:5. The foundation came from apostles and prophets while the mystery was revealed to "holy" apostles and prophets. There is a difference between "apostles and prophets" and "holy apostles and prophets." Understanding this difference leads to the revelation of the great mystery given to the apostle Paul.

The Gospel of Jesus the Messiah (Christ)

The Gospel that Paul Preached

The Gospel that Peter Preached

Gospel of Paul vs Peter (includes Charts)

Gospel of Jesus vs Paul

Faith (Pistis and Fides; Roman Imperial vs Christian Faith)

Repentance

What is the Gospel (Various Video Presentations)

Baptism (Christian, Water)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Gospel of Circumcision and the Gospel of the Uncircumcision http://rightwordtruth.com/the-gospel-of-the-circumcision-and-the-gospel-of-the-uncircumcision/

Excerpt:

Peter preached the gospel of the circumcision and Paul the gospel of the uncircumcision. The emphasis of Peter's message was that Israel should repent and be baptized so that they would realize the fulfillment of the national blessings promised them upon the return of Christ.

Paul, on the other hand, while anxious to see Israel accept their Messiah, had as his primary concern the salvation of individuals. Paul's first concern was not the national blessings but the individual blessings that come with salvation.

Paul's charge from Jesus: "…this man is my chosen instrument to carry my name before Gentiles and kings and the people of Israel." (Acts 9:15)

For more regard the Gospel that Paul preached see:

The Gospel According to Paul (chart of all occurrences by Paul of "Gospel" in the Bible)

The Gospel of Jesus the Messiah (Christ)

The Gospel that Paul Preached

Paul and the Gospel on Mars Hill (Areopagus)

The Gospel that Peter Preached

Gospel of Paul vs Peter (includes Charts)

Gospel of Jesus vs Paul

Faith (Pistis and Fides; Roman Imperial vs Christian Faith)

Repentance

What is the Gospel (Various Video Presentations)

Baptism (Christian, Water)

Galatians (Beginning)

Romans

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Gospel of the Circumcision and the Uncircumcision (re: Gal. 2: 1-10)

http://www.lavistachurchofchrist.org/LVSermons/GospelOfCircumcisionAndUncircumcision.htm

Excerpt:

I. I suppose a casual reader could read verse 7 from our text and come away with the idea that two different messages were being taught.

A. One being taught to the Gentiles and a different message being taught to the Jews.

B. Yet the goal of the gospel was to unite Jews and Gentiles - Ephesians 2:11-18

C. Yet, we also know that the Bible teaches there is one faith - Ephesians 4:5

D. The teaching of a different gospel was condemned - Galatians 1:6

II. In order to effectively teach the gospel of Christ, different audiences will require different emphasis

A. Put yourself in the early days of the church. Where would you begin teaching about Jesus?

1. If you were teaching a Jew, it would be best to start with a common ground, say the prophesies concerning the Messiah

a. The Jews had the advantage of knowing the Laws of God - Romans 3:1-2

b. There is already a disposition to please God

c. We see Philip teaching the eunuch by starting with the prophet Isaiah - Acts 8:30-36

(1) He started with what was accepted, taught him about Jesus, and eventually discussed salvation.

d. In Peter's sermon to Jews - Acts 2:17-36

(1) Peter started with a miracle and pointed out how this fulfilled prophecy

(2) He then discussed what most Jews knew about Jesus - the miracles that he did, proving that God was behind him.

(3) He offers testimony and prophecy to show that Jesus was resurrected

(4) He sums up by pointing out they were responsible for the death of their savior.

2. If you were teaching a Gentile, it would require a different starting point, because there is no common acceptance of the Scriptures.

a. We see this in Paul's sermon to the Athenians - Acts 17:22-25

(1) Paul starts with the acceptance of higher beings – gods, and then moves quickly to the idea of a supreme God

(2) He then discusses how idols cannot capture the idea of such a being nor could anything made by human hands.

(3) He moved on to the need to serve this God and God's right to judge the world's service to him.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

(4) He finally spoke of the proof God has given – the raising of the dead

(5) This was the sticking point for his audience

3. The same message is taught, but different avenues were used to present the message.

a. It required different starting points

b. It required different evidence and lines of reasoning

B. There is more to teaching than the words. We are also representatives of Christ to the world.

1. How would you live to best gain the confidence of your audience, showing that you are a reliable authority for learning about God?

2. The Jews thought they knew how to serve God.

a. A Gentile would be unable to teach a Jew.

b. Many areas of Jewish society was unreachable by a Gentile

3. When Paul took Timothy to work with him, he had him circumcised - Acts 16:1-3

a. Why? Because of the Jews in Timothy's region.

b. Even though circumcision was of no direct profit - I Corinthians 7:18-20

c. It was necessary to reach the Jews with the Gospel - I Corinthians 9:19-20

d. Paul was not under the Law. He was not bound by its teachings, but he lived by the rules of the Law so he might reach those who lived by that Law.

4. It went the other way as well, when Paul taught the Gentiles, he followed their customs to the extent that he could - I Corinthians 9:21

a. He did not act as if there was no law at all, but where he could take on the customs of the Gentiles without violating the laws of Christ, he so did.

5. Even to new Christians, he tailored his message to benefit his audience - I Corinthians 9:22-23

a. We can see it in I Corinthians 3:1-3. The Corinthians were not ready (mature enough) to receive all that Paul wanted to teach.

b. Solid food belongs to the mature - Hebrews 5:11-14

C. Paul specialized in teaching Gentiles about Christ. Peter specialized in teaching Jews about Christ

1. Paul was appointed a preacher, apostle, and teacher of the Gentiles - I Timothy 2:7

2. His purpose was to bring obedience of faith to all Gentiles - Romans 1:5

3. It does not mean that Paul worked exclusively with the Gentiles. When he entered a new city, he generally first approach the Jews - Acts 17:1-4

4. Peter was the first to preach to the Gentiles - Acts 10

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

III. What it means to you and I

A. We must search for the best ways to present the Gospel to our chosen audience.

1. We do not alter the Gospel, but we do learn what is needed in our community.

2. What are the prevalent beliefs, both true and false?

a. What is the dominant denomination?

b. What is the society's view about religion

(1) In Minnesota, a strong Catholic and Lutheran population thought that it was impolite to discuss controversial things such as politics or religion among friends.

(2) In North Carolina, it was common for neighborhood women of varying beliefs to have weekly Bible studies in someone's home.

(3) In New York, religion was treated as a social club you belonged to. Even hints of conviction in beliefs, especially Christian beliefs, were openly opposed with great hatred in public forums, such as radio or newspapers.

3. What is needed by the people in Harlem will differ greatly from the Amish in Lancaster, Pennsylvania.

4. My grandfather was a preacher. I have looked at some of his lesson notes. The topics he had to address are often quite different than what I handle.

a. Homosexuality was not discussed in his day. I have to address it in the pulpit.

b. I have to discuss tangled family and persuade young men and women not to imitate the mistakes of their parents.

c. My grandfather's day was more like the gospel of the circumcision. My day is more like the gospel of the uncircumcision.

B. To teach the gospel, you need some acceptance by society.

1. A flashy polyester suit among the Amish will not gain you an audience to hear the truth.

2. In many parts of New England, you are considered an outsider even after living there for five years or more.

C. One of the saddest things I saw was in the Philippines. For years preachers have traveled to this country, spending two to four weeks. Most of that time is spent hitting as many areas as possible.

1. As a result, the people know the plan of salvation inside and out.

2. But few have taught why fornication is wrong. Why bribery is wrong, Why lying is wrong.

3. They don't understand that they should support their preachers. Money has always come from the U.S. to support their preachers.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

They see preachers as owning certain congregations.
Few preachers preach in the town where they live.

4. Why? Because the more knowledgeable among us only visit. Few stay and learn what their society needs. Almost none learn the native language.

   a. A popular topic by visiting preachers is marriage, divorce, and remarriage, such a hot topic in the U.S. that it is now known by its initials MDR.

   b. What is sadly humorous is that the Filipinos are most Catholic and Muslim. Their constitution makes divorce near impossible and extremely rare.

   c. What is rampant is men and women walking away from their spouses. Adultery is common, but rarely discussed.

5. I suspect the same thing happens in Africa

D. We have a rising Hispanic population throughout the U.S. How many of us are learning Spanish so we can teach?

1. When I moved to Omaha, I brushed up on ASL to be able to talk to the deaf daughter of one of our members.

2. From there I was able to study with her deaf boyfriend, who obeyed the Gospel.

IV. What is needed are preachers willing to go and learn a region's culture, to spend time developing a stable congregation.

A. Half of a preacher's duties is to reach the lost

B. The other half is to see that the saved remain faithful - Ephesians 4:11-13

1. First journey - Acts 14:21-22

2. Second journey - Acts 15:40-41

3. Third journey - Acts 18:22-23

C. If we are going to work among those who speak another language - learn it!

D. Live among those you are teaching to gain respectability and a knowledge of what they need to learn.

Differences Between Peter's and Paul's Ministry

http://www.ephesians611.com/differences-between-peter-and-pauls-ministry/

The difference starts in Galatians 2:7

> " 7 But contrariwise, when they saw that the gospel of the uncircumcision was committed unto me, as the gospel of the circumcision was unto Peter;"

Paul was the apostle to the gentiles and Peter was the apostle to the Jews. Paul had a special revelation from Jesus that Peter did not have which was "The Mystery Revealed". This is the major difference between these two men.

Reference: Romans 16:26 and Ephesians 3:9

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Now, it's possible to take this too far such as some people do where they only go by what Paul has written in his epistles because we are gentiles in God's "mystery program", and they ignore the rest of the Bible. Paul address this in 2 Tim 3:16:

> 16 All scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness:

The Bible is an integrated package and although the Mystery was revealed to Paul, we have to take in the entire volume of the scripture to see how everything fits together.

In the early days of the Church which begins in Acts 2, the Christian's were primarily made up of Jews. Peter was emerging as the spokesperson for the church, then known as "The Way". Peter's message was geared towards a Jewish audience and uses much more Jewish references. Because of this, you will see a difference in approach between Peter and Paul. You will see Paul preaching against idolatry and paganism where these were things Peter didn't have to develop in his message. Peter references the "Kingdom", referring to the millennial Kingdom and Paul doesn't use this approach to the gentiles.

It's interesting to note that since Paul is the person hand-picked by Jesus to take the message of the Gospel to gentiles and Peter the one to take the Christ's message to the Jews, it doesn't follow logically that the Catholic Church refers to Peter as the first Pope. There are many more arguments to be made regarding Christ being the Rock the church is built on, but Peter being called to preach to the Jews also refutes the Catholic position.

Differences between Peter and Paul's Message (???? Not sure; needs more vetting)

http://graceambassadors.com/midacts/list-petervspaul

Excerpt:

Peter and Paul never taught the same gospel. When Peter taught the kingdom gospel at Pentecost, Saul was rejecting the Messiah. When Paul preached the gospel of the grace of God, Peter's gospel of the kingdom to Israel was limited to the circumcision.

Below are the six major issues of distinction between what Peter taught and what Paul taught. The main similarity between the two messages exists in the person of the Lord Jesus Christ (Eph 1:10).

See next page…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Peter* taught:	Paul taught:
1. Israel and Prophecy
Israel is still standing and prophecy is being fulfilled. (Acts 2:16-17; 3:21,24-26)	Israel is fallen and the prophecies are postponed. (Rom 3:10,19;11:11,25; 16:25)
2. Apostolic responsibility
Salvation is of the Jews led by the twelve apostles. (John 4:22; Mat 19:28; 1 Pet 1:10; Rev 21:14)	Salvation sent to Gentiles through Paul, the Apostle of the Gentiles. (Rom 11:13; Col 1:25; 2 Tim 1:11; 1 Cor 3:10)
3. Justification
Salvation and the law; justification by faith in Jesus as the Messiah accompanied by necessary works. (Jam 2:24; 1 John 2:5; Mat 19:27; Heb 10:26)	Salvation apart from the law; justification by grace through faith in the cross work of Jesus Christ. (Rom 4:5; Eph 2:8-9; Tit 3:5; 1 Cor 15:1-4)
4. The Church
Separation between the Jew and Gentile; Israel is God's chosen people. Gentiles blessed through Israel. (Mat 10:5; Luke 24:49; Acts 11:19)	No longer Jew nor Gentile but all are part of a new creature in Christ called his Body. (Gal 3:28; Col 3:11; Eph 2:15; 1 Cor 12:13)
5. God's representation
God's holy nation, the little flock of Israel, is His earthly representation from among the world. (Isa 61:6; Rev 7:1-8; 1 Pet 2:5,9)	Gentile Ambassadors are His representation to a world in total rebellion. (2 Cor 5:20; 1 Cor 12:20; 2 Tim 2:2)
6. Destiny
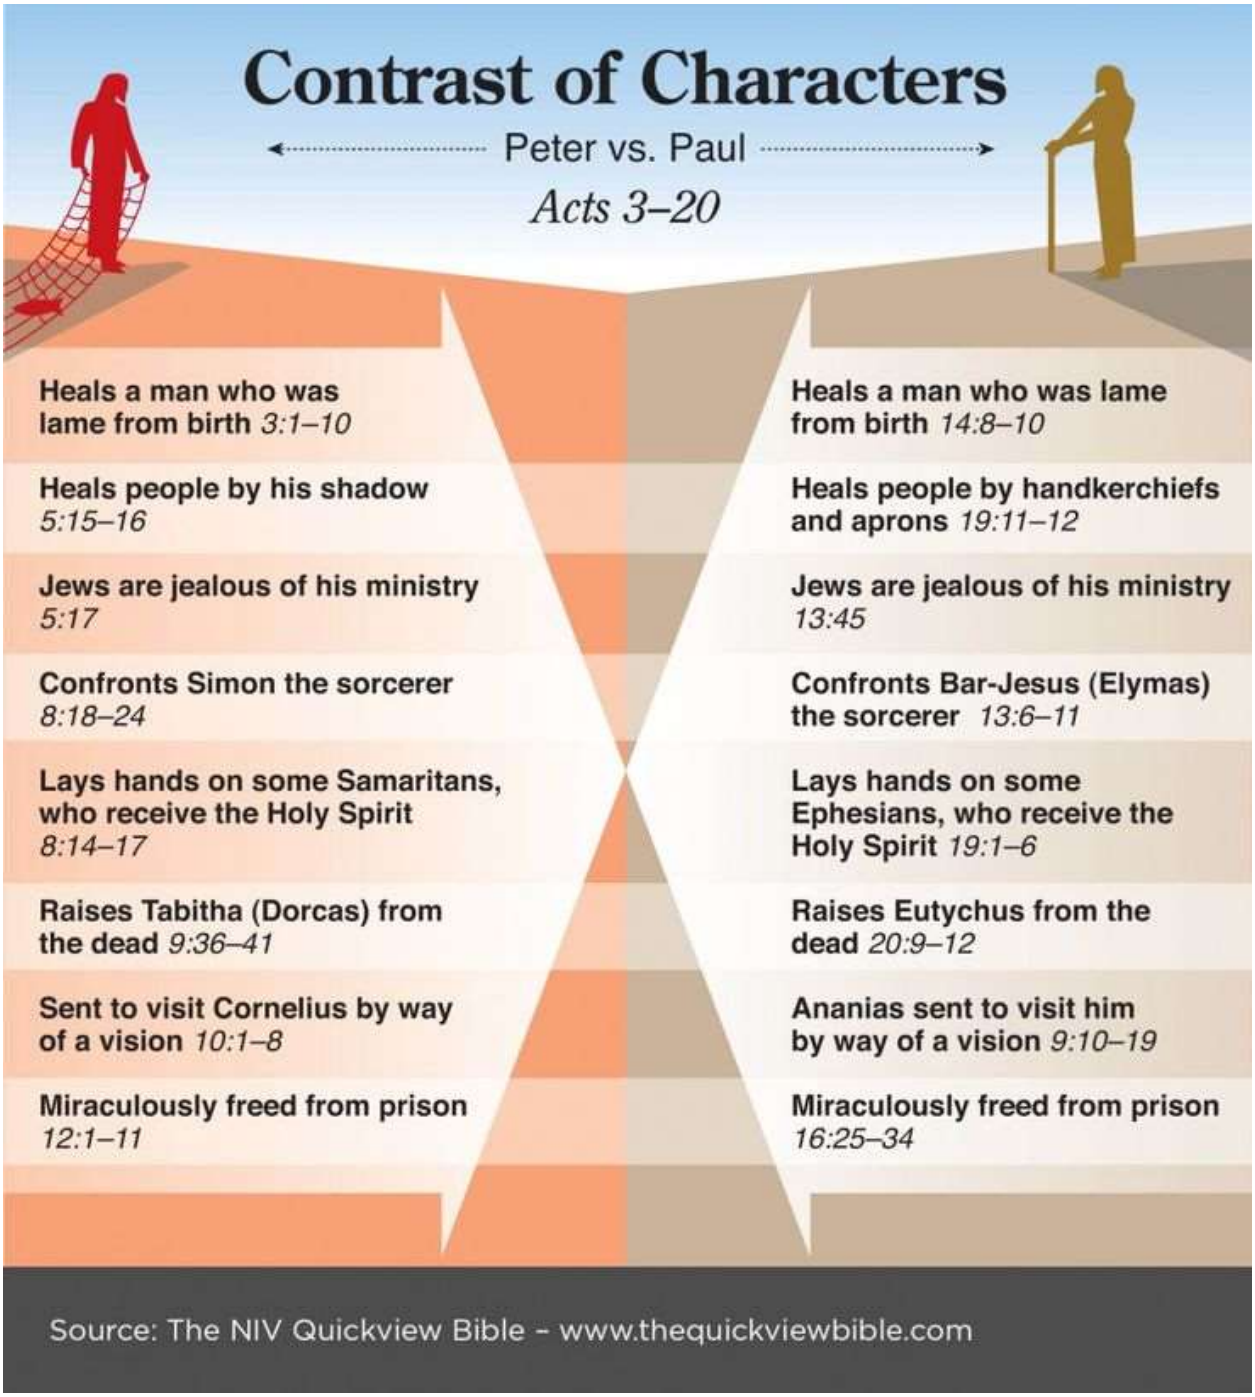
Promised to receive an earthly inheritance in the kingdom. (1 Pet 1:4; Mat 6:10; Heb 13:14; Rev 21:2)	Promise of an heavenly position in God's universal dominion. (Phil 3:20; Eph 2:6; 1 Thess 4:17)

* Peter is used as representative of the twelve apostles during their kingdom and Pentecostal ministry.
 There are three churches mentioned by name in the Bible; listed are two.
 In the dispensation of the fullness of times both of these things will be brought together in Christ (Eph 1:10).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

How many times Peter vs Paul mentioned in the Bible:



Galatians – Beginning (Top)
Galatians – Maps
Galatians – Intro
Galatians – Charts
Galatians – Overviews
Galatians – Getz Videos
Galatians – NT Wright related
Galatians - Commentary
Galatians – Related Topics

The Gospel of Jesus the Messiah (Christ)
The Gospel that Paul Preached
Paul and the Gospel on Mars Hill (Areopagus)
The Gospel that Peter Preached
Gospel of Paul vs Peter (includes Chart)
Gospel of Jesus vs Paul
Faith (Pistis and Fides; Roman Imperial vs Christian Faith)
Repentance
What is the Gospel (Various Video Presentations)
Baptism (Christian, Water)

Galatians (Beginning)
Romans

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Contrast of Characters: Peter vs Paul (Acts 3-20)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Gospel of Jesus vs Paul

Christianity Today: Scot McKnight: Jesus vs Paul (2010) [Recommended]
http://www.christianitytoday.com/ct/2010/december/9.25.html (Subscription required for full article)

Many biblical scholars have noted that Jesus preached almost exclusively about the kingdom of heaven, while Paul highlighted justification by faith—and not vice versa. What gives?

Above CT article referenced by the following articles…

Overview
http://www.christianitytoday.com/biblestudies/j/jesus-vs-paul.html

Evangelical New Testament scholars (and their students) seem to be divided into two main camps: those who emphasize Jesus and the kingdom, and those who focus on Paul and justification by faith. While this seems to be a knotty problem, unprecedented in church history, such theological turf wars are all too common. As Paul disapprovingly told the Corinthians, "One of you says, 'I follow Paul'; another, 'I follow Apollos'; another, 'I follow Cephas'; still another, 'I follow Christ.' Is Christ divided? Was Paul crucified for you? Were you baptized into the name of Paul– (1 Cor. 1:12–13). For Paul, it's all about Jesus.

So how do we bring Jesus and Paul together, while doing justice to both? How do we hold to the doctrine of the full inspiration of Scripture, allowing Paul and Jesus to speak for themselves rather than fitting them into our preconceived theological categories? Which gets priority? Which comes first—kingdom or justification? New Testament scholar Scot McKnight says the answer is not either/or, but both/and.

Corresponding study resource [Note: includes copy of above CT Article] …

CT Bible Study: Jesus vs Paul [Recommended]
http://stanguthrie.com/wp-content/uploads/2010/03/CT242-JesusvsPaul.pdf [PDF]

Jesus vs. Paul: An Interview with Scot McKnight about the Gospel (2010) [Recommended] https://www.thegospelcoalition.org/blogs/trevin-wax/jesus-vs-paul-an-interview-with-scot-mcknight-about-the-gospel/

Alt. links…

Jesus vs. Paul: Scot McKnight on Justification, Kingdom, and the Gospel (2011)
https://www.christianity.com/blogs/trevin-wax/jesus-vs-paul-scot-mcknight-on-justification-kingdom-and-the-gospel-11646019.html

Jesus vs. Paul: An Interview with Scot McKnight about the Gospel https://www.biblestudytools.com/pastor-resources/archives/jesus-vs-paul-an-interview-with-scot-mcknight-about-the-gospel-11642696.html

Excerpt:

Trevin Wax: Scot, in your article, you write: "It is not exaggerating to say that evangelicalism is facing a crisis about the relationship of Jesus to Paul, and that many today are choosing sides." Why do you think evangelicals feel the need to choose sides in this discussion?

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Scot McKnight: You ask a genuinely interesting question and I wish I could give an answer to the "why?" question.

Instead, I see an issue here of hermeneutical inevitability. We are driven by the way we think to synthesize (or systematize) or to harmonize or to compartmentalize. These sorts of actions are inherent to how our brains work, especially for people who read the Bible as believers and who believe it is God's Word and genuinely makes utter sense.

What I find is that many evangelicals came to faith through a Pauline-anchored set of categories. In many ways it was about the gospel of the Romans Road, and if that understanding of the gospel is repeated often enough (and just listen and you will hear it all the time) it becomes reflexive. This is the context of most evangelicals, and that context is fundamentally hermeneutical.

An analogy: the Judaizing opponents of Paul in Galatians knew how to read the Bible through a Moses lens, and Paul was teaching them to read the Bible (or Israel's Story) through an Abraham lens. The Judaizing opponents couldn't make sense of what Paul was saying, and that led them to say "Why then did God even give the Law?"

I see the same thing going on today. Evangelicals have grown up with a gospel, and that gospel has become their hermeneutic, and that hermeneutic is essentially derived from a specific way of reading Paul, and by that I mean a soteriological reading of Romans 1-8. It is the way we (or most of us) think.

The minute a kingdom hermeneutic comes up, one either abandons the Pauline hermeneutic or one synthesizes or — and I think this is most common — one colonizes Jesus' kingdom hermeneutic by a justification hermeneutic. That is, we make Jesus talk Paul. Or, we colonize Paul with Jesus' kingdom hermeneutic and make Paul talk Jesus.

Evangelicals are worried that if we colonize Paul with Jesus' kingdom hermeneutic we will lose a Pauline soteriology. There are plenty of cases where that very thing happened. But I think many are doing the very same thing by colonizing Jesus with Paul.

What I suggest in my article is that both of these approaches fail to find the essential continuity between Jesus and Paul. Kingdom doesn't lead to justification and justification doesn't lead to kingdom. The unity is found through christology, not through kingdom or justification.

Trevin Wax: What are the problems we face when we try to fit justification into Jesus' vision of the kingdom or Jesus' kingdom theology into Paul's theology of justification?

Scot McKnight: This could be a book or a brief answer, I choose the latter.

Fundamentally, these are two different (and mostly) parallel language games: the gospel of the kingdom is a way of saying the good news is that God's promises for Israel are now coming to pass in Jesus himself; the gospel of justification (which isn't a biblical expression) is a way of saying that the good news is that in Jesus Christ we have been declared (and made) right with God, right with ourselves, right with others and right with the world. It is forensic declaration.

Thus, the two are talking about two different things. Asking if what Jesus meant by kingdom is the same as what Paul meant by justification is like asking if a putter is a driver.

Trevin Wax: What are the problems we face when we try to fit justification into Jesus' vision of the kingdom or Jesus' kingdom theology into Paul's theology of justification?

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Scot McKnight: This could be a book or a brief answer, I choose the latter.

Fundamentally, these are two different (and mostly) parallel language games: the gospel of the kingdom is a way of saying the good news is that God's promises for Israel are now coming to pass in Jesus himself; the gospel of justification (which isn't a biblical expression) is a way of saying that the good news is that in Jesus Christ we have been declared (and made) right with God, right with ourselves, right with others and right with the world. It is forensic declaration.

Thus, the two are talking about two different things. Asking if what Jesus meant by kingdom is the same as what Paul meant by justification is like asking if a putter is a driver.

Trevin Wax: I thought your linking John Piper to Joachim Jeremias was interesting, particularly in the way that both scholars seek (albeit in different ways) to show how justification is present in Jesus' teaching. When you say that Paul and Jesus taught different things, you are speaking of emphasis – not that they had different (i.e. contradictory) visions at the fundamental level, right?

Scot McKnight: You are right. It's emphasis – not different things. As the previous question showed, they are parallel lines but complementary lines.

Trevin Wax: Your solution to this dilemma is to take 1 Corinthians 15 as primarily a statement about Jesus – who he is and what he has done. By emphasizing the centrality of Christ's person and work, you bring Paul and Jesus together. Both Paul and Jesus were all about Jesus, particularly his fulfillment of the Old Testament story. Once you've made the shift, how do kingdom and justification relate to the gospel?

Scot McKnight: 1 Cor 15 is the gospel. Flat out simple. Paul defines it there; or he states it there. Every time Paul says "gospel" he means what he says in 1 Cor 15. That gospel is the narration of the Story of Jesus as Messiah (and Lord over all) as that Story that completes or fulfills the Story of Israel, and brings that Story to its goal. That Story is about Jesus and Jesus, who is Savior, saves through what he did — his life, his death, his burial, and his resurrection.

Now, we're back to this kingdom and justification thing again. The first way to state in the gospel in the NT, of course, is kingdom. That's how Jesus said it. He was saying the Story has now come to its completion/realization in him. When Paul talks about justification he is talking about the effects, and I prefer to say only way of speaking of those effects (others include reconciliation, redemption, etc). He's talking about the forensic-shaped effects of the Saving-ness of the Story of Jesus. To gospel is to declare this Story as the saving/justifiying Story.

A problem we need to work on more is the problem: we (evangelicals) tend to think the only problem is the personal sin, personal guilt problem. Fair enough. But frankly if "Jesus is the Messiah" or "Jesus is the Lord" is the solution, then we need to reframe or expand the problem because the problem for the Story of Israel is that it is yearning for completion in God's sending of the Messiah. Messiah, then, is a Solution to a slightly different (way of expressing the) problem.

Trevin Wax: Would it be right to say that a church without any kingdom vision or a church that denies justification by faith has – in some sense – a deficient gospel? If we say so, does it mean that there's a problem with the Christology that is then leading out to a failure to grasp kingdom or justification?

Scot McKnight: If there is a deficiency, I want to begin with where Paul and Peter and Jesus do: with the Story of Jesus fulfilling the Story of Israel. If we don't start with Jesus (christology) we will be deficient, and I find both kingdom and justification to be tempted far too often to make christology deficient. How odd, and how tragic, but so true: we get so focused on kingdom we end up thinking only of justice, and then we think so much in terms of justification we get lost in transaction, and in both cases, we aren't focusing on telling the Story of Jesus.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

McKnight: Jesus v. Paul

http://www.jrdkirk.com/2010/12/05/mcknight-jesus-v-paul/

This month's Christianity Today cover story comes from the finger tips of: Scot McKnight: Jesus vs. Paul.

This subject is near and dear to my own heart, and Scot and I approach resolving the issue in a similar way: we have to define gospel in such a way that it's bigger than just what we read in any given verse or book of the New Testament. Beyond "kingdom of God" or "justification by faith," McKnight puts it like this:

> the gospel is the saving story of Jesus that completes Israel's story. "To gospel" is to tell a story about Jesus as the Messiah, as the Lord, as the Son of God, as the Savior.

When attempting to summarize the gospel for Jesus Have I Loved, But Paul? I went this route:

> the God of Israel acted decisively in the person of Jesus to restore God's rule and reconcile the whole world to Himself.

Scot's article pushes us to reconceive of the category of "gospel" beyond the stereotypical options of "Kingdom of God" (for Jesus people) or "justification by faith" (for Paul people), drawing both within the larger story of the saving work of the God of Israel.

If I have one small bone to pick with the article, though, it is that it was too nice to the "justification by faith as gospel" people. What the "kingdom of God" camp has that the "justification" camp does not is a biblical indication that their summary of the gospel is, in fact, the gospel!

Jesus comes proclaiming the good news and saying, "Repent, for the Kingdom of God has drawn near." The advent of God's dominion is the good news.

Justification is a way that Paul corrects those who get the gospel wrong. The gospel is tied to justification when Paul wants to argue that Gentiles are the result of the good news promised to Abraham about all nations being blessed in him. But justification as good news? Not so much.

Models Of The Kingdom: Eight Views (Scot McKnight)

http://www.patheos.com/blogs/jesuscreed/2017/12/06/models-kingdom-eight-views/

When I wrote Kingdom Conspiracy, which I'm glad Baker turned into paperback, I found a couple academic books that sketched theories of the kingdom but I was totally unaware of a wonderful book by Howard Snyder called Models of the Kingdom.

I wish I had; he would have made my work easier though I am convinced we need to exploit the Constantinian temptation more and the Kuyperian-Niebuhrian approaches as well.

What irritated me most when a friend pointed me to this book was that I have always enjoyed Snyder's books and knew that he would be as concerned as I am with kingdom-church relations.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Here are the eight models of Snyder:

1. The kingdom as future hope: the future kingdom.
2. The kingdom as inner spiritual experience: the interior kingdom.
3. The kingdom as mystical communion: the heavenly kingdom.
4. The kingdom as institutional church: the ecclesiastical kingdom.
5. The kingdom as countersystem: the subversive kingdom.
6. The kingdom as political state: the theocratic kingdom.
7. The kingdom as Christianized culture: the transforming kingdom.
8. The kingdom as earthly utopia: the utopian kingdom.

Snyder argues there are six tension points that need attention in any biblically-shaped kingdom theory:

1. Present versus future. Jesus said "The kingdom of God is near" (Mark 1:15), but also that we should pray for God's kingdom to come (Matt. 6:10).

2. Individual versus social. Jesus said the kingdom is like hidden treasure an individual person might find (Matt. 13:44), but he also said, "Do not be F 6 afraid, little flock, for your Father has been pleased to give you the kingdom" (Luke 12:32). He talked about being born again in order to see the kingdom (John 3:3) but also described it as a feast to be shared (Luke 13:29).

3. Spirit versus matter. Paul said, "Flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God" (I Cor. 15:50), and Jesus said, "My kingdom is not of this world" (John 18:36). But Jesus associated himself with the healing and liberation of the Jubilee (Luke 4:18-21) and Revelation speaks of a kingdom in which God's people "will reign on the earth" (Rev. 5:10).

4. Gradual versus climactic. Jesus said the kingdom is like grain that grows gradually in a field (Mark 4:26-28). But he also said its coming would be like the midnight cry of the arriving bridegroom (Matt. 25:1-6).

5. Divine action versus human action. The kingdom of God is like a returning king who settles accounts (Luke 19:11-27). It is God who rules and reigns (Ps. 99:1-2). Yet, the kingdom is also something we must seek (Matt. 6:33), and Christians can be "fellow workers for the kingdom of God" (Col. 4:11).

6. The Church's relation to the kingdom; the tension between seeing the church and the kingdom as essentially the same or as clearly different. Jesus said to the Apostle Peter, "I will give you the keys of the kingdom of heaven" (Matt. 16:19). But he also spoke of the kingdom as future and said that not all those who worshiped him, but only those who did God's will, would enter the kingdom (Matt. 7:21).

One of the conclusions I have come to is that with Gustav Dalman, in Germany in the 19th Century, a major shift occurred in kingdom theology. Kingdom moved away from socio-political realities toward a more inward, immanent theory of kingdom. In addition, a serious study of kingdom in the Old Testament and Josephus and the Dead Sea Scrolls leads to a commonsensical but too often ignored undeniable dimension of the term kingdom: a kingdom is a people governed by a king. Namely, kingdom referred to a socio-political reality and had territory inherent to it.

Go to the Beginning of*: Gospel of Jesus vs Paul

Return to the beginning:* Gospel of Jesus the Messiah (Christ)

Galatians (Beginning)

Romans

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Jesus' Gospel vs Paul's Gospel (2013) [Recommended]

http://jonjourney.blogspot.com/2013/05/jesus-gospel-vs-pauls-gospel.html

Excerpt:

1) Did Jesus preach a gospel (good news) message?
2) Did His disciples proclaim a gospel message?
3) When the gospel writers instruct us to proclaim the gospel, using how the term was used by that author, what was the good news message they were referencing?

> Jesus went all through Galilee, teaching in their Synagogues, proclaiming (preaching) the gospel (good news) of the kingdom (reign, rule, authority, realm, dominion), and curing every kind of disease and every kind of sickness among the people; Mat 4:23
>
> Jesus went around all the towns and the villages, teaching in their Synagogues, proclaiming (preaching) the gospel (good news) of the kingdom (reign, rule, authority, dominion, realm), and curing every kind of disease and every kind of sickness. Matthew 9:35
>
> Jesus went to Galilee, proclaiming (preaching) the gospel (good news) of God —"The time has come, and the kingdom (rule, reign, authority) of God is at hand; repent (change your way of thinking), and believe the good news." Mar 1:14-15
>
> Jesus, however, said to them: "I must take the good news (gospel) of the kingdom (reign, rule, authority, dominion) of God to the other town also, for that was why I was sent." Luke 4:43
>
> Shortly afterwards, Jesus went on a journey through the towns and villages, proclaiming (preaching) the good news (gospel) of the kingdom (rule, reign, authority, dominion) of God. Luke 8:1
>
> Jesus sends out His 12 disciples: On your way proclaim (preach) that the kingdom (reign, rule, authority) of heaven (or God) is at hand. Matt 10:7
>
> Shortly afterwards, Jesus went on a journey through the towns and villages, proclaiming the gospel (good news) of the kingdom (reign, rule, authority) of God. Luke 8:1
>
> Then they (the 12 disciples) set out and went from village to village, proclaiming the gospel (good news) and curing people everywhere. Luke 9:6
>
> Then he said to them: "Go into all the world, and proclaim the gospel (good news) to all creation. Mark 16:15
>
> "And this gospel of the kingdom will be preached in the whole world as a testimony to all nations, and then the end will come." Matthew 24:14

So we may ask the questions?

> Did Jesus preach Paul's gospel?
>
> or
>
> Did Paul preach Jesus' gospel?

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

[Read the articles listed immediately above re: Jesus vs Paul]

It may be an important topic to get your head around. After all, most Christians agree we should be proclaiming the gospel. So how we define the gospel should matter. Who gets to define it? Which scripture passages are used to summarize this essential question?

I agree with the idea in this article. When Jesus proclaimed the good news of the kingdom or reign of God, he was announcing that He was the Christ, the anointed King. He was the Messiah that the Jews were waiting for. He was inviting all people to enter under the reign and authority of His kingdom. He was their saviour and Lord.

When Paul defines the gospel he preached in 1 Corinthians 15 he uses very similar language.

> "Now, brothers and sisters, I want to remind you of the gospel I preached to you, which you received and on which you have taken your stand. By this gospel you are saved, if you hold firmly to the word I preached to you. Otherwise, you have believed in vain.
>
> For what I received I passed on to you as of first importance: that Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures, that he was buried, that he was raised on the third day according to the Scriptures, and that he appeared to Cephas, and then to the Twelve. After that, he appeared to more than five hundred of the brothers and sisters at the same time, most of whom are still living, though some have fallen asleep. Then he appeared to James, then to all the apostles, and last of all he appeared to me also, as to one abnormally born. " (NIV)

Of first importance: that Christ (the anointed King) died for our sins...

Do you see the kingdom connection? The term Christ means the anointed one.

Jesus and Paul both preached that Jesus was king, Lord, Christ, Messiah.

Jesus and Paul both preached that Jesus died for our sins.

Jesus and Paul both preached victory that comes from our risen Lord.

Jesus and Paul both preach about requiring faith in Jesus.

I do see a different emphasis, but I don't see a different gospel message.

Scot McKnight writes:

> "... when some evangelicals recently rediscovered Jesus' kingdom vision, they were frequently warned that they were on the verge of falling for a social gospel. "

This describes my experience over and over again. I admit I have been surprised and confused by this.

I'm sorry if my journey to understand and apply the teachings of Jesus has given you concern. As a follower of Jesus my desire is to become more like Jesus. I am enjoying studying the life and teachings of Jesus. It seems clear that Jesus had a favorite topic as he preached from town to town, and His disciples caught on as well. I believe the words of Jesus have meaning and power for people today as well, without taking away from the messages of Paul and other writers of Scripture.

Is it safe to say "Jesus Christ is the gospel"?

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Did Jesus and Paul teach the same thing?

https://carm.org/questions/other-questions/did-jesus-and-paul-teach-same-thing

Excerpt:

Some critics of Christianity try to set Paul against Jesus. They will often claim that what Paul taught is not what Jesus said and that present-day Christianity is derived not from Jesus, but from Paul's teaching. This is an erroneous claim that does not fit the facts. It is easy to take various scriptures out of context and try and set one person against another -- as many critics of Christianity have done. Nevertheless, we can confidently expect that Jesus and Paul taught the same thing. Granted, Paul focused more on theological issues than Jesus did, but nothing Paul said is contrary to Christ.

Luke wrote both the Gospel of Luke and the book of Acts. In Acts 9 Luke records the events surrounding Paul's conversion. We see that Jesus himself called Paul and sent him to be an apostle. If Paul and Jesus are not in agreement, then why would Jesus call Paul to be his apostle? Jesus is God in flesh and would, therefore, know all things. Jesus would certainly have known what Paul would teach which, it seems, is one of the reasons Jesus called him.

In addition, we can quickly see by examining what Jesus said we find parallels in what Paul said. Following is a brief alphabetical list comparing the words of Christ with the words of Paul. We can clearly see that they were indeed in agreement and that the critics who would set Paul against Christ don't know what they're talking about.

1. Alive in Christ
    1. Jesus
        1. "For just as the Father raises the dead and gives them life, even so the Son also gives life to whom He wishes," (John 5:21).
    2. Paul
        1. "For as in Adam all die, so also in Christ all shall be made alive," (1 Cor. 15:22).
2. Anxiety
    1. Jesus
        1. "For this reason I say to you, do not be anxious for your life, as to what you shall eat, or what you shall drink; nor for your body, as to what you shall put on. Is not life more than food, and the body than clothing?" (Matt. 6:25).
    2. Paul
        1. "Be anxious for nothing, but in everything by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving let your requests be made known to God," (Phil. 4:6).
3. Atonement
    1. Jesus
        1. "I am the good shepherd; the good shepherd lays down His life for the sheep," (John 10:11)
    2. Paul
        1. "and walk in love, just as Christ also loved you, and gave Himself up for us, an offering and a sacrifice to God as a fragrant aroma," (Eph. 5:2).
4. Deity of Jesus
    1. Jesus
        1. "Truly, truly, I say to you, before Abraham was born, I am," (John 8:58). Compare with Exodus 3:14, "And God said to Moses, "I AM WHO I AM"; and He said, "Thus you shall say to the sons of Israel, "I AM has sent me to you."
    2. Paul
        1. "For in Him all the fullness of Deity dwells in bodily form," (Col. 2:9). See also, Phil. 2:5-8.
5. Forgiveness
    1. Jesus

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

1. "For if you forgive men for their transgressions, your heavenly Father will also forgive you," (Matt. 6:14).

2. Paul
    1. "And be kind to one another, tender-hearted, forgiving each other, just as God in Christ also has forgiven you," (Eph. 4:32).

6. Jesus is the only way
    1. Jesus
        1. "Jesus said to him, "I am the Way, and the Truth, and the Life; no one comes to the Father, but through Me," (John 14:6).
    2. Paul
        1. "For there is one God, and one mediator also between God and men, the man Christ Jesus," (1 Tim. 2:5).
7. Justification by faith
    1. Jesus
        1. "Truly, truly, I say to you, he who hears My word, and believes Him who sent Me, has eternal life, and does not come into judgment, but has passed out of death into life," (John 5:24). See also John 3:16-18; Luke 18:9-13.
    2. Paul
        1. "Therefore having been justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ," (Rom. 5:1).
8. Law, the
    1. Jesus
        1. "Do not think that I came to abolish the Law or the Prophets; I did not come to abolish, but to fulfill," (Matt. 5:17).
    2. Paul
        1. "Do we then nullify the Law through faith? May it never be! On the contrary, we establish the Law," (Rom. 3:31).
        2. "What I am saying is this: the Law, which came four hundred and thirty years later, does not invalidate a covenant previously ratified by God, so as to nullify the promise," (Gal. 3:17).
9. Law, living the
    1. Jesus
        1. "You shall not commit murder; You shall not commit adultery; You shall not steal; You shall not bear false witness; [19] Honor your father and mother; and You shall love your neighbor as yourself," (Matt. 19:18-19).
    2. Paul
        1. "Owe nothing to anyone except to love one another; for he who loves his neighbor has fulfilled the law. [9] For this, "You shall not commit adultery, You shall not murder, You shall not steal, You shall not covet," and if there is any other commandment, it is summed up in this saying, "You shall love your neighbor as yourself." [10] Love does no wrong to a neighbor; love therefore is the fulfillment of the law," (Rom. 13:8-10)
10. Predestination
    1. Jesus
        1. "Not all men can accept this statement, but only those to whom it has been given," (Matt. 19:11).
        2. "All that the Father gives Me shall come to Me, and the one who comes to Me I will certainly not cast out," (John 6:37).
        3. "No one can come to Me, unless the Father who sent Me draws him; and I will raise him up on the last day," (John 6:44).
        4. "For this reason I have said to you, that no one can come to Me, unless it has been granted him from the Father," (John 6:65).
    2. Paul
        1. "He predestined us to adoption as sons through Jesus Christ to Himself, according to the kind intention of His will... [11] also we have obtained an inheritance, having been predestined according to His purpose who works all things after the counsel of His will," (Eph. 1:5,11).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

11. Resurrection
    1. Jesus
        1. "The Son of Man is going to be delivered into the hands of men; [23] and they will kill Him, and He will be raised on the third day," (Matt. 17:22-23).
    2. Paul
        1. "For I delivered to you as of first importance what I also received, that Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures, 4 and that He was buried, and that He was raised on the third day according to the Scriptures," (1 Cor. 15:3-4).
12. Rewards and Punishment
    1. Jesus
        1. "For the Son of Man is going to come in the glory of His Father with His angels; and will then recompense every man according to his deeds," (Matt. 16:27).
    2. Paul
        1. "who will render to every man according to his deeds," (Rom. 2:6).
13. Sinfulness of man
    1. Jesus
        1. "For out of the heart come evil thoughts, murders, adulteries, fornications, thefts, false witness, slanders. 20 "These are the things which defile the man; but to eat with unwashed hands does not defile the man," (Matt. 15:19-20).
    2. Paul
        1. "There is none who understands, There is none who seeks for God; 12 All have turned aside, together they have become useless; There is none who does good, There is not even one,"• (Rom. 3:11-12).
14. Tradition
    1. Jesus
        1. "And why do you yourselves transgress the commandment of God for the sake of your tradition?" (Matt. 15:3).
    2. Paul
        1. "See to it that no one takes you captive through philosophy and empty deception, according to the tradition of men, according to the elementary principles of the world, rather than according to Christ," (Col. 2:8).
15. Works Righteousness denied
    1. Jesus
        1. "Many will say to Me on that day, 'Lord, Lord, did we not prophesy in Your name, and in Your name cast out demons, and in Your name perform many miracles?' [23] "And then I will declare to them, "I never knew you; depart from Me, you who practice lawlessness," (Matt. 7:22-23).
    2. Paul
        1. "Now that no one is justified by the Law before God is evident; for, "The righteous man shall live by faith," (Gal. 3:11).

As you can see, this brief list demonstrates that Jesus and Paul both taught the same thing.

See also*: Gospel of Paul vs Peter

Go to the beginning of*: Gospel of Jesus vs Paul

Return to the beginning:* Gospel of Jesus the Messiah (Christ)

[Go to Index] Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only [Go to Top - TOC]

Jesus vs Paul?

https://www.whitehorseinn.org/2010/12/jesus-vs-paul/

Excerpt:

Pitting Jesus against Paul used to be a hobby of liberal Protestants. As this story has it, Jesus proclaimed a kingdom of wide-scale world-transformation, while Paul proclaimed a gospel of personal salvation. The liberal Catholic writer Alfred Loisy once quipped that Jesus announced a kingdom, but instead it was a church that came. So on one side is Jesus, with his invitation to humanity to participate in his kingdom by bringing peace and justice, and on the other side is Paul who spoke instead of the church and personal salvation by belonging to it.

Today, however, it has become a critical question in evangelical circles. In the latest Christianity Today cover story ("Jesus vs. Paul"), New Testament scholar Scot McKnight relates, "Many of us have made a move from Paul to Jesus, and an increasing tension remains among evangelicals about who gets to set the terms: Jesus or Paul? In other words, will we center our gospel teaching and living on 'the kingdom' or 'justification by faith?'" In short, "Evangelicalism is facing a crisis about the relationship of Jesus to Paul, and many today are choosing sides."

This conundrum shouldn't surprise us. Evangelicalism—especially its Anglo-American variety—is a confluence of Reformation, Anabaptist, and pietist streams. Even the Reformation is largely mediated through pietism in the land that Bonhoeffer dubbed "Protestantism without the Reformation." So it's no wonder that the Reformation gets saddled with all sorts of views that are actually more accurate descriptions of pietism. Many of us were raised in pietistic backgrounds, where the kingdom of God was basically heaven and you get there by dying. So a lot of younger Christians are reacting against this sort of privatized spirituality. Some are rediscovering the Reformation, but most are drawn toward Anabaptism—that other stream that has shaped American evangelicalism, at least indirectly. "While some Protestants seem to let Jesus be Savior, but promote Paul to lord and teacher," writes Brian McLaren in A Generous Orthodoxy, "Anabaptists have always interpreted Paul through Jesus, and not the reverse. For them the Sermon on the Mount and the other words of Jesus represent the greatest treasure in the world. Jesus' teachings have been their standard" (206).

What are we to make of this contrast?

Jesus vs. Paul—a Theological Crisis? (part 1) (2011)

https://outlookmag.org/jesus-vs-paul-a-theological-crisis-part-1/

Excerpt:

Did Jesus and Paul teach two different versions of the gospel? I don't think so, but we've got some explaining to do.

Christianity Today's online magazine posted an article with the intriguing and provocative title, Jesus vs. Paul. It points out: "Jesus preached almost exclusively about the kingdom of heaven, while Paul highlighted justification by faith—and not vice versa. What gives?"

Put simply, the dilemma is that Jesus in the Gospels doesn't speak as much about being saved by faith as does Paul does in his epistles. Many find this confusing.

Evangelicals (who live somewhere between liberals on the left and fundamentalists on the right) historically have based soteriology (salvation teaching) upon Paul's epistles. They proclaim that sinners are justified (pardoned and declared righteous) through faith in Christ and His righteousness. But a new generation of evangelicals embraces a more socially aware gospel that goes beyond getting forgiveness for repentant individuals. This progressive soteriology focuses less on forgiving personal guilt and more on Christus victor—how Christ conquered sin, death and the devil at the cross, liberating all humanity from evil powers opposed to the kingdom of God.*

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

We can frame these differing views of salvation in the context of the Lord's Prayer. Evangelicals have always prayed "forgive us our debts" but increasingly now are emphasizing that God's kingdom must come and His will be done on this earth as in heaven. The issue here is whether the gospel is more about Paul's justification soteriology or Christ's liberating, life-giving kingdom.

So what—does it really matter? Quite a bit, says Scot McKnight, the author of Christianity Today's article: "It is not exaggerating to say that evangelicalism is facing a crisis about the relationship of Jesus to Paul, and that many today are choosing sides."…

Jesus vs. Paul—a Theological Crisis? (part 3) (2011)

https://outlookmag.org/jesus-vs-paul%E2%80%94a-theological-crisis-part-3/

Excerpt:

The difference between Christ and Paul in how they taught the gospel is a matter of their differing contexts. Jesus Himself was the gospel in real time, day by day advancing the kingdom of God against the devil's domain of disease, dysfunction, deceit, disbelief, disobedience and death. Paul came on the scene only after Christ's life and death and resurrection had brought life and immortality to light through the gospel. His role was to proclaim that good news and defend it from counterfeit soteriology.

That's what he was doing in the book of Romans, confronting those trusted in their own keeping of God's law to be saved. His strategy was to debunk Jewish legalism before presenting the true gospel of life in Christ. This he eloquently accomplishes in the first three chapters, exploding any hope of getting good with God by meritorious law-keeping. (See Rom. 3:19, 31.) He summarizes the dismantling of legalism by pointing to the patriarch Abraham as the father of faith, declaring: "If it is the adherents of the law who are to be the heirs, faith is null and the promise is void" (Rom. 4:14).

Next he promotes Abraham as exhibit A of how to exercise gospel faith in "the God in whom he believed, who gives life to the dead and calls into existence the things that do not exist" (verse 17). "He did not weaken in faith when he considered his own body, which was as good as dead (since he was about a hundred years old), or when he considered the barrenness of Sarah's womb. No distrust made him waver concerning the promise of God, but he grew strong in his faith as he gave glory to God, fully convinced that God was able to do what he had promised. That is why his faith was 'counted to him as righteousness'" (verse 19-22).

Here we see that accepting God's life-giving provision of the gospel is the antidote for legalism. Believers cease trying to gain salvation through the law and instead embrace new life in Christ. This is how Abraham was saved as well.

So the solution for sinfulness is not law-keeping but life in Christ. This is because sin involves not only guilt—the death of innocence—but equally the death of relationality with God and humanity (alienation), the demise of love (character), pure motives (integrity), and ultimately the end of our very existence. Salvation restores life in all of its abundance through Christ. Although this includes forgiveness instead of condemnation, the bottom line of faith in Christ is life itself instead of death.

But wait—aren't we saved by grace through faith? Indeed. But what are we saved from? First and foremost, death. We see this in the "grace chapter," Ephesians 2, which begins by bluntly describing all humanity as “dead in trespasses and sins” (verse 1). We are lifeless outside of Christ, not just guilty and hopeless. “But God, being rich in mercy, because of the great love with which He loved us, even when we were dead in our trespasses, made us alive together with Christ—by grace you have been saved” (verses 4, 5).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Grace, by the way, also involves much more than forgiveness of sin. The Greek word translated “grace” means undeserved favor of any kind, such as “grace to help in time of need” (Heb. 4:15-16; see also 1 Cor. 15:10, 2 Cor. 9:8, Eph. 4:29, Col. 4:6).

So even the evangelicals’ favorite teaching chapter on grace, Ephesians 2, is set in the context of death vs. life more than guilt vs. forgiveness. If there is yet any doubt about the primacy of life vs. death in Paul’s soteriology, consider his most extended and explicit definition of the gospel and its meaning—1 Corinthians chapter 15. In all of its 58 verses, in which Paul specifically identifies, defines and describes the gospel, there is not even one mention of justification, forgiveness, pardon or guilt. It’s all about life triumphing over death through Jesus. Christus victor is the resurrected representative of a new humanity that replaces fallen Adam’s mortal race. Saving faith involves taking our place in the Son and identifying with His accomplishments instead of trusting in our own.

“This is the testimony, that God gave us eternal life, and this life is in His Son. Whoever has the Son has life” (1 John 5:11-12). He preserves our names in the “Lamb’s Book of Life” (Rev. 3:5) and will feed us eternally from the “tree of life” (Rev. 2:7) and give us to drink from the “water of life” (Rev. 22:17) from the “river of life” flowing out of His throne (Rev. 22:1). When everything is said and done about salvation, the bottom line is life in Christ.

To summarize: The evangelical conflict between the teaching of Jesus vs. Paul is a crisis of our own making. This is because we have overlooked the common denominator throughout the New Testament: salvation is a fundamentally a matter of life in Christ vs. death—of which forgiveness vs. guilt is just a subset. Believers reign in life through the kingdom of God because Jesus conquered death and rose in victory.

See*: N.T. Wright, Scot McKnight and the Gospel: Compared and Contrasted

The Gospel of Jesus the Messiah (Christ)

The Gospel that Paul Preached

Paul and the Gospel on Mars Hill (Areopagus)

The Gospel that Peter Preached

Gospel of Paul vs Peter (includes Charts)

Gospel of Jesus vs Paul

Faith (Pistis and Fides; Roman Imperial vs Christian Faith)

Repentance

What is the Gospel (Various Video Presentations)

Baptism (Christian, Water)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Kingdom of God: Commonality and Consonance between Jesus and Paul (2012)

http://www.equip.org/article/kingdom-god-commonality-consonance-jesus-paul/ [Recommended]

Excerpt:

In an article published in Christianity Today, Scot McKnight helpfully raised the important question of the relationship between Jesus and Paul.[1] He suggested, "Jesus preached almost exclusively about the kingdom of heaven, while Paul highlighted justification by faith—and not vice versa." He pointed out the evangelical crisis of choosing between Jesus and Paul and came up with the solution that grounds kingdom vision and justification on the gospel of Jesus. The gospel (good news) is "the saving story of Jesus that completes Israel's story." Both Jesus' kingdom vision and Paul's justification speak of Jesus as the one who completes Israel's story. Therefore, both belong to the one gospel story of Jesus. Hence, according to McKnight, we find the unity between Jesus and Paul. But he weakens this unity by splitting Paul's justification from Jesus' kingdom vision so that in the end Jesus and Paul are still materially divided in his scheme. For him, both kingdom vision and justification speak of Jesus but they do so in very different and minimally overlapping ways. This article will show that this division between Jesus' kingdom vision and Paul's justification is not warranted by the New Testament, and that the division and so-called crisis dissolve when Jesus and Paul are interpreted in fuller manners in terms of God's kingdom.

On "Jesus vs. Paul" a response to Scot McKnight (2010)

http://theaquilareport.com/on-qjesus-vs-paulq-a-response-to-scot-mcknight/

https://zondervanacademic.com/blog/kaiser-2/ (Alt. link)

Excerpt:

The case for the Unity of the Bible grows as scholarship catches up with Biblical revelation. Instead of seeing Paul as the one responsible for founding a new offshoot of the Jesus movement or even as the alleged founder of Christianity, we take him at his word: he was a servant of Jesus Christ!

In the December 2010 issue of Christianity Today, which just arrived, the lead article was on "Jesus vs. Paul," by my friend Scot McKnight. I enjoyed reading Scot's discussion of this topic, for I had written on this topic (along with other parallel concerns about unity vs diversity) in my 2009 Zondervan book entitled Recovering the Unity of the Bible: One Continuous Story, Plan and Purpose.

Even though I admire Scot (for after all, I hired him when I was Academic Dean for the TEDS' faculty years ago), I wish he had had the benefit of reading the fifth chapter in my new book on "The Unity of the New Testament," where I discussed "The Relationship between Jesus and Paul" along with other topics such as the alleged tension of the Synoptic Gospels with the Gospel of John, the alleged differences beetween the Paul of the book of Acts and the Paul of the Epistles, and the so-called split between the book of James and the other NT writers in theology.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

But more to the point Scot discussed, Paul did occasionally refer to the "kingdom of God" as Jesus did (e.g., 1 Cor 6:9, 10; Gal 5:21), which showed he was conversant with what Jesus said. But there were a number of other points of contact between Paul and Jesus. All will recall Paul's inclusion of Jesus' teaching on divorce (1 Cor 7:10), or Paul's urging that those who teach should receive their living from the Gospel as Jesus taught (1 Cor 9:14, cf. Matt 10:10; Lk 10:7). Even Paul's teaching about the "thief" in 1 Thess 5:4 may be an allusion to Jesus' teaching on his second coming (Matt 24:23). There are more instances we could add, but the 1 Cor 11:23-26 institution of the Eucharist begins with those wonderful words: "For I received from the Lord what I also passed on to you: The Lord Jesus, on the night he was betrayed, took bread, and when he had given thanks, he broke it and said, 'This is my body, which is for you; do this in remembrance of me.'" This too was another place where Paul depended on Jesus for his theology and praxis.

So, I agree, it is hard to make a case for a conflict between Jesus and Paul. In fact, the "Promise" plan of God incorporated both the "kingdom" aspect, as well as the "Gospel" that was announced to Abraham (Gen 12:3; cf. Gal 3:8) which Gospel also embraced justification.

The case for the Unity of the Bible grows as scholarship catches up with Biblical revelation. Instead of seeing Paul as the one responsible for founding a new offshoot of the Jesus movement or even as the alleged founder of Chriistianity, we take him at his word: he was a servant of Jesus Christ!

Walter C. Kaiser Jr. (PhD, BrandeisUniversity) is distinguished professor emeritus of Old Testament and president emeritus of Gordon-Conwell Theological Seminary in South Hamilton, Massachusetts. Dr. Kaiser has written over 40 books, including Toward an Exegetical Theology: Biblical Exegesis for Preaching and Teaching; The Messiah in the Old Testament; and The Promise-Plan of God; and coauthored An Introduction to Biblical Hermeneutics: The Search for Meaning. Dr. Kaiser and his wife, Marge, currently reside at Kerith Farm in Cedar Grove, Wisconsin. Dr. Kaiser's website is www.walterckaiserjr.com.

The Gospel of Jesus the Messiah (Christ)

The Gospel that Paul Preached

Paul and the Gospel on Mars Hill (Areopagus)

The Gospel that Peter Preached

Gospel of Paul vs Peter (includes Charts)

Gospel of Jesus vs Paul

Faith (Pistis and Fides; Roman Imperial vs Christian Faith)

Repentance

What is the Gospel (Various Video Presentations)

Baptism (Christian, Water)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Justification: Jesus vs. Paul (CTQ) by David P. Scaer (2012) [Lutheran Perspective]
http://ctsfw.net/media/pdfs/ScaerJustificationJesusvPaul.pdf [PDF]

Excerpts:

One cannot serve God and mammon; for some, Jesus and Paul saw things differently. Gospels in the forefront of the canon followed by the epistles set the stage for pitting Jesus against Paul—or was it the other way around? In any event, it began when the church was hardly off the ground. Ebionites favored Matthew's more Jewish Jesus, and Marcion constructed Christianity out of Paul's letters. Another fork in the road came at the Reformation when Roman Catholics took the road leading to the Gospels with James as a guide and Lutherans took the Pauline option. Eighteenth-century rationalists favored the Gospels' simple moral teachings over Paul's complex dogmatic theology.[4] Nineteenth-century classical liberalism followed suit, as did the Social Gospel by abridging Jesus' message to loving God and the neighbor.

Choosing Jesus over Paul in retrieving authentic Christianity faces an obstacle in the scholarly consensus that Paul died before the Gospels were written (A.D. 68–100).[5] This means that the evangelists were either unaware of Paul's epistles, ignored them, or constructed their Gospels out of other sources (e.g., the Q document and the Hebrew Matthew, oral tradition, and their own creative imaginations).[6] With this scenario, it can hardly be said that Paul reacted to Jesus; rather, Matthew reacted to Paul's antinomianism.[7] If the Gospels preserved the authentic simple religion of Jesus, as preserved in Q, it should be explained why Paul, who defined his life as Christ's life, did not absorb more of it into his epistles. Before his conversion, he was resident in Jerusalem and made several visits afterwards. Left unexplained is how the apostles remaining in Jerusalem left Paul's newer theology, if indeed this is what it was, unanswered. Though both Gospels and Epistles were read in the worship of early churches, apparently no one recognized any discrepancies.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

In having to choose between Jesus and Paul, Lutherans have come down on the side of Paul's definition of justification in setting the terms for reading and interpreting the Gospels. The law condemns and the gospel provides salvation. Francis Pieper, the Lutheran Church—Missouri Synod's premier dogmatician, held that justification "is the apex of all Christian teaching" and "that all other doctrines which he [Paul] preached stand in close relation to the central truth that men are saved without any merit of their own, by faith in the crucified Christ." Pieper then adds, "Thus Christology serves merely as the substructure of the doctrine of justification."[8] This would sound better without the word "merely." If I read this correctly, justification is ranked higher than Christology, at which point we may want to pause. Ranking one doctrine, whichever one it is, as superior to others has consequences, especially when it is imposed on passages that speak of other matters.[9] With their commitment to the Pauline doctrine of justification, Lutherans have had difficulty in coming to terms with James and, more seriously, with the Sermon on the Mount and its supposedly impossible requirements and subsequent penalties. Relief is then provided by Paul, who is assigned the enviable role of the purveyor of the sweet gospel. Thus, preachers looking for a passage on the law's impossible demands find it in Jesus' command to be perfect (Matt 5:48), an impossibility resolved by Paul's doctrine that we are justified by grace without the works of the law—a close call indeed if one only had to rely on Jesus.

This bifurcation between Jesus and Paul leads to a new kind of homolegomena and antilegomena division of the canon, with Lutherans following the reformer in favoring Romans, Galatians, 1 Peter, and John and with Roman Catholics leaning towards the Gospels—especially Matthew—and James. This does not mean that either faith community uses only its favored books, but each picks and chooses isolated passages from its less-favored books to support views derived from the favored ones. A case in point: in 2010, Roman Catholics commemorated the bimillennial of Paul's birth at St. Peter's Cathedral in Scranton, PA. Lay members read selections from Paul's epistles that dealt with the indwelling of Christ. Noticeably absent were those passages that Lutherans use for their understanding of justification. Not heard was Rom 1:17, "The righteous man shall live by faith alone."[10] This may have been coincidental, or perhaps not. Each faith community has its favorites.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

What is the Gospel? (Various presentations)

See also*: Gospel of Jesus the Messiah (Christ)

Scot McKnight: What is the Gospel? [Recommended] (2017)

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=-HdyhUQ3Krs [Video]

Ref: Paul: 1 Cor. 15: 1-11; 2 Tim. 2:8; Peter: Acts 2, 10

Tell the story of Jesus:

Jesus lived, died at the hands of sinners unjustly, God overturned his death and raised him from the dead, he ascended and he is coming back to rule. Jesus is the King, Jesus is the Lord.

Everyone that believes in him receives forgiveness for their sins through his name.

See*: McKnight's 3-part separation of Gospel text in 1 Cor. 15:1-11.

See also*: Gospel of Paul vs Peter

What is the Gospel? NT Wright (2013)

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=ICHovRHJAYY

Ref: Rom. 1:3-4 (below); 1 Cor. 15:1-11 (see: The Gospel that Paul Preached)

[2] This gospel he [God] promised beforehand through his prophets in the holy scriptures,
[3] concerning his Son who was a descendant of David with reference to the flesh,
[4] who was appointed the Son-of-God-in-power according to the Holy Spirit by the resurrection from the dead, Jesus Christ our Lord.
[5] Through him we have received grace and our apostleship to bring about the obedience of faith among all the Gentiles on behalf of his name.

NOTE: re: Paul's charge from God: Acts 9:15 "…this man is my chosen instrument to carry my name before Gentiles and kings and the people of Israel."

DA Carson - How do you Explain the Gospel in Five Minutes

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=0RImYisUYxM [Video]

Dr. Ravi Zacharias: What is the Gospel?

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=enXBnnFbDpM [Video]

Return to the beginning:* Gospel of Jesus the Messiah (Christ)

Galatians (Beginning)

Romans

[Go to Index]

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

[Go to Top - TOC]

What Is the Gospel? [Recommended]
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=0maL4cQ8zuU [Video]

Just what is the GOSPEL? [Recommended]
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=i6ZX7ui0Dfo [Video]

Paul Washer, The Gospel. The most terrifying truth of Scripture [Recommended]
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=TXOWyjB7d24 [Video]

Romans 8:9-13

[9] because if you confess with your mouth that Jesus is Lord and believe in your heart that God raised him from the dead, you will be saved. [10] For with the heart one believes and thus has righteousness and with the mouth one confesses and thus has salvation. [11] For the scripture says, "Everyone who believes in him will not be put to shame." [12] For there is no distinction between the Jew and the Greek, for the same Lord is Lord of all, who richly blesses all who call on him. [13] For everyone who calls on the name of the Lord will be saved.

It Will Cost You Everything
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=5JQOBMi4QS8 [Video]

The Gospel of Jesus the Messiah (Christ)

The Gospel that Paul Preached

Paul and the Gospel on Mars Hill (Areopagus)

The Gospel that Peter Preached

Gospel of Paul vs Peter (includes Charts)

Gospel of Jesus vs Paul

Faith (Pistis and Fides; Roman Imperial vs Christian Faith)

Repentance

What is the Gospel (Various Video Presentations)

Baptism (Christian, Water)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Paul Washer vs Joel Osteen

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=OqGw3H8Z86I [Video]

Paul Washer | Confronted with a question

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=ydGprxNHyjk [Video]

Full Version:

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=g9rUe-Wcjvk [Video]

What is the Gospel? - Paul Washer

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=9mMQ12nmDow [Video]

The Gospel of Jesus the Messiah (Christ)

The Gospel that Paul Preached

Paul and the Gospel on Mars Hill (Areopagus)

The Gospel that Peter Preached

Gospel of Paul vs Peter (includes Charts)

Gospel of Jesus vs Paul

Faith (Pistis and Fides; Roman Imperial vs Christian Faith)

Repentance

What is the Gospel (Various Video Presentations)

Baptism (Christian, Water)

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Bible Verses that Summarize the Gospel

https://jamesmirror.com/2011/12/12/bible-verses-that-summarize-the-gospel/

Excerpt:

Scripture verses that summarize the Gospel are sprinkled throughout the Bible. Here are some cited by J.I. Packer in the book, Grounded in the Gospel:

- He was pierced for our transgressions, he was crushed for our iniquities; the punishment that brought us peace was upon him, and by his wounds we are healed (Isa. 53:5)
- For even the Son of Man did not come to be served, but to serve, and give his life as a ransom for many (Mark 10:45)
- God so loved the world that he gave his one and only Son, that whoever believes in him should not perish but have eternal life (John 3:16)
- All the prophets testify about him that everyone who believes in him receives forgiveness of sins through his name (Acts 10:43)
- Through Jesus the forgiveness of sins is proclaimed to you. Through him everyone who believes is justified from everything you could not be justified from by the Law of Moses (Acts 13:38-39)
- He was delivered over to death for our sins and was raised to life for our justification (Rom. 4:25)
- But God demonstrates his own love for us in this: while we were still sinners, Christ died for us (Rom. 5:8)
- Christ died for our sins, according to the Scriptures … he was buried. . . . The third day he rose again from the dead, according to the Scriptures . . . and he appeared (1 Cor. 15:3-6). Paul writes that this is the Gospel "I preached to you, which you received and on which you have taken your stand. By this Gospel you are saved" (1 Cor. 15:1-2). In outlining it here, Paul asserts that "what I received I passed on to you is of first importance" (1 Cor. 15:3)
- God was in Christ, reconciling the world to himself, not counting men's trespasses against them (2 Cor. 5:19)
- God made him who knew no sin to be sin for us, that we might become the righteousness of God in him (2 Cor. 5:21)
- Remember Jesus Christ, raised from the dead, descended from David: this is my Gospel (2 Tim. 2:8)
- He gave himself for us to redeem us from all wickedness and to purify for himself a people that are his very own, eager to do what is good (Titus 2:14)
- But when the goodness and loving kindness of God our Savior appeared, he saved us, not because of works done by us in righteousness, but according to his own mercy, by the washing of regeneration and renewal of the Holy Spirit, whom he poured out on us richly through Jesus Christ our Savior, so that being justified by his grace we might become heirs according to the hope of eternal life. (Titus 3:4-7)
- Christ was sacrificed once to take away the sins of many people; and will appear a second time, not to bear sin, but to bring salvation to those who are waiting for him (Heb. 9:28)
- He himself bore our sins in his body on the tree, so that we might die to sins and live for righteousness; by his wounds you have been healed (Peter 2:24)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

- Christ died for sins once for all, the righteous for the unrighteous, to bring you to God (1 Peter 3:18)
- This is love: not that we loved God, but that he loved us and sent his Son as an atoning sacrifice for our sins (1 John 4:10)

Follow these links to learn more about the Gospel, answer the question "Am I a good person" and see a contrast between the true and false Gospel

Galatians – Beginning (Top)
Galatians – Maps
Galatians – Intro
Galatians – Charts
Galatians – Overviews
Galatians – Getz Videos
Galatians – NT Wright related
Galatians - Commentary
Galatians – Related Topics

The Gospel of Jesus the Messiah (Christ)
The Gospel that Paul Preached
Paul and the Gospel on Mars Hill (Areopagus)
The Gospel that Peter Preached
Gospel of Paul vs Peter (includes Charts)
Gospel of Jesus vs Paul
Faith (Pistis and Fides; Roman Imperial vs Christian Faith)
Repentance
What is the Gospel (Various Video Presentations)
Baptism (Christian, Water)

Galatians (Beginning)
Romans

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Gospel in One Word, Two Words…

https://escapetoreality.org/2011/03/22/the-gospel-in-one-word-two-words/

Excerpt:

Throughout the Bible you will find short declarations of the Good News. Below I have listed short gospels from Paul, Peter, James, John and Jesus. I also have one each from Spurgeon and Calvin…

1 word: Jesus! You cannot improve upon perfection and there's no other name by which we're saved (Acts 4:12). Grace and truth are found in Jesus. Jesus saves sinners and keeps Christians. Whatever your need, the answer is Jesus. Are you struggling with sin? Jesus is your victory. Are you suffering with illness? Jesus is your healing. Are you bound up with depression? Jesus is your freedom.

2 words: Christ alone! If we must add one word to the name "Jesus" or His proper title "Christ," let it be the qualifier "alone." He alone saves us. He doesn't need our help, just our trust.

3 words: None but Jesus! If this was good enough for Spurgeon…

4 words: "Mercy triumphs over judgment!" ~ James 2:13. And just so you have no doubt as to where mercy comes from, James tells us: "The Lord is full of compassion and mercy" (Jas 5:11).

5 words: "Jesus Christ and Him crucified." That's all Paul needed to know (1 Cor 2:1-5).

6 words: Saved by Christ; kept by Christ. Many Christians believe only the first part of that statement. They believe that Jesus gave them a fresh start, but not a new life. Instead of confessing their sonship, they are still confessing their sins. Instead of resting in the gift of his righteousness, they are striving to make themselves righteous through their good works, their self-denial, or their observance of traditions, rules and regulations. The good news is better than they think!

7 words: "Grace and truth came through Jesus Christ" ~ John 1:17. Think of a firefighter smashing through a concrete wall to save trapped orphans. That's what Jesus did for us. When all hope was lost, He came. Now that's good news!

8 words: "Christ died, was buried, then rose. He reigns!" ~ Paul (1 Cor 15:3-4,25). Everyone quotes the first 3 bits of Paul's gospel and misses the punch-line. Read the whole chapter of 1 Corinthians 15. The good news is not just about what He's done, but what He's doing (He's reigning!) and yet to do (until all His enemies have been put under His feet).

9 words: "I want to come in and be with you." ~ Jesus (Rev 3:20). Religion offers carrots and sticks, but Jesus offers invitations.

10 words: "I am the way and the truth and the life." ~ Jesus (Jn 14:6). As the song says, without the way there is no going, without the truth there is no knowing, and without the life, there is no living.

11 words: "When you ascended on high, you led captives in your train." ~ David (Ps 68:19). Ever seen those movies where the good guy beats the bad guy but then foolishly forgets to check whether the villain's really been neutralized? Jesus is not like that! He has enslaved slavery, bound bondage, and captured captivity. Where are Jesus' foes? They're in His train – shackled and disarmed!

12 words: "God has made this Jesus, whom you crucified, both Lord and Christ." ~ Peter (Acts 2:36). The Messiah whom the Jews looked for, has been exalted, made supreme, so that our sins might be forgiven and the Holy Spirit given (see Acts 2:38)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

20 words: "The Son of God became the Son of Man that the Sons of Men might become the Sons of God." John Calvin may or may not have said this – I can't verify the source – but it's true and it's good news.

Galatians – Beginning (Top)

Galatians – Maps

Galatians – Intro

Galatians – Charts

Galatians – Overviews

Galatians – Getz Videos

Galatians – NT Wright related

Galatians - Commentary

Galatians – Related Topics

The Gospel of Jesus the Messiah (Christ)

The Gospel that Paul Preached

Paul and the Gospel on Mars Hill (Areopagus)

The Gospel that Peter Preached

Gospel of Paul vs Peter (includes Charts)

Gospel of Jesus vs Paul

Faith (Pistis and Fides; Roman Imperial vs Christian Faith)

Repentance

What is the Gospel (Various Video Presentations)

Baptism (Christian, Water)

For additional information, see my other separate references resource*:

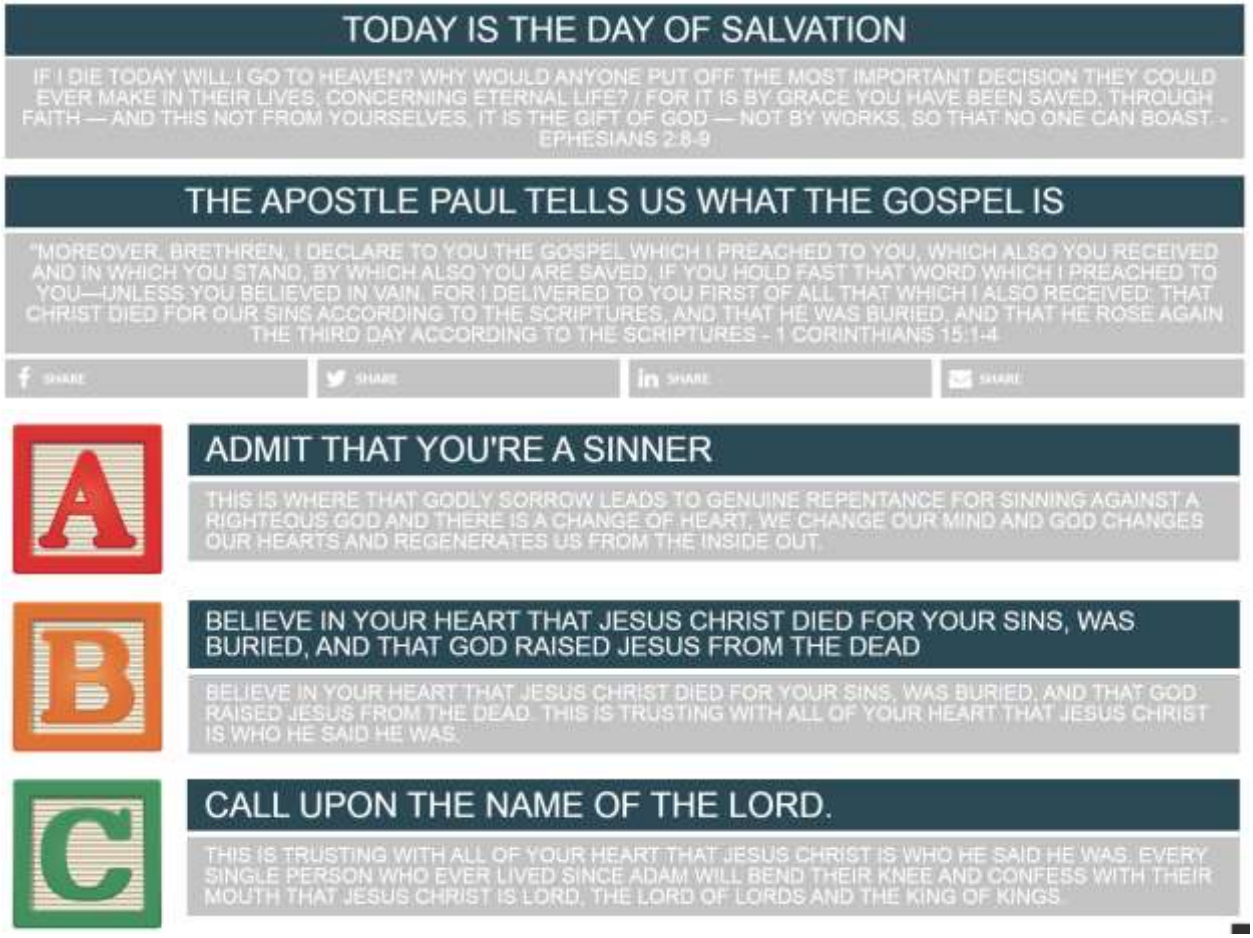
The Gospel, Salvation and Evangelism



Galatians
(Beginning)

Romans

See also*: The ABC's of Salvation

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The ABC's of Salvation

Source: https://calvarychapelkaneohe.com/abc-of-salvation/

See also*: The Gospel of Jesus the Messiah (Christ) for basic gospel details

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Faith: Pistis and Fides; Roman Imperial vs Christian Faith

What is Faith (Pistis / Fides)?

http://www.truthortradition.com/articles/what-is-faith

> What is Faith? - Trust in God
> https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=cZGbSrvEQLo [Video]

Biblically, faith is trust, confidence in, or assurance. However, the biblical definition of faith differs from its modern definition. Before we look at the difference, let's look at why we say biblical faith is trust, confidence in, or assurance.

The New Testament was written in Greek, not English, and the Greek noun "pistis" is translated "faith" in many translations of the Bible. For example:

- "…If ye have faith (pistis) as a grain of mustard seed…"
- "…Have faith (pistis) in God." (Mark 11:22-KJV)
- "(For we walk by faith (pistis), not by sight:)" (2 Cor. 5:7-KJV)

That pistis means trust, confidence in, or assurance, can be checked in any good Greek lexicon ("lexicon" is a word scholars use for "dictionary."). For example, Friberg's Analytical Greek Lexicon has "confidence, faith, trust, reliance on." Vine's lexicon says, "firm persuasion," and Bullinger's lexicon says the same thing. Thayer's lexicon says, "conviction of the truth of anything."

When the people of the first century got the letters of Paul, for example, they did not say, "What is pistis?", as if Paul had invented a new word. Pistis was in common use in the Greek language, and had been for centuries. It is in the writings of the Greeks, including Aristotle, Plato, Herodotus, etc. The first definition of pistis in the Liddell and Scott Greek Lexicon, sold in college bookstores to students of ancient Greek, is "trust in others." That is why we say pistis means "trust."

When the Greek New Testament was translated into Latin, fides was the natural choice as a translation of pistis, because fides means "trust, confidence, reliance, belief." The Bible was then read in Latin for hundreds of years. As the English language developed, our English word "faith" came from the Latin word fides. There should be nothing mysterious about pistis, fides, or faith. We know what trust is. Merriam-Webster defines it as "assured reliance on the character, ability, strength, or truth of someone or something."

If both pistis and fides mean "trust," how did "faith" come to be defined in our culture as "firm belief in something for which there is no proof" (Merriam-Webster's Collegiate Dictionary, 11th edition)? To understand this, we must remember that a dictionary definition is only a record of how people are currently using the word in their speech and writing. This is why dictionary definitions change as time passes.

What happened to change the definition of faith from "trust" to "firm belief in something for which there is no proof" was: (1) people started to use "faith" as "belief in something for which there is no proof," (2) that usage was put in the dictionary as a definition of faith, (3) people who did not know what faith was looked it up in the dictionary, saw that definition, and used it that way. This process continued over time until now almost everyone thinks "faith" is "belief in something for which there is no proof." In fact, that definition of faith was used in the popular television medical series, "House," in April 2006.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Sadly, it is now safe to say that most people do not know that the biblical definition of faith is “trust,” and furthermore that they do not have the knowledge or the tools to research that for themselves. Serious consequences come from believing that the Bible asks us to believe things even though there is no proof for them. Believers become confused about faith, not knowing what it is or how to get it and grow in it. Unbelievers, thinking the Bible asks people to believe things without proof, say it is an unreasonable and illogical book, and reject it—to their own doom.

How did the idea that faith is “belief in something for which there is no proof” enter into the Christian culture in the first place? The actual historical process is long and tedious, but the concept is simple. The Church asked people to trust doctrines that were neither logical nor clearly backed up by Scripture. For example, the doctrine that the “host” (bread) and wine that are used in Roman Catholic Mass become the body and blood of Christ is not logical (for example, it still looks and tastes like bread and wine, not meat and blood), and it is not backed by solid Scriptural exegesis. Priests know this, and so they ask people to “take it by faith.”

Please understand, there is nothing wrong with “take it by faith (trust)” if there is actually something (such as a promise) to trust. When Jesus told the blind man that if he washed in the Pool of Siloam he would be healed, the blind man had faith in, trusted, Jesus and his promise, washed, and given sight by a miracle. However, if there is nothing to trust in and nothing “trustworthy” to believe, then to ask people to “take it by faith” is wrong, and contributes to the misunderstanding of God and the Bible.

No one can force trust. It develops over time. We all know this every time we have a new repairman come to our house to fix something, or have to take our car to a new mechanic. We desperately want to trust the person to be competent and honest, but that comes only in time. If he says, “Trust me,” that often only makes things worse. If, on the other hand, he does the work when he says he will, does a good job, charges what he said he would, and seems to be honest and fair, our faith (trust) in him grows. Biblical faith is the same. It is neither magic, unreasonable, nor illogical, “it is simply trust.”

What is the difference between belief and faith, from a Protestant perspective?

https://christianity.stackexchange.com/questions/20278/what-is-the-difference-between-belief-and-faith-from-a-protestant-perspective (Christian Stack Exchange)

Excerpt:

The understanding that I am most familiar with - a Protestant understanding, if it matters, is that "belief" is an intellectual belief, while "faith" is a matter of trust that leads to action.

This can be summed up in an illustration of Charles Blondin, a tightrope walker who asks a crowd if they believe that he can safely walk a wheelbarrow across Niagara Falls on a tightrope. Many in the crowd ask who believes that he can do this, and of course, most say that they do. Then he asks who is willing to get into the wheelbarrow. Only those whose "belief" reaches the point of faith will get in.

This is similar to how it's explained by many, many, Christian groups, and while I can't claim that the understanding is universal, it is quite common. For example, The Feral Apologist has an article explaining the difference here. They put it like this:

> How are we, as Christians, to understand our faith? We need to first discover the meaning of the word “faith” in the Bible, and how that meaning is somewhat different from the meaning many attach to it today. To avoid the cultural baggage associated with the term, let’s look at the Greek words that are used in the New Testament and translated as “faith.” There are three primary forms of this word in Greek, the noun form pistis, the adjective form pistos, and the verb form pisteuo. Each form’s meaning is a variant of the word “trust.” Hence pistis is “a trust” in someone > or something, pistos is “trusting” as applied to someone adjectivally, and pisteuo literally means “I trust.” It is important to keep this in mind because we have often misunderstood these words (translated as “faith”) in our culture to be, not variants of the word trust, but variants of the word belief, used in an intellectual sense. It is true that some places in scripture, such as James 2:19, the verb form is rightly translated as “believe” because of contextual issues and what James was trying to accomplish. In other places, such as John 14:1, a variant imperative form of the verb is translated as Jesus’ exhortation to “trust” in him. When we encounter the word “faith” in scripture then, our default understanding should be that it means “trust.”

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Faith Baptist Church, in New jersey also uses the Blondin story in one of their devotionals on the subject. The devotional says this:

> The historical stunts of Blondin help us understand what it means to have "faith". First of all, faith is not mere intellectual assent. If anyone in the crowd truly believe that Blondin could cross the raging Niagara with someone in the wheelbarrow, he or she would have volunteered to ride along. "Faith" always means that we are really trusting someone or something. "Faith" is more than the words of mental assent as the words that were shouted by the crowds lining the shores of Niagara. To say, "We believe" means that we believe not only with our head, but with our heart and our wills. Faith means that we believe that God can do what He has said and that we believe it so thoroughly that we are willing to fully act upon it. Faith does not mean that we believe God can do it, but that God can do it with us in that "wheelbarrow".

See also: The New Perspective Explaned – Faith or Faithfulness

The Gospel of Jesus the Messiah (Christ)

The Gospel that Paul Preached

Paul and the Gospel on Mars Hill (Areopagus)

The Gospel that Peter Preached

Gospel of Paul vs Peter (includes Charts)

Gospel of Jesus vs Paul

Faith (Pistis and Fides; Roman Imperial vs Christian Faith)

What is the Gospel (Various Video Presentations)

Baptism (Christian, Water)

Galatians (Beginning)

Romans

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Reviews: Roman Faith and Christian Faith: Pistis and Fides in the Early Roman Empire and Early Churches by Theresa Morgan (2015)

http://themelios.thegospelcoalition.org/review/roman-faith-and-christian-faith-pistis-and-fides-teresa-morgan [PDF]

http://www.ancientjewreview.com/articles/2017/3/3/book-note-roman-faith-and-christian-faith-pistis-and-fides-in-the-early-roman-empire-and-early-churches

http://crossfitwellington.com/lib/roman-faith-and-christian-faith-pistis-and-fides-in-the-early-roman-empire-and [Introduction (Chp 1) downloadable as PDF]

Oxford Scholarship: Abstract, Overview, Highlights
http://www.oxfordscholarship.com/view/10.1093/acprof:oso/9780198724148.001.0001/acprof-9780198724148

Excerpts:

Abstract

This study begins with the question why 'faith' (pistis/fides) was so important to very early Christians that the concept and praxis already dominate the writings of the New Testament. It argues that early Christian pistis owes much to both its Jewish and Graeco-Roman contexts, which makes it an intrinsically interdisciplinary subject of study. Drawing on recent work in anthropology, sociology, and modern history, the study seeks to understand the varying shapes pistis/fides takes in the Graeco-Roman world of the early principate, Hellenistic Judaism, and the New Testament. It develops a model of the relationship between pistis/fides, fear, doubt, and skepticism. It investigates where Graeco-Roman pistis/fides is represented as easy to practice and where difficult, where it is 'deferred' and 'reified' in practices such as oaths, proofs, and legal trusts. It shows that pistis/fides is more important in Graceo-Roman divine–human relationships than has been assumed, and investigates the shape of the Graeco-Roman divine–human pistis/fides relationship and the foundations on which it rests. The study argues that understandings of divine–human pistis evolve through the Septuagint, before examining pistis in different New Testament writers and its role in the development of early Christologies, soteriologies, and ecclesiologies. It also argues for the integration of the study of pistis with New Testament ethics. It investigates the interiority and emotionality of pistis/fides, and finally explores eschatological pistis: the shape of the divine–human community in the kingdom of heaven. Other topics include the interpretation of pistis Christou and the 'mystery of faith'.

Introduction

This chapter begins by asking why 'faith' (pistis, fides) was so important to members of primitive churches. It argues that answering this question must be a thoroughly interdisciplinary project—a history of mentalité and praxis examining the operation of pistis/fides in the Graeco-Roman world of the early principate and Hellenistic Judaism as well as the New Testament, and not presuming that Christian pistis is sui generis from its earliest attestations. The semantic range of the pistis and fides lexica is well mapped, encompassing 'trust', 'trustworthiness', 'faithfulness', 'good faith', 'credit', 'guarantee', a legal trust, philosophical proof, and religious belief. Less well understood are the distinctive shapes of divine-human and intra-human pistis/fides in the world of the early principate. This chapter explores approaches to pistis and fides in classics, Jewish studies, and theology, and to trust and cognate concepts in sociology and history, before developing its own approach. [NOTE: Full chapter available via prior link above.]

Pistis and Fides in the World of the Early Principate I – Domestic and Personal Relations

This chapter explores the shape of pistis and fides in Greek and Roman domestic and personal social relations more widely from the first century BCE to the second century CE, arguing that Greek and Latin language and culture are sufficiently closely related, socially and geographically interpenetrative, and mutually comprehensible by this period to be treated together. It finds that pistis/fides towards oneself, between family members, and between masters and slaves is treated across a wide range of sources as relatively, though not wholly, unproblematic. Pistis/fides in public life, between patrons and clients, and particularly between friends, meanwhile, is widely presented as more difficult, even when it is desirable. Pistis/fides in tradition, hearsay, and all kinds of discourse, however, is radically problematic.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Pistis and Fides in the World of the Early Principate II – Structure of State

This chapter continues the examination of the distinctive shape of pistis/fides in Graeco-Roman society begun in the last chapter, considering pistis/fides in Greek and Roman structures of state, including law and government, in armies, and in political, inter-state, and economic relations between the first century BCE and the second century CE. It examines the roles of mediators in a range of public and political roles. It explores the role of pistis/fides at the foundations of states and its connections with justice, friendship, hope, and other socially and politically central concepts and praxeis. It discusses why pistis/fides is invoked above all at times of crisis, and why it is one of the few qualities which are equally applicable to domestic and public contexts and equally important in both.

Pistis and Fides in Graeco-Roman Religiosity

This chapter outlines the history of scholarship on belief in Greek and Roman religiosity, before turning to some neglected evidence for pistis/fides in divine–human relations in religious thinking from the first century BCE to the second century CE. It discusses divine pistis/fides towards human beings, human pistis/fides towards the divine, and the role of the gods in sponsoring pistis/fides between human beings. It explores the relative significance of relational and propositional belief and the range of foundations which are claimed for divine–human pistis/fides (including autopsy, hearsay, the written word, consequentialism, foundationalism, and coherentism), together with their tensions and fragilities. It investigates the relationship between divine–human pistis and fides, fear, doubt, and skepticism, and between divinely sponsored pistis/fides and justice. It discusses the analogies that are made between divine–human and intra-human pistis/fides, and the relationship between philosophical accounts of belief and others.

Pistis in the Septuagint

This chapter discusses the role of divine–human and intra-human pistis in the Septuagint, arguing that an evolution can be detected from the books of the Pentateuch to the Hellenistic wisdom tradition and Roman-period commentaries on the Book of Genesis. It discusses the role of pistis in the covenants which Abraham, Moses, and the Israelites make with God in Genesis and Exodus. It examines Job's understanding of pistis in his complaint against God, and the shape of the divine–human relationship implicit in God's response. It investigates the pistis of God towards the faithful and that of the faithful towards God in the Wisdom of Solomon and in Sirach. It also explores the role of God as sponsor of pistis between human beings, the relationship between pistis and truth, and the relationship between faith, fear, doubt, and skepticism.

Pistis and the Earliest Christian Preaching

This chapter examines Paul's treatment of pistis in 1 Thessalonians and 1 and 2 Corinthians, seeking to understand what Paul borrows from Jewish and Graeco-Roman mentalité and where he breaks new ground. It investigates the shape of the divine–human community in 1 Thessalonians and finds that in some ways it is highly distinctive. It explores how far pistis can be understood as a state of mind or an emotion, as opposed to a relationship and praxis. It considers the foundations on which Paul calls people to put their trust in God. An excursus on the origins of the terms hoi pisteuontes and hoi pistoi to mean 'Christians' considers all the passages in the New Testament in which these phrases may mean not simply 'the faithful' or 'believers' but specifically designate 'Christians'. Finally, it considers what 1 and 2 Corinthians add to our understanding of Paul's treatment of pistis.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Pistis in Galatians, Romans, Philippians, and Philemon

his chapter discusses Paul's treatment of pistis in Galatians, Romans, Philippians, and Philemon, and particularly how Paul uses pistis to locate Christ at the centre of the divine–human relationship of the new covenant. This leads to a discussion of pistis Christou, which argues that it is neither simply the faithfulness of Christ to God, nor human trust/faith in Christ, but simultaneously Christ's faithfulness to God and God's trust in him, and Christ's trustworthiness to human beings and their trust/faith in him, which enables him to act as a mediator and restore a relationship of dikaiosynē between God and humanity. The chapter discusses some Graeco-Roman models on which Paul may have drawn, and considers how this development affects Paul's understanding of the shape of the divine–human community. It also explores passages in which Paul stretches the meaning of pistis to include 'bond of trust', 'community', and even 'new covenant'.

Pistis in Non-Pauline Letters

This chapter looks at divine–human pistis in the non-Pauline epistles: Ephesians, Colossians, 2 Thessalonians, 1 and 2 Timothy, Titus, Hebrews, James, 1 and 2 Peter, and Jude. It examines how deutero-Pauline letters do or do not take up Paul's use of pistis (arguing, for instance, that Ephesians and Colossians allude to Paul's model of pistis Christou, but develop the idea of pre-election further than Paul). It explores some new ways in which these writers treat pistis: for example, the pastoral epistles develop the idea that certain groups within Christian communities (wives, children, slaves) may enact pistis in different ways suited to their social position. It discusses the meaning of the phrase 'the mystery of faith', arguing that pistis is not intended to be mysterious to community members. It examines the distinctive treatment of pistis in the letter to the Hebrews and argues for a new interpretation of Hebrews 11.1.

Pistis in the Synoptic Gospels and the Acts of the Apostles

This chapter examines the treatment of pistis in the synoptic gospels and the Acts of the Apostles. It argues that Matthew, Mark, and Luke all use pistis language to develop their Christologies, exploring the complexity of Jesus's identity, status, and activity between God and humanity. Like the epistles, these gospels have little interest in pistis between human beings, but focus on that between humanity, God, and Christ. This chapter shows how pistis allows the power of God to work through Jesus and, potentially, his followers, for whom he acts as a model for imitatio as well as the object of pistis. It examines the writers' treatment of doubt and fear, which are condemned in those who lack pistis towards Jesus, but criticized short of condemnation in those who do follow Jesus. It examines these writers' exploration of the bases for pistis, including encounter, report, and the written word.

Pisteuein and its Relations in the Johannine Corpus

This chapter discusses the distinctive shape of trusting/believing in the Johannine corpus. John uses pisteuein to emphasize both the unity of Christ with God and his faithful subordination; God is revealed uniquely through Jesus and eternal life comes through trusting/believing in Jesus as one does in God. Like the synoptic gospels, John struggles with the failure of many to recognize Jesus as Son of God in his lifetime, and explains it by developing the idea of pre-election. The chapter also discusses John's understanding of the possibility of progression in trusting/believing and of the foundations of belief. Treatment of 1 and 3 John focuses on the role of pistis in the community's eschatology, arguing that Christians place increasing value on statements of propositional belief in disputes between churches or believers and outsiders. It discusses the importance of faithful endurance by community members in Revelation, together with the role of pistis Iēsou.

Relationality and Interiority in Pistis and Fides

This chapter considers the extent to which pistis/fides is understood as a state of mind or an emotion in Graeco-Roman, Jewish, and Christian sources of this period. Since direct evidence is scarce, it examines passages of Greek and Latin literature where pistis/fides language is located in the mind or heart, investigates how closely pistis/fides is connected with qualities such as love that are both relational and emotional, and considers whether pistis/fides can be called a virtue, with the interior dimension which virtues are regularly treated as having. It argues that in Greek and Latin literature pistis/fides, though not explicitly called an emotion or a virtue, is often treated as a virtue and as having at least emotional dimensions. It then examines whether Jewish and Christian literature configure pistis/fides, ethically and emotionally, in similar ways to Greek and Latin literature, and finds that they do.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Pistis, Fides, and the Structure of Divine–Human Communities

This chapter argues that pistis is central not only to the shape of the divine–human community on earth but also to the eschatological kingdom or household of God, and that pistis and other ethical qualities not only define but structure the kingdom. It examines other cults presented as divine–human polities and argues that ethics can also be understood as structural in these, and, indeed, in Graeco-Roman society as a whole. It draws parallels between Christian presentations of the kingdom of God, Jewish depictions of heaven, Greek and Roman myths of the golden age and the mythologized past, and the ideal societies of political theory, relating all of them to contemporary theories of natural goodness and natural law. It argues that the kingdom of God can be understood as a form of community of virtue and life in it a natural good, in accordance with divine and natural law.

Conclusion

The Conclusion sums up the main themes of the previous chapters, drawing out the implications of what has been argued for the study of Christology, soteriology, ecclesiology, eschatology, and ethics, and for future connections between the study of pistis/fides and these themes. It notes the scope for future studies of the connections between pistis/fides, understood as foundational and structural to the divine–human community, and justice, love, hope, persuasion, knowledge, truth, and the holy spirit. Finally, it looks briefly into the second century and some of the earliest surviving non-canonical letters by Clement of Rome, Ignatius of Antioch, and Polycarp of Smyrna, arguing that in most respects they understand pistis in terms very similar to New Testament writers, especially Paul, but that in one or two respects they develop Paul's thinking further. This begins to show how we might find Christian understandings of pistis/fides evolving from the second century onwards.

The Gospel of Jesus the Messiah (Christ)

The Gospel that Paul Preached

Paul and the Gospel on Mars Hill (Areopagus)

The Gospel that Peter Preached

Gospel of Paul vs Peter (includes Chart)

Gospel of Jesus vs Paul

Faith (Pistis and Fides; Roman Imperial vs Christian Faith)

Repentance

What is the Gospel (Various Video Presentations)

Baptism (Christian, Water)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Book Note | Roman Faith and Christian Faith: Pistis and Fides in the Early Roman Empire and Early Churches

http://www.ancientjewreview.com/articles/2017/3/3/book-note-roman-faith-and-christian-faith-pistis-and-fides-in-the-early-roman-empire-and-early-churches

In Roman Faith and Christian Faith: Pistis and Fides in the Early Roman Empire and Early Churches, Morgan identifies and bridges a gap between approaches to faith taken by classicists and biblical scholars. Classicists, she says, tend to focus on the social functions of pistis/fides (usually translated as faith or trust); in contrast, multiple biblical scholars have attempted to understand the theological valences of faith as an internal impulse (Morgan p. 14, p. 444). Morgan's own methodology is "a particular form of l'histoire des mentalités: one which seeks to locate the mindsets of individuals and small communities in their larger context while revealing how and where, however subtly, they deviate from it" (pp. 34-35). This is not a word study, Morgan insists; instead, it is a case study of how the widely used concept of pistis/fides is picked up by one particular sect. Morgan finds a concept that is expansive and flexible, that holds communities together through links of reciprocal accountability, but that is always freighted with risk and doubt (p. 6). Pistis/fides operates at all levels of society: between the divine and humans; in law, governance, and military campaigns; in friendship and families; and even a person's most intimate relationship: the one with herself.

In chapters 1-4, Morgan's careful description of the choreographies of Roman pistis/fides in various kinds of relationships is exhaustive, examining configurations of people from multiple angles to see where trust is assumed, bulwarked, or doubted. Or, to move from a stage metaphor to an ecological one – while her analysis could read like a sort of Linnaean delineation of rules and results, it's better to read it as a description of a moving ecosystem at its most minute levels. When Morgan turns her attention to pistis/fides in divine-human relationships, she finds that "pistis towards the gods stands at the apex of a ladder of social relations" (p. 138). Though she acknowledges that "no one would begin a study of Greek or Roman religiosity by looking at pistis/fides: It does not play a large enough role," she finds that the faithful relationship between the gods and humans is foundational for all others, such that "divine-human and intra-human pistis/fides are interlocked in a shared circle of reasoning" (p. 123, p. 169). In the Roman Empire, pistis/fides is not a passive internal state, but a functional, transformative dynamic that forms and sustains relationships (p. 175).

In chapter 5, Morgan treats the Septuagint as a crucial comparandum for both established Roman pistis and nascent Christian ones. Translators used pistis to translate some instances of the Hebrew 'emunah in most of its lexical range (encompassing "firmness, refuge, and saying 'Amen' to God" [p. 177]) – but crucially not all of it. She finds that pistis is used at fulcrum-moments of the divine-human relationship, when crisis or change transpires. Although pistis is used in different ways throughout the Septuagint – signaling a shift in relationship or polity (Abram), referring to God's regulation of Creation (Job), or enabling the maintenance of the covenant (Sirach) – Morgan concludes, "there are enough parallels between Jewish and Greco-Roman ideas about divine-human pistis in Hellenistic and Roman worlds to make them intelligible to each other" (p. 196). Morgan finds the ongoing, dynamic negotiation of pistis here as well: "Even in steeply unequal relationships of pistis or fides – even in divine-human relationships – both sides […] need to gain and keep the confidence of the other" (p. 198).

In chapters 6-10, Morgan turns to the Christian Scriptures. In these works, she finds that pistis continues to figure largely as a relational force embodied by God, Christ, and/or the pisteuontes (the faithful ones), not as a posture of intellectual assent or avowal. In the undisputed Paulines, Morgan senses an evolution between I Thessalonians and the Corinthian correspondence, on one hand, and Galatians, Romans, Philippians, and Philemon, on the other. In the former, the role of the preacher as a steward of pistis is emphasized; a cascade of pistis falls from God, to God's designated apostles, to the community. In I/II Thess and I Cor, "Paul's main interest is in pistis as relationship-forming and power-mediating" (p. 261). In the other letters, Paul relies on a more robust Christology in which Christ is the "Janus-faced" mediator who is faithful to God and trustworthy to humans. Noticeably absent in these letters is any role for intra-human pistis, "without which," Morgan notes, "human communities cannot develop or sustain themselves" (p. 306). In the non-Paulines, Morgan traces how pistis is deployed to address a wide range of concerns: pre-election (Ephesians), eschatology (II Thessalonians), social status and ethics (Titus, I/II Timothy), rituals and purity (Hebrews), and endurance (James).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

In the Gospels and Acts, Morgan finds that pistis language marks nascent christologies and apologetics. In the synoptic Gospels and Acts, people develop pistis based on the evidence of miracles, but "the pistis that his followers put in Christ is typically ambiguous [... Pistis] thus captures not so much Christ's unique and distinctive location in the divine-human relationship as the complexity and, in his lifetime, the mystery of his identity" (p. 393). Morgan notes that the Gospels themselves are a library of miracles, thus becoming themselves "pisteis – arguments or proofs of the validity of pistis" (p. 393). This is quite different from John's gospel, in which pistis is used "to emphasize at once the unity of Christ with God and is faithful subordination with God" (p. 436).

In chapter 11, Morgan examines the interiority of pistis/fides by dissecting its relationship to other inward impulses or states like emotions, virtues, or cognition. She finds that pistis/fides sits at the nexus of all of these in Roman literature, the Septuagint, and early Christian writings; it dwells in the heart or chest like emotions, fortifies courage and reason like virtue, and relies on the mind or memory like cognition. Yet she insists that its interiority is never considered to be separate from relationality and action; "pistis/fides […] is one of those qualities that can only be practiced socially" (p. 472). Finally, in chapter 12, Morgan considers how pistis/fides is an ethical stance and a practice that structures communities, particularly divine-human communities. Early Christians, she says, made pistis part of the scaffolding of their "politeia structured by virtues," a community "both earthly and eschatological" (p. 499).

Morgan finds that certain themes resound throughout Roman, Jewish, and early Christian use of pistis/fides: it creates and sustains networks; it is "never unproblematic: never uncut with fear, doubt, and skepticism"; and "at times of crisis it can transcend and even reverse other social structures" (p. 502). Yet simultaneously, early Christians play with and alter the concept. In the New Testament, Morgan finds pistis/fides sliding toward new meanings – "the 'bond' created by trust in God, the 'community' formed by that bond, and even the 'new covenant'" (pp. 503-4). Crucially, however (and contra Bultmann), this expanded lexicon does not yet include something as innovative as "The Faith," or a designation of a religious movement as a whole. This is the theoretical point Morgan is interested in proving with this volume – that in the endless growth of language into new meanings, there are very few grand leaps and very many infinitesimal steps. The earliest Christians did not (yet) redefine faith, Morgan insists, but changed its focus – toward God and Christ alone, rather than that "shared circle of reasoning" that pistis/fides spun among gods and humans (p. 123).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Christianity and the Roman Empire – Saylor [PDF]

https://www.saylor.org/site/wp-content/uploads/2012/10/HIST101-6.4.2-ChristianityAndTheRomanEmpire-FINAL1.pdf

Roman Imperial Ideology and the Early Pronouncement of the Gospel of King Jesus

https://theomusings.wordpress.com/2017/04/11/the-gospel-good-tidings-part-1/

Excerpt:

What is the gospel? How would the gospel have been understood in the Greco-Roman world? Why did the Apostolic writers choose to express their message in terminology like gospel, Lord, Christ, etc.? These questions are asked by many people that I know. They ask because they all desire resources or insights that will adequately inform their understanding of the Scriptures, the Gospel, Jesus, God, and the faith in which they participate. These inquiries are not confined to small circles, rather they are quite prevalent in many congregations and settings. Because of this, I hope to bring scholarly information to everyday people that will help inform and inspire them to study, engage, and wrestle with the Scriptures and their faith. In what follows, I will investigate the "gospel" and hopefully bring this magnificent message into a new light for those who do not necessarily have the time or energy to dig into these matters in a scholarly way.

To begin, the Gospel (εὐαγγέλιον, euaggelion; "good news" or "good tidings") has become normalized in Western Christianity so much so that the contextualized understanding of the word has seemed to be all but lost. The word "gospel" has a context that gives it meaning. Prior to the Apostolic tradition using the term gospel as connoting the message of Jesus Christ, the gospel was first found on the lips of Roman delegates (ἀπόστολο, apostolos; "sent ones").[1] These apostles, or "sent ones," were commissioned by the Roman Caesar (Καῖσαρ, Kaisar; "Caesar") to go to a conquered city and herald the gospel, good news, to the new subjects of Rome. The apostles would proclaim the good news that Caesar is lord (κύριος, kyrios; "Lord" or "King") over the land and now that you are his people, you will be provided safety and protection from Rome's enemies, live under the Pax Romana ("Roman Peace") provided by the Emperor's rule and reign, and your city will now be "Romanized."[2]

This announcement of the good news did not give the people a choice, per se. The royal pronouncement was simply that, an announcement of the way things were i.e. reality for the Roman people or newly conquered people. This announcement was a "good thing" in the eyes of the Romans heralding the message to the newly conquered people; however, the message of good news could have been taken as an oppressive message to those being conquered. One simply could not denounce this reality without committing treason. The gospel was a pronouncement of good tidings from the perspective of the Romans to a newly conquered people, with the expectation of the people living lives of fidelity (πίστις, pistis; "fidelity") to their new lord. [3] The gospel was simply the announcement of what was true about reality for the Roman people. If you were to ask someone in the Roman world what the good news was, they would point to Caesar's lordship and rule and the benefits that were derived from living under his rule and reign.

While the details of this Roman gospel are compact, the context provided is enough for the keen reader to notice many parallels between the Roman gospel and the gospel expressed in the Apostolic literature. The context for the apostolic writers was the Roman proclamation of Caesar's rule and reign and the benefits derived from that rule. The early followers of Jesus hearing the gospel from the apostles or hearing it read in one of the four gospel accounts would have recognized the subversive, treacherous, and defiant language in their own gospel compared to the gospel of Caesar.[4] These comparative elements are what I will be diving into in the next couple blog posts to provide an understanding about the Gospel of Jesus Christ in the context of the Roman Empire.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

To begin this assessment, I will provide a list of parallel words used by the Apostolic tradition and end by providing the Apostolic Tradition's Gospel of Jesus Christ. In the post to follow, I will first discuss the ways in which the gospel message is different from the Roman gospel. Secondly, I will provide a brief history that led to the Roman terminology being used as it was during the first century CE. Thirdly, I will engage the political nature of the gospel proclaimed by Jesus' apostles and the nature of "religion" in the ancient Roman Empire. Lastly, I will provide a contextualized understanding of the gospel as it was presented to various groups i.e. Jews, Greeks, Philosophers, etc.,,

A Few Parallels Between:

The Roman's Gospel and the Gospel of the Apostolic Tradition

Gospel (Greek εὐαγγέλιον [singular]; "good news" or "good tidings")

Apostle (ἀπόστολο, apostolos)

Son of god/God (divi filius)

God (θεός, Theos)

Lord/Christ (Messiah) (κύριος, kyrios; Χριστός, Christos)

Epiphany (ἐπιφάνεια, epiphaneia)

Savior (σωτήρ, sótér)

The Royal Announcement of the Good Tidings of King Jesus

For my presentation of the Gospel, I will simply cite Apostle Paul's formulation in his letter to the Corinthians. This is citation is an early Apostolic Tradition of the Gospel that was passed on to Paul. The following is structured and formatted using Scot McKnight's separation of the text into three parts found in his book The King Jesus Gospel:

A)

Brothers and sisters, I want to call your attention to the good news that I preached to you, which you also received and in which you stand. You are being saved through it if you hold on to the message I preached to you, unless somehow you believed it for nothing.

B)

I passed on to you as most important what I also received: Christ died for our sins in line with the scriptures, he was buried, and he rose on the third day in line with the scriptures. He appeared to Cephas, then to the Twelve,

C)

But in fact Christ has been raised from the dead. He's the first crop of the harvest of those who have died. Since death came through a human being, the resurrection of the dead came through one too. In the same way that everyone dies in Adam, so also everyone will be given life in Christ. Each event will happen in the right order: Christ, the first crop of the harvest, then those who belong to Christ at his coming, and then the end, when Christ hands over the kingdom to God the Father, when he brings every form of rule, every authority and power to an end. It is necessary for him to rule until he puts all enemies under his feet. Death is the last enemy to be brought to an end, since he has brought everything under control under his feet. When it says that everything has been brought under his control, this clearly means everything except for the one who placed everything under his control. But when all things have been brought under his control, then the

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

> Son himself will also be under the control of the one who gave him control over everything so that God may be all in all.
>
> 1 Corinthians 15:1-2, 3-5, 20-28 (Common English Bible; bold parts are my edits)[5]

With the Roman's gospel and the Apostolic Tradition's Gospel of Jesus, we are prepared to dive into the context and meaning of the Gospel in the next few posts.

Notes

[1] I use "Apostolic tradition" instead of "New Testament" out of respect for the Hebrew Scriptures and the Jewish people. Also, "new" can connote that what is previous is old or out of date and in the case of the biblical literature, the Hebrew Scriptures are as far from old or out of date in comparison to the Apostolic literature as it can get. It is important to note that the Apostles and Jesus used the Hebrews Scriptures and those scriptures were their scriptures. See the following works if you wish to dig deeper into the Roman context of the gospel: for a less scholarly and readable treatment see McKnight, Scot. The King Jesus Gospel; Wright, N.T. Simply Jesus; Wright, N.T. Simply Good News; and for more scholarly takes on this see Campbell, Douglas. The Deliverance of God, 696-714; Wright, N.T. Jesus and the Victory of God (vol. 2 in Christian Origins and the Question of God); Wright, N.T. The Resurrection of the Son of God (vol. 3 in Christian Origins and the Question of God),

[2] What I mean by Romanized is that the city would undergo major transformation so much so that when the Caesar would come and visit he would feel like he was coming home to Rome.

[3] I choose to translate the word pistis, normally translated as "faith," "faithfulness," or "trust," as fidelity because fidelity connotes the rightful response that a ruling lord expects of his subjects. This word will become important in later posts when we dig into the manner of faith

[4] The gospel accounts are not gospel(s). This is an important point because the gospel is the same message and the four gospel accounts express this message in different ways. The pronouncement of Jesus' Lordship doesn't change, but the way it is expressed to various audiences does change. Alongside this, I want to note my addition of hearing the gospel accounts as important to the context of understanding the gospel writings. In the first century, the papyrus was expensive, not all people were literate, and thus the people would have heard the gospel read out loud to them. Silent personal reading would have been a strange phenomenon for first century people. This is important to understand that the gospel was proclaimed and even the writing would have been proclaimed in gathered assemblies.

[5] McKnight, Scot. The King Jesus Gospel, 47-48.

See also*: Gospel of Paul vs Peter

The 'Gospel' and the Emperor Cult from Bultmann to Crossan (2014)

http://www.westarinstitute.org/wp-content/uploads/2014/09/Forum-32-Dechow-Gospel-and-Emperor-Cult.pdf [PDF]

The First Christians' Responses to Emperor Worship by Christoph Heilig (Review)

https://rbecs.org/2016/11/30/fcrw/

The Gospel of Caesar

http://www.faithgateway.com/the-gospel-of-caesar/

See also*: Repentance

For additional details about Repentance, Faith and their relation to Salvation see my other separate references resource*:

The Gospel, Salvation and Evangelism

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Galatians – Beginning (Top)

Galatians – Maps

Galatians – Intro

Galatians – Charts

Galatians – Overviews

Galatians – Getz Videos

Galatians – NT Wright related

Galatians - Commentary

Galatians – Related Topics

The Gospel of Jesus the Messiah (Christ)

The Gospel that Paul Preached

Paul and the Gospel on Mars Hill (Areopagus)

The Gospel that Peter Preached

Gospel of Paul vs Peter (includes Charts)

Gospel of Jesus vs Paul

Faith (Pistis and Fides; Roman Imperial vs Christian Faith)

Repentance

What is the Gospel (Various Video Presentations)

Baptism (Christian, Water)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Ten Reasons We Fail to Share Our Faith

Ten Reasons We Fail to Share Our Faith

www.ColdCaseChristianity.com

We mistakenly think our beliefs about Christianity are entirely subjective
Some of us hesitate to share the Gospel because (whether we care to admit it or not) we've come to see religious truth as a matter of subjective opinion rather than objective truth. We treat the Gospel more as a cookie than a cure.

We think we have to be a theologian or apologist to share effectively
As Christian Case Makers, we don't have to become experts. We simply need to know how to resource the experts when someone on our jury asks a question.

We aren't sure who we should share with
The best jurors are simply smart and interested citizens who are humble enough not to presume they know the answer before they hear the question, and it's important to understand these characteristics of good jurors if we hope to have an impact as Christian Case Makers.

We are simply afraid to take the first step
The fear most of us have with evangelism is simply taking the first step of starting a conversation. Our fear typically turns to joy (and even courage) once we get the conversation started.

We think we have to know someone well before we can share the truth
The reason "friendship evangelism" is statistically dominant is simply because we, as Christians, are so uncomfortable sharing our faith with strangers. We have created this statistical reality.

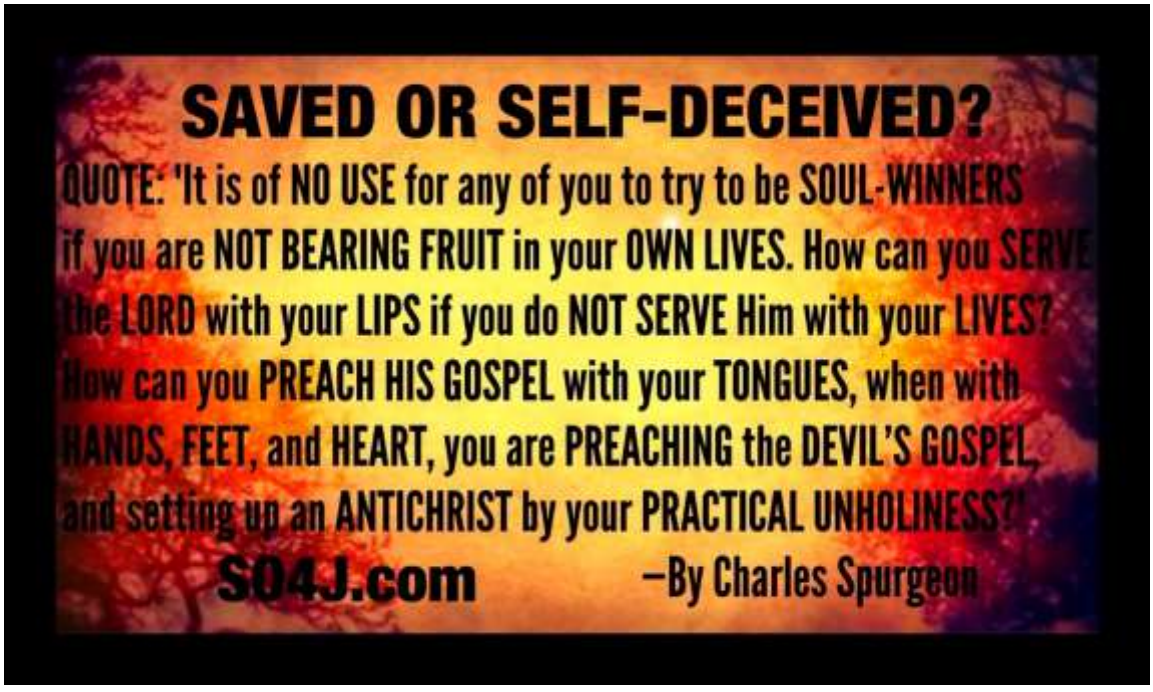
We're not sure how to engage people (especially people we don't know well)
Walk up to the person you want to engage and ask the question: "What do you think happens when you die?" It invariably leads to deeper conversations about the meaning of life, the existence of God and plight of humans.

We're afraid of feeling uncomfortable at any point in the process
What's keeping you from sharing the Gospel with the people in your life, even the strangers who you meet every day? It might just be that (like me) you're often more concerned with your own comfort than you are with the cause of Christ.

We hold pessimistically low expectations of being successful
As I examined my own low expectations, my true nature was exposed. Why wasn't I sharing what I believed? Because I was lazy and tired of rejection. Why wasn't I reflecting the nature of Christ? Because I'd come to see my behavior as a way to reach the lost rather than as a reflection of a truly changed life. Why didn't I trust God for my expectations in the first place? Because I was slipping back into my old self-reliant denial of God's power.

We are conditioned to speak a Christian language foreign to the secular culture
When I'm talking with unbelievers, I try to think about how I used to hear and interpret these words before I became a Christian. I take the time to translate important Christian concepts for those who might be willing to entertain the ideas if only I was willing to speak their language.

We think our success as evangelists is dependent on our individual effort
Evangelism and Christian Case Making is often just like baseball. Remember your place in the line-up. Drive in a run if you can, or just get on base for the next player at bat. Remember you're not alone. If each of us can get a single, we'll eventually succeed as a team.



COLD-CASE CHRISTIANITY:
A Homicide Detective Investigates the Claims of the Gospels

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Top 10 Reasons Unsaved People Think They Are Saved

http://so4j.com/top-10-ways-unsaved-people-think-theyre-saved

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Baptism (Christian; Water)

The following references represent varied points of view regarding whether water baptism is an active and necessary part of salvation or mainly a public act of obedience confirming an inward transformation. (Also, includes references related to N.T. Wright, and issues re: infant-baptism.)

Theopedia: Baptism

http://www.theopedia.com/baptism

Wikipedi: Baptism

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Baptism

Conversions from the Book of Acts

http://www.christianlibrary.org/authors/Marvin_L_Weir/salvation/convpaul.htm

INTRODUCTION

The Book of Acts is not only a book of history, but also a book of conversions. If one genuinely wants to know what to do to be saved, he can read the book of Acts and find the Biblical answer. Although this study will focus on the conversion of Saul of Tarsus (Paul), let us first consider eight examples of conversions found in the Book of Acts. The following chart will enable one to clearly see what these people did to be saved.

PREACHING	BELIEVED	REPENTED	CONFESSED	BAPTIZED	SAVED
Pentecost Acts 2:14-41		Repented vs. 37-38		Were Baptized vs. 38-41	Remission of Sins vs. 38-47; Saved
Folks of Samaria Acts 8:5-13	Believed v. 12			Were Baptized vs. 12-13
The Eunuch Acts 8:35-39	Believed vs. 36-37		Confessed v. 37	Was Baptized v. 38	Went on his way Rejoicing – v. 39
Saul Acts 9:1-20				Was Baptized v. 18	Sins were washed Away; Acts 22:16
Cornelius	Believed			Was Baptized	Remission of sins

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Acts 10:34-48	v. 43			v. 48	v. 43
Lydia Acts 16:13	Gave Heed v. 14			Was Baptized v. 15
The Jailer Acts 16:32	Believed v. 31			Was Baptized v. 33
The Corinthians Acts 18:8	Believed v. 8			Were Baptized v. 8

The student of God's Word will note that teaching or preaching occurred in each instance of salvation recorded above. It is true that "belief cometh of hearing, and hearing by the word of Christ" (Rom. 10:17). The astute student will also note the fact that baptism is mentioned in every case of conversion. Man-made denominations insist that baptism is not required for one to be saved, but the Word of God declares that the act of baptism is indeed a perquisite in every case of conversion.

Let us now study the conversion of Saul of Tarsus (the apostle Paul). In studying an incident or subject, let us always remember to read all the verses that pertain to said incident or subject. Thus, in studying Acts 9:1-20, we must not forget the apostle's inspired comments about the matter in Acts 22 and 26.

NOTE: The above chart, because of column labeling, is misleading as it implies that being saved always comes AFTER baptism… reading of the scripture text clear shows that is NOT always the case… for example Cornelius received the Baptism of the Holy Spirit and THEN he was baptized. Paul was converted by Jesus, then later baptized.

While if asked, "What to DO after believing?" they will say to be baptize. The heart of The Gospel preached by Paul, James and Peter never mentions baptism as a requirement for salvation in their Gospel message.

13 New Testament Conversions in the Book of Acts

http://s8int.com/saved2.html

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Baptisms in the Bible

http://graceambassadors.com/tradition/list-baptisms-in-the-bible

Excerpt:

It is a common mistake to think that water baptism is the only baptism in the Bible. Every time the word "baptism" is mentioned people wrongly assume water. The Bible mentions many baptisms, and many of them are dry including the one and only baptism required for being a member of the body of Christ.

> "…One Lord, one faith, one baptism,…" – Eph 4:5

This one baptism is our baptism into Christ by the Spirit (1 Cor 12:13). This is the one baptism taught by the apostle Paul, and the only one that accompanies salvation in this dispensation (1 Cor 12:13; Rom 6:3; Gal 3:27; Col 2:12)

Here is the list [also available as a PDF] of distinct baptisms in the Bible. Only the ones in blue are wet. Can you find the common thread among the baptisms that include water?...

1. Noah's type baptism
   Peter mentions that eight people were saved by water in an ark as a type of a future baptism. Water is present, but the people are dry.(Gen 6:13; 1 Peter 3:20-21)

2. Baptism unto Moses
   Paul presents Israel's baptism unto Moses "in the cloud and in the sea". Water is present, but the people are dry. (1 Cor 10:1-2; Exo 14:29)

3. Israel's ceremonial cleansings
   These cleansing rituals were required under the Mosaic Law for the cleansing of the people. (Num 19:13; Lev 11:25; Exo 19:14; Exo 30:17-21; Heb 9:10)

4. Levitical priesthood baptisms
   These washings were required in order to become a priest under the Law of Moses. (Exo 29:4; Lev 8:6; Num 8:7)

5. Traditional Jewish baptisms
   These baptisms were not mandated under the Law but were part of Jewish tradition. (Mt 15:1-2; Mk 7:1-9; Lk 11:38)

6. John's baptism
   John came to Israel baptizing with water for the remission of sins so that they could enter the promised kingdom to Israel and identify their Messiah. (Mt 3:5-6; Mk 1:4; Lk 3:3; Jn 1:31; Lk 7:29; Acts 10:37)

7. Jesus' baptism by John
   Jesus, who knew no sin, was baptized by John to fulfill all righteousness under the law. (Mat 3:13-17; Mk 1:9-10)

8. Baptism with fire
   Jesus would baptize the nation with fire as they went through the tribulation. This trial baptism would damn the unfaithful to hell. (Isa 4:4; Mal 3:2-3; Mt 3:11; Lk 3:16)

9. Jesus' baptism unto death
   Jesus' second baptism which he accomplished at the cross where he was identified with the sins of Israel and the world. (Mt 20:22-23; Mk 10:38-39; Luke 12:50)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

10. Pentecostal water baptism
    Peter's presentation of water baptism for the remission of sins in the name of Jesus. This was John's baptism plus the name of Jesus.(Acts 2:38; Mk 16:16; Mt 28:19; Acts 22:16; Eze 36:25)

11. Pentecostal Spirit baptism
    This is the baptism with the Holy Spirit by Jesus Christ from heaven poured out upon the believing remnant of Israel with signs and powers following. (Isa 44:3; Mt 3:11; Mk 1:8; Lk 24:49; Acts 2:17-18, 38; Acts 8:15-17; Acts 11:16)

12. Gentile baptism of Cornelius
    Cornelius was baptized with the Holy Spirit as a sign to Peter. Peter subsequently baptizes Cornelius and the other Spirit-filled Gentiles with water in a different order but for the same reason as Pentecost. (Acts 10:45-48)

13. Baptism for the dead
    This baptism is debated heavily and is most likely synonymous with one of the other baptisms. If this is true, "for the dead" would signify the circumstance under which those believers were baptized. (1 Cor 15:29)

14. Baptism into Christ
    The only baptism taught by Paul which identifies the believer with Christ, his death, and resurrection. This baptism is performed by the Spirit and does not include water.
    (1 Cor 12:13; Eph 4:5; Col 2:12; Gal 3:27; Rom 6:3-4)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

New Testament Baptism
http://www.equip.org/article/new-testament-baptism/

Baptism; Jews to Gentiles; The Gospel – Transitional Perspectives
http://www.beyondthefundamentals.com/download/transitional_perspective_-_notes.pdf [PDF]

Is Baptism Necessary for Salvation?
https://www.gotquestions.org/baptism-salvation.html

Excerpt:

If baptism is necessary for salvation, why would Paul have said, "I am thankful that I did not baptize any of you except Crispus and Gaius" (1 Corinthians 1:14)? Why would he have said, "For Christ did not send me to baptize, but to preach the gospel—not with words of human wisdom, lest the cross of Christ be emptied of its power" (1 Corinthians 1:17)? Granted, in this passage Paul is arguing against the divisions that plagued the Corinthian church. However, how could Paul possibly say, "I am thankful that I did not baptize…" or "For Christ did not send me to baptize…" if baptism were necessary for salvation? If baptism is necessary for salvation, Paul would literally be saying, "I am thankful that you were not saved…" and "For Christ did not send me to save…" That would be an unbelievably ridiculous statement for Paul to make. Further, when Paul gives a detailed outline of what he considers the gospel (1 Corinthians 15:1-8), why does he neglect to mention baptism? If baptism is a requirement for salvation, how could any presentation of the gospel lack a mention of baptism?

Does Acts 2:38 teach that baptism is necessary for salvation?

Does Mark 16:16 teach that baptism is necessary for salvation?

Does 1 Peter 3:21 teach that baptism is necessary for salvation?

Does John 3:5 teach that baptism is necessary for salvation?

Does Acts 22:16 teach that baptism is necessary for salvation?

Does Galatians 3:27 teach that baptism is necessary for salvation?

Baptism is not necessary for salvation. Baptism does not save from sin but from a bad conscience. In 1 Peter 3:21, Peter clearly taught that baptism was not a ceremonial act of physical purification, but the pledge of a good conscience toward God. Baptism is the symbol of what has already occurred in the heart and life of one who has trusted Christ as Savior (Romans 6:3-5; Galatians 3:27; Colossians 2:12). Baptism is an important step of obedience that every Christian should take. Baptism cannot be a requirement for salvation. To make it such is an attack on the sufficiency of the death and resurrection of Jesus Christ.

Return to the beginning: Gospel of Jesus the Messiah (Christ)

Following are N.T. Wright related references and criticisms related to baptism…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

N. T. Wright on Baptism (2007)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=5xjPI9KVPYM [Video] (see also comments)

From the Seedbed vault circa 2007. Renowned Author and speaker N.T. Wright sits down with Maxie Dunnam, Ben Witherington III and J.D. Walt [Alt: http://www.seedbed.com/author/jd-walt/] to talk about his view on baptism. In the final installment of this four part series, Wright lays out a narrative of baptism starting in Exodus and weaving it into Romans. He explains how the act of baptism is rooted in Exodus, which creates a depth in understanding.

N.T. Wright: "Simply Christian" (Lecture at Calvin College, 01/05/2007)
http://www.calvin.edu/january/2007/wright.htm (Link to Audio)

N.T. Wright: Space, Time, and Sacraments (Lecture at Calvin College, 01/06/2007)
https://worship.calvin.edu/resources/resource-library/space-time-and-sacraments-n-t-wright/ (Links to Audio and summaries)
Video clip: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=0hrWprl6LdM

N.T. Wright and Infant Baptism (2006)
http://alastair.adversaria.co.uk/?p=373
(references "Part 4" of following articles "Searching for the Third Way: Baptism")

Searching for The Third Way: Baptism (Church of Christ)
Part 1: http://oneinjesus.info/2008/11/searching-for-the-third-way-baptism-part-1/
…
Part 4: http://oneinjesus.info/2008/11/searching-for-the-third-way-baptism-part-4/ (References NT Wright)
…
Part 8: http://oneinjesus.info/2008/11/searching-for-the-third-way-baptism-part-8/

Beware of N.T. Wright (2011)
https://theonomyresources.blogspot.com/2011/05/beware-of-nt-wright.html
(A critique re: Infant Baptism – Baptism Regeneration)

N. T. Wright on the Implications of Baptism for the Christian Life (Anglican) http://creedalchristian.blogspot.com/2011/10/n-t-wright-on-implications-of-baptism.html
(A passage from N.T. Wright's book, Simply Christian: Why Christianity Makes Sense)

Return to the beginning: Gospel of Jesus the Messiah (Christ)

Baptism (water)

Galatians (Beginning)

Romans

Infant Baptism vs Believer's Baptism…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Infant Baptism vs Believer's Baptism

Infant Baptism (Paedo or Pedo baptism) vs Believer's Baptism (Credobaptism – baptism, usually be immersion, after belief in Jesus and his life, death and resurrection for our sins); whereby one joins the covenant community of Christians.

Wikipedia: Infant Baptism

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Infant_baptism

Excerpt:

Infant baptism is the practice of baptising infants or young children. In theological discussions, the practice is sometimes referred to as paedobaptism, or pedobaptism, from the Greek pais meaning "child". The practice is sometimes contrasted with what is called "believer's baptism", or credobaptism, from the Latin word credo meaning "I believe", which is the religious practice of baptising only individuals who personally confess faith in Jesus, therefore excluding underage children. Opposition to infant baptism is termed catabaptism. Infant baptism is also called "christening" by some faith traditions.

Most Christians belong to denominations that practice infant baptism. Denominational families that practise infant baptism include Catholics, Eastern and Oriental Orthodox, Anglicans, Lutherans, Presbyterians, Congregationals and other Reformed denominations, Methodists and some Nazarenes,[4] and the Moravian Church.

For more details, see also my other separate reference resource*:

The Complete Sayings of Jesus – NKJV with Appendix

(Note: NKJV is primary text to make reading easier, except when it varies significantly from the original KJV or a different translation text is clearer and/or deemed more accurate.)

Return to the beginning: Gospel of Jesus the Messiah (Christ)

Baptism (water)

Galatians (Beginning)

Romans

[Go to Index]

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

[Go to Top - TOC]

Important Creeds and Councils of the Christian Church (by C.R. Biggs) (2014)

http://thirdmill.org/articles/cr_biggs/cha_biggs.CofC.12.pdf [PDF] (Reformed) (Thirdmill.org)

Excerpt:

What is "Sola Fide"?

Faith is an instrument with no power in and of itself. Faith is the gift of God when He regenerates a lost sinner. This divine ability is given and it is the instrument in which we take hold of Christ by believing in His meritorious life, death and resurrection. Salvation is by works. The works of Christ alone applied to the sinner, received by faith. "Strictly speaking, the true Christian church does not teach justification by faith. It teaches justification by Christ. Where does the faith come in? It is simply the uniting with, becoming one with, the Lord Jesus Christ. Being married to Christ, all that is His becomes His bride's, the believer's…that is the meaning of the word 'reckons' or imputes or credits. The justified one 'does not work, but trusts God who justifies the wicked' (Rom. 4:5)." - John Gerstner, 'Justification by Faith Alone'

Roman Catholicism: Faith + Works = (brings) justification

Modern Evangelicalism: Faith = (brings) justification - works

Reformed Theology: Faith = (brings) justification + works

See also: Reformed Theology vs Lutheranism vs Calvinism vs Weslyanism

More about Christian Creeds: http://www.seedbed.com/?s=creed

Theopedia: Creeds and Confessions

http://www.theopedia.com/creeds-and-confessions

Wikipedia: Christian Creeds

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/List_of_Christian_creeds

N.T. Wright on Creeds and Gospel (Quote)

http://unsettledchristianity.com/quote-of-the-day-n-t-wright-on-creeds-and-gospel/

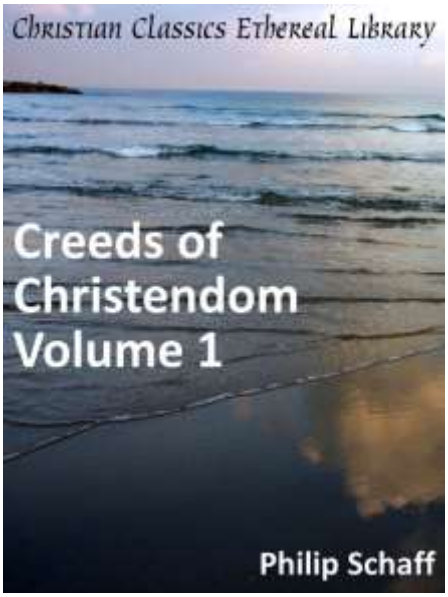
"I believe in the creeds. But I believe in the Jesus of the Gospels a good deal more."

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Creeds, Catechisms and Confessions

http://apostles-creed.org/documents-creeds-catechisms-confessions/

Note: Individual Creeds Downloadable in PDF and ePUB formats.



Creeds of Christendom, with a History and Critical notes (Philip Schaff)

Vol. I: The History of Creeds: http://www.ccel.org/ccel/schaff/creeds1.html

Vol. II: The History of Creeds: http://www.ccel.org/ccel/schaff/creeds2.html

Vol. III: The Creeds of Evangelical Protestant Churches: http://www.ccel.org/ccel/schaff/creeds3.html

Note: Viewable online or downloadable as a PDF or Plain Text

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

See also:

Galatians (Beginning)

Romans

Paul

Background, maps

Paul's Understanding of Timing of Jesus' 2nd Coming

Paul Receives Gospel Resurrection Creed within 5 Years of Crucifixion

Sequence of Paul's Activities, Progress of Gospel in Acts (Maps)

Paul: Was he a rabbi, married, a member of the Sanhedrin?

Paul's Worldview

Paul's Letters and the New Testament

Paul's Use of Greek Philosophy in the Bible / Greek Philosophy

Galatians – Beginning (Top)

Galatians – Maps

Galatians – Intro

Galatians – Charts

Galatians – Overviews

Galatians – Getz Videos

Galatians – NT Wright related

Galatians - Commentary

Galatians – Related Topics

The Gospel of Jesus the Messiah (Christ)

The Gospel that Paul Preached

Paul and the Gospel on Mars Hill (Areopagus)

The Gospel that Peter Preached

Gospel of Paul vs Peter (includes Charts)

Gospel of Jesus vs Paul

Faith (Pistis and Fides; Roman Imperial vs Christian Faith)

Repentance

What is the Gospel (Various Video Presentations)

Baptism (Christian, Water)

See also my other separate reference resource*:

The Complete Sayings of Jesus – NKJV with Appendix

Romans related information starts next page…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Romans Related

[Galatians related] [Ephesians Related]

Charts and other Resources on the Book of Romans

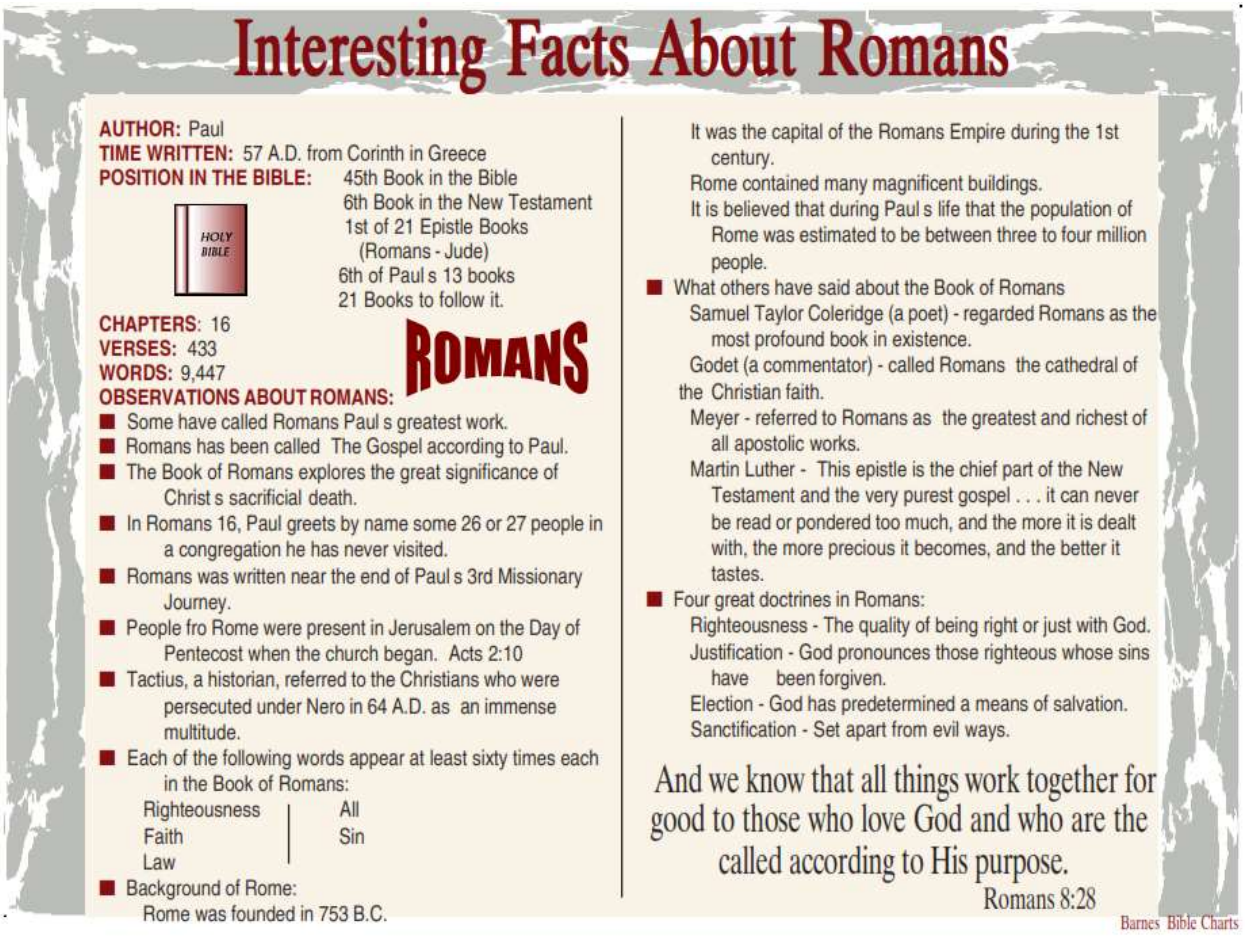

Table of Contents for this Section on Paul's Epistle to the Romans

N.T. Wright on Romans

Introduction to Romans

FG Romans Sermon Series [TOC]

Glossary

The Bible Project: Romans

Maps / Outline Charts / Summary Chart

Romans Timeline

OT Sources in Romans

Gene Getz Application Videos

Study Guides / Commentaries

See also: Rome, Romans and the Roman Empire / Paul

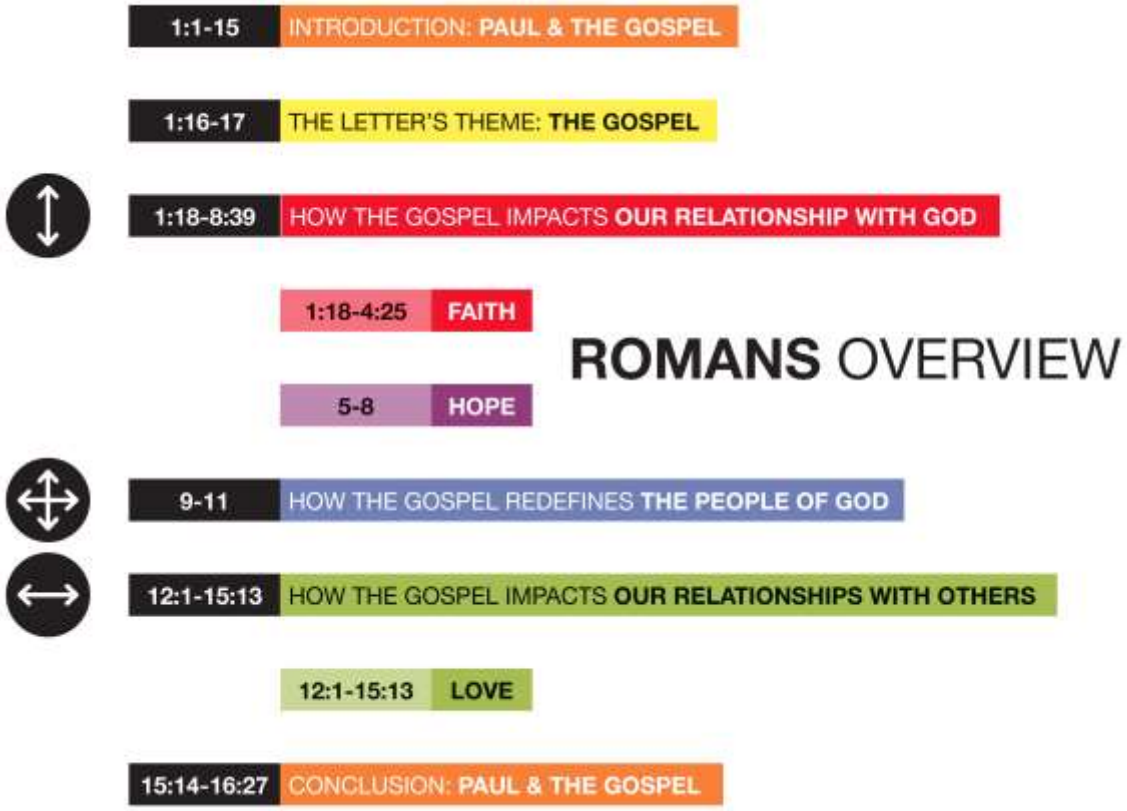
 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The book of Romans is a masterfully written exposition of the gospel of God. Without a doubt, it is the foundation of authentic Christianity and the most articulate, systematic understanding of our faith found in the Bible. Countless lives have been changed by the truth found in this ancient letter, and it continues to change lives today. Interestingly enough, Romans was written to Christians. So, while the good news found in Romans can certainly bring people to faith in Jesus, the actual focus is on how the gospel helps Christians think rightly about God, life, faith, and Christian community. If you want to grow to know God more personal and intimate way, this letter is for you!



— Charlie Boyd, Fellowship Greenville

See*: FG Sermon Series on Romans

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Romans Overview

Romans TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

N.T. Wright on Romans (Summarization)
https://theologicalsweets.wordpress.com/2011/05/07/n-t-wright-on-romans/

NT Wright on Romans . . . in 22 Minutes! (Introduction) (Links to the video) (2011)
http://thebiblicalworld.blogspot.com/2011/08/nt-wright-on-romans-in-22-minutes.html

Direct Link to Video: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=7glk-aSt-TM [Video]

Another Introductory Version: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=wwtDUpWYEcY [Video]

N. T. Wright Romans: Introduction (20 minutes) (2016)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=wwtDUpWYEcY
Prof. N.T. Wright presents an introduction to Paul's Epistle to the Romans. This is a part of the course on Romans available soon at ntwrightonline.org/romans/

Wikipedia: Romans

The Epistle to the Romans or Letter to the Romans, often shortened to Romans, is the sixth book in the New Testament. Biblical scholars agree that it was composed by the Apostle Paul to explain that salvation is offered through the gospel of Jesus Christ. It is the longest of the Pauline epistles and is often considered his "most important theological legacy" and magnum opus.

In the opinion of Jesuit scholar Joseph Fitzmyer, the book "overwhelms the reader by the density and sublimity of the topic with which it deals, the gospel of the justification and salvation of Jew and Greek alike by the grace of God through faith in Jesus Christ, revealing the uprightness and love of God the Father."

N. T. Wright notes that Romans is

> ...neither a systematic theology nor a summary of Paul's lifework, but it is by common consent his masterpiece. It dwarfs most of his other writings, an Alpine peak towering over hills and villages. Not all onlookers have viewed it in the same light or from the same angle, and their snapshots and paintings of it are sometimes remarkably unalike. Not all climbers have taken the same route up its sheer sides, and there is frequent disagreement on the best approach. What nobody doubts is that we are here dealing with a work of massive substance, presenting a formidable intellectual challenge while offering a breathtaking theological and spiritual vision.

The letter was most probably written while Paul was in Corinth, probably while he was staying in the house of Gaius, and transcribed by Tertius his amanuensis

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

N.T. Wright: Romans 1:16 - The Faithfulness of God

https://21stcenturyreformation.blogspot.com/search/label/N.T.%20Wright

Excerpt:

In John 17:3, the Lord Jesus teaches us that life is knowing God. To have happiness in this life, true happiness, requires that we know God. The book of Romans is best understood to not be essentially about "how to get saved" or how we receive righteousness from God, but about God and His righteousness. God is a covenant keeping God. God is faithful. God is holy. When He makes a promise, He keeps it. God is a promise keeping God and Paul is explaining God's faithfulness in the book of Romans. Has God been faithful to the promises to Israel? Has God been faithful to the promise He made with Abraham to through Him bless the entire world? And so opens the book of Romans:

[16]For I am not ashamed of the gospel, for it is the power of God for salvation to everyone who believes, to the Jew first and also to the Greek.

Paul is not ashamed of the preaching of the Gospel because in the Gospel is revealed the righteousness of God, God's faithfulness. It is in the Gospel that the promise to rescue Israel from exile and bondage is being revealed in sending the Messiah to rescue Israel (and the nations too) and to establish the city promised to Abraham. In the Gospel is being revealed the faithfulness of God.

On the contrary, this opening thematic statement is not saying, "I am not ashamed of the Gospel for in it is revealed a means for sinful humanity to receive a righteousness from God in order to be reconciled to Him". Of course this too is revealed in the Gospel but that is not what the over arching Glory of the book of Romans is about. Romans and the driving force and foundation of our faith is the knowledge of God. The gospel is about God and His faithfulness and this faithfulness to rescue a broken humanity and set the world right and establish the kingdom, this faithfulness of God is being revealed in the Gospel. God has fulfilled the promises to Israel to deliver her from her enemies. He has sent Messiah to rule all the world and those who believe who have faith in His faithfulness these are the people who live and persevere and live in shalom in this life.

More N.T. Wright:

Wright, N.T. (Tom): Interviews / Bio / Criticisms / Hermeneutics / Related / Misc. / Quotes /

Romans TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Introduction to Romans

http://christchurchreformed.com/bible-studies/introduction-to-romans-study-01/

Excerpt:

AUTHORSHIP

A. Romans is one of the undisputed books of Paul (Romans 1:1).

B. Romans was not written by Paul but by an amanuensis named Tertius (Romans 16:22). Paul also seems to have used a scribe for other letters (1 Cor.16:21; Gal.6:11; Col.4:18; 2 Thess.3:17).

1. "The greeting is in my own hand—Paul" (1 Corinthians 16:21).

2. "See with what large letters I am writing to you with my own hand" (Galatians 6:11).

3. "I, Paul, write this greeting with my own hand. Remember my imprisonment. Grace be with you" (Colossians 4:18).

4. "I, Paul, write this greeting with my own hand, and this is a distinguishing mark in every letter; this is the way I write" (2 Thessalonians 3:17)

C. Did Tertius have literary license in writing down Paul's words?

1. Did Paul dictate to Tertius who wrote word for word what Paul said?

2. Did Tertius write Paul's words short hand and if so, how much freedom did he have in the details of the letter?

a. That Paul dictated the letter cannot be dismissed on historical grounds because it was common to transcribe precisely.

b. Romans is what Paul wanted to say as he himself said it. We cannot be certain whether Tertius recorded Paul's words in long or shorthand.

c. The style of Romans is similar to other Pauline letters.

d. Paul's use of an amanuensis obviously did not present a problem for himself or other Christians in the 1st century and so they shouldn't present problems for us in the 21st century.

e. If Paul's handwriting was poor, it would make sense to use a professional so that his letters could be more easily read to the churches and copied.

D. Paul did not dictate Romans so that Christians in the 1st century would sit down with their own personal copies and read during their private time. Rather, Paul dictated Romans so that it could be read publicly, heard and presumably discussed by others.

E.Related questions:

1. How long did it take for Romans to be written?

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

a. "Romans was not written in a day" (Gaffin).

b. "It would have required weeks of intensive work during which Tertius must have been made available on a full-time basis."(Jewett, Kotansky, & Epp, 22).

2. Was Luke one of Paul's amanuenses?

DATE

A. Paul wrote Romans toward the end of his third missionary journey while he was in Corinth (see Acts 20:2-6 with Romans 15:25; cf. Rom.15:19,23). The date was around 57AD.

B. Romans was written about four years after Galatians, twenty years after Paul's conversion and about 10 years after Paul began his first missionary journey.

"…Paul never hints in Romans that he knows that Peter has worked in Rome or founded the Christian church there before his planned visit (cf. 15:20-23)…Hence the beginnings of the Roman Christian community remain shrouded in mystery. Compare 1 Thess 3:2-5; 1 Cor 3:5-9; and Col 1:7 and 4:12-13 for more or less clear references to founding apostles of other locales. Hence there is no reason to think that Peter spent any major portion of time in Rome before Paul wrote his letter, or that he was the founder of the Roman church or the missionary who first brought Christianity to Rome" (Catholic scholar Joseph Fitzmyer, Romans, 30).

OCCASION OF WRITING

A. Paul writes asking for prayer for his upcoming journey to Jerusalem (Romans 15:30-32); he hopes that the offering collected from the Gentile churches will be accepted there (see Isaiah 60:4-7).

B. Paul may hope that the church at Rome will be a base of ministry to Spain similar to Antioch.

C. Paul also writes to deal with the conflict between Jews and Gentiles and the weaker brother (Romans 14-15:12).

D. Romans seems to be is a kind of outline/syllabus of what Paul intended to preach and teach face-to-face (Romans 1:13-15).

FIRST CENTURY CONTEXT

A. Greek culture; Roman government; Pax Romana; Greek and Roman gods.

1. Emperor Claudius died in 54 AD (Reigned from January 24, 41 AD – October 13, 54 AD).

2. Nero was Emperor (Reigned from October 13, 54 AD – June 9, 68 AD)

B. Emperor worship is becoming more prominent.

C. It is estimated that 1,000,000 people lived in Rome. At times about 5% of the population was Jewish.

1. At least ten synagogues were in Rome.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

2. There were several house churches (five may be implied in Rom 16:5, 10–11, 14–15).

D. Christianity was still considered a sect of Judaism and therefore a legal religion (religio licita).

READING STRATEGIES/THEMES (WHAT IS ROMANS ABOUT?)

A. A word of CAUTION: Don't read Romans as if Saul's experience was similar to that of Martin Luther's.

1. Luther's conscience tormented him with the question, "How can I be right before God?"

2. While justification is a theme of Romans, Saul did not have an introspective conscience that tormented him like Luther.

a. Saul was the poster child for Pharisaical boasting and confidence in the flesh (Phil.3:4-6).

b. Paul's pre-conversion experience was his conviction that the Jewish Sanhedrin was correct in putting Jesus to death for blasphemy.

c. Luther did not need to be convinced of his unrighteousness but Saul did!

3. Our main reading strategy will be Romans 1:16-17.

Martin Luther Nailing the Ninety-Five Theses to the Wittenberg Door

B. Another helpful reading strategy, often overlooked, is to remember that before his conversion Saul did not understand what true Judaism was. There was an identity crisis in Judaism, "What is a Jew?"

1. Judaism's identity crisis is found beginning with John's baptism (Matthew 3:7)

2. The identity crisis in Romans is found throughout the Gospels (Luke 7:1-10; John 3; 8:39-44; John 10:16; 12:32).

a. You must be born again/from above (John 3:3,5).

b. Flesh gives birth to flesh; Spirit gives birth to Spirit (John 3:6).

c. God loves the world (Jew and Gentile) and whoever believes will not perish but have eternal life (John 3:16).

d. "Abraham is our father" (John 8:39).

i. You are of your father the devil (John 8:44)

ii. Do the deeds of Abraham and believe in Jesus! (John 8:56)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

e. Jesus constantly gave the true interpretation of Moses as opposed to the teachers of the law, "But I say to you…"

3. The Jews thought they knew who they were and who Gentiles/Greeks were but Paul explains that they were wrong (Romans 2:28-29; Romans 9:6; 10:12; Galatians 3:26-29; 6:15; Philippians 3:2-3; cf. Jeremiah 9:25-26).

C. Paul emphasizes that there is "no distinction" between Jew and Gentile (Romans 3:22-23; 10:12; cf. 1 Cor.12:13; Eph.2:15; Colossians 3:10-11) and argues that faith (not works) is what divides the two groups:

UNITY OF JEW + GENTILE	UNITY OF NEW MAN/TRUE JEW/NO ETHNIC DISTINCTION
✓ Unrighteous/sinners	✓ Righteous/saints
✓ Flesh	✓ Spirit
✓ Death	✓ Resurrection/life
✓ Condemnation	✓ Peace with God
✓ Works	✓ Faith
✓ Lawless	✓ Obedience of faith
✓ Uncircumcision	✓ Circumcision
✓ Unclean	✓ Washed
✓ Children of the devil	✓ Children of Abraham

1. The striking thing about Paul (Jesus and John the Baptist) is that he lumps Jews and Gentiles into the left hand column. What Paul says of Jews is remarkable:

a. "you have no excuse…you who judge practice the same things" (Rom.2:1).

b."tribulation and distress for every soul…the Jew first" (Rom.2:9).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

c. "The name of God is blasphemed among the Gentiles because of you" (Rom.2:24).

d. "Are we better than they? Not at all…" (Rom.3:9).

e. "All have sinned and fall short of the glory of God" (Rom.3:23).

2. For Paul (and Jesus), the great division is not Jew and Gentile but faith.

3. For Paul, anything that takes away from faith in Christ takes us back to the First Adam, death and condemnation (cf. Galatians).

D. The Jewish/Judaizing heresy argued that the distinction between Jew and Gentile was flesh + works instead of faith (Acts 15:1,5):

Gentile	Jew
Uncircumcision	Circumcision
Unrighteous	Righteous/justified
Unclean	Clean
Death	Life
Lawless	Law keeping
Children of the flesh	Children of the promise
Children of the devil	Children of Abraham
Tax collectors	Pharisees

1. Note especially the Pharisees attitude toward prostitutes and tax collectors versus Jesus' attitude (Matthew 9:11-13; Luke 18:9-17).

2. Note especially the Jewish attitude toward Samaritans versus Jesus' attitude (cf. John 4).

a. Jews in Jesus' day called the Samaritans "the foolish people" and Shechem was called the "City of Fools."

b. There was a rabbinic saying, "May I never set eyes on a Samaritan" and "May I never be thrown into company with him."

E. For Paul, membership in the new humanity is by grace alone through faith alone in Christ alone. Only by believing in Jesus can we cross over from death to life (cf. the Gospel of John).

1. The Jewish identity crisis affected the early church (Acts 10-11; Galatians)

a. The church was "huddled" in Jerusalem until the great persecution (Acts 8:2).

i. Philip went to Samaria (Acts 8:2-24).

ii. The Samaritans received Christ and were baptized (Acts 8:12).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

iii. The Apostles in Jerusalem went to Samaria and the Samaritans received the Holy Spirit (Acts 8:14-17).

iv. Philip is led by the Spirit to witness to the Ethiopian eunuch (Acts 8:25-40).

b. Saul is converted and becomes an Apostle to the Gentiles (Acts 9).

c. Cornelius goes to Peter (opposite of the church going to Cornelius!) (Acts 10).

i. Peter shares the Gospel with Cornelius and the Holy Spirit fell upon those listening (Acts 10:44).

ii. The circumcised believers are amazed because Gentiles received the Spirit (Acts 10:45).

iii. Cornelius is baptized (Acts 10:47-48).

iv. Those who were circumcised took issue with Peter (Acts 11:2-3).

d. Circumcised men in Jerusalem accept Peter's "Good News" and glorify God – at least for the time (Acts 11:18).

> "So then those who were scattered because of the persecution that occurred in connection with Stephen made their way to Phoenicia and Cyprus and Antioch, speaking the word to no one except to Jews alone." (Acts 11:19)

2. Paul taught that God is the God of both Jews and Gentiles (Romans 3:29-30; 10:11-13; 15:8-12)!

F. Paul's correction about the new humanity leads to several key questions throughout Romans:

1. What advantage has the Jew (3:1)?

2. Are we better than they (Romans 3:9)?

3. Do we then nullify the Law through faith (Romans 3:31)?

4. Are we to continue in sin so that grace may increase (Romans 6:1)?

5. What about God's promises made to the physical descendants of Abraham? (Romans 9-11)

a. What shall we say then? (Romans 9:30)

b. Why? (Romans 9:32)

c. God has not rejected His people, has He? (Romans 11:1)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

d. They did not stumble so as to fall, did they? (Romans 11:11)

G. Some theologians (E.P. Sanders, James Dunn, N.T. Wright) argue that Second Temple Judaism was not a "works salvation" but a religion of grace alone like Christianity. ((I'd like to know how the New Perspective explains the heretical sect of the Ebionites.))

1. They argue that circumcision and keeping of the Mosaic Law was a sign of "being in" or a "boundary marker."

2. For the New Perspective, the issue isn't about "getting in" but "staying in."

3. A few observations about the New Perspective and grace:

a. Biblical Judaism was always a religion of grace alone and therefore we should expect to find strains of this in extra biblical literature.

"Even that heroic critic of the Jesus Seminar's apostasy, N.T. Wright, Bishop of Durham, wishes to jettison this foundational doctrine [imputation] of classical Anglicanism. He was interviewed in the Christian Century and stated that contrary to his earlier views he now believed… "the big question about justification for Paul was not 'How do I find a gracious God?' but 'How do Jews and Gentiles who believe in Christ share table fellowship?'" Paul's conversion on the Damascus road was certainly not that he suddenly realized, "Now I can eat with the Gentiles!"" (C. FitzSimons Allison, "Word Made Verb" [Audio], also text [PDF])

Note: See also*: N.T. Wright: Criticisms

b. 1st century "Jews" were not "in" if they were trusting in their own flesh (boasting they were better than Gentiles and other sinners) and if they rejected Jesus.

c. Jesus referred to unbelieving Jews as children of the devil (John 8:44).

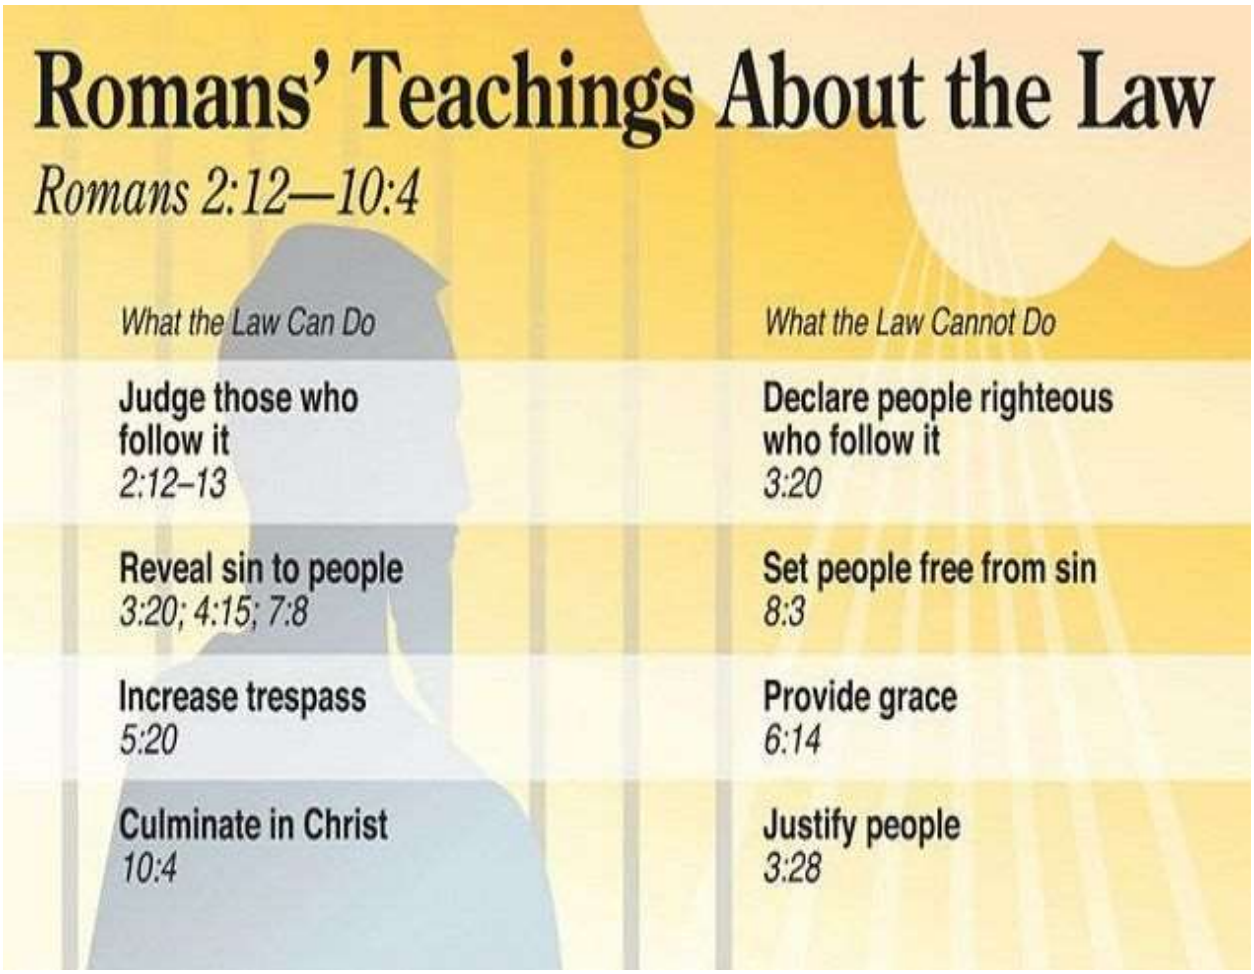
i. Nicodemus had to be born again if he was to see and enter the kingdom of God.

ii. Saul the "Hebrew of Hebrews" had to be converted!

d. That some Jews in the 1st century A.D. did not understand God's grace is seen in the Pharisees and lawyers who did not submit to John's baptism:

"I say to you, among those born of women there is no one greater than John; yet he who is least in the kingdom of God is greater than he." When all the people and the tax collectors heard this, they acknowledged God's justice, having been baptized with the baptism of John. But the Pharisees and the lawyers rejected God's purpose for themselves, not having been baptized by John. (Luke 7:28-30)

e. See additional comments in "Introduction to Galatians."



"Luther misread Paul in the light of his experience with post-medieval Catholicism. Catholicism of Luther's day urged the securing of God's favor by good works. Luther then read this Roman Catholic view back on to first century Judaism. But Luther completely misunderstood first century Judaism. First century Judaism was not a religion of meritorious works; rather it was a religion of grace and mercy from which good works flow. In fact, first century Judaism balanced grace and works as much as Luther himself wished to do. We must stop reading Paul with Lutheran glasses. We must stop seeing first century Judaism through reactionary sixteenth century Protestant binoculars." (James Dennison's summary of the New Perspective in "The Eschatological Aspects of Justification").

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Romans TOC
(Table of Contents)

Romans' Teachings About the Law (Romans 2:12 — 10:4)

Romans TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

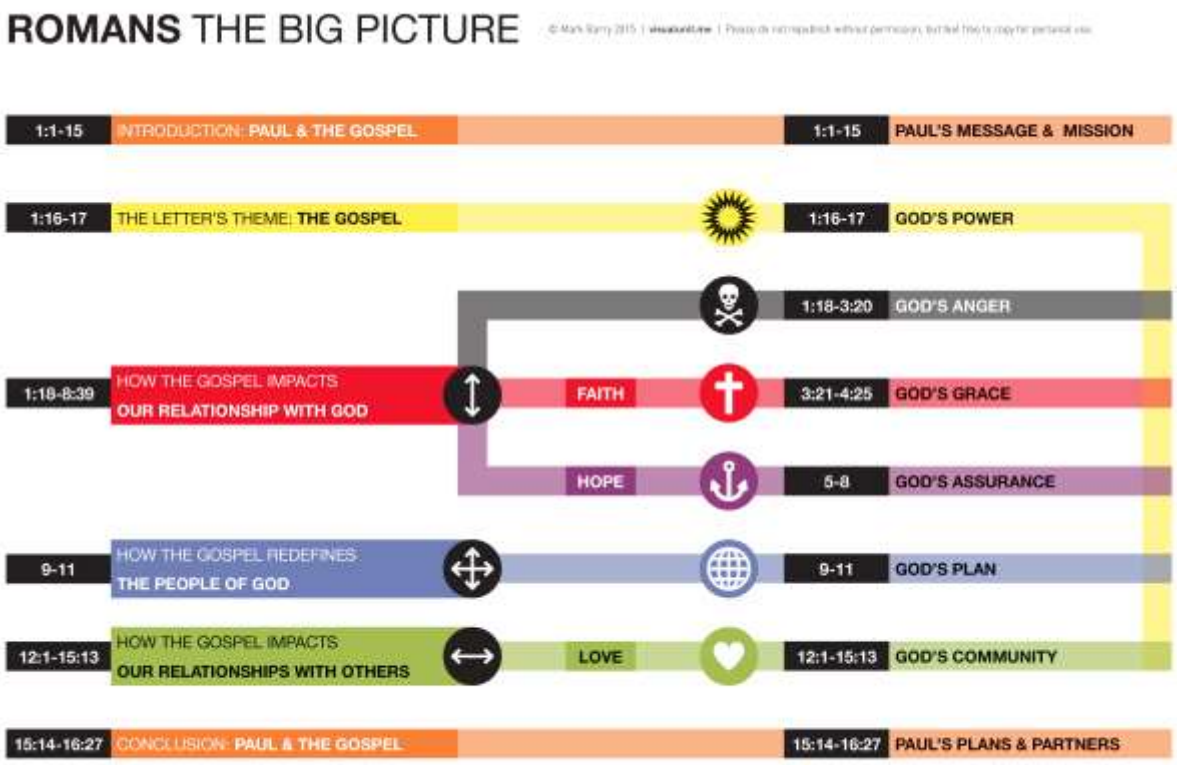
N.T. Wright: Romans 1:16 - The Faithfulness of God

https://21stcenturyreformation.blogspot.com/search/label/N.T.%20Wright

Excerpt:

In John 17:3, the Lord Jesus teaches us that life is knowing God. To have happiness in this life, true happiness, requires that we know God. The book of Romans is best understood to not be essentially about "how to get saved" or how we receive righteousness from God, but about God and His righteousness. God is a covenant keeping God. God is faithful. God is holy. When He makes a promise, He keeps it. God is a promise keeping God and Paul is explaining God's faithfulness in the book of Romans. Has God been faithful to the promises to Israel? Has God been faithful to the promise He made with Abraham to through Him bless the entire world? And so opens the book of Romans:

[16]For I am not ashamed of the gospel, for it is the power of God for salvation to everyone who believes, to the Jew first and also to the Greek.



Paul is not ashamed of the preaching of the Gospel because in the Gospel is revealed the righteousness of God, God's faithfulness. It is in the Gospel that the promise to rescue Israel from exile and bondage is being revealed in sending the Messiah to rescue Israel (and the nations too) and to establish the city promised to Abraham. In the Gospel is being revealed the faithfulness of God.

On the contrary, this opening thematic statement is not saying, "I am not ashamed of the Gospel for in it is revealed a means for sinful humanity to receive a righteousness from God in order to be reconciled to Him". Of course this too is revealed in the Gospel but that is not what the over arching Glory of the book of Romans is about. Romans and the driving force and foundation of our faith is the knowledge of God. The gospel is about God and His faithfulness and this faithfulness to rescue a broken humanity and set the world right and establish the kingdom, this faithfulness of God is being revealed in the Gospel. God has fulfilled the promises to Israel to deliver her from her enemies. He has sent Messiah to rule all the world and those who believe who have faith in His faithfulness these are the people who live and persevere and live in shalom in this life.

Romans TOC
(Table of Contents)

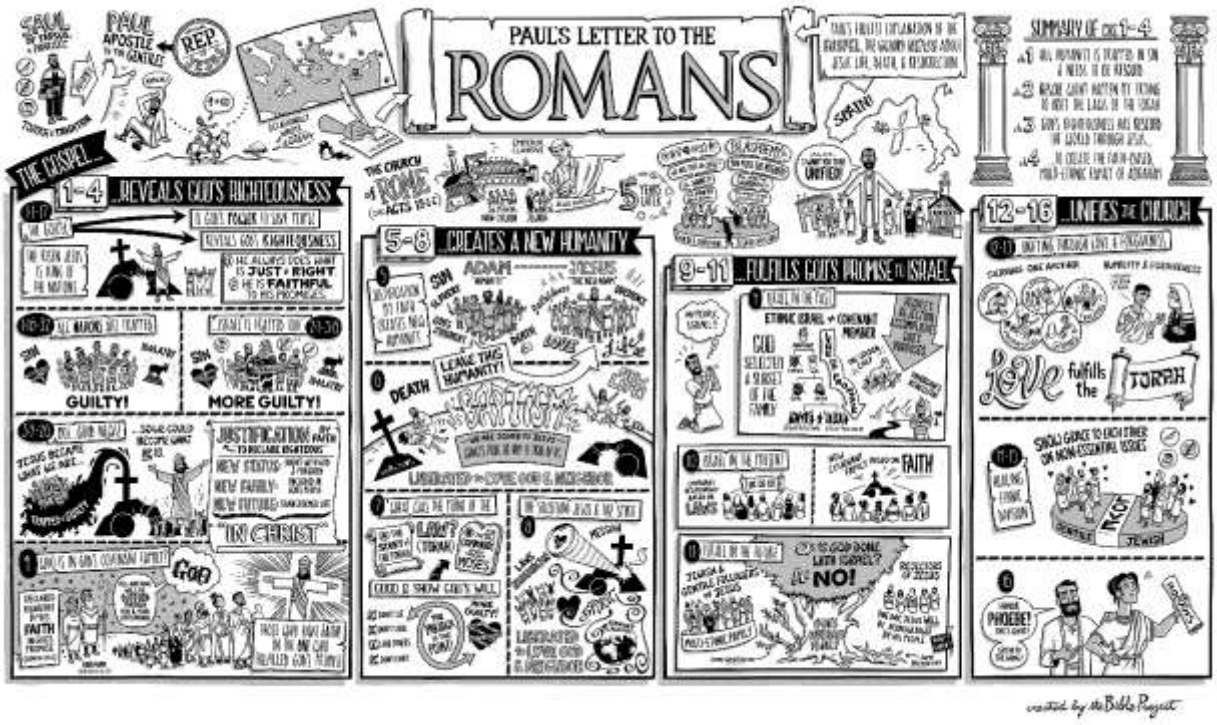
 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Romans: The Big Picture

Romans TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Bible Project: Romans



https://thebibleproject.com/explore/romans/

https://d1bsmz3sdihplr.cloudfront.net/media/Posters%20Download/50-51-Romans-FNL.jpg (Poster)

Videos:

Romans Chapters 1-4: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=ej_6dVdJSIU [Video]

Chapters 5-16: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=0SVTl4Xa5fY [Video]

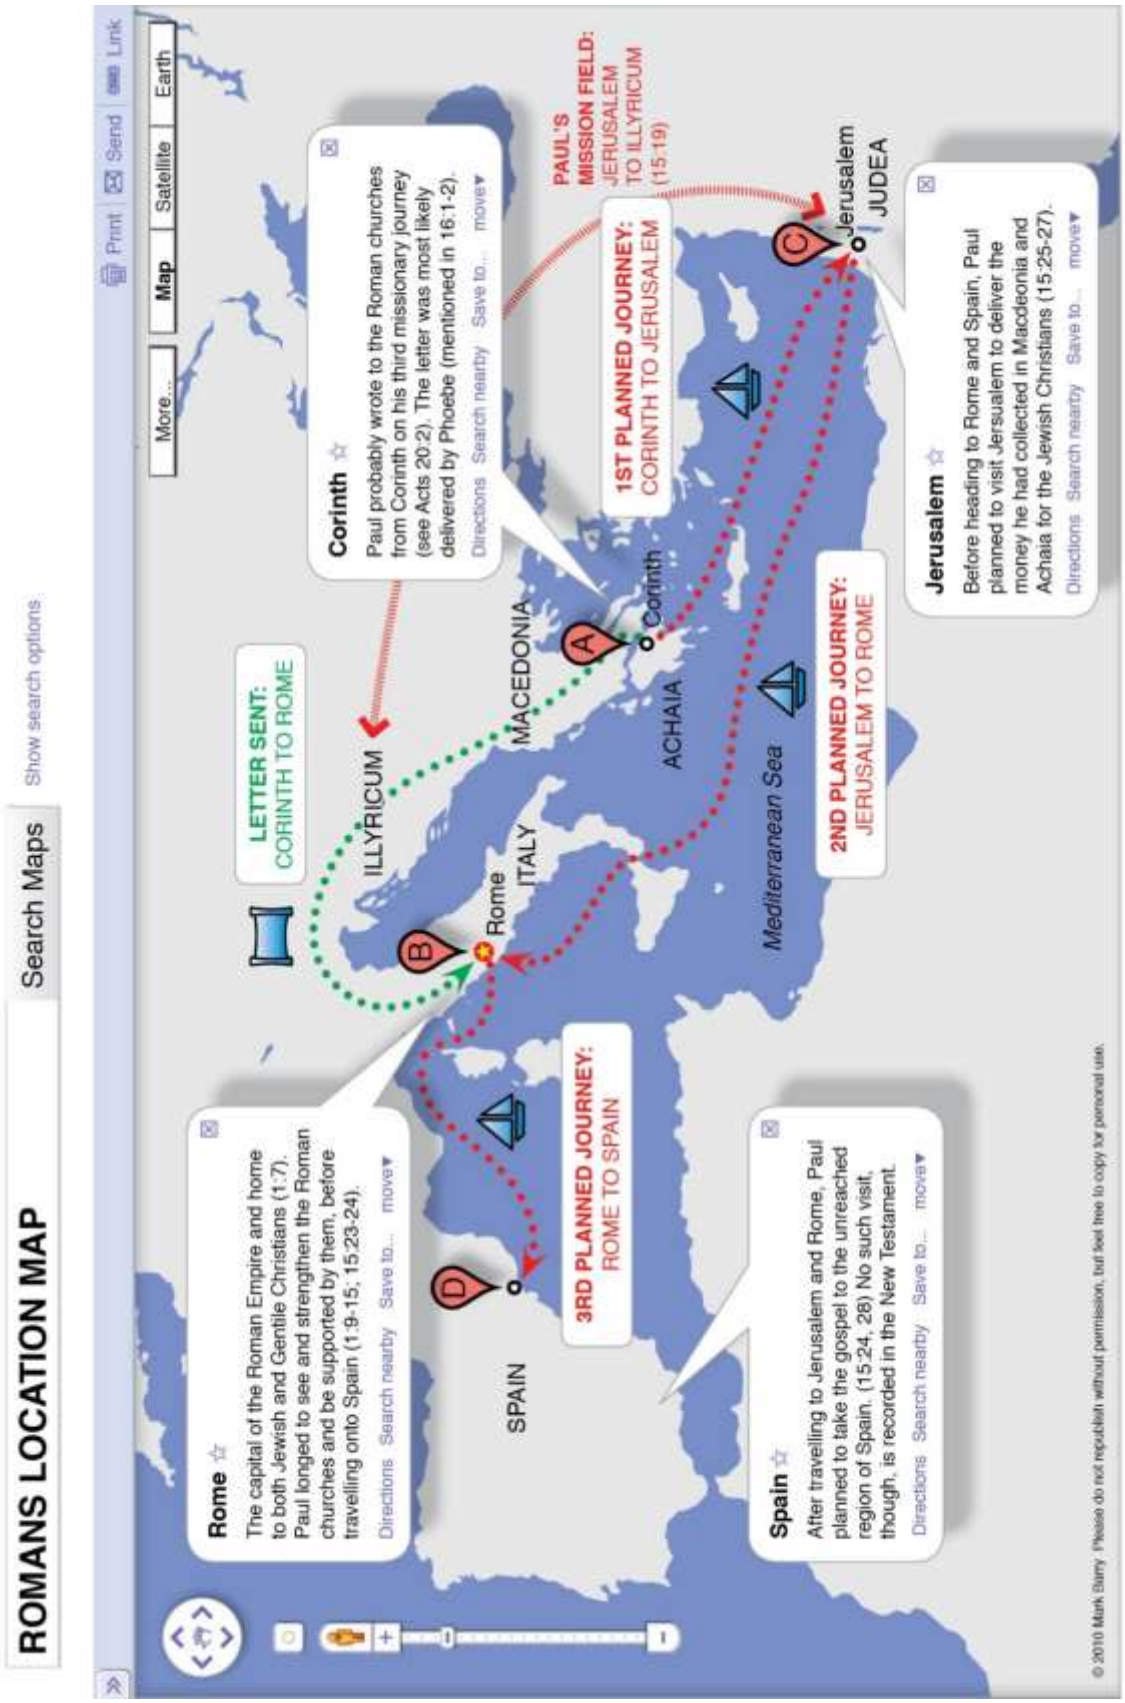
See next page for larger view…

Romans TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Maps



Romans Location Map

See next page for a larger view…

Romans TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Maps of the Roman World in the First Century C.E.

http://www.centuryone.com/rmnwrd.html

The world of the First Century was Roman. Loved or hated, Rome's power was absolute.

In the province of Judea, all was not well. Constant friction between the subjects there and the often corrupt Roman govenors, created a continuously agitated state of affairs. At the death of Herod the Great in 4 BC, the time was ripe for a deliverer to rise up and release the populace from the hold of Rome. Two attempts were made in AD 66 and again in AD 132. The Second Revolt in AD 132 only completed the devestation that was not accomplished at the end of the First Revolt.

On January 28 AD 98, Trajan was declared Caesar. By the end of the first century, Trajan had gained wide spread popularity with the people of Rome due to his public works and generousity with the poor. Trajan led successful military campaigns on a foriegn policy of expansion. By his death on August 8 AD 117, when the new emperor Hadrain took over, the Roman Empire was at its greatest size.

8 C.E.
The Roman World During the Reign of Augustus Caesar

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

47 C.E.
The Roman World During the Reign of Claudius

Romans TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

117 C.E.
The Roman World at the End of the Reign of Trajan

More Maps of the Roman Empire

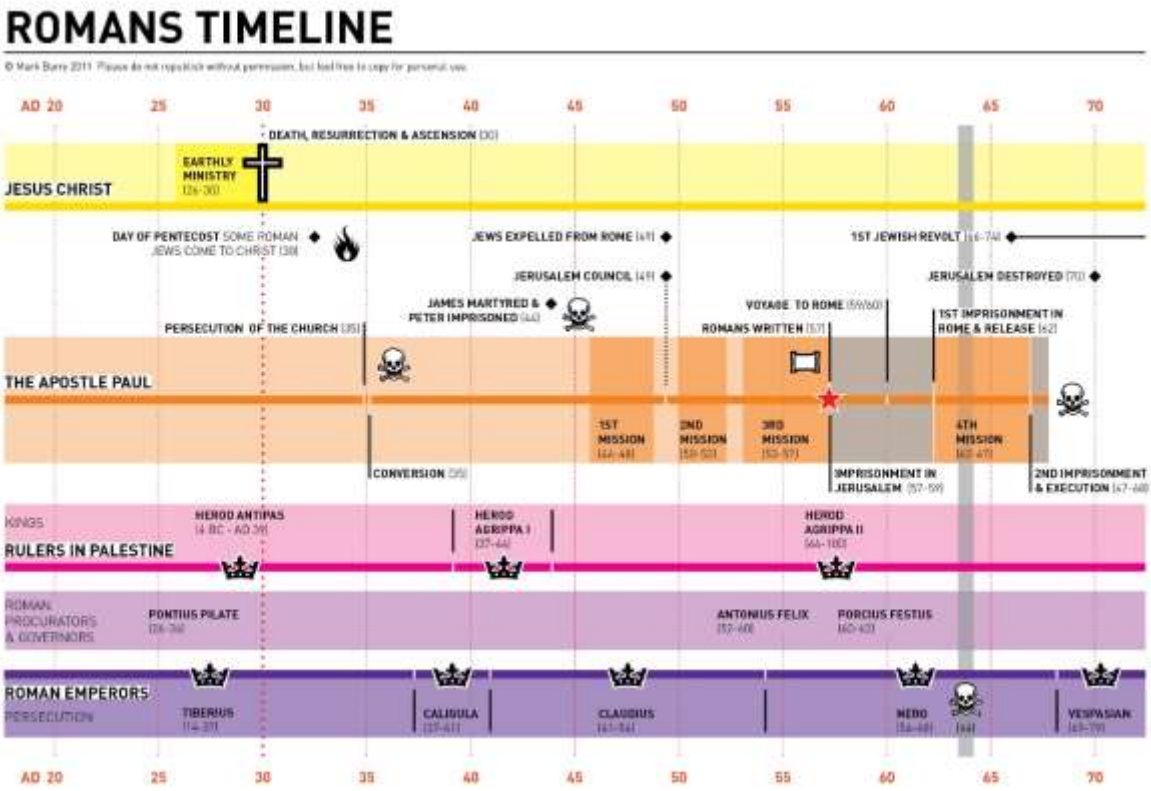
http://www.bible-history.com/maps/maps/map_roman-empire.html

http://www.roman-emperors.org/Index.htm

http://madefrom.com/history/antiquity/ancient-maps-romans-see-world/

Maps of Ancient Israel During 1st Century

http://www.bible-history.com/maps/ancient-roads-in-israel.html



http://www.biblestudy.org/maps/palestine-under-the-herods.html

Romans TOC
(Table of Contents)

See also*: Paul: Background/Maps

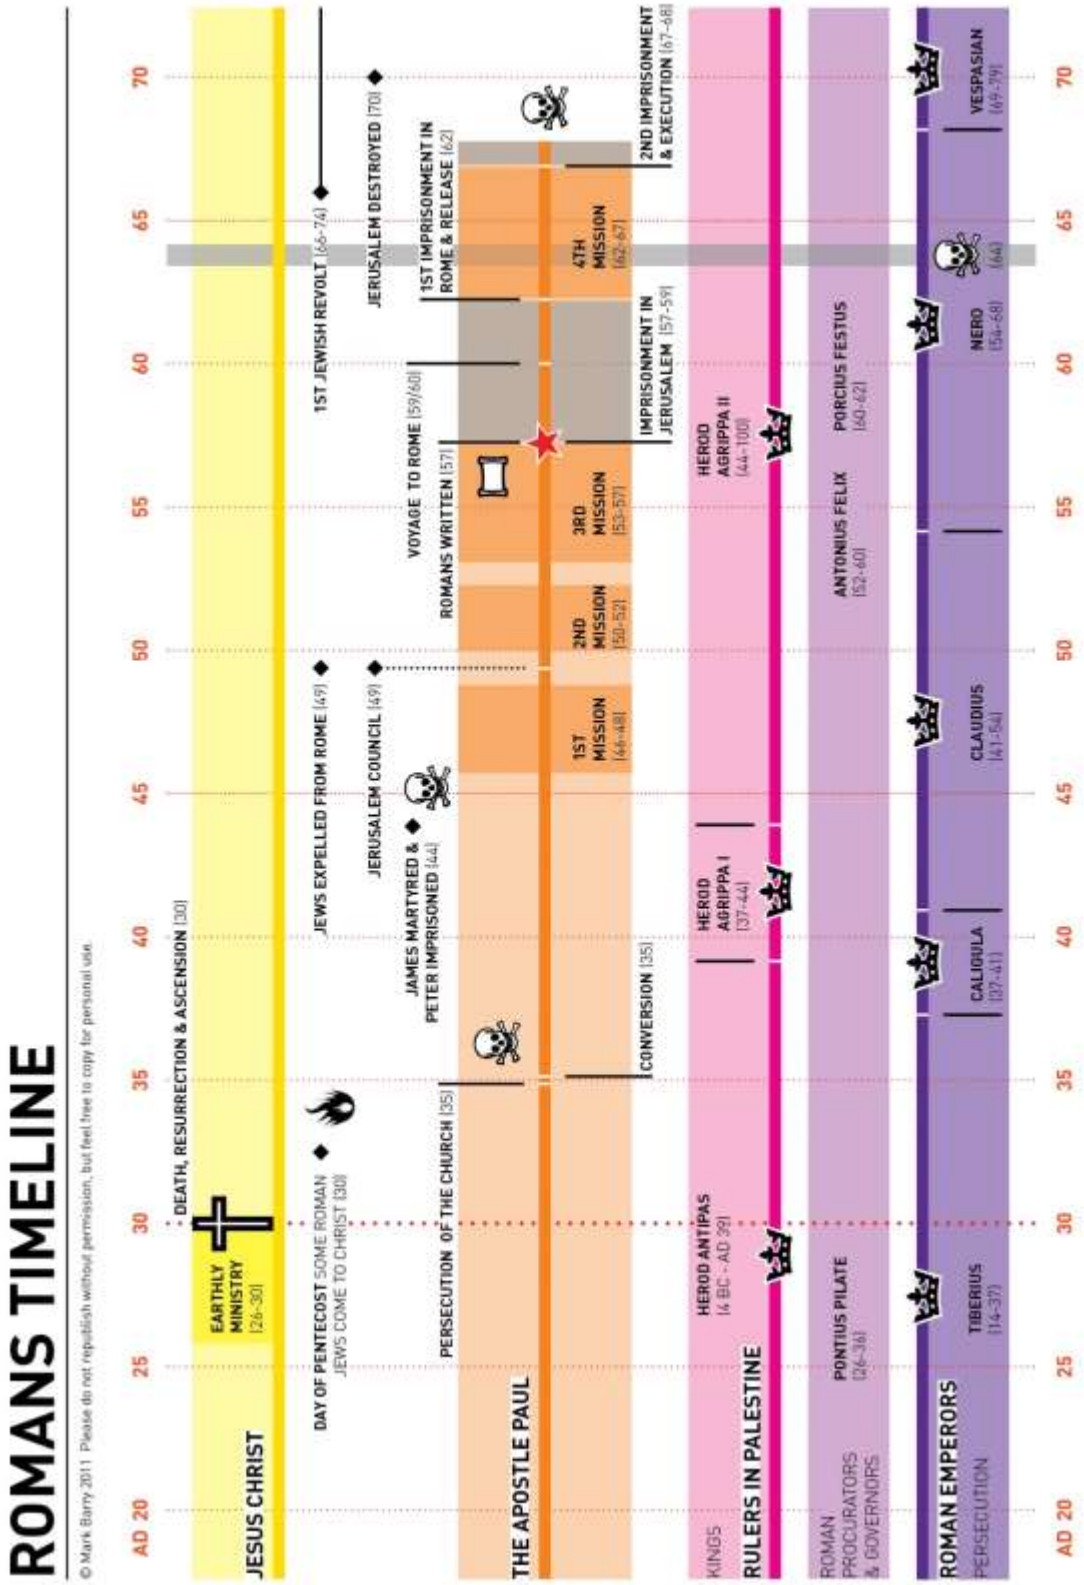
Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



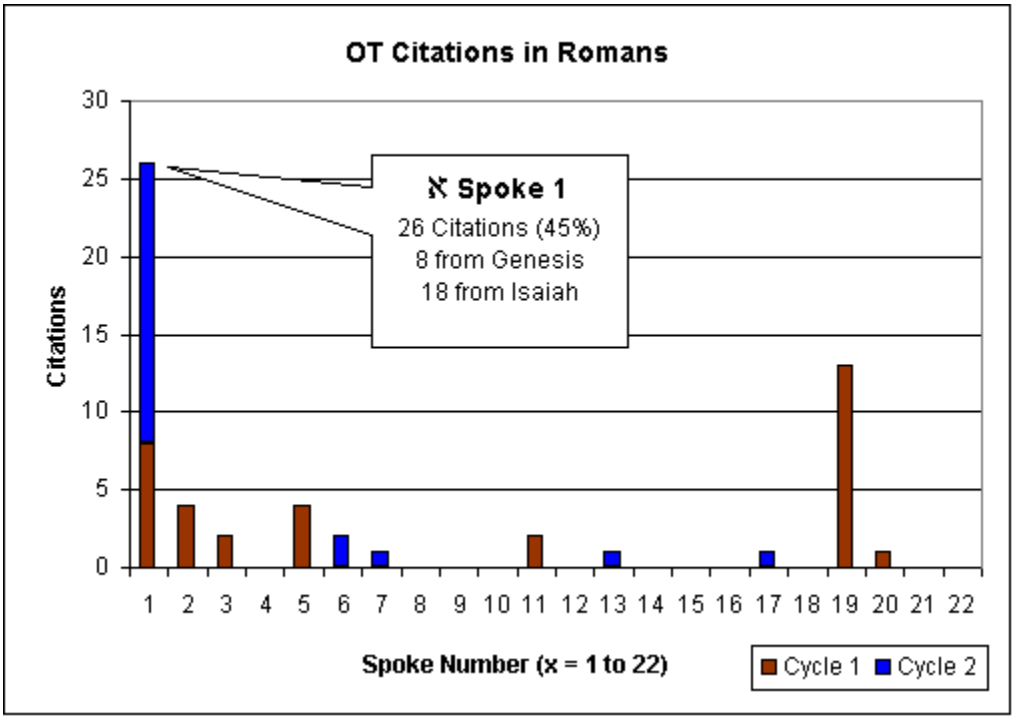
Romans Timeline

See next page for a larger view…

Romans TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



Old Testament Sayings in the Book of Romans (Chart)

https://www.biblewheel.com//Wheel/CitationsInRomans.php

The divine integration of Genesis, Isaiah, and Romans - the books that constitute Spoke 1 of the Wheel - can be seen in the distribution of Old Testament citations found in the Book of Romans. The absolute maximum is found in Isaiah, from which Romans quotes 18 times. The distribution breaks down as follows:

	Genesis	Isaiah	Others
Totals	8	18	31

This means that 26/57 or 45% of all citations in Romans come from either Genesis or Isaiah. This graph shows how these results relate to the Wheel:

The table below lists all the direct citations found in Romans. Of course, the counting will vary slightly depending on various choices, such as how to count partial citations, repeated citations and so forth. A good online resource that lists all the Old Testament citations in all the books of the New Testament may be found at R. Grant Jones website. The table below, which I put together myself before finding similiar results online, is in substantial agreement with Jones' results.

Romans	Quote	Genesis	Isaiah	Other
Rom 1:17	as it is written, The just shall live by faith.			Hab 2:4
Rom 2:24	For the name of God is blasphemed among the Gentiles through you, as it is written.		Isa 52:5

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

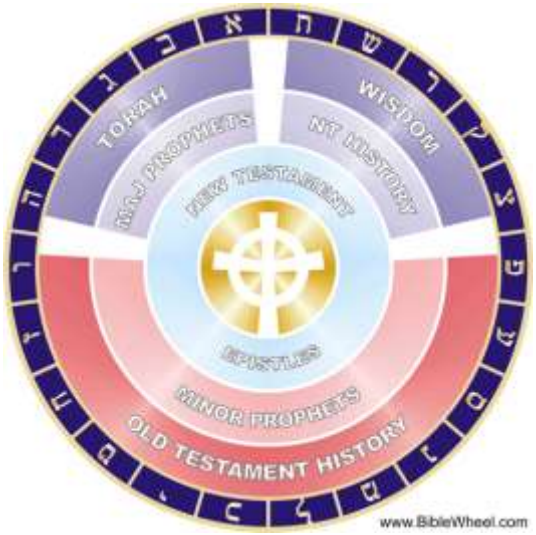
Rom 3:4	as it is written, That thou mightest be justified in thy sayings, and mightest overcome when thou art judged.			Ps 51:4
Rom 3:10-12	As it is written, There is none righteous, no, not one: There is none that understandeth, there is none that seeketh after God.			Ps 14:2-3
Rom 3:13a	Their throat is an open sepulchre;			Ps 5:9
Rom 3:13b	with their tongues they have used deceit; the poison of asps is under their lips:			Ps 140:3
Rom 3:14	Whose mouth is full of cursing and bitterness:			Ps 10:7
Rom 3:15-17	Their feet are swift to shed blood: Destruction and misery are in their ways:And the way of peace have they not known:		Isa 59:7-8
Rom 3:18	There is no fear of God before their eyes.			Ps 36:1
Rom 4:3	For what saith the scripture? Abraham believed God, and it was counted unto him for righteousness.	Gen 15:6
Rom 4:7-8	Saying, Blessed are they whose iniquities are forgiven, and whose sins are covered. Blessed is the man to whom the Lord will not impute sin.			Ps 32:1-2
Rom 4.9	his faith was reckoned for righteousness	Gen 15.6
Rom 4:17	(As it is written, I have made thee a father of many nations,)	Gen 17:4
Rom 4:18	according to that which was spoken, So shall thy seed be.	Gen 15:5
Rom 4.22	Wherefore also it was reckoned unto him for righteousness	Gen 15.6
Rom 7.7	Thou shalt not covet			Exo 20.17
Rom 8:36	As it is written, For thy sake we are killed all the day long; we are accounted as sheep for the slaughter.			Ps 44:22
Rom 9:7	In Isaac shall thy seed be called.	Gen 21:12
Rom 9:9	At this time will I come, and Sara shall have a son.	Gen 18:10
Rom 9:12	It was said unto her, The elder shall serve the younger.	Gen 25:23
Rom 9:13	As it is written, Jacob have I loved, but Esau have I hated.			Mal 1:3
Rom 9:15	For he saith to Moses, I will have mercy on whom I will have mercy, and I will have compassion on whom I will have compassion.			Exo 33:19

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Rom 9:17	For the scripture saith unto Pharaoh, Even for this same purpose have I raised thee up, that I might shew my power in thee, and that my name might be declared throughout all the earth.			Exo 9:16
Rom 9:20	Nay but, O man, who art thou that repliest against God? Shall the thing formed say to him that formed it, Why hast thou made me thus?		Isa 45:9
Rom 9:25	As he saith also in Osee, I will call them my people, which were not my people; and her beloved, which was not beloved.			Hos 2:23
Rom 9.26	And it shall come to pass, that in the place where it was said unto them, Ye are not my people; there shall they be called the children of the living God.			Hos 1:9-10
Rom 9:27-28	Esaias also crieth concerning Israel, Though the number of the children of Israel be as the sand of the sea, a remnant shall be saved:		Isa 10:22-23
Rom 9:29	And as Esaias said before, Except the Lord of Sabaoth had left us a seed, we had been as Sodoma, and been made like unto Gomorrha.		Isa 1:9
Rom 9:33	As it is written, Behold, I lay in Sion a stumblingstone and rock of offence: and whosoever believeth on him shall not be ashamed.		Isa 8.14 Isa 28:16
Rom 10:5	For Moses describeth the righteousness which is of the law, That the man which doeth those things shall live by them.			Lev 18:5
Rom 10:6-8	Say not in thine heart, Who shall ascend into heaven? (that is, to bring Christ down from above:) Or, Who shall descend into the deep? (that is, to bring up Christ again from the dead.) But what saith it? The word is nigh thee, even in thy mouth, and in thy heart:			Deu 30:11-14
Rom 10:11	For the scripture saith, Whosoever believeth on him shall not be ashamed.		Isa 28:16
Rom 10:13	For whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved.			Joel 2:32
Rom 10:15	as it is written, How beautiful are the feet of them that preach the gospel of peace, and bring glad tidings of good things!		Isa 52:7
Rom 10:16	For Esaias saith, Lord, who hath believed our report?		Isa 53:1
Rom 10:18	their sound went into all the earth, and their words unto the ends of the world.			Ps 19:4
Rom 10:19	Moses saith, I will provoke you to jealousy by them that are no people, and by a foolish nation I will anger you.			Deu 32:21
Rom 10:20-21	But Esaias is very bold, and saith, I was found of them that sought me not; I was made manifest unto them that asked not after me. But to Israel he saith, All day long I have stretched forth my hands unto a disobedient and gainsaying people.		Isa 65:1-2

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Rom 11:3	Lord, they have killed thy prophets, and digged down thine altars; and I am left alone, and they seek my life. .			1 Ki 18:4
Rom 11:4	But what saith the answer of God unto him? I have reserved to myself seven thousand men, who have not bowed the knee to the image of Baal.			1 Ki 19:18
Rom 11:8	(According as it is written, God hath given them the spirit of slumber, eyes that they should not see, and ears that they should not hear;)		Isa 29:10
Rom 11:9-10	And David saith, Let their table be made a snare, and a trap, and a stumblingblock, and a recompence unto them:Let their eyes be darkened, that they may not see, and bow down their back alway.			Ps 69:22-23
Rom 11:26-27	as it is written, There shall come out of Sion the Deliverer, and shall turn away ungodliness from Jacob: For this is my covenant unto them, when I shall take away their sins.		Isa 59:20-21
Rom 11:27b	when I shall take away their sins.		Isa 27.9
Rom 11:34	For who hath known the mind of the Lord? or who hath been his counsellor?		Isa 40:13
Rom 12:19	for it is written, Vengeance is mine; I will repay, saith the Lord.			Deut 32.35
Rom 12:20	Therefore if thine enemy hunger, feed him; if he thirst, give him drink: for in so doing thou shalt heap coals of fire on his head.			Pro 25:21
Rom 13:9a	Thou shalt not commit adultery, Thou shalt not kill, Thou shalt not steal, Thou shalt not bear false witness, Thou shalt not covet;			Exo 20
Rom 13:9b	Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself.			Lev 19:18
Rom 14:11	For it is written, As I live, saith the Lord, every knee shall bow to me, and every tongue shall confess to God.		Isa 45:23
Rom 15.3	as it is written, The reproaches of them that reproached thee fell on me.			Ps 69.9
Rom 15:9	as it is written, For this cause I will confess to thee among the Gentiles, and sing unto thy name.			Ps 18:49
Rom 15:10	And again he saith, Rejoice, ye Gentiles, with his people.			Deut 32.43
Rom 15:11	And again, Praise the Lord, all ye Gentiles; and laud him, all ye people.			Ps 117.1
Rom 15:12	And again, Esaias saith, There shall be a root of Jesse, and he that shall rise to reign over the Gentiles; in him shall the Gentiles trust.		Isa 11:10
Rom 15:21	But as it is written, To whom he was not spoken of, they shall see: and they that have not heard shall understand.		Isa 52:15



Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Canon Wheel: View the Bible Wheel

https://www.biblewheel.com/Wheel/canonwheel_fullsize.php

The image below reveals the sevenfold symmetric perfection of the Holy Bible. Each colored section corresponds to one of the seven traditional divisions of the Christian Canon, which span Three Cycles containing 22 Books. This sevenfold structure exhibits both radial and bilateral symmetry and naturally integrates with the 22 letters of the Hebrew alphabet. The axis of bilateral symmetry divides between א (Aleph) and ת(Tav), the first and last letters of the Hebrew alphabet. This is discussed in the Canon Wheel Explanation. The Bible Wheel is introduced in the article called The Wheel of God. To appreciate the spiritual wonder revealed in the geometric form of God's Word, I would suggest viewing the images of the stained glass Bible Wheel made by my wife.

View the Bible Wheel:

The threefold cruciform structure of the Canon Wheel is particularly striking in light of Christian Iconography which has traditionally used a threefold cruciform halo to indicate Deity, as in this icon of Christ:

Romans TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

This is a Russian icon of Christ Pantocrator (Ruler of All). He holds an open book in His hand, representing the Holy Scripture which now is recognized as isomorphic to His halo. Remember, this structure has been discovered, not imposed. It has been implicit in the structure of the Canon since the day God sealed it. The relation between the Canon Wheel and icons of Christ is discussed in the article Art, Theology, and Prophecy.

The Canon Wheel

Christ Pantocrator

Romans TOC
(Table of Contents)

[NOTE: Still evaluating the above wheel concept… needs more vetting… placing it here because it is referenced in the list of OT Sayings in Romans above]

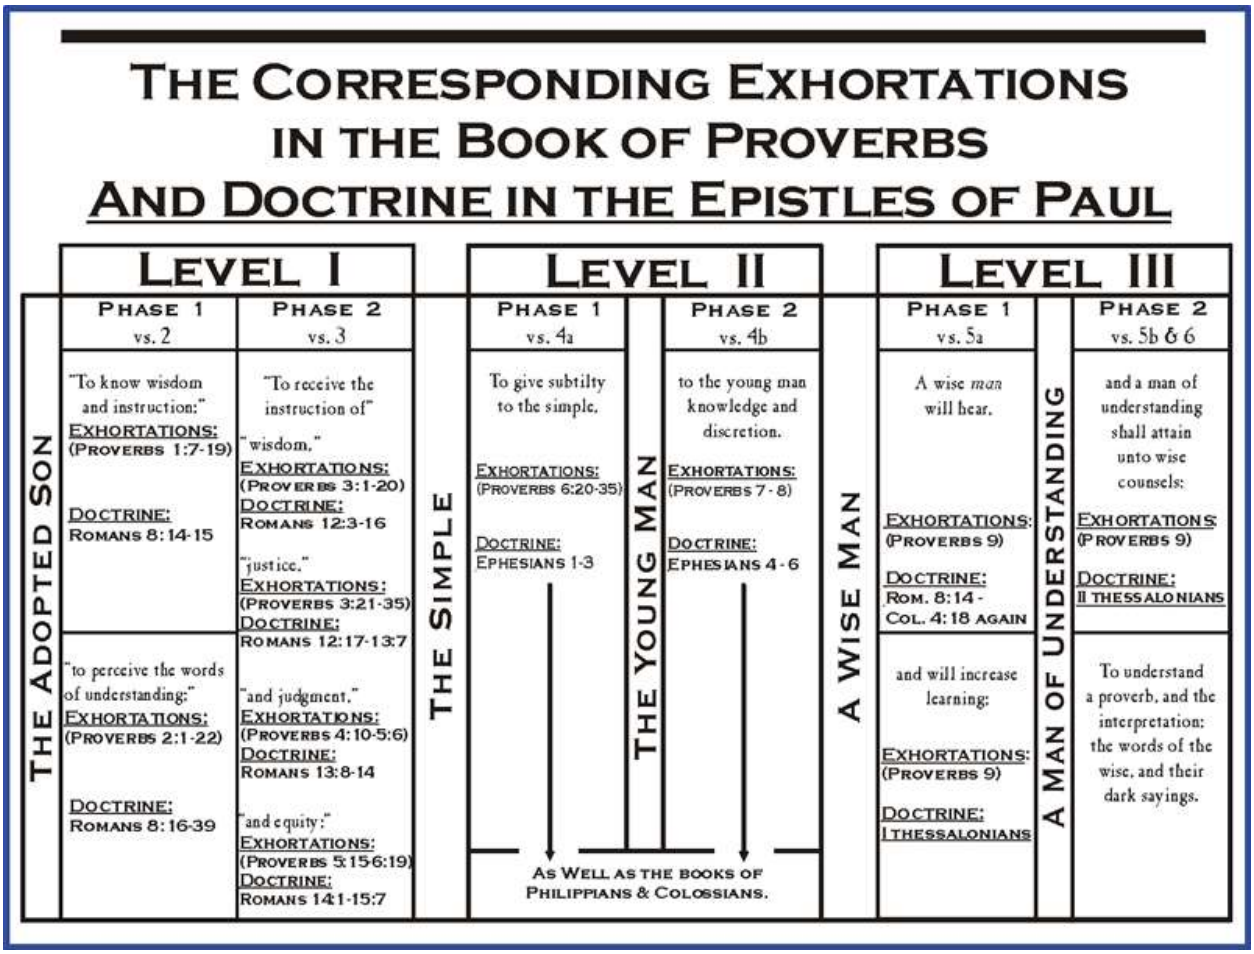
 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Referenced in above OT Sayings in Romans article:

R.Grant Jones:
http://www.oocities.org/heartland/pines/7224/Rick/ (archived)

http://reocities.com/r_grant_jones/Rick/Septuagint/spindex.htm

Notes on the Septuagint:
https://www.scribd.com/document/286052073/R-Grant-Jones-Notes-on-the-Septuagint-Abridged-by-G-Tzavelas



http://www.areopage.net/PDF/LXXNotesFeb06.pdf [PDF]

Directory of Ancient Versions of the Bible:
http://www.bible-researcher.com/links14.html

Romans TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Corresponding Exhortations in Proverbs and Doctrine in the Epistles of Paul

Other Old Testament Sources in the New Testament

The Old Testament in the New Testament

https://www.ucg.org/the-good-news/the-old-testament-in-the-new-testament

Old Testament in the New Testament

http://www.biblicalstudies.org.uk/pdf/mp/otnt_hagner.pdf [PDF]

Excerpt:

Every reader of the New Testament is aware of the frequency of Old Testament quotation in the New Testament writings. There are, in fact, somewhere between two and three hundred actual quotations of the Old Testament in the New Testament. Beyond this, of course, there is a great amount of allusive material, some of which is deliberate, and some of which is unconscious, though nonetheless real.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Romans Study Videos by Gene Getz from his Life Applications Study Bible

Dr. Getz Bio: http://www2.bhpublishinggroup.com/qr/GetzBible/author.asp

Regarding Dr. Gene Getz and the following videos: [Recommended]
Gene now serves as President of the Center for Church Renewal and has completed a 7-year Bible project using the Holman Christian Standard Bible. The "Life Essentials Study Bible" is the first Multi-Media Study Bible which contains 1,500 principles from Genesis to Revelation. Using QR codes associated with each biblical principle, the reader can access over 250 hours of video teaching on these principles by Dr. Getz. Gene also airs a 2-minute daily feature on numerous radio stations called "Bible Principles" which can also be accessed by going to www.bibleprinciples.org where you'll also discover information about Gene's Life Essentials Study Bible.

See https://bibleprinciples.org/ for access to the same teaching videos for Galatians (as above) and also for all the other books of the bible. (Video Search)

Here is the list of Life Application videos for Romans from the site:

Romans; Principle #1; Rom 1:1-12; p. 1534 (Note: also a good brief introduction)
Mutual Encouragement: Regardless of their positions, spiritual leaders are to function as members of the body of Christ who all need one another in order to continue to mature in Christ.
Video

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Romans; Principle #2; Rom 1:13-17; p. 1535
Standing Strong: No matter what our circumstances, we should never allow shame and fear to keep us from being identified with our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.
Video

Romans; Principle #3; Rom 1:18-32; p. 1535
Sin's Devastating Results: In view of the power of sin, we should not be surprised how human beings progressively violate God's moral laws and suffer the consequences.
Video

Romans; Principle #4; Rom 2:1-24; p. 1536
Sin's Pervasive Impact: Though we may assent to a high standard of righteousness, we are still not able to measure up to God's perfect requirements that make us free from sin.
Video

Romans; Principle #5; Rom 2:25-29; p. 1537
A Heart Experience: To have salvation, we must go through a born-again experience that renews our hearts.
Video

Romans; Principle #6; Rom 3:1-26; p. 1538
Salvation through Faith: Since we all fall short of God's perfect standard of righteousness, in order to be saved we must put our faith in the Lord Jesus Christ.
Video

Romans; Principle #7; Rom 3:27-4:25; p. 1539
God's Free Gift: Since salvation is obtained by grace through faith, we are to believe God and receive salvation as a free gift.
Video

Romans; Principle #8; Rom 5:1-11; p. 1542
Peace with God: When we are made righteous by faith, we are to have the full assurance of our salvation, now and eternally.
Video

Romans; Principle #9; Rom 5:12-21; p. 1541
God's Saving Grace: To walk in God's will, we must believe that God's grace is far greater than the power of sin.
Video

Romans; Principle #10; Rom 6:1-14; p. 1542
Our New Life in Christ: To walk in God's will, we should continually remind ourselves that we are dead to sin and alive to God in Christ Jesus.
Video

Romans; Principle #11; Rom 6:15-23; p. 1542
The Apostles' Teaching: To walk in God's will, we are to obey the pattern of teaching recorded in the Scriptures.
Video

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Romans; Principle #12; Rom 7:1-12; p. 1543
The Power of Scripture: To help people overcome their sinful attitudes and actions, we should continually expose them to the Word of God.
Video

Romans; Principle #13; Rom 7:13-25; p. 1544
Inner Conflict: Even though we sincerely desire to walk in God's will, we should expect inner struggles when choosing between doing right and doing wrong.
Video

Romans; Principle #14; Rom 8:1-17; p. 1545
The Indwelling Spirit: When we face temptations to violate God's will, we are to draw on the power of the indwelling Holy Spirit to enable us to be victorious over sin.
Video

Romans; Principle #15; Rom 8:18-27; p. 1545
Divine Prayer: When we become discouraged, we should remember the intercessory ministry both of the Holy Spirit and of the Lord Jesus Christ.
Video

Romans; Principle #16; Rom 8:28-39; p. 1546
Security in Christ: No matter the circumstances of life, we are to take comfort in the fact that we are secure in Christ, now and eternally.
Video

Romans; Principle #17; Rom 9:1-3; p. 1547
A Compassionate Heart: We should develop a passion for all people who need to hear the good news regarding the gift of salvation.
Video

Romans; Principle #18; Rom 9:6-29; p. 1548
God's Sovereign Mercy: We must understand that God's elective grace is not only based on who He is, but is also directly related to His love for all lost humanity.
Video

Romans; Principle #19; Rom 9:30-10:21; p. 1549
Human Responsibility: We are to faithfully share with all people that they are responsible to respond to God's mercy and grace.
Video

Romans; Principle #20; Rom 11:1-32; p. 1551
The Great Commission: Regardless of God's future plan for Israel as a nation, our primary focus today should be on God's present plan for both Jews and Gentiles.
Video

Romans; Principle #21; Rom 11:33-12:2; p. 1551
Christ-Centered Worship: In view of God's mercy, we are humbly to acknowledge His sovereign grace and worship Him by offering all parts of our bodies as a living sacrifice.
Video

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Romans; Principle #22; Rom 12:3-8; p. 1552
A Servant's Heart: To live in God's will, we are to humbly serve one another within the body of Jesus Christ.
Video

Romans; Principle #23; Rom 12:9-16; p. 1553
Sincere Love: To live in God's will, we are continually to demonstrate authentic love for one another.
Video

Romans; Principle #24; Rom 12:17-21; p. 1553
Avoiding Vengeance: To live in God's will, we are to demonstrate Christlike love to our enemies.
Video

Romans; Principle #25; Rom 13:1-7; p. 1554
Civic Responsibilities: To live in God's will, we are to be good citizens.
Video

Romans; Principle #26; Rom 13:8-10; p. 1555
Loving One Another: To live in God's will, we are to obey Christ's new command.
Video

Romans; Principle #27; Rom 13:11-14; p. 1555
Walking in the Light: To live in God's will, we are to walk according to the Spirit and not according to the flesh.
Video

Romans; Principle #28; Rom 14:1-12; p. 1556
Accepting One Another: To live in God's will, we are to avoid judging one another where God has given us freedom.
Video

Romans; Principle #29; Rom 14:13-23; p. 1556
Protecting One Another: To live in God's will, we are to avoid using our freedom in Christ in a way that causes another Christian to fall into sin.
Video

Romans; Principle #30; Rom 15:1-6; p. 1557
Pursuing Peace: To live in God's will, we are to do all we can to create love and unity in the body of Christ.
Video

Romans; Principle #31; Rom 15:7-14; p. 1558
Two-Dimensional Love: To live in God's will, not only are we to accept one another, but we are to instruct one another.
Video

Romans; Principle #32; Rom 15:25-29; p. 1559
Material Obligations: To live in God's will, we are to reciprocate materially when we have been helped spiritually.
Video

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Romans; Principle #33; Rom 15:30-33; p. 1559
The Power of Prayer: To live in God's will, we are to pray for one another, particularly when we face difficult challenges in our lives.
Video

Romans; Principle #34; Rom 16:1-24; p. 1560
A Model of Encouragement: To live in God's will, we are to remember in a special way those who have encouraged us.
Video

Romans TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Romans Study Guides / Commentaries

The Gospel According to Paul: Romans (Commentary by Dr. Bob Utley)
http://www.ibiblio.org/freebiblecommentary/pdf/EN/VOL05.pdf [PDF]

Dr. Thomas Constable's Notes on Romans http://www.soniclight.com/constable/notes/htm/NT/Romans/Romans.htm [also available: PDF]

Excerpt:

Throughout the history of the church, Christians have recognized this epistle as the most important book in the New Testament. The reason for this conviction is that it is an exposition of "the gospel of Jesus Christ." Martin Luther called Romans "the chief part of the New Testament and the perfect gospel." Coleridge, the English poet, declared it to be "the most profound work in existence." And Frederick Godet, the French commentator, described it as "the cathedral of the Christian faith."[27]

To appreciate the message of this book, it will be helpful first to consider Paul's presuppositions. He based these, of course, on Old Testament revelation concerning cosmology and history. "Cosmology" is the study of the nature and principles of the universe.

By the way, there is now what has been called the "new perspective on Paul," which some writers on Paul have advocated in recent years. These scholars believe that "Protestant exegesis for too long allowed a typical Lutheran emphasis on justification by faith to impose a hermeneutical grid on the text of Romans."[28] They believe that the Judaism of Paul's day was not a coldly legalistic "system of earning salvation by the merit of good works, with little or no room for the free forgiveness and grace of God."[29] Rather, "Judaism's whole religious self-understanding was based on the premise of grace."[30]

E. P. Sanders used the phrase "covenant nomism," by which he meant that, when Paul wrote Romans, he had in mind the role of the law in maintaining the Jews' status as God's chosen people, not as a means of salvation. Some advocates of this view also believe that Paul's Greco-Roman culture influenced the apostle more than his Jewish background and the Old Testament. This has led to some reinterpreting of Paul's writings. Advocates of the "new perspective" include E. P. Sanders, James Dunn, the writer of the Word Biblical Commentary on Romans, N. T. Wright, who has written many books on Pauline theology, and others.

"This, then, is the context within which and against which we must set Paul's treatment of the law in Romans. The Jews, proselytes, and God-worshiping Gentiles among his readership could read what Paul says about the law in the light of this close interconnection in Jewish theology of Israel's election, covenant, and law. They would, I believe, recognize that what Paul was concerned about was the fact that covenant promise and law had become too inextricably identified with ethnic Israel as such, with the Jewish people marked out in their national distinctiveness by the practices of circumcision, food laws, and sabbath in particular ([N. T.] Wright appropriately coins the phrase 'national righteousness'). They would recognize that what Paul was endeavoring to do was to free both promise and law for a wider range of recipients, freed from the ethnic constraints which he saw to be narrowing the grace of God and diverting the saving purpose of God out of its main channel—Christ."[31]

Some evangelical scholars have accepted "new perspective" theories, though I have not. The result of the "new perspective" is a departure from traditionally held interpretations of many Pauline texts. The reading that I have done on this theory has not convinced me that Paul had a "covenant nomistic" view of the law.[32]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

First among his presuppositions, Paul assumed the God of the Old Testament. He assumed God's existence and full deity. He believed that God is holy and just. He also held that God is the Creator, Sustainer, and Sovereign Ruler of the universe.

Second, Paul's view of man was that he is subject to God's government of the universe. Paul believed that man has received a measure of freedom from God, so he can choose to pursue sin. However, if he does, he is still in the sovereign hand of God. God allows the consequences of his sins to have their effects on him both now and forever. Man is also in authority over the rest of the material creation (Gen. 1:28). What man has experienced, the material creation also has experienced and reflects as a result of man's action.

Third, Paul's view of history was that of Old Testament revelation. The important historical events for Paul were those in his Scriptures.

Adam was the first man. He rebelled against God's authority. The result was threefold: the practical dethronement of God in the minds of Adam's descendants, the degradation of humanity, and the defilement of creation. This is a very different view of history from what evolutionists and humanists take. Man has lost his scepter because he rebelled against God's scepter.

Two other individuals were especially significant in history for Paul, as we see in Romans: Abraham, and Jesus Christ. God called Abraham to be a channel of blessing to the world. Christ is the greatest blessing. Through Him, people and creation can experience restoration to God's original intention for them.

These are Paul's basic presuppositions on which all of his reasoning in Romans rests.

Romans may not be the best biblical book to put in the hands of most unsaved people to lead them to salvation. John is better for that purpose. However, Romans is the best book to put in the hands of a saved person to lead him or her to understand and appreciate their salvation. By the way, "salvation" is an umbrella term: it covers many aspects of deliverance, including justification, sanctification, glorification, redemption, propitiation, et al.[33]

Notes:

[27]G. Campbell Morgan, Living Messages of the Books of the Bible, 2:1:93.

[28]Dunn, p. lxv.

[29]Ibid.

[30]Ibid.

[31]Ibid., pp. lxxi-lxxi.

[32]See James E. Allman, "Gaining Perspective on the New Perspective on Paul," Bibliotheca Sacra 170:677 (January-March 2013):51-68, for an introduction to and evaluation of the views set forth by Sanders, Wright, and Dunn.

[33]See Earl D. Radmacher, Salvation.

Romans TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Romans Bible Study and Teacher's Guide
http://www.biblicalintensives.com/folio/folio_docs/Romans%20Teacher%20Manual%202009.pdf [PDF]

http://manualslist.com/pdf/romans-bible-study-and-teachers-guide-biblical-intensives.html

http://www.docucu-archive.com/view/e67d0b8ec9d048992e0159ecc8d07021/ROMANS-BIBLE-STUDY-AND-TEACHER%27S-GUIDE.pdf [PDF]

Executable Outlines: Romans (Copeland)
http://www.executableoutlines.com/ro.htm (also available as a PDF)

A Study Through the Book of Romans [PDF]
http://www.biblebc.com/bbi/Courses/Romans/Romans%20Study%20Guide%20a4%20-%20Student.pdf

Charts Used in Teaching Bible Studies from Romans http://www.biblestudyguide.org/ebooks/jeffsmith/romans-charts.PDF [PDF]

Commentary on Romans (John Calvin)
http://www.biblestudyguide.org/ebooks/comment/calcom38.pdf [PDF]

Conformin to the Truth Through a Study in Romans (Man's Need of a Savior and God's Gracious Provision) https://conformingtothetruth.files.wordpress.com/2016/01/romans-bible-study-book-1.pdf [PDF]

Biblical Studies from Paul's Epistle to The Romans http://www.biblestudyguide.org/ebooks/jeffsmith/romans-lessons.pdf [PDF]

Growth Groups Inductive Bible Study – Romans 1-8
Romans 1-4: http://www.grace-bible.org/uploads/publications/romans1_web.pdf [PDF]

Romans 5-8: http://www.grace-bible.org/uploads/publications/romans2_web.pdf [PDF]

Romans TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Seminar - Paul - N.T. Wright (2014) (focusing on Romans 9-11)

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=hP56P1DQMOY [Video]

This panel discussion was part of a Lanier Theological Library Seminar Series held on Friday March 21, 2014. Dr. N.T. Wright, Dr. Bruce Corley, and Dr. Ross Wagner participate in a panel discussion on the Apostle Paul with a considerable concentration on Paul"s intended meaning in Romans chapters 9-11 as well as other issues.

Panel Members are:

Dr. N.T. Wright (Professor. University of St. Andrews)

Dr. Bruce Corley (Former President, Now Professor of New Testament and Greek. B.H. Carroll Theological Institute)

Dr. Ross Wagner (Associate Professor, Duke Divinity School)

Mark Lanier, Moderator

Romans: The Gospel According to Paul (12-Part Series)

https://gracethrufaith.com/series/romans/

(Note: Pre-millennial, Pre-Tribulation perspective)

Excerpt:

Paul wrote his letter to the Romans from Corinth in the spring of 57 AD. He hadn't been there yet, but was looking forward to ministering to the Church in Rome. This letter was intended to lay the groundwork for his visit, to prepare the largely gentile congregation there for his arrival.

After a review of the state of the world, the first eight chapters of Romans deal with doctrine, the building blocks of our faith. Chapters 9 thru 11 are prophecy, our hope. And chapters 12-16 focus on application, by which we express our love. And so the letter can be outlined in accordance with 1st Corinthians 13, faith, hope and love.

The over riding message, woven through out, is that the Gospel is not a set of laws to be obeyed, nor is it a creed to be accepted. It's not advice to be taken, a religion to be believed, or a social order to be lived. It's a message about a person, a love story written in blood on a cross of wood. It's about God who became a man and died for us so that we could live with Him. Let's begin…

See also: The Gospel According to Jesus Messiah (Christ)

Romans TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

N.T. Wright: Romans and the Theology of Paul (1995)

http://ntwrightpage.com/2016/05/07/romans-and-the-theology-of-paul/ [PDF]

A JEWISH THEOLOGY for the Gentile world, and a welcome for Gentiles designed to take the Jewish world jealous. That, I suggest, is what Paul offered his Roman readers, and I suspect it puzzled them as much as it puzzles us, though perhaps in different ways. This paper addresses these puzzles by means of a theological reading of the letter; that is, a reading of the letter drawing out its main theological line of thought, and a summary of the theology that thus emerges, showing how, and perhaps why, it was deployed in this fashion…

Since this essay is part of an extended conversation, I shall use most of my space for exposition, not for annotation, which could of course proliferate ad infinitum. History of research is important in this subject, but must here be assumed, not elaborated. Suffice it to say that different ways of reading Romans usually reflect different understandings of Paul's whole theology and his place within a history-of-religions scheme, and the ways in which those two interact. The weight of the letter is deemed to fall where the interpreter's theology finds its locus classicus: for Albert Schweitzer, this was chaps. 5-8; for F. C. Baur, chaps. 9-11; for various Lutherans, chaps. 1-4; for [Paul S.] Minear and others, chaps. 12-16. Sometimes a fresh reading of Romans has itself generated a new "way of reading Paul as a whole; or, at least, the reading of Romans has played a vital role, interacting of course with other factors, in producing a totally new understanding. Ernst Käsemann, I think, provides an example of this. Ultimately, the best argument for any exegesis ought to be the overall and detailed sense it makes of the letter, the coherence it achieves. Solutions that leave the letter in bits all over the exegetical floor do not have the same compelling force, as hypotheses, as does a solution that offers a clear line of thought all through, without squashing or stifling the unique and distinctive contribution of the various parts…

Book of Romans (Summary)

https://www.gotquestions.org/Book-of-Romans.html

Charts – Romans 8

http://www.trianglebiblechurch.org/chartsrom8.htm

Roman Series Summary

http://timwoodroof.com/information/sermon-resources/romans-outline-and-chart/

See next page…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Important Concepts

Righteousness:

Primary meaning - God's covenant faithfulness, his promise-keeping nature, his capacity to be true to himself and to us. Demonstrated best through Jesus Christ.

Secondary meaning - right relationship with God ... the condition of being at peace with God.

"For in the gospel, a righteousness of God is revealed that is by faith from first to last" (1: 17).

Faith - trusting in God to be God, to keep his covenant promises, to be true in spite of evidence, contrary to what makes sense. "Therefore, the promise comes by faith, so that it may be by grace" (4:16)

Gospel - The story of what God is doing in the world to demonstrate his faithfulness to his purposes and covenant. Particularly, the story of what God is doing through Jesus Christ: his life, his death, and his continuing work through the Spirit. "I am not ashamed of the gospel, because it is the power of God for the salvation of everyone who believes" (1: 16).

Law - Torah, the Law of Moses. A means to the goal of making us right with God. Commands intended to provoke obedience and thus, life. Sadly, our brokenness negated the effect of the Law, resulting not in obedience and life but in sin and death. "No one will be made right with God by keeping the Law" (3:20)

Resources

Achtemeier, Paul. Romans. Interpretation Series. John Knox Press. 1985.

Grieb, Katherine. The Story of Romans: A Narrative Defense of God's Righteousness. John Knox Press. 2002.

Moo, Douglas. The Epistle to the Romans. New International Commentary on the New Testament. William B. Eerdmans Publishing Company. 1996.

Westerholm, Stephen. Understanding Paul: The Early Christian Worldview of the Letter to the Romans. Baker Academic. 1997.

Wright, N.T. Romans in a Week. Audio lecture. http://www.regentaudio.com/product_details.php?item-id=103

We live in a story-formed world. Stories shape us, guide us, and give us perspective. Much of the tension we experience in the world today is caused by competing stories - scientific, Islamic, Christian, secular, personal. Listen once again to the story of the world according to Paul. What story do you tell yourself when trying to make sense of it all?

The Back Story of Romans
Romans 1:1–15

There are three stories that prompt the writing of Paul's letter to the Romans: 1) the story of his own life and ministry; 2) the story of the Roman church; 3) and the story of Jesus. Each story has an important role to play in the larger story Paul tells in the letter to the Romans.

The Heart of the Story
Romans 1:16–17

Paul's story involves some important terms: gospel, salvation, faith, Jew and Greek, the righteousness of God. Each term is important; not just for hearing what Paul has to say to the Romans, but for understanding what God is doing in your life.

The Story of a World gone Wild—Part 1
Romans 1:18–32

Something went badly wrong with Adam ... and we have been living in a broken world ever since. There has been a massive rejection of the Creation Order. We have usurped the throne. And God has allowed us (as in Bruce Almighty) to play God and to prove how foolish that is.

The Story of a World gone Wild—Part 2
Romans 2:1–3:20

The Gentiles are broken. (Everybody knows that!) But the Jews are just as broken. For if the "rules of life" are that God deals with us according to what we have done ... if getting it "right" is necessary to be right with God ... who can stand? No one. Not Gentiles. Not Jews. Not Church of Christ.

The Story of Rescue
Romans 3:21–31

Jesus Christ changes everything! The whole world, history, the rules of life are radically altered by his radical faithfulness. Trusting in Jesus, we are made right with God. Trusting in Jesus, we find grace and peace. Jesus makes it possible for us all, Jew and Gentile, to become what God wants us to be.

A Story of Trust
Romans 4:1–25

Paul tells the story of Abraham to make three points: 1) Abraham's story demonstrates God's covenant faithfulness; 2) Abraham's story shows the true meaning of "trusting faith"; and 3) Abraham's story illuminates what God was doing through the cross. God's promises ... our trust ... God's faithfulness ... right relationship.

The Story of Two Men and Two Worlds
Romans 5:1–21

There are two worlds, ruled by two men, governed by two sets of rules—the world of Adam and the world of Christ. Adam's world is broken: sin, slavery, disobedience, death. Christ's world is the world as God intended: grace, righteousness, power, life. Which world do you live in?

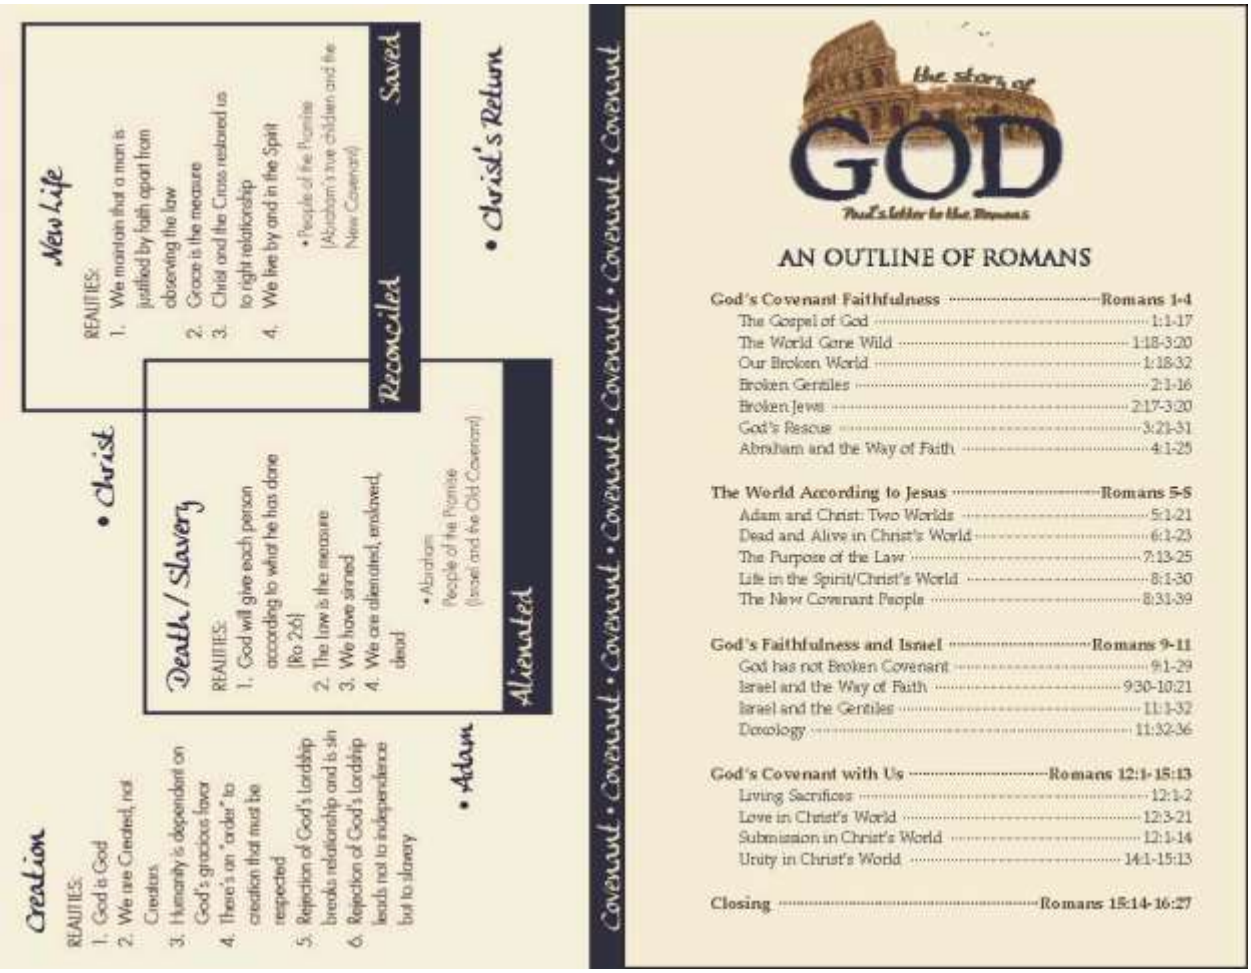
The Story of Living in a World Restored
Romans 6:1–23

The faithfulness of God (demonstrated through Jesus Christ) invites us to faith; a trusting death (God will kill sin in us, just as he promised) and a trusting life (God will give us new life, life-made-right, just as he promised. We are free to make God our Lord and become slaves to righteousness.

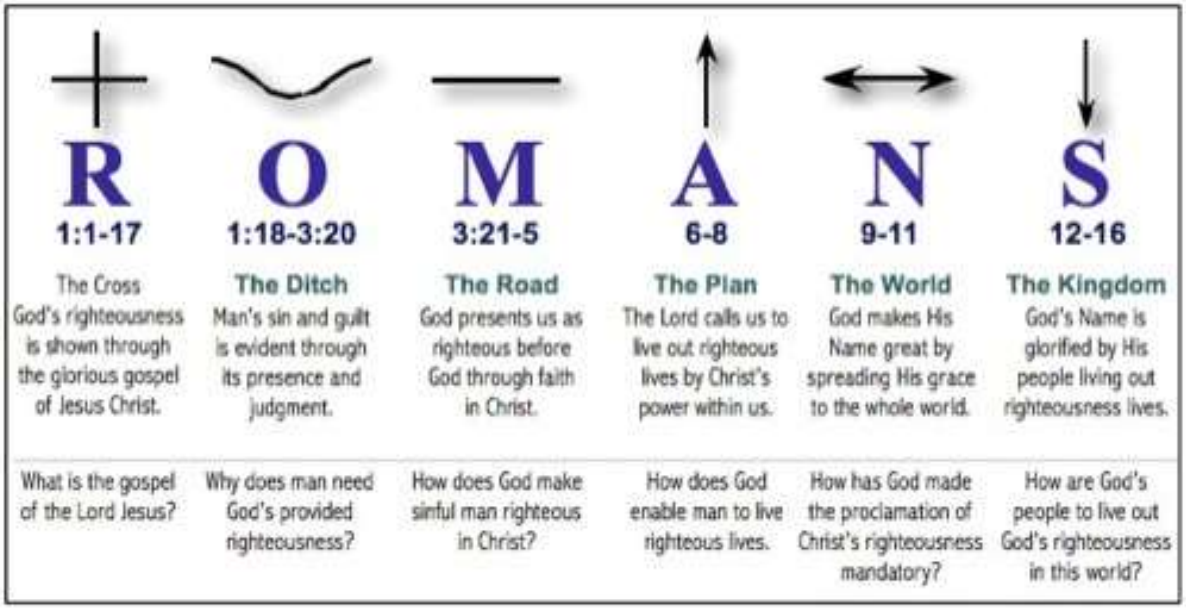
The Story of the Wretched Man
Romans 7:1–25

God's Law was given for our good. But, because of our brokenness, the Law became "death" to us. It encouraged our sin, not our obedience. It proved we were too broken to be right with God through what we did. It left us convinced that we needed someone (God) to do for us what we could not do ourselves—make us right by a faithfulness not our own.

The Story of Turning the Corner
Roman 8:1–11



We don't have to live in the old world, Adam's world, governed by the relentless demands of Law and obedience, doomed by our own brokenness. We can live in a new world, Christ's world, made possible by the life and death of Jesus and the ministry of the Holy Spirit.

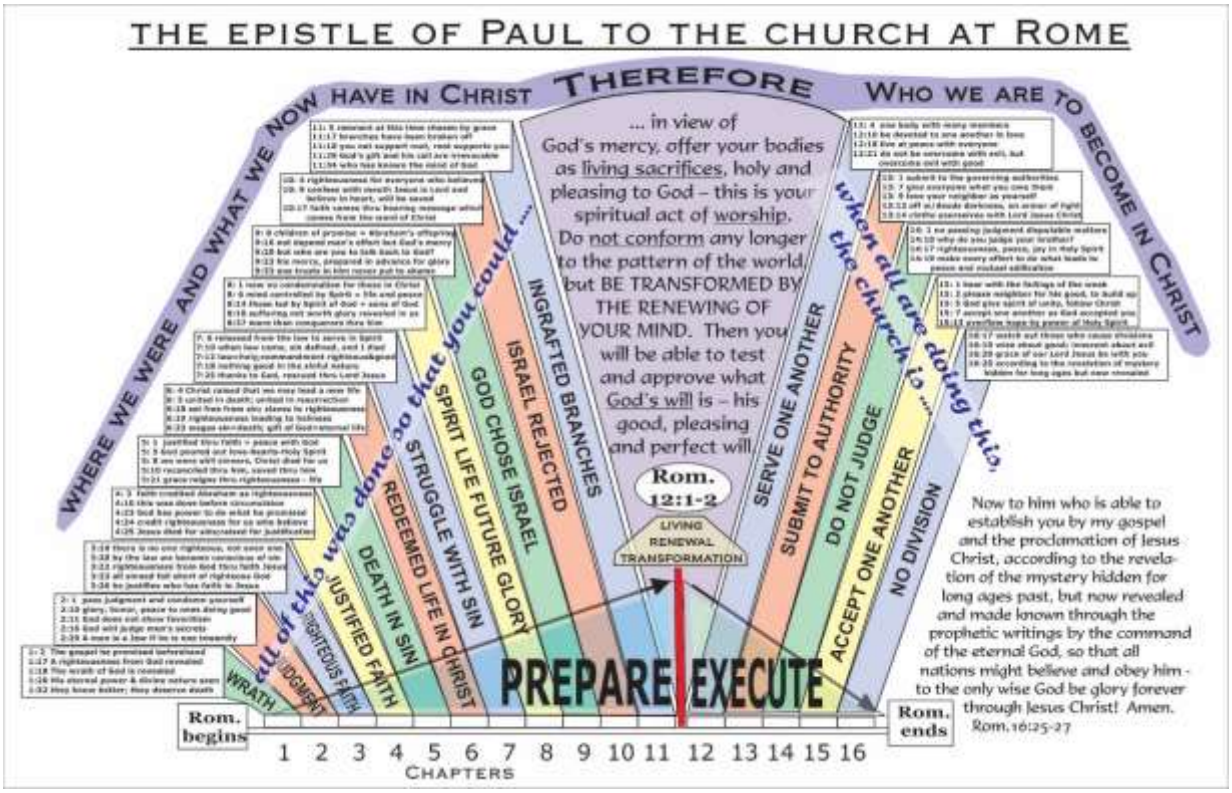


The Story of Life in the Spirit
Romans 8:12–39

Now that we live by the Spirit we (at last) have the chance to be obedient. We can "get it right" now, not in the sense that we live perfectly or without fault, but that we live in a way that is faithful to our covenant with God ... we live in trusting relationship with him. God has his purposes for us. And we rest confident in that, counting on that.

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

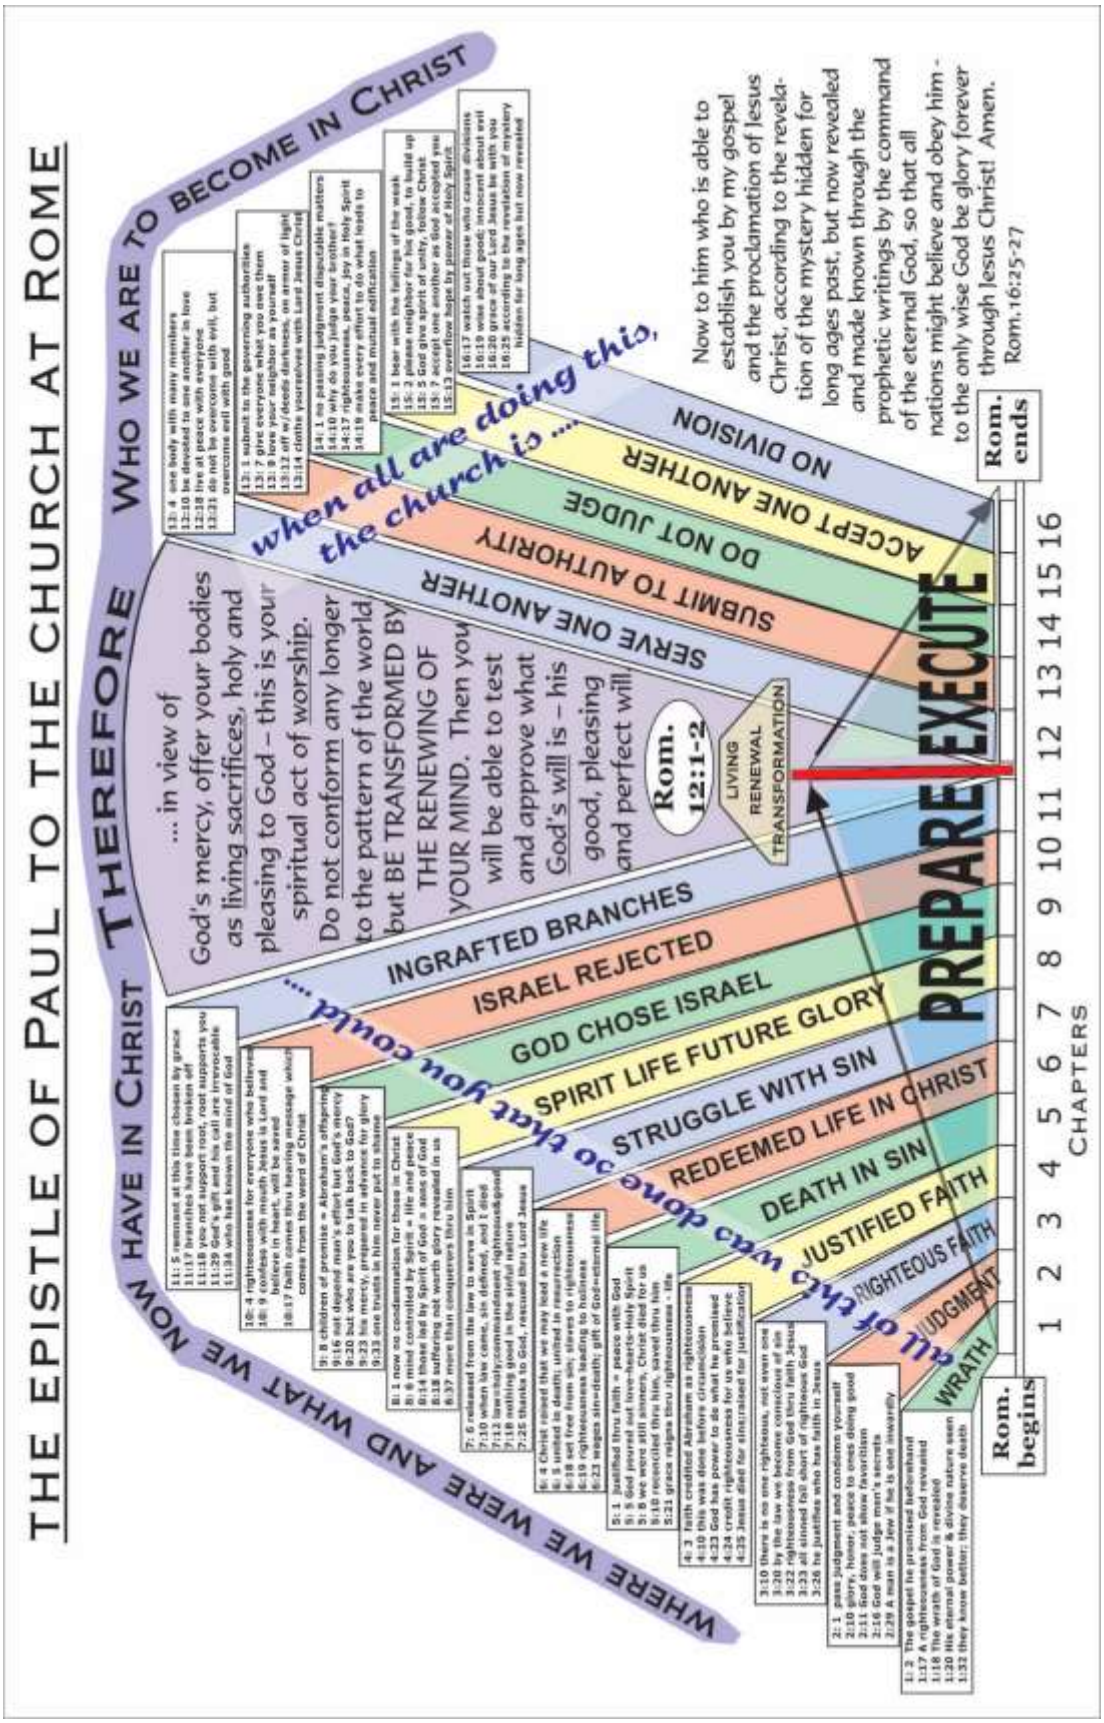
Romans Outline Charts



Source: http://www.foundationsforfreedom.net/Help/Store/Intros/Romans_Commentary.html

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Epistel of Paul to the Church at Rome (Outline Chart)



Source: http://www.intheimageofthecreator.com/wp-content/uploads/2014/02/Romans-peak-12-detailed-diag-1.jpg

See larger view on next page…

Romans TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Summary Chart of Romans by Don Johnson (2010) donjohnsonministries.org

http://www.runawayplanet.com/files/summary-chart-of-romans.pdf [PDF]

The Universality of Moral Responsibility, God's Wrath and Offer of Salvation			The Purpose of the Law and True Nature of Salvation	Ontological Implications of Salvation by Grace
Chapter 1 The Universal Applicability of the Gospel	Chapter 2 The Universality of God's Righteous Judgment	Chapter 3 True Righteousness and the Purpose of the Law	Chapter 4 Abraham and Salvation by Grace through Faith	Chapter 5 The Virtues as a Result of God's Grace
1.Salutation (1-7) 2.Thanksgiving for Romans (8-10) 3. Expression of desire to visit so that the gospel may be shared (11-13) 4.Gospel for Jew and Gentile alike; everyone who has faith (14-16) 5. Jew and Gentile alike have knowledge of God (17-19) 6. Jew and Gentile alike have rejected that knowledge and rebelled against God, incurring his wrath (20-32)	1. Therefore, no one has any excuse, whether they have received the Mosaic law or not: everyone will be judged by God according to the knowledge they have. (1-16) 2. Jews who have the law but do not keep it are worse off than those who do not have it but keep it. (17-29) - true Judaism and circumcision is of the heart	1. Is there an advantage, then, in being a physical Jew? Yes – Jews are entrusted with the Word of God. (1-2) 2. The truth of God's Word is not nullified by some Jews' misunderstanding of it (3-8) 3. The truth is that Jews and Gentiles are alike under sin (9-18) 4. The law does not make righteous; it makes unrighteousness visible (19-20) 5. True righteousness comes from God apart from the law through faith in Christ (21-22) 6. This righteousness is available to all sinners, Jew and Gentile alike (23-26) 7. Since God justifies both the Jew and the Gentile by faith apart from the law, there is no cause to boast in keeping the law (27-30) 8. This does not nullify the law.	1. Abraham is an example of this: he was counted as righteous because of his faith, not because he kept the law (1-5) 2. David made the same point in Psalm 32 in saying that the blessed are those who are forgiven (not those who keep the law) (6-8) 3. This blessedness is for the Jew and Gentile: we know this because Abraham received it before he was circumcised (became a Jew) (9-10) 4. Therefore, Abraham is the father of all who have faith, both circumcised and not (11-25)	1.Therefore we have peace through faith in Christ (1-2) 2.We also have hope (3-11) -- since Jesus justified us while we were still sinners, he will surely save us as well 3. Just as Adam brought death, Jesus brings life (12-19) 4.The law showed more clearly how much sin was in the world, but grace reigns over it all (20-21)

Ontological Implications of Salvation by Grace (cont.)			God's Purpose for Israel
Chapter 6 Sin and Death, Righteousness and Life	Chapter 7 The Law and the Sinful Nature	Chapter 8 Life According to the Spirit	Chapter 9 Israel and the True Children of God	Chapter 10 Israel and Righteousness by Faith
1. This does not mean we should continue to sin (1-2) 2. In baptism we have been united with Christ's death so we no longer are slaves to sin. (3-11) - we are dead to sin 3. Therefore, do not let sin control you (12-14) 4. Rather, let righteousness control you (13-19) 5. After all, sin leads to death but righteousness leads to eternal life. (14-23)	1. Dying to sin is like being released from a marriage (1-6) - no longer binding 2. This does not mean the law was bad – it is righteous and good because it makes us aware of sin (7-13) 3. I desire to keep the law but cannot because sin lives in my sinful nature (14-23) 4. Thankfully, Jesus rescues me from this sinful nature (24) 5. So I am a slave to righteousness in my mind but a slave to sin in my sinful nature. (25)	1.Therefore, because of the work of Christ, those who do not live according to the sinful nature are not condemned (1-4) 2. The mind controlled by the sinful nature is death, but the mind controlled by the Spirit is life (5-6) 3. The mind controlled by the sinful nature cannot please God (7-8) 4. Those who belong to Christ are controlled by the Spirit (9-11) 5. Therefore, believers have a duty to live according to the Spirit rather than the sinful nature (12-13) - those who do not will die 6. Those who live according to the Spirit will live because there are children and heirs of God (14-17) 7. Because we are children we can have hope in suffering, looking forward to final redemption, knowing God is faithful (18-39)	1. What about the physical children of Israel? There is a difference between physical and spiritual children of God. Spiritual children are saved, not necessarily biological descendents of Abraham or those that keep the law (1-8) 2. God's sovereign selection of Isaac and Jacob shows that God can use whoever he wants for whatever purpose he wants, regardless of genetics or keeping the law. (9-16) 3. Is this unjust? No – God can grant mercy to whoever he wants for whatever purpose he wants, including using Israel to proclaim his grace to the Gentiles (17-24) 5. There are many scripture passages that support this argument (25-29) 6. Gentiles have obtained righteousness by faith, but because Israel tried to obtain it by works of the law, they have failed (30-33)	1. The Israelites were wrong in seeking to establish their own righteousness (1-4) 2. Righteousness by the law involves man working to reach Christ, but righteousness by faith involves confession and acceptance of what Christ has given (5-10) 3. Anyone can call on God and receive this righteousness, Jew or Gentile (11-13) 4. The Gentiles need the Israelites to tell them about this righteousness (14-15) 5. Not all Israelites understood this message, but it was still proclaimed to the Gentiles, even as many Israelites rejected it (16-21)

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

God's Purpose for Israel (cont.)	The Ethical Implications of Salvation by Grace: A Life of Humility				Final Greetings and Admonitions
Chapter 11 The Salvation of the Jews by Grace	Chapter 12 Humility as the Response to Grace	Chapter 13 Humility in Submission and Love	Chapter 14 Humility in not Judging the Weak	Chapter 15 Humility in Serving Others	Chapter 16 Final Greetings
1. This does not mean God has rejected the Israelites. Paul is a Jew who is not rejected and there has always been a remnant who gained righteousness by grace through faith (1-10) 2.Israelites are not beyond recovery and should not be looked down upon (11-18) 3. Everyone (Jew and Gentile) has the opportunity to be grafted into the family and also to be cut off from the family so no one should be conceited (19-27) 4. Jews may receive God's mercy just like everyone else (28-32) 5. Doxology	1. Therefore, submit to God and renew your mind (1-2) 2. Do not think highly of yourself, but serve each other according to your various gifts (3-8) 3. Act humbly and lovingly toward others, including your enemies and those in need (9-21)	1. Respect and submit to governing authorities (1-7) 2. Love your neighbor as yourself, which sums up the law (8-10) 3. Live righteously, realizing salvation is near. (11-14)	1.Do not judge other over disputable matters, but accept those whose faith is weak (1-6) 2. We will all be judged on our own before Jesus (7-12) 3. Rather than judging, then, try to lead peaceful and edifying lives with each others (13-23) - do not exercise your freedom to eat meat if it causes others to stumble	1. Do not live to please yourself but for the good of others (1-4) 2. Accept others and strive for unity so that all may glorify God (5-7) 3. In all this follow Christ's example, who served the Jews so the Gentiles would glorify God (8-13) 4. Paul's instructions are based on the grace God has given him as a minister to the Gentiles, who he has been serving (14-22) 5. Paul's plan to visit Rome (23-29) 6. Prayer requests (30-33)	1. Personal Greetings (1-16) 2. Appeal to watch out for false teachers who cause division (17-20) 3. Final Greetings (21-24) 4. Doxology (25-27)

ROMANS

	Introduction — Personal (1:1–17)	THE GOSPEL			Conclusion — Relational (15:14–16:27)
		Saving the Sinner Depravity of humanity Grace of God Justification by faith Sanctification through the Spirit Security of the saint CHAPTERS 1:18–8:39	Concerning Israel Divine sovereignty and human will Past, present, and future of the nation CHAPTERS 9–11	Concerning Christian Conduct Social Civil Personal CHAPTERS 12:1–15:13
Emphasis		Doctrinal	National	Practical
Response		Faith	Hope	Love
Doctrine of God		Wrath	Righteousness	Glory / Grace
Doctrine of Humanity		Fallen	Dead / Saved	Struggling / Freed
Doctrine of Sin		Exposed	Conquered	Explained / Forgiven
Scope		Dead in sin	Dead to sin	Peace with God / Love for others
Theme		God's righteousness is given to those who put their faith in Jesus Christ.
Key Verses		1:16–17
Christ in Romans		Jesus is the focus of the gospel and the means of salvation by God's grace apart from works (1:1–4, 16–17).

Copyright © 1982, 1997, 2010 by Charles R. Swindoll, Inc. All rights reserved worldwide.

Romans TOC
(Table of Contents)

Chart Outline of the Book of Romans

CHAPTER		FLOW	MOVEMENT OF RIGHTEOUSNESS
1	Introduction	Condemnation	The Need for God's Righteousness
2	Faith That is Not of Yourself
3	Faith That is Revealed
4	Faith That is Illustrated	Justification	Imputation of God's Righteousness
5	Faith Brings Peace
6	Faith = Freedom	Sanctification	The Implication of God's Righteousness
7	Faith = Struggle
8	Faith = No Condemnation
9	Faith in a Sovereign God	Vindication	The Vindication of God's Righteousness
10	Faith for a New Community
11	Faith to Restore a Chosen People
12	Faith Reflected in the World	Application	The Practice of God's Righteousness
13	Faith Beyond Human Authority
14	Faith That Strengthens One Another
15	Faith to Live Like Jesus
16	Faith That Draws a Crowd

TIME LINE

1 — Natural Revelation; Power of the Gospel
2 — Total Depravity
3 — Law vs. Grace
4 — Justification by Faith; Substitutionary Atonement
5 — Imputation (Sin & Righteousness)
6 — Sanctification (Positional, Progressive, Perfect); Freedom From the Mastery of Sin
7 — Struggle Within
8 — No Condemnation in Christ; Assurance of Salvation
9
10 — Hope for Israel; Jew & Gentile (The Olive Tree)
11
12 — Our Relationship to the Church; Our Relationship to God; Theology Applied; True Worship
13 — Our Relationship to Government
14 — Our Relationship to Each Other 15 — People Over Propositions
16

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Romans – Summary

http://www.fbccs.org/resources/studyguides/romans_sg99.htm

Excerpt:

ROMANS

The Message of the Gospel

1 - 3	4 - 5	6 - 8	9 - 11	12 - 15	16
Our Problem: sin	God's Solution: Justification	The New Life: sanctification and glorification	Parenthesis Israel's history and future	Application: living out the Christian life	Conclusion and personal greetings

5	6	7	8
Peace with God	Union with Christ	Freedom from the Law	Life in the Spirit
declared righteous Adam or Christ	our new identity our new master	under grace still struggling	He empowers us we wait for glory His plan is good

Key Principles:

- I am at peace with God. He will never condemn me for my sin, because it has been paid for by Christ. I am righteous in God's sight because of justification.
- I do not have to live like I did before Christ, because I am not the same person I used to be. The "real me", in the deepest sense, belongs to God, loves Him like a father and wants to follow Him fully.
- I am under grace, not law. My acceptance by God is not based on my performance. His loving opinion of me (my standing before Him) does not change. I am motivated by love and gratitude, not fear and guilt.
- When I try to live my life on my own strength, I struggle and fail, because sin still lives in me. I am tempted to legalism on the one hand, and irresponsibility on the other.
- When I live life depending on God's strength, the Holy Spirit empowers me, encourages, me, and enables me to "put to death" the evil I see in myself. He is the source of the life and goodness that I experience.
- In this life I will experience pain and difficulty, but the Spirit always indwells me, prays for me, assures me that I am God's child, and ensures that I will be with Him one day in heaven.

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

- Although my life may feel chaotic, I am part of God's eternal plan, which He initiated and which He will bring to a glorious conclusion. Meanwhile, nothing can separate me from His love.

Key Terms:

- Justification: when we trust in Christ (expressing faith, not works), God cancels our guilt and transfers Christ's righteousness to us. ("justify" means "to declare to be righteous")
- Redemption: the transfer of ownership by the payment of a price; God's purchase of our freedom through Jesus' death on the cross. (1 Cor. 6:20)
- Sanctification: the process by which God, through the Holy Spirit, brings progressive spiritual growth into a believer's life. ("sanctify" means "to set apart, to make holy" - 1 Thess. 4:3,4)
- Glorification: the fulfillment of God's promise to bring believers into His eternal presence, with new bodies and new hearts free from sin, the final goal in His plan of salvation.

Romans TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

FG Romans Sermon Series

FYI – See also: Jack Hibbs' Study of Romans, starting with…

Introduction To Romans: Called To Be – Romans 1:1-6 (Part 1)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=6y5pW0BUZx8

"Welcome to our launch of the Book of Romans. This is the epistle of Paul's powerful message of the gospel of grace, and the foundation of New Testament theology. Join us weekly on this faith journey. For the Just, followers of Jesus, live by faith!"

https://calvarycch.org/tag/paul/ https://calvarycch.org/sermons/

Fellowship Greenville Sermon Series on Romans Table of Contents (Series TOC) starts on next page…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Fellowship Greenville Romans Series Table of Contents (Series TOC):

Sermon Title	Date | Teacher	Romans
Good News for a Divided World	08/27/2017 | Charlie Boyd	1:1-15
The Power of the Gospel	09/03/2017 | Charlie Boyd	1:16-17
The Tour of the Human Condition	09/10/2017 | Jonathan Parker	1:18-23
Wrath Revealed	09/17/2017 | Jim Thompson	1:18-32
Do Good People Go to Heaven?	09/24/2017 | Charlie Boyd	2:1-16
The Problem With Religion	10/01/2017 | Charlie Boyd	2:17-29
The Art of the Question	10/08/2017 | Jim Thompson	3:1-8
Under Sin	10/15/2017 | Jim Thompson	3:9-20
Finally, Good News!	10/22/2017 | Charlie Boyd	3:21-26
No More Boasting	10/29/2017 | Charlie Boyd	3:21-31
Too Good To Be True	11/05/2017 | Charlie Boyd	4:1-12
So What Exactly Is Faith?	11/12/2017 | Charlie Boyd	4:13:25
The Peace of Justification	11/26/2017 | Jim Thompson	5:1-5
The Benefits of Justification	12/03/2017 | Charlie Boyd	5:1-11
Natural Born Sinners	12/10/2017 | Charlie Boyd	5:6-21
Dead to Sin	01/07/2018 | Charlie Boyd	6:1-14
Set Free From Sin	01/14/2018 | Charlie Boyd	6:11-23
Our Ongoing Struggle with Sin	01/21/2018 | Charlie Boyd	7:1-25
No Condemnation	01/28/2018 | Jim Thompson	8:1-2
No Condemnation, Part 2	02/04/2018 | Jim Thompson	8:1-4
Living an Uncondemnable Life	02/11/2018 | Charlie Boyd	8:1-8
Walking According to the Spirit	02/18/2018 | Charlie Boyd	8:1-11
Walking According to the Spirit (Part 2)	02/25/2018 | Charlie Boyd	8:5-17
The Hope of Glory	03/04/2018 | Jim Thompson	8:18-30
Joy, No Matter What	03/11/2018 | Charlie Boyd	8:26-30
Blindingly Clear	03/18/2018 | Jonathan Parker	8:31-39
Paul's TED Talk	04/08/2018 | Jim Thompson	9:1-5
How Do You Measure Faithfulness?	04/15/2018 | Jim Thompson	9:6-13
God Is God	04/29/2018 | Charlie Boyd	9:1-33
Missing God	05/06/2018 | Charlie Boyd	10:1-21
Jealous Jews and Grafted Gentiles	05/13/2018 | Jim Thompson	11:1-24
Theology Becomes Doxology	05/27/2018 | Charlie Boyd	11:1-36
Living Sacrifices	08/26/2018 | Jim Thompson	12:1-2
Renewing Your Mind	09/02/2018 | Charlie Boyd	12:1-2
One Body in Christ	09/09/2018 | Jim Thompson	12:3-8
Let Love Be Genuine	09/16/2018 | Charlie Boyd	12:9-21
Politics and the Gospel	09/23/2018 | Charlie Boyd	13:1-8
Putting the Gospel on Display	09/30/2018 | Charlie Boyd	13:8-14
When Christians Disagree (Part 1)	10/07/2018 | Charlie Boyd	14:1-12
When Christians Disagree (Part 2)	10/14/2018 | Jim Thompson	14:13-23
When Christians Disagree (Part 3)	10/21/2018 | Charlie Boyd	14 Remix

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

When Christians Disagree (Part 4)	10/28/2018 | Charlie Boyd	15:1-13
The Purpose-Driven Life	11/11/2018 | Charlie Boyd	15:14-33
We Need Each Other	11/18/2018 | Jim Thompson	16:1-16
Watch Out!	11/25/2018 | Jim Thompson	16:17-23
To God Be the Glory	12/02/2018 | Charlie Boyd	16:25-27

Romans TOC
(Table of Contents)

FYI – See also: Jack Hibbs' Study of Romans, starting with…

Introduction To Romans: Called To Be – Romans 1:1-6 (Part 1)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=6y5pW0BUZx8

"Welcome to our launch of the Book of Romans. This is the epistle of Paul's powerful message of the gospel of grace, and the foundation of New Testament theology. Join us weekly on this faith journey. For the Just, followers of Jesus, live by faith!"

https://calvarycch.org/tag/paul/ https://calvarycch.org/sermons/

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Fellowship Greenville, Charles Boyd (2017) [Series TOC]
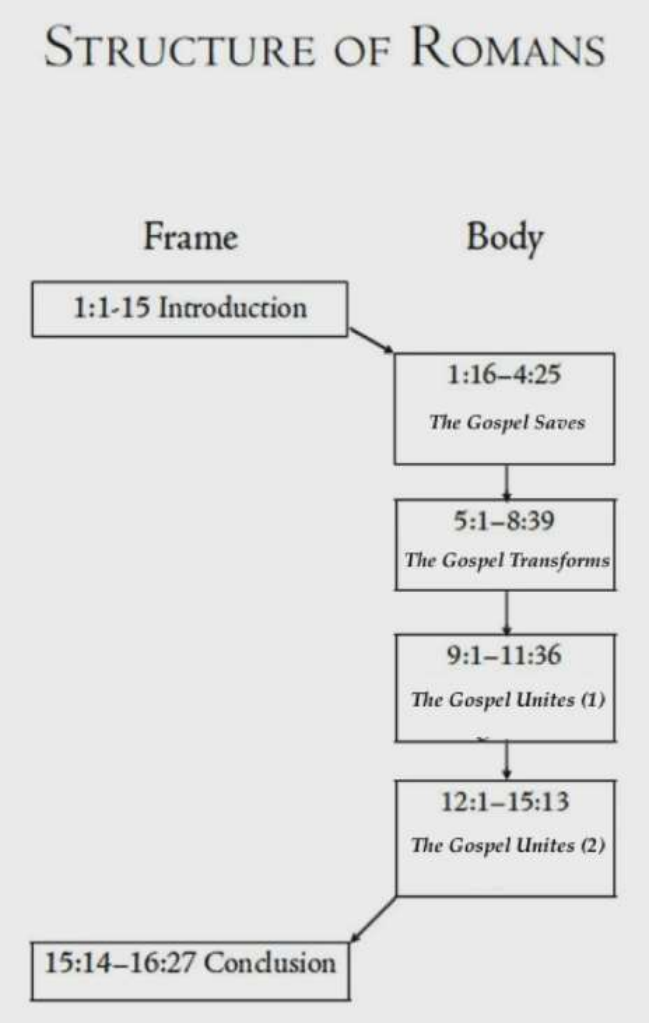
https://fellowshipgreenville.org/page/461?Item=1228

[Beginning]

FG Romans
Sermon Series
<Prev Next>

Romans Series Topic: Romans 1:1-15 – Good News for a Divided World

---



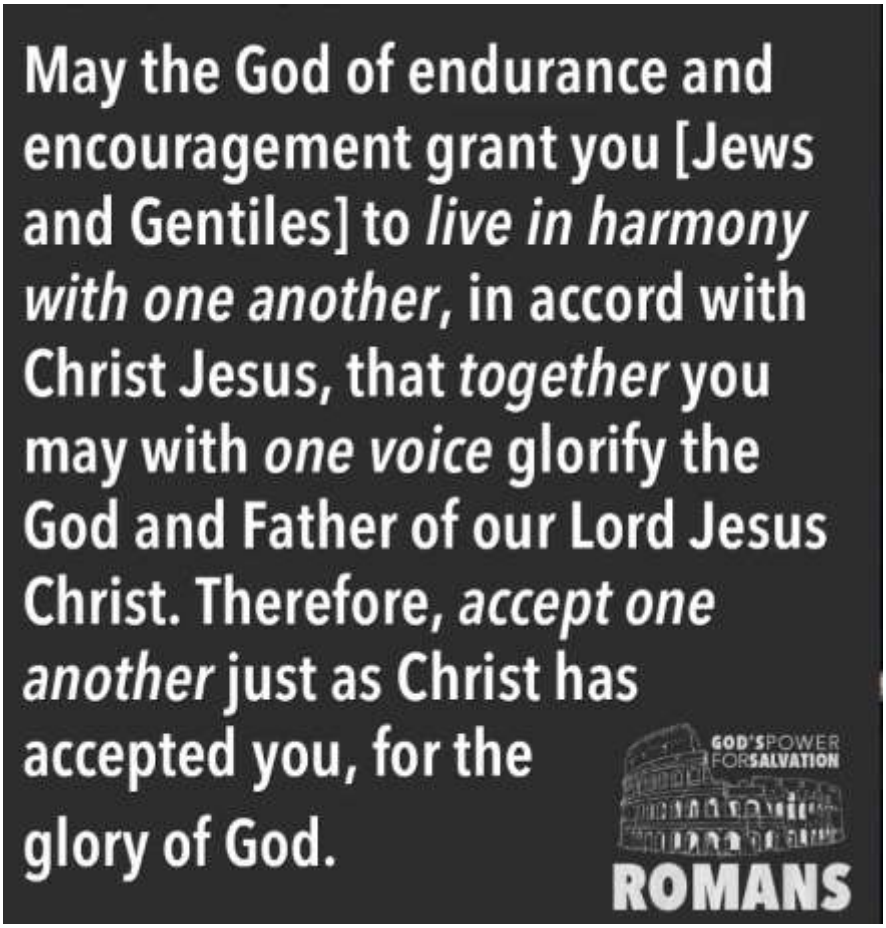
The book of Romans is a masterfully written exposition of the gospel of God. Without a doubt, it is the foundation of authentic Christianity and the most articulate, systematic understanding of our faith found in the Bible. Countless lives have been changed by the truth found in this ancient letter, and it continues to change lives today. Interestingly enough, Romans was written to Christians. So, while the good news found in Romans can certainly bring people to faith in Jesus, the actual focus is on how the gospel helps Christians think rightly about God, life, faith, and Christian community. If you want to grow to know God more personal and intimate way, this letter is for you! — Charlie Boyd, Fellowship Greenville

---

(1) What Romans is not. Romans is not a textbook of systematic theology. It is the most articulate, systematic explanation of Christianity / thegospel in all the Bible. And unquestionably, it is full of deep theological truth. Nevertheless, it is not a book written for the sole purpose of setting forth everything Paul understood about New Testament Bible doctrine.

(2) What Romans is. Romans is a letter — as is clear from all the personal comments Paul makes at the beginning and end of the letter — see 1:1-15 and 15:14-16:27.

(3) Why Paul wrote Romans. Paul wrote this letter to address a very serious problem in the church. He wrote to help unitea deeply divided church. Jewish Christians were offended that Gentile Christians were not holding on to Jewish laws and traditions. Gentile Christians looked at Jewish Christians as trying to force Jewish customs and law-keeping on them which was out of keeping with faith in Christ. Paul writes to try to bring peace among Jewish and Gentile Christians. This theme builds to the exhortation found in 15:5-7. See it? Romans is a letter written to heal a very serious racial and ethnic divide in the church. And to address that division, Paul argues for peace and reconciliation using gospel doctrine as his rationale.



Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Romans Sermon Series: Topic: Good News for a Divided World

https://fellowshipgreenville.org/page/461?Item=1228

Everything Paul says in his letter to the Romans builds to this exhortation (Rom. 15:5-7):

(Source: ESV)

Romans is a letter written to heal a very serious racial and ethnic divide in the church at Rome. Paul gives them the clearest explanation of the Gospel in the Bible and argues for peace and reconciliation in the church using rich Gospel doctrine as his rationale… Romans is practical theology, not systematic theology. –Charlie Boyd

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Romans 15: 5-7 (other Bible versions)

NET BIBLE:
Now may the God of endurance and comfort give you unity with one another [3] in accordance with Christ Jesus, so that together you may with one voice glorify the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ. Receive one another, then, just as Christ also received you, to God's glory.

[3] tn Grk "grant you to think the same among one another."

HCSB:
Now may the God who gives [Lit. God of] endurance and encouragement allow you to live in harmony with one another, according to the command of Christ Jesus, so that you may glorify the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ with a united mind and voice. Therefore accept one another, just as the Messiah also accepted you, to the glory of God.

YLT:
And may the God of the endurance, and of the exhortation, give to you to have the same mind toward one another, according to Christ Jesus; that with one accord--with one mouth--ye may glorify the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ; wherefore receive ye one another, according as also the Christ did receive us, to the glory of God.

NASB:
Now may the God *who gives perseverance and encouragement grant you to be of the same mind with one another according to Christ Jesus, so that with one accord you may with one [Lit. mouth] voice glorify the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ. Therefore, accept one another, just as Christ also accepted *us to the glory of God.

Romans TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Fellowship Greenville, Charlies Boyd (2017)
https://fellowshipgreenville.org/page/461?Item=1233

FG Romans
Sermon Series
<Prev Next>

SERIES: Romans: God's Power for Salvation
TITLE: The Power of the Gospel
SCRIPTURE: Romans 1:16-17

When you read old letters, you only have one side of the conversation. But, the more you learn about the context and the backstory of the correspondence, the better you'll understand what's being discussed. And, that becomes very important when you read a New Testament letter like the book of Romans. If you read Romans through a 21st century lens, if you bring your cultural understanding to the text, if you bring your own meanings to certain words and phrases, you could miss what God wants to say to you in his Word. Don't get me wrong, there's a lot you can understand just by picking up the Bible and reading it. But the more you can learn about the context and backstory of a book like Romans, the better you'll be able to understand and apply what God wants to say to your like today.

The The Backstory to Romans (review) — The church in Rome started as a purely Jewish Christian church. As the church grew, Gentiles (non-Jewish) people also joined the church. Where there had previously been division between Jews and Gentiles, in Christ, there was now unity. However, in 49AD all Jews were ordered to leave Rome and they were not able to return for 5 years. When they came back, they found that "their" church was now led by Gentiles, who were not holding to the Jewish roots of their faith—laws, customs, traditions, rituals. As a result a division arose in the church, each group thinking itself superior to the other. One of the main reasons the apostle Paul writes to this church is to try to heal the division in the church. Paul knew that to heal this church, they had to dig deep into the theology of the Gospel. He knew that most of our problems, at their root, are theological problems. Theology, what we believe about God and the Gospel, shapes all of life. In fact, the Gospel—the good news about who Jesus is and what Jesus has done for us through his death and resurrection—is the climax of the "big story" of the Bible—the fulfillment of "all God promised beforehand in the Holy Scriptures" (1:2).

Setting Setting the Gospel in the Backstory of the Bible — Simply put, God's promises to Abraham and all the prophets was a from-one-nation-all-nations-will-be-blessed, (put back into right relationship with God and each other)-savings-plan. It was a single nation savings plan and Israel was the nation through which the Messiah would come to set the world right again. But Israel had failed. Israel became like the idolatrous nations that thumbed their noses at God. So the question was: How will God set the world right again when his own chosen people are incapable of doing what God had called them to do? How would the "promises" made beforehand by the prophets in Holy Scripture be fulfilled? Here's Paul's big idea in Romans; God has demonstrated himself to be a "righteous" God by keeping his promise to Israel to rescue all nations from his wrath through the faithfulness of Jesus. All who put their faith in Christ, are put back into right relationship with God and each other and they become God's one new people.

Romans Romans 1:16-17 — The Big Idea: God's Gospel is God's power for salvation.

The Gospel is powerful because:

1. It's the fulfillment of all God promised he would do in the Old Testament to bring salvation to the the world. (1:2)

2. The Gospel is powerful because when it is announced, heard, and believed it changes lives (1:16).

3. The Gospel is powerful because it reveals the righteousness of God (1:17). The power of the Gospel Gospel is revealed in how God is right to make you right through faith alone in Christ alone (cf Romans Romans 3:25-26).

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Habakkuk 2:4 —The righteous will live by his faith. Backstory—In view of God's coming judgment and wrath, coming from evil, ruthless, godless Babylonians, God tells the prophet that, after their exile, God will save his people Israel. In the meantime he says, "Trust me to keep my promise though you don't completely understand my plan." He says, people made righteous by faith in me and my promises will live by faith in me and my promises.

4. The Gospel is powerful because it is God's "faith-way" of salvation, start to finish (1:17).

Do you see why Paul is so eager to preach the Gospel in Rome? Do you see why Paul isn't ashamed of the Gospel? How could he be? How could we be? My goodness, the Gospel is God's power to save—it's God's power to transform—it's God's power to unite all people into one new people. Always remember…

The Gospel is GOOD NEWS not good advice. The Gospel is good news because it's not about do, do, do. It's good news because it's about what God has already done for you in Jesus.

FYI – See also: Jack Hibbs' Study of Romans, starting with…

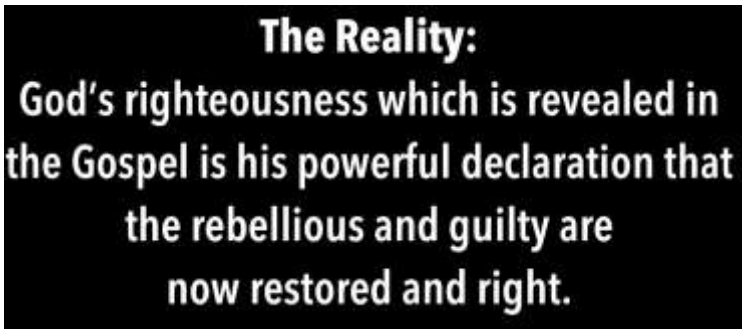
Introduction To Romans: Called To Be – Romans 1:1-6 (Part 1)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=6y5pW0BUZx8

"Welcome to our launch of the Book of Romans. This is the epistle of Paul's powerful message of the gospel of grace, and the foundation of New Testament theology. Join us weekly on this faith journey. For the Just, followers of Jesus, live by faith!"

https://calvarycch.org/tag/paul/ https://calvarycch.org/sermons/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Fellowship Greenville, Jonathan Parker (2017)
https://fellowshipgreenville.org/page/461?Item=1229



FG Romans
Sermon Series
<Prev Next>

SERIES: Romans: God's Power for Salvation
TITLE: The Tour of the Human Condition
SCRIPTURE: Romans 1:18-23

Big Idea: The wrath of God is an uncomfortable topic. However, we cannot duck, dodge, or dismiss talking about God's wrath for if we do we dilute grace. Wrath is what we deserve. Grace means God doesn't give us what we deserve. Grace makes no sense unless it's contrasted with the dark background of wrath. In this dark background of wrath, Paul begins the tour of the human condition.

I. The Reality

A. Wrath of God is Being Revealed (v. 18)

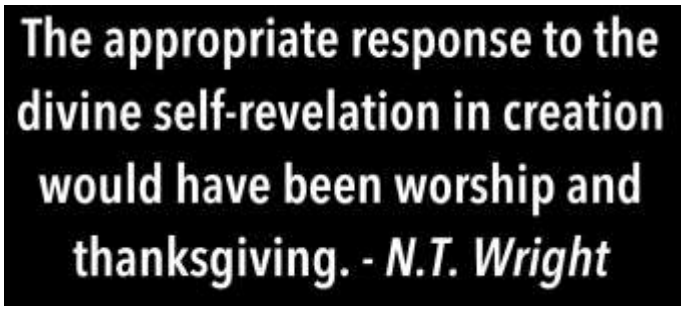
B. God has made Himself Known (v. 19)

The result of this reality, that God's wrath is being revealed and God has revealed Himself through creation, is people are without excuse.

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

II. The Reasons

A. Ungodliness (v.18)



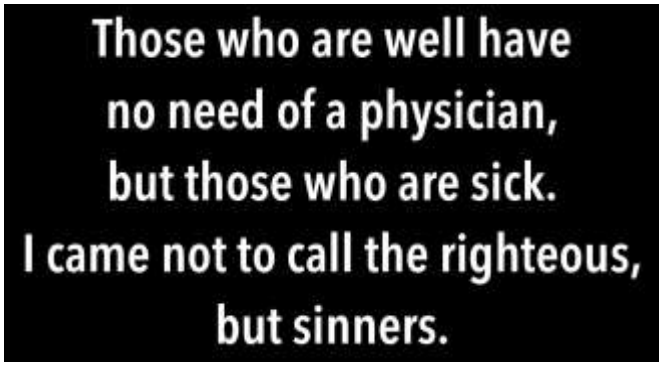
B. Unrighteousness (v. 18)

C. Suppressing the Truth (v. 18)

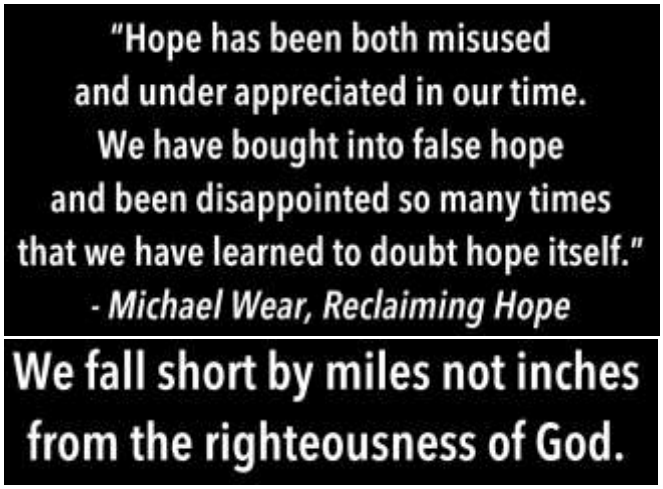
D. Did Not Honor (v. 21)

E. Were Not Grateful (v. 21)

F. Became Fools (v. 22)

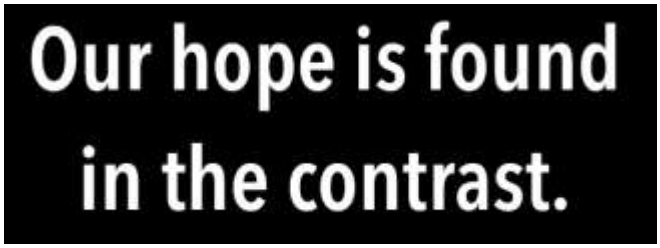


G. Exchanged Glory for Glimpses (v.23)



The wrath of God is being revealed against those who practice idolatry and immorality while suppressing the truth about God. Even though God has kindly and divinely revealed himself in all creation; people have chosen to spend their time attempting to disprove His existence which leaves them ungrateful, dishonoring, and foolish in their thinking and living. This all results in exchanging the greater for the lesser.

III. Our Response



A. Our Human Condition

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

B. Our Faith Condition

This tour of the human condition is vital for our understanding of the pit of hopeless we were in, and the power of God that saved us. The only appropriate response to such grace is our worship of the great God who saves.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Fellowship Greenville, Jim Thompson (2017)
https://fellowshipgreenville.org/page/461?Item=1235

FG Romans
Sermon Series
<Prev Next>

SERIES: Romans: God's Power for Salvation
TITLE: Wrath Revealed
SCRIPTURE: Romans 1:18-32

The church in Rome had an interesting story. There weren't outright fights, but there were definitely tensions between Jews and Gentiles (non-Jews) in the church. There were theological, political, social, and practical issues that Paul is writing to address. Their need for greater unity was directly tied to their need to better understand the gospel.

However, Paul starts in an unusual place. He begins the bulk of the letter to the Romans by talking about the bad news rather than the good news. He talks about how "the wrath of God is revealed" against human sinfulness. This isn't good news, but it's unifying news that helps him get to the good news of the gospel. But how is the bad news unifying?

Paul wants his friends in Rome to know that they aren't each other's biggest enemy. The Roman empire isn't the biggest enemy. They themselves are their own worst enemies. This is the effect of human sinfulness–that we begin to think that our main problem is outside of us when it's really within us. Because of this, God's wrath is revealed

And if we understand Romans 1:18-32 correctly, we will see that it is all about how the human condition is set on unraveling God's good design of creation. We have chosen to "worship and serve the creature rather than the Creator." Meaning, wrath is revealed because things aren't the way they should be. We have exchanged God's beautiful and glorious design to do our own thing. We have rejected and rebelled against his good intentions, and therefore we are now deserving recipients of his wrath.

But, Romans doesn't end after chapter 1. Romans 1:18-32 is a single and distinct literary section, and the first line before it and the first line after it are both about God's righteousness being revealed. Meaning, wrath–revealed is sandwiched by righteousness–revealed, and God's justice and righteousness revealed are about how God has made away for his just anger to be diverted. Jesus takes the chaos and rebellion of humanity upon himself. He is bringing new creation to bear upon our unraveling of creation. He is the Second Adam, righting the wrongs of the first Adam.

All of the chaos in our souls, all of the death we live in, all of the separation we deserve, all of the guilt and shame that weigh us down… Jesus took it all upon himself at the cross. He was exiled that we might be brought home. He was the way, the truth, and the life that we suppressed to death. He came to take away our bad and give us his good. This is the gospel.

So, how should we respond to this good news that wrath–revealed is bookended by righteousness–revealed? Here are four suggestions…

1. Think regularly about your personal unworthiness. Doing this forces us to come before God humbly and empty–handed and totally dependent.
2. Think regularly about the infinite worth of Jesus. If he truly took all of our wrath–deserving sin upon himself to bring us new life, then we should daily see him as ultimately worthy and valuable.
3. Quit thinking you're better than other people. Romans 1:18-32 unifies all humanity by putting us all on even ground before the cross. Because of this, we should be filled with, not judgment, but compassion for others.
4. Seek for opportunities to tell people about Jesus. This message is truly good news. Jesus is the only one who can give peace and hope that can't be shaken. He's the only one who can redeem the mess we've made of God's good world. We must, therefore, pray for opportunities to extend this good news to others.

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Fellowship Greenville, Charlies Boyd (2017)
https://fellowshipgreenville.org/page/461?Item=1239

FG Romans
Sermon Series
<Prev Next>

SERIES: Romans: God's Power for Salvation
TITLE: Do Good People Go To Heaven?
SCRIPTURE: Romans 2:1-16

The Gospel that saves us, changes us. The Gospel that changes us, unites us.

If you are like most Americans, you believe that after you die—you live forever somewhere. And most people assume that good people go to heaven and they will be one of those good people. It seems fair, right? People who do good things deserve good things—that's fair. What we do in this life determines our destination in the afterlife. But is that assumption true? Romans 2 speaks to this all important assumption.

The Backstory: A main reason why Paul is eager to preach the Gospel to Roman believers (1:15) is because there is a division in the church between Gentile and Jewish Christians (15:5-8). Neither group fully grasps how the Gospel speaks into this division so Paul wants to equip those believers to be "Gospel Fluent."

Romans 2 is a very difficult passage to understand. Part of the reason is because we tend to read it with a "Gospel-lens." If we do, verses 6-11 seem to teach that salvation is available to people who do "good works." However, from 1:18-3:20 Paul is taking us on a "tour of the human condition." He's not telling us how a person can be "saved" or "justified" before God. He's showing us why God is in the right to condemn all people for their sin. So, let's back up and step back into Paul's flow of thought so far.

Paul is saying: God is in the right to put all people into a right relationship with himself by faith alone in Christ alone (1:1-15, especially 1:16-17). It must be that God's salvation is available only to believers because God is in the right to be angry with everyone else (1:18-3:20). First of all, (1:18-32) Gentiles are under the wrath and coming judgment of God because they have knowingly rebelled against God—they are "without excuse". But, Jews are no better off. Even though they know God and have God's law they do not obey the law (2:1-29) and therefore, they too are "without excuse." (compare 1:20 and 2:1). They stand under the same judgment as people who do not know God. That's the context from a 30,000-foot fly over. So to make sense of chapter 2, you have to keep in mind that Paul's purpose in this passage is not to tell people how they can be saved, but to tell us why God is righteous and just to declare all people in the wrong, condemned for their sin and therefore, why everyone needs the Gospel

1. Self-righteous Jews are as guilty before God as unrighteous Gentiles (2:1-5).
2. God judges everyone the same way—according to their works. He shows no partiality (2:6-11).

A. God will judge everyone according to their works (v.6).
B. People who do good will attain eternal life (v.7).
C. People who do evil will suffer wrath (v.8).
C.' Wrath for those who do evil (v.9).
B.' Glory for those who do good (v.10)
A.' God shows no partiality (v.11).

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Clearly, these verses teach that God judges people according to their works. People who do good things attain eternal life. People who don't, receive God's wrath. Paul is not describing Christians here. Verse 6-11 describe what the Jews believe. Good people—the Jews—go to heaven and bad people—everyone else—go to hell. Yes, apart from Christ, God's judgment is based on works. It's not good people go to heaven but perfect people. The problem is, no one can perfectly live up to their own personal standards much less God's perfect standard.

3. God's truth/law, in some way, is available to all people, but since no one keeps it perfectly, Jesus will stand as their judge on the last day (2:12-16).

How does this apply to us today?

Good people don't go to heaven. Only perfect people go to heaven.

Romans TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Fellowship Greenville, Charlies Boyd (2017)
https://fellowshipgreenville.org/page/461?Item=1245

FG Romans
Sermon Series
<Prev Next>

SERIES: Romans: God's Power for Salvation
TITLE: The Problem with Religion
SCRIPTURE: Romans 2:17-29

The Gospel that saves us, changes us. The Gospel that changes us, unites us.

Trying to be good enough to go to heaven when you die is like trying to swim to Hawaii. To be sure, some people can swim farther than other people, but if the goal is Hawaii, nobody will make it—we would all come up short and die in the waves. Jesus himself sets the bar of reaching God so high that we all fall short. He said, "You must be perfect even as your father in heaven is perfect" (Matt 5:48). His half-brother, the apostle James, put it this way, "For whoever keeps the whole law and yet fails at just one point is guilty of breaking all of it" (James 2:10). And that's what Paul is saying in Romans 2—Paul is echoing Jesus' teaching by highlighting for us the problem with religion. And, there are three main problems with religion that we see in this chapter.

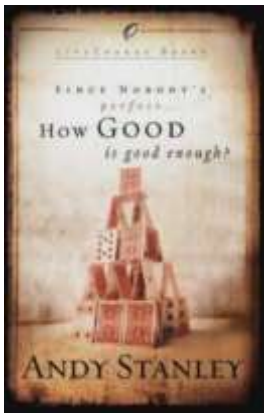
Romans 2:17: shows Paul has had the Jews in mind all along in Chapter 2. He lists things that the Jews were proud of when it came to them living a good moral life:

1. You call yourself a Jew
2. You rely on the law.
3. Your relationship to God.
4. You know God's law (and can judge others) – they were better than
5. You are intrusted with the law (knew it backwards and forwards)
6. You are convinced that you are a light to the blind…teacher of children…etc.

All these things were blessings from God. There was nothing wrong with them, except it has resulted in pride.

1. Religion can make you feel morally superior to other people (2:17-20).

2. Religion can deceive you into thinking that your sin is not as bad as other people's sin (2:21-24).



3. Religion can never give you a new heart (2:25-29).

Everyone has a code. None of us lives up to our personal standards/code, let alone God's standards. None of us live up to our code, Christians and non-Christians.

Paul talked about not doing what he shouldn't do and not doing what he should do.

Recommended Tim Keller: and his Book on Romans
Critique of Keller

Recommends:

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Fellowship Greenville, Jim Thompson (2017)
https://fellowshipgreenville.org/page/461?Item=1252

FG Romans
Sermon Series
<Prev Next>

SERIES: Romans: God's Power for Salvation
TITLE: The Art of the Question
SCRIPTURE: Romans 3:1-8

Question-asking is an art form. Whether it's asking clarification questions in personal conversation with a friend to let them know you're listening, or asking huge what's-the-meaning-of-life questions, the questions we ask tell so much about who we are and how we make sense of the world. And because questions have such a high value and function in life, we should all want to excel in the art of the question.

Too often, though, we ask puny, minimalist questions that are more about our comfort than about truly loving God and loving people well. We need to, by God's help, train ourselves to ask maximum questions in life.

The Apostle Paul knows that this is true. He asks over 80 questions in Romans, and in Romans 3:1-8, he asks nine questions in just eight verses! The questions he raises are different responses to what he said in Romans 2: "All people stand equally sinful and needy before God, Jew and Gentile (non-Jew) alike." And if this is true, then Paul's going to get some push back, such as…

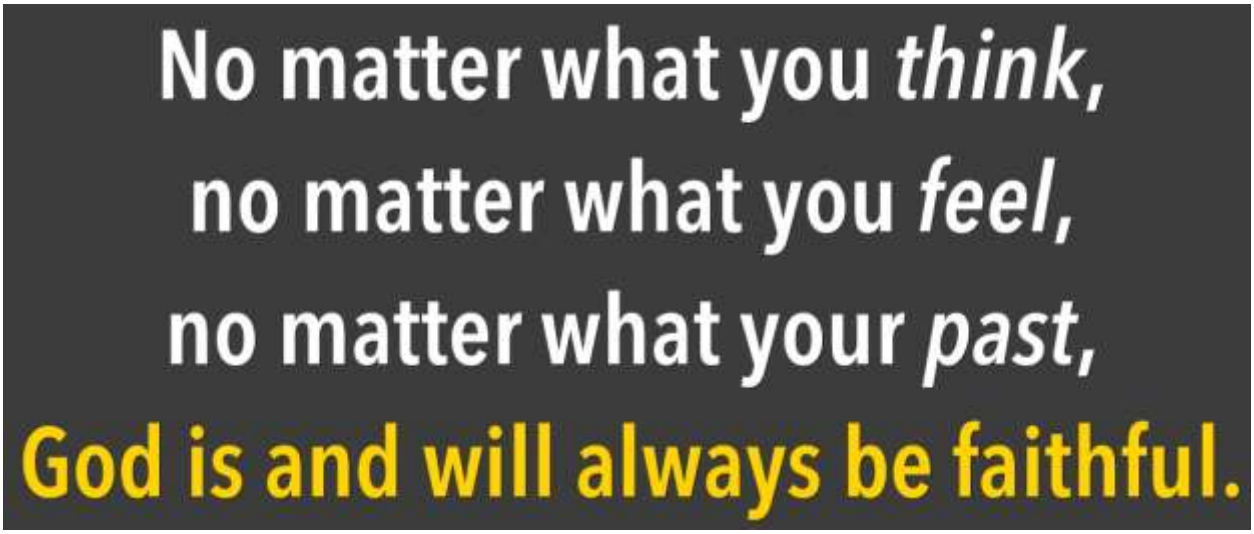
- "Hey Paul, if God's really after the heart, then is there really an advantage in being Jewish and having God's law, etc?"
- "Paul, I was thinking, doesn't Israel's faithlessness make God look unfaithful? How does that work?"
- "And Paul, if Jewish unrighteousness and unfaithfulness only prove the further faithfulness of God, how is it fair that God still judges Jews for their infidelity?"

No doubt about it, these questions are dense. And if we took all nine of Paul's questions in Romans 3:1-8 and put them in a blender, we would get a more simpler inquiry: "How does God's faithfulness relate to Israel's faithlessness?" This is a bit more simple to process.

So, what do we do with this question in view of how intensely it is unfolded in this passage? Well, first of all, I think Paul's method of thinking here should be instructive to us. Meaning, we should learn how to ask questions in the most important way by asking:

IS GOD AT THE CENTER OF YOUR QUESTION-ASKING?

For Paul, he asks questions about God's truth, justice, faithfulness, righteousness, and glory in this passage. Do you do that? Is that what fills the questions in your mind? Or are your questions about mere felt needs, finances, and what will give you the greatest sense of control in your life? Learning to ask maximum questions means asking them in light of God and what he wants. Again, is God at the center of your question-asking?



And when we consider the content of what Paul is saying here, we are faced with another reality that is an invitation to action:

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

NO MATTER WHAT YOU FEEL, NO MATTER WHAT YOU THINK, NO MATTER WHAT YOUR PAST, GOD IS AND WILL ALWAYS BE FAITHFUL.

God will always be faithful to his promises, to his word, and to his people. And we are invited to trust God, even when we don't know how he will be faithful in and through a specific situation. Like when Jesus said to Thomas, "You have believed because you have seen, but blessed are those who have not seen and yet have believed."

Climatically, however, Paul's answer in Romans is that the gospel of Jesus is the ultimate place where we see God's faithfulness and human faithlessness collide. In the gospel, Jesus takes all of our unfaithfulness to himself. He, the righteous one, takes our unrighteousness into himself. The holy and pure one takes the filth of our sin upon himself. He is isolated that we might belong. Jesus is how God's faithfulness is not compromised and how the faithlessness of humanity finds a remedy, and this is most clearly seen in the cross and resurrection. And this means that we should trust God unreservedly because, in Jesus, he is faithful no matter how many questions we have.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Romans 2:1-3:20 [Recommended]

http://www.fbccs.org/resources/studyguides/romans_sg03.htm

Excerpt:

Every one has heard people quarrelling. Sometimes it sounds funny and sometimes it sounds merely unpleasant; but however it sounds, I believe we can learn something very important from listening to the kinds of things they say. They say things like this: “How’d you like it if anyone did the same to you?” – “That’s my seat, I was there first” – “Leave him alone, he isn’t doing you any harm.” People say things like that every day, educated people as well as uneducated, and children as well as grown-ups.

Now what interests me about all these remarks is that the man who makes them is not merely saying that the other man’s behavior does not happen to please him. He is appealing to some kind of standard of behavior which he expects the other man to know about. And the other man very seldom replies: ‘To hell with your standard.’ Nearly always he tries to make out that what he has been doing does not really go against the standard, or that if it does there is some special excuse. And there would be no sense in trying to do that unless you and he had some sort of agreement as to what Right and Wrong are; just as there would be no sense in saying that a footballer had committed a foul unless there was some agreement about the rules of football.

Now this Law or Rule about Right and Wrong used to be called the Law of Nature. Nowadays, when we talk of the “laws of nature” we usually mean things like gravitation, or heredity, or the laws of chemistry. But when the older thinkers called the Law of Right and Wrong the “Law of Nature,” they really meant the Law of Human Nature.

Each man is at every moment subjected to several sets of laws but there is only one of these which he is free to disobey. As a body, he is subjected to gravitation and cannot disobey it; but the law which is peculiar to his human nature is the one he can disobey if be chooses.

This law was called the Law of Nature because people thought that everyone knew it by nature and did not need to be taught it. The human idea of decent behavior was obvious to every one.

I know that some people say the idea of a Law of Nature or decent behavior known to all men is unsound, because different civilizations and different ages have had quite different moralities.

But this is not true. There have been differences between their moralities, but these have never amounted to anything like a total difference. If anyone will take the trouble to compare the moral teaching of, say, the ancient Egyptians, Babylonians, Hindus, Chinese, Greeks and Romans, what will really strike him will be how very like they are to each other and to our own.

It seems, then, we are forced to believe in a real Right and Wrong. People may be sometimes mistaken about them, just as people sometimes get their sums wrong; but they are not a matter of mere taste and opinion any more than the multiplication table. Now if we are agreed about that, I go on to my next point, which is this. None of us are really keeping the Law of Nature. If there are any exceptions among you, I apologize to them. They had much better read some other work, for nothing I am going to say concerns them. And now, turning to the ordinary human beings who are left.

I hope you will not misunderstand what I am going to say. I am not preaching, and Heaven knows I do not pretend to be better than anyone else. I am only trying to call attention to fact; the fact that this year, or this month, or, more likely, this very day we have failed to practice ourselves the kind of behavior we expect from other people. There may be all sorts of excuses for us. That time you were so unfair to the children was when you were very tired. That slightly shady business about the money — the one you have almost forgotten — came when you were very hard up. And what you promised to do for old So-and-so and have never done — well you never would have promised if you had known how frightfully busy you were going to be. And as for your behavior to your wife (or husband) or sister (or brother) if I knew how irritating they could be, I would not wonder at it — and who the dickens am I, anyway? I am just the same. That is to say, I do not succeed in keeping the Law of Nature very well, and the moment anyone tells me I am not keeping it, there starts up in my mind a string of excuses as long as your arm. The question at the moment is not whether they are good excuses. The point is that they are one more proof of how deeply, whether we like it or not, we believe in the Law of Nature. If we do not believe in decent behavior, why should we be so anxious to make excuses for not having behaved decently? The truth is, we believe in decency so much — we feel the Rule of Law pressing on us so — that we cannot bear to face the fact that we are breaking it, and consequently we try to shift the responsibility. For you notice that it is only for our bad behavior that we find all these explanations. It is only our bad temper that we put down to being tired or worried or hungry; we put our good temper down to ourselves.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

These, then, are the two points I wanted to make. First, that human beings, all over the earth, have this curious idea that they ought to behave in a certain way, and cannot really get rid of it. Secondly, that they do not in fact behave in that way. They know the Law of Nature; they break it. These two facts are the foundation of all clear thinking about ourselves and the universe we live in.

Romans TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Fellowship Greenville, Jim Thompson (2017)
https://fellowshipgreenville.org/page/461?Item=1261

FG Romans
Sermon Series
<Prev Next>

SERIES: Romans: God's Power for Salvation
TITLE: Under Sin
SCRIPTURE: Romans 3:9-20

Often times, some words that have to do with Christianity get so overused that they tend to lose their meaning. Take the word "amen" for example, or the phrase "traveling mercies" maybe you've heard in a prayer. This happens without us realizing it. Maybe the most frightening instance of this is with the word "sin".

As Francis Spufford says, "Sin is that well-known contemporary brand name for ice cream. And chocolate truffles. And cocktails." He writes that today sin today usually "refers to the pleasurable consumption of something. It basically means 'indulgence.'" The problem is, this isn't at all what the Bible means when it talks about sin.

So, in Scripture, what is sin? Is it a list of DOs and DON'Ts? Is it more about attitude or action? What's the best way to understand and respond to the Bible's teaching on sin?

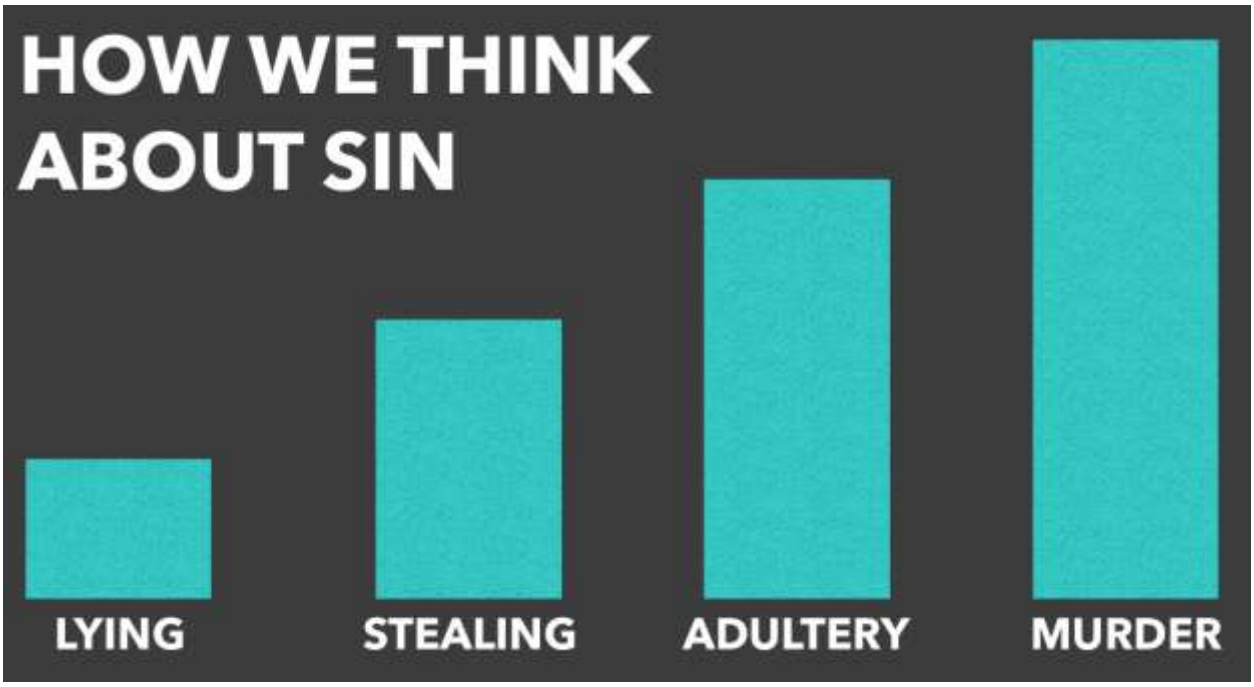
In Romans 3:9-20, Paul begins and ends this section by using the word sin in verse 9 and in verse 20. He says that both Jew and Greek are "under sin" (3:9). This is a key phrase. This language is about who your master is, who you serve, and who you report to, and Paul's teaching is that we all take commands from sin as our COO (chief operating officer). Sin has mastery over us somehow, or, put simply...

SIN IS WHAT WE SERVE AND WHAT WE DO THAT MAKES US LESS AND LESS TRULY HUMAN.

As David days in Psalm 51, sin is primarily against God. Just like this put all Jews and Gentiles on level ground before God, this means that, apart from the gospel, we're in the same boat as terrorists and felons and those that we think we're better than.

Just like Paul begins and ends this text with "sin language", he does the same with "courtroom language". In verse 9 there is a charge. In verse 19, the whole world is accountable. And in verse 20, no one can be justified before God on their own. In the divine courtroom, we are all guilty.

ENTER JESUS.



Time and time again in the New Testament, it says that Jesus came to deal with the sin problem (Matthew 1:21, John 1:29, Romans 6:23, 2 Corinthians 5:21, Galatians 1:4, Colossians 1:14, 1 Peter 2:24, Revelation 1:5-6, and more). And now, in the face of all the evidence mounted against us, we can be declared "not guilty" because of what he's done in the cross and in the resurrection. Jesus came to make sin an out-of-work master, to undo its power. When we trust him, he becomes our master and Lord, and he changes our actions and lives from within, through his spirit who makes a home in our hearts, and when we serve and obey Jesus, we become more and more truly human.

For more about sin, repentance, etc. see my other references resource:
The Gospel, Salvation and Evangelism

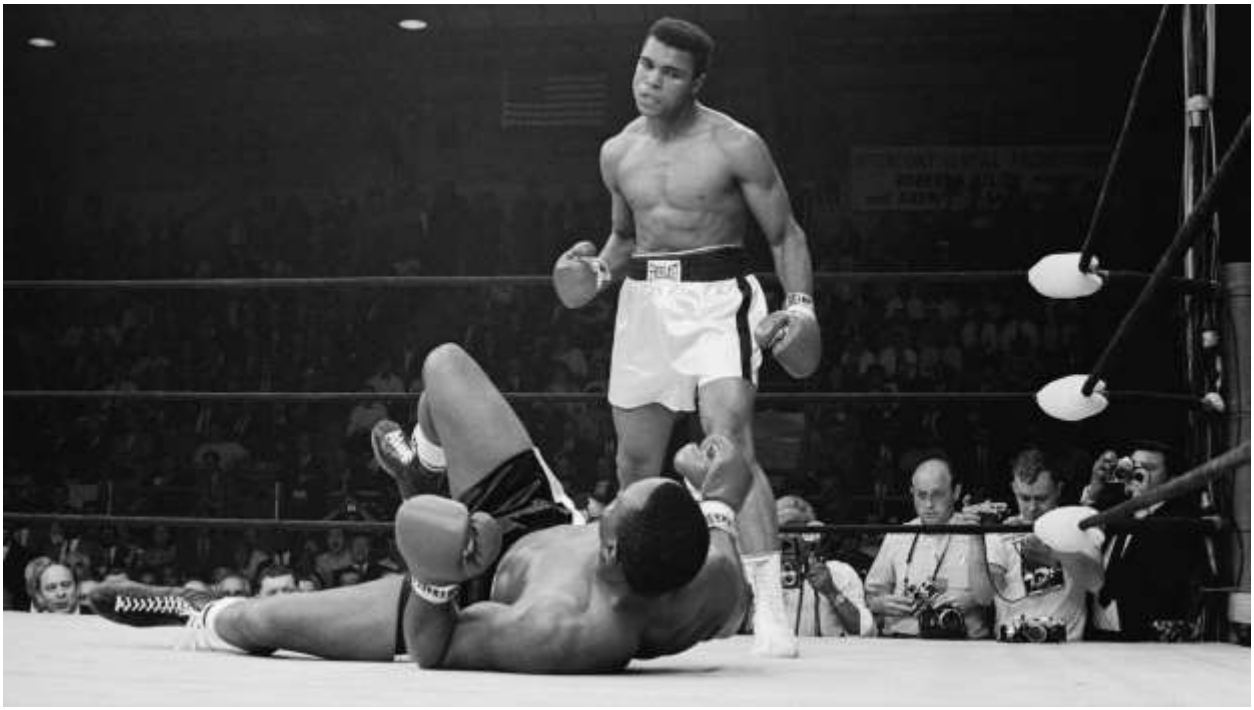
Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Sin is what we serve and what we do that makes us less and less truly human.

"Sin is the dare of God's justice, the rape of his mercy, the slight of his power, the jeer of his patience, and the contempt of his love."
–John Bunyan

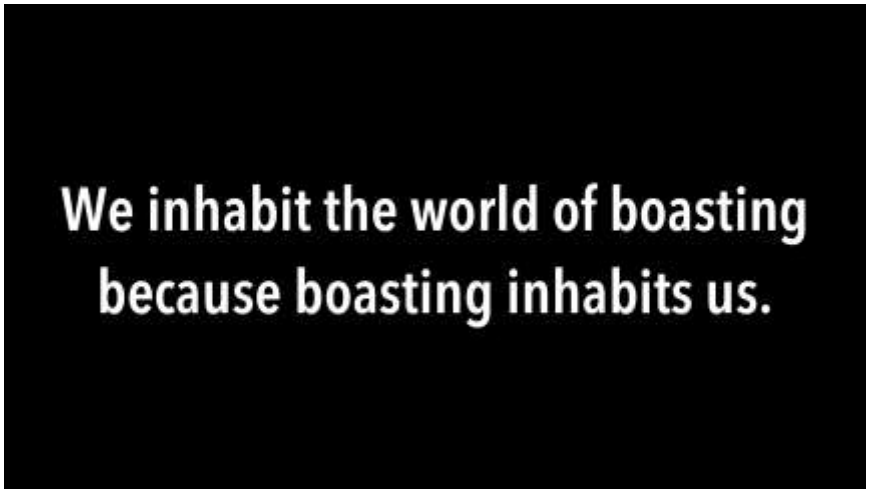
 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Fellowship Greenville, Charlies Boyd (2017)
https://fellowshipgreenville.org/page/461?Item=1281



FG Romans
Sermon Series
<Prev Next>

SERMON NOTES



SERIES: Romans: God's Power for Salvation

TITLE: No More Boasting

SCRIPTURE: Romans 3:21-31

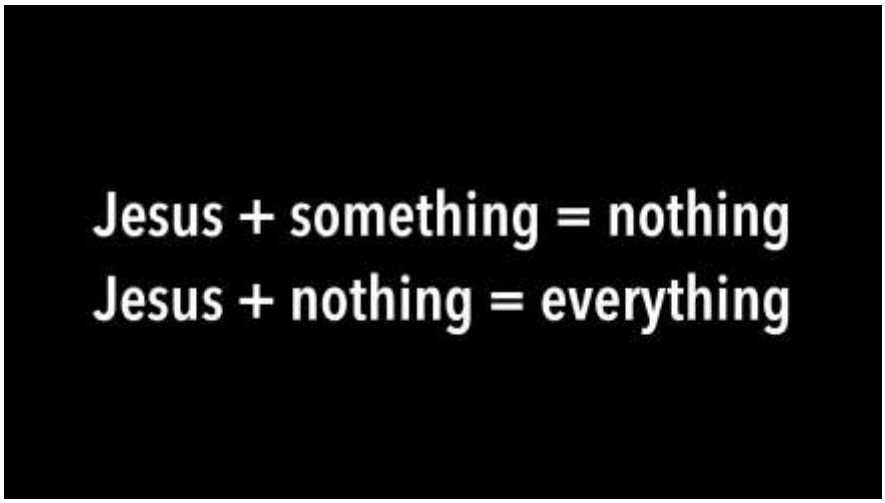
Have you ever noticed how much bragging and boasting goes on in our world today? Politics, professional sports, and talk radio are full of people boasting about who they are, what they've done, and what they promise to do.

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

We inhabit a world of boasting because boasting inhabits us. Boasting is the outward manifestation of a proud heart. It's interesting, even though Paul mentions boasting dozens of times in his letters, most churches today hardly ever mention the topic. But Christians can easily get caught up in boasting about our heritage and traditions (or non-traditional traditions)—in how our worship is more acceptable to God than other churches, or our theology is more doctrinally sound than others. Boasting was just as much a part of the culture in Bible days as in our day. Your boast reveals your ultimate confidence.

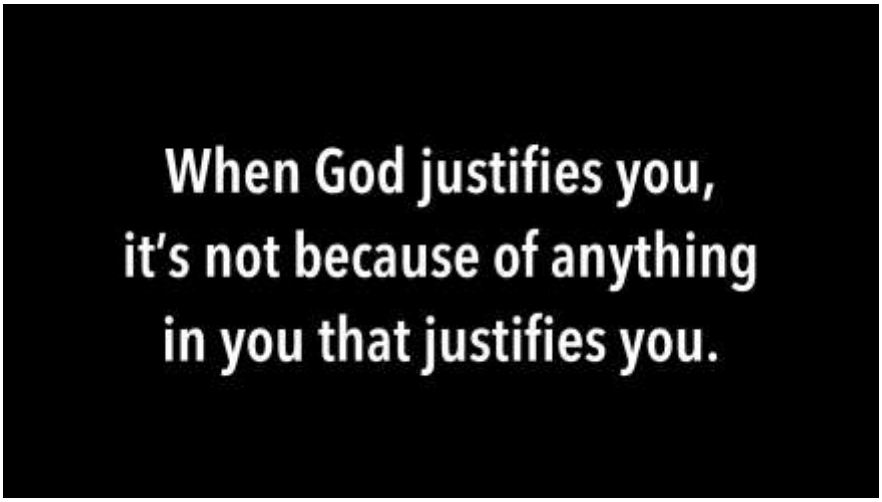
READ Romans 3:21–31

1. Paul's main point in this passage is that God has made a way for all people to enter into and live in a right relationship with God apart from the law—the law of Moses. (3:21, 28).



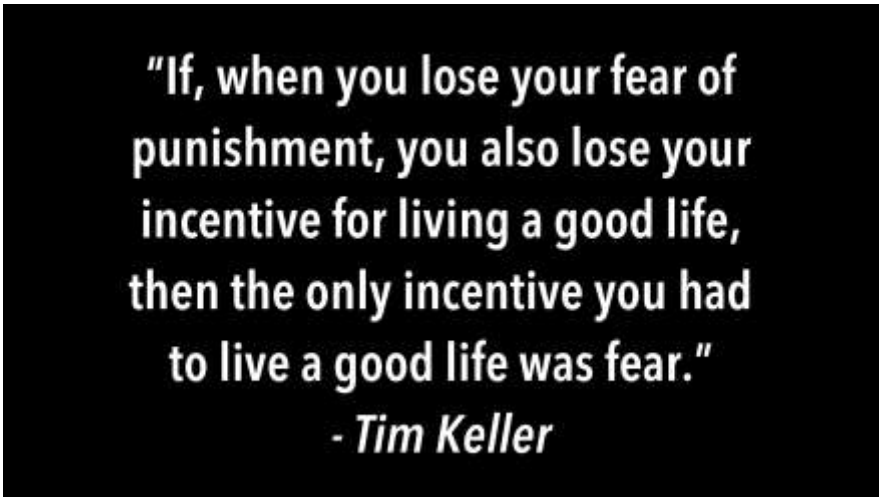
One way that people sometimes think of "righteousness" or "right standing with God" is that it comes from your moral, spiritual track record.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



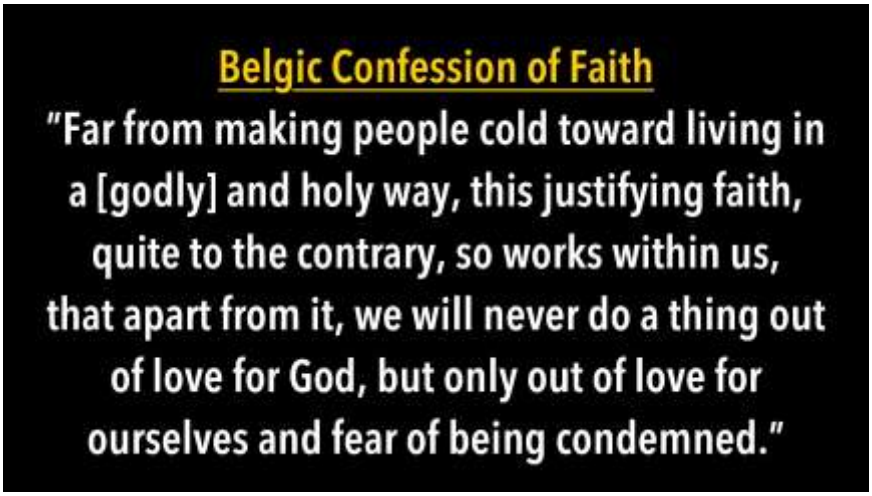
2. It's hard for good, moral, religious people to believe that the good things they do won't make them more acceptable to God.

For many people today, their good works are their boast—the ultimate source of their confidence that God will accept them. Both "high" churches and "low" churches can distort the Gospel of free grace into a Jesus + doing good = salvation.

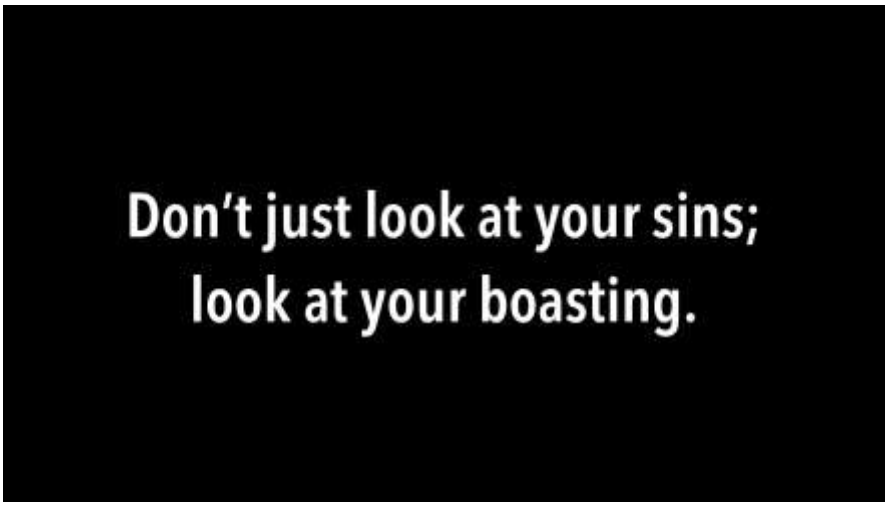


But Scripture makes it clear that when God justifies you, it's not because of anything in you that justifies you (cf Rom 4:5).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



Some people think that if God really gave salvation away as a free gift there would be no incentive to live a good life.



Tim Keller talks about this: "If when you lose your fear of punishment, you lose your incentive to be good, then the only incentive you had to be good was the fear," That would mean, if you try to do good things that ultimately benefit you, the good things you do are not really good. Why not? Because "goodness" is unselfish living so if you do good with a selfish motivation to get good and avoid bad, then the good you do is not good.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Knowing your good deeds won't make you more acceptable to God makes your good deeds good.

Here's what makes you a Christian—don't just look at your sins; look at your boasting.

Look at what you boast in as your righteousness. Look at the things you think justify you as a good person worthy of God's acceptance, and repent of that.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

3. Receiving God's righteousness means repenting of your own righteousness. The Gospel of grace destroys our boasting—Faith alone in Christ alone destroys boasting (Ephesians 2:8-10). What makes you a Christian is not simply that you repent of your sins, but also that you repent of whatever you think justifies you before God—you repent of whatever you might boast in as your ultimate confidence for gaining God's approval. So to become a Christian, you transfer your trust from what you hope will be good enough for God to accept you to what Jesus has done for you through his death to make you right and keep you right with God. You transfer your trust from what you hope will be good enough to Jesus who is more than enough. A true Christian is someone who knows they will never be good enough to earn or deserve God's favor, but they also know they don't have to be. They only need to receive God's approval as a gift through faith in Christ.

See also*: Antinomianism

Romans TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Law vs Faith

A Romans Rivalry: The Law vs Faith (Romans 3:27-31)

https://www.olivetree.com/blog/a-romans-rivalry-law-vs-faith/

The Law vs Faith — one of the main conflicts Paul seeks to resolve in his letter to the Romans.

> Where, then, is boasting? It is excluded. Because of what law? The law that requires works? No, because of the law that requires faith. For we maintain that a person is justified by faith apart from the works of the law. Or is God the God of Jews only? Is he not the God of Gentiles too? Yes, of Gentiles too, since there is only one God, who will justify the circumcised by faith and the uncircumcised through that same faith. Do we, then, nullify the law by this faith? Not at all! Rather, we uphold the law. — Romans 3:27-31

BIG IDEA

These verses contain three contrasts between boasting in the law of Moses and justification by faith in Christ alone: boasting in individual legalism versus justification by faith and acceptance before God; boasting in national exclusivism versus justification by faith and monotheism; boasting in the old covenant versus justification by faith and the new covenant.

KEY THEMES

- Paul has in mind three nuances with regard to nomos: “principle,” “law of Moses,” and “covenant.”
- Paul attacks both individual boasting before God based on obedience to the Torah (3:27–28) and national exclusivism based on circumcision, Sabbath keeping, and dietary laws (3:29–31). The basis of Israel’s national boasting that Paul criticizes is not just the three covenant markers but the entire Torah

UNDERSTANDING THE TEXT

THE TEXT IN CONTEXT

Romans 3:27–31 is a transitional passage. It points backward to Paul’s argumentation in 1:18–3:26, reiterating that justification before God is conditioned on faith in Christ and not on the works of the law. And it looks forward to Paul’s argumentation in 4:1–23 that Abraham, the founding father of the Jews, was accepted by God on the basis of faith some four hundred years before the advent of the law of Moses.

The theme of Romans 3:27–31 is that boasting in the law is antithetical to justification by faith. Three contrasts drive that message home:

1. Boasting in individual legalism versus justification by faith and acceptance before God (3:27–28)
  a. Law (3:27a)
  b. Faith (3:27b)
  b′. Faith (3:28a)
  a′. Law (3:28b)
2. Boasting in (Jewish) national exclusivism versus justification by faith and monotheism (3:29–30)
3. Boasting in the old covenant versus justification by faith and the new covenant (3:31)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

HISTORICAL AND CULTURAL BACKGROUND

1. As Simon Gathercole has perceptively demonstrated with regard to Romans 3:27–31, against the New Perspective on Paul, the literature of Second Temple Judaism is filled with individual boasting before God based on observing the whole Torah—boasting, no less, in anticipation of judgment day (e.g., 2 Maccabees, Testament of Job, Sibylline Oracles, Psalms of Solomon, 4 Ezra, 2 Baruch, Dead Sea Scrolls). In other words, boasting in the Judaism of Paul's day went well beyond Jewish national pride in the three covenant markers (circumcision, Sabbath, diet). And it is individual boasting in the entirety of the Torah that Paul condemns in Romans 3:27–28.

2. Romans 3:29–30 draws on the fundamental tenet of Judaism: God is one—monotheism. Thus, Jews recited the Shema (Hebrew for "hear," the first word of Deut. 6:4) every day: "Hear, O Israel: The LORD [Yahweh] our God, the LORD is one . . ." (Deut. 6:4–5).

3. Two covenants are at work in Romans 3:27–31; 4:1–23: the Abrahamic covenant and the Mosaic covenant. For Paul, these two are in tension, and the former anticipates the gospel, the new covenant.

INTERPRETIVE INSIGHTS: The Law vs Faith

3:27–28

Where, then, is boasting? It is excluded. Because of what law [nomos]? The law that requires works? No, because of the law [nomos] that requires faith . . . a person is justified by faith apart from works of the law [nomos].

These verses point out that boasting in individual legalism is antithetical to justification by faith. This is seen in the chiasm (the law vs faith; faith vs the law) that these verses form:

A Law (of Moses) (v. 27a)
B Faith (in Jesus Christ) (v. 27b)
B' Faith (in Jesus Christ) (v. 28a)
A' Law (of Moses) (v. 28b)

There are two standard opinions on the meaning of nomos ("law" or "principle") in 3:27–31 (v. 27 [2x], v. 28, v. 31 [2x]). Some think that "law" in verses 27, 28, 31 refers to the law of Moses. Others think that two different nuances of law are intended: "law of Moses" (v. 27 [the first instance], v. 28, v. 31 [both times]) and "principle" (v. 27 [the second occurrence]). I suggest instead that nomos, both times in 3:27, means "principle," but two different principles: the principle of obeying the works of the Torah (v. 27a) versus the principle of justification by faith (v. 27b). Many commentators who take nomos here either as the law of Moses (v. 27a) and the principle of faith (v. 27b) or as the law of Moses in both cases miss the antithetical parallelism and the double meaning of nomos in 3:27:

Verse 27a: principle (nomos) of works (of the Torah) (cf. v. 28b) versus
Verse 27b: principle (nomos) of faith (cf. v. 28a)

On this reading, in 3:27–28 Paul is summarizing his argument in 1:18–3:26: no individual can boast before God regarding obedience to the law of Moses because no one can ever follow the law perfectly enough to be accepted by God on judgment day. More than that, the law stirs up disobedience, not obedience, to God in the first place. Verses 27–28 add one more vital detail to Paul's argument: the law itself stirs up individual pride before God and others. Rather, it is only by faith in Christ that anyone will be justified before God.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

3:29-30

Or is God the God of Jews only? Is he not the God of Gentiles too?

Here Paul turns his attention to criticizing Jewish national exclusivism. Jews fancied themselves to be better than Gentiles because they worshiped the one true God and possessed his law. In 3:29–30 Paul turns this argument on its head: monotheism means that the one true God is uniting all humankind (Jew [circumcised] and Gentile [uncircumcised]) on the basis of justification by faith in Christ (see Paul's extensive argument in Rom. 4:1–25). In other words, for Paul, justification by faith is rooted in monotheism. In this scenario there is no longer any room for the law of Moses. It divided humankind, but justification by faith unites humankind. This is because all can have faith in Jesus, whereas only one nation (Israel) can lay claim to the law of Moses.

3:31

Do we, then, nullify the law [nomos] by this faith? Not at all! Rather, we uphold the law [nomos].

This verse has generated three major interpretations, to which I will add a fourth. First, the more traditional perspective on Paul sees a problem with his statement here about faith establishing the law of Moses. Up until now in Romans the apostle has said next to nothing positive regarding the Torah, but now suddenly he seems to assert that faith establishes the law.

How so?

This view answers that Paul is talking not about the law of Moses per se but rather about the intent or commands of the Torah. In light of Romans 2:25–29; 8:4; 13:8–10 (which seem to say something similar: faith in Christ and the indwelling of the Spirit empower the Christian to do even better than the Torah, namely, to fulfill the divine intent behind the Torah in the first place without getting bogged down in its 613 specific laws), this may well be the case.

A second traditional view…

is that Paul is not making a positive comment about the law in 3:31 but rather is saying that the purpose of the Torah is strictly negative: to bring all humanity up short of the righteousness of God and thereby drive all people to the gospel (cf. Rom. 3:19–26; Gal. 3:1–4:7). This, too, is quite possible.

Third, the New Perspective argues…

that nomos is the law of Moses throughout 3:27–31, and Paul is criticizing not the law but rather the improper usage of it whereby Jewish covenant markers are used to marginalize Gentiles in their relationship with God. This view seems to me off base in that it does not recognize that Paul is using nomos in more than one way in these verses, and that in 3:27–28 he is attacking individual boasting before God, not just national exclusivism.

A fourth view of 3:31…

is reflected in my suggested translation: "Do we then nullify the old covenant [nomos] by faith? May it never be! [Implied: faith did not need to nullify the old covenant because the law of Moses itself already did that by stirring up humans to sin against God.] Rather, we establish the new covenant [nomos] by faith." Here, nomos means "covenant," and, as in 3:27, Paul is using nomos in antithetical parallelism and with a double meaning:

Verse 31a: we do not nullify the old covenant (nomos) by faith
(implied: the law of Moses itself did that by stirring up sin)
Verse 31b: rather, we establish the new covenant (nomos) by faith

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Several factors lead me to this translation.

ONE

The law was the stipulation of the covenant for Israel; the two ideas went hand in hand. Indeed, the New Perspective assumes that Paul is talking about the "covenant" markers in 3:29–30.

TWO

My suspicion that Paul is continuing to think about the covenant in 3:31 seems confirmed by his choice of the word "establish" (histēmi), which is used in the LXX for establishing the covenant (Deut. 28:69 [29:1 ET]; 1 Sam. 15:13; 2 Chron. 35:19a), including the new covenant (Jer. 42:14, 16 [35:14, 16 ET]). In other words, for Paul to say in 3:31 that faith establishes the covenant would have reminded his Jewish readers of the Old Testament phrase "the law establishes the covenant."

THREE

Here the antithetical parallelism surfaces in 3:31: the other word that Paul uses of nomos in 3:31 (besides "establish") is "nullify" (katargeō), which in 2 Corinthians 3:1–4:6 Paul uses four times regarding the demise of the old covenant in light of the arrival of the new covenant in Christ (2 Cor. 3:7, 11, 13, 14). Thus, it appears that Paul signals by the two words "nullify" and "establish" the antithesis between the old and new covenants.

FOUR

Immediately following 3:31 is Paul's discussion of the contrast between the Abrahamic and Mosaic covenants.

FIVE

Since Paul uses the word nomos in two different ways in 3:27–28 ("principle" [2x in v. 27] and "Torah" [v. 28]), it would not be surprising that he would continue to offer another nuance of the word in 3:31 ("covenant"). This to say that Paul provides a play on the word nomos throughout 3:27–31: "principle" (v. 27), "Torah" (v. 28), and "covenant" (v. 31).

SIX

The verb katargeō is also used in Romans 4:14 of the promise to Abraham—the Abrahamic covenant—as being void if that promise/covenant is based on the law of Moses.

SEVEN

This proposed reading would mean that Paul is perfectly consistent with his negative presentation of the law of Moses throughout Romans 1:18–3:31. These seven considerations combine to suggest that 3:31 contains a third contrast between boasting in the law and justification by faith: the former is not appropriate since the old covenant has passed away; only the latter is the avenue to the new covenant.

THEOLOGICAL INSIGHTS INTO THE LAW VS FAITH

Even though it is a short passage, Romans 3:27–31 is full of profound theological truths.

First, individual boasting before God because of one's supposed good works is a dead-end street spiritually. Such arrogance only distances a person from God because trying to match one's righteousness with God's is a hopeless endeavor.

Second, boasting in one's supposed national superiority over others can also lead to a quagmire in relationships. Patriotism is not wrong, but it can go awry and bring about disastrous results. What we can learn from these two theological insights is that humility before God and others is the best way to go through life.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Third, the divine plan for salvation is based on faith, beginning with the Old Testament and continuing to the New Testament. The Abrahamic covenant (compare Rom. 3:29–30 with Rom. 4) revealed that acceptance before God is based on faith; indeed, the true children of Abraham are those who are saved by faith, not by the law of Moses. Why, then, did God give the Torah to Israel? Ultimately, it was to drive both Jew and Gentile to belief in Jesus (compare Rom. 1:18–4:25 with Gal. 3:1–4:7).

Fourth, the overarching argument that Paul makes in Romans 1:18–3:31 is that the stipulation of the new covenant is faith in Jesus Christ, not the law of Moses.

TEACHING THE TEXT ON THE LAW VS FAITH

The best way to preach or teach Romans 3:27–31 and the law vs faith is to title the message something like "No Boasting before God." Then simply explain the three contrasts between boasting in the law of Moses and justification by faith.

First, individual legalism constitutes a roadblock to justification by faith…

because most people in this category are religious by nature and therefore assume that their good works—church/synagogue/mosque attendance, helping others, living a morally upstanding life, and so on—will earn them salvation. Indeed, Christian evangelism exposes such a baseless assumption when a person is asked, "If you stood before God today and he asked you why he should let you enter heaven, what would you say?" Most folk in the category of individual legalism will point out the good works in their lives as grounds for their justification on judgment day. The challenge of the Christian evangelist is to wean such persons from trusting in their own merits before a perfect God.

Second, millions of people trust in their national identity to be justified by God.

One thinks especially of Americans who claim that their country is a Christian nation and therefore they have inherited the blessings of that faith, including acceptance before God. But Paul and Jesus vociferously denied that one is born a believer by being born in Israel (compare Rom. 3:29–30 with John 1:11–13), and the same argument can be made for America.

Third, Paul contrasts the old covenant with the new covenant in 3:31.

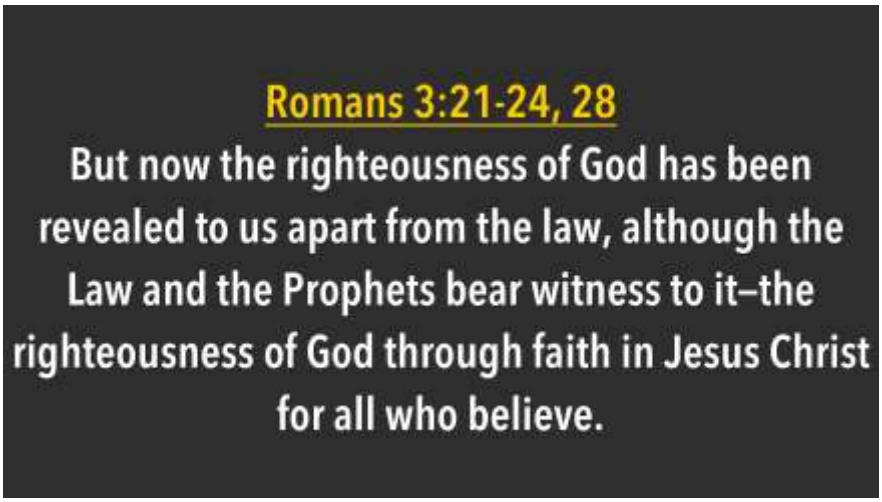
Since the law and the old covenant failed to justify humans before God, the new covenant received by faith in Christ alone is the only legitimate way to be accepted by God.

Romans TOC
(Table of Contents)

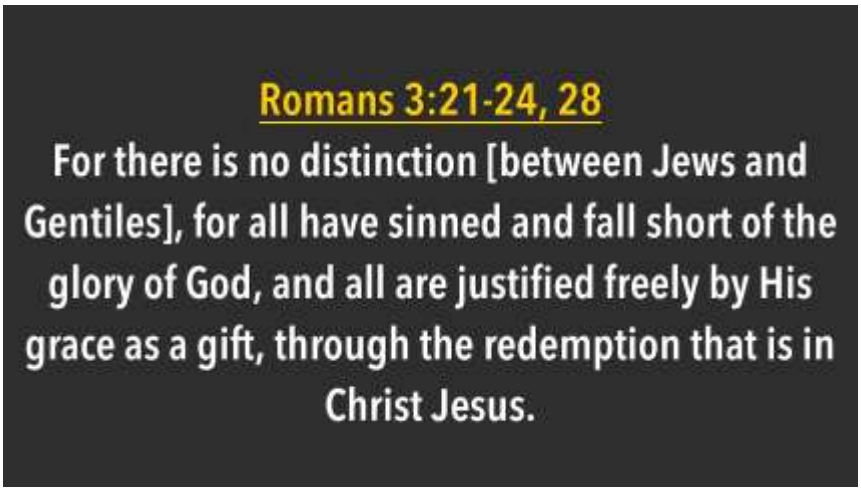
 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Fellowship Greenville, Charlies Boyd (2017)
https://fellowshipgreenville.org/page/461?Item=1289

FG Romans
Sermon Series
<Prev Next>



SERMON NOTES



SERIES: Romans: God's Power for Salvation

TITLE: Too Good To Be True

SCRIPTURE: Romans 4:1-12

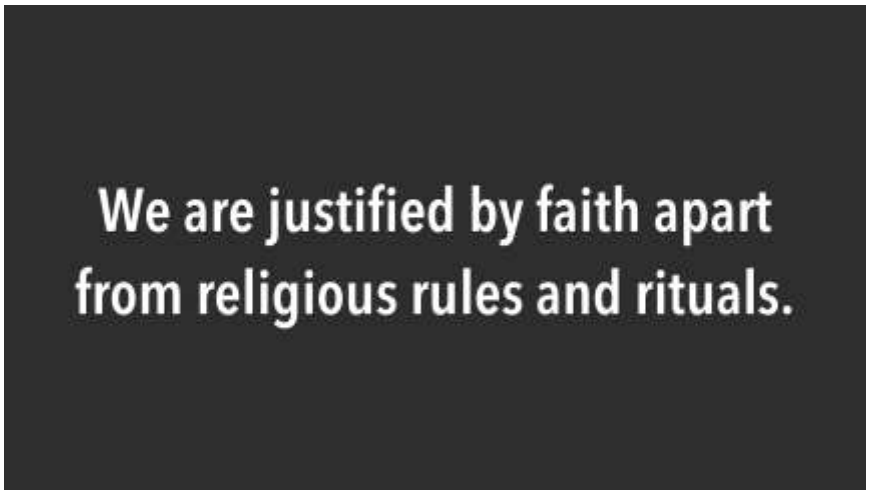
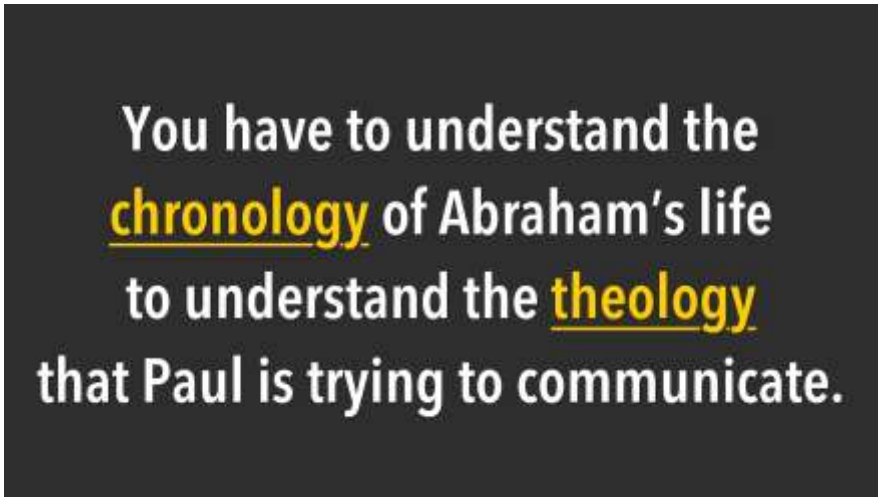
You've heard it—you've said it—" If it's too good to be true then it probably is ." And because that belief is so ingrained in us, it's really hard for some people to believe that God's free gift of eternal salvation is actually free. In the book of Romans— in the first three chapters —the Apostle Paul has established beyond all doubt that the whole world is guilty before God—both Jews and Gentiles all deserve God's wrath. But last week we saw in the last part of chapter 3—that God in His grace has made a way for all people to be declared righteous and acceptable in his sight, and therefore, escape His righteous wrath against sin. And the way we escape God's wrath and judgment is nothing more, nothing less than simple faith in the sacrificial death of His Son (cf Rom 3:21-24, 28).



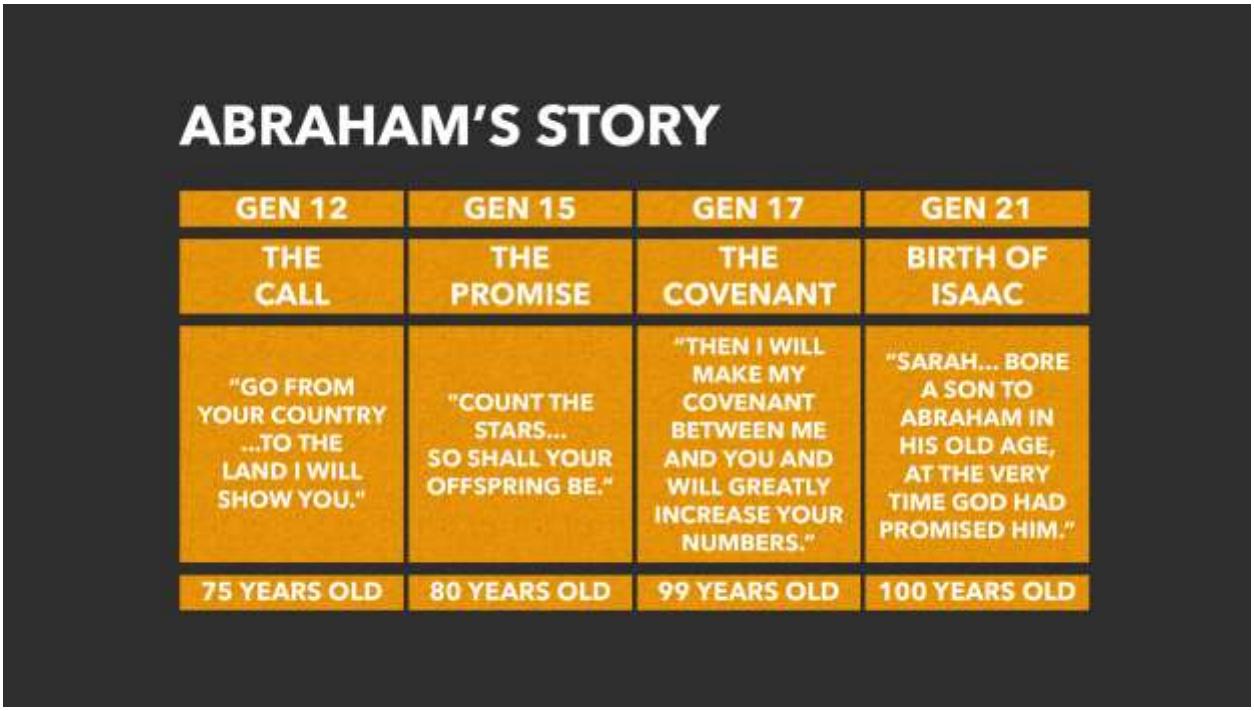
Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Paul has said that we are justified by faith apart from religious rules and rituals.



In chapter 4, he will illustrate this great truth from the life of Abraham, the father of the Jewish nation.

Walk thru Romans 4:1-12



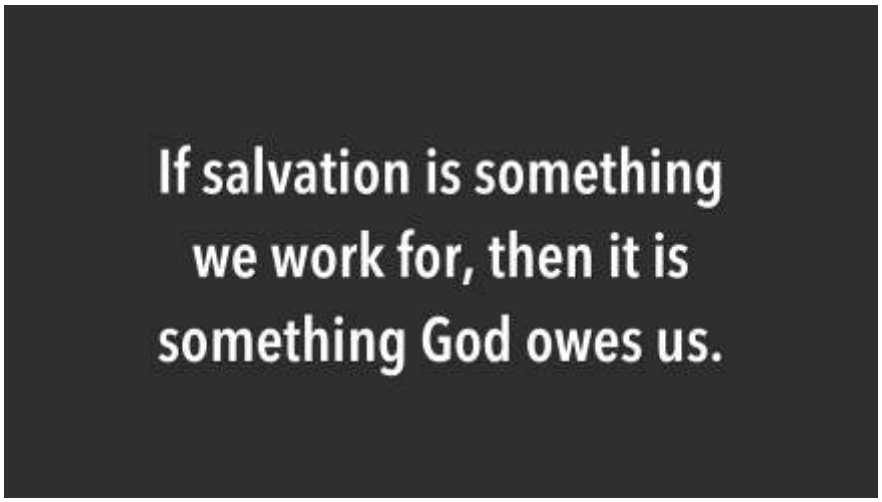
Romans 4:1-2 — When we do something good, it gives us something to brag about.

Romans 4:3 (Gen 15:6) —

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

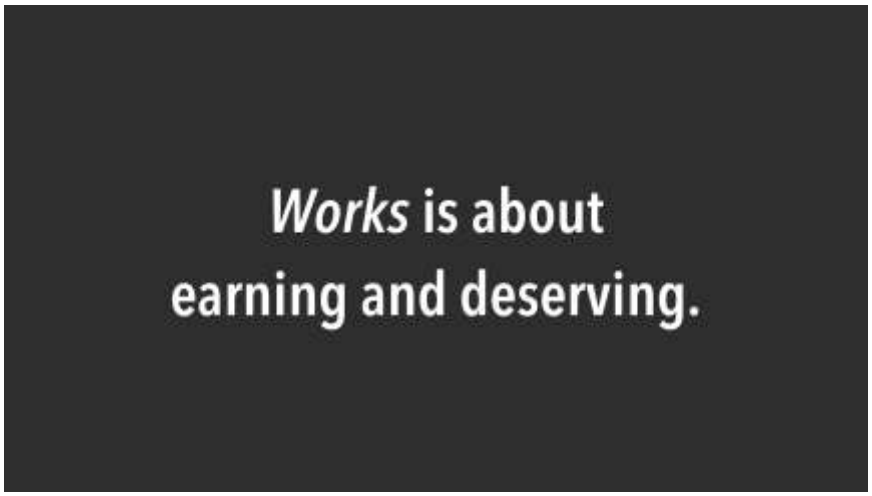
In this chapter, you have to understand the chronology of Abraham's life in order to understand the theology that Paul is trying to communicate .

The point of the chart is this — Abraham believed in the promise of God before Moses wrote down the Law — Moses/the Law came 500 years later. Abraham believed God's promise before he was circumcised— before he became a Jew—when he was still Gentile.



So, Abraham believed God and God counted his faith as righteousness before the Law and before he was circumcised .

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



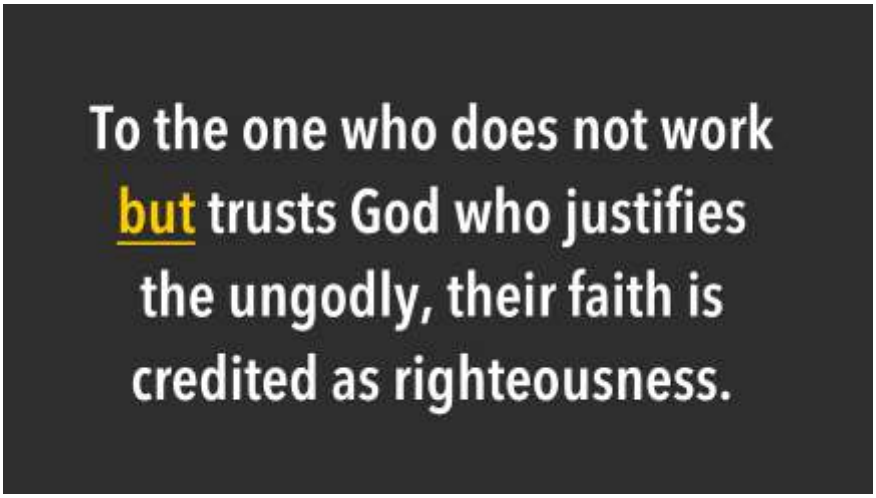
Romans 4:4-8 —

If salvation is something we work for, then it is something God owes us.

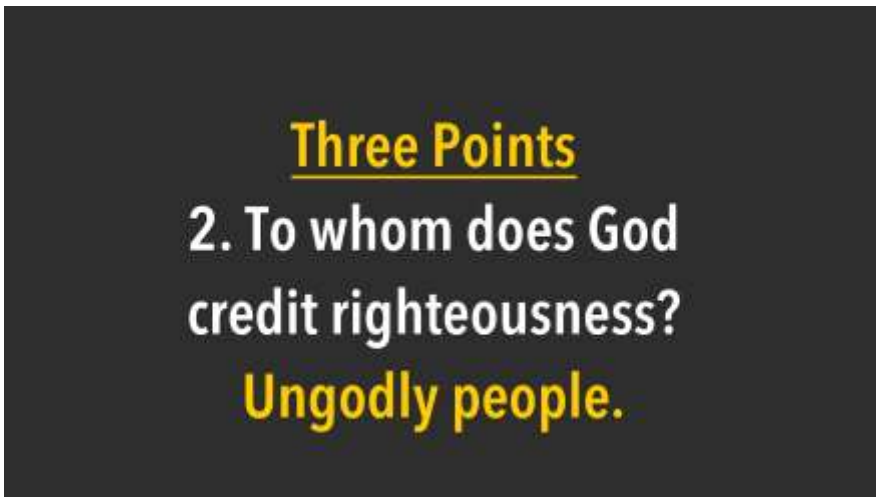
Works is about earning and deserving.

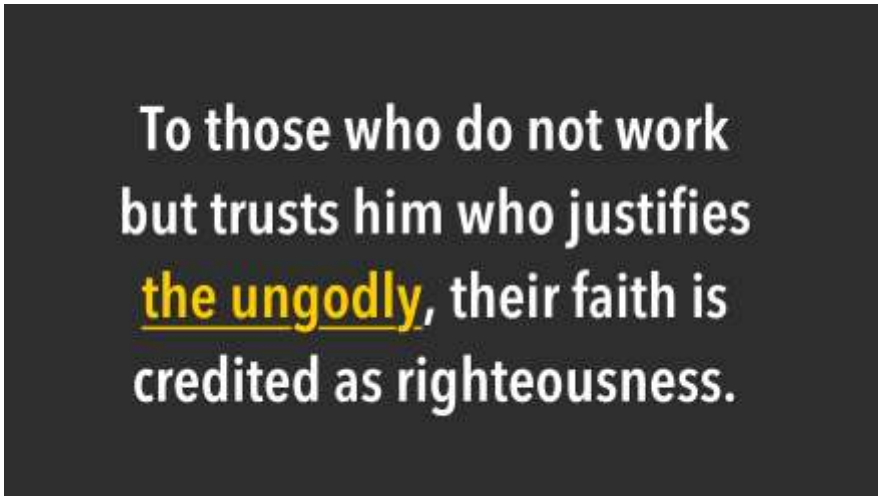
 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Grace is about believing and receiving.



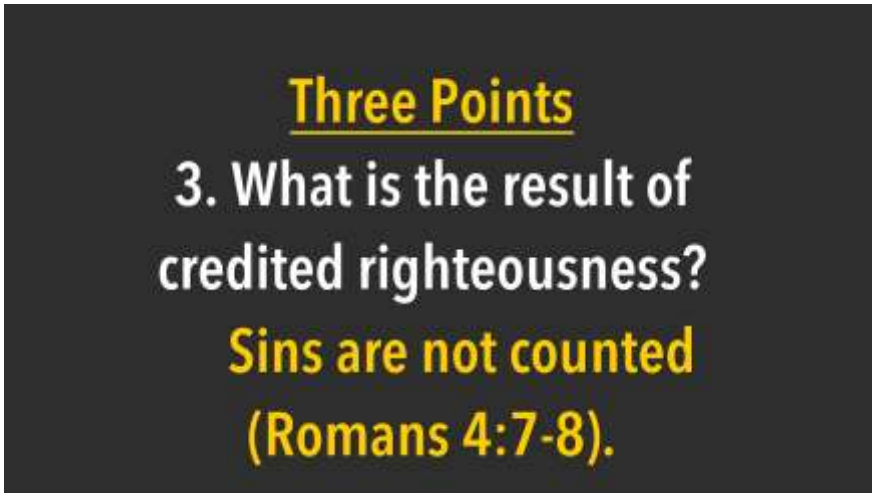
1. To whom does God credit righteousness?





To the one who does not work for it (Romans 4:5)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

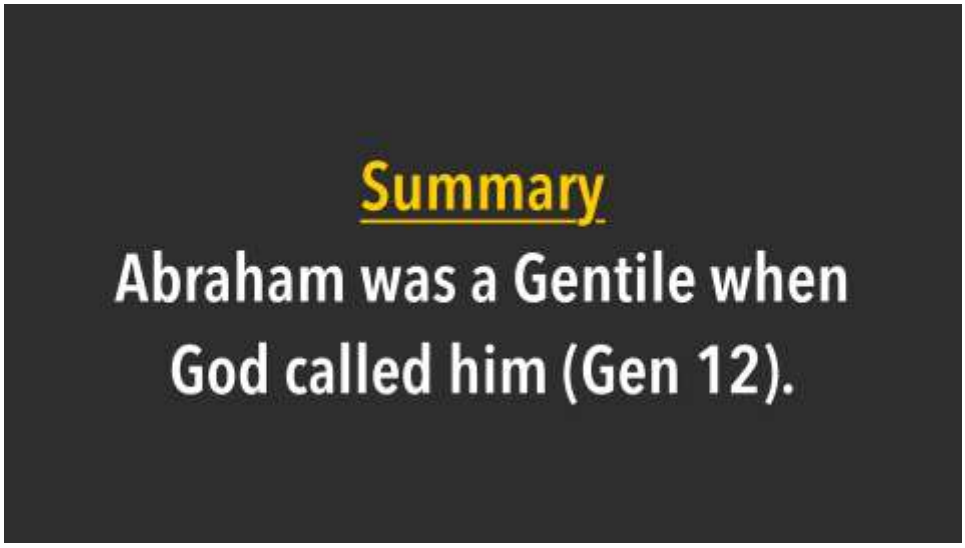


2. To whom does God credit righteousness? Ungodly people (Romans 4:5)

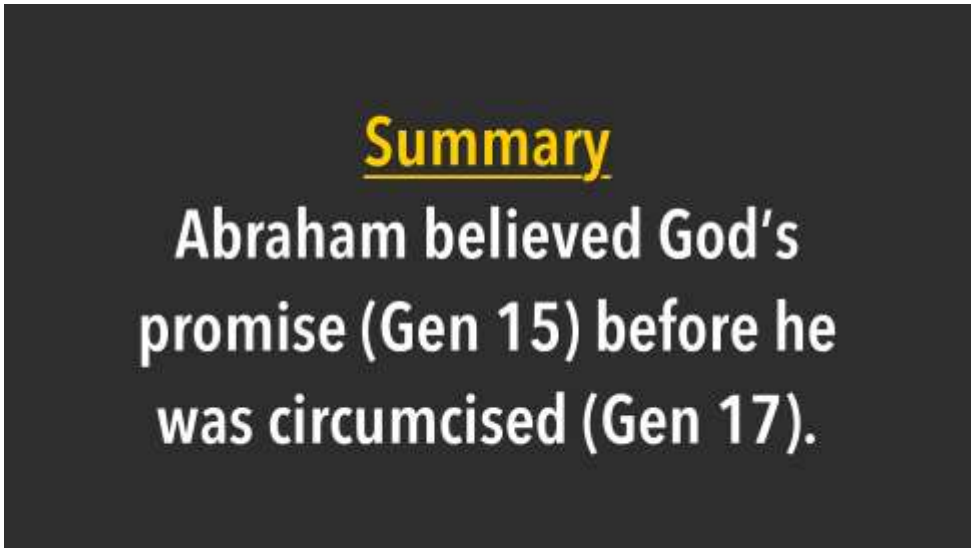
3. What is the result of credited righteousness?

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Sins are not counted against you (Romans 4:7-8; Psalm 32:1-2)



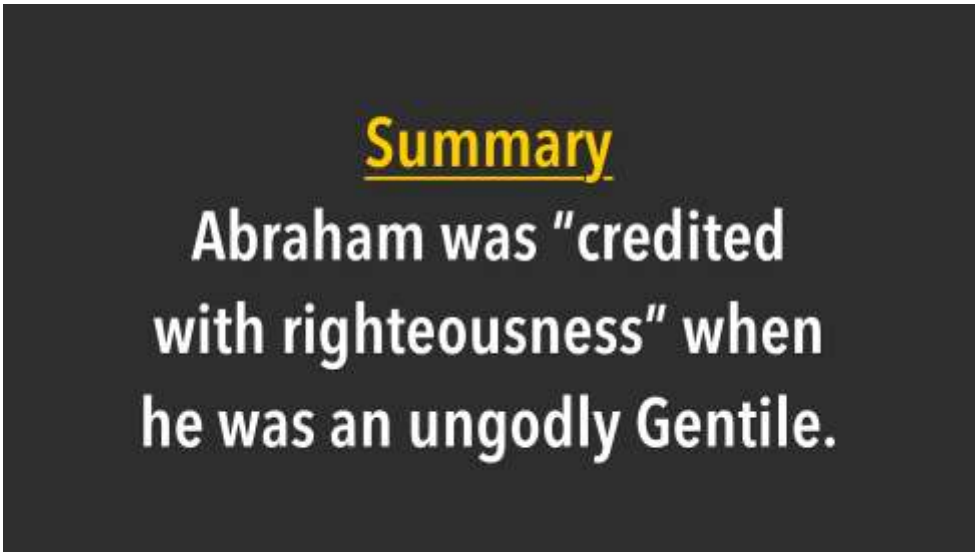
Don't make salvation more difficult than God makes it .



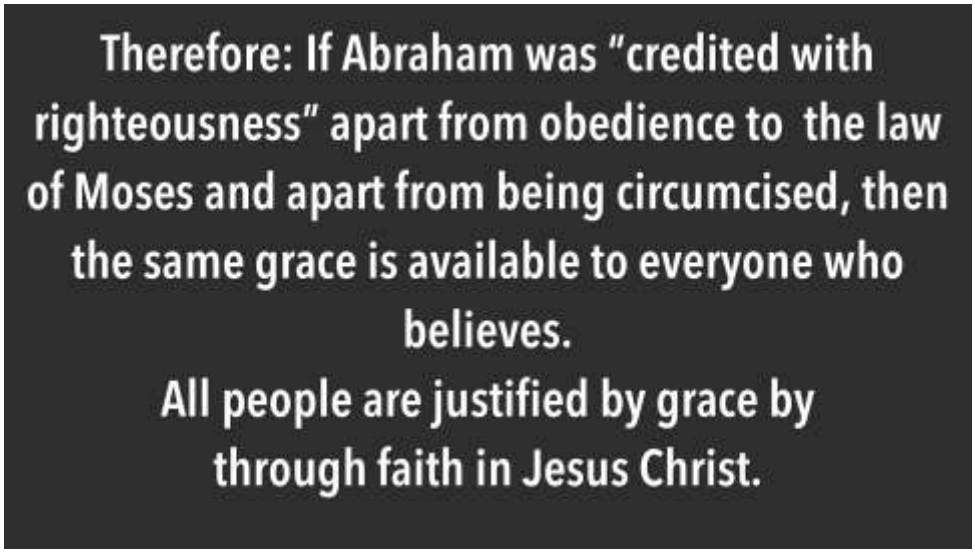
SUMMARY: Romans 4:9-12 —

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

● Abraham was a Gentile when God called him (Gn 12).

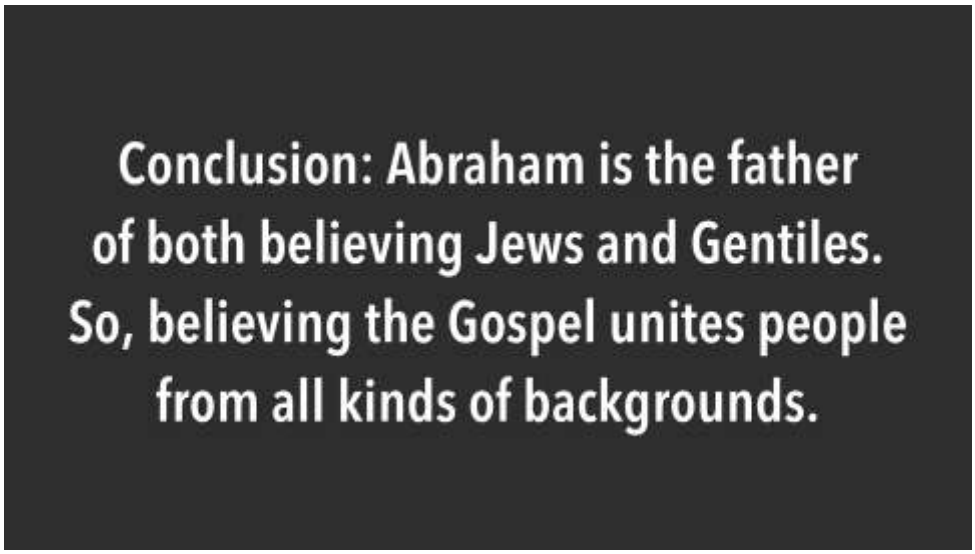


● Abraham believed God's promise (Gen 15) before he was circumcised (Gen 17).

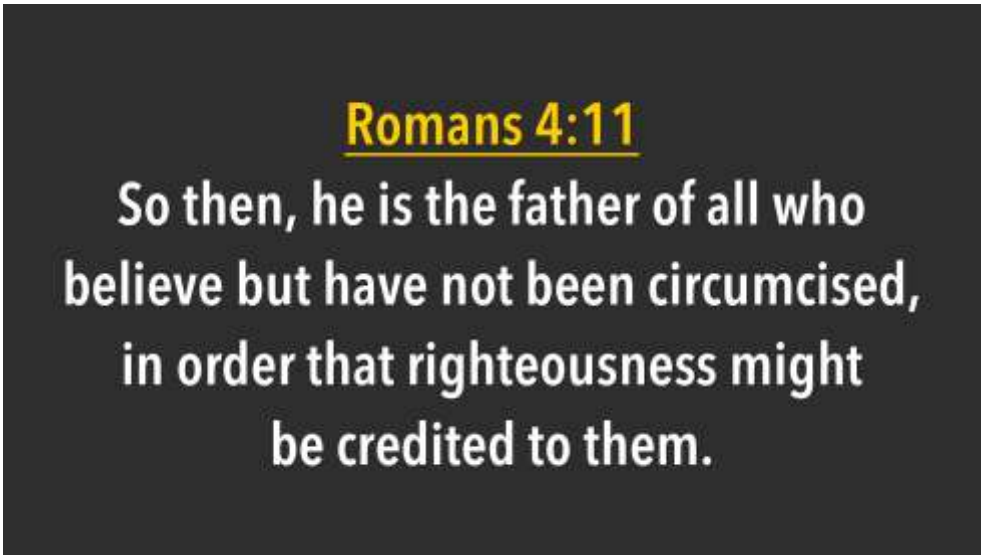


● Abraham was " credited with righteousness " when he was an ungodly Gentile .

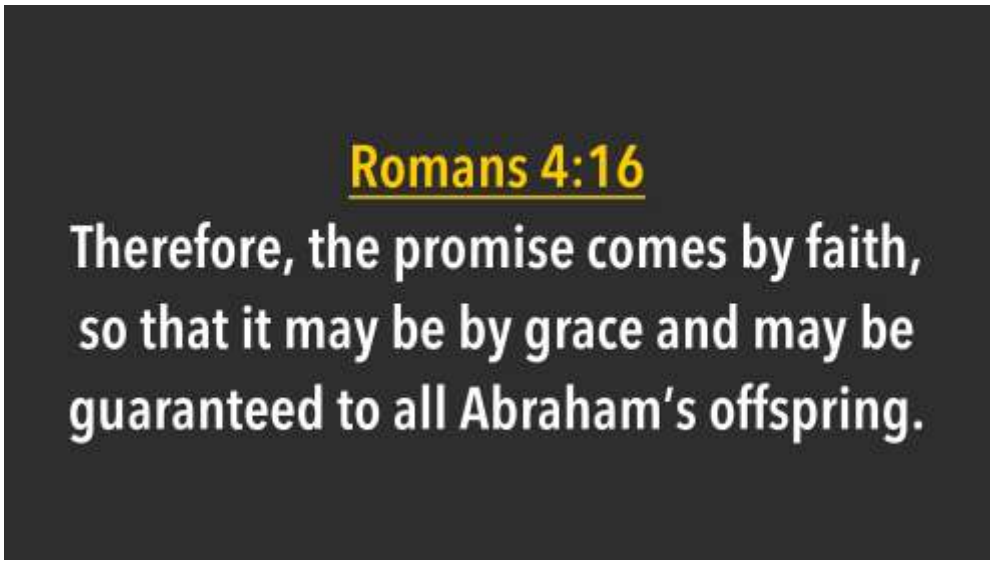
 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



You see how the chronology informs the theology?



● Therefore: If Abraham was "credited with righteousness" apart from obedience to the law of Moses —which came 500 years later— and apart from being circumcised, then the same grace is available to everyone who believes. All people are justified by grace by through faith in Jesus Christ.



● Conclusion: Abraham is the father of both believing Jews and Gentiles. (Romans 4:11, 16). So, believing the Gospel unites people from all kinds of backgrounds.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Romans TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Fellowship Greenville, Charlies Boyd (2017)
https://fellowshipgreenville.org/page/461?Item=1298

FG Romans
Sermon Series
<Prev Next>

SERMON NOTES

SERIES: Romans: God's Power for Salvation

TITLE: So What Exactly Is Faith?

SCRIPTURE: Romans 4:13-25

In the first three chapters of the book of Romans, the apostle Paul lays out the black cloth of human sin and rebellion against God, but then he holds up the glittering diamond of the gospel for all to see. The Gospel—the good news that has come to us through Jesus—reveals/puts on display—a "righteousness that comes to us from God" (1:17)—meaning—God has made a way for all people to be put into a right relationship with God through faith in Christ apart from the law—apart from trying hard to obey religious rules and rituals. (3:21-23, 24, 28) In 4:1-12 Paul has showed that Abraham was put right with God by faith alone—before he was circumcised and before God gave the law to Moses. In our passage for study today (4:13-25), Paul continues to point to Abraham to help us understand what it means to be "justified by faith apart from the law" and in so doing, he unpacks for us the nature of saving faith.

Paul's Big Idea throughout this section: We are put right with God by trusting in the promises of God. But what exactly is faith? What does it mean to have faith?

According to this passage… Faith is trusting in the promises of God.

There are several implications here that we need to unpack.

1. Trusting in God's promises means taking God at his Word.

2. Trusting in God's promises means trusting what God says in his Word.

- Faith is not making something up in your imagination and trying really hard to believe that God will give you what you want.

- Biblical faith is faith in what God has promised us in his Word.

3. Trusting the promises of God means facing the facts.

- The greatest obstacle to faith is not believing God can do something; it's demanding to know how he will do it before we step out in faith.

- Faith rests in WHAT God promises, not in knowing HOW God will do what he promises.

4. For us, trusting the promises of God means resting in the promise of the gospel - that we are forgiven and put right with God by grace alone through faith alone in Christ alone (4:23-25).

For Discussion —

When you listen to Bible teaching, you should be listening with an ear to learn, but also an ear to share with others what you learn. Keep that in mind as you discuss today's message. How do you need to internalize this message so you could share this Good News with people who are confused about what makes a person right with God?

1. How does this passage teach us that faith is simply trusting in the promises of God?

2. Which of the illustrations used in the message—trusting in the word of a doctor, a lawyer, a friend resonates with you? What's a story from your life where you put your trust in a promise someone made to you? What makes it easy to trust someone? (Hint: they have proven themselves to be trustworthy)

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

3. Discuss what is meant by the statement—"Faith is not making something up in your imagination and trying really hard to believe that God will give you what you want. Why is this so? …What is biblical faith founded upon?

4. Why is it important to face the facts that sometimes challenge our faith rather than ignore them? Why is optimism—hoping everything will work out for the best—not the same thing as faith?

5. Talk about a time when not knowing how God would do something made trusting him more difficult?

6. How do we grow in our faith? (v.20)

See also*: Glossary - Romans

Romans TOC
(Table of Contents)

[Go to Index]
Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only
[Go to Top - TOC]

Fellowship Greenville, Jim Thompson (2017)
https://fellowshipgreenville.org/page/461?Item=1227

SERMON NOTES

SERIES: Romans: God's Power for Salvation

TITLE: The Peace of Justification

SCRIPTURE: Romans 5: 1-5

FG Romans
Sermon Series
<Prev Next>

See also*: Notes

The Roman Empire ruled the known world during the first century, and the Empire had its own language. Caesar called himself "lord" and "savior." Others called Caesar "son of God" and "king of kings." When Caesar won a battle, the announcement of his victory was called "gospel." For a Roman citizen, loyalty and allegiance to Caesar and his empire was called pistis, which is the Greek word the New Testament translates as "faith." And the banner over all of this is the Latin phrase Pax Romana, which means The Roman Peace. Rome's peace was peace by means of force and violence. However, the Hebrew view of peace was very different.

The Hebrew idea of shalom was the fabric of Eden. It's what Adam and Eve inhaled and exhaled as they walked with God in the garden. Shalom is about harmony, oneness, welfare, and potentiality–all under God's kind rule. The Roman view of peace needs war and violence, but the Hebrew view of peace is something that God hardwired into creation. However, in our experience, the peace that we were designed for is often so elusive. Relational peace seems just out of reach. Political peace is just a dream. Financial peace is evasive. Spiritual peace is only intermittent. So what do we do? How do we taste and experience the Eden–like peace God has designed us for? And how should true peace infiltrate every arena of life?

In Romans 5:1, Paul says that because we are justified by grace alone through faith alone in Christ alone, we now have peace with God. It's the new and unchanging status (or "standing" in 5:2) of our relationship with him. However, how Paul talks about the experience of this peace is unique. He says that we should boast. And this is strange because In the past two chapters, he has condemned boasting, but now he encourages it. Why and how?

Boasting is the act of expressing pride in something. It means to put confidence in a thing or vocalize the value that something has to you. In Romans 3 and 4, Paul downplays boasting because we don't bring anything to our own justification. But now, as we seek to live out of our justification and right relationship with God, he encourages boasting. This is why he says, "We boast (or 'rejoice') in the hope of the glory of God" (5:2). He then goes on to say that we should boast and rejoice in our sufferings (5:3). And this idea of boasting is how we are invited to experience peace with God and with others.

Boasting is the key that (un)locks the experience of true peace.

Meaning, if we do the wrong kind of boasting, we won't rightly understand and sense the peace that is available in Jesus. But, if we do the right kind of boasting - rejoicing in, delighting in, having humble confidence in the gospel–this right kind of boasting unlocks the door to rich and sweet experiences of God's peace in your life. And all of these things are ultimately true in and because of the gospel.

Paul writes in Galatians 6, "God forbid that I should boast except in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ." Meaning, the gospel is the supreme focal point of all Christian rejoicing and boasting, and boasting in anything else must serve our boasting in Jesus. Similarly, in Colossians 1, Paul writes that Jesus has "made peace through the blood of his cross." Jesus took Rome's peace through violence and crucifixion' and turned it upside down. He was enthroned as Lord and Savior and King of kings, not by means of force and oppression, but by taking all of our rebellion upon himself. He has won the battle over sin and death, and the announcement of his victory is called gospel. Now, to be a citizen of his kingdom, we owe him all of our loyalty and allegiance–all of our faith. And when we understand happened in the cross and resurrection, peace is ours. And when we boast supremely in Jesus, our experience of God's peace is tangible and transformative in our lives.

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

References:

Reviews: Roman Faith and Christian Faith: Pistis and Fides in the Early Roman Empire and Early Churches by Theresa Morgan (2015)

http://themelios.thegospelcoalition.org/review/roman-faith-and-christian-faith-pistis-and-fides-teresa-morgan

http://www.ancientjewreview.com/articles/2017/3/3/book-note-roman-faith-and-christian-faith-pistis-and-fides-in-the-early-roman-empire-and-early-churches

http://www.oxfordscholarship.com/view/10.1093/acprof:oso/9780198724148.001.0001/acprof-9780198724148

Christianity and the Roman Empire – Saylor [PDF]

https://www.saylor.org/site/wp-content/uploads/2012/10/HIST101-6.4.2-ChristianityAndTheRomanEmpire-FINAL1.pdf

Roman Imperial Ideology and the Early Pronouncement of the Gospel of King Jesus

https://theomusings.wordpress.com/2017/04/11/the-gospel-good-tidings-part-1/

Excerpt:

What is the gospel? How would the gospel have been understood in the Greco-Roman world? Why did the Apostolic writers choose to express their message in terminology like gospel, Lord, Christ, etc.? These questions are asked by many people that I know. They ask because they all desire resources or insights that will adequately inform their understanding of the Scriptures, the Gospel, Jesus, God, and the faith in which they participate. These inquiries are not confined to small circles, rather they are quite prevalent in many congregations and settings. Because of this, I hope to bring scholarly information to everyday people that will help inform and inspire them to study, engage, and wrestle with the Scriptures and their faith. In what follows, I will investigate the "gospel" and hopefully bring this magnificent message into a new light for those who do not necessarily have the time or energy to dig into these matters in a scholarly way.

To begin, the Gospel (εὐαγγέλιον, euaggelion; "good news" or "good tidings") has become normalized in Western Christianity so much so that the contextualized understanding of the word has seemed to be all but lost. The word "gospel" has a context that gives it meaning. Prior to the Apostolic tradition using the term gospel as connoting the message of Jesus Christ, the gospel was first found on the lips of Roman delegates (ἀπόστολο, apostolos; "sent ones").[1] These apostles, or "sent ones," were commissioned by the Roman Caesar (Καῖσαρ, Kaisar; "Caesar") to go to a conquered city and herald the gospel, good news, to the new subjects of Rome. The apostles would proclaim the good news that Caesar is lord (κύριος, kyrios; "Lord" or "King") over the land and now that you are his people, you will be provided safety and protection from Rome's enemies, live under the Pax Romana ("Roman Peace") provided by the Emperor's rule and reign, and your city will now be "Romanized."[2]

This announcement of the good news did not give the people a choice, per se. The royal pronouncement was simply that, an announcement of the way things were i.e. reality for the Roman people or newly conquered people. This announcement was a "good thing" in the eyes of the Romans heralding the message to the newly conquered people; however, the message of good news could have been taken as an oppressive message to those being conquered. One simply could not denounce this reality without committing treason. The gospel was a pronouncement of good tidings from the perspective of the Romans to a newly conquered people, with the expectation of the people living lives of fidelity (πίστις, pistis; "fidelity") to their new lord. [3] The gospel was simply the announcement of what was true about reality for the Roman people. If you were to ask someone in the Roman world what the good news was, they would point to Caesar's lordship and rule and the benefits that were derived from living under his rule and reign.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

While the details of this Roman gospel are compact, the context provided is enough for the keen reader to notice many parallels between the Roman gospel and the gospel expressed in the Apostolic literature. The context for the apostolic writers was the Roman proclamation of Caesar's rule and reign and the benefits derived from that rule. The early followers of Jesus hearing the gospel from the apostles or hearing it read in one of the four gospel accounts would have recognized the subversive, treacherous, and defiant language in their own gospel compared to the gospel of Caesar.[4] These comparative elements are what I will be diving into in the next couple blog posts to provide an understanding about the Gospel of Jesus Christ in the context of the Roman Empire.

To begin this assessment, I will provide a list of parallel words used by the Apostolic tradition and end by providing the Apostolic Tradition's Gospel of Jesus Christ. In the post to follow, I will first discuss the ways in which the gospel message is different from the Roman gospel. Secondly, I will provide a brief history that led to the Roman terminology being used as it was during the first century CE. Thirdly, I will engage the political nature of the gospel proclaimed by Jesus' apostles and the nature of "religion" in the ancient Roman Empire. Lastly, I will provide a contextualized understanding of the gospel as it was presented to various groups i.e. Jews, Greeks, Philosophers, etc.,,

See also*: Gospel of Jesus the Messiah (Christ)

Chart (Romans 5:1-2): Living Grace Day-By-Day

Romans TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Fellowship Greenville, Charlies Boyd (2017)
https://fellowshipgreenville.org/page/461?Item=1307

FG Romans
Sermon Series
<Prev Next>

SERMON NOTES

SERIES: Romans: God's Power for Salvation
TITLE: The Benefits of Justification
SCRIPTURE: Romans 5:1-11

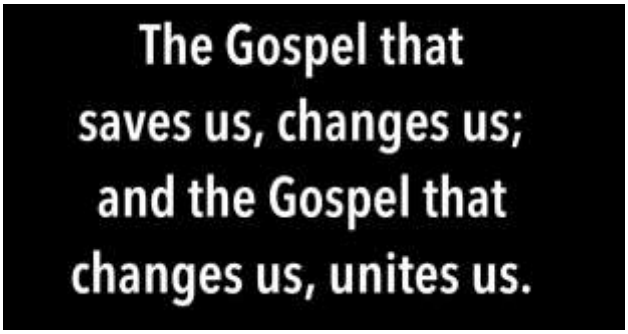
Hallmark Christmas movies are appealing in a weird sort of way. They're all very similar but different.

The greatest similarity in all of them is that they all center on the theme of "hope"—hope for love, hope for reunion, hope for the restoration of a relationship, hope for a better life in starting over. The movies are appealing because hope is what we need in this messed up, broken world.

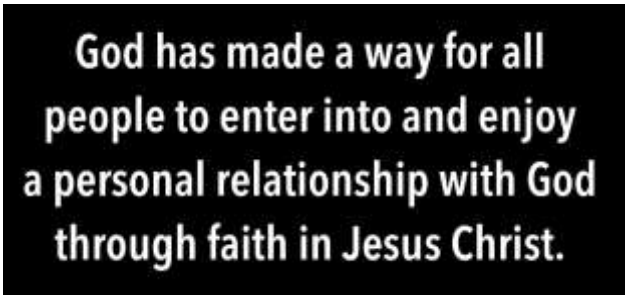
And it was what the people in Paul's day needed as well.

Greco-Roman cities were small, extremely crowded, filthy beyond imagining, disorderly, filled with strangers, and afflicted with frequent catastrophes–fires, plagues, conquests, and earthquakes…
Rome was dense with a people with an estimate of 302 persons per acre.

As a comparison, in Chicago today there are 21 inhabitants per acre, New York 37 per acre, Bombay is 183 person per acre, and Calcutta has 122 persons per acre.
- Rodney Stark, Cities of God



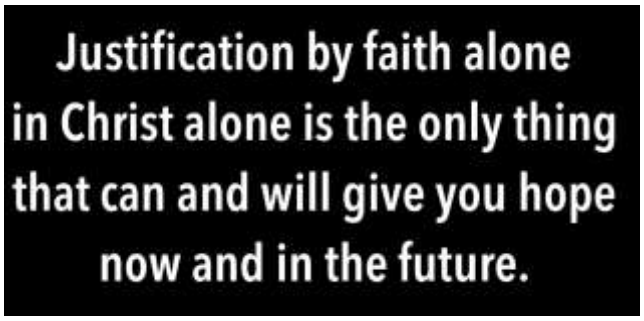
One thing is certain when human density is high: urgent problems of sanitation arise. The stench of these cities must have been overpowering for many miles–especially in warm weather. No wonder they were fond of incense.



Moreover, Greco-Roman cities must have been smothered with flies, mosquitoes, and other insets that flourish where there is much stagnant water and exposed filth… The constant companion of filth, insects, and crowding is disease. The Greco-Roman city was a pesthole of infectious disease.
- Rodney Stark, Cities of God

In Romans 1-4, Paul has made it clear that apart from Christ, we have no hope—we all stand guilty before God and we all need the Gospel. The main way Paul talks about the Gospel here is by highlighting the doctrine of justification by faith. When you place your faith in Christ for salvation, God not only forgives your sins, he also credits to you the very righteousness of Jesus—this is the doctrine of justification—God declares us to be right with himself by grace alone through faith alone in Christ alone. And at that moment, God also puts his Holy Spirit in us so that at the core of your being, you become a new person, part of God's new humanity—and that begins a lifelong process of transformation and life-change.

We have said that our Big Idea for Romans is this— The Gospel that saves us, changes us; and the Gospel that changes us, unities us.



Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

So as we come to Romans 5, we're turning a corner in the book—moving from God's power to save us to God's power to change us.

What Paul wants us to see is that the doctrine of justification is the only thing that will give us hope both now and in the future.

And there are two statements you need to understand in order to apply what Paul will teach us here in chapter 5.

1. Justification is the key to our transformation—the key to life change. Gospel fluency—preaching the Gospel to yourself in the midst of your daily life is primarily about reminding ourselves of how much God love us because he himself has justified us.

2. Justification is experiential—meaning, there are daily benefits to justification which is what Paul articulates for us here in chapter 5.

Benefit #1 — Unbreakable peace with God (5:1).

Benefit #2 — Unhindered access to God (5:2).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Benefit #3 — Unshakeable hope in our future with God, esp.in times of sorrow and suffering (5:3-4).

Suffering leads to perseverance. (5:3)

Perseverance leads to proven character. (5:4)

Proven character solidifies an ever-growing hope. (5:4)

Benefit #4 — Unfailing assurance in God's love for us (5:5-11).

God has given us his very own Spirit to reassure our hearts of his love. (5:5)

Preach the Gospel to yourself—God showed his love for me in that while I was a sinner, Christ died for me. How much more then will I know his love for me, now that God has justified me and reconciled me to himself, because Jesus lives for me.

Here's how Paul puts in Romans 8:34-39. "Christ Jesus is the one who died - more than that- who was raised - who is at the right hand of God, who indeed is interceding for us. Who shall separate us from the love of Christ? Shall tribulation, or distress, or persecution, or famine, or nakedness, or danger, or sword? No in all these things we are more than conquerors through him who loved us. For I am sure that neither death nor life, nor angels nor rulers, nor things present nor things to come, nor powers, nor height not depth, nor anything else in all creation, will be able to separate us from the love of God in Christ Jesus our Lord.

Justifying faith gives us hope that will never disappoint because it is rooted in God's great love for us.

See also*: Chart (Romans 5:1-2): Living Grace Day-By-Day (Next Page)

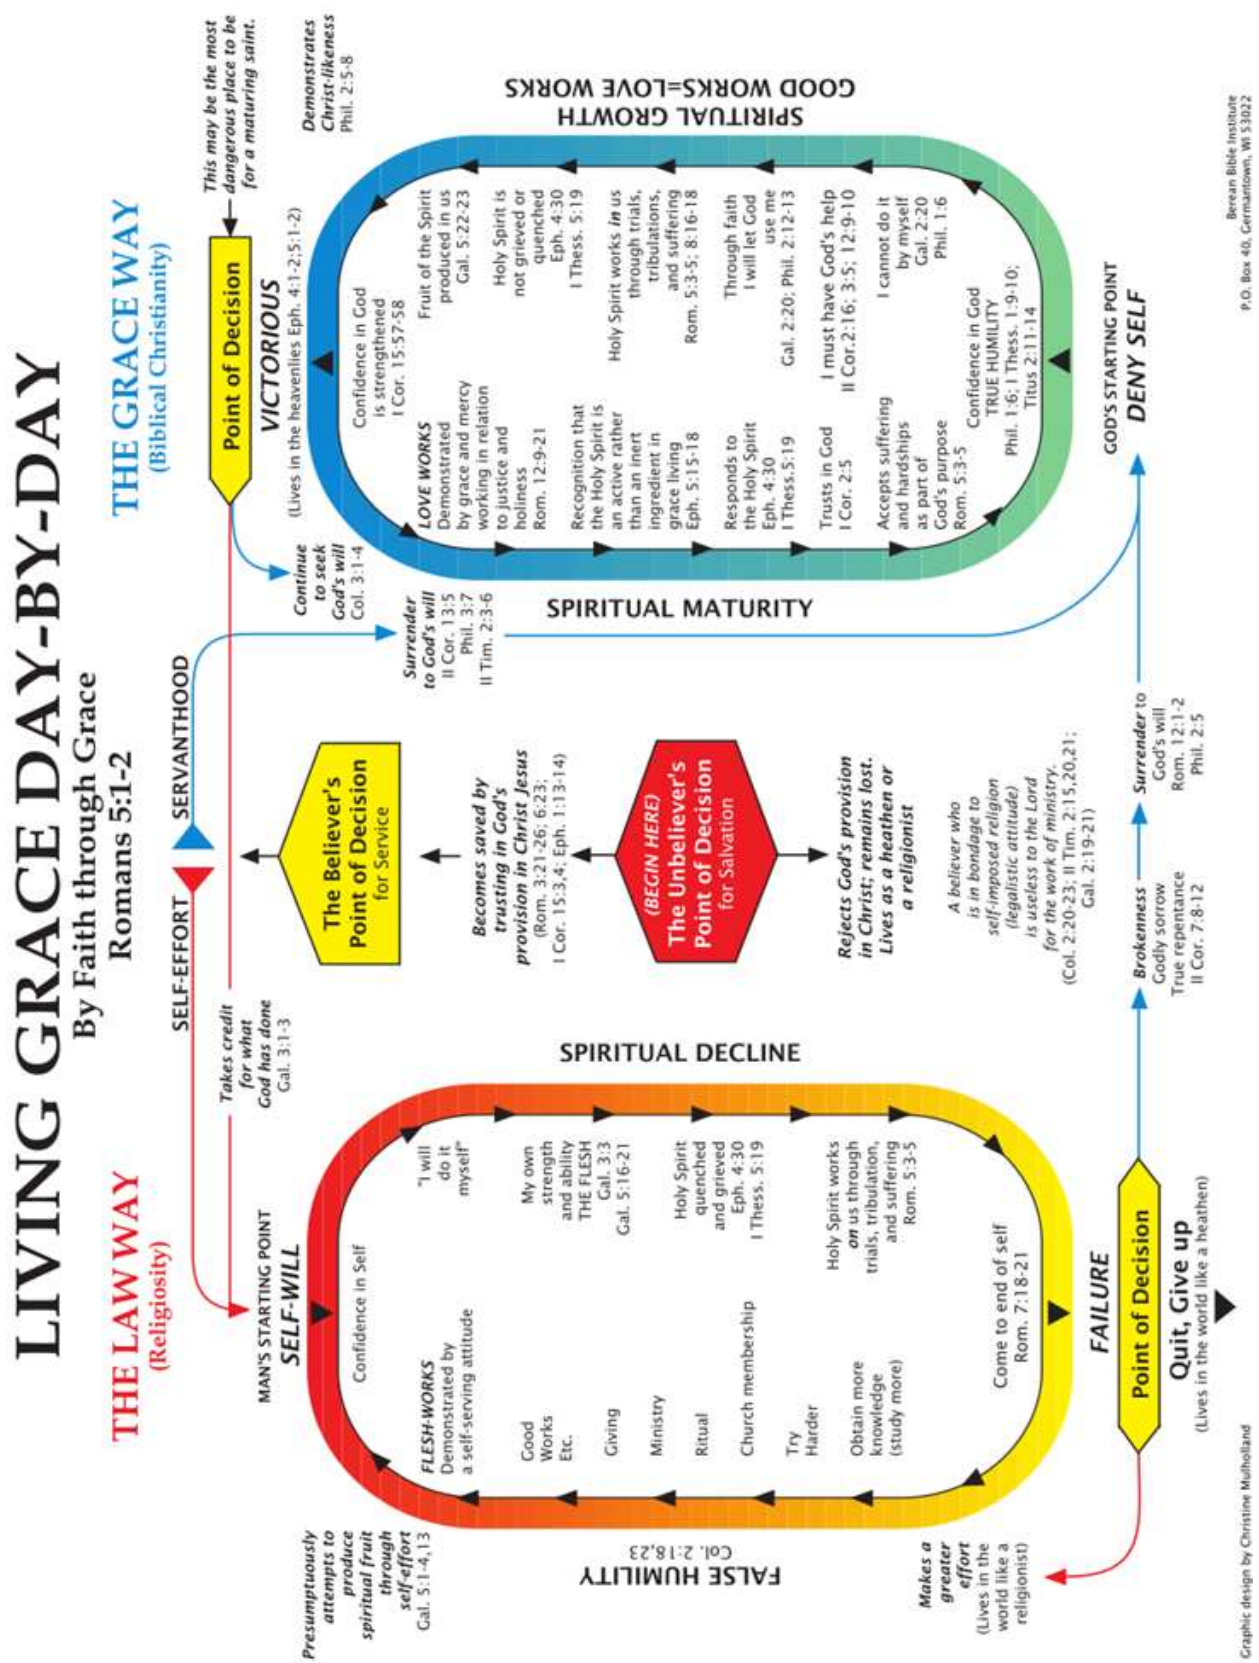
Romans TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Romans 5:1-2

Living Grace Day-By-Day



[Source: http://www.bereanbibleinstitute.org/resources.html]

For larger view see next page…

Romans TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Fellowship Greenville, Charlies Boyd (2017)
https://fellowshipgreenville.org/page/461?Item=1334

FG Romans
Sermon Series
<Prev Next>

SERMON NOTES

SERIES: Romans: God's Power for Salvation
TITLE: Natural Born Sinners
SCRIPTURE: Romans 5:6-21

Christmas is about God sending us a Savior. However, most people today believe that they can get to God without a Savior. Most people believe that if they try hard to be good and do good they can save themselves. Most people believe, "I'm good person who occasionally does bad things." But according to the Bible that's not true. The starting point to becoming a Christian and growing as a Christian is embracing the truth—You are not a good person who occasionally does bad things. The Bible says you are a sinner—a "bad" person who occasionally does good things.

Ouch! That's not something we like to hear, is it? We have a problem that runs very deep—and this may shock you—but—You are not a sinner because you sin; you're a sinner because you were born a sinner. You and I are natural born sinners. Not something Oprah would say is good for your self-esteem. But according the Bible, the starting point of understanding what God has done for you in Christ is understanding that you are a sinner who needs to be saved from your sin. This is what Romans 5:6-21 makes clear.

Read Romans 5:6-11— Paul says that we were born powerless (to save ourselves), ungodly, sinners, and enemies of God. However, God loves us anyway. Jesus taught that we are sinners loved by God. The two seem like that should oppose each other. But God says both are true. You are worse than you thought, but you are also more loved than you imagine. While we were weak, ungodly, sinful enemies of God, he showed us his great love for us by reconciling us to himself by faith alone in Christ alone.

Read through Romans 5:12-21...

Verses.12, 18-19, 21 set forth Paul's main idea in this passage. Through one man's sin–Adam's act of disobedience–sin and death passed to all people. Through one man–Jesus' sacrificial act of obedience on the cross–grace, righteousness, and life overflow to all who believe. In other words, the effect of what Adam did and what Christ did are similar in that one man's one act impacted many people.

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Verse 15-17 contrast Adam's sin and Christ's victory over sin. That is, the result of Adam's sin is not like the result of Christ's obedience. Christ's one act of obedience has a far greater result than the devastating results of Adam's one sin. If Adam's sin messed everything up, how much more, does Christ's obedience undo all the mess that Adam's sin set in motion. Because of Adam's sin, death reigned. Because of Christ's righteousness, WE reign—see the difference?

The question in the mind of some of Paul's readers was this— "But how could Jesus' one sacrificial action on the cross undo the magnitude of Adam's sin?" The law has to play some part in making us right and keeping us right with God, doesn't it?" Paul says, "No."

Verses 13-14 , 20 talks about how all this relates to the law. In v.20 Paul says the law is of no help in living the new life Jesus secured for us through his death on the cross. The law only tells us what sin is and how far reaching sin and death really are. But the law has no power to help us live a righteous life free from sin's power. In chapters 6,7,8 Paul will flesh out what it means to live out this reality that we reign in life.

Our justification by faith in Christ not only removes the penalty of our sin so we have the hope of future glory (5:2), but even more, justification is the key to our transformation. On the cross, Jesus paid the penalty of our sin, but he also broke the power of sin over our lives. That is why Paul can say, in Adam death reigned. In Christ grace reigns and that means we reign in life. We are no longer slaves to sin.

ROMANS 5:12-21	ADAM	CHRIST
	THROUGH ONE TRESPASS	THROUGH ONE ACT OF RIGHTEOUSNESS
V. 15	MANY DIED	MANY LIVE
V. 16	CONDEMNATION	JUSTIFICATION
V. 17	DEATH REIGNED	WE REIGN
V. 19	MANY MADE SINNERS	MANY MADE RIGHTEOUS
V. 20	SIN INCREASED	GRACE OVERFLOWS EVEN MORE

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Verse	Adam	Christ
Romans 5:12-21	Through one man's trespass	Through one act of righteousness
v.15	many died	many live
v.16	condemnation	justification
v.17	death reigned	we reign
v.19	many made sinners	many made righteous
v.20	sin increased	grace overflows even more

Romans TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Romans 5:1-21

http://www.fbccs.org/resources/studyguides/romans_sg05.htm

Excerpt:

"The word translated "increased all the more" (verse 20) is scarcely translatable in few words. Super-increased is a possibility, or super-abounded. It pictures unending, overflowing grace – a grace that knows no bounds. Grace is always more abundant than sin" -Kent Hughes

Read the quote from John Stott [below] and discuss it with your group, or summarize its main points if you're studying alone…

Moved by the perfection of his holy love, God in Christ substituted himself for us sinners. That is the heart of the cross of Christ. It leads us to turn now from the event to its consequences, from what happened on the cross to what was achieved by it. Why did God take our place and bear our sin? What did he accomplish by his self-sacrifice, his self-substitution?

It would be hard to exaggerate the magnitude of the changes which have taken place as a result of the cross, both in God and in us, especially in God's dealings with us and in our relations with him. Truly, when Christ died and was raised from death, and a new day dawned, a new age began.

This new day is the day of salvation (2 Cor. 6:2), and the blessings of such a great salvation (Heb. 2:3) are so richly diverse that they cannot be neatly defined. Several pictures are needed to portray them. Just as the church of Christ is presented in Scripture as his bride and his body, the sheep of God's flock and the branches of his vine, his new humanity, his household or family, the temple of the Holy Spirit and the pillar and buttress of the truth, so the salvation of Christ is illustrated by the vivid imagery of terms like propitiation, redemption, justification and reconciliation.

They are not alternative explanations of the cross, providing us with a range to choose from, but complementary to one another, each contributing a vital part to the whole. As for the imagery, propitiation introduces us to rituals at a shrine, redemption to transactions in a market-place, justification to proceedings in a lawcourt, and reconciliation to experiences in a home or family. My contention is that substitution is not a further theory or image to be set alongside the others, but rather the foundation of them all, without which each lacks cogency. If God in Christ did not die in our place, there could be neither propitiation, nor redemption, nor justification, nor reconciliation.

There is logic in the order in which we are reviewing these great words which describe the achievement of the cross. Propitiation inevitably comes first, because until the wrath of God is appeased (that is, until his love has found a way to avert his anger), there can be no salvation for human beings at all. Next, when we are ready to understand the meaning of salvation, we begin negatively with redemption, meaning our rescue at the high price of Christ's blood from the grim captivity of sin and guilt. Justification is its positive counterpart. True, some justification is the opposite of condemnation (e.g. Rom. 5:18; 8:34), and both are verdicts of a judge who pronounces the accused either guilty or not guilty. To reconcile means to restore a relationship, to renew a friendship. So an original relationship is presupposed which, having been broken, has been recovered by Christ.

We have examined four of the principal New Testament images of salvation, taken from the shrine, the market, the lawcourt and the home. Their pictorial nature makes it impossible to integrate them neatly with one another. Temple sacrifices and legal verdicts, the slave in the market and the child in the home all clearly belong to different worlds. Nevertheless, certain themes emerge from all four images. First, each highlights a different aspect of our human need. Propitiation underscores the wrath of God upon us, redemption our captivity to sin, justification our guilt, and reconciliation our enmity against God and alienation from him. These metaphors do not flatter us. They expose the magnitude of our need.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Secondly, all four images emphasize that the saving initiative was taken by God in his love. It is he who has propitiated his own wrath, redeemed us from our miserable bondage, declared us righteous in his sight, and reconciled us to himself Relevant texts leave us in not doubt about this: God ... loved us, and sent his Son to be the propitiation for our sins. God has come and has redeemed his people. It is God who justifies. God ... reconciled us to himself through Christ.

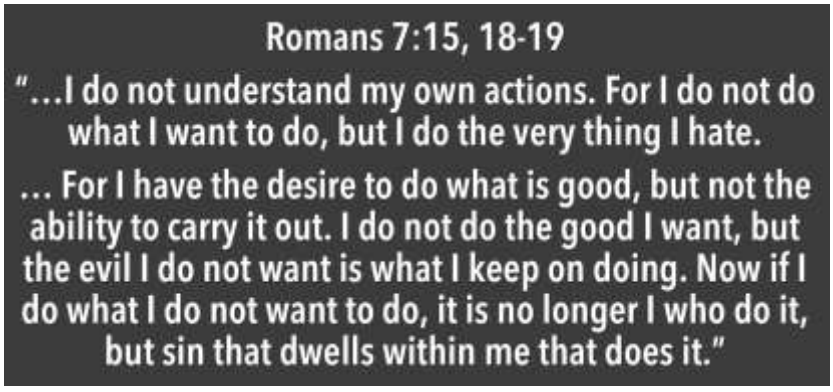
Thirdly, all four images plainly teach that God's saving work was achieved through the blood shedding, that is, the substitutionary sacrifice of Christ. With regard to the blood of Christ the texts are again unequivocal. God presented him as a propitiatory sacrifice, through faith in his blood. In him we have redemption through his blood. We have now been justified by his blood. You who once were far away have been brought near (ie. reconciled) through the blood of Christ. Since Christ's blood is a symbol of is life laid down in violent death, it is also plain in each of the four images that he died in our place as our substitute. The death of Jesus was the atoning sacrifice because of which God averted his wrath from us, the ransom-price by which we have been redeemed, the condemnation of the innocent that the guilty might be justified, and the sinless One being made sin for us.

from The Cross of Christ,
pp. 167,168,182,192, 202,
by John R. W. Stott

Romans TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Fellowship Greenville, Charlies Boyd (2018)
https://fellowshipgreenville.org/page/461?Item=1342



FG Romans
Sermon Series
<Prev Next>

SERIES: Romans: God's Power for Salvation
TITLE: Dead to Sin
SCRIPTURE: Romans 6:1-14

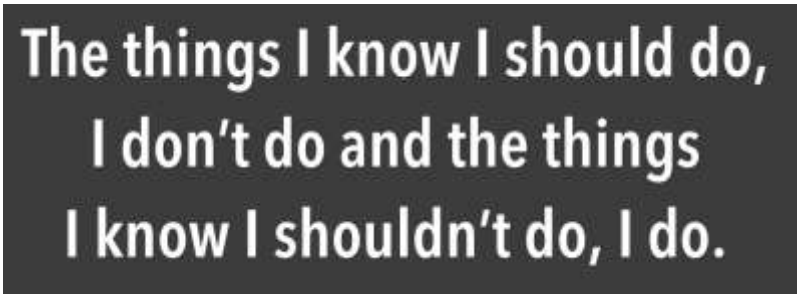
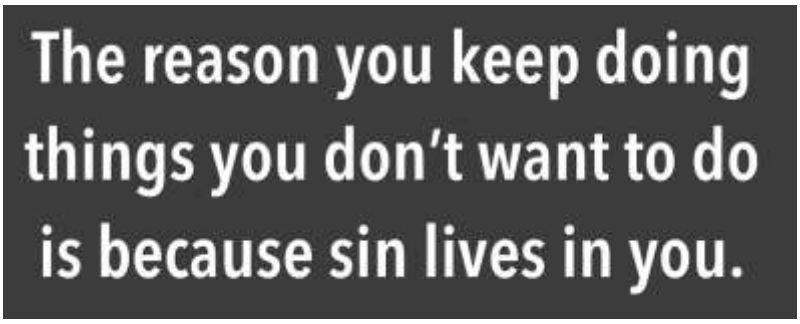
In the first five and a half chapters of the book Romans (1:1-5:11), the apostle Paul clearly and logically lays out what it means to become a Christian. He says that we have been forgiven of our sins and that we have been "justified"— put into a right relationship with God — by grace alone through faith alone in Christ alone. He says, religious laws and rules and rituals play no part in making us right with God (cf 3:21-24).



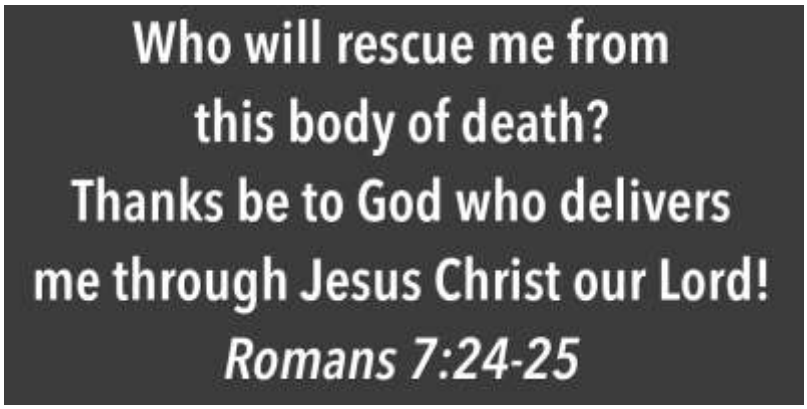
Beginning in 5:12 and going through 8:39, Paul discusses the fact that not only have we been delivered from the penalty of sin (justification), but also, we've been delivered from the power of sin. The Bible calls this sanctification (cf. 6:19, 22). The question is: How do we live everyday of our lives as the new person God has made us to be? Romans 6-8 give us the answer to that question. And, at least at first, it's a complicated and confusing answer. The fact is — we all know the struggle Paul talks about in Romans 7:15, 18-19 (READ).



There are things we know we shouldn't do, but we do them anyway. There are things we know we should do that we don't do. But, if God has made me new, then why do I do the things I do?

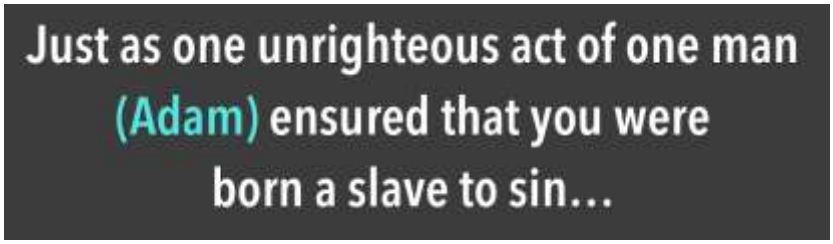
Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Why this struggle? And why is it so hard to overcome?



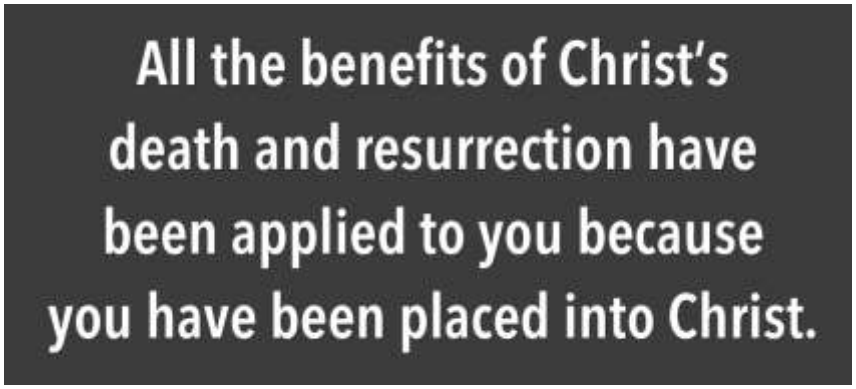
The reason we keep doing things we don't want to do is because sin lives in us (5:12-21).

Through Adam's one sin, sin and death entered the world and spread to all people so that sin lives in every one of us. This is the first part of Paul's explanation of why we do things we know we shouldn't do and why we don't do things we know we should do. It's because we were born in Adam and sin lives in us.



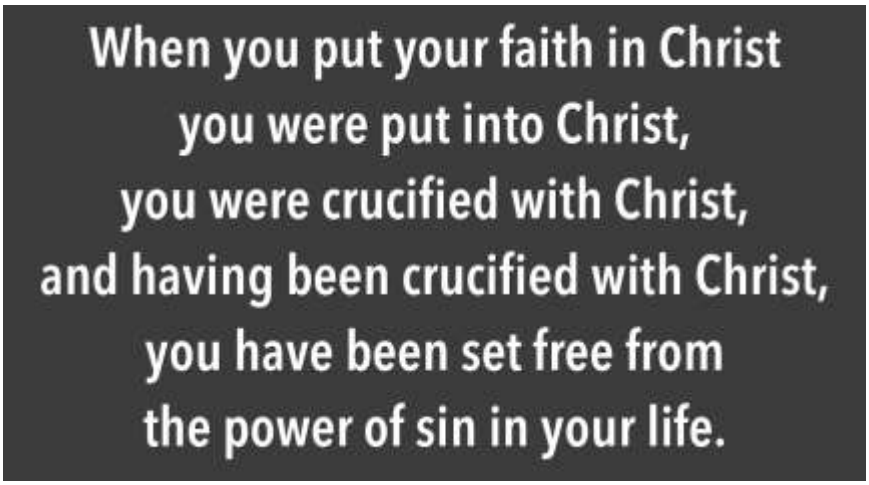
Our rescue from this problem does not come from a what, but from a who. We are rescued "through Jesus Christ our Lord" (Rom 7:24-25).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

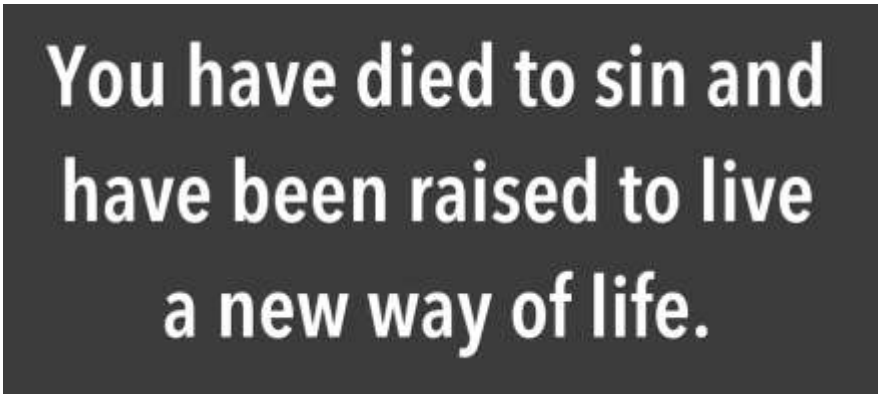


How so?

Just as one unrighteous act of one man (Adam) ensured that you were born a slave to sin, so also one righteous act of one man (Jesus) frees you from the power of sin.



Romans 6:1-14

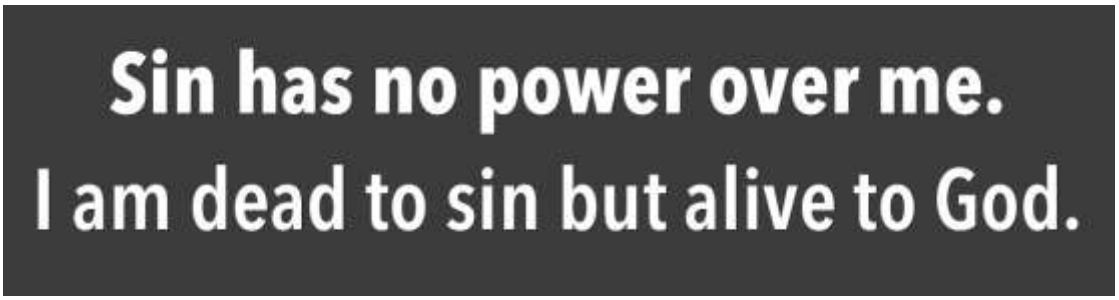


All the benefits of Christ's death and resurrection have been applied to you because you have been placed into Christ (6:1-4). When you became a Christian, you were taken out of Adam and baptized (put/placed) into Christ. What was true of Adam was true of you. You were condemned, guilty, unrighteous, a slave of sin. In Christ, what is true of Christ is true of you: you are free from sin.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

When you put your faith in Christ you were put into Christ — you were crucified with Christ — and having been crucified with Christ, you have been set free from the power of sin in your life (6:5-6).

You have died to sin and been raised to live a new way of life (6:7-10).



However, life change is not automatic — it's a process of learning to live everyday out of your new identity in Christ (6:11-14). (We will come back to this next week.)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

For now and for your homework assignment this week — "Consider" this — train yourself to begin thinking this way — "Sin has no power over me." "I am dead to sin, but alive to God."

"The Gospel breaks the power of cancelled sin and sets the prisoner free" from the power of sin, so we are empowered to live a new way of life.

Romans TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Romans 6:1-14

http://www.fbccs.org/resources/studyguides/romans_sg06.htm

Excerpt:

Chart below (taken from Freedom from Guilt, by Bruce Narramore & Bill Counts…

	LAW	GRACE
Eternal acceptance	Earned by works	A gift based on Christ's work
Daily Blessings	Repeatedly earned by our works	Given as gifts based on Christ's work, and as a natural consequence of following Biblical teachings
What God does when we fail	No forgiveness; immediate or eventual punishment. (Bad circumstances are often interpreted as "paybacks" from God.)	Forgives us because of Christ; relationship is unchanged. (He may allow negative consequences as a form of discipline)
Motivation	Heavily based on fear	Based on love & gratitude
Source of power	Our own efforts	The Holy Spirit strengthening us
Result	Condemnation & death	Salvation & life

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Fellowship Greenville, Charlies Boyd (2018)
https://fellowshipgreenville.org/page/461?Item=1358

FG Romans
Sermon Series
<Prev Next>

SERIES: Romans: God's Power for Salvation
TITLE: Set Free from Sin
SCRIPTURE: Romans 6:11-23

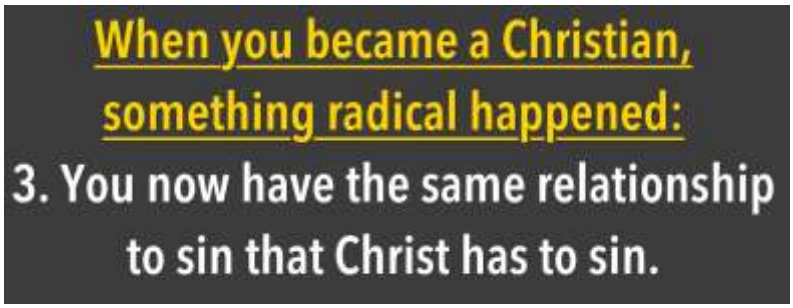
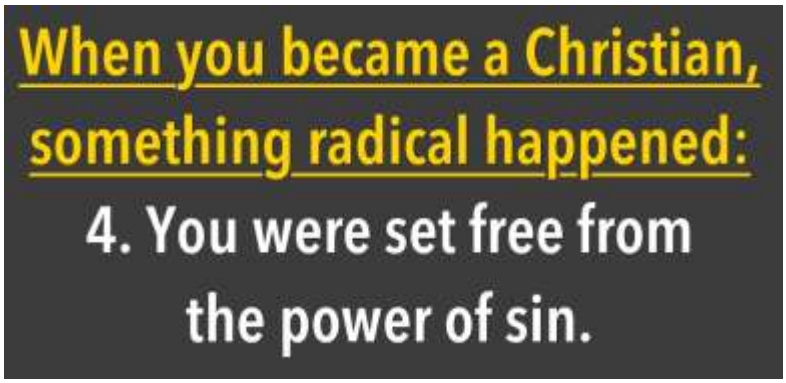
The Bible says that when you became a Christian something radical happened to you.

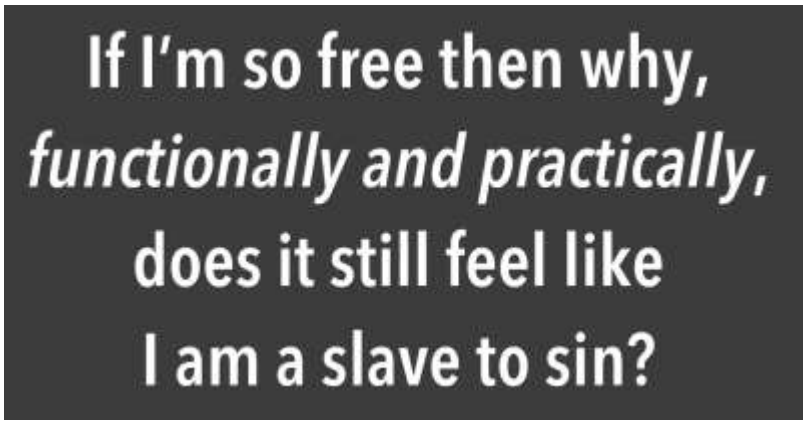


First of all, you were taken out of Adam and placed into Christ (Rom 5:12-21).

Second, you became a brand-new person with a brand-new kind of life.

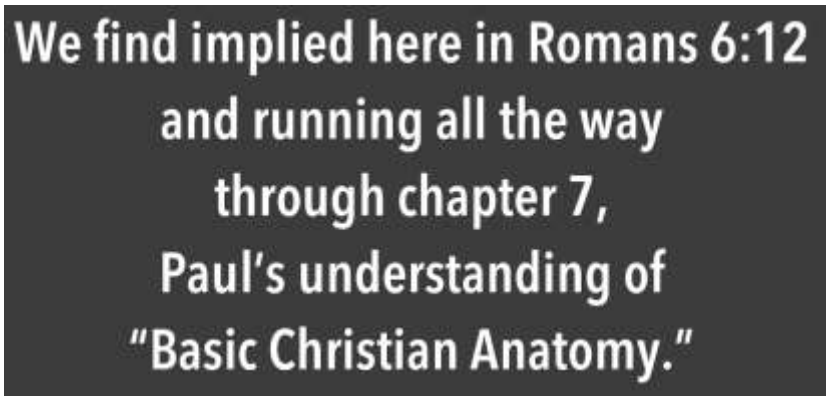


Third, you now have the same relationship to sin that Christ has to sin.

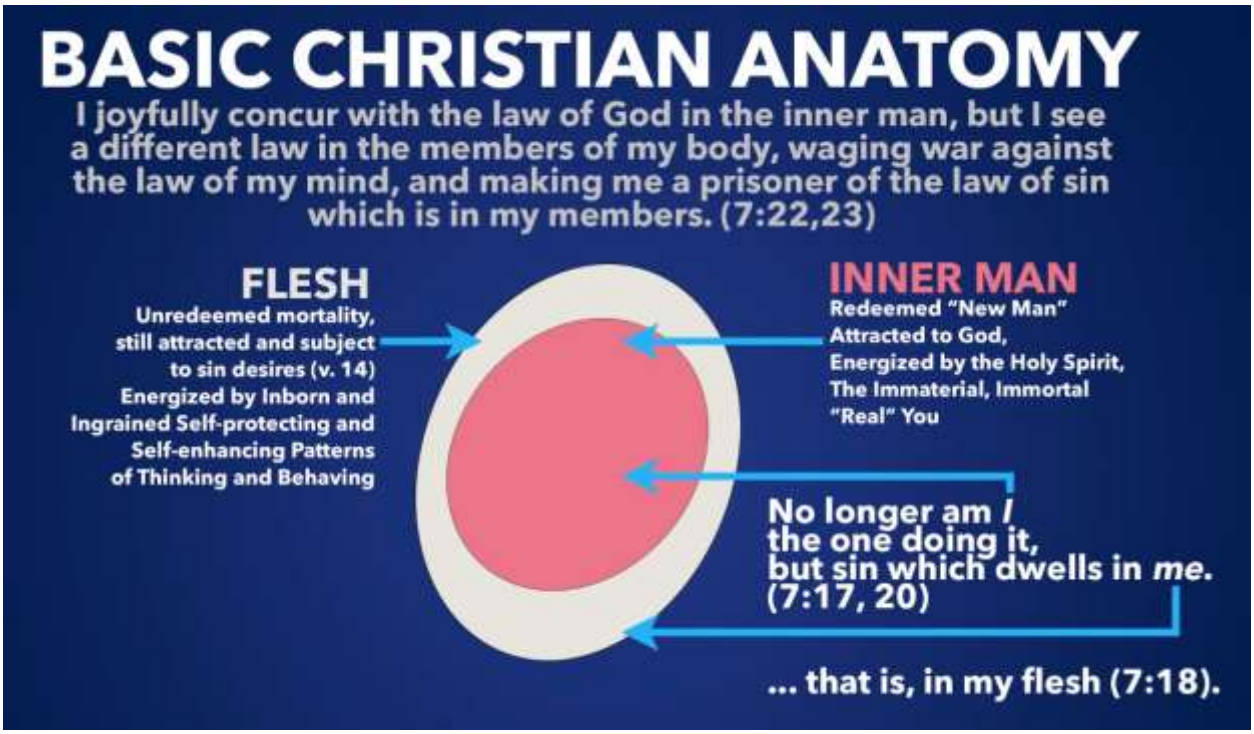


That means, finally, you were set free from the power of sin.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



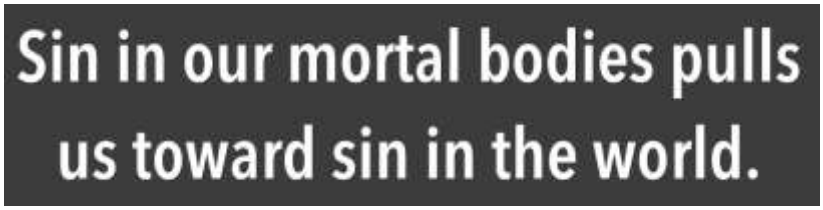
But the idea that we are "set free from the power of sin" is hard to accept when we still struggle so much with sin, isn't it? The question is, "If I'm so free then why, functionally and practically, does it still feel like I'm a slave to sin?"



And that's the question Paul addresses in Romans 6 and 7.

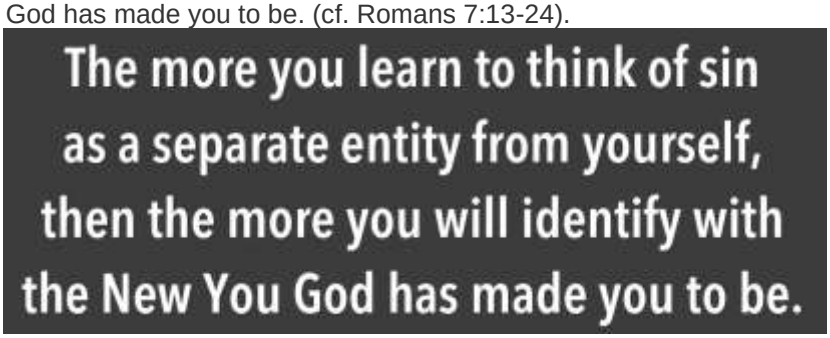
We find implied here in Romans 6:12 and running all through chapter 7, Paul's understanding of "Basic Christian Anatomy."

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



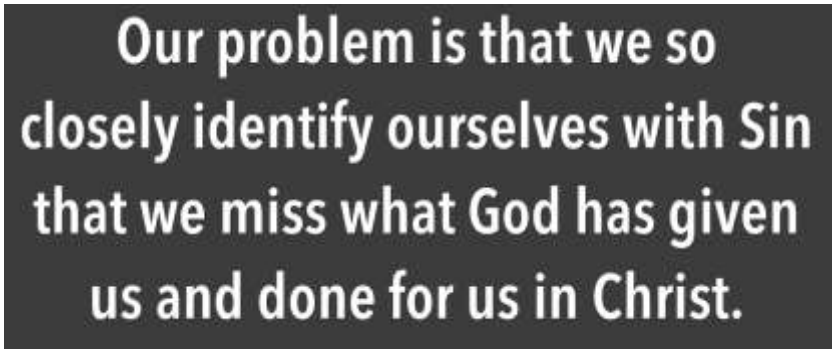
He says we are two-part people—physical body and inner, spiritual self.

Sin resides in your mortal body.

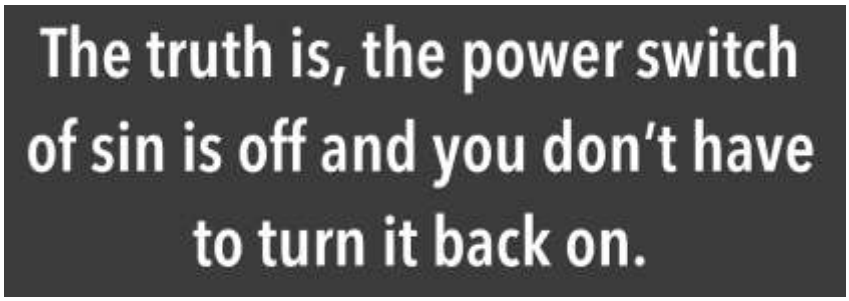


And, it is sin in our mortal bodies that pulls us toward sin in the world.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

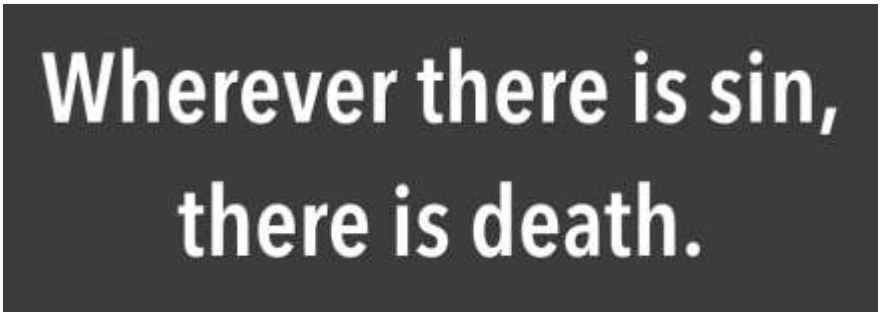


The more you learn to think of sin as a separate entity from yourself then the more you will identify with the New You God has made you to be. (cf. Romans 7:13-24).

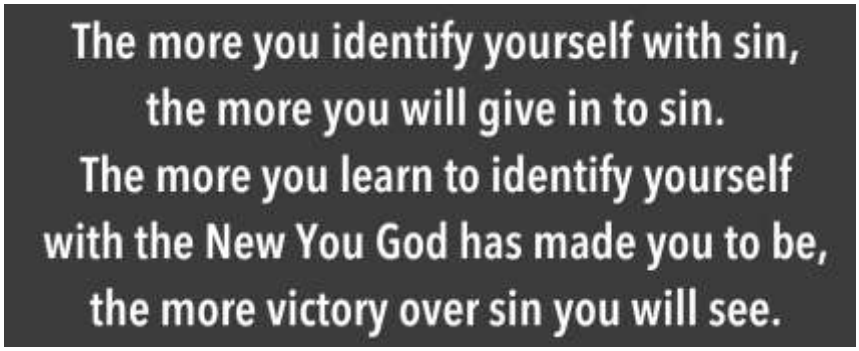


Sin is not you, and you are not sin. You are not your body. Your body houses you.

Our problem is that we so closely identify ourselves with Sin that we miss what God has given us and done for us in Christ.



The truth is, the power switch of sin has been turned off, and you don't have to turn it back on.



To turn "sin" on is to invite death into your emotional, relational, and spiritual life.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The more you identify yourself with sin, the more you will give in to sin. The more you learn to identify yourself with the New You God has made you to be, the more victory over sin you will see.

Two "Take-Aways"

- Obsess over the truth in the passage, speak the truth out loud.

- Pick a part of your body that keeps tripping you up and present it to God's control every day.

Remember, you are not the person you used to be, so you don't have to live the way you used to live.

Romans TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Romans 6:15-23

http://www.fbccs.org/resources/studyguides/romans_sg07.htm

Excerpt:

Here's what happens: God identifies all believers with Christ, not in some mystical or theoretical way, but by changing our legal relationships. Before our conversion, we were obligated to obey the sinful impulses of our fallen race. Even when we became tired of sin and resolved to change, the most we could do was rearrange our lives, but we could not change on the inside.

God has done what we could not do. He has given us a new nature, and the personal presence and power of the Holy Spirit so that we can say No to our old self nature.

To picture what God has done, think of yourself as a tenant in an apartment house. The landlord is making your life miserable and charges exorbitant rent. He mistreats you, barges into your apartment, wrecks the furniture, and then blames you for it. One day a new owner buys the apartment complex. You now have a kind landlord who invites you to live in the apartment rent-free. You are relieved, grateful, and looking forward to a peaceful future.

A few hours later there is a knock on the door. To your amazement, here is your old landlord, looking as mean and demanding as ever. He threatens you, reminding you that you have rented from him for many years and are obligated to obey him.

What will you do? To resist him on your own is useless--he's more powerful than you are. Your best approach is to remind him you are now under a different management; he'll have to take up your case with the new landlord.

How much obligation do you have to your old landlord? Precisely as much as does a corpse buried in the cemetery down the street. Your former landlord has no more right to demand a payment from you than he does from those whose names appear in the obituary column. That's why Paul exhorted us, "Even so consider yourselves to be dead to sin, but alive to God in Christ Jesus' (Rom. 6:11). Your authority to say no to temptation is God-given.

Although before our conversion we were duty-bound to serve our inherited sin nature, this does not mean that everything we did was evil. Most people are able to control their desires, and are capable of compassion and decency.

What it does mean is that we were never free from the futility of unsatisfied desires and frustrated passions. Pride, covetousness, and sensuality were our motivational drives. As believers purchased by Christ at high cost, our allegiance is now to Him. By the Holy Spirit, He has given us the power to say Yes to a new life.

How do you apply this knowledge when you want to break a specific habit? First, you must clearly see that legally in Christ you are already dead to your sinful passions. This is a point many people resist. They think, 'I've got to become dead; I've got to pray that God will crucify me so that I will be alive in Christ.' But they are wrong. Being dead to sin is not something which God promises you; it is not an act you beg Him to do. He simply declares it as a fact--already accomplished. Your failures and sins cannot change what God has said. Just because you get talked into obeying your old landlord doesn't changes the fact of new management. It does mean that you forgot you could confidently say No to his extortion schemes.

Let's say, for example, that you are a believer who lives with fear--perhaps a fear of people, cancer, or loneliness. Then recognize those fears as a bill from your old landlord. Remember that you do not have to listen to him--much less do what he suggests. Take the matter up with your new Manager. You are no longer duty-bound to those former relationships.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Second, you must admit the need for faith in your daily life. Your identification with Christ is not something which can be proved empirically, it's not like being able to see with you own eyes that the sun is shining. And even if it could be proven by our experience, many of us would be in trouble. An honest look at our lives hardly supports the idea that we are dead to sin and alive to God. But once we understand, with the Holy Spirit's help, that our ties with sin have already been broken, we begin to see that God has not deceived us. When we shift our attention to the completed work of the Cross and insist on our privileges, our old self surrenders to God's authority. Through faith and faith alone we personalize our victory.

Let me add that your freedom from sin is never automatic. Every inch is contested. No one ever falls into maturity, even though you are already positionally complete in Christ. One danger of reading a book like this is that you may tend to look for formulas for a new spiritual technique. But there is no substitute for waiting before God, reading His Word, and then obeying the truth He has revealed.

The Christ life is a growing relationship. Applying the Cross to your life is not something you do once and for all. Nor is it sufficient to do it every week or even once a day. It is a moment by moment, daily process. As you develop sensitivity to the Holy Spirit's work in your life, you will find that saying No to the flesh and Yes to Christ will become a way of life.

From "How to Say No to a Stubborn Habit", pp. 63-65, by Erwin Lutzer

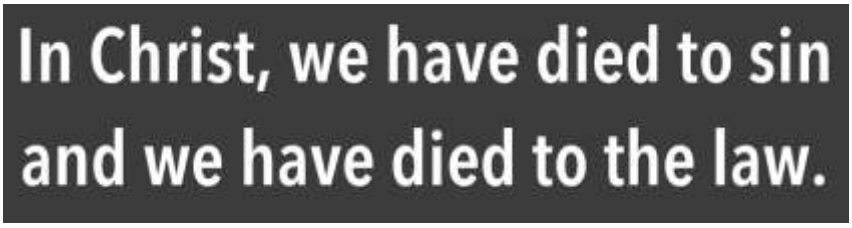
Romans TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Fellowship Greenville, Charlies Boyd (2018)
https://fellowshipgreenville.org/page/461?Item=1363



FG Romans
Sermon Series
<Prev Next>

SERIES: Romans: God's Power for Salvation
TITLE: Our Ongoing Struggle with Sin
SCRIPTURE: Romans 7:1-25

Religion is our attempt to connect with God by doing good things and avoiding bad things. Generally, that involves obeying a bunch of rules. The problem with religion is that we're not very good rule-keepers. Many of religious people live with the uneasy feeling—"I don't know where I stand with God. I don't think God is very happy with me." We're caught in this struggle of wanting to do right, but never being able to consistently pull it off. As a result, we live more under the shadow of condemnation than in the light of God's love.

Romans 7 is about our ongoing struggle with sin. Put simply, it tells us that sin is the problem and Jesus is the answer. In this chapter, Paul is specifically addressing Jewish Christians who believe that all non-Jewish believers must obey God's rules set forth in the Law of Moses in order to keep themselves right with God. Paul says, "No!" That's religion. That's not Christianity. He says, "In Christ, we have died to sin and therefore, we have died to the Law."

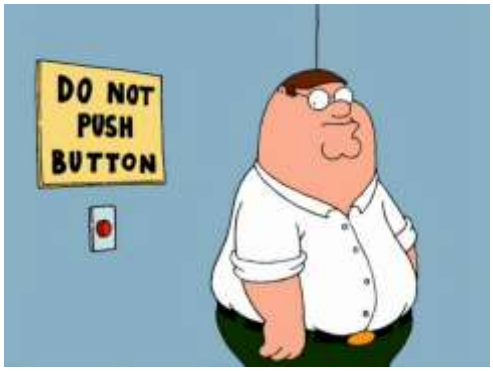
And that raises questions in the minds of those Jewish believers—something like —"Okay Paul if we're no longer under law but under grace, as you say, then does that mean the law is bad? Isn't obeying God's rules essential for us to become the people God wants us to be? Again, Paul says, "No." In verses 1-6 he uses the relationship between a wife and her husband to illustrate how a believer's relationship to the law has changed.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

In Romans 7:6 he explains, “By dying to what once bound us—the law—we have been released from the law so that we may serve in the new way of the Spirit, and not in the old way of the written code.” That is the Christian life—we are no longer under law as a way of keeping ourselves right with God. We are now defined by life in the Spirit.

Religion is about trying hard to live by laws and lists of rules. Christianity is about living in a new kind of relationship with God by the power of the Holy Spirit. And he goes on to unpack verse 6 in the rest of Romans 7 and the first part of chapter 8. But Paul’s main task in Romans 7 is to convince those Jewish believers that the law can in no way make us or keep us right with God. He begins by telling us why the law is “holy, righteous, and good (v12).



Three reasons why the law is good (7:7-13).

1. The law defines sin for us.
2. The law exposes sin in us.
3. The law stimulates sin in us.

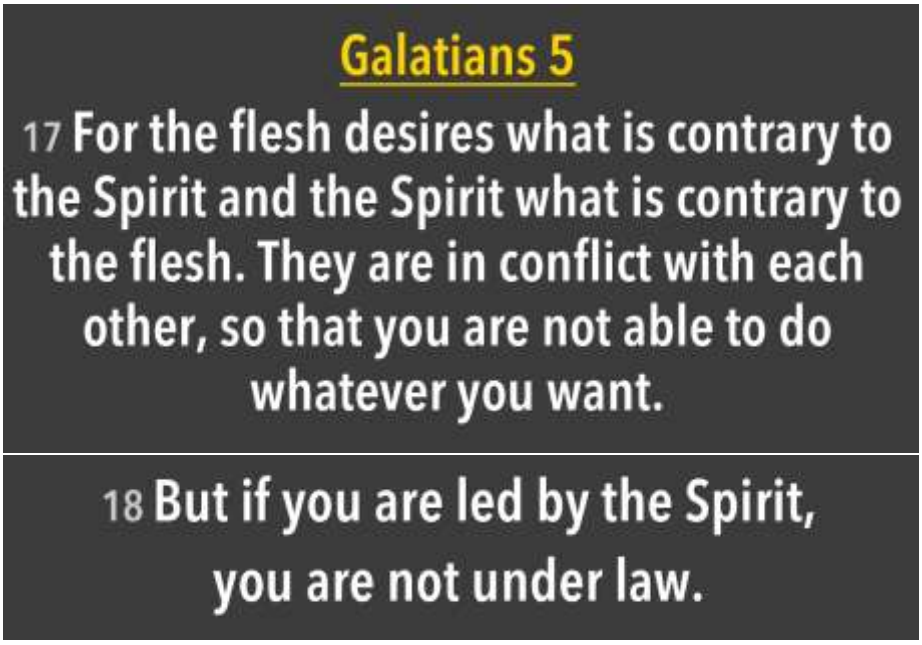
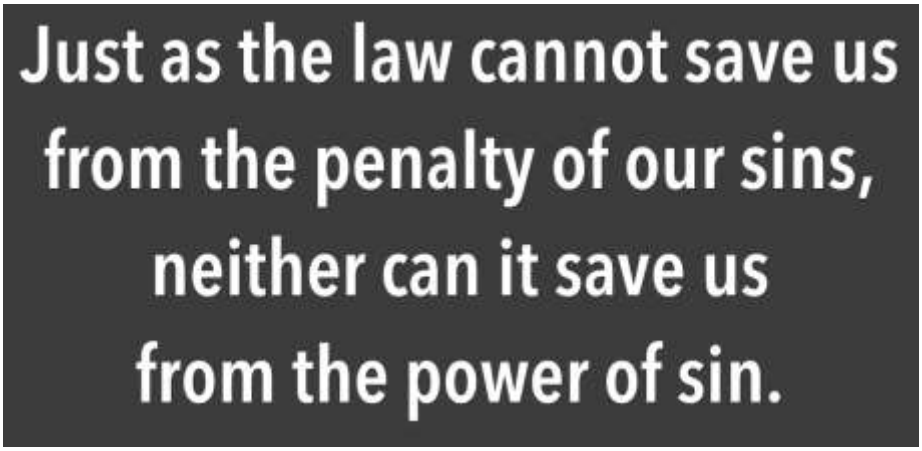
 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

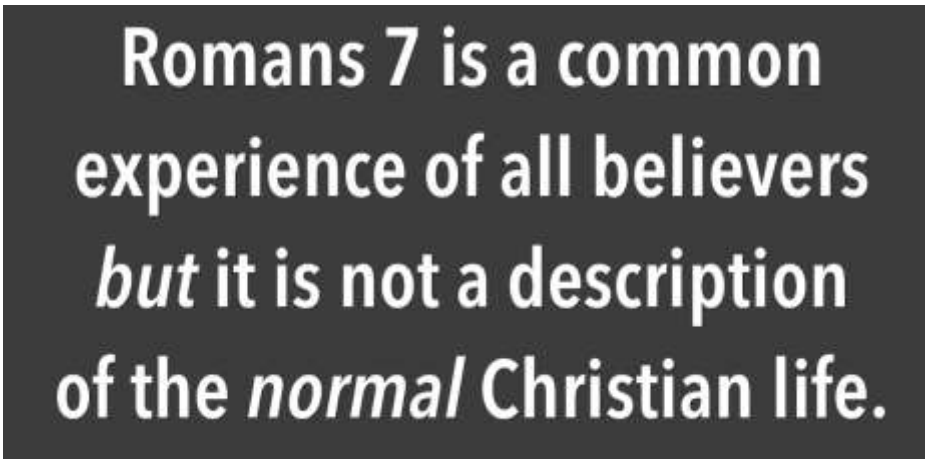


In verses 14-25, Paul's going to unpack why people who have been made new in Christ still struggle with sin and why obeying more rules won't fix the problem. (cf Gal 5:17-18). First, he distinguishes between his "new, innermost self" and his mortal body.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



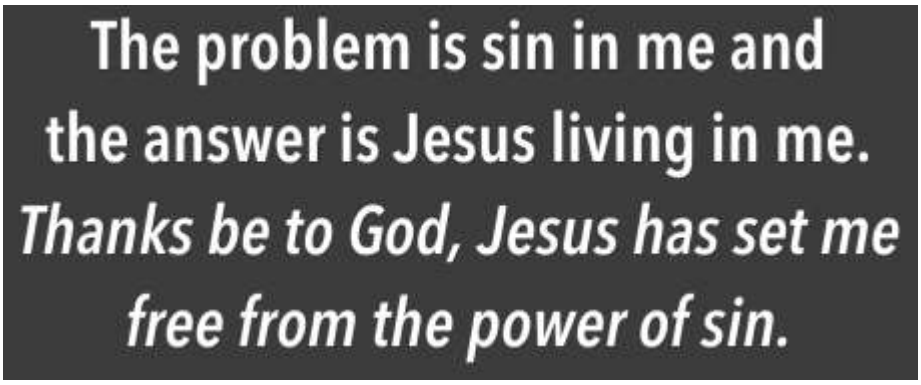
He sees himself as a 2-part person. He also talks about 2 “laws” at work in his life–”the law of sin and death”(7:21-23, 25) and “the law of the Spirit of life (8:2). This, he says, is the source of our ongoing struggle with sin.



Basically, he’s saying this: If you try to deal with your struggle with sin by trying harder to obey more rules, you will not weaken the pull of sin in your flesh, you will only strengthen it, and you’ll make yourself miserable in the process. He said, “Just as the law cannot save us from the penalty of our sins, neither can it save us from the power of sin. The same Gospel that saves us, changes us—not the law!

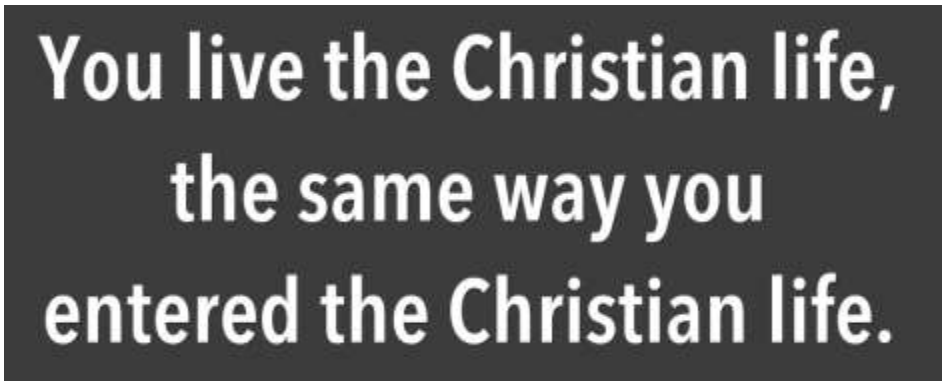
 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Romans 7 is a common experience of all believers, but it is not a description of the “normal Christian life.”



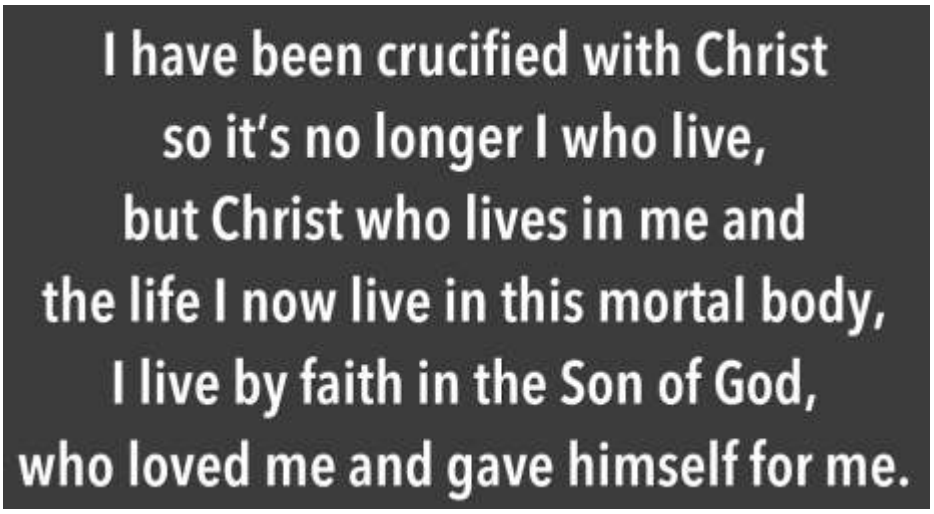
It tells us how trying harder to obey more rules only makes our struggle worse.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



The problem is sin in me and the answer is Jesus living in me.

Thanks be to God, Jesus has set me from the power of sin.



The starting point for living in “the new way of the Spirit” is understanding that Jesus lives in you so he can live his life through you.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

You live the Christian life the same way you entered the Christian life. (cf Gal 2:20):

When you wake up every morning, pray—Thanks be to God! Sin has no power over me. Jesus, you have set me free, today, live your life through me. When you drift into Romans 7, say— Thanks be to God! Sin has no power over me. Jesus you have set me free, today, live your life through me.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

What is the "flesh"?

"Apart from God, humanity is characterized by a complex web of thoughts, desires, values, and actions that are in opposition to God's intended pattern for us.

In both Testaments, "flesh" is a complex word with many meanings. The NT emphasizes humanity's moral inadequacy. When they are isolated from God, human beings are energized by evil desires and guided by perceptions that distort God's will and His nature. The word "flesh" reminds us that we are caught in the grip of sin.

God does not free us now from the flesh. Instead, he provides a source of power that will release us from the domination of the flesh. Jesus The Holy Spirit lives within us, and He is the source of new desires and a new perspective."

Larry Richards,
Expository Dictionary of Bible Word

See also*: Old Man and the Flesh

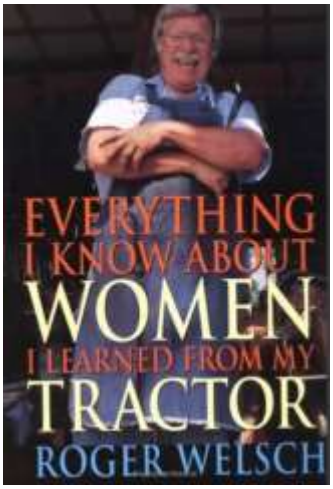
Romans TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



Fellowship Greenville, Jim Thompson (2018)
https://fellowshipgreenville.org/page/461?Item=1367

FG Romans
Sermon Series
<Prev Next>

SERIES: Romans: God's Power for Salvation
TITLE: No Condemnation
SCRIPTURE: Romans 8:1-2

Maybe you've heard the old saying "You can't judge a book by its cover." This is strange on a few levels.

First of all, because not only can we, but we do all the time. We quickly assess the exterior of something and determine whether or not it meets or personal standards. And far worse than books, we do this people as well. We often think about people as how rich, smart, or strong they are. We judge people based on our preferences, and we condone or condemn people based on our opinions.

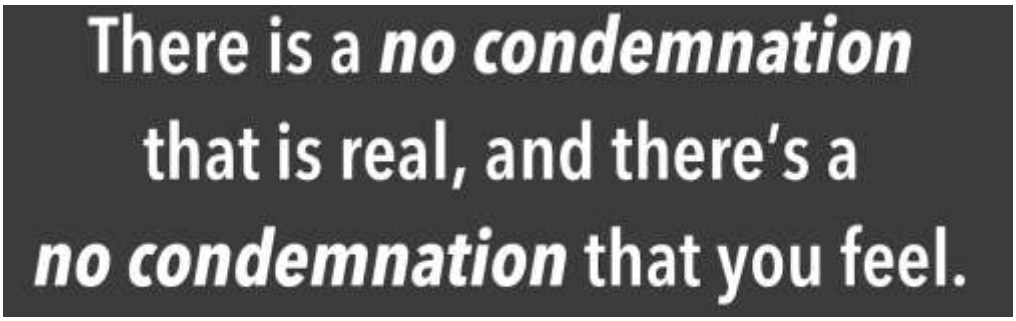
But what about when God looks at your life? If your life is a book, is there any discrepancy between the cover and the content? And what does God think about it? It is Gospel 101 to know and believe that if you are trusting Jesus for life and salvation, God doesn't condemn you because Jesus has been judged in your place! But... There's still a catch.

Sometimes life feels uneven or out of step. We may know we're a part of God's family, but at the same time, we struggle to live like that's true. We may mentally know that God loves us, but sometimes we live as though we have to earn his love. And when this happens, what does God think of us? If you're a Christian, and Jesus is the new book jacket on the story of your life, how does God think about that book if and when the content isn't consistent with the new cover? And not only that, but what is God (and what should we be) doing about it? These are things the things that Paul addresses in Romans 8:1-2.

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

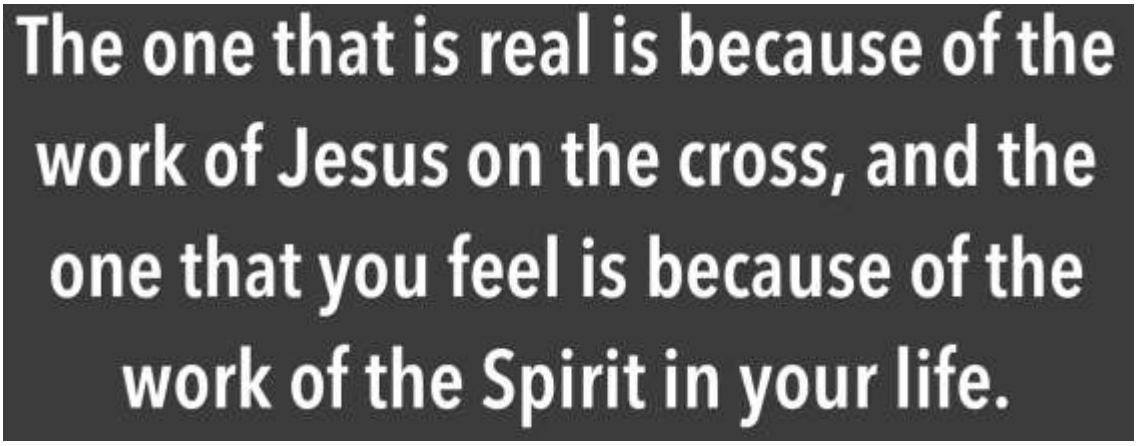
"There is now therefore no condemnation for those who are in Christ Jesus. For the law of the Spirit of life has set you free in Christ Jesus from the law of sin and death." Romans 8:1-2

When Paul says there is "no condemnation for those who are in Christ Jesus," he's borrowing from his own language in Romans 5. And in Romans 5, it is because of Jesus that we are no longer condemned. But here in Romans 8, Paul says that there is "no condemnation for those who are in Christ Jesus for the law of the Spirit of life has set us free." So, what is that reason that we are not condemned? Is it Jesus? Or is it the Spirit? Paul's answer is "Yes!"



The way to live in right relationship with God is by the ongoing power and presence of the Spirit of God in your life.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



And this implies that:

> There is a no condemnation that is real, and there is a no condemnation that you feel.

The "no condemnation" that is real is the one that is forever settled for all eternity because of what Jesus has done for us. We have been taken out of Adam and placed in Christ, the Second Adam, who has come to reverse the curse of the First Adam. But what do we do when we, whether by others or by law or by life inconsistencies, feel condemned? What should we do then, when the Christ as the cover of our life isn't consistent with the content? And that's Romans 8:2: "The law of the Spirit of life has set you free from the law of sin and death."

> There's a no condemnation that is real, and there's a no condemnation that you feel.
>
> The one that is real is because of the work of Jesus on the cross, and the one that you feel is because of the work of the Spirit in your life.

Meaning, the Holy Spirit is given to all Christians as the means through which we're supposed to live in right relationship with God because of Jesus. God is re-making and re-creating his world through Jesus (the Second Adam), and the way this new creation advances is for all those in Christ to be yielded to, open to, and obedient to the guidance of the Spirit of God in their lives. The law can't create integrity in our lives. It can make the lines run parallel between the cover and the content of the book of our lives. Only the power and presence of God's very own Spirit can mold us, mature, and shape us into Christ-likeness. He is the one who causes us to feel the reality of "no condemnation" in our everyday lives.

But how does this happen?

How can we sense more of the working of the Holy Spirit in our lives? Here are six suggestions:

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

1. Read Scripture
2. Hate sin
3. Exercise your gifts
4. Embrace suffering
5. Sing loud
6. Serve others

These are all ideas that Paul hints at elsewhere about how the Spirit moves and works in our lives. And these are clear ways to FEEL in the present what is REAL for all eternity, that there is no condemnation for those who are in Christ Jesus. This isn't about your best life now, this is about – by the Spirit – living in the freedom of no condemnation.

So, what is God's perspective when the book of your life has inconsistency between the cover and the content? "None! Zero! There is now no judgment for those who are in Jesus because Jesus has been judged in your place!" But there's more. "No condemnation" is not primarily a category to be in or out of. It's a relational reality to be experienced. And God's perspective is that through his Holy Spirit, he is continually stretching us and growing us as Christ lives his life through us.

Romans TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Romans 7:14-8:4

http://www.fbccs.org/resources/studyguides/romans_sg09.htm

Excerpts:

"There are teachers who teach that this passage in Romans 7 is something a Christian goes through but once. Then he gets out of it and moves into Romans 8, never to return to Romans 7 again. Nothing could be further from the truth! Even as mighty a man as Paul went through it again and again. This is a description of what every believer will go through many times in his experience because sin has the power to deceive us and to cause us to trust in ourselves, even when we are not aware we are doing so. The law is what will expose that evil force and drive us to this place of wretchedness that we might then, in devotion of spirit, cry out, Lord Jesus, it is your problem; you take it!" -Ray Stedman

In Romans 7 & 8, Paul shows us what it means for a flawed human being to love a holy God. In Romans 7, Paul pulls out all the stops. With remarkable candor, the apostle exposes in himself the rationalizations most of us revert to after failure.

Bible scholars differ on exactly what time period Paul is describing (pre-, mid, or post-conversion) but his personal struggle moves the discussion from the question "Why be good?" to the next level, "How can we be good?" Even if we want to love and follow God, and have the purest motives, sometimes it seem utterly impossible.

Reading Romans 7, I hear echoes of the stories I have heard while visiting 12-step groups. "I mean well, but something just takes over ... I know I made a vow last week, but I just slipped, that's all ... This thing's a disease, and it won't go away." Anyone who has struggled with addiction can recognize the raw reality in Paul's struggle with sin. We are born on an incline slanting away from God. Sin, like gravity, presses down relentlessly." -Philip Yancey

Romans TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Fellowship Greenville, Jim Thompson (2018)
https://fellowshipgreenville.org/page/461?Item=1369

FG Romans
Sermon Series
<Prev Next>

SERIES: Romans: God's Power for Salvation
TITLE: No Condemnation Part 2
SCRIPTURE: Romans 8:1-4

In all of his writings, but especially in Romans, the Apostle Paul uses dozens of metaphors to describe the relationship between God and humanity. He talks about reconciliation, a new exodus, and a new creation. He's getting ready to talk about adoption in Romans 8. He has employed the powerful pictures like sacrifice, redemption, baptism, and even marriage. But the dominant metaphor that Paul uses is the legal courtroom metaphor. This outweighs them all in Romans.

Paul is constantly borrowing forensic language to depict what God is doing to bring about justice and peace in the world. He talks about how we all stand before God like a guilty defendant in a court of law with our hands over our mouths. But because of Jesus, the declaration "not guilty" can be made over us who come to God in faith. And once this declaration is made, then what? What happens next? What should we look like, act like, walk like, and talk like when we leave this proverbial courtroom?

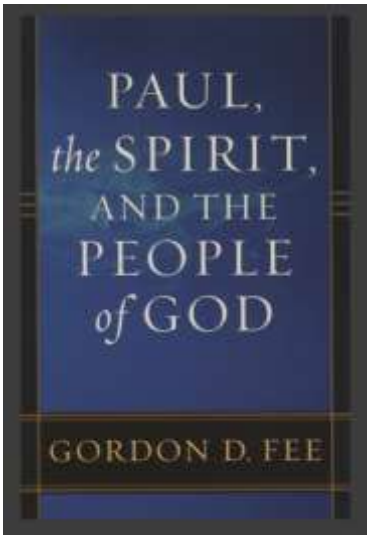
Yes, we still often feel a sense of guilt or shame, like a burden we can't shake free from. But in the middle of his technical courtroom language, Paul says the Holy Spirit has come to free us from the law of sin and death (Romans 8:2). So, apparently, it's the Spirit that causes us to rightly respond to the verdict of "no condemnation."

In further explaining this, Paul says that God did what the law couldn't do. God condemned sin "in the flesh" of Jesus (Romans 8:3). Because Jesus was truly human yet lived a sinless life, Jesus' death is the place of ironic victory where God triumphed over Sin as a power. And God did this so that the law that previously had mastered people could now be "fulfilled" in people who walk according to the Spirit. Meaning, the faithful and flourishing people that the law had in mind are now being shaped to be so by the Spirit. Or to phrase it like an old hymn:

> To run and work the law commands
> But gives me neither feet nor hands
> But better news the gospel brings
> It bids me fly and gives me wings

The point is, the gospel of Jesus in the power of the Spirit enables the kind of life that God desires for his people. The Spirit is the breath in our lungs and the wind under our wings, leading us to live faithfully in God's world that he is making new. And Paul's word for this relationship that we now have with the Spirit is "walk."

"Walking" in Paul's writings is not an arbitrary allegory for the Christian life. It's about intimacy and closeness and relationship with God. And Paul gets this from a number of Old Testament saints who walked with God (Enoch, Noah, Abraham, David, etc). But walking is not merely about familiarity of relationship, but also about conduct within that relationship. And further still, it's conduct that flows from the relationship and not in order to earn it. This is Paul's idea of walking in the Spirit. And it's this idea that should make us rightly respond to the reality that we are "not guilty" because of Jesus. This kind of walking in the Spirit changes what we look like, act like, walk like, and talk like.



So, how should we then walk out of the courtroom and into the world with the ruling of "no condemnation" behind us? We should do so in the power and presence of the Spirit. If you are a Christian, the Spirit is busy at work in your heart, rearranging things, cleaning things, getting rid of old stuff, equipping and empowering, renovating, remaking, and reshaping you so that the conduct and content of your life are completely different and more wildly reflective of Jesus.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

There is a no condemnation that is real, and there's a no condemnation that you feel.

The one that is real is because of the work of Jesus on the cross, and the one that you feel is because of the work of the Spirit in your life.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

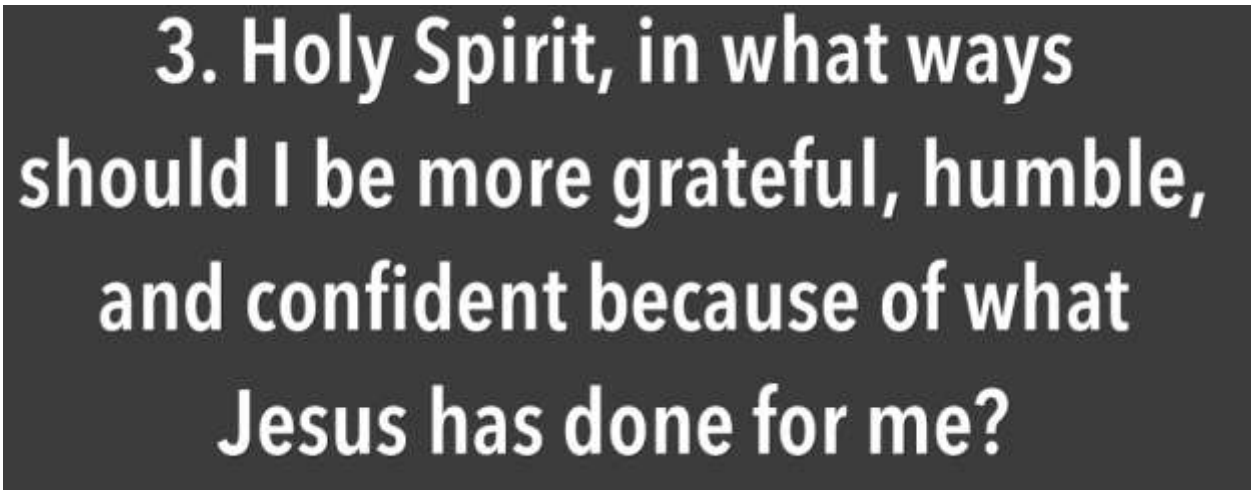
"God's justification of sinners is not a forgetting, nor is it simply forgiveness.
It is a definitive, wholesale, final assault upon,
and defeat of Sin as a Power,
and the creation of a new humanity."
Fleming Rutledge



To run and work the law commands
But gives me neither feet nor hands
But better news the gospel brings
It bids me fly and gives me wings

Questions and prayers about walking in the Spirit:

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Romans TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Fellowship Greenville, Charlies Boyd (2018)
https://fellowshipgreenville.org/page/461?Item=1386

FG Romans
Sermon Series
<Prev Next>

SERIES: Romans: God's Power for Salvation
TITLE: Living an Uncondemnable Life
SCRIPTURE: Romans 8:1-8

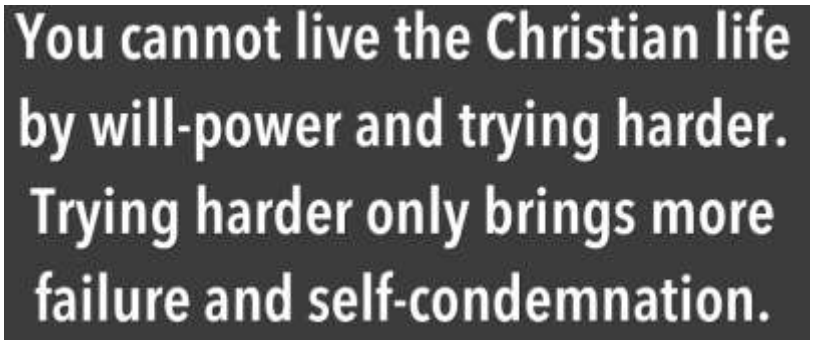
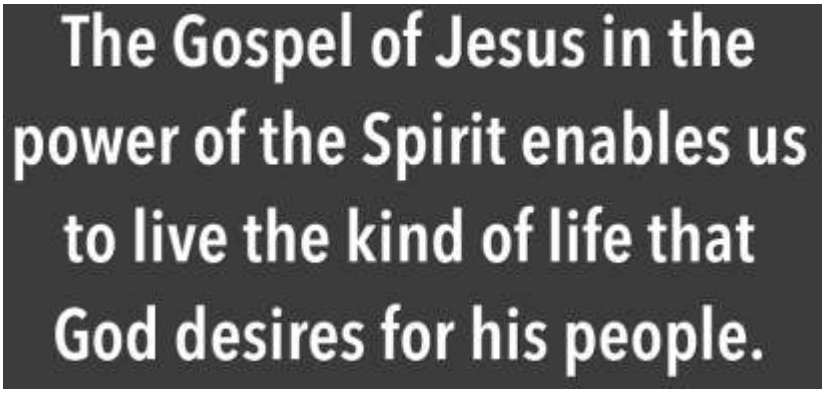
Romans 7:18-25. [18] For I know that nothing good dwells in me, that is, in my flesh. For I have the desire to do what is right, but not the ability to carry it out. [19] For I do not do the good I want, but the evil I do not want is what I keep on doing. [20] Now if I do what I do not want, it is no longer I who do it, but sin that dwells within me.

[21] So I find it to be a law that when I want to do right, evil lies close at hand. [22] For I delight in the law of God, in my inner being, [23] but I see in my members another law waging war against the law of my mind and making me captive to the law of sin that dwells in my members. [24] Wretched man that I am! Who will deliver me from this body of death? [25] Thanks be to God through Jesus Christ our Lord! So then, I myself serve the law of God with my mind, but with my flesh I serve the law of sin. [ESV]

In Romans 7, Paul showed us that Christians still wrestle with the pull of sin in our mortal bodies.



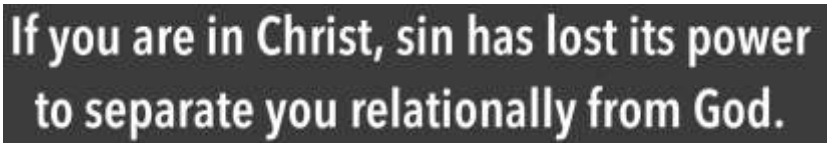
He made it clear, if we try to overcome sin in the flesh by trying harder to obey God's rules, we will fail miserably.



Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

You cannot live the Christian life by will-power and trying harder. Trying harder—wanting to do good, but coming up short—only brings guilt and shame and self-condemnation.

In Romans 8, Paul now tells us how the Gospel of Jesus by the power of the Holy Spirit enables us to live the kind of life God desires for his people.



In vv. 1-4 he tells us that the struggle we have with sin is without condemnation. If you belong to Christ, you are not condemned by God when you sin! To "condemn" means:

(1) to pronounce an unfavorable or adverse judgment upon;
(2) to express strong disapproval;
(3) To censure, to sentence to punishment, to condemn to imprisonment, to pronounce guilty, to declare incurable.

There is no—not now/not ever—any condemnation like that for those who belong to Christ. If you belong to Christ, you are un-condemn-able! You are un-separate-able. Sin has lost its power to separate you relationally from God.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

God does not condemn you for your ongoing struggle with sin and if God doesn't condemn you, you have no right to condemn yourself.

But we tend to think that we move in and out of condemnation as we move in and out of sin. No!

God is not angry with you for wanting to do right, but coming up short.

The Gospel declares you to be un-condemn-able.

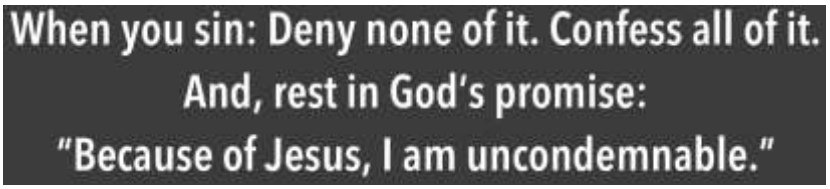
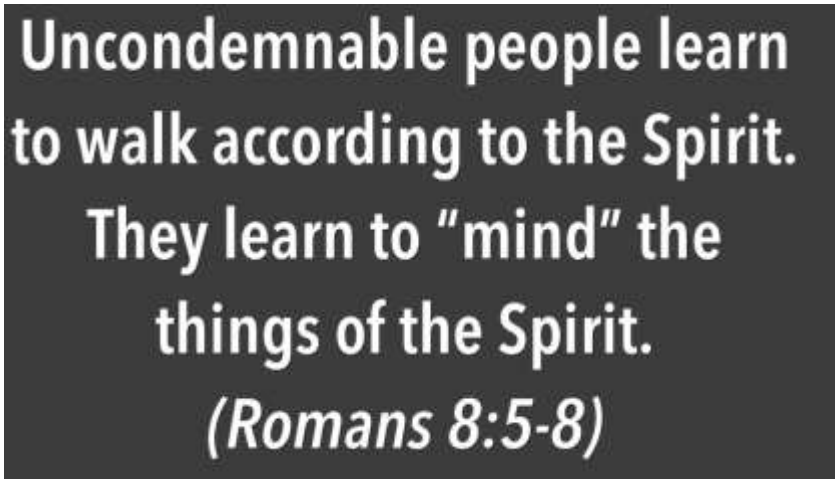
How is it possible that God declares us uncondemnable? (vv.2-4) Because of what Jesus did for us on the Cross, we are not condemned, but sin is condemned.



You are no longer condemned when you sin and you are no longer a prisoner to sin.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

So, when you sin: Deny none of it. Confess all of it. And, rest in God's promise—"Because of Jesus, you are uncondemnable!"



What does God want for us now that we can rest in his promise that we are uncondemnable? By the power of the Spirit, we are now able to fulfill the "righteous requirement of the law." We are now able to live the loving kind of life God desires for his people. As Jesus lives his life through us we are able to fulfill God's law without trying hard to obey from God's law.

> Romans 13:8-10. [8] Owe no one anything, except to love each other, for the one who loves another has fulfilled the law. [9] For the commandments, "You shall not commit adultery, You shall not murder, You shall not steal, You shall not covet," and any other commandment, are summed up in this word: "You shall love your neighbor as yourself." [10] Love does no wrong to a neighbor; therefore love is the fulfilling of the law.

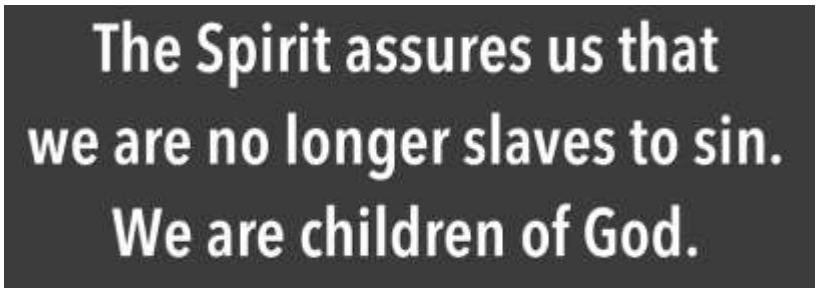
So, how do uncondemnable people live out the righteous requirement of God's law without trying harder to obey God's law? (8:5-8). Uncondemnable people learn to "mind" the things of the Spirit—they learn to set their minds of the Spirit rather than setting their minds on the flesh.



We will spend more time next week on vv.5-8, but for now take note of this: Your life is shaped by what preoccupies your mind.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Whatever controls your mind shapes your life. To "mind" the Spirit—to set your mind on the things of the Spirit—is to be preoccupied with the things that preoccupy the Spirit. What are those things? The rest of chapter 8 tells us. Specifically, the Spirit shows that we are no longer slaves to sin, but we are children of God.

We are adopted, loved, and welcomed as children of God. We are to drill into our minds and hearts God's love and adoption of us. To "mind" the things of the Spirit is to never forget our new identity in Christ or the fact that we are loved—we are uncondemnable and un-separate-able because of the Gospel of Jesus and the indwelling power of the Spirit. Let your mind be preoccupied with that for now.

Romans TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Fellowship Greenville, Charlies Boyd (2018)
https://fellowshipgreenville.org/page/461?Item=1386

FG Romans
Sermon Series
<Prev Next>

SERIES: Romans: God's Power for Salvation
TITLE: Walking According to the Spirit
SCRIPTURE: Romans 8:1-11

I think we all can agree that none of us is perfect. We all struggle with things that we know we shouldn't be doing. We all struggle with sin. What sin do you struggle with the most? That sin that always seems to trip you up and suck you in. What is it? The question we are looking at this week is this—How can we say "no" to that sin?

How can I live the life that God intended me to live?

REVIEW:

Romans 6,7,8 talk about how the Gospel that saves us, changes us.

In Romans 6 we saw how, because of our union with Christ, we are now dead to sin and alive to God, so everything that's true of Jesus is true of us.

In Romans 7 we saw how we still struggle with sin because we still live in mortal bodies that are temptable.
We saw how that trying harder to obey God only results in more failure and guilt.

So, what's the answer—Romans 8 gives us the answer. As we learn to "walk according to the Spirit," we experience freedom from sin and guilt, and we live the kind of lives that God desires for his people.

Remember:

In Romans 8:1 – There is therefore now no [NONE, Zilch, Nada, not now, not ever} condemntation for those that are in Christ Jesus. By faith you are forgiven of your sins. By faith there is no condemnation when you sin. We are uncondemnable.

How is that possible?

Romans 8:2 – Before you trusted Christ you were under the law of sin and the consequence of death. When you sin under the law, you die. You Sin – You Die. (Cause/effect) Now you are under the law of the spirit of life. (Yes there is a cause for condemnation, sin always results in condemnation – however on the cross Jesus paid the penalty for our sin and there is no condemnation left for us, only life! That is the Good News of the Gospel!)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Romans 8:3-4 – The law could not give us the power to defeat the pull of sin in my life.

But God by sending his Son in the likeness of sinful flesh, and to deal with sin, he condemned sin in the flesh in order that the righteous requirement of the law might be fulfilled in us who do not walk according to flesh but walk according to the spirit.

In other words, I can't resist the pull of my flesh toward my sin by trying harder to keep the law. But as I lean to walk according to the spirit I am able to obey God's law without trying hard to obey God's law. When I walk in the power of the spirit (lead by the spirit; the spirit living in and through us) enables us to obey and fulfill God's law without trying hard to obey God's law.

How is that possible?

READ 8:5-8:

Birthright, by David Needham

2005 Revised version.

Note: Since we can not cover everthing in the limited time allotted in the sermons, Boyd recommends this book.

He may not agree with everything in the book, but he highly recommends it.

See*: Old Man and New Man - Hoekema

The Old Man and Flesh - Nichols

Reviews / Studies of Birthright:

http://www.gracenotebook.com/pub/504

http://www.drnichols.org/_pdf/the_old_man_and_flesh.pdf [PDF]

Christian: Do You Know Who You Are?

http://www.rpmministries.org/2010/07/christian-do-you-know-who-you-are/

Excerpt:

Speaking of Romans 6, Ephesians 4, and Colossians 3, David Needham explains the relationship between our co-crucifixion and co-resurrection with Christ and our need to put off and put on.

> It was as though Paul saw a believer standing before two wardrobes; one contained the clothing (lifestyle) of an unregenerate person. "Take them off," Paul urged. "They don't fit, they're out of > style, totally unbecoming of who you are, and, if that were not enough, they don't belong to you." The other contained the clothing (lifestyle) of a regenerate person. "They're yours!" Paul exclaimed. "Wear them. Don't worry, they'll fit!" (Needham, Birthright, p. 299).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Needham is simply paraphrasing God. "In the same way, count yourself dead to sin but alive to God in Christ Jesus" (Romans 6:11). Putting off the old you builds upon the reality that the old you is already deceased. Putting on the new you builds upon the reality that the new you is already alive to God through your union with Christ.

Quote:

"A Christian is not simply a person who gets forgiveness, who gets to go to heaven, who gets the Holy Spirit, who gets a new nature. Mark this - a Christian is a person who has become someone he was not before. Becoming a Christian is not just getting something, no matter how wonderful that something may be. It is becoming someone." (David Needham, Birthright)

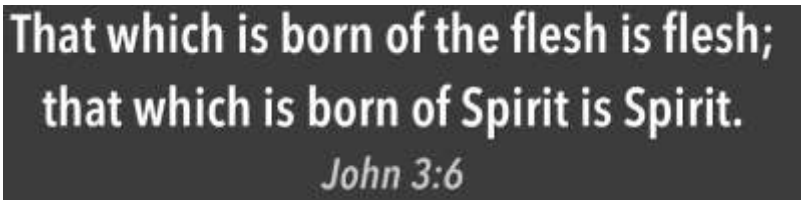
Birthright, David Needham Lecture [Recommended]

http://digitalcommons.spu.edu/av_events/2290/ [Audio]

Grace: Do I Have a Sinful Nature?

http://season.org/grace-do-i-have-a-sinful-nature/

(see comments section)

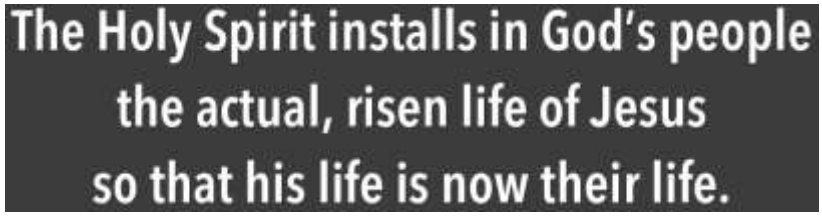


Pointing to "My Sin"

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

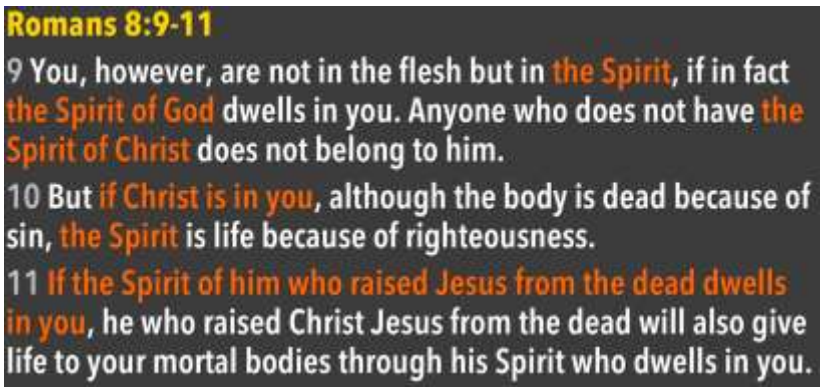
From God's perspective, there are two kinds of people in the world, fleshly-minded people—non-believers and Spiritually-minded believers—people who have trusted Christ for salvation. What is the "flesh?"

READ John 3:6:



According to Jesus, "flesh" is everything humanness is apart from new birth.

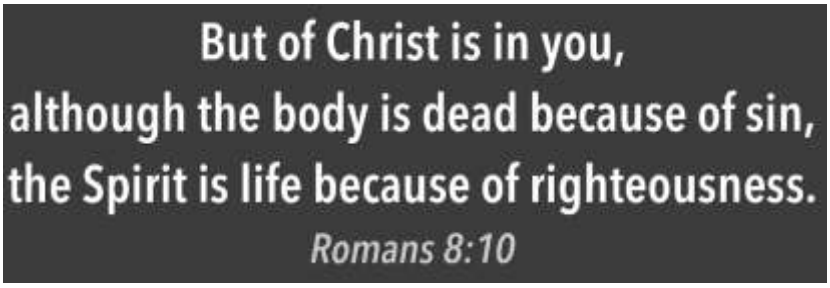
People who are "of the flesh"—their natural spirit is dead because of Adam's sin—define their life within the limits of their physicalness or flesh. They have their minds "habitually dominated" by what makes them look good and feel good. They experience life outside-in through what they see, hear, touch, taste, and feel. The "flesh" is not just what people do. It is who they are apart from new birth. It's their core identity apart from God.



Spiritually-minded people have received the Spirit and through the new birth have been made new—spiritually alive to God.

The Holy Spirit "installs" in God's people the actual, risen life of Jesus so that his life is now their life.

This is what it means to be a Christian. This is what it means to live as a Christian. Not just accepting him, but receiving him.



READ 8:9-11:

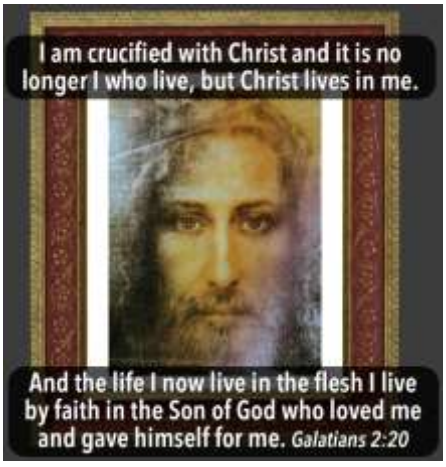
 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Above verses highlight the trinity. We have the full Godhead.
(See: Col. 2:9 For in him all the fullness of deity lives [20] in bodily form...)

Notice how Paul refers to the Spirit—"the Spirit," "the Spirit of God," "the Spirit of Christ," "Christ in you," and "the Spirit of him who raised Jesus from the dead." Just like Jesus (Col 2:9), a believer has all the fullness of the Godhead dwelling in their mortal body. The main focus here is on Jesus—you are in the Spirit—you have the Spirit of Christ in you—Christ in you.

So, how do we say "no" to sin?

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



(1) We need to reframe how we see ourselves.

Through work of the Holy Spirit—you are made spiritually alive to God because Christ is in you—he takes up residence in your life, and he becomes your life.

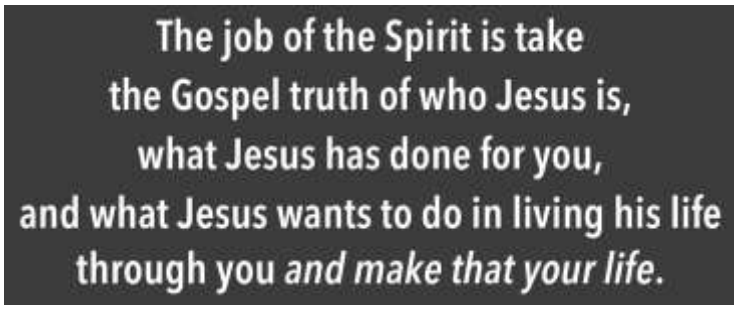
You have the actual, risen life of Jesus living inside you so that his life becomes your life lived through your unique frame (cf. Gal 2:20).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Do you see yourself as the living embodiment of Jesus?

Also, we say “no” to sin by setting our minds on the “things of the Spirit.”

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



What are the “things of the Spirit?” Well, the “things of the Spirit” are not (1) having your mind set on theology, doctrine, and Bible knowledge as an end in themselves. They are not having your mind preoccupied with supernatural manifestations of the Spirit—healing, gifts, miracle.

The one and only job of the Spirit is to “glorify” Jesus (Jn 16:14)—meaning, the Holy Spirit takes him who is alive in “your frame,” and he makes him [Jesus] come alive to you.

The job of the Spirit is to take the Gospel truths of who Jesus is, what Jesus has done for you, and what Jesus wants to do in living his life through you and make that your life.

Said another way, the job of the Spirit is to get you to fall in love with Jesus.

The job of the Spirit is to knock us over the head (in a good way) with these great Gospel truths of justification, atonement, adoption, freedom from sin and condemnation. To show you their significance and power—to disturb you and comfort you with them—to enfuse joy in you, to lift you up and spur you on; to know Jesus and make him known. The Spirit does not draw attention to himself. The Spirit puts the spotlight on Jesus and keeps it there so we can see Christ in us, our hope of glory.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The spirit puts the spotlight on Jesus and keeps it there so we learn to see ourselves like that.

Now, instead of saying “NO” to sin, we are saying “Yes” to Christ.

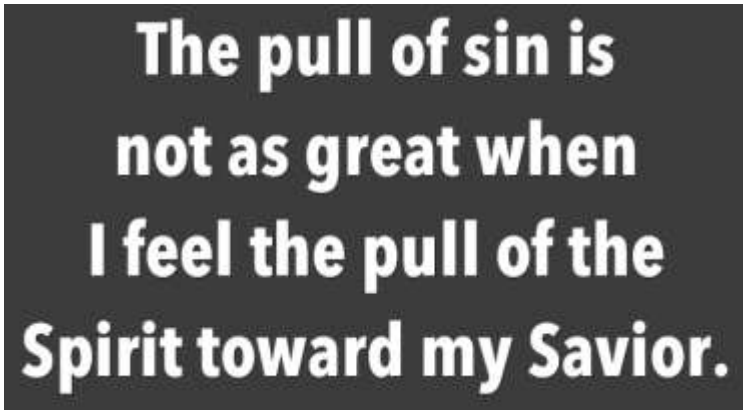
(2) We need to remind ourselves of Spirit-inspired, Gospel truth.

To set your mind on the things of the Spirit is to set your mind on the things of Christ.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

If your mind is set on the flesh you will hear deceitful messages like…

> It's not that bad. You can handle that. Everybody else does it, you don't want to miss out. You've done it before and it didn't hurt you, right? You can always ask for forgiveness later. It's not like you're gonna go to hell or something if you pick this up and run with it.
>
> You can hear the flesh speaking to you if you learn to recognize it's voice. You can recognize it because it will tell you all the ways you can find life on you own apart from God.



There are other messages that people tell themselves to try to keep themselves from giving into sin. They are law based messages that try to resist sin through fear and guilt…

> I better not do that because God will get me. I better not do that because I will really be embarrassed if I get caught. I better not go there because that could hurt my reputation or I may loose my job. I better not go there because I will hate myself in the morning.
>
> These are messages – based on fear and shame and guilt – are law based, rule oriented, religious, cause and effect approaches to God.
>
> Some of those fear of consequences may be deterents to sin, but is fleshly because there are all about keeping you looking and feeling good.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The pull of sin is not [as] great when I feel the pull of the Spirit toward my Savior.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Fellowship Greenville, Charlies Boyd (2018)
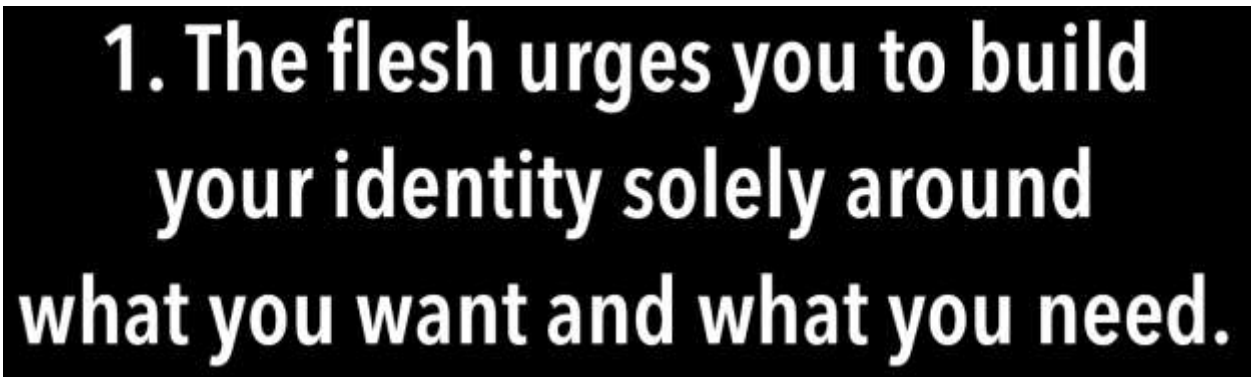
https://fellowshipgreenville.org/page/461?Item=1391

FG Romans
Sermon Series
<Prev Next>



SERIES: Romans: God's Power for Salvation
TITLE: Walking According to the Spirit II
SCRIPTURE: Romans 8:5-17

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

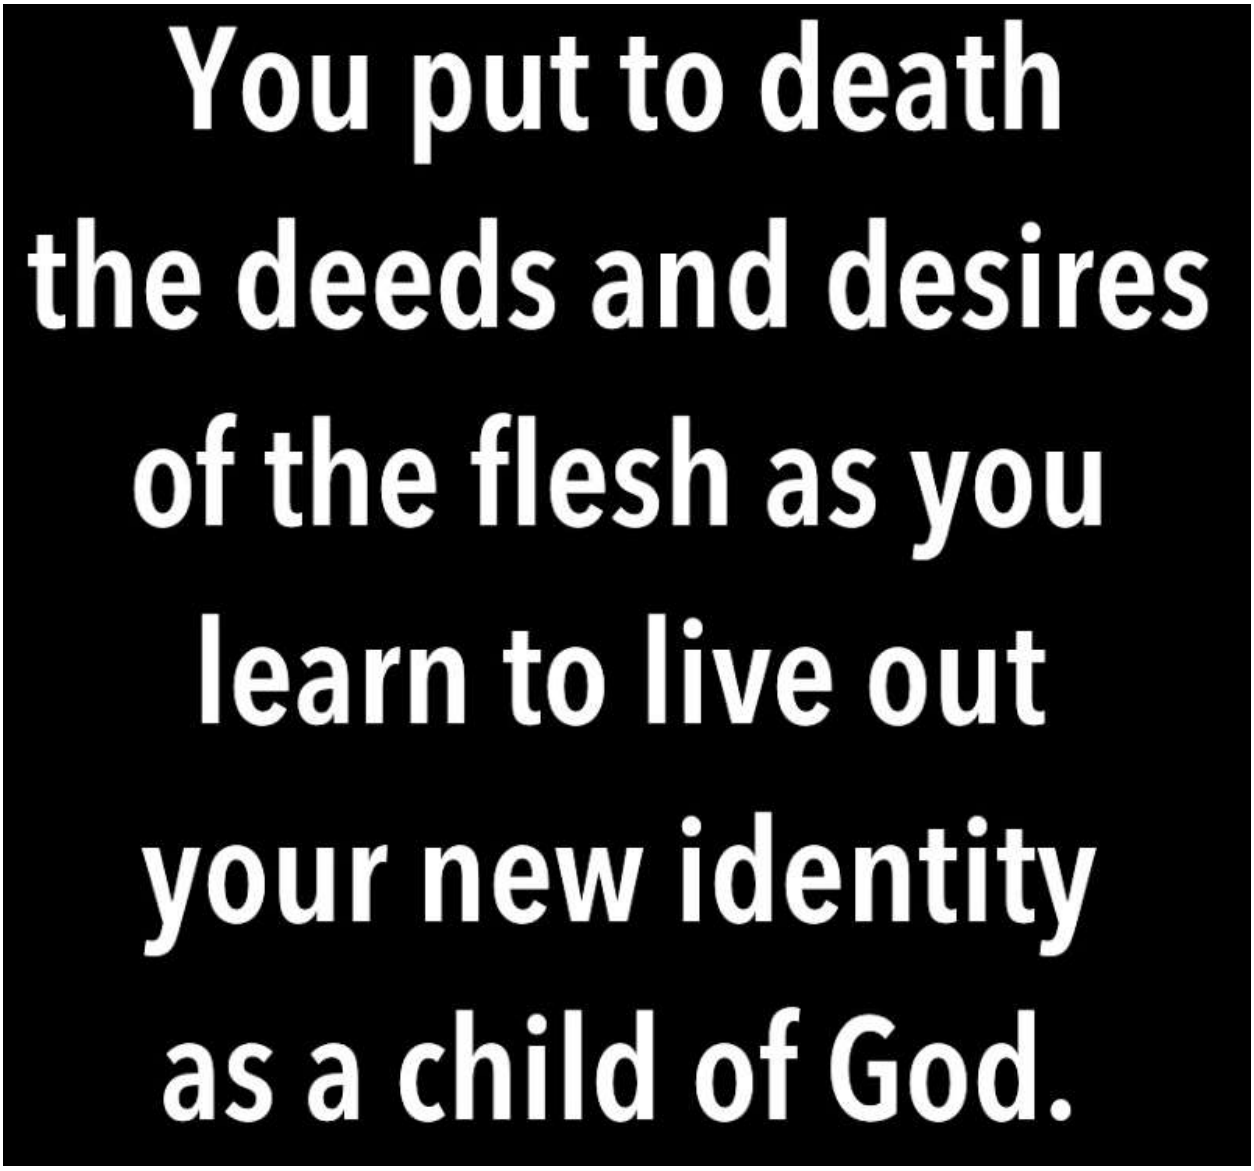
 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Romans 8:15

15 For you did not receive the spirit of slavery to fall back into fear, but you have received the Spirit of adoption as sons, by whom we cry, "Abba! Father!"

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



Romans 8:16

16 The Spirit himself bears witness with our spirit that we are children of God.

Romans 8:17

17 and if children, then heirs–heirs of God and fellow heirs with Christ, provided we suffer with him in order that we may also be glorified with him.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Romans TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Romans 8:5-17

http://www.fbccs.org/resources/studyguides/romans_sg10.htm

Excerpts:

Many people who are adopted into the spiritual family of Christ remain ignorant of their new roots. What a shame! Our heavenly Father has written over 1800 pages of family history and has preserved it unadulterated for some 4000 years. What an insult to our heavenly Father, to remain ignorant of our heritage!

We need to know that the Godhead has three Persons, not just two - Father, Son and Holy Spirit. Many do not even know how the third person functions. We may observe his fruit in our lives without knowing who he is.

How can I know the Spirit is leading me? What is the dominant characteristic of the Spirit-filled life? Should I expect signs, wonders, miracles, and speaking in tongues? Good news! In Paul's systematic presentation of the gospel, Romans 8 gives the clearest description of the work of the Holy Spirit found anywhere in Scripture. Although it is not exhaustive in detail, it is complete as to its presentation of theme. This chapter covers everything from justification to glorification. If this was all we knew, we could live a balanced life, knowing who the Spirit is and how he imparts life to us.

Brian Morgan,
pastor at Peninsula Bible Church,
Cupertino, CA

Christians are called to sanctification. It remains the indispensable condition of their communion with God. As the complement of justification it is, a work of the Holy Spirit, both as a one-time act, and as an ongoing, progressive work. In the latter sense, it also becomes a human work. It takes place in our earthly lives, as a moral and spiritual cleansing and dedication of soul and body, harnessing and deploying all human faculties in the service of God, for the upbuilding of Christian fellowship and the implementation of God's will in the world. Holiness means to be at God's disposal. It is the restoration of the image of God in man, the gradual assimilation of the believer to Christ and "the mind of Christ", and the "demonstration of the Spirit and of power" (2 Cor. 2:4). Directed by the double commandment of love of God and love of neighbour as the fullest description of human dedication, it works by the instruction and drive of the Holy Spirit through which we fulfill the requirements of God's law (Rom. 8:14, 4).

Finally, sanctification, the eager pursuit of holiness in the midst of an unholy world, is the positive alternative to secularism, the attitude of a world turning away from God.

J.I. Packer,
New Dictionary of Theology

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Romans 8:18-27

http://www.fbccs.org/resources/studyguides/romans_sg11.htm

Excerpts:

"When we stumble over our words, the Spirit straightens out the syntax. When we pray with muddy motives, the Spirit purifies the stream. When we see through a glass darkly, the Spirit adjusts and focuses what we are asking until it corresponds to the will of God."

The point is that we do not have to have everything perfect when we pray. The Spirit reshapes, refines, and reinterprets our feeble, ego-driven prayers.

Richard Foster,
Prayer: Finding the Heart's True Home

Guidelines for Sufferers

1. Follow Christ's example, entrusting yourself to God rather than hating those who cause you pain. (1 Peter 2:23-25)

2. Don't surrender to fear. (1 Peter 3:14)

3. Focus on the fact that Christ is Lord and ultimately He is in control. (1 Peter 3:15, 16)

4. Keep on doing what is right. (1 Peter 3:16, 4:19)

5. Rejoice, not that you are suffering, but that in suffering we participate in Christ's sufferings. (1 Peter 4:13)

6. Remember - we suffer for a little while. Our destiny is to share in His eternal glory. (1 Peter 5:10)

Revell Bible Dictionary

Romans 8:28-30

http://www.fbccs.org/resources/studyguides/romans_sg12.htm

Excerpt:

"The Biblical picture of a totally sovereign God alienates some people, but it should comfort the believer who remembers this: the way power is exercised depends on the character of the person holding it. And the God of Scripture, who has all power, is a God of love, justice, grace, and goodness. God will never do anything that violates His own character; thus, He and He alone can be trusted with the freedom of action He alone has."

Revell Bible Dictionary

Romans TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Fellowship Greenville, Jim Thompson (2018)
https://fellowshipgreenville.org/page/461?Item=1393

FG Romans
Sermon Series
<Prev Next>

SERIES: Romans: God's Power for Salvation
TITLE: The Hope of Glory
SCRIPTURE: Romans 8:18-30

Think about the way you use the English word hope. I hope I get a big tax return. I hope she says yes when ask her out. I hope I get the job. I hope it's not cancer.

In each of these instances, something hangs in the balance; something is unknown or left to chance. And in the way we normally use the word, hope has to submit to the unknown. Also, in each of these instances, hope is very close to wanting. It seems to be a desire for something to happen in the future, something that we can't totally control. But this is not how the Bible talks about hope.

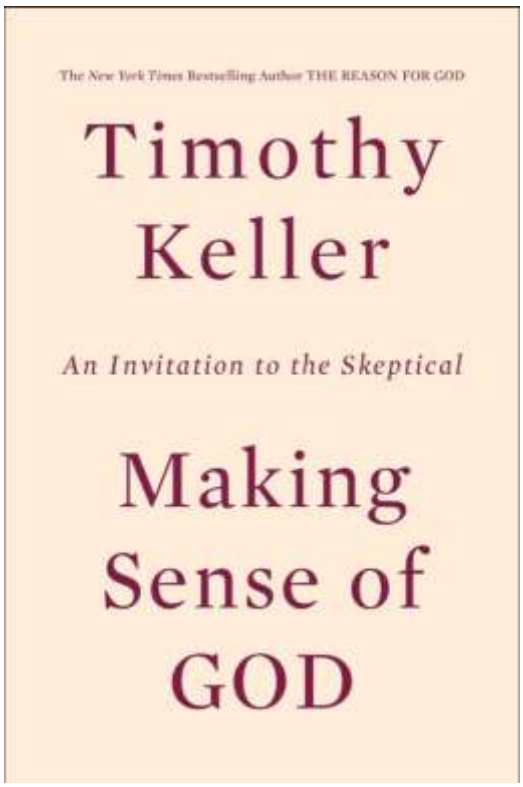
Biblical hope isn't fictitious. It isn't a possibility. It doesn't leave things to chance. Biblical hope is a future guarantee that hinges on God's promises and faithfulness in Jesus. And in contrast to how we normally talk about hope, what is unknown has to submit to hope. What hangs in the balance has to bow to what is assured. Furthermore, hope isn't a desire for something to happen in the future. Rather, it's destiny for the future based on what Jesus has done in the past. And true biblical hope should inform and change our lives in the present as we wait for the final fruition of God's promises.

Paul paints a robust picture of this kind of hope in Romans 8.18-30. And for Paul, the Christian's final hope isn't clouds, halos, and harps; it's a new creation and a resurrected new world, including new bodies for all of God's people with which we will perfectly enjoy him and his people and his world forever. But within Paul's picture of hope, suffering seems to threaten our present experience of hope. He encourages his friends that,

> "The sufferings of this present time are not worth comparing with the glory that is to be revealed to us." -Romans 8.18

And he even knows that their suffering gets so bad sometimes that they can't find words to pray because life is so weighty and painful (see 8.26). But he continues to encourage them with hope, and that's why he says things like "All things work together for the good of those who love God" (8.28). All things. Even the suffering we dread that tempts us to hold hope in an open palm rather than a clenched fist. And this suggests that,

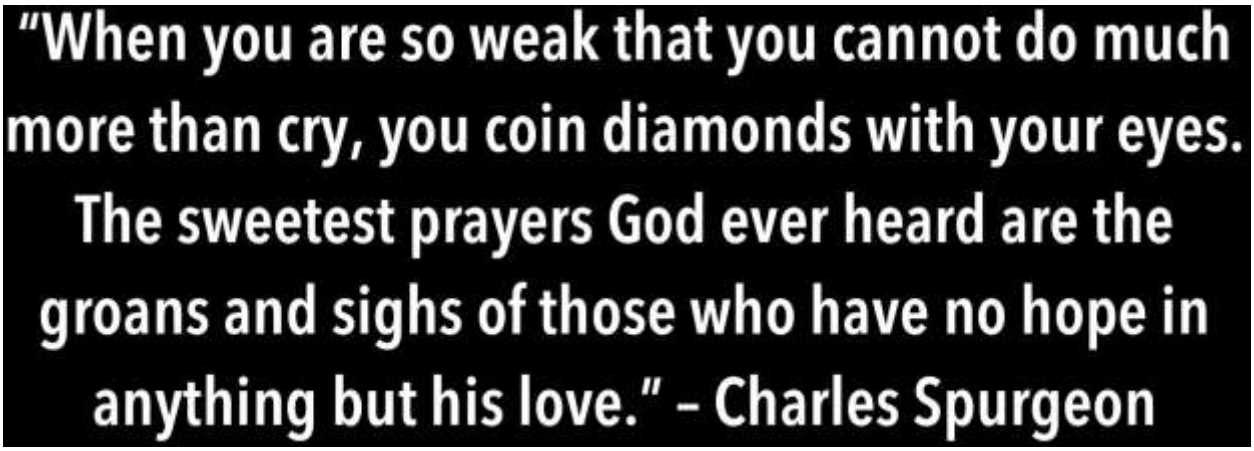
If gospel-hope is surety on the horizon of history, then the suffering you face cannot ultimately rob you of God's purposes for you and through you.



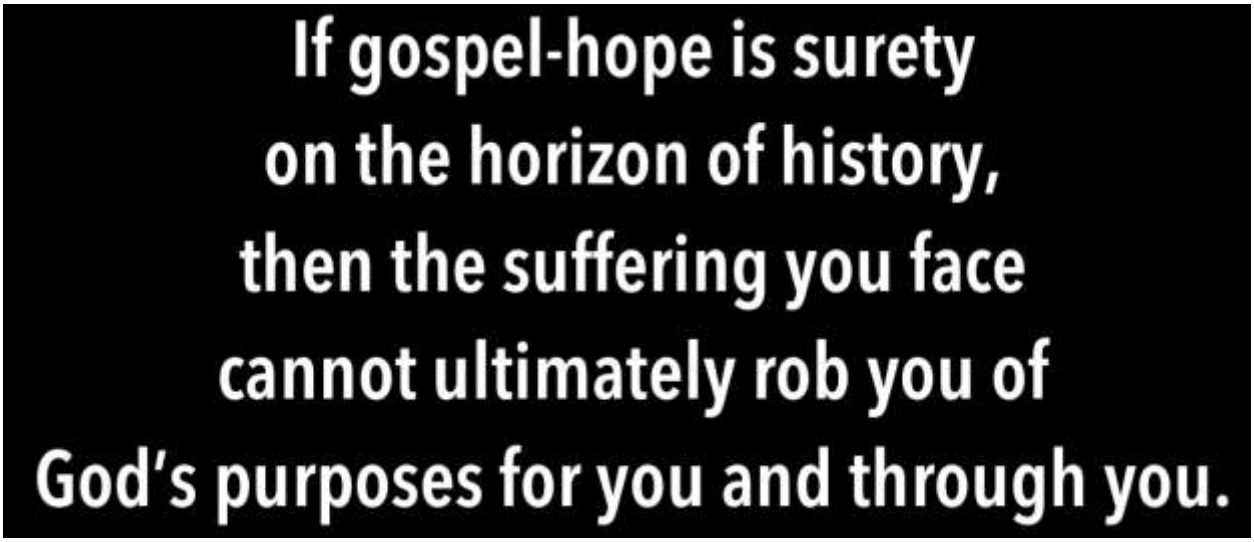
So, not only is hope strong enough to handle sufferings, it's strong enough to reinterpret them. And not only can hope reinterpret suffering, but it can turn suffering upside down and use it as fuel to make its own flame burn more brightly. This is what happened at the cross. The enemy thought that he would use death to defeat Jesus, but death itself has died in Jesus' resurrection. And that's why Christian hope is as sure as the empty tomb in Palestine.

But these truths don't take away the nearness of suffering in our lives. So, yes, we're called to hope valiantly.

But that will also include asking hard questions like, What kind of suffering or sorrow distracts me from the hope I have in Jesus? Or, what kind of pain makes me take your eyes off of who I am and what I have in Christ? And regardless of how we answer these questions, we called to look our sufferings squarely in the face and by the power of the Holy Spirit whisper to them, "You don't get the last word."



Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



Again, biblical hope isn't possibility or plausibility. It isn't fiction. It is the gracious and brazen reality that God is remaking his people and his world, and that one day at Jesus' return, justice and peace will be full and final. And this proper vision of what lies ahead will slowly shape the way we live and love in the present.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Howard Thurmond

(Referenced Harvard presentation "Religious Ideas in Negro Spirituals") http://dh.howard.edu/reprints/203/

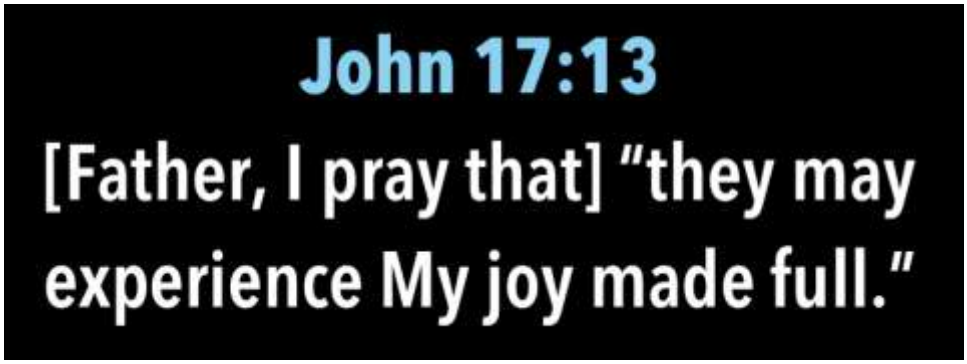
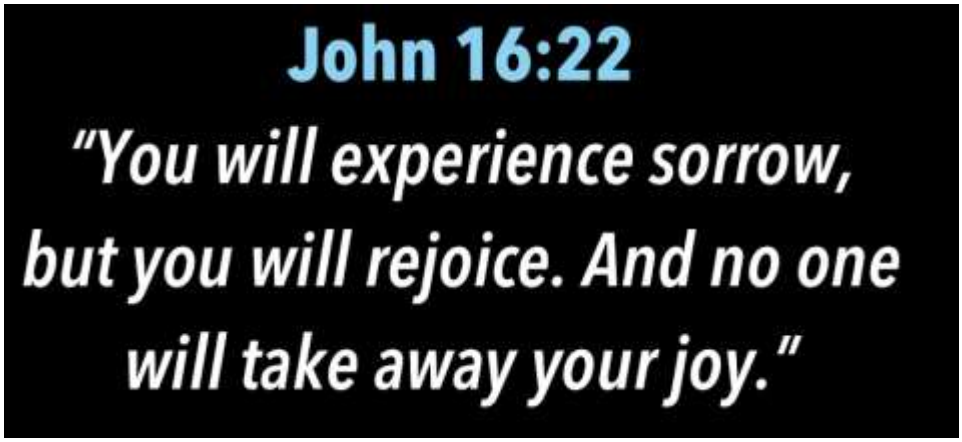
Romans TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



Fellowship Greenville, Charlies Boyd (2018)
https://fellowshipgreenville.org/page/461?Item=1398

FG Romans
Sermon Series
<Prev Next>



SERIES: Romans: God's Power for Salvation
TITLE: Joy, No Matter What
SCRIPTURE: Romans 8:26-30

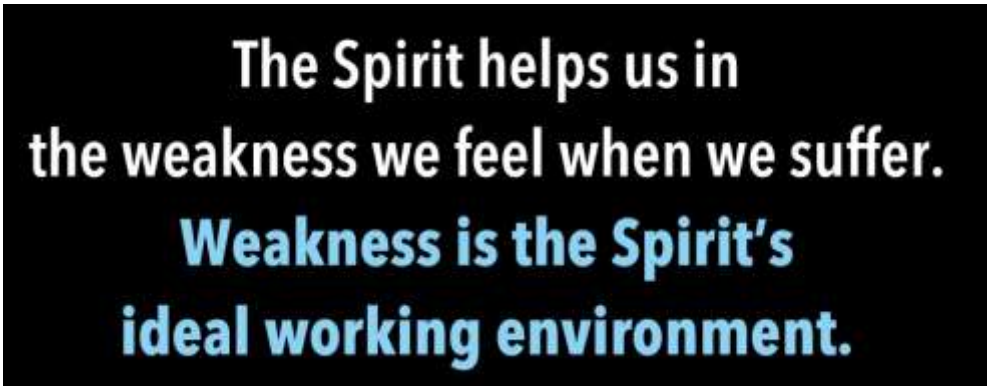
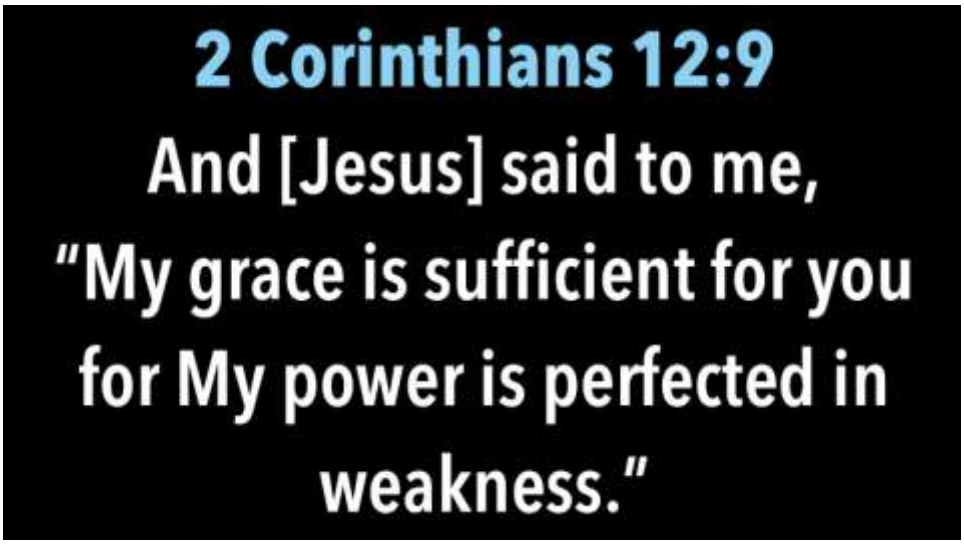
If you're a Christian, you know that Christianity is supposed to be about joy. You probably even know that you're supposed to experience joy in spite of your circumstances. We know these things, but too often we don't experience the underpinning of joy when we go through bad times. The weakness we feel in times of disappointment and difficulty often robs us of our joy.

Jesus prays for his followers:

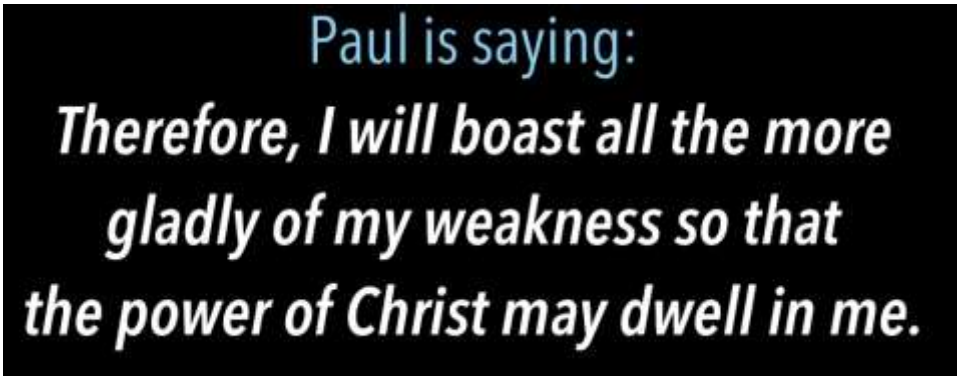


He also tells them:



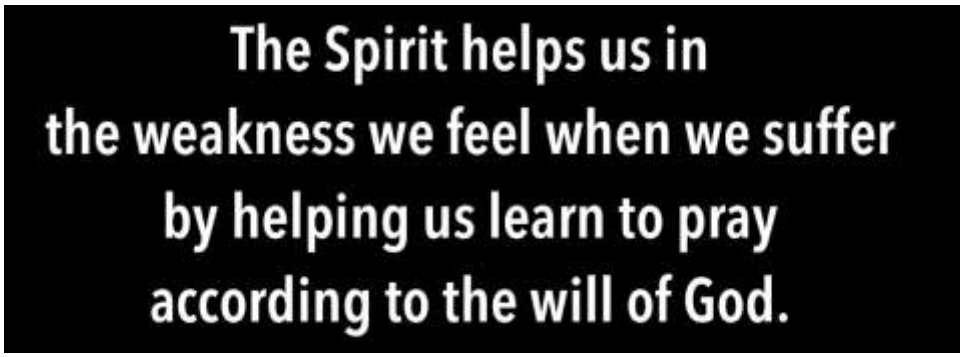
Romans Chapter 8 unpacks Chapter 6 about what walking in the newness of life looks like… which is the same as walking according to the spirit…having your mind set on the things of the spirit. It's the same as having the unshakeable hope of future glory in the midst of present suffering. (See: Jim Thompson's prior week sermon*: The Hope of Glory)

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



The apostle Paul tells us the Holy Spirit helps us with the weakness we feel when we suffer (Romans 8:26-27). In fact, weakness is the Spirit's ideal working environment.

Paul was constantly praying for something in his life that he couldn't overcome, a "thorn in his flesh". He asked God to remove the problem. But Jesus said to Paul:



Note: "Perfected" == "brought to maturity" or "it beomes most evident"

The specific weakness Paul has in mind is not always knowing how to pray our way through our problems. But we are given the assurance that, when we don't have the words, the Spirit intercedes for us according to the will of God. So, the Spirit helps us in the weakness we feel when we suffer by helping us pray according to the will of God.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

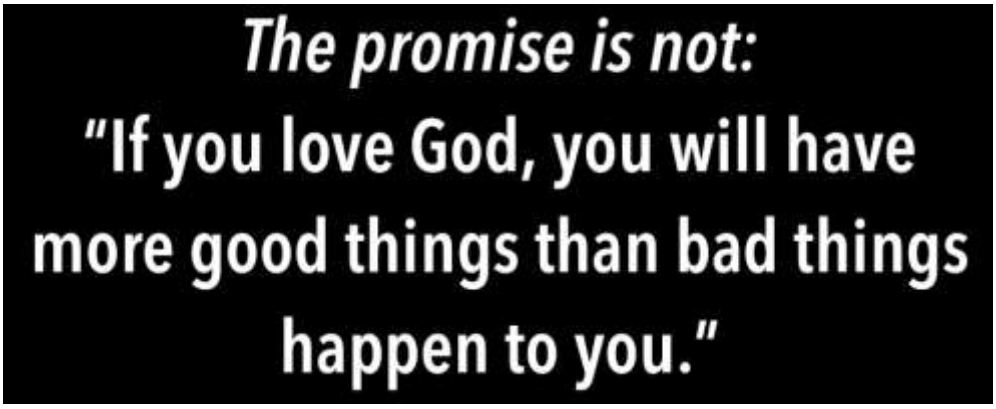
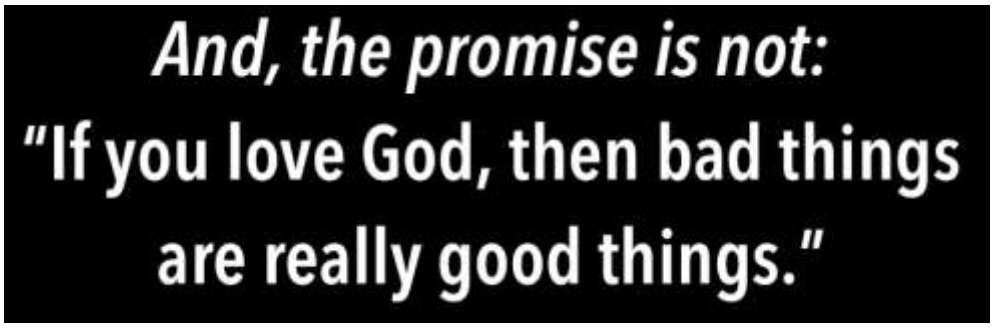
Then Paul goes on in vv. 28-30 to give us three reasons why we can have a relentless joy no matter what our circumstances may be. (Thank you, Tim Keller and Jonathan Edwards in his first serman at 18 years of age, "Christian Happiness"!). Keller says your joy will be strong to the degree that you understand and grasp these three things. God promises…

1. Your bad things turn out for good (v.28).

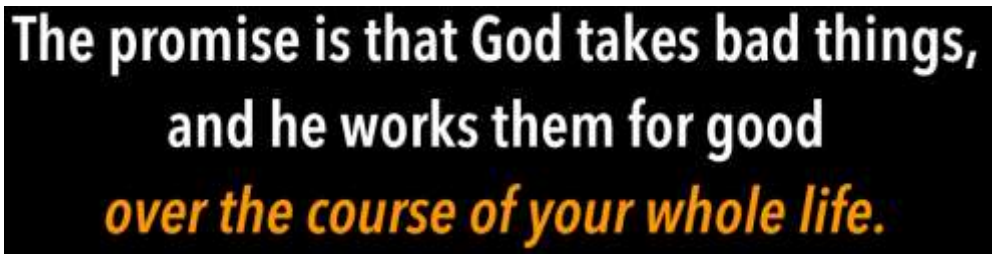


Christians experience all the same things as non-Christians.



The promise isn't, "If you love God, you will have more good things than bad things happen to you."

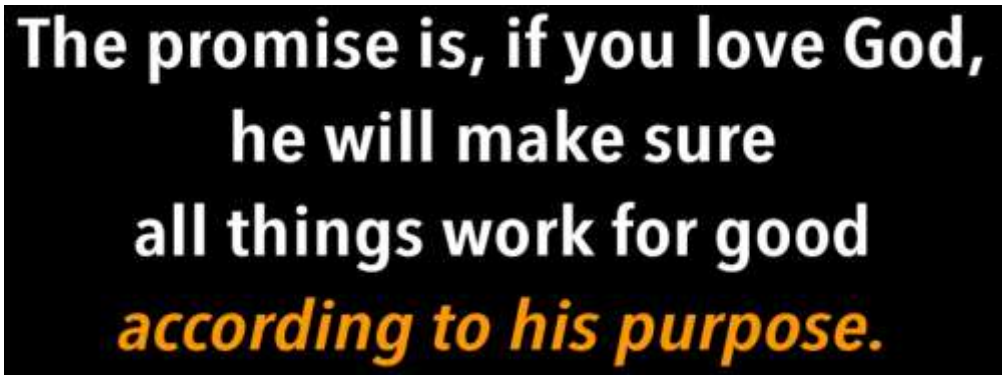
 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



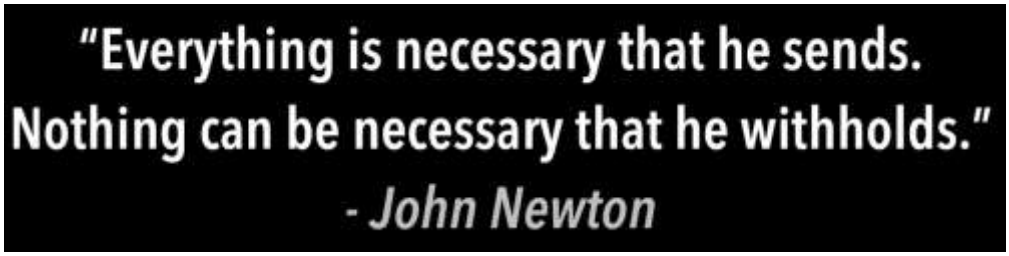
…And, the promise isn't, "If you love God, then bad things are really good things." (cf John 11)

Example*: Jesus and Lazarus… Jesus weeps, deply troubled… it was bad – even though he is about to work good – it is bad!

some say, "Bad things are just a blessing in disguise…Every cloud has a silver lining" –NO!!!!!



—NO—The promise is that God takes bad things, and he works them for good over the course of your whole life.



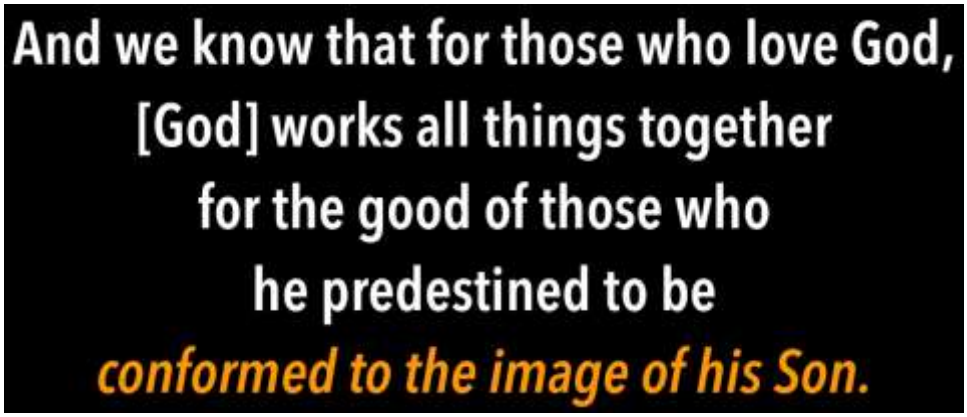
What does that mean?

The promise is, if you love God, he will make sure all things work for good, according to HIS good and loving purpose for your life.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

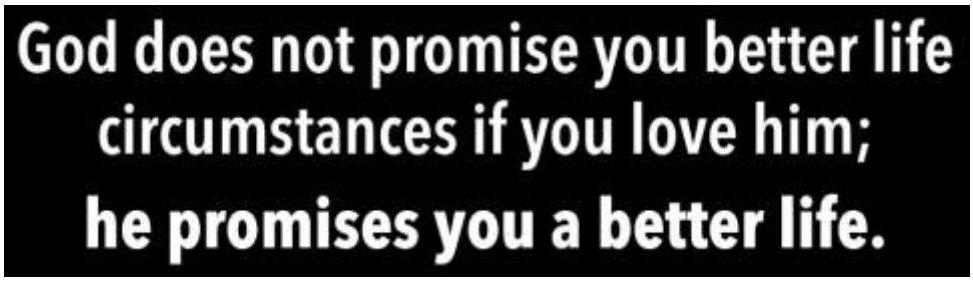
John Newton (author of the hymn, Amazing Grace) explains: "Everything is necessary that he sends. Nothing can be necessary that he withholds." God works all things for our highest good.

Keller explains: The things that can really hurt you (that can kill you) are foolishness, pride, anger, selfishness, hardness of heart, the denial of your flaws and weakness and the foolishness in your belief that you don't need God. In the short run pride, selfishness, etc. feel good, but in the long run they poison and destroy you. If God withholds things you think are good, they are only good on the short run,



2. Your good things can never be lost (v.29).

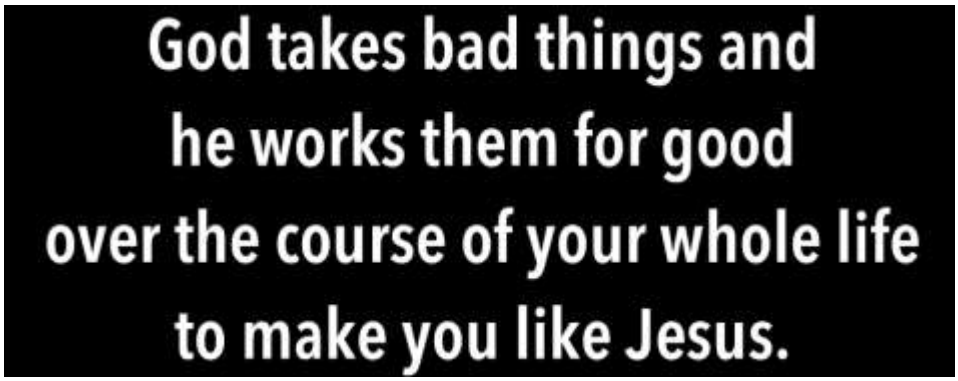
One more point about what the promise is not. The promise is not, when bad things happen, God will turn bad things into good things.



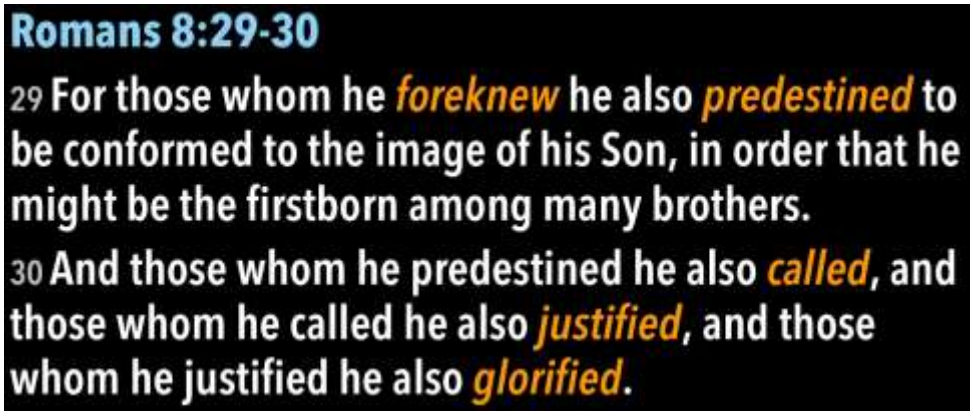
We most certainly experience God bringing good things out of bad circumstances. That's the goodness of God, the grace of God, the tender, loving care of God. But that's not what Romans 8:28 is promising.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

God does not promise you better life circumstances if you love him; he promises you a better life.

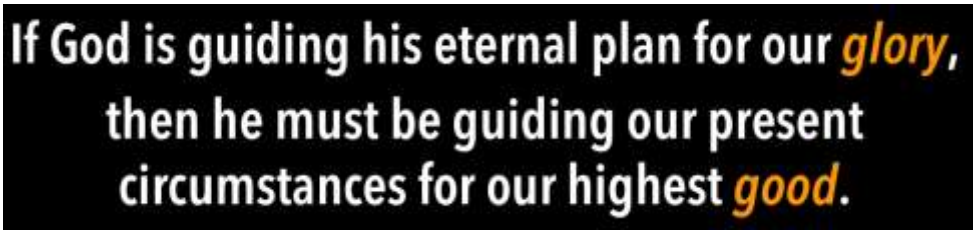


As per Keller: Jesus did not suffer so you would not suffer, but so when you do suffer, you become like him.



The promise is: God takes bad things and he works them for good over the course of your whole life to make you like Jesus— that is your highest good.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



Or said another way: the "good" of Romans 8:28 is that you are predestined to be conformed to the image of Jesus.

Verses 29-30 lay out an unbroken chain—the predetermined, will and purpose of God—to morph (conform) you to the image of Christ. These verses make the point that the good thing God is doing to make you like Jesus is fixed. It's certain—guaranteed.

(Reference also: 1 John 3:2 Dear friends, we are God's children now, and what we will be has not yet been revealed. We know that whenever it is revealed we will be like him, because we will see him just as he is.)

This good can never be lost. Nothing can stop the process God has set in motion. Think—If God is guiding his eternal plan for our glory , then he must be guiding our present circumstances for our highest good .

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

3. The best is yet to come (v.30).

Verses 18, 21, and 30 all focus on the future glory God has predestined for us. What is glory? Here's how I think of glory.

Glory is …

Every longing fulfilled.

Every promise kept.

Every question explained.

Every problem solved.

Every sin forgiven and forgotten.

Every tear wiped away. Every struggle overcome.

Every wrong righted.

Every created thing restored. Every body made new.

Every believer present and accounted for.

Every good deed rewarded. Every knee bowed.

Every affection Christ.

Every desire God!!!

THAT is our hope. That is our joy. That is our blessed assurance—when, face-to-face, we see that all things really have worked together for good for those who love God and who have been called according to his good, loving purpose.

Romans TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Fellowship Greenville, Jonathan Parker (2018)
https://fellowshipgreenville.org/page/461?Item=1412

FG Romans
Sermon Series
<Prev Next>

SERIES: Romans: God's Power for Salvation
TITLE: Blindingly Clear
SCRIPTURE: Romans 8:31-39

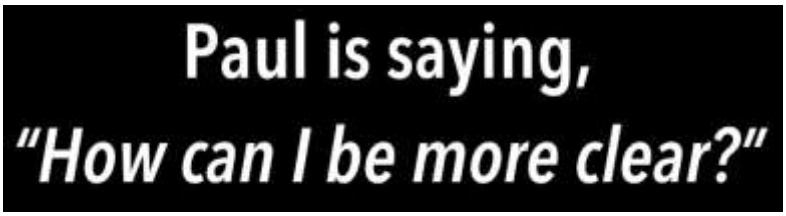
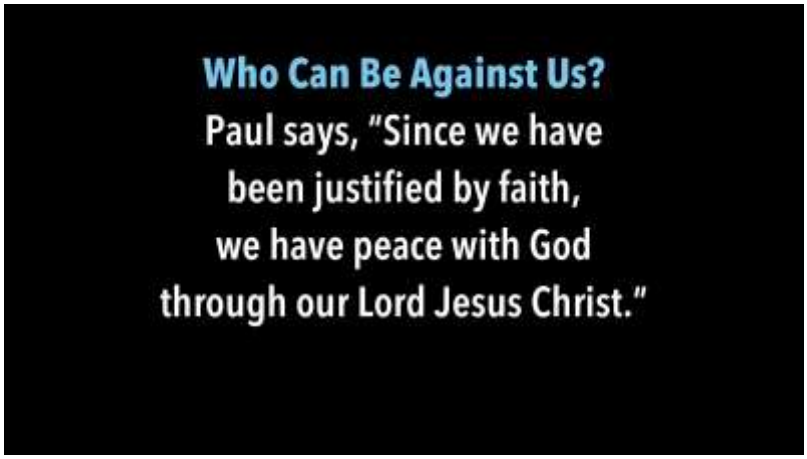
Big Idea: For those who have believed in Jesus, Romans 8:31-39 is a blindingly clear reminder that nothing can separate you from the love and acceptance of God.



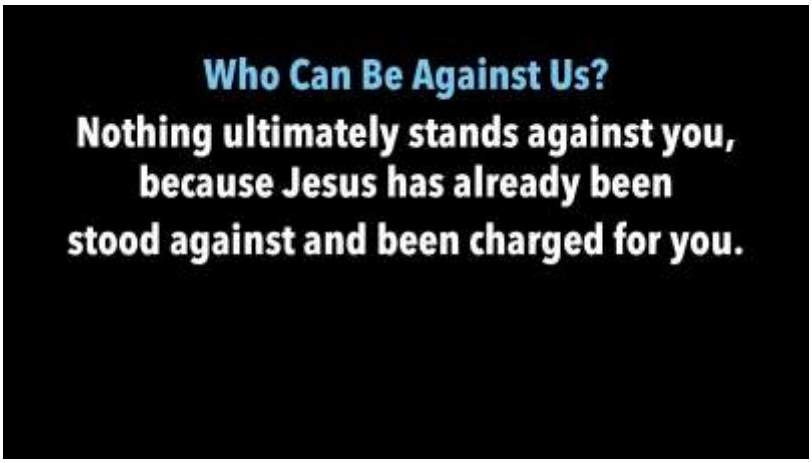
Before we complete our "8-in-8" section of Romans, we need to be reminded why this section is important by looking back at what Paul has been saying since Romans 1.

1. In Romans 1-8, Paul's overarching idea is that the good news of Jesus is God's power for salvation.



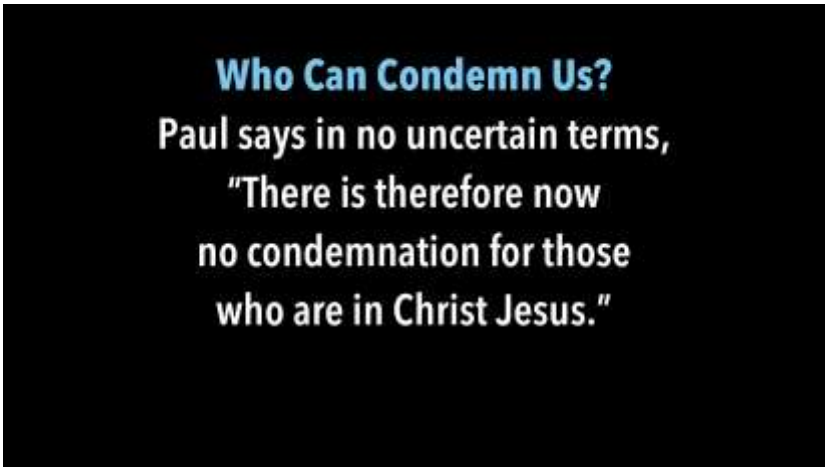
2. This completes Paul's single section of Romans 5-8 in which talks about what it's like to live well as God's rescued people.

3. Paul wants us to know that we walk according to the Spirit and not the flesh.



Paul sets out in Romans 8:31-39 to be even more clear so that we understand what he has been saying since Romans 1:1. Paul's approach to be more clear is to ask seven total questions. We will consider these questions in 3 sections.

I. Who Can Be Against Us?



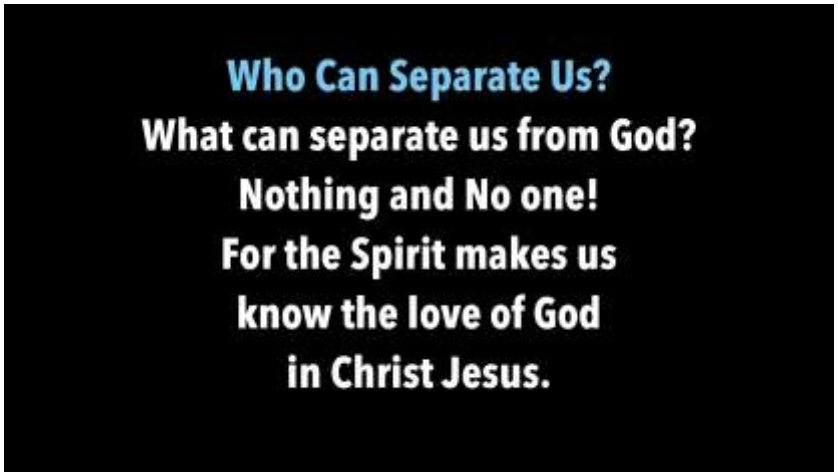
Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

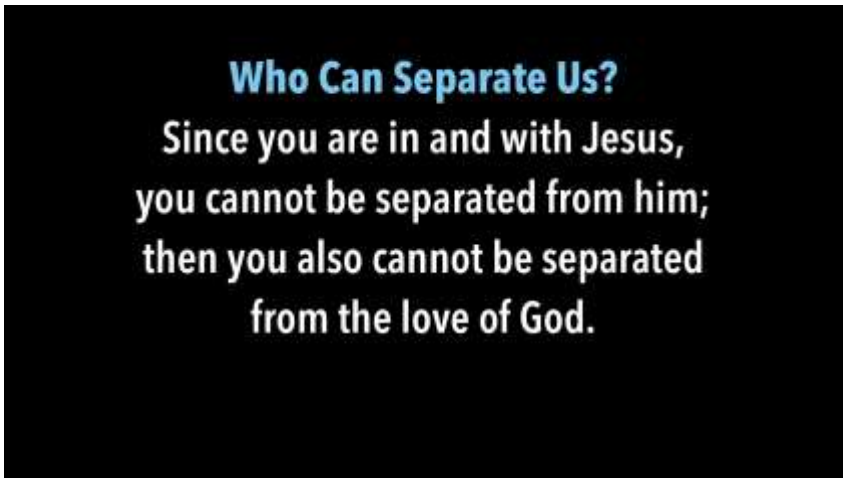
Answer: Nothing ultimately stands against you, because Jesus has already been stood against and been charged for you.

II. Who Can Condemn Us?

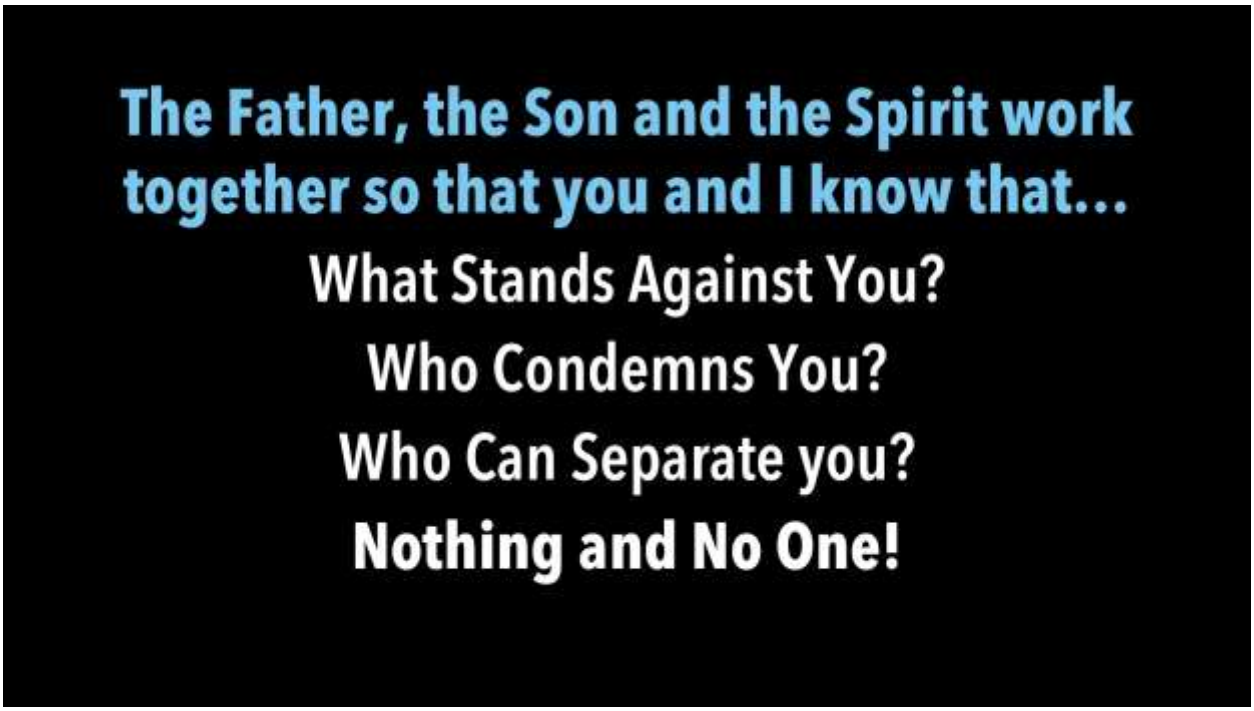
 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Answer: No One! For Jesus intercedes for you on the basis of his death and resurrection.





III. Who Can Separate Us?



Answer: Nothing and No one! For the Spirit makes us know the love of God in Christ Jesus.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

For those who have put their hope, assurance, and trust in Jesus by believing the Gospel; God wants to be blindingly clear about what is true of you:

1. Nothing stands against you.
2. Nothing can bring a charge against you.
3. No one can condemn you.
4. Nothing can separate you.
5. You are more than conquerors.
6. Nothing and no one can change that.
7. God loves you because he loves his Son, Jesus.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Romans 8:31-39

http://www.fbccs.org/resources/studyguides/romans_sg13.htm

Excerpt:

The teaching of the New Testament is that this very moment, there is a Man in heaven appearing in the presence of God for us. He is as certainly a man as was Adam or Moses or Paul; he is a man glorified, but His glorification did not dehumanize him. Today he is a real man, a visible and audible man, whom any other man would recognize instantly as one of us. But more than this, he is the heir of all things, Lord of all lords, head of the church, firstborn of the new creation. He is the way to God, the life of the believer, the hope of Israel, and the high priest of every true worshiper. He holds the keys of death and hell, and stands as an advocate for everyone who believes in Him.

Salvation comes by believing in the Lord Jesus Christ, the whole, living, victorious Lord who, as God and man, fought our fight and won it, accepted our debt as His own and paid it, took our sins and died. Under them, and rose again to set us free. This is the true Christ; nothing less will do.

In 1660 John Bunyan sat in deep despression wondering if he could go on, worrying about the future... "I remember that I was sitting in a neighbor's home, and was very sad, when that word came suddenly to me: "What shall we say to these things? If God be for us, who can be against us?" That was a great help to me."

When John Chrysostom was brought before the Roman Emperor in A.D. 400, the Emperor threatened to banish him if he remained a Christian. Chrysosotom replied:

"You can't banish me, for this world is my father's house."

"But I will kill you."

"You can't, for my life is hidden with Christ in God."

"I will take away your treasures."

"You can't, because my treasure is in heaven and my heart is there."

"I will drive you away from people and you will have no friends left."

"You can't, because I have a friend in heaven from whom you cannot separate me. I defy you; for there is nothing that you can do to hurt me."

Romans TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Fellowship Greenville, Jim Thompson (2018)
https://fellowshipgreenville.org/page/461?Item=1424

FG Romans
Sermon Series
<Prev Next>

SERIES: Romans: God's Power for Salvation
TITLE: Paul's TED Talk
SCRIPTURE: Romans 9:1-5

Most people appreciate a good TED talk online. TED talks are 10-15 minute speeches about different ideas, culture, art, music, business, etc.

And most of these talks begin with a quick introduction to get your attention, and then take you on a journey of seeing something important in a new and fresh way. Most TED talks include some shocking simplicity that is supposed to change the way you think about the world. And Romans 9-11 is Paul's TED talk.

Romans 9-11 is a single, unified stretch of Scripture that, if read out loud, takes about 10-15 minutes. And Paul's intro to this passage is an attention-grabbing emotional punch that starts the theological wheels turning, considering an old idea in a new way. While parts of these chapters have been counted among the most difficult in the New Testament, Paul's message is simple - the sovereign God is wise and faithful to his promises to ancient Israel. This is his simple message that he communicates in a somewhat shocking way.

But how does he start this talk? How does he grab our attention? Paul begins by saying that he has "great sorrow and unceasing anguish" (9:2) in his heart because of his Jewish brothers and sisters who don't know Jesus as their Messiah. This language should catch us off-guard. We don't often talk like this. We don't often talk about things that cause us constant anguish. And the thing that does it for Paul is that there are people who don't know Jesus.

Yes, Christians are called to joy and to hope. Yes, we're called to peace and to rest, but we're also called to long for others to come to know Jesus. Put simply, Passion for God includes a passion for others to know him.

Not only does Paul talk about this idea at the beginning of Romans 9, but also at the beginning of Romans 10: "Brothers, my heart's desire and prayer to God for them is that they may be saved" (10:1).

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

This means that we should share this same heart posture. We should earnestly desire others to come to know Christ and have a personal relationship with him.

Another powerful picture of someone whose heart was burdened for people to come to Jesus was 19th-century British pastor Charles Spurgeon. He wrote,

> "I remember, when I have preached at different times in the country, and sometimes here, that my whole soul has agonized over people – every nerve of my body has been strained, and I could have wept my very being out of my eyes, and carried my whole frame away in a flood of tears, if I could but win souls."

Spurgeon shared Paul's burden of wanting others to know God through Christ, and so should we. But Paul's specific burden was for his fellow Jews to know Jesus, and this takes us back to the big picture of Romans 9-11.

Paul wanted the Jewish and Gentile Christians in Rome to share this desire with him. Paul knew that racial, personal, and even theological unity can be achieved by having a shared sense of burden and mission for the world. And this mission, on one level, wouldn't fail. Why? Because God is faithful, even in spite of Israel's unbelief. God's faithfulness is the big idea of Paul's TED talk.

But how does Paul's emotionally-laden intro relate to the big picture of God's faithfulness that he'll continue to unfold for a few chapters? Well, our faithfulness to share the love of God with others is part of how God himself is faithful. He has commissioned us for this task. And even if we can't trace the precision of God's faithfulness, he's still faithful, and we're still called to faithfully respond to him.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Fellowship Greenville, Jim Thompson (2018)
https://fellowshipgreenville.org/page/461?Item=1427

FG Romans
Sermon Series
<Prev Next>

SERIES: Romans: God's Power for Salvation
TITLE: How Do You Measure Faithfulness?
SCRIPTURE: Romans 9:6-13

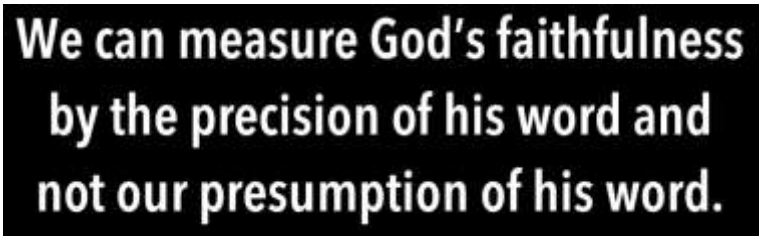
How do you measure faithfulness? Is it simply, you said you were going to do "X" and you didn't, so you're not faithful? Is that it? Or is faithfulness more about your motive? What If you tell your teenage son to go clean out the car, and you realized that he threw out all the trash and brought inside all the stuff that belongs inside, but he didn't vacuum it out. Was he unfaithful, or just not faithful to your liking? How precise were you in your instructions?



What about your marriage? Let's say you haven't had an affair, and you don't fight, and you support each other financially. Is that enough to count as faithfulness? Is that really all that you meant by "I promise to love and cherish you until death do us part?"

Obviously, the most important context in which we should think about this question is in our relationship to God. How do we know if we're rightly trusting, following, and obeying him? That's one side of the coin. But the other side of it is, how can we be sure that he'll stay faithful to us? Is he really fully reliable?

In Romans 9:6-13, Paul is writing to some of his friends who are starting to feel that perhaps God has been unfaithful. Throughout the Old Testament, God promised Israel that he would send them a Messiah-King to rescue them from their enemies and bring mercy, justice, and peace at last. And then Jesus – the Jewish Messiah – shows up on the scene, and much of ethnic Israel rejects him. Doesn't this make God look a little unfaithful, like he didn't follow through with his word? Of course not. God is always faithful, but Paul's explanation of h ow so is interesting.

Paul goes on to explain that not everybody born as a physical Jew was truly a "spiritual Jew." (Paul calls this circumcision of the heart in Romans 2). Paul then talks about how God chosen line of bring restoration and blessing to the world is usually the unlikely line (i.e. Isaac from the barren Sarah and Jacob the younger instead of Esau the elder). And all of this means that God's His word hasn't failed because he never defined membership in his family as primarily an issue of ethnic birthright or a human effort. Rather, membership in God's family has always been about his gracious calling. This proves God to be surprisingly and sovereignly faithful. And so…

We can measure God's faithfulness by the precision of his word and not our presumption of his word.

We should always be attuned to exactly what God has promised us, and we should never take those promises for granted. Old Testament Israel frequently assumed upon God's word to them, and lost sight of the promise and their vocation. But God's faithfulness seems to always include doing things backwards with backwards people. This is part of the precision of his promise.

Noah, go build an ark in the desert so that mercy will come out of judgment. Abraham, I'm going to change the world through your family and your wife can't have kids. Joseph, I'm going to make you a prince from a dungeon, and bring about abundance through famine. Moses, you have public speaking problems so go stand before the most supreme court and ruler in the land. Joshua, you're a teenager; now go lead 100,000 people into the promised land. Hosea, go marry a prostitute to show people my love for them even in their waywardness. Mary, you're a pregnant virgin. Sinners, I bring you life by my death. I bring you belonging by my being separated. I bring you wholeness by my being broken. I am your King, here to serve.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

And for many of these people, they probably thought that God's word had failed. Surely, this isn't the way he will be faithful, they thought. But sovereign and shocking faithfulness is faithfulness nonetheless.

So, is God reliable? Is he dependable? Yes, more than we could ever imagine. And this reliability and faithfulness is often unique, wooing us to trust him more. And while we should never presume on God's promises, we need a constant and clear vision of his faithfulness. And the decisive place to see this is in the gospel of Jesus.

Jesus is the reliability, dependability, and trustworthiness of God with skin on. Paul says in 2 Corinthians 1:20 that, "All the promises of God are YES in Him." Jesus is the place where God's surprising and steadfast faithfulness blossoms. And if God raised Jesus from the dead, then we have all the proof we need to continue to seek him, share him, know him, and make him known because he is and will be good to his word.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Fellowship Greenville, Charlies Boyd (2018)
https://fellowshipgreenville.org/page/461?Item=1439

FG Romans
Sermon Series
<Prev Next>

SERIES: Romans: God's Power for Salvation
TITLE: God Is God
SCRIPTURE: Romans 9

Undoubtedly, Romans 9 is one of the most difficult passages in all the Bible to understand. For those who have been Christians for some time, a big reason for this has to do with what we bring to the passage from what we may have been taught in the past. Specifically, the teaching that Romans 9 has to do with God's sovereignty over who goes to heaven and who goes to hell. But if we let the passage speak for itself, we find that individual salvation is not the theme of this chapter. So, what is it about? R omans 9 strongly sets forth God's sovereign, predetermined plan to save Gentiles, and a remnant of Jews, through faith in Messiah Jesus. The question Paul is answering in this chapter is this: H as God failed to keep his covenant promises to his people Israel? How can God be faithful and righteous and not save all Israel, but instead open the door of salvation to the Gentiles?

To see this as the main theme and to answer this question, it is essential that you follow the flow of thought through the whole chapter and not get bogged down, taking individual verses out of context. N.T. Wright puts it this way: "Reading this part of Romans is like riding a bicycle: if you stand still for more than a moment, forgetting the onward movement both of the story of 9:6-10:21 and of the letter as a whole, you are liable to lose your balance—or, perhaps, to accuse Paul of losing his." In other words, to understand Romans 9 you have to keep pedaling all the way to the end. What follows is my own interpretative paraphrase of 9:1-33 to help you pedal your way through.

At the close of chapter 8, Paul rejoices in the fact that—No one and nothing can separate us from the love of God in Messiah Jesus (8:35-39). He then anticipates a question: 'But if nothing can separate us from God's love, what about Israel? Compared to the number of Gentiles who are turning in faith to Jesus, only a small number of Jews are embracing Jesus as their Messiah. Has God failed to keep his promises to Israel?' Here's how Paul answers that question.

"I'm not lying when I say, my heart breaks for my people Israel. I would gladly separate myself from God if they would embrace Jesus as their Messiah. After all, it is through God's predetermined purposes and promises to Israel that Messiah Jesus has come" (9:1-5). B ut the fact is, God never promised that all of Abraham's descendants would be a part of God's new covenant people. Why not?

Because not all of the children of Abraham are children of God (6,7). Only those who are in the line of promise can become children of God. For example, of Abraham's two sons, Isaac was the child of promise, not Ishmael (9). And, Jacob, was the divinely chosen child of promise, not Esau. God was sovereignly choosing the line of promise through whom Messiah would come (10-13).

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Fellowship Greenville, Charlies Boyd (2018)
https://fellowshipgreenville.org/page/461?Item=1440

FG Romans
Sermon Series
<Prev Next>

SERIES: Romans: God's Power for Salvation
TITLE: Missing God
SCRIPTURE: Romans 10:1-21

Note: First segment of sermon was Boyd sharing about his trip to Rome that was provided as part of a travel package gifted by the church in honor of his 20th anniversary at the church as pastor. He had some interesting facts to share (worth listening to):

The question Paul is asking and answering in Romans 9-11 is this: Why are there more Gentiles than Jews being saved? Has God failed to keep his promises to Israel, his own chosen, elect people? Has God rejected Israel?

1. Ch. 9: No, God never promised that all of the children of Abraham would be children of God, only those in the line of promise can become God's children. According to God's purpose in election for Israel, God predetermined to harden the hearts of his own people in order to open a door of salvation to the rest of the world (Gentiles), while only a remnant in Israel would be saved. This was clearly prophesied in the Jewish Scriptures.

2. Ch. 10: No, God has not rejected Israel, Israel has rejected God. Israel has failed to come to God by faith in Christ even though their own Scriptures told them righteousness/salvation comes by faith, not works, and is available to all, not just them. They looked at their own Scriptures and did not see that they all pointed to Jesus. In ch. 10, Paul makes it clear that the reason so few Jews are being saved is not because of election, but because of their rejection of Jesus as their Messiah. It's not that God has rejected them, but they have rejected him.

Why did the Jews miss God-miss what God was doing by providing his salvation to everyone through faith in Jesus? Three reasons are given in ch.10.

I. The Jews missed God because they did not come to God on his terms (10:-14, see also 9:30-33). They were seeking right standing with God based on works, rather than faith in Christ.

II. The Jews missed God because they ignored the teaching of their own Scriptures that God's way of salvation was by faith, not works (10:5-20). The Law was not given as a job description for how to become righteous. The Law was not given as a way of earning salvation. It was given that Israel would trust in God's mercy and let their obedience flow out of their faith-out of the gratitude for all that God had done for them. That is at the heart of what the Law aimed to teach. The Jews could not say that they hadn't heard or didn't understand. God had made his plan and purposes known to them in the Law, the Psalms, and the Prophets. And that is precisely what Jesus taught as well. Turn from relying on your good works to save you and trust completely in the mercy of God to save you. Then let your obedience flow out of your faith in gratitude for what God has done for you. V erses 5-20 show us one Old Testament quotation after another to prove the point that God's way of salvation by faith has been plainly stated so the Jews have no excuse for missing the God.

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

A. (5-8) God's message of salvation by faith had been clearly proclaimed (5). The Gospel is within reach of all (6-8). It's simple and attainable, not difficult or hard to find (6-8).

B. (9-13) The Gospel is also offered to all-to everyone who believes by calling on the name of the Lord All these truths were plainly foretold in Israel's own Scriptures.

C. (14-20) However, the Gospel is not accepted by all. God sent many prophets to the Jews proclaiming God's way of salvation. They had heard and understand-they missed God not because he didn't tell them, but because they refused to hear. In v.18, Paul shows from both Moses (Dt 32:21) and Isaiah (65:1) that God had planned all along to include Gentiles in his ultimate plan of salvation and to make them his people.

III. The Jews missed God because they turned their backs to God's relentless, gracious invitation to come to him by faith in Messiah Jesus (10:21).

In ch. 10, Paul is explaining why Israel missed God-why they missed the point of the Law and their own history-missed the salvation God has provided in Jesus. He's telling us these things so we don't make the same mistake and end up missing him as well.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Romans 10:1-12

Paul is discussing that Israel needs the Gospel and referencing Scripture (OT)…

[10:1] Brethren, my heart's desire and prayer to God for Israel is that they may be saved. [2] For I bear them witness that they have a zeal for God, but not according to knowledge. [3] For they being ignorant of God's righteousness, and seeking to establish their own righteousness, have not submitted to the righteousness of God. [4] For Christ is the end of the law for righteousness to everyone who believes. [5] For Moses writes about the righteousness which is of the law, "The man who does those things shall live by them." [6] But the righteousness of faith speaks in this way, "Do not say in your heart, 'Who will ascend into heaven?'" (that is, to bring Christ down from above) [7] or, "'Who will descend into the abyss?'" (that is, to bring Christ up from the dead). [8] But what does it say? "The word is near you, in your mouth and in your heart" (that is, the word of faith which we preach): [9] that if you confess with your mouth the Lord Jesus and believe in your heart that God has raised Him from the dead, you will be saved. [10] For with the heart one believes unto righteousness, and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation. [11] For the Scripture says, "Whoever believes on Him will not be put to shame." [12] For there is no distinction between Jew and Greek, for the same Lord over all is rich to all who call upon Him. [13] For "whoever calls on the name of the LORD shall be saved."

Text from OT Scripture in GREEN
What Paul/associates preached summarized in RED

Notes:

Ro 10:1-2. Jewish literature from this period often praises zeal for the law, even to the point of violently resisting those who wished to repress Jewish practice of the law.

Ro 10:4 For Christ has already accomplished the purpose for which the law was given (or For Christ is the end of the law, or For Christ is the culmination of the law): The function of the law was to point forward and prepare the way for the Messiah; Jesus' coming does not destroy the law but fulfills all of its requirements, so that the primary requirement for God's people is to believe in him.

[Source: NLT Study Book Note]

Two Approaches to Righteousness

Educated Greeks and Romans often cited classical sources to support their arguments; like other Jewish teachers, Paul cites the Jewish and Christian canonical source, the Scriptures.

Ro 10:5. One approach is based on a particular Jewish interpretation of Lev 18:5: those who keep the commandments merit eternal life. (Texts such as these—cf. also Dt 4:1,26,40; 5:33; 8:1; 16:20; 30:16,20—originally promised long life on the land. But by Paul's era Jewish interpreters understood these texts as promising eternal life, apparently holding this view alongside the view that God elects Israel as a whole to be saved.) This kind of righteousness would prove difficult for Gentiles without years of enculturation or study of the law. Paul also established in Ro 1-3 and chapter 7 that this kind of righteousness does not work (see comment on 9:30-32).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Ro 10:6-7. Paul here does midrash, expounding a text in good Jewish fashion. In context, "Who will ascend?" in Dt 30:12 means, "Who will ascend again, to bring the law down again?" (Moses ascended only to Sinai, but in Jewish tradition he ascended all the way to heaven to receive the law; in Deuteronomy, God provided the law from heaven.) "Who will descend?" in Dt 30:13 means "Who will descend into the Red Sea to cross it again?" (Although not in this text, the Septuagint often translates "sea" as "abyss," as Paul does here.) God had redeemed his people at the Sea, according to the Old Testament and Jewish tradition; now, God has consummated his saving acts in Christ, and the same principle applies to him. (Paul adapts the opening wording slightly to work in a midrashic allusion to Dt 9:4, which, with Dt 9:5-6, reminds Israel that they are not righteous.)

Ro 10:8. Dt 30:14 refers to the law; as long as it is written in the heart (cf. 30:6; Ps 37:31; Isa 51:7), God's people could live out its righteousness (cf. Dt 30:11; Je 31:31-34). Paul says that this principle applies all the more to the message of faith that the law teaches (3:31); grace , not human effort, leads to righteousness (8:2-4).

Ro 10:9-10. Paul emphasizes "mouth" and "heart" here because he is expounding Dt 30:14 (cited in the previous verse), which speaks of the message of faith in one's mouth and heart.

Table 6. Paul's Use of Deuteronomy 30:12-14 in Romans 10:6-10

Dt 30:12-14	Paul's application of the principles in Ro 10:6-10
Do not say, "Who will ascend to heaven?" (to bring down God's gift of the law; 30:12)	Do not say, "Who will ascend to heaven?" (to bring down God's gift of Christ; 10:6)
Do not say, "Who will descend into the sea?" Do not say, "Who will descend into the abyss?" (for salvation; 30:13)	Do not say, "Who will descend into the abyss?" (For salvation; 10:7)
The word (the law) is near you (30:14)	The word (the gospel) is near you (10:8)
In your mouth and in your heart (30:14; probably recitation of the law, cf. 6:6-7)	Confess with the mouth that Jesus is Lord; believe with the heart that God raised him from the dead (10:9-10)

Romans 10:11-21
Salvation for All Peoples

Ro 10:11-12. Paul again cites Isa 28:16 (see Ro 9:33), which he is still explaining. His emphasis is on the "whoever" (NASB, GNT), by which he argues that the text must apply literally to Gentiles as well as Jews.

Ro 10:13. Jewish teachers commonly expounded a text by citing other texts that shared the same key word; hence Paul ties in another verse (Joe 2:32) that has the word "whoever" to explain that in Isa 28:16 "not be disappointed" (NASB) or "not be put to shame" (NIV) means "be saved."

[Source: IVP Bible Background Commentary, 2nd Ed.]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Fellowship Greenville, Jim Thompson (2018)
https://fellowshipgreenville.org/page/461?Item=1444

FG Romans
Sermon Series
<Prev Next>

SERIES: Romans: God's Power for Salvation
TITLE: Jealous Jews and Grafted Gentiles
SCRIPTURE: Romans 11:1-24

The gospel is the good news that the crucified and risen Jesus is the true Lord of the world. And through the power of the gospel, God is changing people because of and to be like him. The major movements in Romans show that the gospel not only brings salvation, but it also brings transformation. And the last half of Romans shows us how the gospel additionally brings about unity.

Unity is always tough because relationships are tough, but it was especially difficult for the church at Rome.

Jewish Christians were frustrated that Gentile Christians weren't doing more Jewish stuff like circumcision and Sabbath; Gentile Christians were frustrated that Jewish Christians showed such little respect to Caesar; Jewish Christians were perplexed that Gentile Christians were okay with eating meat and drinking wine sacrificed to idols; and so on.

But underneath all of this, and what made it even more difficult, is that the exact reason God called Abraham (and Israel) long ago was to be a blessing and a light to all the families of the earth – to the Gentiles. And because of time, pride and presumption, Israel reduced the package deal of salvation and vocation to largely exclude the idea of vocation before God. This made matters far worse. So, in the church at Rome, there was a certain kind of Jewish pride and a certain kind of Gentile pride, and both needed to stop. And all of this helps us see the big picture of Romans 11.

Yes, God has been faithful to Israel; he hasn't rejected them. But the temporal hardening they were experiencing meant salvation for Gentiles. And Gentile salvation was in order to make Jews jealous and desire their Christ. But in all of this, the grafted-into-the-family Gentiles had become smug and arrogant toward their Jewish brothers and sisters. They were doing the very thing that caused Israel to miss the point throughout the Old Testament. And this is what Paul is writing to address. Simply put…

- In 11:1-10, the rejection of Israel is not TOTAL because there's a remnant of Israel with believing Gentiles that see Jesus as Messiah.
- In 11.11-24, the rejection of Israel is not FINAL because the jealousy of Israel b ecause of believing Gentiles will continue to bring them to Jesus as Messiah.

Again, in Paul's mind, these ideas are further proof that God is faithful, sovereign, and wise, and that his people should be faithful, humble, and not presumptuous. While Romans 11 subtly asserts God's faithfulness, it also rebukes God's people into unity.

What could've guarded Israel from pride in the Old Testament, what could've guarded the Gentile Christians from pride in the Roman church, and what should guard us from pride as Christians today is understanding our divinely-given vocation – our holy responsibility and calling before a sovereign God.

Your vocation includes knowing that your salvation and transformation aren't only about you; they are about unity.

Israel missed it before Jesus came. The Gentile Christians presumed it after he came. And now the ball is in our court. How should this idea of vocation change our attitude? How should it push us towards unity? How does it change how we think about God? And how do salvation and vocation relate?

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The key to these things is to know that salvation and vocation are a package deal and are both by grace. If we know this and live like it's true, it will guard us against pride and presumption, and launch us into our responsibility. This grace is most evident in seeing Jesus' story in light of Israel's story because where Israel failed, Jesus fulfilled.

- Israel was supposed to be a family that reflected Adam's vocation to "fill the earth" by being a light and blessing to all nations. But Jesus is the Second Adam who fulfills Israel's responsibility to b e a light and b lessing to all nations.
- Israel was exiled from the land because of their idolatry, sin, and rebellion. Jesus was exiled from God because of the idolatry, sin, and rebellion of the world.
- Israel is bearing God's temporal wrath because of their unbelief. Jesus has borne the eternal wrath of God because of his representative sacrifice.
- Israel, after a temporal and partial hardening, can return to their God by faith in their Messiah Jesus. And Jesus, after a temporal and victorious death, will always be faithful to receive those who confess him as Messiah and Lord.

These are the individual trees, but the forest is grace. It's not on the basis of works, otherwise grace would no longer be grace (11:6). Rather, our salvation, transformation, vocation, unity, and responsibility – all of these are rooted firmly in the grace we have in Jesus. And because of this, we should and lay down our pride (11:18), stand fast in faith (11:20), and continue in his kindness (11.22). Jesus has taken our place, assumed our role, and carried it out. And in trusting him, there is pride-killing and grace-giving life.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Fellowship Greenville, Charlies Boyd (2018)
https://fellowshipgreenville.org/page/461?Item=1465

FG Romans
Sermon Series
<Prev Next>

SERIES: Romans: God's Power for Salvation
TITLE: Theology Becomes Doxology
SCRIPTURE: Romans 11:1-36

To understand what Paul is trying to tell us in Romans 11, we need to be able to follow his flow of thought through the entire chapter. Remember, what Paul writes here, he wrote t o Jew and Gentile Christians in the church of Rome in the first century. He wrote to them, but he also wrote f or us. Even though there are no direct parallels to the Jew and Gentile Christian problem in the Roman church, there are things that we can learn today about how God has worked to bring his predetermined plan of salvation to pass and how God works in ways that don't always make sense to us. The question then is: What do you do with a God you cannot fully understand? But, before we can answer that question, we've got to answer the questions the apostle Paul addresses in this chapter. Here's what I see as his flow of thought…

1. Has God rejected his people? No, by his grace, a believing remnant of Jews continues to experience his blessings because of their faith in Jesus. Those who did not believe were hardened (11:1-10).

2. So, as a nation, is Israel's failure final? No, even though it might seem like God has given up on Israel, he hasn't. God is using Israel's current unbelief to extend his plan and promise of salvation to the whole world (11:11-24).

3. What God has done and is doing for Israel is a "mystery," but what is clear is that, in the future God's favor and blessing will once again rest on Israel as a nation (11:25-32).

4. When we see the mystery of how God has worked to save all people through faith in Messiah Jesus, our theology will become doxology (11:33-36). We need to get comfortable with the fact that some of God's ways of working can't be forced into the dimensions of our ways of thinking.

5. What do you do with a God you cannot fully understand? You __worship___him and ___praise__ him and you __trust__ that his judgments are true and his ways are always right for you.

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Fellowship Greenville, Jim Thompson (2018)
https://fellowshipgreenville.org/page/461?Item=1527

FG Romans
Sermon Series
<Prev Next>

SERIES: Romans: God's Power for Salvation
TITLE: Living Sacrifices
SCRIPTURE: Romans 12:1-2

Isn't it sad when Christians are exactly like everybody else? They profess with their mouths that Jesus has saved them and changed them, but there is zero difference between their lives and the lives of others. What's really sad about it is that the lack of difference whispers to a hopeless world that they really don't need Jesus. After all, he can't really change you that much because we're the exact same.

But where should the difference lie? Everybody has to eat, drink, sleep, drive, work, love, laugh, wear clothes, communicate, etc. So, on some level, there won't be any difference between unbelievers and followers of Jesus, and that's fine. This just means that the some of this isn't about participation in certain actions, but some of it is about attitude, heart, and motive. For example, while noble, the Amish community has completely separated themselves from the outside world, and they have created their own bubble to live in. This can't be what Jesus and the New Testament writers are talking about.

So, we have to figure out, in what ways are believers called to be distinct and unique? We all know that light and darkness aren't the same, but both realities have to occupy the same space for you to observe and articulate the differences. So, how should we live in the world and with the world but not play by its rules? What should it look like for these differences to take shape in us? It's questions like these that Paul is bumping up against in Romans 12:1-2:

> I appeal to you therefore, brothers and sisters, by the mercies of God, to present your bodies as a living sacrifice, holy and acceptable to God, this is your spiritual worship. Do not be conformed to this world, but be transformed by the renewal of your mind, that by testing you may discern what is the will of God, what is good and acceptable and perfect.

Here, Paul is calling his friends to a special kind of life. And he's using strong and pregnant language to do so. When he uses the term "living sacrifice," he's suggesting so many different things:

1. This is a phrase that encapsulates how a Christian's life should be described after they understand the mercy of God in the gospel (12:1). Paul continues to talk about this through Romans 12-16.

2. Paul is careful with his language. He says to offer your bodies (plural noun) as a living sacrifice (singular noun). And in doing this, he's reminding the Romans of their continued need for unity.

3. This is an allusion to the Old Testament sacrificial system. In the OT, an Israelite would bring God the best of their flocks as a sacrifice, and the sacrifice would be pleasing to God. And doing this cost the worshipper something (their best livestock).

4. In 12:2, Paul gives two descriptors of living sacrifices. They should be conformed to this present, passing world; and they should be transformed by having their thinking continually shaped by the gospel. This is how living sacrifices should function.

And if we take our time, and consider well what Paul is saying, he helps us answer our questions about why Christians look like everybody else, and what should be done about it. The simple answer is that we should be living sacrifices. But this is also complex and difficult. Why?

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

> Living sacrifices should be known for their gracious non-conformity, their normal abnormality, and their humble transformation because of and for Jesus.

Sadly, heeding this call is often just too hard for us so we just settle for looking like everybody else, and sometimes that slips into mindless compliance with the way the system does things because that's just easier and it doesn't cost us anything. But if truly grasp the mercy extended to us in the gospel, we will see that whatever it costs to passionately follow Jesus is worth it. Living sacrifices aren't after cultural decency, popularity, fame, broader networks, bigger houses, or faster cars. Living sacrifices are supposed to lay down their lives for others to know God. They are called to dying and living in such a way that God is pleased, and the gospel is seen as awesome.

And there's only one real reason why we're called to live this way, and this reason includes and gives life to every other little reason. We should be living sacrifices because because Jesus is the supreme living sacrifice for us. He's the Lamb of God who takes away the sin of the world He has taken our rebellion, our pride, our guilt, and our victimization into himself at the cross. But his sacrificial death wasn't the end of his story. He rose again as the perfect sign that God's new world had invaded this passing, present age. He is the consummate place where all the mercies of God are on display. He lived in the world, but didn't conform to its ways. Rather, he came to bring lasting transformation to a fractured, lost world. He was the living sacrifice in the world so that he would be the living sacrifice for the world.

And now he wants us follow in his tracks - to be living sacrifices in and for the world. He wants us to reflect him by trusting him and obeying him. And again, no matter what it costs, it's worth it.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Fellowship Greenville, Charlies Boyd (2018)
https://fellowshipgreenville.org/page/461?Item=1533

FG Romans
Sermon Series
<Prev Next>

SERIES: Romans: God's Power for Salvation
TITLE: Renewing Your Mind
SCRIPTURE: Romans 12:1-2

Every Sunday morning, we come to church, we open the Bible and we hear God's truth—truth upon truth upon truth, and sometimes, the Holy Spirit pinpoints things in our lives that need to change: relationships that need to change, habits that need to go, circumstances that need to be re-evaluated. We agree with the truth we hear and we want to be different and do different and we think—"When I go home things are going to be different." But sometimes, when we take the do's and dont's and the oughts and the ought nots of Scripture back into our homes and schools and jobs and relationships, sometimes, the things that God tells us to do don't always make a whole lot of sense in our daily lives.

Why is that? …Why is that what makes so much sense in here on Sunday, makes so little sense everywhere else the rest of the week? …And why is it that we can be sure of what we ought to do and yet it be so difficult to be consistent in applying that very thing that we're so sure that the Bible teaches and that God would have us do? …That's the questions I want to address this morning.

In writing to the church in Rome, Paul addressed a divided church—a church made up of Jewish Christians and Greek Christians who didn't like each other very much. He wrote to try to lay a doctrinal foundation strong enough to heal the divide between the two groups. Both groups knew and believed Gospel doctrine, but living it out was a problem.

Here's the problem for them and for us—Biblical application apart from biblical thinking results in short-term obedience and long-term frustration (Andy Stanley). The problem is that many Christians know that what God says is true and right and good, but because we don't have God's perspective on all of life, actually applying what we know, doesn't always make sense.

Romans 12:1-2 addresses this question—Why is there a disconnect between what we say we believe and how we live? The answer is—Because we may not have made a decision to present ourselves to God as a living sacrifice and then followed that decision with many other daily decisions to not allow ourselves to be conformed to the lies of this world but rather be in a serious process of having our minds renewed with God's truth. Three commands:

1. Present yourselves to God as a living sacrifice. That is, in view of God's mercy and grace, the most logical thing you can do is to present yourself to God by saying, "Wow God, your grace is amazing! So, God, you name it, and I'll do it." Make a decision to give yourself completely to God.

2. Do not be conformed to this world. That is, stop being conformed to the lies this world is telling you.

   To be conformed to this world means that I take my values, standards, and priorities from the world around me. The problem of being conformed can be short-circuited by being transformed.

3. Be transformed by the renewing of your mind. That is, commit yourself to a serious process of developing God's perspective on all of life.

The reason there's a disconnect between what we know we ought to do and our actually doing it, is because even though we know what God tells us to do, we're not consistently in a process of having our minds renewed. As a result, we continue to believe the lies of conformity we breathe in every single day.

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

But let's dig deeper into what it means to have our minds renewed. Three steps to renewing your mind:

1. Take off the old—Identify the lies of conformity that you believe. Evaluate your temptations. Evaluate your reactions. Evaluate your feelings. Think about the lies under these three things that allow you to rationalize why you don't think what God says really applies to you.

2. Put on the new—Replace the lies with truth. In view of the fact that we have been and are being conformed to the values, standards, and priorities of this world—we need to realign our values, standards, and priorities with God's truth—with how God sees things.

3. Plug the holes that allow the lies to seep in. Or, said another way: Flee what is harmful and feed what is helpful. First, make a decision. Second, remember, input equals output. Make wise, daily decisions about what's coming into your life on a daily basis.

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Fellowship Greenville, Jim Thompson (2018)
https://fellowshipgreenville.org/page/461?Item=1539

FG Romans
Sermon Series
<Prev Next>

SERIES: Romans: God's Power for Salvation
TITLE: One Body in Christ
SCRIPTURE: Romans 12:3-8

The book of Romans is a masterfully written exposition of the gospel of God. Without a doubt, it is the foundation of authentic Christianity and the most articulate, systematic understanding of our faith found in the Bible. Countless lives have been changed by the truth found in this ancient letter, and it continues to change lives today. Interestingly enough, Romans was written to Christians. So, while the good news found in Romans can certainly bring people to faith in Jesus, the actual focus is on how the gospel helps Christians think rightly about God, life, faith, and Christian community. If you want to grow to know God more personal and intimate way, this letter is for you!

Have you ever paid close attention to how football actually works? It's not just raw athleticism. It has to include strategy, trust, respect, unity in purpose, and diversity in role, and the entire team has to buy into these things. If a football team is going to call a running a play to the left side of the field, the quarterback, offensive lineman, the wide receivers - they all have a specific task in making that play a success. They all have to block or move in a certain direction to open up running lanes on the left side of the field. And if one person misses a block or fails to execute, then the play collapses. But, if everybody does their part and carries out their task the way they're supposed to, a win is possible.

These ideas of being on the same team and working toward the same goal, yet doing so by having unique responsibilities, are a need picture for the church. In Christ, we are a part of his family. We're a team. We are unified. And we all have special jobs. One of the primary ways that the New Testament talks about these ideas is with the language of "spiritual gifts." Sadly, much of the American church has traded in a healthy vision of being on a team with distinct spiritual gifts for letting pastors and paid staff put on a show that they can go watch if they feel like it. The truth is, because of the gospel, every Christian gets the Holy Spirit, and then the Spirit equips every follower of Jesus with unique and detailed gifts that are needed by those around them. And thinking about these things isn't merely about how church can work best. These things are about function rightly as the body of Christ, about continuing Jesus' own life in the world.

So, how does Jesus' family work as a team? What does it look like to work alongside each other with a shared purpose, but distinct responsibilities in executing that purpose? In short, what's the deal with spiritual gifts? Paul addresses these things in Romans 12:3-8.

In this passage, Paul is writing to a church that is struggling with issues of unity. He's already written to them about what they all share and what they all have in common. So, here he emphasizes their differences, how they're gifted uniquely by the Spirit. And he starts by telling them not to think more highly of themselves than they ought (12:3). This suggests that the path to understanding and using your spiritual gift(s) is humility. Paul then goes on talk about how they are all members of Christ's body. New Testament scholar James Dunn writes, "Some people think that the body is one despite its diversity, but that is not Paul's vision. Instead, for Paul, the body is one by virtue of its diversity." And with these ideas, Paul is reminding his friends that their gifts serve a purpose bigger than each one of them on their own. And finally, Paul lists seven different spiritual gifts in 12:6-8. This isn't an exhaustive list because there are other gifts listed in 1 Corinthians 12-14 and elsewhere, but these are examples of how the gifts vary. Again, these differences don't detract from, but add up to unity and to Christ-likeness. That's how Paul sees it. In other words, the quarterback needs the offensive line, who needs the wide receivers, etc.

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Now, Paul is very clear that all these different gifts of the Spirit are also free gifts of grace (12:3, 12:6, 12:6). And grace means that we don't have any excuse when it comes to figuring out, understanding, and using our spiritual gifts to point others towards the worth and beauty of Jesus. The same grace that forgives in salvation freely equips us in transformation. And learning to give our lives away with the gifts given to us gives us a more vivid picture of what God is up to.

So, it's clear that gospel-unity works by the Spirit uniquely furnishing each believer with gifts. That's how the church works together as a team. But how do we go about this practically? For the Romans, this was how Jew and Gentile harmonized. For us, this is the gateway to intimacy with God and each other. So, how should we pursue life as "one body in Christ"? Here are five suggestions:

1. KNOW WHAT YOUR GIFTS AREN'T. Realizing what your gifts you don't have isn't an excuse to be lazy, but a call to focus on how God has gifted you. No one from the offensive line should play quarterback. And that's not hurtful, it's liberating because it means you get to...

2. DISCOVER WHAT YOUR GIFTS ARE. Start with humility. Never forget that they're all gifts of grace. Surround yourself with people who will tell you the truth about how God's wired you and how he hasn't. And because your gifts will never be discovered in a vacuum…

3. ACKNOWLEDGE THE GIFTS OF OTHERS. If you can see God working in and through a fellow brother or sister in Jesus, call it what it is. Doing this will help you become more attuned to how the Holy Spirit equips and animates and brings life to and through the body of Christ.

4. EXERCISE THEM IN COMMUNITY. Don't forget, we are members of one another, and we belong to each other as we belong to Jesus. Whether it's a gift of teaching, serving, evangelism, or having mercy, the Spirit gifts people to work in, alongside, for, and to grow the body of Christ.

5. AIM THEM AT CHRIST. Some people are often tempted to think that their spiritual gifts make them important. The quarterback may be talented, but he's not the point. Yes, your spiritual gifts are for you, but they are not fundamentally about you. They are about Jesus. He's the point. Remember, this is about continuing his very life in the world.

And these above suggestions become natural reflexes when we look at the ultimate self-giving love of God in the gospel. In the death and resurrection of Jesus, we see the grace and humility and love that fuel our spiritual gifts, and thereby cause us to live well as Christ's body here on earth. It is the self-giving love of God in the good news of Jesus that Spirit is seeking to use in order to energize us into faithfulness. And when we each know and do our part as a team, the world has before them a glorious picture of Jesus.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Fellowship Greenville, Charlies Boyd (2018)
https://fellowshipgreenville.org/page/461?Item=1546

FG Romans
Sermon Series
<Prev Next>

SERIES: Romans: God's Power for Salvation
TITLE: Let Love Be Genuine
SCRIPTURE: Romans 12:9-21

To my way of thinking, one of the hardest things for people who are seeking to follow Christ to do is to love people who don't believe and live like them. I mean, we believe, by the grace of God, we've come to know God and we know, by what's written in the Bible, how God wants people to live. We believe that the Bible teaches us the difference between good and evil—right and wrong—wise and unwise. I'm not saying we always live according to what we know is right and wrong—but for the most part, we know right and wrong and we're really good at seeing when others aren't living the way they should. And that's where the rub is because: When you think you're right about something, it can be very hard to love people you believe are wrong. But the same Bible that teaches us what's right and wrong also tells us that if we don't genuinely love all people—those who agree with us and those who disagree with us— then we are not right with God even though we might be right about what we believe.

Matthew 5:43-48--Jesus is correcting what has been taught by the Pharisees which basically was, "Love the people who believe like us and live like us. Consider everyone else an enemy." But Jesus taught us to love our enemies; love people who believe and live differently from you because God loves people who don't live like he tells them to live. That's not to say that they won't face God's judgment at some point in the future. But in the here and now, God shows himself to be good to all people, good or bad. Therefore, so must we.

But we have a hard time loving people we believe are wrong because to act in loving ways toward someone we believe is wrong feels like we're condoning their wrong behavior. But if our Father in Heaven can love people in the wrong without compromising his inherent righteousness and if Jesus can love unholy people without compromising his holiness, then why can't we?

The apostle Paul paraphrases and expands on what Jesus said in Matthew 5 in Romans 12:9-21. This passage contains over 30 do and don't commands depending how you parse them out. But, simply reading them doesn't automatically bring the life-change we need? So how can a list of 30 commands make a difference in our lives?

Let's think about the historical context in the Roman church. The Roman church was made of Christians from Jew and Greek backgrounds. And even though these two groups of people came to be God's one new people in Christ, they were still very different people. They believed the same basic Gospel doctrines, but in regards to "secondary" matters, they held very different convictions (see Romans 14:2-6 for specific examples of their differing convictions). Each group thought their way of seeing things was the right way/the only way to see things and that meant everyone else was wrong. The question is: How do you bring these two groups together and get them to live in harmony with each other. Paul's big idea was:

God has made you one people in Christ so don't let secondary matters make you two again.

Paul's says, only by learning to genuinely love each other can unity be preserved.

Let your love be genuine, he says. The word "genuine" or "sincere" literally means "unhypocritical/without hypocrisy"--Let your love be without hypocrisy. How is that possible? Let your love be genuine/unhypocritical by hating what's evil and holding fast to what's good (v.1) which would ensure that you are not overcome by evil yourself and that you would overcome evil by doing good (v.21). Unity will only be preserved when believers genuinely love each other despite their differences.

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

But our love can become hypocritical when: (1) We pretend to love someone on the outside when we have unloving feeling toward them on the inside. Our love must be true to our hearts. We are to love those we don't love. ??? How is that possible? What do you do when you know the Bible tells you to act in loving ways toward someone, but you don't have the loving feelings to back it up? Isn't that hypocritical. Yes it is, but that doesn't let you off the hook. The Gospel teaches us that we are to love others as God loves us. So when we find it hard to love someone, we do loving things while repenting of unloving feelings. If you show love as you repent of unloving feelings, your heart softens and your love becomes more genuine toward hard-to-love people over time.

Also, (2) Our love can become hypocritical when we refuse to confront the wrong someone is doing in the name of love. In other words, our love must be true to the will of God. Example: Jesus and the woman caught in adultery in John 8--Jesus stood up for the woman, but he stood against her sin. He hated the evil of her being enslaved to sin, but at the same time he held fast to the good by loving her well.

Who do you have hard feelings toward? Who has hurt you so bad it's hard for you to love them? Who do you believe is wrong about something they're doing and it makes you so mad you can't hardly stand it? Is it someone outside the church? Someone inside the church? Is there anyone you despise? Read back through vv.9-21 and ask the Holy Spirit to apply specific expressions of genuine love to your heart as it relates to that person or group of people.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Fellowship Greenville, Charlies Boyd (2018)
https://fellowshipgreenville.org/page/461?Item=1548

FG Romans
Sermon Series
<Prev Next>

SERIES: Romans: God's Power for Salvation
TITLE: Politics and the Gospel
SCRIPTURE: Romans 13:1-8

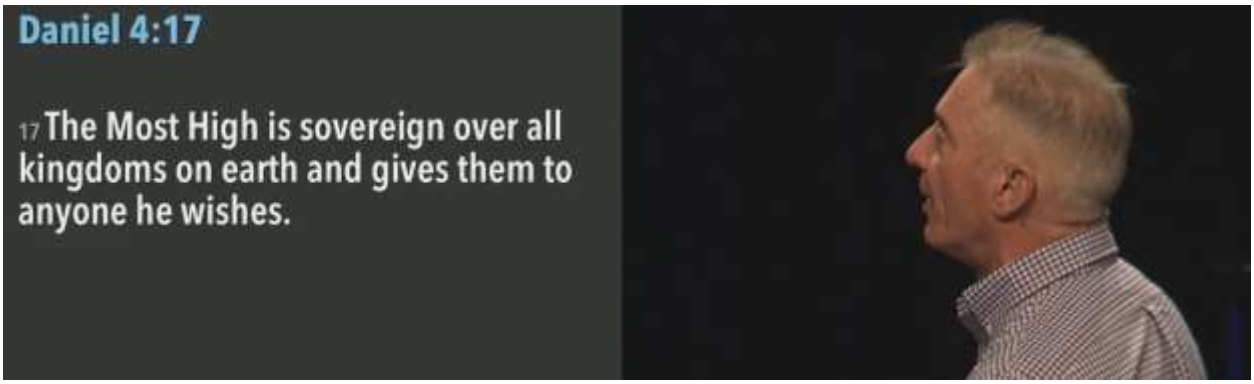
[Read: What to do if you encounter an Anaconda]

> "Christians too often take what oughta be first and we leave it to last, and take what's last and make it first."

I think you would agree with me that the political climate we live in today is worse than it's ever been. We live in a politically divided country. The question is: Does God have anything to say about it? The answer is, "Yes." Romans 13:1-8 speaks to the issue of God and government--of Politics and the Gospel. But what you read in this passage doesn't sound anything like the political rhetoric you hear today.

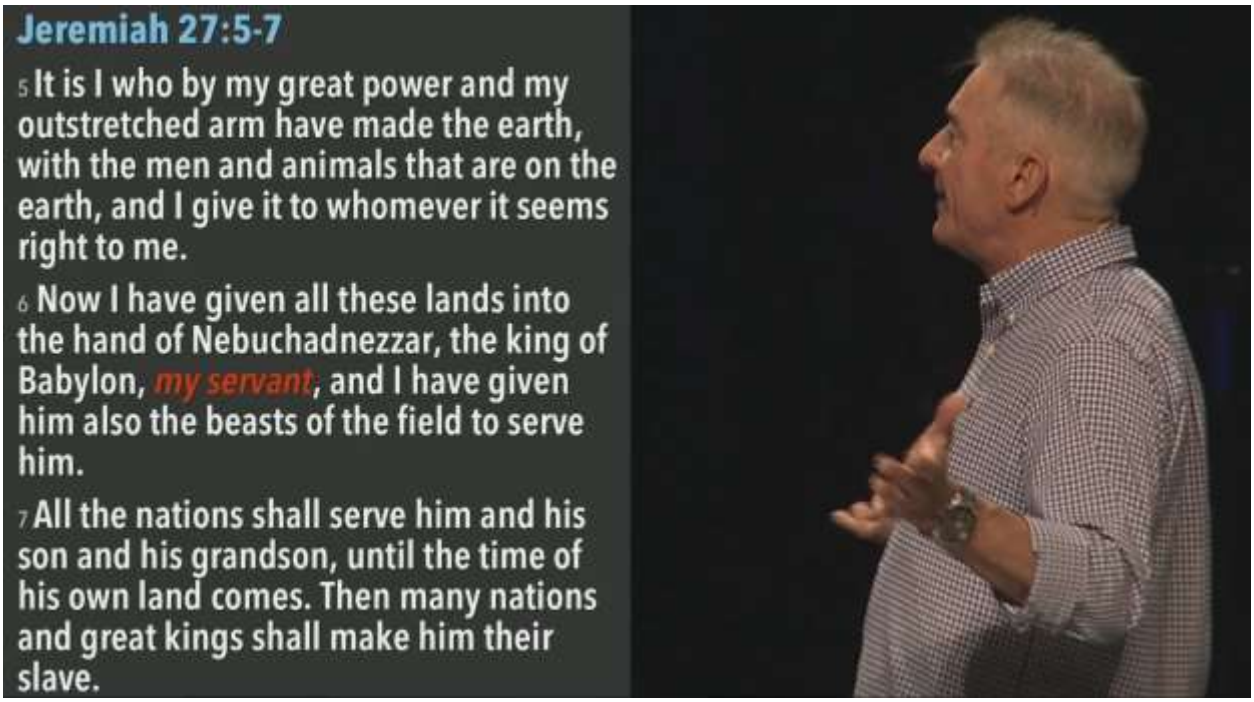


The Gospel that saves us is the Gospel for a divided world. Our main calling as a church is to put the Gospel on display in our divided world. But if we're not careful, our political convictions can easily eclipse the Gospel. Christians today have a unique opportunity to hold firmly to our political opinions with humility and hope, without being mean-spirited. Remember, Romans 12:2—"Do not be conformed to this world, but be transformed by the renewing of your minds." Rom 13:1-8 lays out what this non-conformity looks like in the world of government and politics.

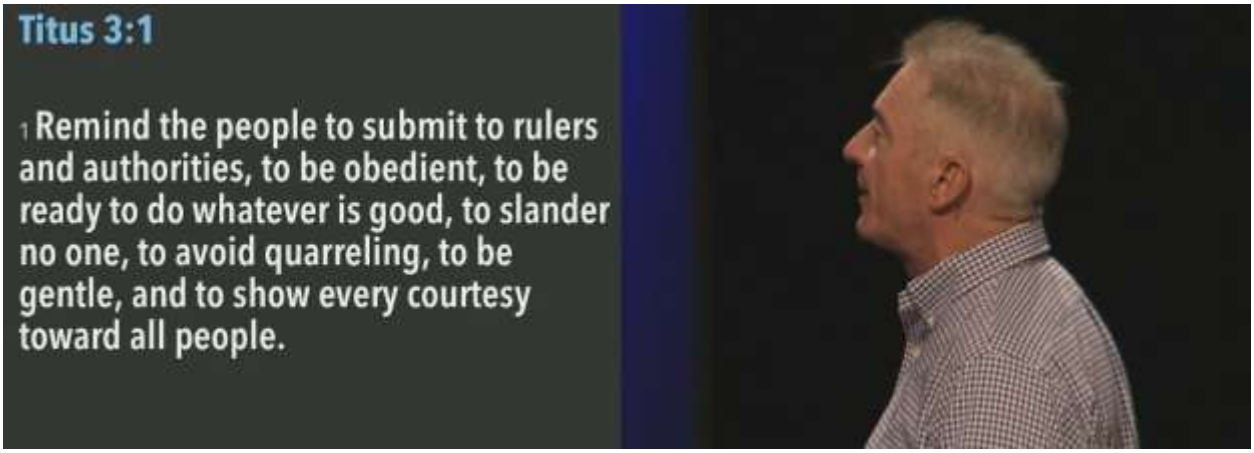
READ Romans 13:1-8 —

First and foremost, the main idea of this passage is—"Let everyone be subject to their governing authorities." Why is that true? —because—

(1) God's in charge of who's in charge (13:1-2).



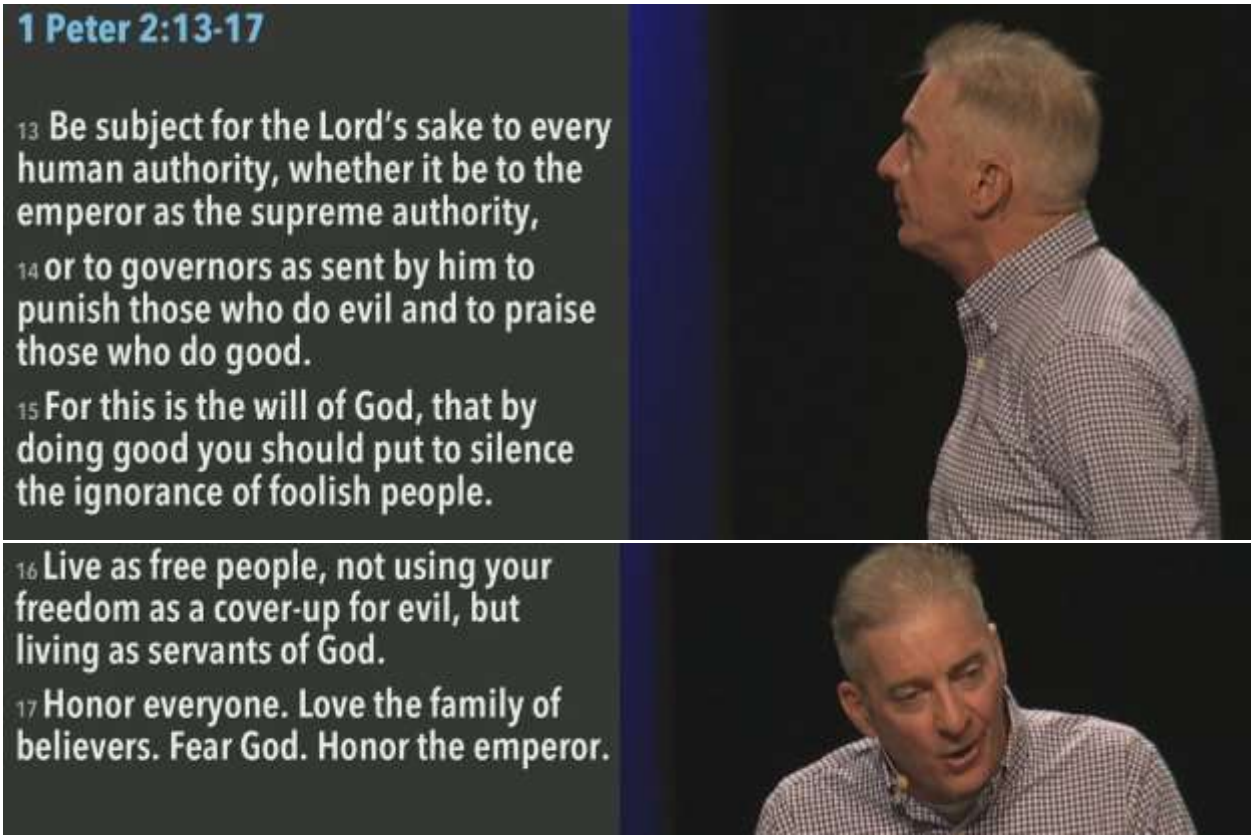
(cf. Daniel 4:17;



…

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Jeremiah 27:5-8,



Titus 3:1-2;

...

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

1 Peter 2:13-17)

(2) No political leader can thwart God's plan. Ultimately, there will be justice. (12:17-19; 13:3-50

(3) Therefore, we should pay taxes, honor and respect to our leaders (13:6-8) because our governing authorities do promote good and punish evil (13:6-8).

Are there any exceptions?

> Yes, devotion to God sometimes calls for disobedience to governing authorities.

When would that be?

> "If the state commands what God forbids or the state forbids what God commands then civil disobedience is a Christian duty."

The great temptation in hearing a message like this is to dismiss it out of hand because many of us have strong political convictions. But, if we do not live the Gospel in our politics then we won't live it effectively in the other areas of our lives.

Jesus lived his life under the rule of Roman authority. And, the Roman authorities crucified Jesus. From the Cross, he asked his Father in Heaven to forgive them. How does Jesus life and death and the teaching of Romans 13 intersect one another?

…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Put the Gospel on display in your politics by being humble, hopeful and confident that God's in charge of who's in charge.

Seek first the kingdom of God and all the other secondary things will follow as God wills.

For Discussion —

Have someone read Romans 13:1-8.

1. How do you square Paul and his friends personal experience of injustice at the hands of the Roman government with what he writes here? Why is he not naïve in telling us to subject ourselves to our governing authorities?

2. How do you personally process v.2—"Whoever resists the authorities resists what God has appointed?"

3. How do you reconcile the fact that "God's in charge of who's in charge" with the evil things that governments sometime do to innocent people?

4. What is God's answer to the evil things that corrupt leaders sometime do? (hint: look back to the end of chapter 12).

5. What could Paul possibly be thinking when he basically says that Nero and his ilk were God's servants?

6. What are we commanded to pay taxes? What's the primary responsibility of all governments?

7. How do you obey the command to honor and respect leaders who you don't think are worthy of honor and respect?

8. When is the only time that disobedience toward authority is justified? Why is it justified?

9. As you grasp the idea that God's in charge of who's in charge, how will it change you? How will your life be different as a result of this message?

OR try this approach …

Have someone read Romans 13:1-8 and, then ask: From what you heard in Charlie's message or what we just read right here--What are some of the "AHAs" you took away from what you learned?

When someone volunteers an "AHA"...ask follow up questions to dig deeper and to keep the discussion going. Ask the group, "Anyone else have this same "AHA"--what do you think about this insight?"

After you've exhausted topic. Throw the original question back out to the group--"Who else had an "AHA?" Repeat the pattern above. Follow up questions then get input from the group.

If someone says, "I didn't really have an "AHA," it's more that I don't understand…" Then go that direction. Ask follow up questions to help them clearly articulate the issue then ask the group for input. "Anybody else think about that/struggle with that?"

"So, how would you answer that question?" Whoever answers--ask follow up questions, ask for input from the group on that answer (What do you think about that?), etc. It's been my (Charlie) experience that you can have a great discussion around this approach to community group conversations.

See also: "More Views: Christians and Politics"

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

What to do if you encounter an Anaconda (article referenced in sermon)

http://www.amyreesanderson.com/blog/what-to-do-if-you-encounter-an-anaconda/

The other day someone sent me a survival tip on what to do if you encounter an Anaconda, the largest snake in the world – here is what they sent to me:

The US Peace Corps train their workers to deal with any kind of eventuality they might meet in the field, and since they work in the jungles of South America, it's quite possible that they might encounter an Anaconda, the largest snake in the world. A full grown Anaconda is not just a snake. It is a telegraph pole with a temper! It takes 10 men to carry one — if it is in a good mood. Here are the instructions in one of the Peace Corps's manuals, posted on the Internet:

1: If you are attacked by an Anaconda, do not run. The snake is faster than you are. Don't try to outrun it.

2: Lie flat on the ground. Put your arms tight against your sides and your legs tight against one another.

3: Tuck in your chin.

4: The snake will come and begin to nudge and will climb about your body.

5: Do not panic.

6: After the snake has examined you, it will begin to swallow you from the feet, always the feet. Permit the snake to swallow your feet and ankles. Do not panic.

7: The snake will begin to suck your legs into its body. You must lie perfectly still. This will take a long time.

8: When the snake has reached your knees, slowly and with as little movement as possible reach down, take your knife and very gently slide it into the side of the snake's mouth, between the edge of its mouth and your leg. Then suddenly rip upwards, severing the snake through the top of the head.

9: Be sure you have your knife.

10: Be sure your knife is sharp.

Of course, if you get to number nine, or even ten, and find you've forgotten your knife, or that it's blunt, the rest doesn't really matter!

[Return to sermon]

After I read it I had to go online to see if there was any truth at all to this being an actual instruction from the Peace Corp because I frankly didn't believe it was real, and sure enough it wasn't.

However, in looking it up I found that there was actual advise out there on what to do when you encounter this snake and it said to run away…and then avoid it!

Now that seems like much better advise to me… Because life is full of "anacondas" of different types – temptations of every kind – so when you come upon one of these "snakes" don't just lie down and wait to be eaten, hoping you have a knife that's going to be sharp enough to save you…RUN! And do everything in your power to avoid the snakes!!!

More views: Christians and Politics (next page)…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

More views: Christians and Politics… (See also: Politics and the Gospel)

Wrong, Wrong, Wrong

http://wethepeoplefree.com/christianity/wrong-wrong-wrong/

Excerpt:

I heard something the other day, a week or two ago, on a TV in someone else's house, where a major TV preacher personality, well known, said that help would not come from either political party. The implication was that help comes from God directly so don't worry about politics.

This attitude that Christians have is so wrong. There are variations of it.

- God alone will help us. Politics and political parties don't matter. It is the LORD that will help us.
- We're not of this world. We don't deal with the world. We don't deal with politics.
- The rapture is coming. Why should I fight if I'm going to take flight?
- These candidates are not Christians and/or don't have a perfect political platform, so I am not going to vote for or support them.

Satan must love Christians that have these attitudes. Because these attitudes place the Christians right on satan's team of not overcoming evil with good (like by voting, donating to the proper candidates, and speaking out and exposing the truth).

There are literally satan worshippers in politics. The false prophet, the beast, and the anti-Christ spirit operate very strongly in corrupted politics and media. For Christians to stand aloof from politics while talking about exposing the anti-Christ is an oxymoron.

Go to any nation of the world where there are dictatorships or Communism. Ask the Christians, "Do you pray for your political leaders? Does it matter what government you are under?" Ask Christians where there is Sharia law and people are beheaded for being Christians. Ask them, "Do you care what political persuasion runs your country?" Ask Jews in Nazi Germany. "Do you care whether Hitler's political party is in charge or another, does it matter at all?"

Obviously, it does and has mattered whether Atila the Hun or King John of England at Runnymede was in power.

It does matter whether Moses stood against Pharoah or he didn't.

It does matter whether George Washington went to war or stayed at home.

It does matter whether actual men fought in a D-Day or just let Hitler run over Europe.

God works through men his has called for a particular purpose at certain points in history.

Many more examples could be given.

To be so stupid, and I have no other word for it though in elementary schools today we are told not to use the word "stupid" because it is not nice, but to to be so stupid as to say it does not matter who is in power is the height of stupidity.

A lesser man than President Trump would not be standing in today's political climate.

A lesser man than Judge Kavanaugh would have withdrawn after the lies and battering to himself, his name, his reputation and his family.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

And it does matter whether Republicans, imperfect as they are, remain in power, or Democrats who are becoming the radical Communist part of the nation, get in power.

For a Christian pastor to get on national and world television and say that it doesn't matter is flat out wrong. Render to Caesar the things that are Caesar's.

We have to vote intelligently. We have to know the difference between political parties. Even if we don't have 100% agreement with a candidate, we have to vote Republican to give President Trump his Republican majority.

In Hitler's Germany, the church went along to get along until it was too late and they realized their mistake. So basically, the church helped Hitler rise to power.

In the United States particularly, the complacency of the western church, that supposedly does not have to care too much about politics is responsible for the rise of the leftist Communist movement in this nation.

One day Jesus will ask this generation to give an account of how they stewarded a Christian nation handed down from our founding fathers.

> 20 Then he began to denounce the cities in which most of his mighty works had been done, > because they didn't repent. 21 "Woe to you, Chorazin! Woe to you, Bethsaida! For if the mighty > works had been done in Tyre and Sidon which were done in you, they would have repented long > ago in sackcloth and ashes. 22 But I tell you, it will be more tolerable for Tyre and Sidon on the > day of judgment than for you. 23 You, Capernaum, who are exalted to heaven, you will go down to > Hades.[f]For if the mighty works had been done in Sodom which were done in you, it would have > remained until today. 24 But I tell you that it will be more tolerable for the land of Sodom, on the > day of judgment, than for you." Matthew 11:20-24

It is imperative, it is imperative, it is imperative that Christians vote Republican to give President Trump the Republican majority he needs to move forward. It is also imperative that they pray daily for President Trump as well as other political issues as the Lord leads.

7 Things Christians Need to Remember About Politics

https://relevantmagazine.com/current/politics/7-things-christians-need-remember-about-politics

Excerpt:

Political discourse is the Las Vegas of Christianity—the environment in which our sin is excused. Hate is winked at, fear is perpetuated and strife is applauded. Go wild, Christ-follower. Your words have no consequences here. Jesus doesn't live in Vegas.

Not only are believers excused for their political indiscretions, but they are often applauded for committing them. Slander is explained away as righteous anger; winning arguments are esteemed higher than truthful ones (whether or not the "facts" align); and those who stir up dissension are given the pulpit. So I balk when pastors tell me the Church should engage in the political process. Why would we do that? The political process is dirty and broken and far from Jesus. Paranoia and vitriol are hardly attractive accessories for the bride of Christ.

Rather than engage in the political process, Christians have a duty to elevate it. Like any other sin, we are called to stand above the partisan dissension and demonstrate a better way. Should we have an opinion? Yes. Should we care about our country? Yes. Should we vote? Yes. But it's time we talk politics in a way that models the teachings of Jesus rather than mocks them.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Here are seven things to remember about politics:

1. Both political parties go to church

There's a Christian Left and, perhaps even less well-known, there's a secular Right. Larry T. Decker is a lobbyist and head of the Secular Coalition for America. He's an "unaffiliated Christian," but his entire job is devoted to keeping religion out of the U.S. government. Party lines are drawn in chalk, and they're not hard to cross. The Church must be engaged in politics, but it must not be defined by the arbitrary lines in politics.

2. Political talk radio and cable "news" only want ratings

When media personalities tell you they are on a moral crusade, they are lying to you. These personalities get rich by instilling fear and paranoia in their listeners. If we give our favorite political ideologues more time than we give Jesus, we are following the wrong master. There are unbiased, logical and accurate news sources out there. But it's up to you to be a good steward of information—to fact-check for yourself, take ideology with a grain of salt and make decisions based on facts rather than gossip.

3. Those who argue over politics don't love their country more than others

They just love to argue more than others. Strife and quarreling are symptoms of weak faith (Proverbs 10:12; 2 Timothy 2:23-25; James 4:1) and are among the things the Lord "detests." We need to rise above the vitriol and learn to love our neighbors the way God commanded us. We need to love our atheist neighbor who wants to keep creationism out of schools; our Democrat neighbor who wants to keep gay marriage and abortion legal; our Republican neighbor who celebrates death penalty statistics and gun ownership; and yes, even the presidential candidate from the other side.

4. Thinking your party's platform is unflawed is a mistake

The social policies of your party were constructed by imperfect politicians fueled by ambition. It's nearsighted to canonize them—and it will make you obsolete in a few years. Every four years, the parties adopt a current, updated platform at their respective conventions. And while they stay on general tracks, every four years the platform evolves to meet the needs of a growing, modernized and changing party. The Republican party of today doesn't look like it did 10 years ago. We need to know when to change our views to meet a changing culture—and when to stand by them.

5. Scripture tells us to pray for our governing leaders (2 Timothy 2:1-4) and to respect those in authority (Romans 13:1-7)

Translation: if you're mocking your governing leaders on Facebook, the Holy Spirit is grieved. We should spend more time honoring our leaders and less time vilifying them. This doesn't mean praying the President will be impeached; it doesn't mean praying your candidate will win. God commands us to pray for our leaders—for their wisdom, for their hearts and for them to be led by Him.

6. Don't be paranoid

The country is not going to be destroyed if your candidate loses. As 2 Timothy 1:7 says, "God has not given us a spirit of fear, but of power and of love and of a sound mind." Stand up and demonstrate what God has given you. America has functioned—albeit, at varying levels of success—for years under the direction of alternating Democrat and Republican control, and at every flip, the other side thought it was the end of the world. It's not. And if we're a Church that believes God is in control, we have to believe that He is the one in control of the end times—not whoever's in office now, and not whoever succeeds them.

7. Stop saying, "This is the most important election in the history of our nation"

It's not. The most important election in the history of our nation was when Abraham Lincoln was elected president. Before that, we thought it was OK to own people. Every generation thinks it's living in the most important moment in history. We're not, our parents were not and our children probably won't be. And that's OK.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Mixing Christianity and politics is killing the church

https://thehill.com/blogs/congress-blog/religious-rights/243397-mixing-christianity-and-politics-is-killing-the-church

Question: How should a Christian view politics?

https://www.gotquestions.org/Christian-politics.html

Excerpts:

Answer: If there is anything that will spark a spontaneous debate, if not an outright argument, it is a discussion involving politics—even among believers. As followers of Christ, what should be our attitude and our involvement with politics? It has been said that "religion and politics don't mix." But is that really true? Can we have political views outside the considerations of our Christian faith? The answer is no, we cannot. The Bible gives us two truths regarding our stance towards politics and government.

The first truth is that the will of God permeates and supersedes every aspect of life. It is God's will that takes precedence over everything and everyone (Matthew 6:33). God's plans and purposes are fixed, and His will is inviolable. What He has purposed, He will bring to pass, and no government can thwart His will (Daniel 4:34-35). In fact, it is God who "sets up kings and deposes them" (Daniel 2:21) because "the Most High is sovereign over the kingdoms of men and gives them to anyone he wishes" (Daniel 4:17). A clear understanding of this truth will help us to see that politics is merely a method God uses to accomplish His will. Even though evil men abuse their political power, meaning it for evil, God means it for good, working "all things together for the good of those who love him, who have been called according to his purpose" (Romans 8:28).

Second, we must grasp the fact that our government cannot save us! Only God can. We never read in the New Testament of Jesus or any of the apostles expending any time or energy schooling believers on how to reform the pagan world of its idolatrous, immoral, and corrupt practices via the government. The apostles never called for believers to demonstrate civil disobedience to protest the Roman Empire's unjust laws or brutal schemes. Instead, the apostles commanded the first-century Christians, as well as us today, to proclaim the gospel and live lives that give clear evidence to the gospel's transforming power.

There is no doubt that our responsibility to government is to obey the laws and be good citizens (Romans 13:1–2). God has established all authority, and He does so for our benefit, "to commend those who do right" (1 Peter 2:13–15). Paul tells us in Romans 13:1–8 that it is the government's responsibility to rule in authority over us—hopefully for our good—to collect taxes, and to keep the peace. Where we have a voice and can elect our leaders, we should exercise that right by voting for those who best demonstrate Christian principles.

One of Satan's grandest deceptions is that we can rest our hope for cultural morality and godly living in politicians and governmental officials. A nation's hope for change is not to be found in any country's ruling class. The church has made a mistake if it thinks that it is the job of politicians to defend, to advance, and to guard biblical truths and Christian values.

The church's unique, God-given purpose does not lie in political activism. Nowhere in Scripture do we have the directive to spend our energy, our time, or our money in governmental affairs. Our mission lies not in changing the nation through political reform, but in changing hearts through the Word of God. When believers think the growth and influence of Christ can somehow be allied with government policy, they corrupt the mission of the church. Our Christian mandate is to spread the gospel of Christ and to preach against the sins of our time. Only as the hearts of individuals in a culture are changed by Christ will the culture begin to reflect that change.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Believers throughout the ages have lived, and even flourished, under antagonistic, repressive, pagan governments. This was especially true of the first-century believers who, under merciless political regimes, sustained their faith under immense cultural stress. They understood that it was they, not their governments, who were the light of the world and the salt of the earth. They adhered to Paul's teaching to obey their governing authorities, even to honor, respect, and pray for them (Romans 13:1-8). More importantly, they understood that, as believers, their hope resided in the protection that only God supplies. The same holds true for us today. When we follow the teachings of the Scriptures, we become the light of the world as God has intended for us to be (Matthew 5:16).

Political entities are not the savior of the world. The salvation for all mankind has been manifested in Jesus Christ. God knew that our world needed saving long before any national government was ever founded. He demonstrated to the world that redemption could not be accomplished through the power of man, his economic strength, his military might, or his politics. Peace of mind, contentment, hope and joy—and the salvation of mankind—is accomplished only through His work of faith, love, and grace.

John Piper: Christians and American Politics

https://www.christianity.com/christian-life/political-and-social-issues/christians-and-american-politics-11598371.html

Excerpt:

How can Christians have a positive influence on American politics?

Within churches, Christian organizations, and across the media, God can raise up spokesmen who--from a prophetic, radical, and biblical standpoint--can lay hold of that which is only seen in part by Republicans, Democrats, and Independants. They can then gather those biblical components together into a whole and, leaving party distinctives aside, exalt that.

I'm not thinking there should be another party, just truth. It seems that the Christian church should not--as a church--join partisan politics. Rather, we should be speaking prophetically to issues that relate to what Christ's will is. Then we should just let the chips fall as they may. If it sounds Republican or Democratic or Independent, so be it.

Gather the issues together and meditate on them. Weigh them in the balances of the Bible. And then speak prophetically about them. That would probably do more for exalting Christ than it would for exalting any of the candidates, which is what we want to do anyway.

Ultimately we want to communicate--even while engaging in politics--that politics are not the main issue on this earth. Knowing the Creator is the main issue, as well as being reconciled with him and glorifying him in all that we believe and say and do. That's what the church needs to constantly be calling people to.

What about the importance of praying for those in positions of leadership?

Paul says that we are supposed to pray for those who are in authority. Some of the reasons people might not do that as much as they should is,

1) They feel like they are so small and that political leadership is too big to pray for.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

In this case, people just need to get a bigger vision of the God who is listening to their prayers.

2) They feel that praying for anything would be partisan behavior. In other words, they don't know what to ask God to do for the president or vice-president.

We need to think through ways to pray for our leaders and ways to give our people words to pray. For example, "We pray, Lord, that our leader would have a humble demeanor and be open to truth, that he would be granted wisdom beyond his native capacities, and that he would make no snap judgments or knee-jerk reactions but take all factors into account. We pray that policies, procedures and laws would be put in place that would not hinder the gospel but give free reign to its spread."

We need to think of ways to pray, so that when people hear them they can join in. Otherwise they might just think that if they pray then they will be acting as a Republican or Democrat and that, therefore, there is no use in praying.

Political Christianity in The Early Church

http://www.repentuk.com/Articles/Political%20Christianity.pdf [PDF]

John MacArthur: Christians and Politics, Part 1

https://www.gty.org/library/articles/A124/christians-and-politics-part-1

Excerpt:

> What are Christians to do about it?
>
> Many think this is a political problem that will not be solved without a political strategy. During the past twenty-five years, well-meaning Christians have founded a number of evangelical activist organizations and sunk millions of dollars into them in an effort to use the apparatus of politics—lobbying, legislation, demonstration, and boycott—to counteract the moral decline of American culture. They pour their energy and other resources into efforts to drum up a "Christian" political movement that will fight back against the prevailing anti-Christian culture.
>
> But is that a proper perspective? I believe not. America's moral decline is a spiritual problem, not a political one, and its solution is the gospel, not partisan politics.

John MacArthur: Christians and Politics, Part 2 (Lessons from History)

https://www.gty.org/library/Articles/A125/Christians-and-Politics-Part-2

John MacArthur: Christians and Politics, Part 3 (Lessons from Scripture)

https://www.gty.org/library/articles/A126/christians-and-politics-part-3

John MacArthur: Christians and Politics, Part 4 (The Real Battle)

https://www.gty.org/library/articles/A127/christians-and-politics-part-4

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

How do Christians fit into the two-party system? They don't https://hotair.com/headlines/archives/2018/09/christians-fit-two-party-system-dont/

https://www.nytimes.com/2018/09/29/opinion/sunday/christians-politics-belief.html?rref=collection%2Fsectioncollection%2Fopinion

Excerpt:

What should the role of Christians in politics be? More people than ever are asking that question. Christians cannot pretend they can transcend politics and simply "preach the Gospel." Those who avoid all political discussions and engagement are essentially casting a vote for the social status quo. American churches in the early 19th century that did not speak out against slavery because that was what we would now call "getting political" were actually supporting slavery by doing so. To not be political is to be political.

The Bible shows believers as holding important posts in pagan governments — think of Joseph and Daniel in the Old Testament. Christians should be involved politically as a way of loving our neighbors, whether they believe as we do or not. To work for better public schools or for a justice system not weighted against the poor or to end racial segregation requires political engagement. Christians have done these things in the past and should continue to do so.

Nevertheless, while believers can register under a party affiliation and be active in politics, they should not identify the Christian church or faith with a political party as the only Christian one. There are a number of reasons to insist on this.

One is that it gives those considering the Christian faith the strong impression that to be converted, they need not only to believe in Jesus but also to become members of the (fill in the blank) Party. It confirms what many skeptics want to believe about religion — that it is merely one more voting bloc aiming for power.

Another reason not to align the Christian faith with one party is that most political positions are not matters of biblical command but of practical wisdom. This does not mean that the church can never speak on social, economic and political realities, because the Bible often does. Racism is a sin, violating the second of the two great commandments of Jesus, to "love your neighbor." The biblical commands to lift up the poor and to defend the rights of the oppressed are moral imperatives for believers. For individual Christians to speak out against egregious violations of these moral requirements is not optional.

However, there are many possible ways to help the poor. Should we shrink government and let private capital markets allocate resources, or should we expand the government and give the state more of the power to redistribute wealth? Or is the right path one of the many possibilities in between? The Bible does not give exact answers to these questions for every time, place and culture.

I know of a man from Mississippi who was a conservative Republican and a traditional Presbyterian. He visited the Scottish Highlands and found the churches there as strict and as orthodox as he had hoped. No one so much as turned on a television on a Sunday. Everyone memorized catechisms and Scripture. But one day he discovered that the Scottish Christian friends he admired were (in his view) socialists. Their understanding of government economic policy and the state's responsibilities was by his lights very left-wing, yet also grounded in their Christian convictions. He returned to the United States not more politically liberal but, in his words, "humbled and chastened." He realized that thoughtful Christians, all trying to obey God's call, could reasonably appear at different places on the political spectrum, with loyalties to different political strategies.

Another reason Christians these days cannot allow the church to be fully identified with any particular party is the problem of what the British ethicist James Mumford calls "package-deal ethics." Increasingly, political parties insist that you cannot work on one issue with them if you don't embrace all of their approved positions.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

This emphasis on package deals puts pressure on Christians in politics. For example, following both the Bible and the early church, Christians should be committed to racial justice and the poor, but also to the understanding that sex is only for marriage and for nurturing family. One of those views seems liberal and the other looks oppressively conservative. The historical Christian positions on social issues do not fit into contemporary political alignments.

So Christians are pushed toward two main options. One is to withdraw and try to be apolitical. The second is to assimilate and fully adopt one party's whole package in order to have your place at the table. Neither of these options is valid. In the Good Samaritan parable told in the Gospel of Luke, Jesus points us to a man risking his life to give material help to someone of a different race and religion. Jesus forbids us to withhold help from our neighbors, and this will inevitably require that we participate in political processes. If we experience exclusion and even persecution for doing so, we are assured that God is with us (Matthew 5:10-11) and that some will still see our "good deeds and glorify God" (1 Peter 2:11-12). If we are only offensive or only attractive to the world and not both, we can be sure we are failing to live as we ought.

The Gospel gives us the resources to love people who reject both our beliefs and us personally. Christians should think of how God rescued them. He did it not by taking power but by coming to earth, losing glory and power, serving and dying on a cross. How did Jesus save? Not with a sword but with nails in his hands.

Timothy Keller

Timothy Keller, founder of the Redeemer Presbyterian churches in New York City, is the author of "Prodigal Prophet: Jonah and the Mystery of God's Mercy," from which this essay is adapted.

See also*: Politics and the Gospel

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Fellowship Greenville, Charlies Boyd (2018)
https://fellowshipgreenville.org/page/461?Item=1554

FG Romans
Sermon Series
<Prev Next>

SERIES: Romans: God's Power for Salvation
TITLE: Putting the Gospel on Display
SCRIPTURE: Romans 13:8-14

God has made us to live in loving relationships with each other. And that means, we have a mutual responsibility to genuinely love each other as if love is a debt that we owe to each other. We owe it to our children to love them so they feel loved. We owe it to our spouses to love them so they feel loved. But it doesn't stop there. The Bible says we have a debt of love that we owe to everyone God puts in our lives.

Read Romans 13:8-10?? …

In Romans 12-15, the apostle Paul writes to tell us what it looks like to put the Gospel on display in the church and in the world. In Romans 1-11 we see God's love for us. And, in Romans 12-15, we see God's love ? through? us. Love for others is the natural outworking of the theology of the first 11 chapters. The main idea being—We put the Gospel on display in our world today when we put Jesus-style love on display.

Contrary to popular belief, v.8— Owe no one anything but love—is not a reference to personal or business financial debt or borrowing money. The idea is this: Let no debt remain outstanding. Don't carry debt that you can't pay off when the note comes due. But the focus is really on love—Pay off your debts as they come due, except the one debt that can never fully be paid and that is to love one another.

First point—Pay your debt of love forward (13:8-10). …especially to people who are different from you. … The flipside of this idea of a "debt of love" might be something like: "Don't live with an antagonistic spirit toward anyone." …The absence of biblical love nullifies everything else I say or do. …God is more concerned that we treat people we disagree with in a spirit of love that he is in us proving who's right and who's wrong. …We are to pay our debt of love forward because this one command, Love your neighbor as yourself, fulfills the Law. Paul sums up all of the negative, "You shall not" commands in the one idea Love does not wrong to a neighbor. The flipside of that is—love seeks what's best for a neighbor. And that idea comes from "Love your neighbor as yourself." So the first way we put the Gospel on display is by paying the debt of love forward to everyone God puts in our lives.

Read Romans 13:11-14 …

Second Point—Put on Christ (13:11-14) --meaning--Dress yourself in Jesus' style. …The command to love does not just mean to be a good, moral, nice person. It means to put a Jesus-kind-of-love on display. In these verses Paul is saying—If you are going to love others—if you're going to let love mark your life, now is the time to do it. Paul is saying—Knowing that our time here in this life is short, pay your debt of love forward to whoever God has put in your life by dressing yourself in Jesus-style love. And that will mean, you have to put off everything that's incompatible with love. That's the point of vv.11-`2.

How do we put the Gospel on display in our world today? Let's turn the answer around. Simple answer: We put on Christ. We dress ourselves in Jesus' style love and we pay our debt of love forward to everyone God puts in our lives.

And because the focus all through chapters 12-15 is on loving people who are different from us—people we may passionately disagree with—another way to say this is—(and this looks forward to chps 14-15—but put another way you could say—Putting the Gospel of display means loving people who believe and live different from you while holding to beliefs and values that different from them. …Who in your world—work, school, church, neighborhood—who in your world do you have serious disagreements with? God says above all, you owe them love. What would it look like to put on a Jesus' style love as you interact with them this week?

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

For Discussion —

Have someone read Romans 13:8-14.

1. Why is love the theme of chapters 12-15? …Walk through these four chapters picking out all the reference to loving others and all the specific commands that help us flesh out loving others.
2. Looking at Romans 13:8-14—How is this entire passage tied together by the theme of love?
3. What is the meaning of "Owe no one anything but love" in verse 8? …What does it mean to not owe anyone anything except love?
4. How does the command "love your neighbor as yourself" fulfill the OT Law?
5. Why do you think Paul summed up "love your neighbor as yourself" in the idea "Love does no wrong to a neighbor?"
6. Where does the flipside idea, "Do what's best for your neighbor "come from in v.9?
7. What does it mean to love your neighbor as yourself?
8. How does Galatians 3:27— for as many of you as were baptized into Christ have put on Christ (past tense)—square with Romans 13:4— to Put on Christ? (present tense)
9. What do the things Paul tells us to cast off have to do with putting on Jesus-style love?

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Fellowship Greenville, Charlies Boyd (2018)
https://fellowshipgreenville.org/page/461?Item=1560

FG Romans
Sermon Series
<Prev Next>

SERIES: Romans: God's Power for Salvation
TITLE: When Christians Disagree – P1
SCRIPTURE: Romans 14:1-12

It's a fact, different Christians have different opinions about a lot of different things . Things like not going to movies, not listening to rock music, no dancing, women not wearing pants, men not having their hair touch their collars, no tattoos, no beards, no playing cards, no smoking, no drinking in moderation, no Bible except the KJV, no contemporary music in church, only hymns, the frequency of communion, Halloween, Christmas, Easter—the list seems endless. These things were and still are in some circles very serious matters. These kinds of things split churches, tear families apart, and the mean-spiritedness of Christians who disagree over these things have even caused some people to walk away from the church and from their faith altogether.

Just to clarify, we're not talking about essential fundamental doctrines and things that are clearly spelled out as right and wrong in the Bible —adultery, immorality, sex outside of marriage, lying, murder, stealing, coveting, getting drunk, gossiping, slandering. If the Bible specifically calls something a sin then it's a sin and it's not up for debate. But there are other things—you might call them "secondary matters"—like the ones I just ticked off that tick Christians off when they run into other so-called Christians who don't hold to the same convictions they do in these things.

The question is: What should your attitude be toward believers who practice their faith in Christ differently than you? That's the question Paul is dealing with in Romans 14:1-15:7. The problem is Christians in the Roman church are passing judgment on fellow believers in these secondary, "disputable matters." Those Paul calls weak don't understand that they've elevated a secondary matter and made it a primary matter—the weak don't see as "disputable" what Paul says the strong are free to enjoy.

Weak and Strong — Those whom Paul calls "weak" have strict consciences about these matters. Others who Paul calls "strong" (15:1)— and Paul includes himself in the "strong" camp — are those who have freedom of conscience. That is, their conscience doesn't condemn them if they participate in a particular disputable matter.

The weak are people whose consciences condemn them if they participate in a disputable matter they believe is wrong. They do not have the faith to believe that they have the freedom to participate in a disputable matter. If they participate, their conscience condemns them.

The strong are people whose conscience does not condemn them in a disputable matter. They have faith that they have the freedom to participate in a disputable matter. The disputable matters in the church had to do with eating meat; keeping the Sabbath (14:5) and other Jewish holy days; and drinking wine (14:20). The weak did not eat meat or drink wine primarily because they could not be certain it was kosher. They were saved by grace—they were not weak in saving faith—but because of their upbringing they still felt bound to Jewish dietary laws and holy days. They felt that doing and not doing things in line with the law made them more acceptable to God.

In the practical outworking of this passage, you might see four categories of weak and strong.

Immature, Weak: "This is wrong for me and it's wrong for you." There's no disputing this--it's wrong!

Mature, Weak: "Others may. I may not." For me, it's wrong, but I understand that other Christians see it differently.

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Mature, Strong: "I enjoy my freedom, but at times, out of love for the weak, I don't exercise my freedom."

Immature, Strong: "I have freedom and if you don't like what I'm doing that's your problem."

I also think that under the mature, strong category you can have people who say, "I know I have freedom, but for personal reasons, I don't ever exercise that freedom" because it's a wisdom issue.

The main thing is, in these disputable matters, each one must be convinced in his own mind (14:5). That means, in these disputable matters there's no one correct position. Something could be right for one person and wrong for another. And that's exactly what Paul is saying here in Romans 14, and that's why he's spending so much time on this subject. In 14:1-12—Paul focuses more on the weak. In 14:13-21 he focuses on the strong. ... In 14:1-12 he gives us …

Three Principles for Navigating Disputable Matters

(1) Welcome those who _disagree_ with you over disputable matters (14:1; cf 15:7).

(2) Don't _pass judgement_ on those who differ with you over disputable matters (14:2-3a).

(3) Remember, those you think are wrong in disputable matters answer to _God_, not _you__ (14:3b-12).

or in other words: We are to accept everyone the Lord has accepted in the Gospel.

Main Application: We are to practice "_receptive_ grace." (15:7; from Tim Keller)

For Discussion

Have someone read Romans 14:1-12.

1. What are some things in your religious upbringing in the church where you saw early on that different Christians have different opinions about? … What were some of the "disputable matters" Christians disagreed over?
2. What was the problem in the church of Rome?
3. Who were the weak? …Who were the strong? …Who was right and who was wrong? …
4. Why did some Jewish Christians not eat meat or drink wine? …Why did Paul classify them as weak?
5. What is the hardest thing about "welcoming" people who disagree with you over these disputable matters?
6. How can you make judgments without passing judgment?
7. What is "receptive grace?" … What works against you graciously receiving a fellow Christian who is stricter than you or freer than you?

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Fellowship Greenville, Jim Thompson (2018)
https://fellowshipgreenville.org/page/461?Item=1567

FG Romans
Sermon Series
<Prev Next>

SERIES: Romans: God's Power for Salvation
TITLE: When Christians Disagree – P2
SCRIPTURE: Romans 14:13-23

In the church at Rome, some of the Jewish believers are upset at the Gentile believers for eating non-kosher meat and drinking non-kosher wine. And while this might sound trite to us, things like this (and Sabbath, circumcision, etc) were driving a wedge in between Christians there. After all, didn't God command kosher-eating in the Old Testament? But Paul also talks about how Jesus fulfilled the laws of the Old Testament (Romans 10:4, etc). So, what does Paul have to say about all this? How are these Roman Christians supposed to live in harmony and with differences at the same time? And this same question has to be asked at every local church. How do we disagree agreeably?

Now, obviously Paul and the rest of the biblical writers clearly define certain things as sin - adultery, gluttony, drunkenness, lying, gossiping, stealing, etc. But there are also dozens of issues about which Scripture doesn't give specific parameters. For example, the Bible says nothing directly about dating, smartphones, smoking, yoga, mental health, movies, Halloween, aliens, birth control, and the list could go on for days. And Paul is saying that it's okay for Christians to have different opinions on these secondary issues if they get their opinions from biblical principles, and if they don't pass judgment on people whose opinions are different than their own.

And as Paul considers these different opinions in Romans 14-15, he talks about Christians with weaker and stronger consciences. The weak have stricter consciences, and the strong are freer in what their conscience allows them to do (i.e. drink non-kosher wine). And the tension comes when what is free to one Christian might be hurtful to another. What do we do when that happens?

Paul says in 14:13 that we should not "pass judgment" on one another, but he says that we should "pass judgment" on how we're going to treat one another, no matter who is it or what it's about (if it's a disputable matter). And the decided way to treat someone with whom you differ is to not put a stumbling block in their way (the language of stumbling is used in verses 13, 20, and 21). This is a warning specifically to those with freer consciences. Paul tells them that burdening other brothers or sisters because of your freedoms can "destroy" them (14:15, 14:20), which is very heavy language. So, the negative response for the strong believer is that they shouldn't cause others to stumble. But what does this look like positively? It looks like…

- Love limiting liberty.

Love is the proper motive, from 14:15. Limiting is from verse 21, where it says not to do something if it's a hindrance to another Christian. And liberty is what the strong are free to do in verses 14 and 22, but should consider not doing for the sake of others. And this principle was intended to push the Roman church (and us!) towards maturity and unity.

So, if you have a strict conscience, and you intentionally make stronger brothers feel guilty about their freedoms just so that you can feel victorious, there have assuredly been no honest conversations about unity. And if you're a stronger brother or sister, and your dominant thought is that people with weaker consciences are missing the point, and your entire goal is to bend their consciences to yours, you are selfish and acting against unity. "Love limiting liberty" is one of the supreme ways that we learn to live in harmony and with differences at the same time, and it requires discipline and sacrifice from all Christians, but especially those with freer consciences.

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

At the heart of the passage, Paul also gives another way for us to think about these differences of opinion. And this suggestion means that the weak shouldn't look for contexts to be offended, and that the strong shouldn't think and act poorly towards the weak by haphazardly exercising their freedoms. Paul tells his friends to…

- Pursue peace.

Meaning, every discussion about a difference should begin and end with peace. After all, peace (and not your opinion on modesty, alcohol, or rated-R movies) is the way that the kingdom is built up eternally (14:17). So, begin those dialogues by gratefully talking about the peace and unity that we have because of Jesus. Then learn to ask honest questions. Don't defend your opinion. Pray for each other. Encourage each other. And then close the conversation thanking God for his peace. This is how we disagree agreeably, by "pursuing peace and mutual upbuilding" (14:19).

Lastly, Paul frames his entire discussion in Romans 14-15 around the idea of welcoming one another. And to close this discussion, he says that we should "welcome one another just as Christ has welcomed us" (15:7). Well, how has Christ welcomed us? Answer: with grace. Jesus loved us when we disagreed with him. He pursued peace with us when we were distant from him. In our rebellion, while we were still his enemies, he welcomed us, he invited us, and he called us. And in order to bridge the gap, in love, he limited himself, stooping from heaven to earth. This all means that loving a Christian with whom you disagree isn't about how you feel, it's about further experiencing God's grace. Meaning...

- Vertical grace leads to horizontal grace.

If we truly grasp the grace of God in the gospel of Jesus, we will more naturally move towards maturity, unity, love, and grace with each other. Jesus is the focal point of our disagreements, not the issue itself. If Jesus doesn't judge us, what are we doing wasting our time judging each other? And if we know that vertical grace is glorious, why do we often refuse horizontal grace?

Our primary need when it comes to discrepancies with other Christians is not more education or less tradition. Our primary need is a more robust view of Jesus at all times. He is the source of love, peace, and grace that should bind us to each other as we are bound to him. Focusing on him is how we can do Romans 15:7, "Welcome one another just as Christ has welcomed you."

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Fellowship Greenville, Charlies Boyd (2018)
https://fellowshipgreenville.org/page/461?Item=1572

FG Romans
Sermon Series
<Prev Next>

SERIES: Romans: God's Power for Salvation
TITLE: When Christians Disagree – P3
SCRIPTURE: Romans 14 Remix

We are in the last part of the book of Romans—in a four-part mini-series entitled, "When Christians Disagree"—and we're looking at how we're to live with and love fellow believers who come from different background and traditions—who have different personalities and different personal convictions about what the apostle Paul calls "disputable matters" (14:1 NIV). …As we've seen over the last two weeks, different Christians have different opinions about all kinds of things like—Sabbath-keeping, movies, drinking alcohol in moderation, political party affiliation, Halloween, Santa Claus, the Easter Bunny, yoga, tattoos, military service—and there are 100s more. Again, we're not talking about the indisputable matters of fundamental doctrines or things clearly defined as right or wrong in the Bible—adultery, stealing, murder, gossip, lying, coveting, getting drunk, sex outside marriage, etc. We're talking about issues where good, Bible-believing, Jesus-loving people disagree.

The question in Romans 14 is: How can Christians whose beliefs, practices, values, and views differ from one another in these "gray" areas get along with one another in the same church? And to take it one step further—How do we as followers of Jesus navigate the complex waters of personal convictions and love?

It's true we've spent two weeks in ch.14, but there's still some meat left on the bones that I think we need to chew on. You may remember that the two main disputable matters that divided the church in Rome were eating meat and drinking wine that wasn't kosher and strict observance of the Jewish Sabbath and other Jewish holy days (read 14:2 and 5). Paul calls the Jewish Christians with a stricter conscience "weak" and the non-Jews with a more free conscience "strong." Now, the strong in faith do not necessarily please God any more than the weak in faith. Both can honor God and both can sin against God. But in these issues of weak and strong, who's right and who's wrong? (read 14:14, 15:1; 1 Cor 8:4-8). According to Paul, the "strong" are right because what they believe is more in line with the Gospel and the truth of Scripture than the "weak" who conscience is ruled by their "former associations" (1Cor 8:7).

But here's the deal—Paul does not tell the weak to grow up and chuck their personal convictions (even though I'm sure he wants that for them). Why not? Because of the issue of conscience. A main cause of the division in the church had to do with the conscience. And how you handle your conscience is a big deal.

Paul is basically saying— It's better to follow a mistaken conscience that to violate your conscience . You see things—you hear things—you make judgments about things. Your conscience is your God-given moral judge. It's your moral judgments turned in on yourself. Your conscience constantly judges what you say and what you do—accusing and excusing you (cf Rom 2:13-15). Your conscience is your consciousness of what you believe is right and wrong. It's black and white—it doesn't do "gray" very well. The reason your conscience is such a big deal is because if you sin against your conscience in what you believe is right and wrong—then over time—you can desensitize your conscience and set a trajectory for your life where you end up where you never thought you would be. It is a very dangerous thing to go against your conscience even if your conscience is mistaken, overly sensitive, or overly strict. That said...

You should be willing to recalibrate your conscience so it comes more in line with the teaching of Scripture. That means—and this is my One Big Idea—the one piece of meat still clinging to the bone that I want to look at this morning—we need to—Make judgments without passing judgment (145:5-6, 14, 22-23).

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

First: Make judgments based on what the Bible says ."My conscience is captive to the Word of God" (Martin Luther). That means, if God call something a sin, it's a sin. (Read Romans 13:13-14 for a list of clearly defined sins). However, if the Bible doesn't call something a sin, don't call it a sin. Make judgments for yourself, but don't pass judgment on those who don't follow your conscience standards. That means, logical reasons for not doing something do not make that thing a sin. Logical reasons for not doing something do not equal a biblical prohibition. You will not prevent people from falling into sin by being stricter than God. However, logical reasons do call for you to think wisely about all these disputable issues (1Cor 10:23).

Second: Make judgments by applying godly wisdom in your choices. It may not be wise for you to do what you are free to do. You develop wisdom by asking yourself questions like— If in this area, there can be serious "one thing leads to another" consequences for me, then is it worth the risk? You think this through for you , not someone else. Is it profitable? Will it encourage my walk with God? Is it simply self-serving? Is it something that I can honestly say that honors God? Is this something I can thank God for? These kinds of questions help you make wise choices—and again—you may answer these questions one way but another believer may answer them differently and you need to get comfortable with that. That's the whole point of these chapters! Every believer should make judgments without passing judgment . Every believer needs to develop their own personal convictions about these disputable matters and teach them to their children. It is wise to talk about how different Christians hold different views on some of these things and why your family makes the choices you make without passing judgment on those who make different choices—it is wise and it's biblical. In 14:13—Paul states his main point clearly— Therefore, let us not pass judgment on one another…

Third: By all means, follow your conscience (14:14b,23 and 22). If you go against your conscience when you think it's warning you correctly—it's always a sin in God's eyes— always —even if the action is not a sin in and of itself. And I would say—it should scare you to think of the consequences of sinning against your conscience. You don't want to go down the path from a weak conscience to a wounded conscience to a willfully-callous conscience to no conscience at all . Luther was right—"To go against your conscience is neither right nor safe."

Make judgements for yourself without passing judgment on others who hold different opinions than you in disputable matters

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Fellowship Greenville, Charlies Boyd (2018)
https://fellowshipgreenville.org/page/461?Item=1579

FG Romans
Sermon Series
<Prev Next>

SERIES: Romans: God's Power for Salvation
TITLE: When Christians Disagree – P4
SCRIPTURE: Romans 15:1-13, 1 Cor. 8:1-13

We are in the last part of the book of Romans—in a four-part mini-series entitled, "When Christians Disagree"and we're looking at how we're to live with and love fellow believers who come from different background and traditions—who have different personalities and different personal convictions about what the apostle Paul calls "disputable matters" (14:1 NIV). As we've seen over the last three weeks, different Christians have different opinions about all kinds of things like—worship styles, music, movies, Halloween, alcohol, parenting, politics, end times prophecy, gambling, lotteries(!!), how often you observe communion, altar calls, smoking cigars, tattoos, the use of antidepressant medication—this list goes on and on. Again, we're not talking about the indisputable matters of fundamental doctrines or things clearly defined as right or wrong in the Bible. We're talking about issues where good, Bible-believing, Jesus-loving people disagree.

The main question in Romans 14-15 is this—How can Christians whose beliefs, practices, values, and views differ from one another in these "gray" areas get along with each other in the same church? And to take it one step further here in Part 4— How do we exercise a Christian freedom in a way that takes into consideration believers who don't feel free to exercise that freedom?

Read Romans 15:1-2 — Going all the way back to the start of this whole discussion (14:1), the primary focus has been on those the apostle Paul calls the "strong"—on those who know they have freedom in these "disputable matters." And basically, he's saying—the primary responsibility for protecting and preserving the unity of the church is laid on the shoulders of the strong. He's saying in no uncertain terms that the "strong" are to limit the exercise of their freedoms, at times, for the sake of the "weak"—for the sake of the community—by not simply living to please themselves, but for the good of others. The best translation of v.1 might read like this— We who are strong have an obligation to be patient with the "weaknesses" of the weak and not just live to please ourselves .

(1) If you are serious about following Jesus, there will be times when you voluntarily give up your freedoms and lay down your rights for the good of others (Rom 15:1-2; 1 Cor 8:1-3).

The question then is: Who are the weak and what are the "weaknesses of the weak" that we're to be patient with? And to answer that question, we need to look at 1Cor 8 because Paul gives much more specific detail about what characterizes a "weak" believer and what their weaknesses might be.

Read through 1 Corinthians 8:1-13 — One very important point Paul makes to the "strong" as he describes the "weak" is this. Having the right to exercise a freedom doesn't means you should always exercise that freedom. Or said another way, knowing you are free to do something doesn't mean you're always free to do it. From what Paul tells us here in 1Cor 8, we see that a truly "weak" believer is someone who might be young in the faith—maybe a recent convert who's just put their faith in Jesus—who doesn't know a whole lot or maybe they're someone who's just plain young—someone who doesn't know what you know or it's hard for them to embrace what you know because of the background they've been saved from. A truly weak believer then is someone who when they see you exercise your freedom, it could cause their conscience to be defiled or wounded —it would be someone who could be led to stumble —to spiral out of control spiritually—or someone whose faith could even be destroyed. This is important because a weaker believer is not anyone and everyone who says they are offended when you exercise your freedom.

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

(2) If you are serious about following Jesus, there will be times when you voluntarily give up your freedoms and lay down your rights for the good of others and the good of the Gospel (Romans 15:3-13).

Read 15:3-13 This whole passage— which is really the bookend of the whole book of Romans —is aimed at bringing Jews and Gentiles together in unity in this divided church. It's about how Jesus brings together different people, from different backgrounds—who have different opinions about what it looks like to live the Christian life and how he brings us together so we can with one voice glorify God—it's about Gospel-shaped community.

You see, the Gospel doesn't just shape your life—it shapes our lives together. To just think of yourself and how you have the right to exercise your Gospel-given freedoms independent of others is not biblical. The whole focus of vv.3-13 is about how the Gospel is put on display in the person of Jesus. Who did what? Who didn't just consider his own interests, but also the interests of others—who gave up the rightful use of his God-powers in order to become one of us—to live as one of us—to die as one of us and for us —who did not come to be served, but to serve (compare v.8). Gospel-given freedoms express themselves within a Gospel-shaped community. In this way, the unity of the church can be protected and preserved and this broken, divided world can see in a united church what Jesus is really like—all kinds of different people singing and praising and worshipping God together for the glory of God.

13 May the God of hope fill you all with all joy and peace in believing, so that by the power of the Holy Spirit you may abound in hope.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Title: Carry One Another – Lesson 7 by Marty Berglund, Fellowship Alliance Chapel

Series: "One Another"

Scripture: Romans 15:1, Galatians 6:2

"We walk with God when we walk together." –Marty Berglund

1. Sometime you need to carry others.
2. Sometime you need to be carried.

Additional scripture referenced:
James 4:6, Proverbs 3:34,
1 Peter 5:5, Matthew 11:28-30

Online Broadcast Replays:

11am Sunday Service

Broadcasted 11/3/19 10:56am - 11/3/19 12:15pm

9am Sunday Service

Broadcasted 11/3/19 8:56am - 11/3/19 10:11am

6pm Saturday Service

Broadcasted 11/2/19 5:56pm - 11/2/19 7:20pm

See FAC Youtube Channel:
https://www.youtube.com/channel/UCVpGy41FdX82hCNvWIAZC9w

Sermon Follow-up for Small (Community) Group Study (or Individual Study):

Discussion Guide: https://www.myfac.org/wp-content/uploads/2019/10/Lesson-07-One-Another.pdf

Discussion Video: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=trXXNAqT3zE

Main Text: Romans 15:1, Galatians 6:2; also references Matthew 11:28-30

SUMMARY: To continue our "One Another" series on how to be the church with one another and not just do church, we will look into what does it mean to "carry one another's burdens" and why we need this as a people.

Just a reminder, while the "one another" passages do encourage us to move inward in community with one another, it doesn't happen without moving upward toward God, and it always moves us outward to the lost around us!

See also in the "One Another" series*: Forgive One Another

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Fellowship Greenville, Charlies Boyd (2018)
https://fellowshipgreenville.org/page/461?Item=1598

FG Romans
Sermon Series
<Prev Next>

SERIES: Romans: God's Power for Salvation
TITLE: The Purpose-Driven Life
SCRIPTURE: Romans 15:14-33

Back in 2002, Rick Warren wrote a book entitled, The Purpose-Driven Life . He began like this:

> It's not about you. The purpose of your life is far greater than your own personal fulfillment, your peace of mind, or even your happiness. It's far greater than your family, your career, or even your wildest dreams and ambitions. If you want to know why you were placed on this planet, you must begin with God. You were born by his purpose and for his purpose. …You were made by God and for God, and until you understand that, life will never make sense. It is only in God that we discover our origin, our identity, our meaning, our purpose, our significance, and our destiny. Every other path leads to a dead end.
>
> He says: You were made for God, not vice versa, and life is about letting God use you for his purposes, not you using him for your own purpose.

As I see it, that's what Romans 15:14-33 is about—What it looks like to live a purpose-driven life.

Now Paul didn't plant or start the church in Rome. He had never been there, but he had heard good things about the church and he very much wanted to visit them. Read 1:8-13 and compare to 15:14-22. What's interesting is that Romans 15:14-33 is Paul's absence excuse . Basically, he says the reason he hasn't been able to visit Rome is b/c his purpose has determined his plans. That's his "absence excuse"— I haven't been able to visit you because my purpose has determined my plans .

So, what is Paul's purpose? Paul is passionately pursuing life and mission with Jesus. He sees his life as a continuation of Jesus' ministry of connecting people to God by preaching the Gospel of the grace of God. Your purpose in life is also a continuation of Jesus' purpose (cf Lk 19:10 and Matt 28:19-20). God is at work in the world and he wants you to join him in his work. Following Jesus means your life purpose must be in line with God's great purpose of drawing people to himself by living out grace and telling others about God's grace.

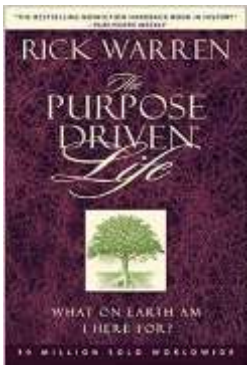
Seven things that give shape to who you are. (1) Your personality; (2) Your gift mix; (3) Your relationships; (4) Your work; (5) Your resources; (6) Your arena for service; (7) Your purpose. The first six will be different from other believers, but all believers share a common purpose. The first six will "color"/shape how you live a God's purpose-driven life. A purpose-driven life is a life that is a continuation of Jesus' life. You let Jesus continue to live his life and do his work through you. Your purpose in life is a continuation of Jesus' purpose.

Now in this "absence excuse," Paul moves from his purpose to his plans (Read 14:22-33). Paul's plan was to go to Rome after he had taken an offering to the poverty-stricken Jewish believers in Jerusalem. After Jerusalem, he planned to stop off in Rome and then head on to Spain with their help and support. But after Romans 15 and before chapter 16, write in Acts 21-28. Paul's plans did not happen like he planned. His prayers were not answered the way he prayed. His plans changed, but his purpose didn't. If you stay focused on God's purpose for your life, when "storms" change your plans, you will stay on course.

Paul's purpose— and this is our purpose statement here at FG —Paul's purpose was to passionately pursue life and mission with Jesus —to continue and to finish the work Jesus gave him to do. He made plans in line with that purpose and when his plans changed he stayed on course because his plans took 2nd place to God's purpose for his life.

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Here are three things to think on “by way of reminder”



First : Make God’s purpose _your_ purpose. See your life as a continuation of Jesus’ life and work.

Second: Look for where God is working and _join_ him there. Remember, you will experience God working in the storms, the detours, the interruptions if you are looking for him.

Third: Hold your plans with _open hands_.

Prayer: Jesus continue to live your life through me.

Notes re: Purpose Driven Life

Main Site: http://purposedriven.com/

Main Site (book): http://purposedriven.com/books/pdlbook/#purpose

Purpose Driven Life Summary
http://www.supersummary.com/purpose-driven-life/summary/

The Purpose Driven Life is a devotional book by American pastor and author Rick Warren, first published in 2002. Taking the form of a forty-day personal spiritual journey, the book explores what Warren says are God’s five purposes for human life on Earth, and describes itself as a blueprint for Christian living in the modern day. It uses frequent passages from the Bible to challenge the conventional definitions of Christian worship, ministry, and Evangelism. Considered one of the most important modern Christian texts, it explores themes including the meaning of life, what it truly means to be close to God, and what the best way to serve God’s purpose truly is. A mega bestseller, it sold more than thirty million copies in its first five years and was on the New York Times Best Seller list for more than ninety weeks. A 2005 survey of American pastors and ministers named The Purpose Driven Life as the most significant book in their lives and ministries. Although some Christian scholars criticized it for its interpretation of biblical passages, it struck a chord with readers. It entered the news in 2005 when a woman managed to calm the criminal taking her hostage by reading to him from The Purpose Driven Life. This story was adapted into the movie Captive, starring David Oyelowo and Kate Mara.

The Purpose Driven Life is divided into forty short chapters, which are subdivided into an introductory segment and five main sections. In the opening segment, Warren establishes his main points. First, it all starts with God and we can only discover our identities and purpose through Him. Second, we are not accidents, having been created by God for a specific purpose. Third, we must ask what drives our life, and make sure that we are not being driven by things such as guilt, resentment, anger, or fear. Instead, a purpose-driven life will give us meaning and prepare us for eternity. Our relationship with God is meant to last forever, and it allows us to see life from God’s view. Life is a temporary assignment on the way to eternity. The reason for everything is that we bring God glory by loving other believers, becoming like Christ, serving others with our gifts, and telling others about Him. The first main segment establishes that we were planned for God’s pleasure. Bringing enjoyment to God is our first pleasure, and He wants us to enjoy our life as well. What makes God smile is when we trust him, obey him, and praise him. The heart of worship is trusting God and admitting our limitations. We can become best friends with God through constant conversation and meditation. Developing a friendship with God means obeying God in faith and valuing what God values. He values worship that is accurate, authentic, thoughtful, and practical. When God seems distant, it is key to trust in His plan and continue talking to Him as if He were there, and thank Him for what He has already done.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The second purpose states that we were formed for God's family, and we are all His children. Love is what matters most in life. We are called to belong to God's family, not just to believe, and the Church is how God's family manifests. Life is meant to be shared with our fellow believers. This involves cultivating community, which means showing honesty, humility, courtesy, and frequent regular contact. Broken fellowships and relationships can be restored by taking the initiative, showing compassion, and talking to God first. To protect our church, it is key to be realistic, encouraging, refuse to listen to gossip, and practice God's method for conflict resolution. Purpose three states that we were created to become like Christ. God wants us to take on his values, attitude, and character. God wants us to grow up, and this takes an intentional commitment. We are transformed by His truth, and we are transformed by the troubles we endure and overcome. We grow through temptation and by overcoming temptation in favor of sticking to our principles. Temptation is defeated by focusing on other things, finding support in others, realizing what it is, and accepting our vulnerability. It takes time to achieve spiritual growth, but God supports us through our journey.

Purpose four says that we were shaped for serving God. The first part of this is accepting our assignment, no matter what it may be. Every role that serves God is a significant one. God shaped each creature with a unique purpose, and that includes our spiritual gifts, our heart, our abilities, our personality, and our experience. Each of these elements gives us part of what we need to serve God, and it is up to us to explore and understand these elements so we can best use them in God's service. Then, it is time to use and embrace what God gave us. God does not make mistakes, so there is no point to try to reshape ourselves to be like someone else. Real servants serve God by serving others and are faithful to their ministry. Service starts in the mind; humility and devotion to others are key. God finds power in weakness, and instead of hating weakness, it is key to see it as a trophy of grace. The final purpose states that we were all made for a mission. God intends us to have a ministry to continue Jesus's mission on Earth. This includes sharing our mission, our testimony, our life lessons, our Godly passions, and the good news of salvation. Becoming a world-class Christian requires shifting from self-centered, local thinking to compassionate, social, eternal thinking. It requires balancing life, making sure to give enough time to worship, ministry, evangelism, fellowship, and discipleship. This is the key to living with purpose.

Rick Warren is an American pastor and author, the founder and senior pastor of Saddleback Church, the eighth-largest Church in the United States. A noted conservative activist, he is best known for his book The Purpose Driven Life and its predecessor The Purpose Driven Church. In all, he has published eight best-selling books.

Purpose Driven Life PDF Summary
https://blog.12min.com/purpose-driven-life-pdf/

https://thepowermoves.com/the-purpose-driven-life/

TED Talk: A Life of Purpose, Rick Warren
https://www.ted.com/talks/rick_warren_on_a_life_of_purpose (references Psalm 72; Moses "what's in your hand?")

While "The Purpose Driven Life" is an immensely popular book, it is not without it's critics, for which you can do an online search. However, for our 'purposes', we are just focusing on what we consider it's useful highlights.

See also*: Stewardship

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Fellowship Greenville, Jim Thompson (2018)
https://fellowshipgreenville.org/page/461?Item=1567

FG Romans
Sermon Series
<Prev Next>

SERIES: Romans: God's Power for Salvation
TITLE: We Need Each Other
SCRIPTURE: Romans 16:1-16

Romans 16 is like the exclamation point at the end of the sentence that is Romans. But how? Paul lists 26 names in 16 verses, and simply tells the Roman church to greet these individuals. Doesn't that feel like an anticlimactic conclusion to one of the most influential texts in the history of the western world? Additionally, most of these names them are never mentioned in the rest of the Bible, which makes this passage ever more strange and distant. So, how do we make sense of all these names? Paul is too intentional in his writings for this to be arbitrary; what's he trying to communicate in this passage?

Well, first of all, Paul knows how important people are. As C. S. Lewis says, "You've never met a mere mortal." But beyond this, Paul is talking about the actual people in our everyday lives. Their significance to us (and ours to them) can hardly be overstated. And in order to remind his friends in Rome about this, he lists all of these names so that they'll have to take a deep breath and consider how important people are in God's plans. God never intended relationship with him to be a solo project or a self-help journey.

Also, Paul's list a great example of how to see people in light of the gospel. He consistently defines people as a "servant of the Lord," or my "fellow co-workers in Christ," or "chosen in the Lord," or "beloved in the Lord," or "approved in Christ." And in defining people this way, he is attempting to see them as God sees them.

One of the most unique things about Paul's list in Romans 16 is how different all of the people are. There are 26 names, 8 women and 18 men. Some are slave names; some are Jewish names; some are Gentile names, and some are husband and wife teams. And it would've been a shock in his first-century context, but Paul is unashamed about how helpful women have been in his personal ministry. He even begins the chapter with Phoebe the deacon (16:1-2), who was likely the one to deliver the letter to Rome. But all of these differences add up to and further prove the point that…

> Our ongoing need for Jesus includes an ongoing need for each other.

We need each other. That's what Paul's list proves. But not in a vague way. We need each other because we need Jesus. We have all sinned and fallen short of God's glory (3:23), and now we can all be a part of his family and indwelt with the Spirit (chapters 4-8). Meaning, our unity with Jesus includes unity with one another, and Romans 16 is a snapshot of that.

This list of names that may feel distant to us is a concrete reminder that to the Roman church that Christianity in isolation is not Christianity at all. Rather, Christian community is the soil in which theology, doxology, and unity should be planted and grown. Spiritual maturity with God entails relational maturity with other believers. Community is not a good Darwinian idea that can help us along. Community is the ideal. It's Edenic. It's the New Creation beginning to blossom. And this means that we should practice now what we will know for all time – happy and unhindered shalom with God and others. Paul knows that these names are relational hooks on which the church should hang everything else he's said in Romans, and Paul believes that if we get the gospel, we will get that we need each other.

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Fellowship Greenville, Jim Thompson (2018)
https://fellowshipgreenville.org/page/461?Item=1608

FG Romans
Sermon Series
<Prev Next>

SERIES: Romans: God's Power for Salvation
TITLE: Watch Out!
SCRIPTURE: Romans 16:17-23

Whatever you find beautiful, glorious, and good, you will fight for purity when it comes to that thing. If you find food to be glorious, you're not going to eat at Taco Bell on a weekly basis. Instead, you're going to go to local, non-chain restaurants, and rave about them to your friends when you find something good. If you're passionate about sports, you're not going to tolerate performance-enhancing drugs or bandwagon fans. Why? Because these kinds of things pollute the purity of sport. If you esteem marriage to be a holy and good gift, you will seek to preserve its honor, and you'll talk about how things like adultery, divorce, and sex before marriage all poison the well of this God-given union. Again, that which you find to be glorious and good, you will likewise treasure the purity of that thing. In fact, you can't believe that something is wonderful, and then not care if people defile it. And this is the exact approach that Paul takes towards the gospel in Romans 16:17-20.

Paul loves the gospel. It's beautiful to him. It's glorious, good news. And he knows that his friends in Rome think about the gospel similarly. But what should the church at Rome do if the beauty and purity of the gospel is under attack? How should they respond if the gospel begins to be polluted or diluted in their midst?

Paul warns his friends that there are those who create divisions among God's people, and that these "persons do not serve our Lord Christ, but their own appetites" (16:18). Because of this, Paul says these people should be avoided. The church in Rome should not follow their way, or give their teaching the time of day. But this is harder than it may seem because these false teachers are articulate and they use "smooth talk and flattery" (16:18). They don't draw a hearing by being mean. They are great-sounding, winsome, charismatic personalities that are out to deceive and divide God's people. What should the church at Rome do to protect themselves and pursue the purity of the gospel?

Well, in the middle of verse 19, Paul alludes to a saying of Jesus: "I am sending you out as sheep in the midst of wolves (i.e. false teachers), so be as wise as serpents and as innocent as doves" (Matthew 10:16). For both Paul and Jesus, wisdom means thoughtfully, patiently, and practically considering how to take that which is good and embody it. Further, innocence means that, after critically and humbly considering and engaging, if something is found to be against the good teaching, steer clear of it. Like the Bereans who examined the Scriptures to make sure that Paul was teaching the truth (Acts 17:11), we should examine everything next to the clarity of Scripture and the clarity of the gospel.

In order to preserve the purity of the gospel, we should start to ask questions like: Does that teacher or that idea make me think more about health, wealth, and results OR faith, hope, and love in relationship with Jesus? Does their teaching make me dwell more on what I can achieve if I only believe, OR what has been achieved by Jesus at the cross to save me? Do they focus more on experience, feelings, and personal potential, OR on the grace and peace that we share because of Jesus? Asking Jesus-centered questions like these will help us recognize false teaching.

Lastly, we should protect the purity of the gospel is by delighting in it. We will guard it well, if our protection of it comes from our prizing of it. We should love the gospel, trust the gospel, understand the gospel, explain the gospel, sing the gospel, and talk about the gospel; and in doing all of these things we combat any anti-gospel teaching that doesn't serve Christ.

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Fellowship Greenville, Charlies Boyd (2018)
https://fellowshipgreenville.org/page/461?Item=1617

FG Romans
Sermon Series
<Prev Next>

SERIES: Romans: God's Power for Salvation
TITLE: To God Be The Glory
SCRIPTURE: Romans 16:25-27

What is it that makes you feel strong, stable, secure, and confident? No one likes to feel weak and unstable, right? Of course not. So we gravitate toward things that give us a sense of stability—security.

So, what are those things for you?

Is it financial security? Is it being be liked by people you admire? Is it feeling like you are in control of your life? Maybe it's good looks or being physical strong/physically fit. It could be the kind of car you drive or where you live or maybe it's standing up to people who try to take advantage of you or maybe it's your politics or being "right" theologically? Maybe it's a combination of several of these things.

There are all kinds of things we gravitate toward that give us a sense of stability and strength and security and confidence because God knows—this world is an unstable place—violence, injustice, political unrest—threats of terrorism—the ongoing problem of racism—we all know we live in a broken, unstable world.

It was no different in Paul's day. To live in first century Rome was to live in a very unstable place. Rome was an overpopulated, disease-infested, violent city. Crime was rampant. Riots between different ethnic groups was commonplace. There was constant political unrest . So try to hear the final verses of Paul's letter to the Christians in Rome as they would have heard it.

Now to the one who is able to strengthen you — to the one who is able to make you stable . He's saying that God is able to empower you to stop living as if you are a victim with no power and no control—to stop living like a ball in a pinball machine bouncing off the circumstances of your life—living in fear of your future or weighed down by the guilt or bitterness of your past. Paul is saying that God has something better for you. He is able to stabilize you, strengthen you, establish you. So how does he do this?

God brings his stability into our unstable world through the Gospel of Jesus. He brings his stability into our unstable lives, not by commanding us to try harder, not by promising that if we just have more faith then we can make all the things we don't like go away. No, God is able to make you stable as you believe in, rely on, cling to, rest in the Good News of Jesus. God has not promised that the world will get better and better, in fact, if I read my New Testament correctly, our world will keep getting more and more unstable until Jesus comes back to set things right. So if we are going to continue living in an unstable world then do you see why what Paul says here is so important?

The promise is—no matter how unstable your world or this world becomes God is able to make you stable through your unwavering faith in the Gospel of Jesus. The heart of the Gospel is that Jesus Christ died for our sins and rose from the dead— So that now — We are justified—put right with God—by his grace as a gift, through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus — So that now — We have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ — So that now — we are released from the law, having died to that which held us captive, so that we serve not under the old written code but in the new life of the Spirit—So that now — There is no condemnation to those who are in Christ Jesus — So that now — The righteous requirement of the law can be fulfilled in us who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit—So that now — If God is for us who can be against us? — So that now — Nothing can separate us from the love of God in Christ Jesus — So that now — We are more than conquerors through him who loves us—So that now—Whoever calls on the name of the Lord Jesus will be saved—So that now — The God of hope fills us with all joy and peace in believing by the power of the Holy Spirit.

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

That is the GOOD NEWS of Romans! And you never, never, never outgrow your need for that Good News. You don't begin the Christian life with the Gospel and then leave it behind to go on to something more important, more relevant—You don't get the Gospel and then move beyond it—NO— you get the Gospel and move into it —God strengthens us with this Gospel till the day we die. Paul goes on to show us how the Gospel is the very thing God uses to strengthen our faith.

Notice that there are three "according to's" here. God is able to make you stable (1) according to my Gospel and the preaching of Jesus Christ (25a); (2) according to the revelation of the mystery that was kept secret for long ages but has now been disclosed through the prophetic writings has been made known to all nations (25b-26a); and (3) according to the command of the eternal God to bring about the obedience of faith (26b). Three "according to's"—not that there are three different ideas here—but as I understand it—the first "according to" is described by the second—and the second "according to"—is explained by the third. Maybe best read like this —God is able to make you stable through the Gospel of Jesus which is the mystery of revelation kept secret for long ages past which has been revealed at this time by the command of the eternal God.

When you read the Old Testament, you find men and women puzzled as to how God was going to pull together all its great promises and prophecies. For example, there's the promise of the restoration of Israel. There's the promise of the forgiveness of an individual's sins and the infilling of the Holy Spirit.There's the promise of the healing of the nations and the cessation of war, but no one understood how all this would fit together. Peter says the prophets of old searched diligently to see what kind of person and time the things they spoke about would come to pass, but it was a mystery to them. That's why it is called a mystery. In Bible language, a mystery is something that was hidden in the Old Testament and revealed in the New. Here's the point: The gospel is the unfolding of a mystery— a mystery kept secret since the world began but has now been revealed by the coming of Jesus. And the mystery was that Jews and Gentiles would be united into one new people through faith in Jesus Christ (cf Eph 3:1-6 and Col 1:26-27) Why is that so important? Because Paul is describing the Gospel here in one sentence as both an eternal story stretching from eternity past to eternity future—but he also focuses our attention on Jesus. It's a big story, but it all focuses on a single person, our Savior Jesus. And the very first Christmas was the revelation, the unveiling of that mystery. You could say that the mystery was revealed in a manger.

As Paul reminds himself and his readers of the magnitude of the eternal glory of the Gospel, it leads him to bow his head and lift his hands—he's no longer teaching or explaining or defending—he's simply worshipping—and he explodes with praise. Now to him—to the only wise God be glory forevermore through Jesus Christ! Amen. He extols the glory of God. And think about this—out of all the things he could have said about the glory of the God what he chooses to ascribe to God is the fact that God is able to make us stable through the Gospel of Jesus. Now to him who is able to make you stable—to the only wise God—be glory forevermore through Jesus Christ! Amen.

It took John Piper seven years to teach through Romans. He preached five messages on 16:25-27. Here's how he concluded one of those messages—"Our God has worked in history to defeat sin and Satan and hell and death. He did this through the Gospel of Jesus. Embrace this Gospel as the greatest treasure of your life. God will magnify his glory in making you strong."

Romans TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Romans – Summary

http://www.fbccs.org/resources/studyguides/romans_sg99.htm

Excerpt:

ROMANS

The Message of the Gospel

1 - 3	4 - 5	6 - 8	9 - 11	12 - 15	16
Our Problem: sin	God's Solution: Justification	The New Life: sanctification and glorification	Parenthesis Israel's history and future	Application: living out the Christian life	Conclusion and personal greetings

5	6	7	8
Peace with God	Union with Christ	Freedom from the Law	Life in the Spirit
declared righteous Adam or Christ	our new identity our new master	under grace still struggling	He empowers us we wait for glory His plan is good

Key Principles:

- I am at peace with God. He will never condemn me for my sin, because it has been paid for by Christ. I am righteous in God's sight because of justification.
- I do not have to live like I did before Christ, because I am not the same person I used to be. The "real me", in the deepest sense, belongs to God, loves Him like a father and wants to follow Him fully.
- I am under grace, not law. My acceptance by God is not based on my performance. His loving opinion of me (my standing before Him) does not change. I am motivated by love and gratitude, not fear and guilt.
- When I try to live my life on my own strength, I struggle and fail, because sin still lives in me. I am tempted to legalism on the one hand, and irresponsibility on the other.
- When I live life depending on God's strength, the Holy Spirit empowers me, encourages, me, and enables me to "put to death" the evil I see in myself. He is the source of the life and goodness that I experience.
- In this life I will experience pain and difficulty, but the Spirit always indwells me, prays for me, assures me that I am God's child, and ensures that I will be with Him one day in heaven.

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

- Although my life may feel chaotic, I am part of God's eternal plan, which He initiated and which He will bring to a glorious conclusion. Meanwhile, nothing can separate me from His love.

Key Terms:

- Justification: when we trust in Christ (expressing faith, not works), God cancels our guilt and transfers Christ's righteousness to us. ("justify" means "to declare to be righteous")
- Redemption: the transfer of ownership by the payment of a price; God's purchase of our freedom through Jesus' death on the cross. (1 Cor. 6:20)
- Sanctification: the process by which God, through the Holy Spirit, brings progressive spiritual growth into a believer's life. ("sanctify" means "to set apart, to make holy" - 1 Thess. 4:3,4)
- Glorification: the fulfillment of God's promise to bring believers into His eternal presence, with new bodies and new hearts free from sin, the final goal in His plan of salvation.

A Chronological Table of the Apostolic Age	Harold W. Hoehner, 1972
Crucifixion	Friday, April 3, 33
Pentecost (Acts 2)	Sunday, May 24, 33
Peter's second sermon and brought before the Sanhedrin	summer 33
	33 - 34
Death of Ananias and Sapphira (Acts 4:32-5:11)	34-35
Peter brought before Sanhedrin (Acts 5:12-42)	late 34 - early 35
Deacons selected (Acts 6:1-7)	April 35
Stephen martyred (Acts 6:8-7:60)	summer 35
Paul's conversion (Acts 9:1-7)	summer 35 - early summer 37
Paul in Damascus and Arabia (Acts 9:8-25; Gal. 1:16-17)	summer 37
	autumn 37
Paul in Jerusalem, first visit (Acts 9:26-29; Gal. 1:18-20)	40-41
Paul went to Tarsus and Syria-Cilicia area (Acts 9:30; Gal. 1:21)	41 spring 43
Peter ministers to Gentiles (Acts 10:1 - 11:18)	spring 44
Barnabas sent to Antioch (Acts 11:19-24)	spring 44
Paul went to Antioch (Acts 11:25-26)	autumn 47
Agabus predicts a famine (Acts 11:27-28)
Agrippa's persecution, James martyred (Acts 12:1-23)	autumn 47 - spring 48
Relief visit, Paul's second visit to Jerusalem (Acts 11:30; Gal. 2:1-10)
Paul in Antioch (Acts 12:25-13:1)
First Missionary Journey (Acts 13-14)	April 48-September 49

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Departure from Antioch	April 48
Cyprus	April - June 48
Pamphylia	first of July - middle of July 48
Pisidian Antioch	middle of July - middle of September 48
Iconium	October 48 - last of February 49
Lystra-Derbe	March - middle of June 49
Return visit to churches	middle of June - August 49
Return to Antioch of Syria	September 49
Peter at Antioch (Gal. 2:11-16)	autumn 49
• Galatians written from Antioch	autumn 49
Jerusalem council, Paul's third visit (Acts 15)	autumn 49
Paul in Antioch (Acts 12:25-13:1)	winter 49/50

Second Missionary Journey (Acts 15:38-18:22)	April 50-September 52
Departure from Antioch	April 50
Syria-Cilicia	April 50
Lystra-Derbe	May 50
Iconium Pisidian	last of May - middle of June 50
Antioch	middle of June-first of July 50
Antioch of Troas	July 50
Phillipi	August-October 50
Thessalonica	November 50 - January 51
Berea	February 51
Athens	last of February - middle of March 51
Arrival at Corinth	middle of March 51
Silas and Timothy arrive from Berea	April/May 51
• 1 Thessalonians written	early summer 51
• 2 Thessalonians written	summer 51
Departure from Corinth	first of September 52
Ephesus	middle of September 52
Jerusalem, Paul's fourth visit	last of September 52
Return to Antioch	first/middle of November 52
Paul's stay at Antioch	winter 52/53

Third Missionary Journey (Acts 18:23-21:16)	spring 53-May 57
Departure from Antioch	spring 53
Visiting Galatian churches	spring - summer 53
Arrival at Ephesus	September 53
• 1 Corinthians written	early spring 56
Departure from Ephesus (riot)	first of May 56
Troas	May 56
Arrival in Macedonia	first of June 56
• 2 Corinthians written	September/October 56
Departure from Macedonia	middle of November 56
Arrival in Corinth	last of November 56
• Romans written	winter 56/57
Departure from Corinth	last of February 57
Philippi	April 6 - 14, 57
Troas	April 19 - 25, 57
Troas to Assos	Monday, April 25, 57

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Assos to Mitylene	April 26, 57
Mitylene to Chios	April 27, 57
Chios to Trogyllium	April 28, 57
Trogyllium to Hiletus	April 29, 57
Ephesian elders see Paul	April 30 - May 2, 57
Miletus to Patara	May 2 - 4, 57
Patara to Tyre	May 5 - 9, 57
Stay at Trye	May 10 - 16, 57
Trye to Caesarea	May 17 - 19, 57
Stay at Caesarea	May 19 - 25, 57
Caesarea to Jerusalem	May 25 - 27, 57
Jerusalem, Paul's fifth visit, eve of Pentecost	May 27, 57
Meeting with James (Acts 21:13-23)	May 28, 57
Paul's arrest and trial before Felix (Acts 21:26-24:22)	May 29 - June 9, 57
Five days of purification	Sunday, May 29 - June 2, 57
Paul before the Sanhedrin	June 3, 57
Appearance of the Lord (night)	June 4, 57
Conspiracy (day)	June 4, 57
Journey to Antipatris (night)	June 5, 57
Journey to Caesarea (day)	June 5, 57
Waiting in Caesarea for trial	June 5 - 9, 57
Trial before Felix	Thursday, June 9, 57
Paul before Felix and Drusilla (Acts 24:24-26)	June 57
Caesarean imprisonment (Acts 24:24-26)	June 57 - August 59
Trial before Festus (Acts 25:7-12)	July 59
Trial before Agrippa (Acts 26)	first of August 59
Voyage to Rome (Acts 27:1-28:29)	August 59 - February 60
Departure from Caesarea	middle of August 59
Myra	middle of September 59
Fair Havens	October 5 - 10, 59
Shipwreck at Malta	last of October 59
Departure from Malta	first of February 60
Arrival from Rome	last of February 60
First Roman Imprisonment (Acts 28:30)	February 60 - March 62
• Ephesians written	autumn 60
• Colossians and Philemon written	autumn 61
• Philippians written	early spring 62
James, Lord's brother, martyred	spring 62
Paul in Ephesus and Colossae	spring - autumn 62
Peter went to Rome	62
Paul in Macedonia	late summer 62 - winter 62/63
• 1 Timothy written	autumn 62
Paul in Asia Minor	spring 63 - spring 64
Paul in Spain	spring 64 - spring 66
Christians persecuted, Peter martyred	summer 64
Paul in Crete	early summer 66
Paul in Asia minor	summer - autumn 66
• Titus written	summer 66
Paul in Nicopolis	winter 66/67
Paul in Macedonia and Greece	spring - autumn 67

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Paul arrested and brought to Rome	autumn 67
• 2 Timothy written	autumn 67
Paul's death	spring 68
Destruction of Jerusalem	September 2, 70

Romans TOC
(Table of Contents)

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Old and New Man

Chapter Three
From A Christian Looks at Himself, by Anthony Hoekema

But, someone may still say, what about our "sinful nature"? What about our "depravity"? Does not the Bible teach that even after we have been born again, even after we have become believers, we continue to have a sinful nature and therefore to keep on sinning? And does this not imply that the Bible teaches us to continue to have a negative image of ourselves even after we have been converted?

In fact, such a person might go on to say, even when I accept the fact that in Christ all my past sins have been forgiven and all my past guilt has been removed, if I am as bad a sinner as the Bible describes me to be, don't I keep on increasing my sins and piling up my guilt every day? Though, to be sure, I confess these new sins daily and receive forgiveness for them, doesn't all this add up to a pretty negative self-image? Mustn't I continue to see myself as a person perpetually dogged by failure, constantly trying to do the right things but just as constantly failing to do them? If the very holiest of men, as one Christian creed puts it, have only "a small beginning of this obedience," how can any believer avoid having a negative image of himself?

This is the problem with which we must now deal. In trying to find a solution to it, let us first of all consider what the Scriptures teach about the concepts "old man" and "new man." A better understanding of these concepts than is sometimes held will, I believe, help us to answer the question posed above.

It has been rather commonly held by Christians that in the believer there is a continual struggle between two aspects of his being, the "old man" which he is by nature and the "new man" which he puts on at the time of regeneration and conversion. According to this view, the old man and the new man are distinguishable "parts" of the believer. Before conversion he is only an old man; at the time of conversion he is said to put on the new man without, however, totally losing the old man. The converted person, or believer, is understood to be partly new man and partly old man. At times the old man is in control, whereas at other times the new man is in the saddle; the struggle of life, therefore, is the struggle between these two aspects or parts of his being (also sometimes called the "new nature" and the "old nature").

This understanding of the old and the new man can easily lead to a negative self-image. One may, of course, think of himself as primarily new man, and only secondarily old man, but even in such a case his self-image will be of a person who is partly new and partly old - partly obedient to God and partly in rebellion against God. One might, however, also think of himself much more pessimistically, as primarily old man and only occasionally and rarely new man - in which case his self-image would be negative indeed.

It is to be seriously questioned, however, whether the view of "old man" and "new man" described above is the right one. In his Principles of Conduct, John Murray has rejected the idea that the believer is both old man and new man It is just as wrong to call the believer both a new man and an old man, he argues, as it is to say that he is both regenerate and unregenerate (p. 218). Murray contends that since according to New Testament teaching the believer has put off the old man and put on the new, we must think of him as a new man -though a new man not yet made perfect, and still the subject of progressive renewal. This renewal, however, is not to be conceived of as the progressive putting off of the old man and putting on of the new (pp. 218-219).

In his study Paul, Herman Ridderbos offers an interpretation similar to Murray's. When Paul speaks about the old man and the new man, writes Ridderbos, he is not concerned primarily with the change which takes place in the life of an individual Christian after conversion, but with what took place once and for all in Christ (pp. 63-64). Christ, as the second Adam, died on the cross and arose from the grave for His people. Since Christ's people are one with Him in corporate unity, what happened to Christ has therefore also happened to His people. By His death on the cross Christ dealt a death-blow to sin as the power which had been enslaving His people; by His resurrection He opened up a new way of living for His people: the way of living associated with God's new creation.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The "old man" and the "new man" Ridderbos claims, ought to be understood in this salvation - history setting. They designate the great transition from spiritual death to spiritual life which came into existence through the death and resurrection of Christ, and which is now to be appropriated by faith. In other words, we may think of these concepts in both an objective and a subjective way. Objectively, "old" and "new" man mean that in Christ's death and resurrection the old, sinful way of living has once for all been done away with, having lost its power over Christ's people, whereas the new way of living associated with God's new creation his once for all been inaugurated. Subjectively, "old" and "new" man mean that believers enter into this new way of living as they appropriate by faith - not only initially but continually - what happened in the death and resurrection of Christ. Another way of putting this is to say that "old" man refers to the old age in which man as incorporated in Adam is a slave to sin, whereas "new" man designates the new age in which man as a member of the body of Christ is now liberated from the slavery of sin and is free to live to the praise of God.

I believe that what Murray and Ridderbos are saying is of great significance for our subject. The old and the new man, it seems to me, ought not to be seen as aspects or sides or parts of the believer which are both still somehow present in him. How, then, should we understand these concepts? Murray can help us here. He says, " -` Old man' is a designation of the person in his unity as dominated by the flesh and sin" (p. 218). If this is so, it is obvious that the regenerated person is no longer an "old man." Paul says in Romans 6:6, "Knowing this, that our old man was crucified with him, that the body of sin might be done away, that so we should no longer be in bondage to sin" (ASV). This crucifixion of the old man happened in salvation history. When Christ died on the cross, our old man - that is, our total person as enslaved by flesh and sin - was put to death with Him. This means that we who have been united with Christ through faith are no longer "old men." Our old man or old self has been put to death with Christ.

What happened when Christ was crucified, however, has also been subjectively appropriated by us. This is taught by Paul in the two other passages where the terms "old man" and "new man" occur: Ephesians 4:22-24 and Colossians 3:910. To quote just the latter passage, Paul there writes, "Lie not one to another; seeing that ye have put off the old man with his doings, and have put on the new man, that is being renewed unto knowledge after the image of Him that created him" (ASV). After the analogy of what has just been said about the old man, we conclude that the new man must mean the person in his unity ruled by the Holy Spirit. In this passage, therefore, Paul appeals to his readers not to lie to each other because they have once and for all put off the old man or old self and have once and for all put on the new man or the new self.

Our self-image as Christians, therefore, must be of ourselves as those who have decisively rejected the old self or old man (the total person enslaved by sin), and have just as decisively appropriated the new self or the new man (the total person ruled by the Spirit). Because of what Christ has done for us, and because we, enabled by His Spirit, have grasped all His benefits by faith, we are now to look upon ourselves as no longer identified with the old self or old man, but as identified with the new self or the new man. We are to see ourselves, therefore, not as partly old selves and partly new selves, but as new persons in Christ.

Does this mean that for the believer the struggle against sin is over? No! The New Testament is full of the language of struggle: the Christian life is called a battle, a race, and a wrestling against evil spirits; we are told to be good Christian soldiers, to fight the good fight of the faith, to resist the devil, to take heed lest we fall, and to put on the whole armor of God. Moreover, in this struggle we do not always win, we do not resist every temptation. On the contrary, we hear New Testament saints confessing that they are far from perfection, that they have not yet attained, that in many things they all stumble. We hear John saying in his first epistle, "If we say we have no sin, we deceive ourselves and the truth is not in us" (1: 8). The point is, however, that when we do fall into sin, we are momentarily living according to the old man, or the old self, which we have actually repudiated. We are then living contrary to what we really are in Christ. Though we are regenerate: we are then living contrary to our regenerate life. Though we have put on the new man, we are then living contrary to the new man, as if we were still the old man.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

But the fact that this does happen - and may, indeed, happen frequently - does not mean that we must therefore revise our self-image as having to include both old man and new man. For - and this is a most important point - when we slip into an old man way of living, we are living contrary to our true selves; we are denying our true self image. Paul does not say in Romans 6: 11, "Consider yourselves to be mostly alive to God and mostly dead to sin."

What he says is, "Consider yourselves dead to sin and alive to God." This, then, must be our Christian self-image. We must consider ourselves to be new persons in Christ, who have once and for all turned our backs upon the old self, and who therefore refuse to be identified with it any longer.

The old man or old self reveals itself in an old lifestyle, that of enslavement to sin. The. new man or new self should reveal itself in a new life-style, that of joyful obedience to God. But it does not always do so. There are times when even the believer, who is a new person in Christ, lives in accordance with the old life-style. When he does so, however, he is being inconsistent with the person he truly is. Therefore Paul calls on believers to make their life-styles consistent with the new selves they have put on.

It might be well at this point to say something about the use of the word "depraved" as a term with which to describe believers. If it is true that the believer is to look upon himself as a new man in Christ, is it then proper to refer to such a person as still "depraved" or even as still "totally deprived"?

Perhaps a bit of historical background would be in order here. The concept of "total depravity" was developed by theologians in the Reformed or Calvinistic tradition to designate the condition of man as a fallen creature, apart from the regenerating and sanctifying influences of the Holy Spirit. The term was intended to convey two thoughts: (1) that in man as he is "by nature" the corruption or pollution of sin extends to every part of his being: to his mind as well as his appetites and impulses, to his aesthetic appreciation as well as his capacity to choose, and so on, and (2) that man in his natural state cannot do what is fundamentally pleasing to God, and cannot in his own strength change his basic preference for sin to love for God.

But now the question arises, is "depravity" or "total depravity" a proper expression to use in describing a regenerate man - a person to whom the Holy Spirit has given new spiritual life? We have just noted that the term was introduced to describe man apart from the regenerating and sanctifying work of the Spirit. That being the case, it should be obvious that the term ought not to be used to describe a person in whom the Spirit has begun the process of renewal and sanctification.

One might conceivably counter: But is it not true that even a regenerated person must still struggle against sin in every area of his life, in his thoughts as well as in his feelings, in his mind as well as in his appetites? Must not the believer still contend with the flesh, put to death the deeds of the body, and fight against indwelling sin? Indeed he must. But since the believer is now in Christ, indwelt by the Holy Spirit, he has been endowed with power to resist temptation and to overcome sin - a power which the unregenerate man does not have.

For these reasons I conclude that one ought not to say that a regenerate person is still "totally depraved." Though the believer is still inclined to all kinds of sin, the indwelling Spirit now enables him more and more to say no to sin. We ought therefore to see him, think of him, and describe him as a person who is a new creature in Christ, who is being progressively renewed in the image of God.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Struggle Between Old and New Natures in the Converted Man
(Anthony Hoekema)
http://www.biblicalstudies.org.uk/pdf/bets/vol05/5-2_hoekema.pdf

http://www.etsjets.org/files/JETS-PDFs/5/5-2/BETS_5-2_42-50_Hoekema.pdf

The Struggle Between Old and New Natures in the Converted Man
Anthony Hoekema (downloadable PDF)
http://servantsofgrace.org/anthony-hoekema-struggle-old-new-natures-converted-man/

The Old Man vs. the New Man http://www.studiesinthebook.com/studies/old_new_man.pdf [PDF]

Excerpt:

Tough passages of Scripture in 1 John
1 John 3:6-10
1 John 5:18

The Old man (your flesh) was put off at your spiritual circumcision by the Lord using the word of God. It is dead as far as God is concerned and it is dead in the sense of its power and authority over you. The reason why you still sin is your flesh/body/old man and because you allow your body to fulfill the lusts it has. Your body is corrupt (Genesis 5:3) and was corrupted when Adam and Eve ate of the forbidden tree (Genesis 3:6 and compare with 1 John 2:15-17). Your inward man CANNOT sin which was renewed in knowledge after the image of Jesus Christ by Jesus Christ. With our inward man, we serve the law of God and keep it, yet we still dwell in the flesh (in which dwells no good thing). BUT one day, are bodies will be redeemed just as our soul and spirit were. And from thenceforth, we will NEVER sin again!

Your standing – Without sin, holy unblameable in his sight Your state – depends on if you walk after the flesh or Spirit: the choice is yours. Sin no long has dominion over you.

This is who you are in Christ, therefore walk like it now because this is your ultimate end when the sons of God are manifested in a glorious body liken unto his glorious body. Until then we still dwell in a body that is corruptible so we need to mortify the deeds and lusts thereof.

See also*: Old Man and Flesh

"Old Man" and "New Man" in Paul https://bible.org/article/%E2%80%9Cold-man%E2%80%9D-and-%E2%80%9Cnew-man%E2%80%9D-paul

Excerpt:

Theological Conclusions

So what are some conclusions that can be drawn from these passages. The first thing that can be said is that the "old man" refers to people in solidarity with Adam under the old age of sin, death, and judgment. It is corporate in focus.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Second, since it is corporate and relational in focus it should probably not be translated using the word "self" since this is too narrow and individualistic in its focus.[29]

Third, we saw that in every passage the expression "old man" is relational in character. Therefore, it should not be viewed as a synonym for fallen human "flesh" (cf. Rom 7:18; savrx, sarx). When reading the Scriptures, Christians should not view it as pointing directly to some immaterial aspect of man as a sinful human being. Thus, "sinful nature" is also a misleading translation. Again, the "old man" refers to fallen people in community "in Adam." To read it individualistically as the "flesh" or "sinful nature" robs it off its corporate focus and a great insight to us as relational creatures is obscured. The best translation of ho palaios anthropos is probably "old man" or "old community" with a note explaining its corporate sense.

Fourth, the crucifixion of the "old man" refers to a definitive break with the past in Adam and is something God reckons to be true of us. The sinner is separated from the community of Adam and the relationships that exist there. But, there is also the sense in which the believer, having been decisively removed from that community is not to live as if he still belonged there. Thus the "old man" must be continually put off as well. We will say more about this below under our brief discussion of the "now/not-yet."

There are some things we need to say about the "new man" as well. First, like "old man," it too is corporate in focus. This is made clear in Ephesians 2:15 and Colossians 3:10-11. Here the new man is synonymous with the church—a sphere of existence in Christ, in which there are no racial boundaries and no divisions. It is not our new regenerate nature spoken of in Titus 3:5.

Second, there is a concomitant ethic in the new man/community. We are to live at peace and there is to be no sin in the "new man" in which we are being renewed according to the pattern of Christ himself.

Third, given the use of the "new man" concept in Ephesians 2:15; 4:24 and Colossians 3:10-11, the best translation of ho kainos anthropos is "new man" or "new community" with a note explaining its relational focus.

The last thing we want to say about the "old man" and the "new man" is that there is an eschatological tension involved in Paul's use of the concept. What we mean by "eschatological tension" is that there is a sense in which Christians have been completely and decisively brought into this new community, but another sense in which we are still trying to escape the old community. We live in the "now" of God's saving purposes, but there is a "not-yet"—there is more to come! This "configuration" of things will exist until God perfects us (i.e., the new man) in heaven. Therefore, when the Bible says we have put off the "old man," it does not mean that we will exist in perfectly sinless relationships in this life. And, when it says to put on the "new man" it does not mean that living faithfully in the new community depends totally on us. All our efforts by faith are dependant on the antecedent work of God! For our part, we live at the crossroads of repentance and faith.

The Old and New Man in Ephesians (Eph. 4:24)

https://soundfaith.com/sermons/22187-the-old-and-new-man-in-ephesians

Excerpt:

What is the Old and New Man? Perhaps the single greatest obstacle we encounter when we try to define what the old and new men are is the paucity of information. There is no information outside of Paul's writings that can help us define them. Although the Hebrews and the Greeks spoke about clothing oneself with various moral attributes and virtues they never speak about taking off an old man and putting on a new man. The Old Testament speaks about clothing oneself with qualities (O'Brien, Colossians, 189, No Parallel). Although, there is some similarity between these passages in Paul's concept of putting on various virtues, there is no mention of taking off an old man and putting on a new man. Therefore, the Old Testament notion of clothing ourselves with various qualities cannot help us define what the old and new men are.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

he mystery religions spoke about being clothed with the power of the cosmos and divine life (O'Brien, Colossians, 189, No Parallel). The Gnostics also had a clothing metaphor where they spoke about daunting the garments of redemption (O'Brien, Colossians, 189, No Parallel). But these references make no mention about taking off an old man or putting on a new man.

Some different perspectives considered this article [with an attempt to summarize]…

Taking off old man and putting on the man come from the practice of baptism.	The first is, if we are to believe that Paul used the language of baptism to describe his teaching of taking off the old and putting on the new man, we would be making him put the cart before the horse. It seems more reasonable that the practice of disrobing and then robing was informed by the teaching of putting off the old and putting on the new man, rather than the teaching was informed by the sacrament. Two, the baptismal practice of disrobing one's garments before baptism and subsequently robing one self in new garments afterwards is second century tradition (Lincoln, Ephesians, 284, Baptism).
Old and [new] men of Ephesians 4 are conduct of the old and new age.	The problem with this interpretation is that there is nothing in the text which makes κατὰ τὴν προτέραν ἀναστροφὴν grammatically equivalent with τὸν παλαιὸν ἄνθρωπον. Because the two accusative phrases are juxtaposed, they could be considered in apposition.
A more friendly construction is to take τὸν παλαιὸν ἄνθρωπον as an adjective qualifying the former behavior.	Although Christ is said to be in us, Adam is never said to be in us. In addition, Paul speaks of the old man belonging to us (Rom. 6:6). Robinson gives a more satisfactory view and in turn refutes this theory.
The old man and new man are the life of Adam and Christ within us.	Perhaps the most convincing evidence that Paul understands the old man and new man as Adam and Christ respectively comes from a parallel verse to Ephesians…the old man is part of the old creation and the new man is part of the new creation…the old man is Adam and the new man is Christ.

See also*: Old Man and Flesh on following pages…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Old Man and Flesh by Ed Nichols (1998)

Christians and the Terms “Old Man” and “Flesh”
http://www.drnichols.org/_pdf/the_old_man_and_flesh.pdf [PDF]

Excerpt:

In his book Birthright, David C. Needham makes the case that "old man" and "flesh" are two different terms. He provides ample Scriptural support against the position that the terms old man and the flesh are synonyms. His case that the "crucifixion of the old man" is neither positional or judicial but actual is based on simple logic and is easy to follow. Needham presents an alternative view concerning the old man and the flesh and refutes it as double talk and lacking Scriptural support.

First Argument

The first argument presented is that of the alternative view which takes the position that the "old man," "flesh," and "sin nature" are synonyms. The alternative view centers around the interpretation that all descendants of Adam possess his Adamic nature and his inherited desire to sin. The authors of these positions elect to use several different words and several different Scriptures to make a weak case for their beliefs. They claim that any reference to human nature including soul, spirit and body is synonyms with sin nature, Adamic nature, the flesh, the old man, and any other term. The Scriptures which they cite are Rom 5.21; 6.6; 13.14; 1 John 1.8; 1 Cor 5.5; 2 Cor 7.1; 10.2-3; Gal 5.16-24; 6.8; Eph 2.3; 4.22; Col 3.9-10. The need to attach the above Scripture references to any particular word such as "old man" or "flesh" is unnecessary. If the words are synonyms then the Scripture references in all their context (historical, literary, textual, ad infinitum) are also synonyms.

Another position which supports synonyms of "old man," "carnal," and "flesh" is that the man one discusses is themselves. Man is full of evil because of man's old nature. This is followed by a similar position, that basic temperament inherited from parents to satisfy wants, are also called "the natural man," "the flesh," "the old man," and "corruptible flesh." This list for the proponents of this position is not exhaustive, but in their opinion is just to name a few.

The refutation of the inclusive nature of synonyms can be accomplished by simple but concise definitions of each of the words. By the very definition of the words considered by some to be synonyms one can see in fact that they are not synonyms. The method of inclusion demonstrated above is weak when compared to definitions which clearly separate and differentiate "old man," and "the flesh."

The first definition of "old man" is "the man I used to be in Adam....It is the man I once was, but which I am no longer." The second definition is that of "the flesh." "The flesh is the body of sin, the body in which sin tends to tyrannize still, the body in which sin yet remains."

The below comparisons of what the words "old man," and "the flesh" represent and do not represent, may provide a clearer definition.

OLD MAN

Is Not	Is
Carnal nature	A man who was in Adam
Moral being	Non-Christian prior to rebirth
Flesh/lusts	Who a Christian was at one time
Old/former	The person Christian is no longer
Corrupt	Crucified and buried with Christ

The "old man" is the old man of the Adamic Nature which a Christian once was but is no longer.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

THE FLESH

Is Not	Is
The old man	Body of sin
Corrupt nature	Sin tyrannized

The "flesh" is the body of sin which sin tyrannizes and in which sin remains.

The terms "old man," and "flesh" are not synonyms because the "old man" is a person and flesh and sin are a thing. The Apostle Paul separates the two terms (See Rom 7.14; 20; 25). Paul separates the old man and the body of sin. For Paul the "old man" was the old self or unregenerate sons of Adam. Paul identified flesh as sinful nature (See Rom 6.6). Simply put "the flesh is flesh." An "old man" is an old man. Flesh can be any kind of flesh, but an "old man" is an old man. Flesh and sin are not synonyms of old man.

Second Argument

The crucifixion of the old man as found in Romans six has been stated by some to be positional and judicial rather than actual. This is an important concept to consider. The question surrounding the death to the old man, is does death (total and actual annihilation) really occurred or is it that death to the old man was not really death as most people know it? The issue is as simple as, is dead, dead? Several questions are raised when one questions the meaning of death. Does the death of the old man, mean no longer alive? Can one be dead and yet be alive? If the old man did not die, does the new man live?

Positional proponents have several premises. One is that experimentally, the old man is still active after death but controlled by God's power. Another is that the old man is still active within the Christian and is only overcome victoriously through the indwelling Spirit. Needham disagrees with these suppositions. He also disagrees with the judicial suppositions which follow.

Judicial proponents believe that the crucifixion of the old man occurred at the crucifixion of Christ not at salvation. Another judicial point of view is that the old man as a former master is still alive in the Christian but that Christ makes Christians deaf to sin's appeals. A third judicial idea is that Christians must consent to Christ to fulfill the crucifixion of the old man. Another thought is that Christians must cooperate with the Holy Spirit to keep crucifying the old man to death.

The support for the above dual positions of crucified but not dead is described as Christians possessing two natures. One nature is the old sinful Adamic nature and the other a new Christ-like nature. The more the judicial position is examined the more ludicrous the position becomes. One position holds that because Satan and sin were judged does not mean that Satan and sin are no longer present in the life of Christians. Supposed support for that statement is that Christians are to live as though they are dead. It should be noted that the use of Romans 6.10,11 here does not support the position taken concerning acting like the old man is dead when he is not. Considering that the Scripture above may be interpreted, that since Christ is alive, Christians are also alive by faith in Him.

The actual position is much simpler and less complicated. The old man is dead. A Christian can not be an old man and a new man. A Christian is one or the other. They are either a dead old man or an alive new man (creature) in Christ Jesus. According to the Apostle Paul the old man was crucified. For Paul that meant death to the old man and death to sin. Paul's teaching does not support the view that the old man and the new man are operating simultaneously within the believer. The term crucified is the term which is identified with the crucifixion of Christ to put the old man to death. The old man was put to death just as sure as Christ was put to death by crucifixion. To suggest that the old man was crucified but still lives begs the question of continuing crucifixion. There is no such thing as a two thousand year crucifixion. Paul made it plain that the process was crucifixion (Christ, Christian's old man), death, then resurrection to a new life. Needham's inclusion of a quote which states that the old man is no longer present and that Christians are to stop acting as if the old man is present is an admonition worth heeding. The final statement for an actual crucifixion or death to the old man is, the old man no longer exist after a Christian's regeneration because the old man has been put off and a new man has been put on.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Third Argument

Needham looks at the positions taken by those who believe that the death of the old man is positional and judicial and finds that it is nothing but double talk. Needham questions these positions by asking four questions. If the old nature is dead why does the Christian have to make sure it is kept in the coffin? Why should the new man have to contend with the old man? Why must a Christian learn to live with, control, and dominate his old nature?

Those who take this view and attempt to answer the questions do so according to Needham without a Scriptural basis. For Needham the four positions are supported with double talk and misconstrued Scriptural references and can not make a case for death not being actual. The four views are, one, the making of a case that death can not be considered as actual because one makes the body of sin and the old man synonymous. Two, that 1 John 1.8 would be contradicted. Three, that death does not mean extinction or cessions but separation. And four, that the old man is not dead until physical death or rapture.

The proper view according to Needham is that the old self that was in Adam is gone. The new self or new man which includes powers which are mental, thought, reason, and imagination are part of the Christian's members (See Rom 6.13). The old self being dead is no longer an obstacle to the members of the body and the members can now be used to glorify God.

Conclusion

It might be good for all Christians to recognize that the old man or old branch has been cut away from the flesh and sin.

The moment you were born again, the unregenerate person you used to be--your old self (crab apple)--was sliced off, crucified. What you had been by nature, 'a child of wrath,' you are no more. There it lies on the ground, dead.2

The new man has become a new branch which has been grafted to the tree of life in Christ Jesus. Continued reliance on the power of the Holy Spirit can prove to Christians that sin is merely temporary insanity and that living a life pleasing to God is temple indwelling.

Every Christian should be assured that Christ has pronounced a judgment of death on the old man. The Christian's acceptance of Christ as Savior has resulted in a new man. The old man is crucified, dead and buried, the new man is resurrected. The new man is in Christ Jesus and living a life in the power of the Holy Spirit. The "old man," and "flesh" are not synonyms.

What is the "flesh"?

"Apart from God, humanity is characterized by a complex web of thoughts, desires, values, and actions that are in opposition to God′s intended pattern for us.

In both Testaments, "flesh" is a complex word with many meanings. The NT emphasizes humanity′s moral inadequacy. When they are isolated from God, human beings are energized by evil desires and guided by perceptions that distort God's will and His nature. The word "flesh" reminds us that we are caught in the grip of sin.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

God does not free us now from the flesh. Instead, he provides a source of power that will release us from the domination of the flesh. Jesus The Holy Spirit lives within us, and He is the source of new desires and a new perspective."

Larry Richards,
Expository Dictionary of Bible Word

The Old Man, the New Man, and the Flesh

http://www.stempublishing.com/authors/boyd/The_Old_Man_the_New_Man_and_the_Flesh.html

The Difference between the Old Man and the Flesh

https://www.cfcindia.com/wftw/the-difference-between-the-old-man-and-the-flesh

Excerpt:

…Jesus said we have to take up the cross every day. That's not killing the old man. The old man has already been crucified. To take up the cross is to put our self-will (which is what the Bible calls our "flesh") to death daily, in the power of the Spirit.

In other words, I can't resist the pull of my flesh toward my sin by trying harder to keep the law. But as I lean to walk according to the spirit I am able to obey God's law without trying hard to obey God's law. When I walk in the power of the spirit (lead by the spirit; the spirit living in and through us) enables us to obey and fulfill God's law without trying hard to obey God's law.

See also*: Old Man and New Man

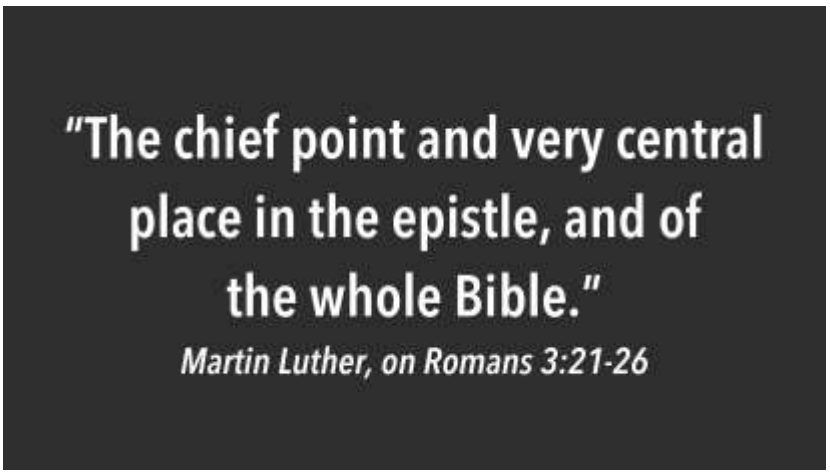
Romans TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

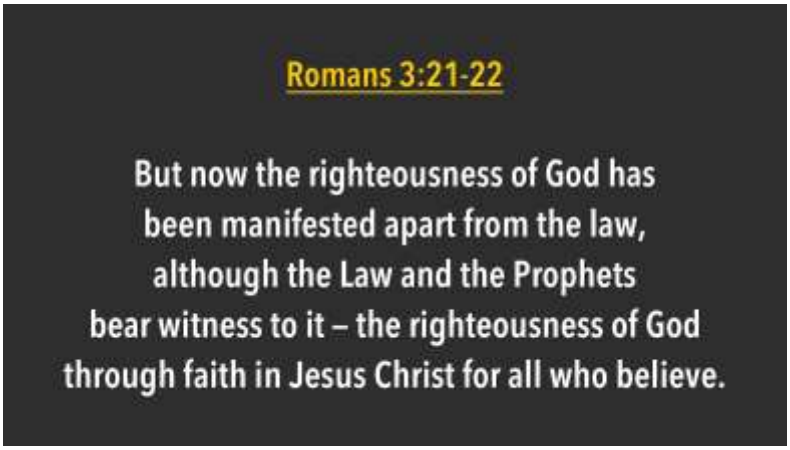


Romans Glossary

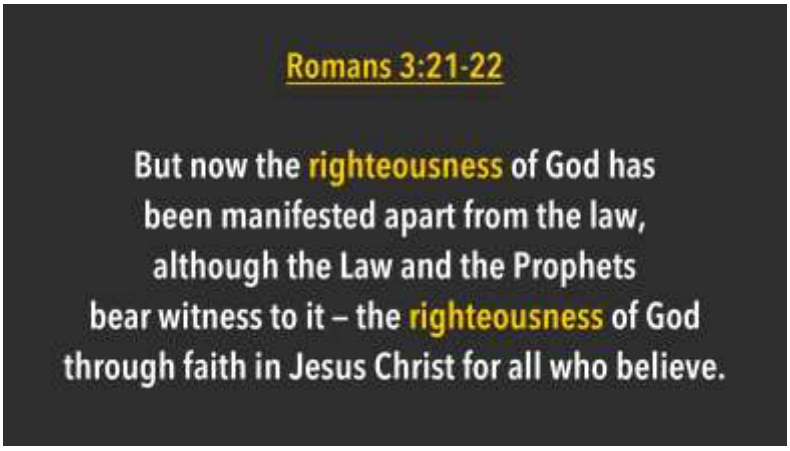
Charlie Boyd Sermon Notes, "Finally, Good News!". Fellowship Greenville
https://fellowshipgreenville.org/page/461?Item=1263

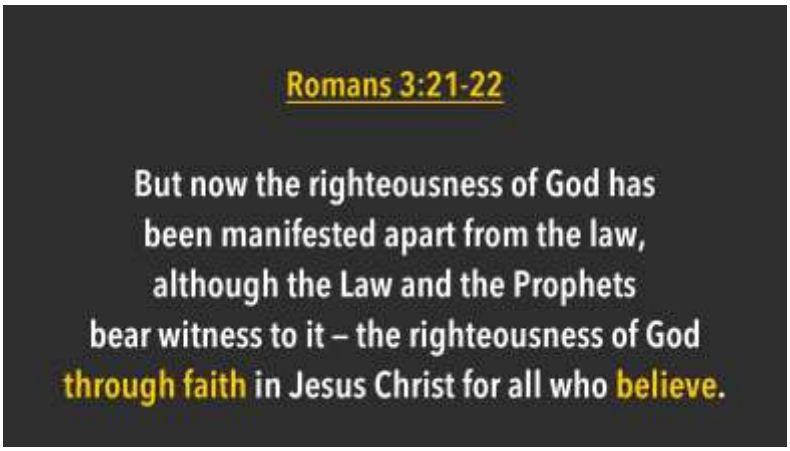
FG Romans
Sermon Series
<Prev Next>

Romans 3:21-26



There is a serious problem in the church in Rome—a problem that was present in many churches in those days. God, in Christ, has broken down the dividing wall between Jews and Gentiles, but what God can tear down, people can rebuild. Each group thought they were better than/superior to the other. So right off the bat, Paul levels the playing field (1:18-3:20; 2:12; 3:9-11; 3:20). Paul wants both groups in the church to see that as God sees it, all people stand before the judgment bench of God's justice condemned and deserving of death. Put simply, he wants both groups to see that they all need the Gospel in the same way for the same reason.





What is the Gospel? The Gospel is the Good News that God has made a way for all people to be declared right with himself through faith in Jesus. The Gospel is not good religious teaching—not even, the good teaching of Jesus. No, the Gospel is news—an announcement—a special alert. God has made a way for everyone who believes in Jesus to live in and enjoy a personal relationship with God. Romans 3:21-26 is the clearest explanation of that simple definition of the Gospel in all the Bible—an explanation with rich theological significance so we will have to dig underneath words like righteousness, faith, justification, propitiation, redemption, and atonement along the way.

See also*: Gospel of Jesus the Messiah (Christ)

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Romans 3:21-22 — "Righteousness" is a word from a courtroom—it has to do with a person's legal standing before a judge. (See also: Righteousness, NTWright)

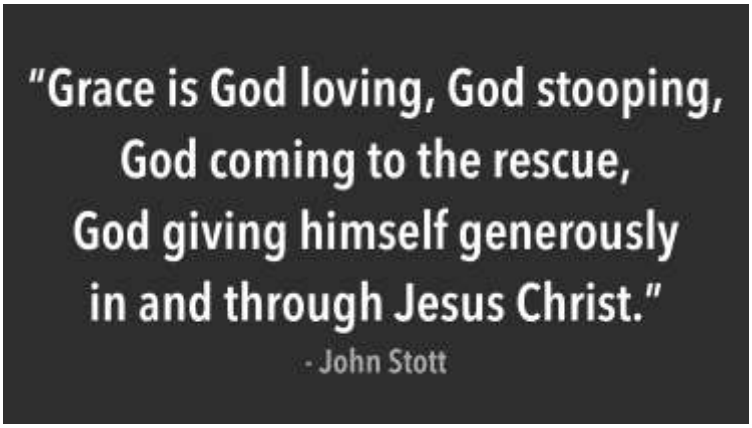
In Bible times, a righteous person is someone who lives in a "right" relationship with God and other people. The problem is none of us has lived rightly in our relationship with God. We are all in trouble with God because of our sin.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

But now, the Good News is that there's a righteousness that comes to us apart from religion—apart from the law. God's righteousness is given to all who believe—to all who place their faith in Jesus and what he's done for us.



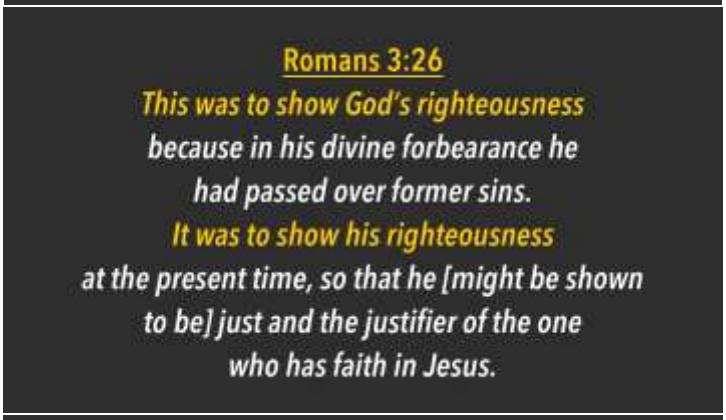
Romans 3:22-24 — Let's unpack the word "justification." [See also*: Justification]

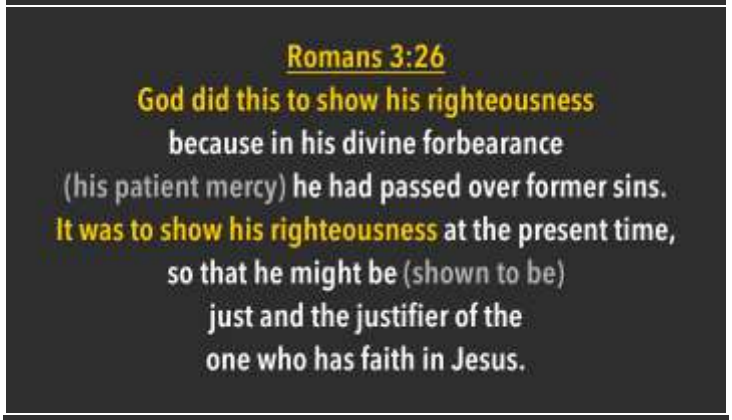
(1) The word "righteous" and "justify" are essentially the same word—both come from the Greek root word dikaios.
(2) Dikaios means "right standing" when measured against the law.

If a judge declares you guilty, you have to pay for the wrong you've done. If the judge declares you innocent, you are justified—you are in right standing with the court—no payment is required. When God declares you righteous/justified he's declaring you to have right standing with him.

But "justification" does not mean that God treats us just-as-if we'd never sinned. No, God declares us righteous while we were yet sinners when we place our faith in Jesus. Justification is not the same as forgiveness. Forgiveness is the negative—the removal of the penalty of sin. Justification is the positive—the bestowal of a right standing with God.

(3) Verse 23 says that we are "justified by his grace as a gift." Meaning, "without cause." We can do nothing to earn or deserve right standing with God.





(4) God freely gives us his righteousness because of the "redemption that is in Christ Jesus. (See also: Ephesians: Redemption)

"Redemption" is a word from the market place. To "redeem" is to purchase—to pay the price for something or someone. Jesus shed his blood to redeem us—to pay the price for the penalty of our sins—and Paul presses this idea of the necessity of Jesus shedding his blood for our sins even further…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

[See also: Atonement]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Romans 3:25-26 — "Propitiation" means "sacrifice of atonement."

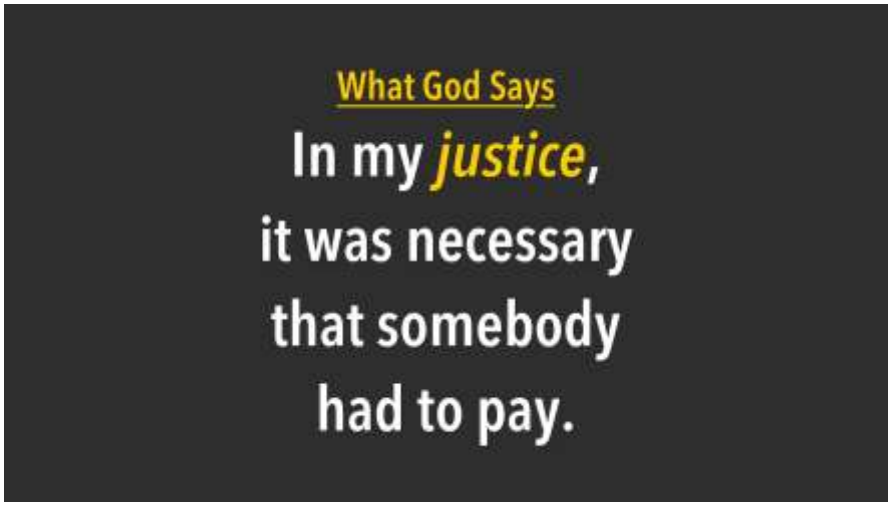
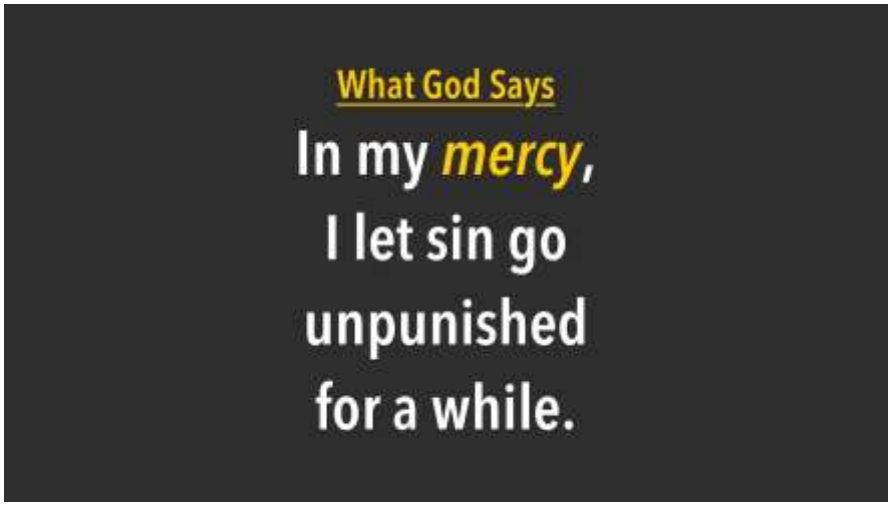
Propitiation refers to the act by which God's wrath is appeased through an acceptable sacrifice. Propitiation points back to the OT Day of Atonement when the High Priest sprinkled blood on the mercy seat on top of the Ark of the Covenant. This animal sacrifice covered/atoned sin for one year and then had to be repeated. In this way God let sins go unpunished until Christ came (Heb 10:14).

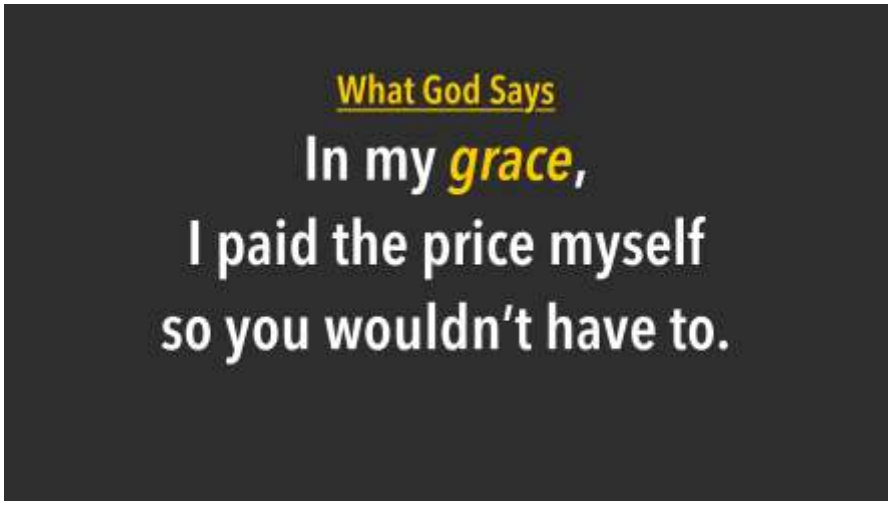


The question is—Why did Jesus have to die? Why can't God just forgive us by saying "I forgive you" and that be the end of it?

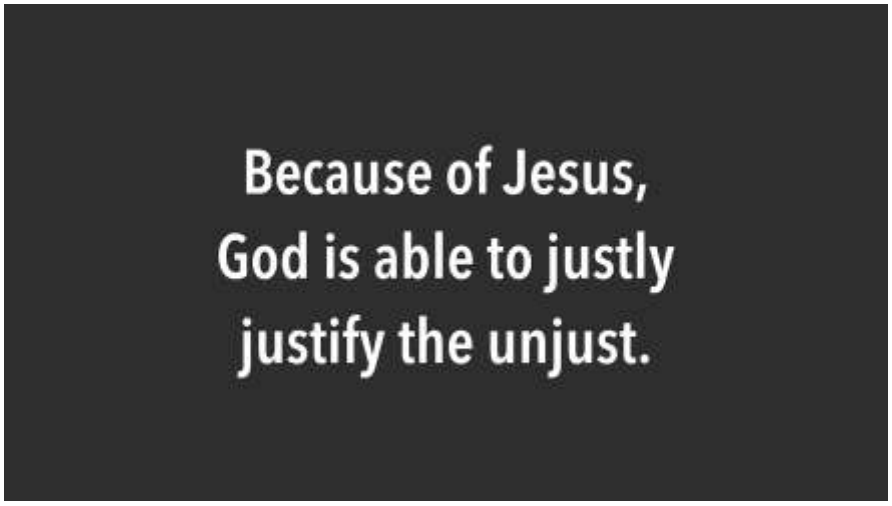
The reason is because God is just—God is a God of pure justice. For God to forgive sin apart from his justice would be for God to say that moral evil doesn't matter. For justice to be trust justice, somebody has to pay for wrongs that are done. And in the death of Jesus, God shows himself to be both "just and the justifier" of all who believe in Jesus.



What does that mean? It means that because Jesus died to pay the penalty of our sins, God's justice is satisfied and God's mercy and grace are magnified.



There is a serious problem in the church in Rome—a problem that was present in many churches in those days. God, in Christ, has broken down the dividing wall between Jews and Gentiles, but what God can tear down, people can rebuild. Each group thought they were better than/superior to the other. So right off the bat, Paul levels the playing field (1:18-3:20; 2:12; 3:9-11; 3:20). Paul wants both groups in the church to see that as God sees it, all people stand before the judgment bench of God's justice condemned and deserving of death.



Put simply, he wants both groups to see that they all need the Gospel in the same way for the same reason.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Fellowship Greenville, Jim Thompson, from: The Peace of Justification (2017)

See also*: Glossary (NDT): Justification

See also*: Glossary (NDT): Sanctification

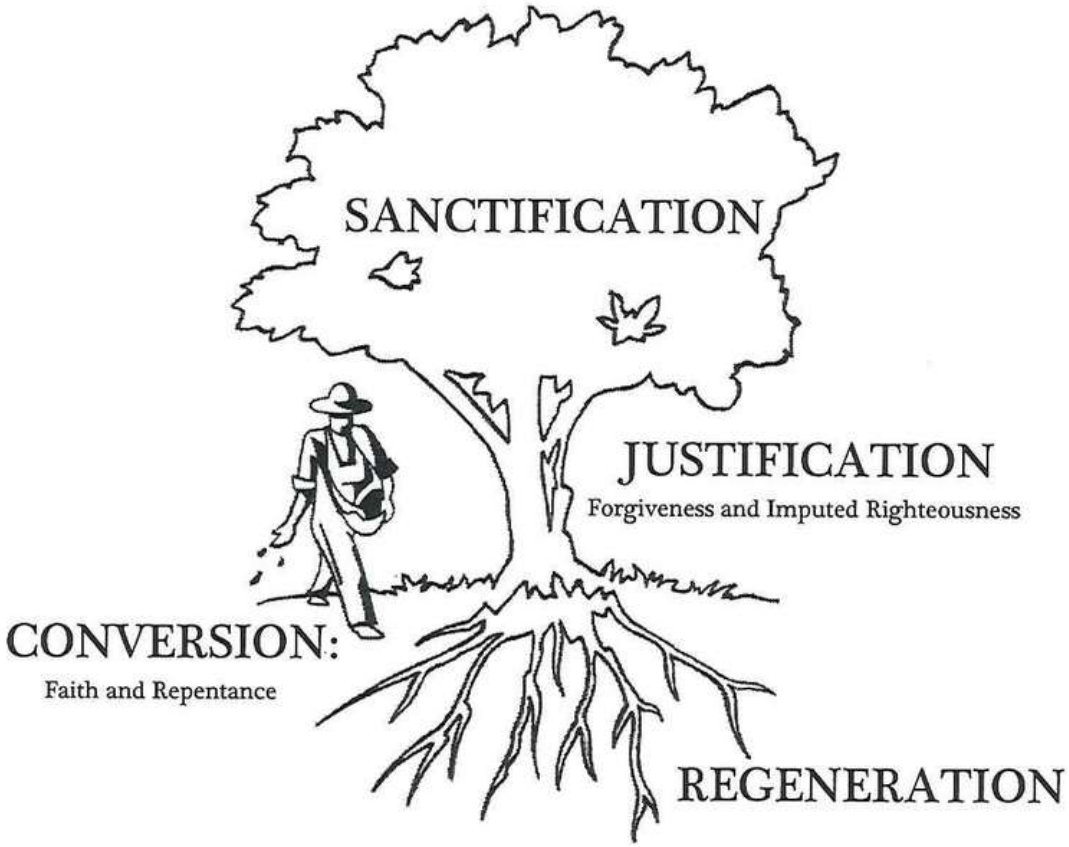
Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



Here's another perspective on some of the above terms (From a "What We Believe" page):

1. Regeneration—the work of God bringing a sinner to life. We plant the seed of the gospel and pray that God might bring life from it.

2. Conversion—repentance and faith—which is the first indication of regeneration. Each person must come to a point in which they turn from sin by trusting Jesus as their personal Savior.

3. Justification—forgiveness and receiving the imputed righteousness of Christ—which allows the sinner to be reconciled to God. A firm grasp of what God has done to bring us close to Him is essential for the Christian life.

4. Sanctification—being set apart to God which is shown by living for Him.

These concepts and their relationship to one another can be understood by a picture of a fruit tree. The farmer plants the seeds which enter the soil of a man's heart. God alone can bring life from the seed. As He does, the roots of regeneration push through the ground in conversion, forming the trunk of the tree which is justification. The fruit of the tree is sanctification which flows from justification.

By focusing on all four of these ideas and remembering their relationship to one another, we hope to effectively help every man, woman, and child trust Jesus Christ.

Source: http://www.yorkpca.org/what-we-believe/

Romans TOC
(Table of Contents)

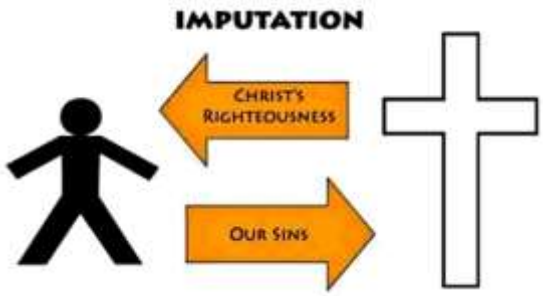
 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Imputed Righteousness

(see Righteousness)

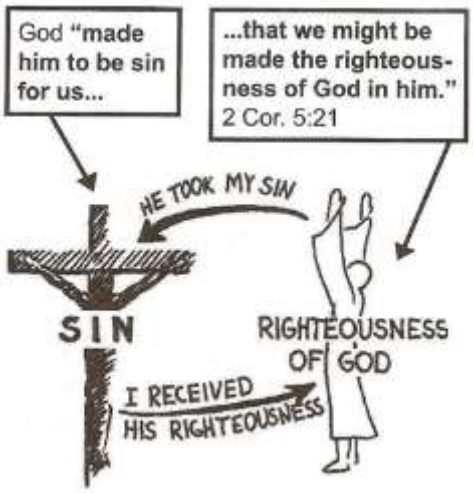
https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Imputed_righteousness

Excerpt:



Imputed righteousness is a concept in Christian theology that proposes that the "righteousness of Christ ... is imputed to [believers] — that is, treated as if it were theirs through faith." It is on the basis of this "alien" (i.e. from the outside) righteousness that God accepts humans. This acceptance is also referred to as justification. Thus this doctrine is practically synonymous with justification by faith.

The teaching of imputed righteousness is a signature doctrine of the Lutheran and Reformed traditions of Christianity. There is some dispute as to the origin of the reformation era concept of imputed righteousness. Some modern Lutherans deny that Luther taught it before other reformers such as Melancthon. However, Luther did use the term in this sense as early as 1516. In his seminal 1516 Novum Instrumentum omne (actually finished late in 1515 but printed in March 1516), Erasmus rendered the Greek logizomai (reckon) as "imputat" all eleven times it appears in Romans chapter four. The Vulgate Erasmus intended to "correct" usually rendered it "reputat" (repute). Erasmus was at this time famous and Luther almost unknown, leaving open the possibility that the concept itself did not originate with Luther, but rather, if not with Erasmus, then within the wider church reform movement…



The Imputed Righteousness of Jesus Christ

http://www.soulwinning.info/bd/imputation.htm

Excerpt:

What in the world does that big word mean . . . IMPUTETH? The word “impute” means “to pass to one’s account, to count over” It means that Jesus places His righteousness upon our record when we trust upon Him for salvation. Romans chapter four speaks concerning Abraham, “For what saith the scripture? Abraham believed God, and it was COUNTED UNTO HIM for righteousness” (Romans 4:3). What a beautiful truth! Abraham was not saved by good works; but rather, he believed God and was saved by Christ’s righteousness. Christ’s perfection was imputed (placed) on Abraham’s record in Heaven. God the Father viewed Abraham thereafter as having the righteousness of Christ. What a Savior!

…Christ's righteousness has been imputed (placed) upon your record, and your sins have been placed upon Christ at Calvary. This is Biblical salvation! Jesus paid a debt that He did not owe, because we owed a debt of sin that we could not pay. The Lamb of God was crucified for you and me, and His blood shed for our sins. It's all paid in full. Amen! Eternal life is a free gift based upon the PROMISES of God (Titus 1:2); not a reward dependent upon the performance of man (Ephesians 2:8-9). You simply receive the gift of eternal life by faith in THE GOSPEL (death, burial and resurrection) of Jesus Christ to have it (Galatians 3:26); you don't hope to merit eternal life by working for it.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Theopedia: Imputed righteousness

http://www.theopedia.com/imputed-righteousness

Infused vs Inputed Righteousness

(from article: Important Creeds and Councils of the Christian Church by C.R. Biggs) (Reformed) http://thirdmill.org/articles/cr_biggs/cha_biggs.CofC.12.pdf [PDF] (related: https://truthplace.wordpress.com/)

Excerpt:

Infused vs. Inputed Righteousness

"Some Romanists will say that they teach justification by grace- by Christ's righteousness, in fact. But the righteousness of Christ which they claim justifies is not Christ's own personal righteousness reckoned or credited or given or imputed to believers. Romanists refer to righteousness which Christ works into the life of the believer and infuses into him in his own living and behavior. It is not Christ's personal righteousness but the believer's personal righteousness, which he performs by the grace of God…Protestantism's salvation by faith versus Rome's salvation by works- -this is not a technically accurate way to state this vital difference, but it points to the truth. The Protestant trusts Christ to save him and the Catholic trusts Christ to help him save himself…If it is a salvation based on works that come from grace, it is not based on grace but on the Christian's works that come from grace… Faith is merely union with Christ who is our righteousness, our grace, our salvation…Our righteousness does not result from His righteousness, it is His righteousness."-John Gerstner, 'Justification by Faith Alone'

Romanist Instruments of Justification: Baptism and Penance The New Catechism of the Catholic Church: "Justification is conferred in Baptism, the sacrament of faith. It conforms us to the righteousness of God, who makes us inwardly just by the power of his mercy." Chap. 14, Session VI of Trent: "Those who through sin have forfeited the received grace of justification, can again be justified when, moved by God, they exert themselves to obtain through the sacrament of penance the recovery, by the merits of Christ, of the grace lost. For this manner of justification is restoration for those fallen, which the Holy Fathers have aptly called a second plank after the shipwreck of grace lost."

"It is not us that these Tridentine Fathers anathematize so much as Paul, to whom we owe the definition that the righteousness of man consists in the forgiveness of sins." -John Calvin, 'Institutes of the Christian Religion' The Sixth Session of the Council of Trent Celebrated on the thirteenth day of the month of January, 1547.

The following includes some discussion of “imputed” as critical to James White’s reformed perspective and highlights the challenges (and defensive criticisms) that N.T. Wright’s theology causes the reformed perspective:

N.T. Wright vs James White – Justification and Saint Paul (2013) (Unbelievable Radio)

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Zp8rMsOCsvY [Audio] [Recommended]

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=dQoczsyfBAo [Audio] [Recommended]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

NDT: Justification (by N.T. Wright)

Justification denotes, primarily, that action in the lawcourt whereby a judge upholds the case of one party in dispute before him (in the Hebrew lawcourt, where the image originates, all cases consist of an accuser and a defendant, there being no public prosecutor). Having heard the case, the judge finds in favour of one party, and thereby 'justifies' him: if he finds for the defendant, this action has the force of 'acquittal'. The person justified is described as 'just', 'righteous' (on the terminology, see Righteousness), not as a description of moral character but as a statement of his status before the court (which will, ideally, be matched by character, but that is not the point).

Since this lawcourt imagery is used in Scripture to elucidate God's dealings with Israel, his covenant people, 'justification' comes to denote God's action in restoring the fortunes of Israel after she has been oppressed: it is as though Israel, or a faithful individual within Israel, is the innocent defendant in a trial (see Ps 43:1; 135:14; Isa 50:8; Lk 18:7), whose cause will be upheld by the righteous covenant God. As Israel's troubles increase in the period after the exile, it becomes increasingly clear that what is needed is a final day of judgment, when God will right all wrongs, and vindicate his people, once and for all. This notion, which is closely correlated with the hope of resurrection (God's vindication of Israel after her suffering) is staunchly upheld in the NT.

At the same time, in the NT Israel's expectation is radically redefined. In his welcome for outcasts and sinners, Jesus enacts God's vindication of (apparently) the wrong group in Israel—the poor, the humble. 'This man [the tax-collector], rather than the other [the Pharisee], went home justified before God' (Lk 18:14). In continuity with his paradoxical ministry, Jesus goes to the cross apparently condemned by God. The resurrection, however, is quickly seen by the disciples as God's 'vindication' or 'justification' of Jesus (e.g. Ac 3:14-15,26; 1Ti 3:16). God has finally acted, within history, to identify his covenant people, and it turns out that Jesus, 'the king of the Jews', has alone represented that people.

Justification in Paul and James

Although, therefore, the doctrine of justification is discussed quite rarely in the NT, the fact of it is everywhere apparent. God has redefined his covenant people around Jesus. The entire Christian mission is built on this foundation. It is left to Paul, however, to articulate this conviction fully and draw out its implications: and he does so at the appropriate point, i.e. when the question of the identity of the covenant people is raised (Ro 3:21-4:25; 9:30-10:13; Gal passim; Phl 3:2-11). Five points need to be observed here.

1. The question of justification is a matter of covenant membership . The underlying question in (for instance) Ga 3 and 4 is: Who are the true children of Abraham? Paul's answer is that membership belongs to all who believe in the gospel of Jesus, whatever their racial or moral background.

2. The basis of this verdict is the representative death and resurrection of Jesus himself. In view of universal sin, God can only be in covenant with human beings if that sin is dealt with, and this has been achieved by God himself in the death of his Son (Ro 3:24-26; 5:8-9). Jesus takes on himself the curse which would have prevented God's promised blessing finding fulfilment (Ga 3:10-14). The resurrection is God's declaration that Jesus, and hence his people, are in the right before God (Ro 4:24-25).

3. The verdict issued in the present on the basis of faith (Ro 3:21-26) correctly anticipates the verdict to be issued in the final judgment on the basis of the total life (Ro 2:1-16, on which see Cranfield, Romans , vol. 1, pp. 151-153). This future 'verdict' is in fact, seen from another angle, simply resurrection itself (Phl 3:9-11). The logic of this 'eschatological' perspective is explained as follows: faith is itself the sign of God's life-giving work, by his Spirit (1Co 12:3), and what God has begun he will complete (Phl 1:6).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

4. Justification thus establishes the church as a new entity , the renewed Israel, now qualitatively distinct from Jew and Greek alike, transcending racial and social barriers (Ga 3:28). The sharp edge of this point, for Paul, was the conviction not only that pagan converts to Christianity did not need to become Jews in order fully to belong to God's people, but also that the attempt to do so was in itself a renunciation of the gospel, implying that Christ's achievement was insufficient or even unnecessary (Ga 2:21; 5:4-6). At the same time, Paul warns pagan converts against the opposite mistake, that of imagining Jews to be now cut off without hope—the mirror image of the characteristic Jewish mistake, and one which some post-Reformation theology has not always avoided (Ro 11:13-24).

5. 'Justification by faith' is thus a shorthand for 'justification by grace through faith', and in Paul's thought at least has nothing to do with a suspicious attitude towards good behaviour . On the contrary: Paul expects his converts to live in the manner appropriate for members of the covenant (Ro 6, etc.), and this is in fact necessary if faith is not to appear a sham (2Co 13:5). His polemic against 'works of the law' is not directed against those who attempted to earn covenant membership through keeping the Jewish law (such people do not seem to have existed in the 1st century) but against those who sought to demonstrate their membership in the covenant through obeying the Jewish law. Against these people Paul argues a. that the law cannot in fact be kept perfectly—it merely shows up sin; and b. that this attempt would reduce the covenant to a single race, those who possess the Jewish law, whereas God desires a world-wide family (Ro 3:27-31; Ga 3:15-22). This means that Jas 2:14-26 is not in conflict with Paul, but expresses the same truth from a different perspective. The 'faith' which is insufficient is bare Jewish monotheism (Jas 2:19); and Abraham's faith, through which God declared him within the covenant in Ge 15 (Jas 2:23), was simply 'fulfilled' in the later incident of Ge 22 (Jas 2:21).

New developments

With the disappearance of Paul's particular polemical situation, it was likely that the doctrine of justification would be reapplied in new ways, and this happened with its development as the over-all view of how one becomes a Christian—a much wider notion than the very precise NT usage. Allied to the medieval view of God's righteousness as iustitia distributiva (see Righteousness), this encouraged a belief in good works as the means by which one earns merit or favour with God. In reacting against this, Luther never totally avoided the risk of making faith a substitute for works, and hence itself a meritorious performance on man's part. His failure to note the Jewish, covenantal and eschatological content of Paul's doctrine led to exegetical difficulties (e.g. the meaning of Ro 2 and Ro 9-11) and theological problems (the danger of a dualistic rejection of the law, and the difficulty of providing a thorough foundation for ethics) which have beset subsequent Protestantism. In particular, popular Protestantism has often more or less elided the distinction between justification and regeneration, using 'justification by faith' as a slogan for a romantic or existentialist view of Christianity, rightly criticized by Roman Catholics. Roman Catholic views of justification have continued to be influenced by Augustine, who saw it as God's action in making people righteous, through pouring into their hearts love towards himself. This stress on the actual change which God effects in the sinner has continued into modern Roman Catholic theology. The result of this is significantly to broaden the reference of the word, to include far more than Paul (or the Reformers) intended.

Current debates

Current debates about 'justification' have tended to raise much wider issues than the specific concerns of Paul, and modern ecumenical agreement on the subject (cf. Küng), while welcome in its own right, does not always do justice to the nuances of biblical teaching. Thus, for instance, for Paul it is not the doctrine of justification that is 'the power of God for salvation' (Ro 1:16), but the gospel of Jesus Christ. As Hooker noted, it is perfectly possible to be saved by believing in Jesus Christ without ever having heard of justification by faith. What that doctrine provides is the assurance that, though Christian obedience is still imperfect, the believer is already a full member of God's people. It establishes, in consequence, the basis and motive for love (and true obedience) towards God. The teaching of present justification is thus a central means whereby the fruits of the Spirit—love, joy, peace and the rest—may be produced.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Bibliography

J. Buchanan, The Doctrine of Justification (repr. London, 1961); C. E. B. Cranfield, A Critical and Exegetical Commentary on the Epistle to the Romans , 2 vols. (Edinburgh, 1975, 1979); Richard Hooker, Sermon on Justification (1612), in Works , ed. I. Walton (London, 1822, etc.); H. Küng, Justification: The Doctrine of Karl Barth and a Catholic Reflection (London, 1964); A. E. McGrath, Iustitia Dei: A History of the Christian Doctrine of Justification , 2 vols. (Cambridge, 1986); G. Reid (ed.), The Great Acquittal (London, 1980); J. Reumann, ' Righteousness' in the New Testament: 'Justification' in the United States Lutheran-Roman Catholic Dialogue , with responses by J. A. Fitzmyer and J. D. Quinn (Philadelphia, 1982); H. N. Ridderbos, Paul: An Outline of His Theology (ET, Grand Rapids, MI, 1975).

N.T.W.

See also*:

Justification

Charlie Boyd Sermon Notes, "Finally, Good News!" (includes definitions)

Jim Thompson Sermon Notes, The Peace of Justification (includes definitions)

Justification: The Catholic-Protestant Argument over Justification (Geisler, et al.)

Romans TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Justification:

The Catholic-Protestant Argument over Justification

Article ID: DC170-5 | By: Norman Geisler and Ralph MacKenzie, with Elliot Miller

The following is an excerpt from article DC170-5 from the Christian Research Journal. The full article can be viewed by following the links below the excerpt.

Justification- A Summary.

The Protestant Reformers recovered the biblical view of forensic justification, that a person is legally declared righteous by God on the basis of faith alone. In so doing, their principle of "salvation by faith alone" gave a more biblical specificity to the common Augustinian view of "salvation by grace alone" held by Catholics and Protestants alike. For although Rome has always held the essential belief in salvation by grace, its view of justification – made dogma by the Council of Trent – obscures the pure grace of God, if not at times negating it in practice.

Roman Catholics and evangelicals share a common core of beliefs about salvation. Both camps are greatly indebted to the same church father (Augustine) for their views on this subject. Despite this common heritage, however, the question of how a person is justified before God has always been a fundamental dividing point between Roman Catholics and Protestants. Recently, the Catholic doctrine of justification has become a divisive issue even among evangelicals, as they seek to determine how far they should go in cooperative relations with Catholics.In this conclusion to our series on Roman Catholicism, we will examine both the commonalities and differences between Catholic and Protestant soteriology (beliefs about salvation). We will give special attention to the Protestant Reformation doctrine of forensic (legal) justification, and we will provide a Protestant critique of the official Roman Catholic response to that doctrine, as embodied in the decrees of the sixteenth-century Council of Trent.

Justification- JUSTIFICATION IN CHURCH HISTORY

The earliest serious threat to Christian faith was Gnosticism. This was not a clearly defined movement but was made up of various subgroups drawn from Hellenistic as well as Oriental sources. One of the central beliefs of Gnosticism was that salvation is the escape from the physical body (which is evil) achieved by special knowledge (gnosis; hence, Gnosticism). The understanding of the body as evil led some gnostics to stress control of the body and its desires (asceticism). Others were libertines, leaving the body to its own devices and passions. The early orthodox theologians and apologists devoted much of their effort to combating Gnosticism. In response to the libertines, the early father Tertullian (A.D. 160-225) focused on the importance of works and righteousness. In so doing he went so far as to say that "the man who performs good works can be said to make God his debtor."[2] This unfortunate affirmation set the stage for centuries to come. The "works-righteousness" concept, which seemed to be so ingenious in combating Gnosticism, was popular for the first 350 years of the church's history. However, a controversy that would produce a more precise definition of the theological elements involved was needed. This dispute came on the scene with the system of Pelagius, and the Christian thinker to confront it was Augustine of Hippo.[3]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Augustine

Augustine (A.D. 354-430) was an intellectual giant. No one has exercised a greater influence over the development of Western Christian thought than the Bishop of Hippo. In dealing with Augustine's doctrine of justification, it is important to note that his thinking on this vital issue underwent significant development. Early on Augustine stressed the role of the human will in matters of salvation, a view he would later modify in his disputations with the British monk, Pelagius. Pelagius's theological system taught the total freedom of the human will and denied the doctrine of original sin. After reflecting on Pauline insights, the later Augustine came to the following conclusions: First, the eternal decree of God's predestination determines man's election. Second, God's offer of grace (salvation) is itself a gift (John 6:44a). Third, the human will is completely unable to initiate or attain salvation. This concept squares quite well with the later Reformed doctrine of total depravity. Fourth, the justified sinner does not merely receive the status of sonship, but becomes one. Fifth, God may regenerate a person without causing that one to finally persevere.[4] This is basic Calvinism without the perseverance of all the saints. It would be incorrect to say that Augustine held to the concept of forensic justification. Nonetheless, he did maintain that salvation is by God's grace. That is, no good works precede or merit initial justification (regeneration). Augustine has been regarded as both the last of the church fathers and the first medieval theologian. He marks the end of one era and the beginning of another.

Justification- The Early Medieval Period

The medieval period (the "Middle Ages") is commonly dated from Augustine (or slightly later) to the 1500s. This period saw the balance of power in the church shift from the East (where Christianity began) to the West or Latin wing of the church.Pelagianism was officially condemned by the church at the Council of Ephesus (A.D. 431) and again at the Second Council of Orange (A.D. 529), which declared that "if anyone says that the grace of God can be bestowed by human invocation, but that the grace itself does not bring it to pass that it be invoked by us, he contradicts Isias the Prophet….[cf. Isa. 65:l]"[5] However, this heresy, along with its more moderate relative semi-Pelagianism (also condemned at the Council of Orange),[6] keeps recurring in church history. It seems that man's inclination is toward

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Pelagianism rather than Augustine's Pauline emphasis on the grace of God.Leo "the Great," who was the bishop of Rome from A.D. 440-461, is designated by many non-Catholic historians as the first "pope" in the modern sense. During his era many Roman Catholic dogmas (which may have existed in germ form earlier) solidified: the supreme authority of the Roman bishop in the church, sacramentalism, sacerdotalism (belief in a priesthood), and the change of emphasis in the Eucharistic Feast from celebration to sacrifice, to name a few. These doctrines influenced medieval soteriology in several ways. Justification and the Sacraments. During the medieval period baptism and penance were linked with justification. God's righteousness was begun (infused) in baptism and continued (perfected) through penance. Although this understanding of the nature and purpose of baptism can be found from the earliest of times, the same is not true of the concept of penance. The idea of confession to a priest for the remission of sin existed in the second century but did not become a widespread practice until the early medieval period. The view that developed was that baptism addresses the problem of original sin; confession cleanses the effect of actual sin. Some theologians of this era took pains to stress that the sacraments were the means God used to mediate grace to man. However, this theological nicety was often lost on the laity who became entangled in a works-righteousness system. The Concept of Merit. Closely related to the sacraments in general is the concept of merit. The term was first used by Tertullian and then fully developed by the Schoolmen in the medieval period. As Alister McGrath points out, "It can be shown that a distinction came to be drawn between the concepts of merit and congruity; while man cannot be said to merit justification by any of his actions, his preparation for justification could be said to make his subsequent justification 'congruous' or 'appropriate.'"[7] Unfortunately, as with the sacraments, this distinction did not always filter down to the common folk.

Anselm of Canterbury

Anselm of Canterbury (A.D. 1033-1109) was arguably the most penetrating theological thinker between Augustine and Thomas Aquinas. One of Anselm's great theological treatises was Cur Deus Homo? ("Why the God-man?").[8] In it he addressed the relationship between the Incarnation and the Atonement and redirected thinking on the nature and purpose of the Atonement that had been in place since the apostolic era. A popular doctrine in the early church was the so-called ransom theory. This understood the Atonement as a deliverance of humanity from the clutches of Satan. Anselm's contribution to the doctrine of the Atonement is called the satisfaction theory. It understands the Atonement as compensation to the Father rather than Satan. While forensic justification is not explicit in Anselm's theology, the Reformers later built upon his insights and developed the judicial aspect of salvation that they called justification.

Thomas Aquinas

One figure dominated the late medieval period: Thomas Aquinas (A.D. 1225?-1274). Aquinas considered himself Augustinian in his theology, although he preferred to express his philosophical views in Aristotelian terms rather than the Platonic language of Augustine.Like Augustine, Aquinas believed that regeneration occurs at baptism, and that not all the regenerate will persevere (i.e., not all are of the elect).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Contrary to a widespread misunderstanding among Protestants, Aquinas believed that because human beings are fallen, humankind is unable to initiate or attain salvation except by the grace of God.[9] Indeed, even faith is a gift of God.[10]Like Augustine and Anselm, Aquinas did not distinguish forensic (declarative) justification and progressive sanctification as did the Reformers. Many contemporary Roman Catholic scholars, however, believe that forensic justification is included in the thinking of these men, at least implicitly. The Augustinianism of Anselm and Aquinas dominated medieval church soteriology (existing in tension with the works orientation of the sacramental system). In light of this it is clear that some basic theological tenets of the coming Reformation are not at irreconcilable odds with the historic church, but are a continuation of it.

Martin Luther

Born in A.D. 1483 in Eisleben, Germany, of middle class parents, Martin Luther entered the Augustinian monastery at Erfurt in 1505. The themes of salvation and damnation – which were central to the culture of the day – concerned him greatly. Luther became aware of the presence of sin in his life and the ineffectiveness of penance and the other sacraments provided by the church to bring relief to this situation. In 1511 Luther was transferred from Erfurt to Wittenberg. He lived in the Augustinian cloister and was fortunate to have as his spiritual confessor a godly man – who was also the vicar-general of the monastery – Johannes von Staupitz (1469-1524). Staupitz, aware of the intense spiritual struggles that enveloped his young charge, directed Luther to study Scripture. Luther was graduated Doctor of Theology on October 19, 1512 and commenced teaching theology and biblical studies at Wittenberg on August 16, 1513. It was in the context of his assignment at the university that Luther developed his initial ideas concerning justification by faith.The decisive role in the formulation of Luther's theology was played by the apostle Paul and Augustinianism. It was shortly after his exegesis of Romans 1:16-17 that Luther concluded that justification is a gift of God, appropriated by faith: "Night and day I pondered until I saw the connection between the justice of God and the statement that 'the just shall live by faith.' Then I grasped that the justice of God is that righteousness by which through grace and sheer mercy God justifies us through faith. Thereupon I felt myself to be reborn and to have gone through open doors into paradise."[11]The beginning of Martin Luther's break with Rome has often been identified with his posting of the Ninety-five Theses on the church door at Wittenberg on the eve of All Saints, October 31, 1517. These theses dealt with the penitential system and papal authority, but primarily with the sale of indulgences. With the public display of the Ninety-five Theses the die was cast, the Reformation began, and Christendom changed forever.Indicating how deeply his evangelical (Augustinian) principles influenced his theses, Luther was later to write: "And this is the confidence that Christians have and our real joy of conscience, that by faith our sins become no longer ours but Christ's upon whom God placed the sins of all of us. He took upon himself our sins….All the righteousness of Christ becomes ours….He spreads his cloak and covers us…."[12]Before Martin Luther initiated the Protestant Reformation, extrinsic justification, in which a sinner is declared righteous legally, was, at best, a subterranean stream in Christian soteriology. With Luther the situation changed dramatically. However, as Peter Toon notes,

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

"Luther does not employ forensic terms to explain this imputation or alien righteousness. This development will come later, from others."[13] Philipp Melanchthon, Luther's great systematic theologian, did use legal terminology to describe justification.

John Calvin

Without a doubt, the most important Reformed theology to come out of the Protestant Reformation was that of John Calvin. He was born in Noyon, France on July 10, 1509. Young Calvin studied in Paris, where he was familiar with the writings and theology of Luther. He drew his deepest inspiration, however, from Augustine. Calvin believed that he was doing nothing more than reproducing "that holy man's own plain and uncompromising teachings."[14]Calvin's theological system begins, as did Augustine's and Aquinas's before him, with man's present condition – one of complete moral corruption. For "even though we grant that God's image was not totally annihilated and destroyed in man, yet was it so corrupted that whatever remains is a horrible deformity."[15]Calvin held that "predestination we call the eternal decree of God, which he has determined in himself, what he would have to become of every individual of mankind."[16] Furthermore, "while the elect receive the grace of adoption by faith, their election does not depend on faith, but is prior in time and order."[17]For Calvin, justification "consists in remission of sins and the imputation of Christ's righteousness."[18] Departing at this point from the medieval tradition, Calvin does not see justification as involving an infusion of grace: "Man is not made righteous in justification, but is accepted as righteous, not on account of his own righteousness, but on account of the righteousness of Christ located outside of man."[19]What place, then, does good works have in the life of the believer? "To the charge that justification thus understood obviates the need for good works, Calvin's firm reply is, like Luther's, that although in no respect can good works become the ground of our holiness, a living faith is never devoid of such works. Thus justification necessarily has its consequence in sanctification."[20]

Justification- Common Soteriological Roots

A soteriological survey of both the leading Roman Catholic theologians and Protestant Reformers reveals a number of commonalities. First, both believe salvation is effected through historic, divine intervention. Against Gnosticism, Catholics and Protestants jointly affirm that man is not saved by wisdom, but by God's action in history in the person of Jesus Christ.Second, both evangelicals and Catholics believe salvation is moral and spiritual. Salvation is related to a deliverance from sin and its consequences. Third, salvation is eschatological for both Catholics and evangelicals. The future perspective is crucial. All that is now known about salvation is preliminary and a foretaste of the fullness, which awaits the completing of the kingdom at the Parousia (physical "presence" or second coming) of the Lord.Fourth, the grace of God is absolutely necessary for salvation. And, initial justification is based on grace alone, apart from all works. Thus, Colin Brown can speak of "the Augustinian orthodoxy of Geneva [Calvin's home base] and Rome."[21] For both groups, salvation comes as a gift of God to undeserving humanity.It is against the backdrop of this common heritage that the important soteriological differences between Catholics and evangelicals must be viewed. As Harold O. J. Brown put it, “We must not oversimplify and create an artificial and forced consensus between great Christians of the past and present. Yet if one thing stands out when one studies the writings and lives of such men, it is that they knew and served the same Lord, and that they shared one faith and one hope.”[22]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Justification- THE CATHOLIC RESPONSE TO THE REFORMATION

The Council of Trent, which began its deliberations on June 22, 1546, was the Catholic response to the Reformers. A proper understanding of the Catholic view of justification is not possible apart from an understanding of the decrees of Trent.The Council considered the following questions concerning justification: (1) Is justification only extrinsic (judicial) in nature or is there also an intrinsic (sanctifying) work involved? (2) What is the relationship between faith and good works? (3) Does the human will have an active roll in justification? (4) How are justification and sacraments such as the Eucharist, baptism, and penance related? (5) Can the believer know with certainty that he or she is justified? (6) Can humans incline themselves toward justification, and if so, is this inclination to be understood as meritorious?[23]On January 9, 1547, the Council participants agreed on a final formula for justification: First, although several Council members recognized an extrinsic element in justification (thereby approaching the Reformers on this point), the consensus view was that “the opinion that a sinner may be justified solely as a matter of reputation or imputation…is rejected.” And so, “justification is thus defined in terms of a man becoming, and not merely being reputed as, righteous…” (emphases added).[24]Second, in that Trent understands justification in two senses (the second corresponding to the Reformed doctrine of sanctification), good works are required in the second sense as a condition for ultimate justification. Therefore, it is possible and necessary (in this second sense) to keep the law of God.Third, Trent, taking into account original sin, states that sin has affected the human race. Therefore man cannot effect his own salvation, Free will, while not destroyed, is weakened by the Fall. For “if anyone shall say that man’s free will moved and aroused by God does not cooperate by assenting to God who looses and calls…let him be anathema.”[25] (It is important to note that “anathema” is a decree of excommunication, not automatic damnation.) So, as one Catholic author put it, “The sinner indeed cooperates with this grace, at least in the sense of not sinfully rejecting it.”[26] Of course, most Protestants agree with this. Many Protestants, Calvinists in particular, add quickly (as would Catholic Thomists) that it is God by His grace who brings about this cooperation. But He does this without destroying man’s free choice.Fourth, the subject of the sacraments was addressed at Session VII (March 3, 1547). In order to understand these pronouncements, one must remember that Trent understood justification in two ways – the “first” and “second” phases which Catholic scholars refer to as initial and progressive justification respectively. Baptism is operative in the “first” or “initial” justification, since grace to overcome original sin is “mediated” to us through baptism. Both the Eucharist and penance pertain to the “second” or “progressive” sense of justification, and such justification (i.e., righteousness) is said to be “increased” by participation in these sacraments. There is finally a third or “ultimate” stage of justification by which, providing one had not committed a mortal sin, he or she is allowed into heaven.Fifth, due to the Reformers’ stress on the assurance of salvation, Trent was forced to deal with the subject. McGrath claims that they issued "an explicit condemnation of the Lutheran doctrine of assurance as an assertion contrary to proper Christian humility."[27] However, this explicit condemnation deals with "infallible certainty," which many Catholic scholars point out is not necessary, if indeed it is possible. In fact, "in many ways Roman [Catholic] dogmatics have pointed out that Rome's rejection of personal assurance of salvation does not mean the proclamation of a religion of uninterrupted anxiety."[28] For the Roman Catholic "there is an intermediate position between the assurance of faith and doubt. This position is that of moral certainty which excludes any anxiety and despair."[29] Thus, Christians can be said to have relative, not absolute (i.e., infallible), certainty of salvation.Sixth, Trent states that our initial justification must be seen as a "gift." Thus, it comes as a surprise to many Protestants that Roman Catholics believe that "if anyone shall say that man can be justified before God by his own works which are done…without divine grace through Christ Jesus: let him be anathema."[30] Further, "none of those things which precede justification, whether faith or works, merits the grace of justification. For if it is by grace, it is no more by works; otherwise, as the apostle says, grace is no more grace."[31]In this connection it is only fair to point out that when Catholic scholars cite James 2:24 – that "we are justified by works" – they do not mean this initial justification at baptism which comes only by grace. Rather, they are referring to progressive justification (growth in righteousness) which Protestants call sanctification. On the other hand, Trent does assert that works are necessary for salvation in the progressive and eventual senses. For Trent made it dogma that "by his good works the justified man really acquires a claim to supernatural reward from God."[32] And it is precisely here that Catholics and evangelicals disagree.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Justification- A PROTESTANT CRITIQUE OF TRENT

With all due recognition of the common Augustinian core of salvation by grace, there are some important differences between the Roman Catholic and evangelical Protestant views of justification. Unfortunately, the well-intentioned but unsuccessful recent statement, "Evangelicals and Catholics Together," lacked precision in these very areas, speaking of a common belief that "we are justified by grace through faith."[33] What it failed to note, however, is what the Reformation was fought over, namely, that Scripture teaches, and Protestants affirm, that we are saved by grace through faith alone (sola fide). Since this was the heart cry of the Reformation, many evangelicals refuse to sign the statement, believing it would betray the Reformation.

Justification- The Biblical Basis for Forensic Justification

In order to appreciate the significant contribution of the Reformers it is necessary to examine the biblical background of the term justification. As we will see, there are solid biblical grounds for the Protestant doctrine of forensic justification.The background for the doctrine of forensic justification (as with other New Testament doctrines as well) is found in the Old Testament. Concerning the Hebrew word hitsdiq, usually rendered "justify," more often than not it is "used in a forensic or legal sense, as meaning, not 'to make just or righteous,' but 'to declare judicially that one is in harmony with the law.'"[34] George Eldon Ladd notes that "he is righteous who is judged to be in the right (Ex. 23:7; Deut. 25:1); i.e., who in judgment through acquittal thus stands in a right relationship with God."[35]Turning to the New Testament, the Greek verb translated "to justify" is dikaioó. This word is used by Paul in a forensic or legal sense; the sinner is declared to be righteous (cf. Rom. 3-4). As Anthony Hoekema observes, "The opposite of condemnation, however, is not 'making righteous' but 'declaring righteous.'" Therefore, by dikaioó, Paul means the "legal imputation of the righteousness of Christ to the believing sinner."[36]When a person is justified, God pronounces that one acquitted – in advance of the final judgment. Therefore, "the resulting righteousness is not ethical perfection; it is 'sinlessness' in the sense that God no longer counts a man's sin against him (II Cor. 5:19)."[37] Thus we find in the New Testament that "justification is the declarative act of God by which, on the basis of the sufficiency of Christ's atoning death, he pronounces believers to have fulfilled all of the requirements of the law which pertain to them" (emphasis in original).[38]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Justification- The Incompatibility of Grace and Merit

Much criticism of the Catholic view of justification revolves around the concept of merit that was elevated by Trent to the status of infallible dogma. While Catholics wish to remind us that the whole doctrine of merit should be viewed in the context of grace,[39] they overlook the fact that Scripture teaches that grace and meritorious works are mutually exclusive (e.g., Rom. 11:6).The New Testament clearly speaks against obtaining salvation (whether justification or sanctification) as a "reward" (i.e., wage) for work done. For the Scriptures insist that gifts cannot be worked for; only wages can (Rom. 4:4-5). Grace means unmerited favor, and reward based on works is merited. Hence, grace and works are no more coherent than is an unmerited merit!

Justification- Eternal Life Is a Gift That Cannot Be Merited

The Council of Trent declared clearly that to "those who work well 'unto the end' [Matt. 10:22], and who trust in God, life eternal is to be proposed, both as a grace mercifully promised to the sons of God through Christ Jesus, 'and as a recompense' which is…to be faithfully given to their good works and merit."[40] By contrast, the Bible declares clearly and emphatically that "the wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life in Christ Jesus our Lord" (Rom. 6:23).Further, in direct opposition to the Catholic position, the Bible guarantees eternal life is a present possession of those who believe. Jesus said: "Amen, amen, I say to you, whoever hears my words and believes in the one who sent me has [present tense] eternal life and will not come into condemnation, but is [right now] passed from death to life." This same truth is repeated over and over in Scripture (e.g., John 3:36; 1 John 5:13). But according to the Roman Catholic view, one must await a final justification at death to know whether he or she has eternal life and will not see God's condemnation.In the entire Gospel of John only one condition is laid down for obtaining eternal life – belief (John 3:16, 36; 5:24; 20:31, etc.). If salvation were not by faith alone, then the whole message of John would be deceptive, stating that there is only one condition for salvation when there are two: faith plus works. Indeed, John states explicitly that the only "work" necessary for salvation is to believe (John 6:29). There is simply nothing else to do for our salvation. Jesus did it all (John 19:31).It is true that all who are saved by God's grace through faith (Eph. 2:8-9) will be rewarded for their works for Christ (1 Cor. 3:11ff.; 2 Cor. 5:10). These rewards for service, however, have nothing to do with whether we will be in heaven, but only have to do with what status we will have there. As Jesus said, some of the saved will reign over ten cities and others over five (Luke 19:17, 19). But all believers will be in His kingdom.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Justification- Christians Work from Salvation, Not for It

Put in traditional terms, Catholicism fails to recognize the important difference between working for salvation and working from salvation. We do not work in order to receive salvation; rather, we work because we have already received it. God works salvation in us by justification and we work it out in sanctification (Phil. 2:12-13). But neither justification nor sanctification can be merited by works; they are given by grace.Despite the fact that the Catholic understanding of salvation does not logically eliminate forensic justification, nevertheless, it does obscure it. For when one fails to make a clear distinction between forensic justification and practical sanctification, then the good works Catholics believe are needed for sanctification tend to obscure the fact that works are not needed for justification.Of course, good works are necessary in the Christian life. But Protestants have solved the problem in a much more biblical and balanced way. They insist that while we are saved by faith alone, nevertheless, the faith that saves us is not alone. It inevitably produces good works. That is, we are saved by faith but for works. Works are not a condition of justification but they are a consequence of it. Thus, someone who is truly saved will manifest good works. If there are no good works present, then there is no reason to believe that true saving faith is present either.As James said, "Faith without works is dead." Such faith cannot save. "Can [mere intellectual] faith save him?" Only the kind of faith that produces good works can save. So, we are not saved (i.e., do not receive eternal life) by works, but we are saved by the kind of faith that produces good works.

Justification- Preserving the Pure Doctrine of Grace

We conclude by noting that Protestants, following the clear biblical distinction between forensic justification and practical sanctification, make the way of salvation much clearer and preserve the doctrine of grace (which Catholics also claim) in a much purer form. For once believers know they have right standing before God (=are justified) by faith alone apart from works, then their minds are not cluttered with works they must perform in order to know all their sins are forgiven (past, present, and future) and they are on their way to heaven.While Catholicism acknowledges that there is an initial act of justification (which some even admit includes a forensic act), nevertheless, it also maintains that one must work to faithfully avoid mortal sin in order to achieve final justification before God. Thus, works are ultimately necessary for salvation. But this is contrary to the biblical teaching that salvation is by grace alone through faith alone, based on Christ alone. And, despite Catholic protest to the contrary, this is not conducive to the assurance of salvation by which we "know…[we] have eternal life" (1 John 5:13), and by which we are connected to God by His inseparable love (Rom. 8:1, 36-39).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Notes

[1]This material is taken from a forthcoming book by Norman L. Geisler and Ralph E. MacKenzie, Roman Catholics and Evangelicals: Agreements and Differences (Baker, 1995), as extensively edited by Elliot Miller.[2]Tertullian, De paenitentia 2; 1.323.44-6.[3]An excellent historical analysis of this period can be found in Alister E. McGrath, Iustitia Dei: A History of the Christian Doctrine of Justification, vol. l (Cambridge: Cambridge Press, 1986), 1-23. [4]Augustine, City of God 10.8.[5]Henry Denzinger, The Sources of Catholic Dogma, trans. Roy J. Deferrari from the 30th edition of Henry Denzinger's Enchiridion Symbolorum (St. Louis: B. Herder Book Co., 1957), "Grace" Can. 3.176., p. 76.[6]Semi-Pelagianism held that man cooperated with God by ordinarily taking the first steps toward salvation. [7]McGrath, 110. [8]Or "Why God Became Man?" The Library of Christian Classics, vol. X, ed. and trans. Eugene R. Fairweather (Philadelphia: Westminster Press, 1951).[9]See, e.g., Thomas Aquinas, Summa Theologiae, 2a2ae. 2, 4, in The Basic Writings of Thomas Aquinas, ed. Anton C. Pegis (New York: Random House, 1944), 1079.[10]Aquinas, 2a2ae. 2, 6, ad 1.[11]Cited by R. H. Bainton, Here I Stand: A Life of Martin Luther (Nashville: Abington, 1978), 65. [12]Martin Luther, Explanations of the Ninety-five Theses, published August 1518.[13]Peter Toon, Justification and Sanctification (Westchester, IL: Crossway Books, 1983), 58. [14]Bernard M. G. Reardon, Religious Thought in the Reformation (London: Longman, 1981), 190.[15]John Calvin, Institutes, III, I xv, 4.[16]Ibid., 2, i.[17]J. K. S. Reid, trans., Calvin: Theological Treatises, vol. 22, The Library of Christian Classics (Philadelphia: Westminster Press, 1954), article 5.[18]Calvin, 2I, xi, 2.[19]Alister McGrath, Iustitia Dei: A History of the Christian Doctrine of Justification, vol. 2 (Cambridge: Cambridge Press, 1986), 36.[20]Reardon, 196.[21]Colin Brown, Christianity and Western Thought, vol. 1 (Downers Grove, IL: InterVarsity Press, 1990), 165.[22]Harold O. J. Brown, The Protest of a Troubled Protestant (New Rochelle: Arlington House, 1969), 107.[23]McGrath, 69.[24]Ibid., 72. The words "solely" and "merely" in these quotes indicate that Trent did not reject forensic justification as such. [25]Denzinger, 814, 258. [26]H. George Anderson, Justification by Faith (Minneapolis: Augsburg Press, 1985), 34.[27]McGrath, vol. 2, 78.[28]Gerrit C. Berkouwer, The Conflict with Rome (Philadelphia: The Presbyterian and Reformed Publishing Co., 1958), 114.[29]Bernhard Bartmann, Lehrbuch der Dogmatik, II, 109. Quoted in Ibid., 115.[30]"Trent," see Denzinger, 811, p. 258. [31]Ibid., ch. 8, 801, 252.[32]Ludwig Ott, Fundamentals of Catholic Dogma (Rockford, IL: Tan Books and Publishers, 1960), 264.[33]"Evangelicals and Catholics Together: The Christian Mission in the Third Millennium," final draft (29 March 1994). [34]Anthony A. Hoekema, Saved by Grace (Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1989), 154.[35]George Eldon Ladd, A Theology of the New Testament (Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1974), 440.[36]Hoekema, 154.[37]Ladd, 446. [38]Millard J. Erickson, Christian Theology (Grand Rapids: Baker Book House, 1986), 956. [39]See Avery Dulles, S. J., in Anderson, 274.[40]Denzinger, 809, p. 257.

[Source: http://www.equip.org/article/justification-the-catholic-protestant-argument-over-justification/]

PDF: http://www.equip.org/PDF/DC170-5.pdf

Romans TOC
(Table of Contents)

When Protestants Err on the Side of Rome

http://www.trinityfoundation.org/journal.php?id=335 (Downloadable as a PDF)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

NDT: Righteousness (by N. T. Wright)

The basic meaning of ‘righteousness' and its cognates in the Bible derives from the Hebrew ṣeḏeq , which was usually translated in the LXX as dikaiosynē . It thus denotes not so much the abstract idea of justice or virtue, as right standing and consequent right behaviour, within a community. English translates this semantic field with two different roots: ‘right', ‘righteous', and ‘righteousness' and ‘just', ‘justice', ‘justify' and ‘justification'. In Heb. and Gk., however, these ideas all belong together linguistically and theologically.

In the OT (upon which the NT idea is based) two fields of thought give specific shape to the idea:

1. The lawcourt setting gives ‘righteousness' the idea of the standing of a person in relation to the court's decision. In the Hebrew court there were no public prosecutors: all cases had to be brought by a plaintiff against a defendant. Righteousness is the status which results, for either party, if the court finds in his favour. Since the standard of judgment is the covenant law of God, ‘righteousness' can acquire the sense of ‘behaviour in conformity with the covenant requirements', bringing about the possibility that right covenant standing can be observed in ordinary behaviour. In addition, the judge, or king, must conform to a different sense of righteousness: he must try cases fairly, i.e. he must be true to the law and/or the covenant, must condemn evil, show no partiality, and uphold the cause of the defenceless. This complex meaning explains the occasional instances when the Septuagint uses dikaiosynē to translate not ṣeḏeq and its cognates but other roots such as ḥeseḏ (grace, covenant mercy), mišpāṭ (judgment, justice), etc.

2. The covenantal setting merges with that of the lawcourt: this is due partly to the fact that the law (Torah) is the covenant charter. Though sometimes God himself is seen as Israel's adversary at law, the more frequently encountered picture is of God as judge or king, with Israel as either plaintiff (pleading her cause against her enemies) or defendant (on trial for failure to keep the covenant). God's righteousness is then invoked as the reason why he can be expected to deliver his people: he is committed by covenant to do so. When this is apparently called into question (in the exile, and later in the Maccabean revolt and the fall of Jerusalem in AD 70), the writers of these periods reply that God is righteous in judging his sinful people; that he is righteous in waiting before judging their enemies, granting time for repentance; and that he will show himself righteous in restoring the fortunes of his people, in renewing the covenant (Da 9; Ezr 9; etc.). The book of Job can be seen as a long lawcourt scene in which Job pleads his righteousness, imagining that God is his adversary, only to discover that God cannot be brought into court: the first two chapters reveal Satan (see Devil and Demons) as the real prosecutor, with Job's comforters as his unwitting assistants.

These two settings (lawcourt and covenant) combine to produce the developed covenantal theology which underlay Judaism at the time of Jesus. To have ‘righteousness' meant to belong to the covenant, the boundary marker of which was the Torah, and the hope of which was that God, in accordance with his own righteousness, would act in history to ‘vindicate', to ‘justify', his people (i.e. to show that they really were his people) by saving them from their enemies. These meanings are reflected particularly in Matthew, where ‘righteousness' is shorthand both for the saving plan of God (Mt 3:15) and for the covenantal obligations of his people (5:20; 6:1), and Luke, which emphasizes the ‘righteous' standing of many of the key actors in the drama (Lk 1:6; 2:25; 23:50; Ac 10:22). Jesus himself is sometimes called ‘the righteous one', in virtue of his being the one designated by God as his true covenant partner (e.g. Ac 3:14; 7:52; 22:14; Jas 5:6). The Jewish belief that God would judge the world justly is echoed repeatedly in the NT, e.g. 2Th 1:5-6; Ro 2:1-16; Heb 12:23. But the fullest development comes in Paul, particularly with his exposition in Romans of the righteousness of God.

Paul saw that the Jewish problem of God's righteousness (if the creator of the world is Israel's covenant God, why is Israel still oppressed?) had been answered in a new and striking way in the death and resurrection of Jesus Christ. The answer had, in fact, forced a restatement of the question, demonstrating as it did the universal sinfulness of Jews as well as pagans. The gospel, Paul declares, proves that God is in the right despite appearances: he has kept covenant with Abraham, has dealt properly with sin, has acted and will act without partiality, and upholds all those who cast themselves, helpless, on his mercy (Ro 1:16-17; 2:1-16; 3:21-4:25). God has, in other words, shown ‘righteousness' in the sense appropriate for the judge and the Lord of the covenant. He is thus able to anticipate the verdict of the last day (Ro 2:1-16) and to declare in the present (Ro 3:21-26) that all who believe the gospel are already within the covenant community (see Justification).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The view that ‘the righteousness of God' refers to a righteousness which God gives to, bestows upon, or recognizes in human beings came initially from Augustine, but gained its force (in terms of the development of modern theology) from Luther's reaction against a iustitia distributiva . The term iustitia , as found in the Latin Vulgate, had indeed pulled the understanding of texts such as Ro 1:17 in the (false) direction of a merely ‘distributive' justice, in which God simply rewards virtue and punishes vice. Luther's alternative, however fruitful in opening new worlds of theology to him, was in some ways equally misleading, for it directed attention away from the biblical notion of God's covenant faithfulness and instead placed greater emphasis upon the status of the human being. In the period after Luther, Protestant theology largely returned to the notion of the distributive justice of God: because God is righteous, he must in fact reward virtue and punish sin, and this satisfaction of divine justice took place in Christ.

According to the NT, the people of God do indeed have ‘righteousness'. This is not, strictly speaking, God's own righteousness (though cf. 2Co 5:21), but that which is proper to the person in whose favour the court has found; within the covenant context, it is the right standing of a member of the people of God. ‘Righteousness' thus comes to mean, more or less, ‘covenant membership', with all the overtones of appropriate behaviour (e.g. Phl 1:11). The terminology plays a central role in Paul's debate with those who sought to keep the covenant community within the bounds of physical Judaism: they, Paul says, are ignorant of God's righteousness (i.e. of what God is righteously accomplishing, of how he is fulfilling his covenant) and are seeking to establish a righteousness of their own (i.e. a covenant membership for Jews alone), whereas in God's plan Christ offers covenant membership to all who believe the gospel (Ro 10:3-4). (See further Paul .)

The central biblical discussions of righteousness thus principally concern membership in the covenant and the behaviour appropriate to that membership. Since, however, these passages depend on a theology in which God is creator and judge of all the earth, and in which God's people are to reflect God's own character, it is not illegitimate to extrapolate from them to the ‘justice' which God desires, and designs, for his world. The church is to be not only an example of God's intended new humanity, but the means by which the eventual plan, including the establishment of world-wide justice, is to be put into effect. Lack of emphasis here in older theological writing, due sometimes to individualism and sometimes to a dualistic split between church and world, has led to a reaction (e.g. in some liberation theology) in which ‘justice' as an abstract virtue has been elevated in an unbiblical manner (e.g. at the expense of mercy). This should not prevent a balanced orthodox view of world-wide justice from regaining, and retaining, its place in the church's teaching and practice.

Bibliography

On ‘justice': P. Marshall, Thine is the Kingdom: A Biblical Perspective on Government and Politics Today (Basingstoke, 1984); R. J. Mouw, Politics and the Biblical Drama (Grand Rapids, MI, 1983); N. Wolterstorff, Until Justice and Peace Embrace (Grand Rapids, MI, 1984); J. H. Yoder, The Politics of Jesus (Grand Rapids, MI, 1972). On ‘righteousness' see under Justification.

N.T.W.

See also*: Charlie Boyd Sermon Notes, “Finally, Good News!” (includes definitions)

Romans TOC
(Table of Contents)

[Go to Index] Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only [Go to Top - TOC]

NDT: Sanctification

In biblical religion, the concept of the holiness of God is of paramount importance. It signifies his unblemished righteousness as well as his singular and radiant majesty. The Holy One cannot have communion with the unholy. Sinful humans can only approach him if they are sanctified, i.e. made to correspond to his holiness (Lev 19:2). In the OT, the term sanctification is primarily a technical term of cult ritual. It connotes both cleansing (e.g. the washing of garments in preparation for an encounter with God's presence, Ex 19:10,14), and consecration , dedication to the service of God (of priests, the vestments, cult implements, Ex 19:22; warriors in preparation for holy war, Isa 13:3; first-born, Dt 15:19; and gifts for the temple, 2Sa 8:11).

However, in the OT the meaning of sanctification and holiness also extends beyond the ritual to the moral sphere. Some describe this as the struggle of 'prophetic vs. cultic religion' (referring, e.g. , to Joe 2:13: 'Rend your hearts and not your garments') or as the supersession of animal sacrifice by the 'sacrifice' of prayer, thanksgiving and a contrite heart (Ps 50:13ff.; 51:16ff.). The addition of the figurative (moral) understanding of sanctification can also be observed in the 'Holiness Code' (Lev 19ff.) where (self-)sanctification consists of observation of God's laws both ceremonial and moral (cf. Lev 11:44 with 20:7-8). It is understood (negatively) as abstention from defilement as well as (positively) implementation of God's commandments. Lev 20:7 moreover shows human self-sanctification and God's sanctification of man as its cause, side by side, both the imperative and the indicative, in dialectical harmony. Humans must not only sanctify themselves, they can also 'sanctify God' (Nu 20:12; Eze 20:41) or his institution (e.g. the sabbath, Ex 20:11) through obedience. In sum, sanctification is the act or process by which people or things are cleansed and dedicated to God, ritually and morally.

Although there are occasional echoes of the cultic sense of sanctification (Mt 23:19) or consecration (1Co 7:14; 1Ti 4:5), the NT concepts of holiness and sanctification emphasize their moral meaning. This is programmatic in Jesus' confrontation with the Pharisees and scribes over their rules of purification (Mt 15:19-20). Correspondingly, the apostles hold that people must be sanctified by a cleansing of the heart (Ac 15:9) and conscience (Heb 9:14) as well as actively living out sanctification in moral conduct (1Pe 1:15, cf. 1Th 4:1ff.). The figurative (moral) understanding applies also to the NT continuation of the two elements of sanctification in the OT: cleansing (hagiazein with katharizein , Ep 5:26; Heb 9:13-14) and dedication to God (hagiasmos with parhistēmi , Ro 6:19). Paul appropriates the technical language of cult and ritual for the spiritual commitment of man to God and his service (Ro 15:16; Col 1:28): to him, sanctification is the moral equivalent to sacrifice (Ro 12:1-2).

Believers have been chosen and called for sanctification. It is God's will for them (1Th 4:3), for without it, no-one will see the Lord (Heb 12:14). Thus, for the rest of their lives, they must no longer live by human passions, but by the will of God (1Pe 4:2). Sanctification pertains to soul and body, and it is expressed in 'doing good' (1Pe 2:15,20; 3:6,17; 3Jn 11), and in 'good works' (2Ti 2:21; 1Pe 2:12; and see Mt 25:31-46) which, indeed, are the goal of God's salvation for them (Ep 2:10; Tit 2:14; 3:1).

In consonance with the moral understanding of the concept, sanctification of believers in the NT is seen primarily as the work of God (cf. Jn 10:36), of Christ (Jn 17:19; 1Co 1:30; Ep 5:26; Heb 2:11; 10:10,14; 13:2) and especially of the Holy Spirit (Ro 15:16; 2Th 2:13; 1Pe 1:2 and cf. 1Co 6:11). It is understood first as a saving event in the past in which believers were sanctified 'once and for all' (Heb 10:29, looking to the cross of Christ; and 1Co 6:11, looking to their baptism). Thus they can now regularly be addressed as hēgiasmenoi , the sanctified (1Co 1:2; Ac 20:32; 26:18; Ro 15:16; referring to an individual in Heb 10:29; 2Ti 2:21), or as 'saints' (hagioi). Sanctification is, however, also seen as an ongoing and future work of God (1Th 5:23; Rev 22:11, cf. Jn 15:2). Beyond that, sanctification is even understood as a realm of human action. Therefore, hagiasmos (the Gk. term meaning holiness just as much as sanctification) can denote a state in which believers find themselves (2Th 2:13; 1Pe 1:2; 1Th 4:7, cf. Ep 1:4) and in which they must remain (1Ti 2:15; 1Th 4:7) by living in correspondence to their given holiness (cf. Ep 5:3), as well as to a state to which they must strive (Ro 6:19,22), which they must 'pursue' (Heb 12:14), or ‘complete' (2Co 7:1) in order to attain it (Heb 12:10). Believers are thus both passive and active in their sanctification. Whereas the two associated verbs denoting cleansing and dedication are used with man as passive and active (2Ti 2:21; cf. 1Jn 3:3), the verb hagiazein (to sanctify) may occasionally be used in an active sense with man as subject, in a construction similar to Nu 20:12, speaking of the sanctification of God, or Christ, in the hearts of the believers (1Pe 3:15); but it never seems to connote human self-sanctification—except in the case of Jesus (Jn 17:17; in Rev 22:11 it is—like Mt 6:9—characteristically imperative passive). In sum, sanctification is seen as a one-time event and as a process, the believers being and becoming holy and acting correspondingly.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

In the primitive church, the NT doctrine of sanctification and holiness at first is still very much present. Sanctity is holiness of the heart (1 Clement 29:1). Christians are called to be saints (1 Clem. Prologue; 59:3; Hermas, Shepherd , Visions 3:1; Didache 10:5). Because they are holy, they aim to ‘do all that belongs to sanctification' (1 Clem. 30:1; cf. Barnabas 15:7). This includes personal discipline (1 Clem. 32:2) but especially good works of caring for the poor and needy (Hermas, Shepherd , Mandates 8:9f.; 2:4). Christians will be highly visible in their pagan environment—theirs is a holiness in the midst of the world (Diognetus 5f.), therefore they must witness to God and glorify him by their daily behaviour (2 Clem. 13:22ff.; Ignatius, Eph. 14:2; Polycarp, Ep 10:2f.; Aristides, Apology 15:4ff.). At this point, sanctification is both a soteriological and an ethical concept.

Later, in the Greek church, sanctification continues as a soteriological concept linked to baptism but its moral meaning disappears, yielding to the indigenous terminology of ‘virtue'. At the same time, its ritual usage strongly returns, denoting the consecration of priests, liturgical vestments, the elements of the eucharist, water, oil and buildings. Sanctification here is soteriological or ritual.

For Clement of Alexandria the ‘saint' is still the Christian, in so far as his body and soul are the temple of the holy God and he continues to be sanctified in the school of the saviour. His good works lie in the spiritual and material uplifting of his brethren. For that, he does not have to leave his situation; as a pilgrim, he ‘lives in the city as if it was the desert' (Strom. VII. 7, 3). Two hundred years later, for Theodoret of Cyrrhus (c. 393-c. 458) the ‘saints' are the small band of athletes in asceticism who, preferably living in the desert, have distinguished themselves by brilliant feats of abstinence which are recommended for imitation. Not only has the term sanctification disappeared; its biblical contents have also changed out of recognition.

Among Latin writers, Tertullian resumes the moral concept of sanctification and straightforwardly identifies it with sexual abstinence, ‘either from birth or from rebirth', and especially with the rejection of a second marriage of the widowed. Augustine reemphasizes the soteriological aspect: accusing the Pelagians of the reduction of justification to forgiveness of sins (the believer looking after his future moral life himself), he claims that God's saving grace comprises two gifts, forgiveness and the infusion of love (Ro 5:5), which restore and equip man for his future moral life. For the Latin ear, ‘justification' (making righteous) can never denote a merely declarative forgiveness of sins, it includes the effective transformation of the person. Thus, in the tradition of Augustine, Catholic theologians normally include sanctification with justification, indeed defining the latter as if it were the former (cf. the Council of Trent, Session VI), and emphasizing the reality and evidence of change in man.

In the Middle Ages, both Bernard of Clairvaux and Thomas Aquinas recognize and support Paul's translation of the ritual meaning of sanctification into a moral one. Like Tertullian, Bernard equates sanctification with continence. Thomas, however, recovers the richer content of the term. He expounds it as threefold: purification from sin, confirmation in the good and dedication to the service of God (Summa Theologica I/II: 102: 4; II/II: 81: 8).

The Protestant Reformation was sparked by the ambivalence of the Latin concept of justification, as its ingredient of sanctification could be understood as embracing human works necessary for salvation. Luther reemphasized declarative justification as forgiveness of sins, but desired to link it closely with sanctification or regeneration leading to good works. We must be made good in order to do good, not do good in order to become good (Christian Liberty ; cf. Melanchthon's Apology). Luther originally insisted that good works would follow from faith automatically, as fruit from a tree, whereas Melanchthon (and Calvin) urged the continuing necessity of exhortation, the ‘third use of the law'. Later in his life, Luther resolutely fought against the ‘Antinomians' (see Law and Gospel) who failed to teach sanctification as the necessary consequence of justification. The Reformation determined civil vocation as the field of sanctification, good works and Christian perfection (Augsburg Confession, article 27) and—against popular misconceptions—postulated a progress in sanctification although perfection would never be attained here on earth.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Calvin described the Christian life which follows justification and regeneration or repentance in terms of mortification, meditation on the future life and the study of piety. In his Institutes III. iii. 14 and III. xiv. 9, he defines sanctification as the process by which we are ‘more and more' being ‘consecrated to the Lord in true purity of life' and ‘our hearts formed to obedience to the law' by the indwelling of Christ through the Holy Spirit. Although Calvin has no separate chapter on sanctification the whole thrust of his theology is such that he has been dubbed ‘the theologian of sanctification'.

Reformational orthodoxy in the 17th century elevated sanctification to the status of a separate theological topic and spent much energy trying to determine the ordo salutis (order of salvation) and sanctification's place in it. It held to the biblical concept of a dual agency of God and man in its process. Puritanism strongly directed Christian attention to the practice of sanctification. Similarly, pietism reacted against the intellectualism of some Lutheran orthodoxy, fighting the ‘twin pernicious errors that sanctification was neither possible nor necessary at this time' (Spener). Methodism shared this concern for sanctification. John Fletcher of Madeley (1729-85) wrote his famous ‘Checks to Antinomianism' holding that ‘Christ is not a minister of sin but a saviour from sin'. John Wesley himself stressed sanctification to the extent that he would speak of ‘full sanctification' as a ‘second grace' by which believers are being made perfect, not only with ‘holiness begun but finished holiness' (cf. sermon 35 of his Forty-four Sermons , and Charles Wesley's hymn ‘God of all power, and truth, and grace'). From here, there is development to the holiness (Keswick) movement of the 19th and 20th century which stresses ‘victorious living' not by human effort but by complete reliance on the strength of Christ living in the believer (see Higher-Life Theology).

Contemporary theologians sometimes ignore the topic, or often give it only a weak treatment or arbitrarily stress individual aspects, excluding others. For example, Karl Barth sees sanctification strictly as a work of God only, denying the participation of man as well as the idea of progress; he complements his treatise, however, with a highly original paragraph on vocation to witness, in which he calls for the synergism of the believer with Christ. Emil Brunner presents a balanced view but again, like Paul Tillich, rejects the commandments as guiding principles for sanctification.

Theology today should recover and present the whole range of aspects of the biblical teaching: Christians are called to sanctification. It is part of the purpose of their election and remains the indispensable condition of their communion with God. As the complement of justification (forgiveness of sins) it is, in the first place, a work of God, more specifically of the Holy Spirit, both as a onetime act, valid for all time, imputing and imparting holiness, and as an ongoing, progressive work. In the latter sense, it also becomes a human work. It takes place in our earthly lives, as a moral and spiritual cleansing and dedication of soul and body, harnessing and deploying all human faculties in the service of God, for the upbuilding of Christian fellowship and the implementation of God's will in the world. Holiness means to be at God's disposal; it is task-orientated. Sanctification will find expression in a life of prayer and spiritual warfare and discipline, i.e. in acts of asceticism, as well as in good works that benefit people for time and eternity. It is the restoration of the image of God in man, the gradual assimilation of the believer to Christ and ‘the mind of Christ', and the ‘demonstration of the Spirit and of power' (2Co 2:4). Directed by the double commandment of love of God and love of neighbour as the fullest description of human dedication, it works by the instruction and drive of the Holy Spirit through which we fulfil the requirements of God's law (Ro 8:14,4) and obey the NT exhortations. Finally, sanctification, the eager pursuit of holiness in the midst of an unholy world, is the positive alternative to secularism, the attitude of a world turning away from God.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

K. Barth, CD IV. 2. ch. 66; IV. 3. ch. 71; L. Berkhof, Systematic Theology (Grand Rapids, MI, 1938); G. C. Berkouwer, Faith and Sanctification (Grand Rapids, MI, 1952); D. G. Bloesch, Essentials of Evangelical Theology , vol. 2 (New York, 1982); E. Brunner, Dogmatics (London, 1949-62), vol. 3; H. G. A. Lindström, Wesley and Sanctification (London, 1961); S. Neill, Christian Holiness (London, 1960); J. C. Ryle, Holiness (^{2}1877; repr. London, 1956); O. Weber, Foundations of Dogmatics (Grand Rapids, MI, 1983), vol. 2.

K.Bo.

See also*:

Charlie Boyd Sermon Notes, "Finally, Good News!" (includes definitions)

Jim Thompson Sermon Notes, The Peace of Justification (includes definitions)

N. T. Wright on Justification and Sanctification (incl. Galatians 2:11 – 21) (2011)
(References Galatians 2:11-21 and Ephesians 2:1-10 and Romans 3)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=ii5YHwrkEpQ [Video] (5 min.)
Renowned Author and speaker N.T. Wright sits down with J.D. Walt, Maxie Dunnam and interviewer Ben Ben Witherington III to talk about his view on justification and salvation. In part two of this four part series, Wright explains how many people have misread Paul's letters in light of justification and salvation.

Romans TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Adoption

The focus is on the concept of spiritual adoption as per the New Testament, especially the writings of Paul. However, since the word for adoption that Paul used had specific legal connotations during the time when the NT was written, it is important to know about the legal system in which the concept of adoption was codified and, as subjects of the ancient Roman Empire, the early Christians (and Jews) had to operate and understand.

See also*: Patria Potestas (chart), Intestate Succession, Tutelage, Roman Law – 12 Tables, Children vs Sons

BibleStudyTools: Adoption

https://www.biblestudytools.com/dictionary/adoption/

Excerpt:

Act of leaving one's natural family and entering into the privileges and responsibilities of another. In the Bible, adoption is one of several family-related terms used to describe the process of salvation and its subsequent benefits. God is a father who graciously adopts believers in Christ into his spiritual family and grants them all the privileges of heirship. Salvation is much more than forgiveness of sins and deliverance from condemnation; it is also a position of great blessing. Believers are children of God.

Old Testament Legal adoption was not prescribed in Jewish law or practiced by the Israelites. In fact, the term "adoption" does not occur in the Old Testament. While there are several possible allusions to adoption, such as Moses (Exod 2:10), Genubath (1 Ki 11:20), and Esther (Es 2:7), the incidents recorded take place in foreign societies (Egyptian and Persian) and there is no evidence that legal adoptions were enacted.

The adoption metaphor was not lost to Israel, however. God declares that he is the Father of the nation Israel, whom he loves as his child (Isa 1:2 ; Hosea 11:1). He tells Pharaoh, "Israel is my firstborn son" (Exod 4:22). More specifically, he says to David (and the Messiah), "You are my son; today I have become your Father" (Psalm 2:7); and of David's descendant, "I will be his father, and he will be my son" (2 Sa 7:14). Although not precisely adoption passages, the instances of declared sonship in the Old Testament provide a theological foundation for Israel's designation as the children of God.

New Testament The New Testament cultural environment was much different from that of the Old since elaborate laws and ceremonies for adoption were part of both Greek and Roman society. To people with this background, the adoption metaphor in the New Testament was particularly meaningful.

The Greek word for adoption (huiothesia [υἱοθεσία]) means to "place as a son" and is used only by Paul in the New Testament. Each of the five occurrences in his letters is to readers of a decidedly Roman background. In one instance Paul refers to the Old Testament idea of Israel's special position as the children of God "Theirs is the adoption as sons" (Ro 9:4). The remaining four references describe how New Testament believers become children of God through his gracious choice. The full scope of God's work of salvation past, present, and future is seen in adoption.

υἱοθεσία = huiothesia, 'adoption as sons,'

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Ephesians 1:5-6 – Predestined Unto Adoption as Sons [Recommended]

https://redeeminggod.com/sermons/ephesians/ephesians_1_5-6/

Excerpt: (See: Ephesians 1:5-6 details)

In Ephesians 1:5, Paul writes that God predestined us to be adopted as his sons.

Let's take this one part at a time. Notice first those two little words "to be".

Remember in Ephesians 1:4, how I pointed out that if God had chosen whom he was going to place in Christ, then the verse should say "He chose us to be in Christ" but that it does not say this? It says, He chose us in Christ.

Well here, we see that we are predestined to be adopted.

Again, many will teach from this verse that God has chosen from the world of the unregenerate those whom He wants to receive eternal life. But notice that eternal life is not mentioned here. Adoption is. And when you do a study of what it means to be adopted as his sons, we learn that it is a future event called glorification where we receive new bodies that are completely free of sin and all of sin's effects. The key verse on this is found in the middle of the only other passage on predestination. It is Romans 8:23, and it says that we wait eagerly for our adoption as sons, the redemption of our bodies.

This is something God predestined for all Christians, and it is something that has not yet happened. God predestined, or decided that those who believed in Jesus for eternal life, these same people would be adopted into His family that is, He would save them fully, and give them new and perfect bodies that will last for eternity! That is what it Scripturally means to be adopted as sons.

Admittedly, the idea is a bit confusing. Many people look at this term "to be adopted as his sons" and ask "But don't we become children of God when we are born again? When we place faith in Christ for eternal life, doesn't this also make us God's children?" The answer is yes, it does. So if we are already children, what is the adoption?

A distinction must be made being born again into the family of God and being adopted by God. When we read in Scripture that we are children of God by faith in Jesus Christ, and yet we will be adopted by God we get confused. To our minds, because of the way adoption works in our own country, this doesn't make a whole lot of sense.

In America, only orphans are adopted. No one ever adopts their own children. But at the time of Paul, adoption was something altogether different. I explain more about this in my Gospel Dictionary course.

In the Roman world, fathers had what was known as patria potestas, or the father's power. It meant that a father had absolute power over his children as long as he lived and as long as they lived. If he was in financial need, he could sell his children into slavery. If he was angered by his children, he could legally kill them, imprison them, or make them his slaves. The father maintained this right even when his son became old enough to have a family of his own, even if the son held political office, and even if he was honored by all men. There are instances in Roman history of all of these things happening.[4]

It was also Roman law that a child could never possess anything, no matter how old they became. If you were a father, and your son was the age of 30 years old, and became very rich, all that the son owned was considered to be the property of the father until the father died.

It is also true that most fathers had many children by many different women. They were not polygamists; for the most part, they only had one wife. But many households also had slave women with whom the father often conceived children. These children were his children, they were not orphans, but—and this is the key—they were not heirs.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

So imagine the scene. A father could have multiple sons. He could have multiple sons by his wife, and he could have multiple sons by slave women. By default, the oldest son of the wife was considered the heir. But if the father didn't like the oldest son, and he liked a younger son of his wife, or even a son of one of the slave women, the father could adopt one of his own sons as his heir, thereby disinheriting the eldest son. It was even a common practice for a father to adopt the son of some other family as his heir. This was a way to form alliance between rich and powerful families.

So in biblical times, adoption had nothing to do with welcoming an orphan into your family and making them your son or daughter. Instead, it was a way to declare one of your sons as an heir, or even the son of someone else as your heir. It had nothing to do with becoming a son in the family, and everything to do with being named the heir of the family wealth, power, and position. To adopt a son was to legally give them the right to the family inheritance. The legal ceremony of adoption was quite impressive and it gave the adopted the child the title of "heir."

So when Paul says that God has predestined us to be adopted as sons, he is saying that God promises to make us His heirs. As long as the child remained unadopted, he was considered to be slave, even though he was a child born of the Father.

Again, Paul talks about this exact idea over in Galatians 4:7: "So you are no longer a slave, but a son; and since you are a son, God has made you also an heir."

We are sons by birth when we placed faith in Jesus Christ, yet, though sons, it is as if we were still slaves. But because of our Father's great love for us, He has decided that He will adopt us as heirs. We get into God's family by regeneration—or the new birth, but we become heirs of God through adoption. And while we are adopted now, we don't receive the full inheritance of our adoption until we enter into the eternal kingdom after death.

That is what Paul says God is promising to us here. God has named us heirs. We are heirs of God and co-heirs with Jesus Christ. This promise of predestination is not about God deciding who gets to heaven and who goes to hell; it is about God decided that rather than just one son getting all of His inheritance, all of His children get to share in the inheritance of His family. What a wonderful promise and blessing for His children!

Even Charles Spurgeon agreed when he said that "our conformity to Christ is the sacred object of predestination."[5]

Return to the beginning of*: Adoption

Adoption continued…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Doctrine of Adoption

http://www.makarios-online.org/notes/pdf/Adoption.pdf [PDF]

Excerpt:

I. Introduction.

A. It has been stated that Hebrew law knew nothing of the custom of adoption.

B. In the LXX neither the noun or verb relating to adoption is used.

C. However, adoption was obviously a feature of Egyptian society as seen in the formal adoption of Moses. Ex. 2:10

D. Therefore, while there is no Hebrew equivalent for the term adoption, they were not unfamiliar with the fact that the practice existed. IKings 11:20; Esther 2:7,15

E. In fact, Paul demonstrates a clear understanding of the fact that Israel was the first adopted son of God. Rom. 9:4, cf. Ex. 4:22; Hosea 11:1

II. Vocabulary.

A. As stated above there is no Hebrew term for the practice of adoption.

B. Greek vocabulary.

1. huiothesia, f.noun, 5X, a compound from huios and thesis, a placing as a son.

III.Definition and description.

A. Adoption is defined by Webster as the voluntary act of an adult to establish a parental relationship with a child of another set of parents.

B. It is a personal process based on some factor which motivates the new parent to accept another's child as if he was his natural child.

C. Generally, the reason was due to a lack of natural heirs and the desire to perpetuate the family, although sometimes the reason was based merely on personal affection.

D. It was clearly understood by all parties that this was also a legal matter, binding on all who were involved.

IV. Historical background.

A. Some societies in the ancient world practiced adoption as a regular feature of life.

B. Some, including the Romans, considered adoption to be severe and binding on all who were involved.

C. By the time of Paul, adoption played an increasingly important part in the culture.

D. From late in the first century to the middle of the second century, Roman emperors adopted men with the intention that they should succeed them as Caesar.

E. The actual process of adoption.

1. A man, generally without an heir, determined to adopt someone who was not related to him by blood.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

2. The adopted was transferred from the power and control of the natural parents and previous family relationships to the power of the adopting father.

3. The Roman term was patria potestas--the power of the father, since the emphasis of the Roman world was on the father's power and the adopted son was little more than a slave.

4. Once adopted, the new son was, in all legal respects, on a level with those who were natural born sons.

5. If the son was already of age, the ceremony was known as adrogatio.

6. Seven witnesses were required to validate the adoption.

7. Their testimony that a legal and binding adoption had taken place was crucial if, after the father's death, the natural heirs contested the validity of the will, and/or adoption.

V. Spiritual adoption.

A. The Roman process of adoption forms the background for the theological doctrine of adoption.

B. All mankind is viewed as being born under their father the Devil. Jn. 8:41-44

C. All are abject slaves to Satan based on their slavery to the I/STA, and are under condemnation from birth. Eph. 2:1-3

D. God the Father determined in eternity past to adopt certain members of the human race based on two distinct facts:

1. His love and mercy. Eph. 1:5-7, 2:4-7

2. His foreknowledge of positive volition. Eph. 1:5; IPet. 1:1-2

E. The one who believes receives the right to become a child of God. Jn. 1:12

F. They are then separated from the Satanic/cosmic family and entered into a new and permanent relationship with God, enjoying the same legal status of The Natural Son.

G. The pre-salvation phase of our existence is taught in the analogy of Gal. 4:1-3.

1. Under Roman law, the son was considered a minor (Greek nüãioj--nepios--a child, one who has not come of age) until he completed his fourteenth year.

2. During this time, he was under a tutor, nominated by his father in his will, after age 14 the child was under the authority of a curator until age 25.

3. The age (14) at which a child was no longer considered a child was fixed by statute, however, some discretion was reserved to the father to delay that status.

4. The time fixed by the father was specified in his will.

5. The period when the son was under the constraints of appointed individuals represents the time before our salvation when we were under the ignorance and legalism of the cosmos. Gal. 4:3

6. During the time of his childhood, the heir was an heir de jure (a legal heir), but not an heir de facto (heir in fact).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

7. In one sense we were no different than our cosmic counterparts and although the inheritance was ours legally we had no power to access or dispose of it.

H. The salvation phase of our adoption. Gal. 4:4-7

1. At the proper time, God the Father sent the Son into the world to redeem us from our previous state. vs 4
2. His purpose in redeeming us was so that we could receive the realities of adoption . vs 5
3. We are adopted into the family of God by faith. Jn. 1:12; Gal. 3:26
4. Believers are then children of God, given their freedom and the power to use it responsibly.
5. Three sure tokens of this new relationship are:
   a. The invocation of God as Father. Gal. 4:6
   b. The spontaneous, uncoerced acknowledgement of Jesus as our Lord. I Cor. 12:3
   c. The internal witness of the Holy Spirit. Rom. 8:16
6. The new relationship with the Father is set forth as being in diametrical opposition to the spirit of bondage. Rom. 8:15

VI. The practical and logical conclusion of adoption--heirship.

A. While one may be adopted into a family in order to preserve the family or the way of life, it was readily understood that the adopted child would share in the inheritance.

B. In fact, the adopted child would inherit equally with a natural son, based on the decision of the father.

C. Once you are an adopted son of God through faith in Christ, you become an heir of God. Rom. 8:17

D. You become a fellow heir with Christ, based on your willingness to apply Bible doctrine in Phase 2. Rom. 8:17

E. God the Father owns everything, He is the Father par excellence. Ex. 9:29; Ps. 24:1; I Cor. 10:26

F. Therefore, He will disperse the inheritance among the child- ren as His wisdom demands.

G. The natural Son, Jesus Christ, is the heir of all things based on His birth and perfect obedience to the Father. Lk. 20:14; Phil 2:8; Heb. 1:2

H. The experiential enjoyment of our inheritance is contingent upon the resurrection body, which is one part of our inheritance. Rom. 8:23

VII.Concluding observations.

A. God the Father had but one natural Son, the Lord Jesus Christ. Lk. 1:32, 10:22; Jn. 3:16

B. He was a son by birth, and demonstrated His fidelity to His Father by His obedience. Gal. 4:4; Phil. 2:8

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

C. He took an active part in the process of providing the possibility of adoption for God's enemies. Gal. 4:5

D. All who believe in Him are taken irrevocably from the Satanic family and given the right to become children of God. Jn. 1:12; Col. 1:12-14

E. All who become sons are promised a portion of the inheritance which God will distribute to His heirs.

F. The portion for all will include a resurrection body, no I/STA, a home in Heaven, and eternal life.

G. For those who pursue Bible doctrine, accepting the sufferings of Christ, a greater portion awaits (SG3). Rom. 8:17; Heb. 10:32-39

H. God provided a down payment as proof of the certainty of our inheritance in the form of the I/HS. Eph. 1:13-14

I. The future glory of creation is keyed to the consummation of our adoption. Rom. 8:19-21

J. An often overlooked feature of the blessing of adoption is that of parental discipline. Heb. 12:7

"For you have not received a spirit of slavery leading to fear again, but you have received a spirit of adoption as sons by which we cry out, "Abba! Father!"

Rom. 8:15

100 Verses About Adoption

https://www.openbible.info/topics/adoption

Return to the beginning of*: Adoption

Adoption continued…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Adoption (by Charles H. Welch)

http://bibleunderstanding.com/adoption/

http://www.heavendwellers.com/hd_aa_adoption.htm

Excerpt:

This word adoption is the translation of the Greek huiothesia, a word composed of huios a son and thesis to place, or constitute. (See: Children vs Sons) The word is used only by Paul in the New Testament and occurs five times as follows:

> Rom. 8:15. Ye have received the spirit of adoption.
> Rom. 8:23. Waiting for the adoption.
> Rom. 9:4. To whom pertaineth the adoption.
> Gal. 4:5. That we might receive the adoption of sons.
> Eph. 1:5. Unto the adoption of children. [sons] (See: Ephesians 1:5-6 details)

To appreciate the full significance of the apostles figures in Galatians 3 and 4 they must be viewed in the light of the law of adoption – and more particularly, the Greek law of adoption. At the same time it must be remembered that Paul also uses the term in Romans, so that we must also bear in mind the Roman law on the subject. There is no equivalent law of adoption in England. In Roman law, adoption was a very serious undertaking.

The adopted son became a member of the family, just as if he had been born of the blood of the adopter; and he was invested with all the privileges of a filius familias. As a matter of fact it was by this means that the succession amongst the Caesars was continued. It never descended from father to son. What with poison, divorce, luxury and profligacy, the surviving members of a family were few, the descent suffered constant interruption, and whole families disappeared … In no case amongst the Caesars did the throne pass from father to son … Augustus was the great nephew of Julius Caesar, and was adopted from the Octavian into the Julian gens. Tiberius was no relation at all to his predecessor: he was merely the son of Augustuss wife, Livia, by Tiberius Claudius Nero. Here we have the introduction of another family – the Claudii … Nero was the great nephew of his predecessor Claudius, who had adopted him in the year A.D. 50 (Septimus Buss).

Adoption was of two kinds: adoption proper, and adrogation.

Adoption proper.
It must be remembered that the father in Roman law had absolute control over his family, possessing the same rights over his children as over his slaves. By this patria potestas the son was deprived of the right to own property, and the father could inflict any punishment he thought fit, even to the extent of the death penalty. He could also sell his son into bondage. According to the law of the XII Tables, however, a father forfeited his potestas if he sold his son three times. For this reason, in the case of adoption, a legal ceremony took place in which the father went through the process of selling his son three times, and the son passed over completely to the potestas of the adopter. In later times the cumbersome ceremony was substituted by a simple declaration before the Praetor or Governor.

Adrogation.
When the person to be adopted was his own master, he was adopted by the form called adrogation (from the word for ask, since in this case the adopter, the adopted, and the people were asked, rogatur). The law demanded that the adopter should be at least eighteen years older than the adopted:

> Adoption imitates nature, and it seems unnatural that a son should be older than his father (Justinian). [Justinian] [Justinian-MidievalSourcebook-TheInstitutes]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

> Adoption was called in law a capitas diminutio, which so far annihilated the pre-existing personality who underwent it, that during many centuries it operated as an extinction of debts (W. E. Ball).

The effect of adoption was fourfold:

A CHANGE OF FAMILY.
The adopted person was transferred from one gens to another.

A CHANGE OF NAME.
The adopted person acquired a new name: for he assumed the name of his adopter, and modified his own by the termination ianus. Thus when Caius Octavius of the Octavian gens was adopted by Julius Caesar, he became Caius Julius Caesar Octavianus.

> Gens: a Roman clan embracing the families of the same stock in the male line (Merriam-Webster Dictionary)

A CHANGE OF HOME,

and

NEW RESPONSIBILITIES AND PRIVILEGES.

While the adopted person suffered many losses, these were more than counterbalanced by his gains, for he received a new capacity to inherit. In the case of the adopter dying intestate, the adopted son acquired the right of succession.

Paul alludes to the patria potestas, the absolute power of the father in the family, in the fourth Chapter of Galatians where he speaks of the child differing nothing from a slave and goes on to say Thou art no longer a slave, but a son (Gal. 4:7). Paul also alludes to tutelage in Galatians 3 and 4, where we have such phrases as kept in ward, tutor to bring us to Christ, under guardians and stewards, and children held in bondage (Gal. 3:23 to 4:3).

[KJV]:	[WEB]
Galatians 3. [23] But before faith came, we were kept under the law, shut up unto the faith which should afterwards be revealed.	Galatians 3. [23] But before faith came, we were kept in custody under the law, confined for the faith which should afterwards be revealed.
[24] Wherefore the law was our schoolmaster to bring us unto Christ, that we might be justified by faith.	[24] So that the law has become our tutor to bring us to Christ, that we might be justified by faith.
[25] But after that faith is come, we are no longer under a schoolmaster.	[25] But now that faith has come, we are no longer under a tutor.
[26] For ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus.	[26] For you are all children of God, through faith in Christ Jesus.
[27] For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ.	[27] For as many of you as were baptized into Christ have put on Christ.
[28] There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female: for ye are all one in Christ Jesus.	[28] There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither slave nor free man, there is neither male nor female; for you are all one in Christ Jesus.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

[29] And if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise.	[29] If you are Christ's, then you are Abraham's seed and heirs according to promise.
Galatians 4. [1] Now I say, That the heir, as long as he is a child, differeth nothing from a servant, though he be lord of all;	Galatians 4. [1] But I say that so long as the heir is a child, he is no different from a bondservant, though he is lord of all;
[2] But is under tutors and governors until the time appointed of the father.	[2] but is under guardians and stewards until the day appointed by the father.
[3] Even so we, when we were children, were in bondage under the elements of the world:	[3] So we also, when we were children, were held in bondage under the elemental principles of the world.
[4] But when the fulness of the time was come, God sent forth his Son, made of a woman, made under the law,	[4] But when the fullness of the time came, God sent out his Son, born to a woman, born under the law,
[5] To redeem them that were under the law, that we might receive the adoption of sons.	[5] that he might redeem those who were under the law, that we might receive the adoption of children.
[6] And because ye are sons, God hath sent forth the Spirit of his Son into your hearts, crying, Abba, Father.	[6] And because you are children, God sent out the Spirit of his Son into your hearts, crying, "Abba, Father!"
[7] Wherefore thou art no more a servant, but a son; and if a son, then an heir of God through Christ.	[7] So you are no longer a bondservant, but a son; and if a son, then an heir of God through Christ.

So far as the ceremony was concerned, the difference between the transferring of a son into slavery, and his becoming a member of the family was very slight. In the one case the adopter said: I claim this man as my slave; in the other, I claim this man as my son. The form was almost the same; it was the spirit that differed. If the adopter died and the adopted son claimed the inheritance, the latter had to testify to the fact that he was the adopted heir. Furthermore – > the law requires corroborative evidence. One of the seven witnesses is called. “I was present”, he says, “at the ceremony. It was I who held the scales and struck them with the ingot of brass. It was an adoption. I heard the words of the vindication, and I say this person was claimed by the deceased, not as a slave, but as a son” (W. E. Ball).

Bearing all these facts in mind, can we not feel something of the thrill with which the Roman Christian would read the words of Romans:

> Ye have not received the spirit of bondage again to fear; but ye have received the spirit of adoption, whereby we cry, Abba, Father. The Spirit itself beareth witness with our spirit, that we are the children of God: and if children, then heirs (Rom. 8:15-17).

It is not so much the Holy Spirit addressing Himself here to the human spirit in confirmation, but rather the joint witness of the Holy Spirit and the spirit of the believer to the same blessed fact.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Closely associated with the law of adoption was that of the Roman will. The Praetorian will was put into writing, and fastened with the seals of seven witnesses (cf. Rev. 5 and 6). There is probably a reference to this type of will in Ephesians:

> In Whom also after that ye believed, ye were sealed with that Holy Spirit of promise, which is the earnest of our inheritance until the redemption of the purchased possession, unto the praise of His glory (Eph. 1:13,14).

W. E. Ball translates the latter part of the passage: Until the ransoming accomplished by the act of taking possession (of the inheritance):

> When a slave was appointed heir, although expressly emancipated by the will which gave him the inheritance, his freedom commenced not upon the making of the will, nor even immediately upon the death of the testator, but from the moment when he took certain legal steps, which were described as "entering upon the inheritance". This is "the ransoming accomplished by act of taking possession". In the last words of the passage – "to the praise of His glory", there is an allusion to a well-known Roman custom. The emancipated slaves who attended the funeral of their emancipator were the praise of his glory. Testamentary emancipation was so fashionable a form of posthumous ostentation, the desire to be followed to the grave by a crowd of freedmen wearing the "cap of liberty" was so strong, that very shortly before the time when St. Paul wrote, the legislature had expressly limited the number of slaves that an owner might manumit by will.

No modern writer has greater first hand knowledge of this term than Sir William Ramsay, and in order to acquaint ourselves with its usage in Galatia, we will first of all quote from Sir William's A Historical Commentary on St. Paul's Epistle to the Galatians.

> The idea that they who follow the principle of faith are sons of Abraham, whatever family they belong to by nature, would certainly be understood by the Galatians as referring to the legal process called adoption, huiothesia.
>
> Adoption was a kind of embryo will; the adopted son became the owner of the property, and the property could pass to a person that was naturally outside the family only through his being adopted. The adoption was a sort of will-making; and this ancient form of will was irrevocable and public. The terms "son" and "heir" are interchangeable.
>
> An illustration from the ordinary fact of society, as it existed in the Galatian cities, is here stated: "I speak after the manner of men". The will (diatheke) of a human being is irrevocable when once duly executed. But, if Paul is speaking about a will, how can he say, after it is once made, it is irrevocable?
>
> Such irrevocability was a characteristic feature of Greek law, according to which an heir outside the family must be adopted into the family; and the adoption was the will-making. The testator, after adopting his heir, could not subsequently take away from him his share of the inheritance or impose new conditions on his succession. The Roman-Syrian Law Book will illustrate this passage of the Epistle. It actually lays down the principle that a man can never put away an adopted son, and that he cannot put away a real son without good ground. It is remarkable that the adopted son should have a stronger position than the son by birth; yet it is so. The expression in Galatians 3, verse 15, "When it hath been confirmed" must also be observed. Every will had to be passed through the Record Office of the city. It was not regarded in the Greek law as a purely private document. It must be deposited in the Record Office.

Here it will be seen that one may be adopted, or made the heir, without being at the same time a true child, but in the case of the Scriptural usage of adoption there is no idea that the believer is only an adopted child for the testimony of the Word is explicit on the point, making it clear that adoption is something added:

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

> The Spirit itself beareth witness with our spirit, that we are the children of God (Rom. 8:16).

The argument of Galatians 4:1-7 proceeds upon the supposition that there is a difference between a child (Gal. 4:1,2), and one who has received the adoption (Gal. 4:5). If a son, then an heir of God through Christ (Gal. 4:7). That adoption is related to inheritance we can see by examining the first chapter of Ephesians. There we find the word predestinate used twice, once in verse 5, where it is unto adoption, and again in verse 11, where it refers to inheritance. Let us now observe the way in which this important word is used in connection with three different companies of the redeemed.

In Romans 9 the apostle enumerates the distinctive and exclusive privileges of Israel according to the flesh, who are Israelites; to whom pertaineth the adoption (9:4). The structure of the passage relates adoption with promises and the whole is important enough to claim our attention before passing on. Accordingly we set out the [chiastic] structure.

A According to the flesh, brethren.

B Who are Israelites.

C To whom pertaineth the ADOPTION.

D And the glory.

E And the covenants.

E And the giving of the law.

D And the service of God.

C And the PROMISES.

B Whose are the fathers.

A As concerning the flesh, Christ came.

No one with any understanding can interpret the words Israel and according to the flesh as of the Church, or of that company where there is neither Jew nor Greek (Gal. 3:28). When Israel were about to be brought out of Egypt, God called the nation His firstborn saying, Israel is My son, even My firstborn (Exod. 4:22).

Attached to this position is a citizenship, the city being Jerusalem, which is destined to be the centre of the earth when the Kingdom is set up (Isa. 2:3; Zech. 14:16,17). It is obvious that if one nation is to be granted pre-eminence, the others must be subservient, and one of the accompaniments of the privilege of adoption, which we find true of each sphere, is the grant of pre-eminence over other companies in the same sphere.

> The nation and kingdom that will not serve thee shall perish; yea, those nations shall be utterly wasted (Isa. 60:12).
>
> Strangers shall stand and feed your flocks, and the sons of the alien shall be your plowmen and your vinedressers. But ye shall be named the Priests of the LORD: men shall call you the Ministers of our God (Isa. 61:5,6).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

We shall find that the following features are inseparable from adoption as used in the Scriptures.

The appointing of the heir.
The dignity of the first-born.
The close association of citizenship.
Some special pre-eminence over other companies in the same sphere.

---------- From here onward needs some vetting…

In marked contrast with Romans 9, where the adoption is the exclusive prerogative of Israel according to the flesh, we have the adoption of Galatians 4, which pertains to the seed of Abraham who are not considered after the flesh (23), who are associated with Jerusalem which is above (26), and which is composed of both Jew and Greek made one in Christ, and consequently heirs according to the promise. Yet further, those to whom pertaineth the adoption according to the teaching of Ephesians, have no relationship with Israel at all, they have no connection with the promises made unto the fathers, they were aliens and strangers, without hope, and without God. These were chosen before the foundation of the world, and in Christ are raised and seated far above all principality and power. Consequently the logical result of admitting the contextual teaching of Pauls epistles regarding adoption is to admit three distinct spheres of blessing.

A man can only have three first-born sons, if he has had three families. This application to the teaching concerning adoption will be found to be an irrefutable proof of the existence of three spheres of blessing, (see THREE SPHERES [NOTE: External Link – Concept needs to be vetted.]). ??????

Note: Here's chart related to the "Three Spheres" (again, needs vetting):

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Adoption

http://www.abideinchrist.com/keys/adoption.html

Excerpt:

The word "adoption" (huiothesias) means the placement of a son to one to whom it does not naturally belong. By law the adopted person has the same privileges, benefits, position, responsibilities and obligations as a natural born son.

The word is found in Romans 8:15, 23; 9:4; Galatians 4:5; Ephesians 1:5). Believers in Jesus Christ are adopted sons (Gal. 4:5; Eph. 1:5), not slaves of fear (Gal. 4:7).

"You have received a spirit of adoption" (Romans 8:15). Jesus Christ has redeemed us "that we might receive the adoption as sons" (Galatians 4:5). It is part of the blessings of salvation, the now and the yet to be, because we have received our adoption, yet "even we ourselves groan within ourselves, waiting eagerly for our adoption as sons, the redemption of our body" (Romans 8:23). It is part of "our blessed hope" (Rom. 8:24-25). God the Father "in love . . . predestined us to adoption as sons through Jesus Christ to Himself, according to the kind intention (lit. good pleasure) of His will" (Ephesians 1:5). This is not the same doctrine as regeneration or being born spiritually.

The apostle Paul drew an illustration from the Roman law of adoption. The modern laws of adoption are based on this very serious legal act before the principal Roman magistrates which enabled a person to take into his own family a child not his own with the intent of treating the child as his own with all the privileges and responsibilities of that new family. This is a very important law because the adopted child had all the rights of a legitimate son in his new family and at the same time absolutely lost all rights and responsibilities in his old family. He was treated like a new person. All of his old debts and obligations connected with the old family were abolished as if they never existed. On the other hand, he now by right of the law stood as an heir to all of the inheritance of his new father. It was carried out in the presence of seven witnesses to make it official.

The adopted sons enjoyed the same privileges as natural born sons. According to the Roman law the adopted person lost all rights in his old family and gained all the rights of a legitimate son in his new family. He got a new father and he became the heir of his new father's estate. He was inalienably co-heir with the other sons in the family. In law, the old life was completely wiped out. All debts were cancelled, and he was absolutely the son of his new father.

The apostle Paul tells us that this is what God has done for us. This is now how He treats the believer in Jesus Christ. We were members of old Adam's family with all of the effects of the power of sin and guilt. We were held responsible as members of that family. God took us out of that family and adopted us into His new family. We have been completely released of all responsibility and debts of sin because Jesus paid the debt in full. We have a new position before God with all the legal rights. (cf. Romans 5:12-21)

As children of the heavenly Father we have been given full legal status and inheritance rights (1 John 3:1; Romans 8:23, 14-15; Revelation 21:7). We have been raised to the status of adult sons. We as believers are the absolute possession of the Father. He has absolute right over us.

The apostle Paul uses this well known custom in the Roman Empire to state the great gospel truth that the LORD God has given the believing sinner, who is not His natural child, an unchanging eternal position as His adult child in His family. This is now our new legal position before God the Father.

The Holy Spirit places believing sinners in the family of God as adult sons (Romans 8:15; Galatians 4:5; Ephesians 1:5). Even though we are already adult members, by adoption, in the family, it is only when our mortal bodies have been glorified at the coming of Christ that we will take full possession of all that our sonship involves (Rom. 8:23).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The apostle Paul uses the same word "adoption" in Rom. 8:15, 23, but with a different emphasis. In v.15 he is referring to the present life of the believer, whereas in v. 23 he is eschatological, looking forward to our final full acceptance into the family of God.

When we put our faith in Christ we received a "spirit of adoption" that set us free from a servile fear of God. We do not have to shrink in fear from God, but now have "access" into His holy presence. The Holy Spirit places believers as adult sons in a legal standing before God. M. R. Vincent says our adoption should serve to impress upon us "the assurance that the adopted son of God becomes in a peculiar and intimate sense, one with the heavenly Father." The Holy Spirit enables the believer to call God, "Father" (Romans 8:15). No Jewish person would ever have done that before Jesus, the Son of God, taught His disciples this truth. The Holy Spirit bears testimony to our human spirit that we are children of God. Our own spirit, prompted by the Holy Spirit, tells us we are God's children.

The Spirit that God has given the believer does not make you a slave, but one of His children. The gift of the Holy Spirit is the means through which believers become conscious of their sonship (Romans 8:15). There is a close relation between our adoption and the gift of the Holy Spirit.

Before becoming God's children we were slaves living in fear of a righteous God, but now God's Spirit has released us from that fear so we can enjoy our new relationship with Him. We do not have a heart like a slave living in fear of a tyrant, but the heart of a son responding to a loving Father. What a privilege to call God our Father.

Galatians 4:4-5 reads, "But when the fullness of the time came, God sent forth His Son, born of a woman, born under the Law, so that He might redeem those who were under the Law, that we might receive the adoption as sons." The Holy Spirit is sent into "our hearts," i.e., the center of our intellect, moral, and spiritual life. It is from the heart that the Spirit cries out, "Father, my Father." It is a loud earnest cry, even a public cry. Paul says it is an intense cry from the Spirit within the believer. The Spirit cries from within the believer's heart giving witness of saving faith.

Abiding Principles and Practical Applications

1. Since believers are adopted and placed as full grown adult children (sons) into God's family we are no longer slaves to sin (Gal. 4:7). We can now approach the Father in an intimate way calling Him, "Abba, Father" (Rom. 8:15).

2. We are God's children in two ways: (a) As adopted sons of our heavenly Father we are full heirs and co-heirs along with His own unique Son, Jesus Christ (John 17:24; 1 Cor. 3:21-23; Gal. 4:7). (b) We are also His children as "born ones" by the new birth (John 1:1; 3:5; 1 John 3:1-3). Both actions are the result of the Holy Spirit.

3. As children of our heavenly Father we are the recipients of all spiritual blessings (Eph. 1:3) in this life, and we will "share in His glory" in the future (2 Tim. 2:12; 1 Peter 4:13; 5:10).

4. As co-heirs with Christ we also "share in His sufferings" (John 15:20; Col. 1:24; 2 Tim. 3:12; 1 Pet. 4:12).

5. The Holy Spirit can empower us to obey Christ, therefore enabling us to be more like Christ.

Key Scriptures

Romans 8:15, 23; 9:4; Galatians 4:5; Ephesians 1:5

For Further Study

Romans 8:15; 9:26; Galatians 3:26 The Adoption of Believers
Adopted Children of God

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Romans 8:28-30 Salvation in Five Words
Redemption of Our Bodies
Witness of the Holy Spirit
John 17:9-12 How May I Know I Am Saved?
Behold, What Manner of Love
Romans 8:17-28 The Groan Before the Glory
Accepted in the Beloved
Inheritance of the Christian
John 17:6-8 How to Receive Eternal Life

Roman Law in the Writings of Paul – Adoption by Francis Lyall (1969)
http://www.jstor.org/stable/3263796?seq=1#page_scan_tab_contents

Return to the beginning of*: Adoption

Adoption continued…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Pauline Adoption: a Sociological Approach by Trevor Burke (2001)
https://biblicalstudies.org.uk/pdf/eq/2001-2_119.pdf [PDF]

Excerpt:

The expression huiothesia, 'adoption as sons,' is unique to the corpus Paulinum (Gal. 4:5; Rom. 8:15, 23; 9:4; Eph.1:5), occurring nowhere else in the biblical (including the LXX) or Jewish literature of the period. It is a term, which has often been researched along more traditional lines such as Christology[1] (i.e. 'in what way is the sonship of Christ different to the Christian's adoption as son?', Gal. 4:4,5), soteriology[2] (i.e. 'how is the death of God's Son related to the believer's adoption as son?', Gal. 4:5) and eschatology[3] (i.e. 'what is the relationship between the two eschatological gifts of adoption and the Spirit?', Rom. 8:15). Undoubtedly such questions are important, but it is a matter of debate as to whether our understanding of this important Pauline expression is fully[4] exhausted by these conventional approaches.

In addition to the above issues are the equally pressing, and so far as we are aware overlooked, social questions which need to be asked in relation to this term. Given the fact that 'Paul's theology was inextricably related to social reality'[5] and that adoption was a socio[6]-legal practice of the Graeco-Roman[7] world in general and Roman law[8] in particular, what social changes resulted when a person left one family and became a member of another family? And how, if at all, has this influenced Paul's metaphorical usage of his adoption term? For instance, does the apostle employ his adoption term in order to υἱοθεσία = huiothesia, 'adoption as sons,'

Note:

Continued…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

describe the re-socialisation which the early Christians experienced as a result of their conversion-initiation?[9] And what were the consequences of such a re-alignment? Were there conflicts for these early Christians vis-à-vis their loyalty to the natural family and this 'new family' into which they had now entered? Moreover, is there any evidence in those letters where Paul employs his adoption metaphor to suggest that he viewed these early Christians' re-socialisation as having taken place within the context of the ekklēsia as a 'new family of God'?[10] We will examine the apostle's letter to the Galatians to test this hypothesis. But firstly let us turn to the Roman socio-legal practice of adoption. This social context is important not least because many of the notions associated with adoption in ancient society find no parallel with adoption procedures in our twentieth-century western civilisation. It is not necessary for us to give a detailed discussion of the Roman family but to consider pertinent aspects which are relevant to our enquiry.

I. Adoption: a socio-legal practice of the Roman world

The term 'adoption' is, in essence, a part of the ancient familial-matrix and any proper understanding of it must be viewed against the wider picture of the Roman 'family'.[11] According to Roman tradition, the family was the fundamental bedrock of society; indeed family membership was the primary context of social, religious, economic and political security and fulfilment.[12] However, the Roman concept of familia was much wider than our twentieth-century western understanding of the term family, i.e. the nuclear family. In relation to large and rich households the family consisted of a man, wife, their unmarried children, together with the slaves and possibly freedmen and foster-children living in the same household. In addition, the Roman familia also included those who were sons by reason of being adopted.[13] Given the fundamental importance of the family to Roman society, adoption was a lifeline 'for a family in danger of dying out'.[14] This was usually due to a paterfamilias (head of the household) being unable to have children of his own, or because his own children had failed to live to adulthood, and so, in order that he might have an heir, recourse was made to adopting a son[15] from another family.[16] Adoption was a relatively well-known practice of the Roman aristocracy.[17] In contrast to contemporary society where childlessness is one of the main reasons for embarking on such a course,[18] the Roman conception of adoption was rooted in the old religious basis of the Roman family where each family had its own cult or sacra ('sacred things'). It was paramount that the family worship should continue and where this was threatened, or in doubt, due to a lack of persons to carry it on, adoption was called into practice.[19] Again, unlike society today where children are adopted, the normal subjects of adoption in the Roman world were already adults, by which time the chances of survival were greater and the adopting father could see what he was getting as a son and heir.

Continued…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Essentially two adoption procedures were followed, both of which were dependent upon the status of the adoptee: in the first instance a person who was independent of a father's control, i.e. sui iuris, was adopted by a procedure known as adrogatio. In such cases a preliminary investigation was carried out to ensure the suitability of the family interested in adopting as well as the security of the family about to lose a member.

Continued…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

More important, was a second procedure known as adoptio where a son, still under the patria potestas, was conveyed into the potestas of his adoptive father by a pretended sale. The whole procedure – which may sound alien to modern ears – involved, in the first instance, the severing of the old potestas followed by the the establishing of the paternal authority of the new father. This was carried out by the pater-familias selling his offspring into civil bondage (in mancipio) thereby making him a slave. On the release of his son the latter was still the property of the father and could by right be sold into bondage by him again and again. In order to avoid the son becoming a familial football a law was laid down in the Twelve Tables (established by the second Decemvirate c. 450 B.C.) which stated that when a son was sold three times by his father the latter ceased to have any authority over him. It was from this law that the adoptio procedure was derived.[20] The father would sell his son who upon his release was returned to his father's control. The son was then sold a second time and again freed to return to his father's authority. On the third sale the patria postestas was finally removed and the adoption would follow.

Generally speaking, adoption changed hereditary succession and the adoptee's legal position and privileges were the same as that of a legitimate biological son. But, even though adoption was a legal procedure of the Roman world it inevitably proved to be an event of such

Continued…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

life-changing proportions that it brought changes to every area of the adoptee's life. From a social perspective, adoption primarily and fundamentally constituted on the one hand, a break with the old family ties and on the other, a commitment to a new one with all its attending privileges and responsibilities.[22] In short, it involved a whole new way of life.

The legal and hence social implications of adoption, according to Roman law, are well highlighted by Lyall:[23]

> The profound truth of Roman adoption was that the adoptee was taken out of his previous state and was placed in a new relationship of son to his father, his new paterfamilias. All his old debts were cancelled, and in effect the adoptee started a new life as part of his new family. From that time on the paterfamilias had the same control over his new "child" as he had over his natural offspring.

II. Adoption as a re-socialisation in conversion

If the social reality and practice of adoption in the Roman world was such that it brought about a change in the adoptee's status, name, responsibilities etc. it is also a very apt metaphor for Paul's understanding of what happens when a person embraces the gospel. Indeed, a similar experience of re-socialisation was also shared by the early Christians whose conversion experience Paul depicts by the use of his adoption term – 'to become a Christian was to be adopted into a new family'.[24] For the apostle, adoption is not just a metaphor but a 'sociological metaphor'[25] and one which, according to Wayne Meeks, graphically describes what was happening to the early Christian converts:

> the image of the initiate being adopted as God's child and thus receiving a new family of human brothers and sisters is a vivid way of portraying what a modern sociologist might call the resocialisation of conversion. The natural kinship structure into which the person had been born and which previously defined his place and connections with society is here supplanted by a new set of relationships.[26]

Continued…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

As a conversion term, Paul's talk of adoption was something which for these early Christians was profound and thoroughgoing – it speaks of a real experience of sharp displacement which many of his new converts would have felt because it brought about a radical change to basic relationships, attitudes, and perceptions similar to those acquired by a child growing up within a family.[27] In the circumstances, such a seismic shift in allegiance was probably not always viewed in a positive light.[28] For example, the patriarchal household of the Graeco-Roman world and the paterfamilias in particular, were well known for stern discipline[29] and absolute power, and one can easily see how such authority especially in circumstances where a conversion took place without, or even against his will, could, present a challenge to his authority.[30] For these early Christians, and the Pauline communities in particular, their adoption/conversion was perceived as belonging to the divine family where a new loyalty had replaced all others, one in which 'God acts as a proper, well-to-do paterfamilias'.[31]

Allied to this was the more serious accusation brought by the Roman authorities against these early Christians whose adoption would have been viewed as causing disruptions to existing households.[32] As we have already noted, socially, the Roman familia was a force for coherence and stability; it was a focus of loyalties for both present and past members, and also a means of exercising control over them.[33] Moreover, one of the features of the early Christian movement was that from the outset it was marked out as a familial community to which loyalty above everything else was owed. Although, religiously speaking, the Graeco-Roman religion(s) were essentially syncretistic and readily tolerated and assimilated other gods into their religious system, the family was the one area which remained sacrosanct, so much so that the break-up of the natural household was tantamount to the rejection of the social order.[34] One can easily see how talk of being 'children of God' and belonging to the 'family of God' would have been viewed with distrust by pagan opponents. As a result, Roman society was deeply suspicious of the Christian movement; pagans were sometimes known to register their displeasure about the excessive intimacy of other related familial nomenclature such as 'brother' and 'sister'.[35]

Continued…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

These same tensions are clearly manifested in the Synoptic gospels which suggest that when Jesus called the first disciples to follow him there was a conflict of loyalties between the natural family and the new eschatological family of brothers and sisters. For instance, 'For I have come to set a man against his father and a daughter against her mother, and a daughter-in-law against her mother-in-law' (Matt. 10:35; Lke. 14:26; Mk. 3:31-33). A recurring pattern in the synoptics is that one's natural family ties are subordinate to the authority of the newly inaugurated family of the last days.[36]

There is also evidence in Paul's writings (1 Cor. 7:12-16) and other sources outside the New Testament (Tert. Apol. 3.4; Justin 2 Apol. 2) to suggest how Christians upon conversion related to their natural families; at times the early believers showed little regard for their natural families. As John Barclay has recently pointed out, this is no more clearly portrayed than in their attitude to the family cult:

> There was a strong sense of betrayal. Family members who broke with ancestral traditions on the basis of their new-found faith showed an appalling lack of concern for their familial responsibilities. Christians deserted ancestral practices, passed on since time immemorial, for a novel religion (if such it could be called) of recent manufacture.[37]

This jettisoning of ancestral practices by these early Christian converts in favour of new religious practices may provide an overlap – between social reality and metaphor – as far as Paul's adoption term is concerned. For example, in relation to the former, we know that upon adoption the adoptee became a stranger to his agnatic family and 'renounced the worship of the gods of that family' and 'took over the new gods' [and] passed into the worship of the new family'.[38] Metaphorically speaking these early believers who perceived their conversion in terms of adoption into God's new family had the entire focus of their worship reoriented through an awakening that their 'new god' is '"Abba", Father' (Gal. 4:6; Rom. 8:15).

Continued…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

All these associations, and more, go some way towards explaining how a metaphor like adoption would have been heard and perceived within a Roman social context.

One other point, however, needs to be noted at this juncture. If, as we have seen, these adopted sons of God claimed to find a 'new home' within the Christian family, the corollary of all this was that these early Christians often found themselves alienated and isolated by those outside the community. This sense of alienation was compounded by the fact that Christianity, like other sects, participated in specific initiatory rituals which marked converts out as 'outsiders'. Adoption, for Paul, describes these early Christian's conversion but it also a term of conversion-initiation; indeed it is instructive to note the way in which Paul, in the two main adoption pericopes (Gal. 3:26-4:7; Rom. 8:15), mentions baptism alongside adoption.[39] If adoption is a sociological metaphor it is significant that the apostle Paul brings it together with baptism, a 'social expression'[40] of the internalisation of the decision of faith which identifies the new status of the son of God. Rituals can create as well as reflect social reality[41] and baptism, like adoption, is also a boundary-marker – a dramatic enactment of the break with the past which separates the baptizand from the outside world. From Paul's argument in Gal. 4:6 we can deduce that the early ritual prayer/cry 'Abba, Father' at baptism signified the moment the initiate was integrated into the new community/family of God.

III. Adoption and the ekklēsia: God's new family in Galatia[43]

Given the fact that religious conversion can be viewed from the standpoint of a re-socialisation in behaviour[44] and that Paul's adoption term can be viewed from such a perspective, it is appropriate that we pursue how, or in what context, such a re-socialisation takes place. Having discussed this, we will then relate this to Paul's view of community – in this case Galatians – and investigate whether or not it can be understood along the lines of a family/household. But before we investigate how such a process of re-socialisation occurred, we need to reflect on what is meant by basic socialisation.

Continued…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Primary socialisation occurs in the raising of all children through incorporation into family life and society. An integral part of any child's development includes the process of becoming aware of self and establishing one's identity in the family and society. Through time the child grows and becomes aware of and enters new sub-worlds and is confronted with the process of secondary socialisation such as school, friends etc; indeed it is quite often the case that as a child grows in adulthood socialisation becomes more radical with the person experiencing changes to his/her identity and way of life.

Now conversion – in Pauline terminology adoption – as we have already noted is an obvious instance where there is a radical separation from one group and incorporation into another group. More specifically, according to Berger and Luckmann, in order for such a re-socialisation to 'succeed' there needs to exist the proper social conditions, one[45] of which is that the new social setting into which the new convert is received should, as far as possible, replicate the setting of the child's upbringing. In sociological terms, if the conversion is going to continue it will do so in an environment and atmosphere which resembles that of 'a family-like fellowship'.[46] In the words of Berger and Luckmann:

> It is only within the religious community, the ecclesia, that conversion can be effectively maintained. To have a conversion is nothing much. The real thing is to be able to keep on taking it seriously; to retain a sense of plausibility. This is where the religious community comes in. It provides the indispensable plausibility structure for the new reality. In other words, Saul may have become Paul in the aloneness of religious ecstasy, but he could remain Paul only in the context of the Christian community that recognised him as such and confirmed the "new being" in which he located this identity.[47]

It is precisely this kind of familial community which Paul's adoption metaphor evokes and that these early Christians regarded themselves as having entered.[48] Moreover, when we examine Paul's letter to the Galatians we are given an indication of the 'social insecurity'[49] of the Galatian believers whose conversion to Christianity involved not only social but familial dislocation.[50] Having embraced the gospel message, the Galatian Christians had forsaken their former worship of pagan deities (Gal. 4:8-11) which had far-reaching implications in that to sever one's links from 'the worship of family and community deities would entail a serious disruption in one's relationships with family.'[51] Alongside this is the fact that the apostle Paul in this letter expressly underscores the new sense of belonging by identifying the new community as a 'household/family of believers' (oikeioi tes pisteōs, Gal. 6:10).[52] Familial images fill the landscape of this letter and the fact that the apostle Paul is aware of that such a process of re-socialisation has taken place is evident from the internal evidence in which he reminds his readers that he had undergone such an experience himself (cf. Gal. 1:13-16).[53]

Continued…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

This is a family in which God functions as the 'Divine Parent,'[54] a point Paul strikes three times at the very outset of the letter ('Father,' Gal. 1:1, 3, 4) which comes full circle in the adoption pericope ('"Abba", Father', Gal. 4:6).[55] As sons who have been 'adopted by God', Paul's huiothesia term also underscores the sense of community and, as such, has a corporate dimension – 'the adopted child is not an only child'[56] – where 'relatedness itself is valued'.[57] But it is a relatedness one would not normally expect; sonship is all-embracing – 'you are all[58] sons of God through faith in Christ Jesus' (Gal. 3:26), the Son of God (Gal. 1:16; 2:20; 4:5). Given the composition of the Galatian churches this is a quite staggering claim, because under the old economy the title 'sons of God' was exclusively employed of Israel (e.g. Ex. 4:22; Deut. 14:1-2; Is. 1:2-4; Hos. 1:10) and not Gentiles who were merely regarded as 'sinners' (Gal. 2:15). There was no more long- standing racial, religious or sociological division which existed than that between Jew and Gentile. But it is precisely these social barriers, which have been removed, and where adoption, symbolised in (Gal. 3:26-28) by baptism, is more far-reaching than normal Jewish expectations – Gentiles are included as well. Fictive-kinship language is particularly concentrated in the adoption pericope itself (i.e. Gal. 4:1-7) where Paul narrates the story of Israel under law.[59] During this period Israel was like an 'heir' (klēronomos, Gal. 4:1 cf. 4:7) but still a minor (lit. 'infant' nēpios). Despite the fact that Israel was 'lord of all the property' (Gal. 4:1) Israel was in fact no different to a 'slave' (doulos, Gal. 4:1). Until such times as the appointed period of 'guardianship set by the father' is reached the 'heir' is under 'guardians and trustees' (Gal. 4:2). During this era, Israel was under the supervision of a household-supervisor/guardian (paidagōgos, Gal. 3:24-25). But with the climactic unveiling of God's Son (Gal. 4:5) the period of slavery is brought to an end and, not just Israel, but the Gentiles too, are able to enter into the 'full rights as sons' (lit. huiothesia, Gal. 4:5). The pericope is brought to a close by Paul's repeated use of familial terms which serve the purpose of underscoring for the

Continued…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Continued…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Galatians just what has taken place: 'you are no longer a slave (doulos), but a son (huios), and since you are a son (huios), God has also made you an heir' (klēronomos, Gal. 4:7).

If we probe a little further, the parent-child relations between God and this new family bring into play – or bring about[60] – another aspect of family relations, namely, the intrafamilial bonds between siblings. Galatians is a letter which is replete with Paul's favourite familial appellation for the Christian, namely 'brother' (Gal. 1:2, 11; 3:15; 4:12, 28, 31; 5:11, 13; 6:1, 18).[61] This clearly distinguishes them from the 'false brothers' (pseudadelphous, Gal. 2:4) who were in opposition to Paul's message. As brothers, they were expected to give one another 'the right hand of fellowship' (Gal. 2:9) as a sign of the familial bonds between them. In the event of a brother sinning the true measure of consanguinity is manifested in the manner by which a 'brother' is restored: 'you who are spiritual should restore him gently' (Gal. 6:1).[62]

When considered together, the cumulative weight of all these familial metaphors becomes the means by which Paul develops and communicates a Christian theology and pattern of ecclesiology based on the family – a family which to all intents and purposes was to be radical and different. Indeed, there is every reason to believe that Paul, and these early Christians, viewed their adoption into the ekklēsia, i.e. the family of God, as an alternative[63] or in some sense a replacement for their natural families, and that such a view can be sustained in this letter.[64]

Continued…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Abstract

Paul's term huiothesia, 'adoption as sons,' has often been investigated along the more traditional lines of Christology, soteriology etc. However, rarely, if at all, have commentators recognised or acknowledged that this metaphor is an(other) important conversion-initiation term ' best viewed against the ancient Roman socio-legal practice of adoption ' thereby making it a most appropriate term to describe what was happening to the early Pauline Christians who embraced the gospel. Just as adoption in Roman society signified a break with old familial ties and a commitment to a new familia, so conversion, or in Pauline nomenclature 'adoption,' denoted a new allegiance or a re-socialisation by joining the new family of God. But, whereas adoption as social reality caused no conflicting loyalties, in its metaphorical sense, applied to Christian converts, it invariably identified the tensions which existed between the natural and the new spiritual family. Moreover, according to modern sociological theory (i.e. Berger and Luckmann), if such a re-socialisation is to 'succeed,' it will best do so in circumstances where one's primary socialisation took place i.e. a family-like fellowship. In light of this, it is instructive to note that Paul's letter to the Galatians is not only the context where Paul employs his adoption term but is also the locus where he refers to the early Christians as a 'household/family of believers' (Gal. 6:10) thereby indicating the apostle's awareness of adoption as a re-socialisation process (cf. Gal. 1:13-16). This letter is one replete with familial terminology (e.g. 'household-guardian,' 'infant,' 'father,' 'slaves,' 'sons,' 'heirs' etc.), including the central focus on these early Christians as 'adopted sons' (Gal. 3:26-4:7) who probably came to regard the ekklesia, 'the family of God,' as an alternative or replacement for their natural families.[65]

Some Selected Notes:

Continued…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

7 Some scholars regard Greek law as a more relevant socio-legal milieu for our understanding of adoption, but it ought to be pointed out there was no such thing as a coherent body of Greek law which could be consulted because Greek civilisation consisted of city-states, each with its own individual legal system. Such fragmentation meant that there was no one single body of legalised adoption procedures in operation. Furthermore, through time property and not the family became a major consideration in Greek adoption procedures. Adoption may have begun as a device to ensure continuity of the family cult, but it increasingly became more popular as a device to ensure an estate continued within the family. Also, there is no need to consider the OT social background because there is no mention of adoption as a Jewish practice and it is absent from biblical law. Further, it is debatable whether the instances of Abraham's slave Eliezer (Gen. 15: 2-3), Moses (Ex. 2: 10) and Esther (Est. 2: 7) are bona fide cases of adoption and, even if they were, it is instructive to note that they took place on foreign soil where different laws were in operation. Other devices such as polygamy and the levirate marriage obviated the need for adoption in Israelite society. Paul explicitly refers to the nation of Israel as God's adopted son (huiothesia, Rom. 9:4) and any proper understanding of the Old Testament background needs to begin with this text.

8 It is significant that Paul only employs his adoption term in letters to churches which were under Roman rule and law (cf. F. Lyall, Slaves, Citizens, Sons: Legal Metaphors in the Epistles [Zondervan: Grand Rapids, 1984], 82-3). Moreover, E. M. Lassen ('The Roman Family: Ideal and Metaphor', in Early Christian Families: Social Reality and Metaphor [Routledge: London, 1997], 103-20) clearly demonstrates how, at the beginning of the Christian era, the Roman family – as ideal and metaphor – had a remarkably strong impact on society. More important, Christianity 'grew up' in this general social milieu, hence making familial metaphors – including that of adoption – readily accessible and meaningful but also, at times, contentious to the Roman way of life (see later discussion).

9 Commentators rarely, if at all, recognise the fact that adoption is a conversion term. That this is so is clear from the two main contexts where it is employed. In Gal. 3:26-4:7 Paul mentions adoption alongside the initiatory rite of baptism. In the case of Rom. 8:15, most scholars (e.g. J. M. Scott, 'Adoption, Sonship', in G. F. Hawthorne et al. (ed.), Dictionary of Paul and his Letters (Downers Grove/Leicester: InterVarsity Press, 1993, 17) view the phrase 'you received a Spirit of "adoption as sons" as recalling or referring back to conversion/baptism (see later discussion). Further, as W. A. Meeks (The Moral World of the First Christians [London: SPCK, 1986], 13) points out, the early believers employed an array of metaphorical nomenclature to describe what it meant to become a believer: 'The Christians could speak of their initiation variously as a dying and rising with Christ,as a second birth, as adoption. . ..' (emphasis added).

Continued…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

11 J. A. Crook, Law and Life of Rome, 98. Indeed to speak of 'the Roman family' may sound presumptuous as if one sterotype existed. R. Saller ('Familia, Domus, and the Roman Conception of Family', Phoenix 38 [1984], 336-55) has demonstrated that the Romans had no term equivalent to 'father-mother-triad of the "nuclear family". To be sure, the nuclear family existed but it 'does not seem to have functioned as a social unit in isolation, and therefore, it had no nomenclature' ; see C. Osiek, 'The Family in Early Christianity: "Family Values" Revisited', CBQ 58 (1996), 1-24; P. Lampe, '"Family" in Church and Society of New Testament Times', Affirmation [Union Theological Seminary in Virginia] 5 (1992), 1-20.

13 There were, in antiquity, different kinds of adoption procedures (e.g. adoption of relatives, adoption between agnates etc.) but the normal working definition of adoption is the bringing of someone from outside the family group and making him legally part of it; see J. F. Gardner, Family and Familia in Roman Law and Life (Clarendon Press: Oxford, 1998) esp. ch. 2 'Into the Familia: The Practice of Adoption'.

17 Adoption was practised more by Roman aristocracy and was less likely among the lower classes given the fact that the latter 'had little property to bequeath, and little need for formal patria potestas' (see B. Rawson 'Children in the Roman Familia', in B. Rawson (ed.), The Family in Ancient Rome: New Perspectives (Croom Helm: London and Sydney, 1986), 196; M. Horvat ('Les aspects sociaux de l'adrogatio et de l'adoption à Rome', in Studi in onore di Guiseppe Grosso, [Giappichelli: Torino, 1974] vol. VI, 45-53) also writes, 'L'adoption fut alors pratiquée par les riches familles romaines, parce que les pauvres paysans oppressés par les dettes n'avaient pas besoin ni de l'adrogation ni de l'adoption' (53).

18 M. Corbier, ('Divorce and Adoption as Familial Strategies (Le Divorce et l'adoption "en plus")', in B. Rawson (ed) Marriage, Divorce and Children in Ancient Rome [Clarendon Press: Oxford, 1991], 63) writes, 'In contrast to adoption at the end of the eighteenth and in the nineteenth century, it was not conceived as a humanitarian solution to the large-scale abandonment of children. . .. Neither, in contrast to contemporary adoption, was it a standard response to a couple's sterility.'

21 A. Berger and B. Nicholas ('Adoptio', 9) write, 'The effect of both adoptio and adrogatio was to place the adopted person for all legal purposes in the same position as if he had been a natural child in the potestas of the adopter. The adopted son took his adoptive father's name and rank. He acquired rights of succession on death in his new family and lost all such rights as he had in his old family.'

Continued…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

29 This stern authority of the Roman father in the late Republic must be viewed alongside the new,benign picture, which has recently emerged. Recent studies and the primary evidence both depict fathers in the ancient world as capable of manifesting paternal affection; see S. Dixon, 'The Sentimental Ideal of the Roman Family', in Marriage, Divorce and Children in Ancient Rome B. Rawson (ed.) (Clarendon Press; Oxford, 1991), 99-113; E. Eyben, 'Fathers and Sons', in ibid., 114-143.

30 Although churches, in many instances, began with the conversion of the paterfamilias (followed by the rest of his household), this was not always the case (e.g. 1 Cor. 7:13).

42 A. J. Malherbe, Paul and the Thessalonians: The Philosophic Tradition of Pastoral Care (Philadelphia: Fortress Press, 1987), 49, states 'The baptismal language in Gal.3:26-4:7 represents the convert's initiation into the Christian community as an adoption by God through which the convert is admitted into the new family. . .. Baptism thus consciously brought about a change in social relationships as well as self-understanding, in both of which the Christian community were contrasted with "outsiders"'. W. A. Meeks (Origins of Christian Morality, 49) also writes 'The formulas of their baptismal ritual proclaimed that they had taken off their "old human" and put on "the new", that the old connections had been replaced by a new family of the children of God'; idem., 'The Image of the Androgyne: Some Uses of a Symbol in Earliest Christianity', HR 13 (1974), 165-208.

43 Whilst we are addressing the issue of what it means to be adopted into God's family, there are other ways of looking at family relations in this letter. For example, Gal. 3:16 is a pivotal text which Paul uses to develop the point that the Galatians through Christ, the seed of Abraham, are also sons (Gal. 3:7) and seed of Abraham (Gal. 3:29). Again, Paul identifies himself as parent to his Galatian children (Gal. 4:19-20). And again, the Galatians are referred to as children of the promise made to Sarah (Gal. 4:21-31); cf. P. S. Esler 'Family Imagery and Christian Identity in Gal. 5:13 to 6:10', in H. Moxnes (ed.), Constructing Early Christian Families: Family as Social Reality and Metaphor (Routledge; London, 1997), 121-149.

Continued…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

48 T. Smail, The Forgotten Father: Rediscovering the Heart of the Christian Gospel (London: Hodder and Stoughton, 1986), 146, states in this regard, 'The church is not God's incarnate Son, but the family of his adopted sons who are the body of Christ'. Sandnes, (The New Family, 14) rightly recommends 'that ecclesiology should be seen from the standpoint. . . of a family'. He also states: 'there is a firm basis for saying that in Gal. 3:28 Paul is depicting the family of God. . .. this is proved by [the] related Pauline sayings [in] Gal. 4:1-7' (p. 78). It is also worth mentioning here the debate concerning the importance of the metaphor of family vis-à-vis our understanding of Pauline ecclesiology. Is it the root or the controlling metaphor? In our view, it is striking to note that of all the ecclesiological metaphors that Paul had at his disposal (e.g. body, building, etc.) the most pervasive, across the Pauline corpus, is that of the family. An equally contentious point among scholars is how we are to understand the structure of the early Christian communities? – should they be viewed in patriarchal or egalitarian terms? My present research, in 1 Thessalonians, is in this area.

59 I am fully aware of the complexities of a passage like Gal. 4:1-7 where Paul compresses many ideas into such a short passage and about which commentators differ – for example, the term huiothesia is, at least, a more complex term for Jews who were already in some sense sons (cf. Barclay, Obeying the Truth, 96-7). My main aim here is to emphasise the prevalence of familial nomenclature in 3:26-4:7. Regarding our hermeneutic of 4:1-7, most commentators (e.g. J. D. G. Dunn, The Epistle to the Galatians BNTC [Peabody, MA: Hendrickson], 1993, 210ff.) accept the fact that Paul in vv1-2 is employing an illustration which he goes on to apply in vv.3-7. However, J. M. Scott (Adoption as Sons: An Exegetical Investigation into the Background of ΥΙΟΘΕΣΙΑ [Tubingen: J. C. B. Mohr {P. Siebeck, 1992}], chpt. 3) has recently argued that vv. 1-2 refer to Israel's redemption from Egyptian bondage as a type of the eschatological redemption wrought by Christ, the second Moses (vv. 3-7).

60 Brotherly relations are a consequence of being the children of God. For example, C. A. Wanamaker, The Epistles to the Thessalonians: A Commentary on the Greek Text (Exeter: Paternoster/Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1990), 147, writes: 'As the metaphorical children of the one father Christians were themselves brothers and sister who were to behave toward one another as family members'; W. A. Meeks (Moral World, 129) also states, 'in the Christian community every member was a brother or sister, for all were 'children of God'.

61 According to B. Witherington (The Paul Quest, 77) 'Paul found himself part of a new family whose members he called brothers and sisters'. As far as this aspect of the brotherhood is concerned, it is interesting to note that in two out of the three conversion narratives (concerning Paul) in the book of Acts (i.e. 9:17; 22:13) some of the very first words which the apostle heard from members (i.e. Ananias) of this new Christian community were words of familial or fraternal welcome, 'Brother, Saul'.

Continued…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

62 This is an interesting text because, despite the fact that many scholars argue for an essentially egalitarian approach to all brotherly relations, this text would seem to imply that within the brotherhood there were some brothers who over others (i.e. 'you who are spiritual', 6:1) and entrusted with the task of correction/restoration ('correct/restore him gently', 6:1). Hence there may be room for perceiving some form of hierarchy within the Galatian brotherhood (cf. also 1 Thess. 5:12-15); see John M. G. Barclay, 'Paul, Philemon and the Dilemma of Christian Slave-Ownership', NTS 37 (1991), 161-86 esp. 182.

63 N. T. Wright, The New Testament and the People of God (London: SPCK, 1992), 448, writes, 'The common life of the church. . . seems to have functioned from the first as an alternative family' (emphasis added).

64 The 'Church's Decade of the Family' has provoked a debate as to whether the natural family (i.e. 'God made the family before he made the church') or church-family should have the Christian's prior allegiance; see R. Clapp, Families at Crossroads: Beyond Traditional and Modern Options (InterVarsity Press: Illinois, 1993), who challenges the former viewpoint, and Stephen C. Barton, The Family in Theological Perspective (Edinburgh: T & T Clark, 1996, ch. 1), for a critique of Clapp.

Note:

υἱοθεσία = huiothesia, 'adoption as sons,'

Return to the beginning of*: Adoption

Adoption continued…*

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Adopted as Sons: The Missing Piece in Pauline Soteriology by Trevor Burke (2008)
https://www.academia.edu/people/search?utf8=%E2%9C%93&q=adopted+sons [Recommended]

Excerpt:

…

[Paraphrase] Adoption is another important term that adds to and enriches Pauls understanding of salvation precisely because the apostle is drawing from an entirely different conceptual field, that of the ancient family. Adoption stands apart from these other expressions and is not, for example, a synonym for justification nor is it to be subsumed or included as part of this term for any of the others (i.e., redemption, reconciliation, etc.).

To the contrary, Pauls adoption metaphor elucidates aspects of salvation that are different and are not found in any of the above expressions. For example, while justification connotes the language of penal law and acquittal, redemption the language of the slave market and freedom, reconciliation the language of friendship and the removal of enmity; adoption connotes the more intimate language of family and the transference of authority from one [father head of family] to another [father head of family]. Additionally, while the first three metaphors approach salvation from an objective viewpoint (i.e., what God has done for mankind), adoption looks at salvation from a different perspective: the subjective, the experiential or relational, and what happens to the believer as a result of Gods saving intervention.

Adoption, therefore, provides us with another—"a different lens"—through which to view Pauls understanding of salvation, thereby deepening our understanding of what God in Christ has achieved for sinful humankind and the many blessings, privileges and responsibilities we inherit.

The original text begins on next page…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

It is my view that, in addition to these images, adoption is another important metaphor that adds to and enriches Paul's understanding of soteriology precisely because the apostle is drawing from an entirely different conceptual field, that of the ancient family. Adoption stands apart from these other expressions and is not, for example, a synonym for justification nor is it to be subsumed or included as part of this term or any of the above mentioned expressions. To the contrary, Paul's υἱοθεσία metaphor elucidates aspects of salvation that are different and are not found in any of the above expressions. For example, whilst justification connotes the language of penal law and acquittal,[11] redemption the language of the slave market and freedom,[12] reconciliation the language of friendship and the removal of enmity,[13] adoption connotes the more intimate language of the family and the notion of transference from one οἶκος to another οἶκος. Additionally, whilst the first three metaphors approach salvation from a more objective viewpoint—that is to say, what God has done for humankind—adoption looks at soteriology from a different perspective, the subjective, the experiential or relational, and what happens to the believer as a result of God's saving intervention.[14] Adoption, therefore, provides us with another—"a different lens"[15]—through which to view Paul's understanding of salvation, thereby deepening our understanding of what God in Christ has achieved for sinful humankind.

Continued…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Certainly I am not suggesting that adoption is the most important metaphor but—to change the metaphor—υἱοθεσία is another soteriological arrow in the quiver of the apostle Paul which he had at his disposal.[16] It is a mistake of some proportion to imagine that one single metaphor can fully exhaust or delineate Paul's many-sided understanding of salvation. So, in order that we might understand the salvific ramifications at work in Paul's adoption metaphor we need to lay some ground-work by briefly discussing the background and context upon which he was drawing.[17] It is to this aspect that we now briefly turn our attention.

...

Conclusion

Traditionally, Paul's understanding of soteriology has been discussed using the metaphors of justification, redemption and reconciliation. However, such descriptions have truncated the apostle Paul's kaleidoscopic view of salvation; indeed, treatments of these three metaphors have sometimes misconstrued and misunderstood another often overlooked metaphor—unique to the letters of Paul—which adds to his view of soteriology, adopted as son(s) (υἱοθεσία, Rom 8:15, 23; 9:4; Gal 4:5; Eph 1:5). Rightly understood, Paul's metaphor of adoption complements these other soteriological terms as it draws from a different source field, the Roman family in antiquity. Unlike other metaphors, however, adoption especially emphasizes the subjective, relational side of salvation, where the focus is upon what happens to the Christian.

Continued…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

When Paul employs his metaphor of adoption he does so within a Trinitarian framework where υἱοθεσία is a salvific action of the divine family—Father, Son, and Holy Spirit. Regarding the former, adoption for Paul is primarily and profoundly a paternal initiative of God the new paterfamilias where a son is transferred from an alien family into God's new household. The soteriological consequences of such an action included the receiving of a new name, status and inheritance equal to the heir of the family. For Paul, the salvific act of adoption is also inextricably linked to the Son of God who through an act of son-making—described in Gal 4:5 as a redemption from slavery unto adoption—is God's conduit in salvation. We also observed how Paul uses his υἱοθεσία expression in letters not only comprising Jews but also Gentiles who have been converted from their pagan past. In light of the latter, adoption functions as a means of reminding believers (8:12–17) that their incorporation into the divine family necessarily involves a gradual resocialization in salvation. That is to say, adoption brings the moral responsibility where Spirit-led-sons-of-God (8:14) are expected to put to death the sin in their lives (v. 13b) and to acquire new attitudes and codes of conduct commensurate of those who now belong to God's new household.

Continued…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Finally, adoption connotes the notion of transference and is used by Paul to refer to individual salvation. In Rom 8:18–25, however, Paul creatively and innovatively takes this metaphor and employs it in a highly unusual manner as he describes God's salvific plans for the future unfolding of the material and human orders. In this explicitly eschatological and apocalyptic passage with a distinctly familial flavor, Paul delineates the intervening period between the present and the future as he brings both anthropocentric and cosmic aspects together. Significantly, Paul describes the future unfolding of events for the inanimate and human orders using two different metaphors: for the former he employs the imagery of natural or biological birth (vv. 19–22) and for the latter he uses a different metaphor, that of adoption (vv. 23–25), without ever blurring the distinction between them. Whilst in Rom 8:18–25 Paul's comments regarding the inanimate order need to be recovered, the imagery of natural birth which he uses to describe this is set aside and replaced by the more important metaphor of adoption. By not following through with the imagery of natural birth Paul wishes to show that the glorious outcome of the material order is wholly dependent upon the human order. In all this, the cosmos plays a passive role and is wholly reliant on the climactic unveiling of God's adopted sons and daughters (v. 23) who live in the period between the now (8:15) and the not yet (8:23) of final salvation and through whom the transformation of the cosmos will also come about.

Selected Notes:

Continued…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

[20] Neither ancient Greek, Hebrew nor Latin has words that directly translate the English word "family" or "house." The Greek words οἶκος and οἰκία and the Hebrew בית and Latin domus can all refer to the physical building as well as the "household," including the material goods and the slaves. In the English-speaking world the word "house" can likewise have an extended meaning such as in the case of the expression "House of Windsor" so that the word can be used in different ways; see H. Moxnes, "Introduction," in Halvor Moxnes (ed.), Constructing Early Christian Families: Family as Reality and Metaphor (London: Routledge, 1997), 21.

[21] It is unlikely that the procedure of adrogation is behind Paul's use of his υἱοθεσία metaphor for at least two reasons. First, according to this form of adoption, the familia from which the son was taken ceased to exist; secondly, adrogation was geographically restricted to Rome itself; see W. W. Buckland, A Textbook of Roman Law from Augustus to Justinian (Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1963), 124–28.

[22] See A. Berger, B. Nicholas and S. M. Tregarri, "Adoption," in S. Hornblower and A. Spawforth (eds.), The Oxford Classical Dictionary (Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2003), 12–13, who comment that the result of adoption "was to place the adopted son for all legal purposes in the same position as if he had been a natural child in the potestas of the adopter. The adopted son took his adoptive father's name and rank. He acquired rights of succession on death in his new family and lost all such rights as he had in his old family." For the most recent defense of the Roman legal adoption procedure see now Sam Tsang, From Slaves to Sons: A New Rhetoric Analysis on Paul's Slave Metaphors in His Letter to the Galatians (Studies in Biblical Literature 81; New York: Peter Lang, 2005), 54–57.

[30] For an in depth discussion of the relationship between adoption and honor, see Burke, Adopted into God's Family, 152–76.

[31] Peter O'Brien states in connection with Gal 1:6: "The καλέω word group is often used by the apostle to describe God's historical call of men and women through the gospel to salvation"; see "'Was Paul Converted?" in D. A. Carson, Peter O'Brien and Mark A. Seifrid (eds.), Variegated Nomism: The Paradoxes of Paul (vol. 2; Tübingen/Grand Rapids: Mohr Siebeck/Baker Academic, 2004), 365.

[32] Most scholars agree that Paul is using an illustration in vv. 1–2 which he then goes on to apply in vv. 3–7. See Brendan Byrne, "Review of Adoption As Sons: An Exegetical Investigation into the Background of HUIOTHESIA in the Pauline Corpus," JTS 44 (1994): 288–94; John L. White, The Apostle of God: Paul and the Promise of Abraham (Peabody, Mass.: Hendrickson, 1999), 185ff.; Peter Balla, The Child-Parent Relationship in the New Testament and Its Environment (WUNT 55; Tübingen: Mohr Siebeck, 2002), 189; J. C. Walters, "Paul, Adoption and Inheritance," in J. Paul Sampley (ed.), Paul in the Greco-Roman World: A Handbook (Harrisburg: Trinity Press International, 2003), 42–76;

Continued…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Burke, Adopted into God's Family, 55–58, 85 n. 83. Thus, James M. Scott is very much in the minority when he tries to set this passage within the framework of Egyptian typology. Scott's singularly Jewish thesis not only runs counter to Paul's role as apostle to the Gentiles but also the apostle's use of Exodus typology is not a primary theme in his theology. Indeed, the whole sweep of Paul's argument rests on the period prior to Egyptian bondage rather then the era afterwards; see J. M. Scott, Adopted as Sons of God: An Exegetical Investigation into the Background of ΥΙΟΘΕΣΙΑ in the Pauline Corpus (Tübingen: Mohr Siebeck, 1992).

Regarding Romans Ephesians 1:5, 2:2, cf. 5:6

[37] The New International Version misses these familial descriptions in its translation.

[38] At least two commentators follow this line of interpretation. E. K. Simpson and F. F. Bruce, Commentary on the Epistles to the Ephesians and the Colossians: The English Text with Introduction, Exposition and Notes (Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1957), 27, describes the changes that take place as a result of adoption in the following manner: "It transfers the enfranchised soul from the serfdom of Satan's slave-camp to the family circle of God's favour." Harold W. Hoehner, Ephesians: An Exegetical Commentary (Grand Rapids: Baker Academic, 2002), 197, "[T]he saints were under the tyrant the devil who was their slave-master . . . In contrast, the saints have a new father . . ."

[58] Dunn, Theology of the Apostle Paul, 643. Although Romans is not usually viewed as a locus for Pauline morals, G. Bornkamm (Paul [London: Hodder & Stoughton, 1977], 156) has pointed out that "Rom. 8 deals expressly with the counter movements to the thoughts and endeavours of the 'flesh' . . . and c learly o utlines Paul's 'e thics.'"

Regarding Rom. 8:12-17

[54] I am in agreement with I. Ninan who comments: "the pneuma is not the principal issue that is discussed: rather it is subservient to spelling out the eschatological sonship of Christians"; see "Jesus as Son of God: An Examination of the Background of 'Son of God' in Paul's Christology with Particular Reference to Rom. 8" (unpublished Ph.D. thesis, University of Coventry, 1994), 316.

[58] Dunn, Theology of the Apostle Paul, 643. Although Romans is not usually viewed as a locus for Pauline morals, G. Bornkamm (Paul [London: Hodder & Stoughton, 1977], 156) has pointed out that "Rom. 8 deals expressly with the counter movements to the thoughts and endeavours of the 'flesh' . . . and c learly o utlines Paul's 'e thics.'"

Continued…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

[63] Cranfield, Romans, 395. Sinclair B. Ferguson, The Christian Life: A Doctrinal Introduction (London: Hodder and Stoughton, 1981), 88, also comments: "the leading of which Paul speaks has a very clear and definite content here. It is connected intimately with the help the Spirit is said to give in verse 13, to 'put to death the misdeeds of the body'. The guidance the Spirit provides is that of clear-cut opposition to sin. To claim to experience the ministry of the Spirit of adoption and yet to dally with sin is to be utterly deceived. The Spirit of adoption is the same Person as the Spirit of Holiness of whom Paul had spoken earlier (Rom. 1:4). His presence brings a new attitude to sin" (emphasis added).

[64] I am unable to concur with Francis Lyall's statement: "in Romans 8:15, Ephesians 1:5, and Galatians 4:5 the metaphor points to the selection of believers as sons: their justification is their entry into sonship, and from the point of view of His guidance and authority (in legal terms, under his potestas), irrespective of how they actually live"; see Slaves, Citizens, Sons, 68. If as Lyall rightly agues the Roman background is in view, it mattered a great deal to the reputation of the father and the family name as regards how sons and adopted sons conducted themselves and this is no less true or important in the spiritual realm. David deSilva, An Introduction to the New Testament: Contexts, Methods & Ministry (Downers Grove: InterVarsity Press, 2004), 143, states: "nothing seems to drive New Testament ethics quite so much as kinship topics, from showing oneself a true child of God by embodying characteristics of God…(the motif "like parents, like child")…"

Re: Romans 8:17

[73] One interesting lexical point about this verse is that the Greek does not explicitly refer to Christ's suffering even though most English translations (KJV, RSV, NIV, and NRSV) include the phrase "with him" (i.e., "with Christ"). The Greek verb (συμπάσχω) which Paul employs is only found in one other place in the New Testament (1 Cor 12:26) where it refers to the sufferings of other people as opposed to Jesus Christ. However, "with him" is inferred from what Paul states in the previous sentence by using the compound word συγκληρονόμοι "co-heirs with Christ." Thus, W. Michaelis is right to conclude "the συν- in συμπάσχω has in view a relation to Christ"; see "συμπάσχω," in TDNT, 5:935.

[81] The language of "adoption" is sometimes understood to describe Christ and the new phase of sonship (e.g., Rom. 1:3–4) he entered into by virtue of his resurrection from the dead; see Scott, Adoption as Sons of God, 237–44. But in Rom 1:3–4 the more general term υἱός is employed twice (vv. 3–4) to describe the sonship of Christ and not the term υἱοθεσία which is only and always reserved for believers in the Pauline corpus. For this latter view, see Burke, Adopted into God's Family, 102–107.

Continued…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

[84] David B. Garner, Adopted in Christ (unpublished PhD thesis, Westminster Theological Seminary, 2002), 53. See also Jan Lambrecht, "Brief Anthropological Reflections on 2 Corinthians 4:6–5:10," in Burke and Elliott (eds.), Paul and the Corinthians, 259–66, where he similarly argues that Paul expected a glorified, spiritual body at the resurrection, which also implies a somatic existence.

[85] Christ's suffering is, of course, not the same as that of the Christian's. The theme of suffering in the Pauline corpus has been a much neglected theme; see now L. Ann Jervis, At the Heart of the Gospel: Suffering in the Earliest Christian Message (Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 2007). Jervis's discussion is pastorally sensitive and borne out of the crucible of personal experience.

[86] The participle ἔχοντες can be understood concessively (i.e., "they groan despite having the Spirit") but it is better to understand it in a causal sense ("they groan because they have the Spirit") since the very presence of the Spirit causes the tension for God's children as they long for the consummation of their υἱοθεσία.

[90] The phrase τοῦ σώματος should be taken as an objective genitive (i.e., the body is in need of redemption) rather than ablatival (i.e., redemption from the body).

[91] Dyer, "Paul's Salvation," states in reference to these wider ecclesial and cosmic themes with which Paul deals: "Romans 8 clearly show that he understands God's transformative work in Christ to extend far beyond just human salvation…there can be no doubting that Paul also understood it to refer to a process already underway between the Creator and all creation" (no pagination).

Note:

υἱοθεσία = huiothesia, 'adoption as sons,'

Return to the beginning of*: Adoption

Adoption continued…*

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Adoption Nuggets (4): Dipping Into Historical Theology (2) (2013)

http://www.fromhisfullness.com/tag/n-t-wright/

Excerpt:

Obscured the claim may be that the history of adoption is a history of neglect, but the neglect is no less real for its obscuring. We're all familiar with situations which appear rosier at first sight than upon closer inspection. There's the wall paper that hides the cracks, and the fresh paint covering up the graffiti. Strip the wall paper or apply the paint stripper and a different picture of the wall emerges.

Neither the Spirit's witness to the believer's adoption (Gal. 4:6; Rom. 8:15) nor the relevant lexicon entries were intended to cover up the neglect of adoption. All the same, a very different picture of the church's appropriation of the biblical language of adoption emerges once we get beyond their first impressions. The neglect which dominates the hidden picture can be explained by four tendencies.

First, there's the almost or entire omission of adoption by some theologians (e.g., the apostolic fathers, Jonathan Edwards, Charles Hodge, W. G. T. Shedd, Thomas Chalmers, George Hill, William Cunningham, Abraham Kuyper, Louis Berkhof, and G. C. Berkouwer). These tend to have written of God by means of names or descriptions other than "Father," and have afforded his adopting grace no notable mention in their theological discourse. Nor do they explain the omission when writing profusely about regeneration (metaphorically depicted as the new birth), justification, or sanctification.

Secondly, there are those who mention adoption, but in a way largely hidden in their writings. It's probable that John Calvin has a more robust understanding of adoption than anyone other than Paul, and yet his decision not to allot adoption a single chapter or section in any of his writings that we know of has been entirely misunderstood. Such is the breadth of Calvin's redemptive-historical understanding of adoption and its close affinity to the believer's union with Christ that he chose to pepper allusions to adoption throughout his writings rather than to try and squeeze it into a chapter or two. The Puritans by contrast were the first to include a chapter on adoption in a confession of faith (WCF 12), but did little to expand its implications throughout the rest of their theology. The same holds true of the place of adoption in their writings. Their 1200 pages on adoption (Beeke) are very contained and tend to be overshadowed, for instance, by their 30,000 titles on church government.

Third, among those mentioning adoption there has been a tendency, whether witting or not, to reduce the scope of Paul's adoption model. Whereas Calvin expounded adoption in light of its relevance to both the history and application of salvation (historia and ordo salutis), the Puritans with few exceptions limited their expositions of adoption to its application. Constrained by their method of neatly systematizing the data of Scripture to run together the filial language of John and Paul, they succeeded in ensuring adoption a place in their understanding of the order of salvation but fell short of doing justice to the redemptive-historical scope of Paul's adoption model. Others working from this reduced understanding of adoption took the further step of subsuming adoption under justification, claiming the former merely completed the latter (e.g., Turretin, Dabney, Bavinck). Others claimed that adoption was more like a capstone sitting astride justification and regeneration to ensure their inseparability (e.g., A. A. Hodge, Martyn Lloyd-Jones).

Fourthly, there are those who seem to have deliberately excised adoption from their theology. It is surely no coincidence that John Wesley took out every reference to adoption from his revision of the Westminster Shorter Catechism. Adoption likely suffered the consequences of Wesley's attempt to circumvent the doctrine of predestination. Nor does it appear coincidental that the Scottish laird Thomas Erskine of Linlathen dropped his references to adoption along the seventeen year route he took from his early Calvinism to his later Universalism. The jury currently is still out on how N.T. Wright could redefine justification as God's declaration of membership of the covenant family with scarcely any reference to adoption. His recent rejoinder to Kevin Vanhoozer that adoption is a central idea in his work raises more question than it answers. What is clear, as in the case of Erskine before him, Prof. Wright consistently translates Paul's use of huiothesia in Galatians and Romans as "sonship" rather than "adoption." Without this unwarranted change of translation (See James M. Scott), N. T. Wright's creation of a new mega-model of justification out of the biblical data covering justification and adoption would not have been possible. Its thirty year lifespan has only been possible, I suggest, because of the deep-seated neglect of adoption which has left N.T. Wright's critics unable to see that the key to the dismantling of the redefinition lies not in the classic Protestant doctrine of justification but in the recovery of a freshly biblically-sensitive understanding of adoption.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Here We Are, Slaves to This Day:
A Review of "Exile: A Conversation with N.T. Wright" Edited by James M. Scott https://tabletalktheology.com/2017/10/11/here-we-are-slaves-to-this-day-a-review-of-exile-a-conversation-with-n-t-wright-edited-by-james-m-scott/

[Read…]

Engaging the Bible in Mission Theology: Scholarship, James M. Scott
REVIEW: James M. Scott, Paul and the Nations: The Old Testament and Jewish Background of Paul's Mission to the Nations with Special Reference to the Destination of Galatians
https://bibleandmission.blogspot.com/2013/05/engaging-bible-in-mission-theology_17.html

[Read…]

Westminster Confession of Faith
https://opc.org/wcf.html#Chapter_12

CHAPTER 12
Of Adoption
1. All those that are justified, God vouchsafeth, in and for his only Son Jesus Christ, to make partakers of the grace of adoption, by which they are taken into the number, and enjoy the liberties and privileges of the children of God, have his name put upon them, receive the Spirit of adoption, have access to the throne of grace with boldness, are enabled to cry, Abba, Father, are pitied, protected, provided for, and chastened by him, as by a father: yet never cast off, but sealed to the day of redemption; and inherit the promises, as heirs of everlasting salvation.

http://files1.wts.edu/uploads/pdf/about/WCF_30.pdf [PDF]

http://www.reformed.org/documents/wcf_with_proofs/

Westminster Shorter Catechism
https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Westminster_Shorter_Catechism http://www.reformed.org/documents/wsc/index.html?_top=http://www.reformed.org/documents/WSC_frames.html

http://shortercatechism.com/

Return to the beginning of*: Adoption

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Children vs. Sons By Charles H. Welch

Several Greek words are translated 'children' in the A.V. New Testament.

Brephos, a new-born babe, Acts 7:19.
Nepios, an infant not having the power of speech (Gal. 4:3; Eph. 4:14).
Paidion a little or young lad (Matt. 14:21).
Paidarion a very little lad (Matt. 11:16).
Pais a lad, boy, servant or maid (Matt. 2:16).
Teknon a child, one that has been born a child whether son or daughter (Matt. 2:18).
Huios, a son, a male (Matt. 5:9).

The two words with which we are here particularly concerned are teknon and huios. Unfortunately the A.V. have not been quite consistent in their rendering giving us 'child' in seventy-seven occurrences and 'son' in twenty-one, as translations of teknon, and translating huios 'child' fifty times, 'son' 120, 'Son' 210 times. It is evident even from this survey, that teknon means 'a child' as distinct from huios which means 'a son', but there are passages where this distinction should have been made clear where precision is dulled by the translator. For example where John 1:12 reads 'gave them power to become sons of God' it should read 'children'. So also that well-known passage in 1 John 3:1,2, 'that we should be called the sons of God', 'now are we the sons of God' must be altered to read 'children of God'. John uses the word huios twentyfour times, but never of a believer.

It is Paul whose ministry speaks of the believer as a 'son' (Rom. 8:14,19), and the reader should remember when reading Galatians 3:7,26 to translate 'sons' here also. John's ministry brings the believer into the family of faith, Paul takes him further and gives him the position of a son. This distinction will be better understood if the article on Adoption be read. Israel as compared with the nations have the place of 'sons' although the phrase 'the children of Israel' has become so commonly used that we do not suggest that we should attempt to alter it, only that we should remember, that where the A.V. reads 'children of Israel', the Greek uses the word huios 'son', remembering too the inspired consequence 'if a son, then an heir of God'. It should also be remembered that all 'sons' must be 'children', but that all children need not necessarily be sons. Neither Peter, James nor John use the word huios of a believer, that is the exclusive testimony of the ministry entrusted to Paul.

Return to*: Welch's Adoption Article

Jewish Encyclopedia: Adoption (Jewish Perspective)

http://www.jewishencyclopedia.com/articles/852-adoption

Encyclopedia Judaica: Adoption (Jewish Perspective)

https://www.jewishvirtuallibrary.org/adoption

Excerpt:

(A) GENESIS 15:2–3. Being childless, Abram complains that *Eliezer , his servant, will be his heir. Since in the ancient Near East only relatives, normally sons, could inherit, Abram had probably adopted, or contemplated adopting, Eliezer. This passage is illuminated by the ancient Near Eastern practice of childless couples adopting a son, sometimes a slave, to serve them in their lifetime and bury and mourn them when they die, in return for which the adopted son is designated their heir. If a natural child should subsequently be born to the couple, he would be chief heir and the adopted son would be second to him.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

(D) GENESIS 48:5–6. Near the end of his life Jacob, recalling God's promise of Canaan for his descendants, announces to Joseph: "Your two sons who were born to you … before I came to you in Egypt, shall be mine; Ephraim and Manasseh shall be mine, as Reuben and Simeon are"; subsequent sons of Joseph will (according to the most common interpretation of the difficult v. 6), for the purposes of inheritance, be reckoned as sons of Ephraim and Manasseh. In view of the context – note particularly that grandsons, not outsiders, are involved – many believe that this adoption involves inheritance alone, and is not an adoption in the full sense. (M. David compares the classical adoptio mortis causa.) This belief is strengthened by the almost unanimous view that this episode is intended etiologically to explain why the descendants of Joseph held, in historical times, two tribal allotments, the territories of Ephraim and Manasseh.

(F) EXODUS 2:10. "Moses became her [= Pharaoh's daughter's] son." Some, however, interpret this as fosterage.

(G) LEVITICUS 18:9. A "sister… born outside the household" could mean an adopted sister, but most commentators interpret it as an illegitimate sister or one born of another marriage of the mother.

(J) ESTHER 2:7, 15. Mordecai adopted his orphaned cousin Hadassah. (This case, too, is taken by some as rather one of fosterage.) This possible case of adoption among Jews living under Persian rule is paralleled by a case among the Jews living in the Persian military garrison at Elephantine, Egypt, in the fifth century C.E. (E. Kraeling, The Brooklyn Museum Aramaic Papyri (1953), no. 8).

(K) EZRA 2:61 (= Nehemiah 7:63). One or more priests married descendants of Barzillai the Gileadite and "were called by their name." This may imply adoption into the family of Barzillai.

(L) EZRA 10:44. Several Israelites married foreign women. The second half of the verse, unintelligible as it stands, ends with "and they placed/established children." S. Feigin, on the basis of similar Greek expressions and textual emendation, viewed this as a case of adoption. Since the passage is obviously corrupt (the Greek text of Esdras reads differently), no conclusions can be drawn from it, though Feigin's interpretation is not necessarily ruled out.

(M) I CHRONICLES 2:35–41. Since the slave Jarha (approximately a contemporary of David according to the genealogy) married his master's daughter, he was certainly manumitted and, quite likely, was adopted by his master; otherwise, his descendants would not have been listed in the Judahite genealogy.

(N) In addition to the above possible cases, one might see a sort of posthumous adoption in the ascription of the first son born of the levirate marriage (Gen. 38:8–9; Deut. 25:6; Ruth 4) to the dead brother. The child is possibly to be called "A son of B [the deceased]"; in this way he preserves the deceased's name (Deut. 25:6–7; Ruth 4:5) and presumably inherits his property.

Of the most plausible cases above, two (A, D) are from the Patriarchal period, one reflects Egyptian practice (F), and another the practice of Persian Jews of the Exilic or post-Exilic period (J). From the pre-Exilic period there is a possible case alleged by the Chronicler to have taken place in the time of David (M), one or two other remotely possible cases (G) and (K), the latter from the late pre-Exilic or Exilic period) and the "posthumous adoption" involved in levirate marriage (N). The evidence for adoption in the pre-Exilic period is thus meager. The possibility that adoption was practiced in this period cannot be excluded, especially since contemporary legal documents are lacking. Nevertheless, it seems that if adoption played any role at all in Israelite family institutions, it was an insignificant one. It may be that the tribal consciousness of the Israelites did not favor the creation of artificial family ties and that the practice of polygamy obviated some of the need for adoption. For the post-Exilic per-iod in Palestine there is no reliable evidence for adoption at all.

Return to the beginning of*: Adoption

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Doctrine of Adoption 1. The Idea of Adoption in the Old Testament https://www.fellowshipbibleannarbor.org/BibleStudies/doctrinal/Adoption.pdf

Excerpt:

Implications of Adoption for Today

There are some texts that uses the idea of "sons" or "my sons" that show us the "standard of living" for sons:

1. Led by the Spirit – Rom. 8:14.
2. Separation – 2 Cor. 6:14-18.
3. Discipline – Heb. 12:5-8.
4. Out of place in the world – 1 John 3:1

4. Implications of Adoption for the Future

Rom. 8:18-25 says that full disclosure of the sons of God (their adopted status) will be unveiled or revealed at the time of our future redemption (v. 19). This will be accompanied by great glory (v. 18). The creation eagerly awaits to see this (do you?) (v. 19-22). This will come with the redemption of our body (v. 23; cf. 1 John 3:2). All of this we eagerly hope for (v. 24-25) though we do not yet see it.

Basically we are awaiting the complete experience of adoption and the rest of the inheritance that comes with it (Rev. 21:6-7). Oh what glory to be in the presence of our Heavenly Father as His own sons!

Please note that this does not degrade our current status as adopted sons of God. It is only meant to say that while things are good beyond measure now in this standing which we have, they will be even better then! It's like salvation itself. We have it without question now, but just wait until we enter into the eternal blessing of what we call "ultimate" or "final" salvation when we are with Christ. It will be "better," as Paul says, Php. 1:21, 23.

Adoption in Ancient Israel

https://www.westernseminary.edu/transformedblog/2014/01/10/adoption-in-ancient-israel/

4 Beautiful Stories of Adoption from the Bible

https://showhope.org/2015/08/07/4-beautiful-stories-of-adoption-from-the-bible/

Excerpt:

God's heart for orphans and adoption is clearly displayed throughout the Old and New Testaments. Woven throughout Scripture, the theme of adoption serves to not only strengthen our faith but to also encourage us as we press into the needs of orphans around the world. Below are some beautiful stories of adoption from the Bible:

1. Moses

The book of Exodus contains a story (Exodus 1:15-22) of a Hebrew woman, Jochebed, who had a son at a time when Pharaoh ordered all Hebrew male infants be put to death. Instead, Jochebed found a basket, waterproofed it, placed her son inside, and gently sent him down the river. Not long after, one of Pharaoh's daughters caught sight of the basket and retrieved the young boy. She eventually adopted him into the royal family and named him Moses (Exodus 2:1-10) — the same Moses who grew to be an important leader, prophet, and faithful servant of God!

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

2. Esther

In the Book of Esther, a girl named Esther became an orphan following her parents' death. Fortunately, Esther was adopted by her cousin, and later she even became a queen. Today, we can read how God worked through Esther to bring deliverance to the Jewish people!

3. Jesus

In the New Testament, Jesus was conceived through the Holy Spirit (Matthew 1:18), and was adopted by His mother's husband. Joseph took Jesus as his own child, and along with Mary, raised a Son who changed the course of history.

Wikipedia: Adoption (Theology)

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Adoption_%28theology%29

Adoption, in Christian theology, is the admission of a believer into the family of God. In the evangelical ordo salutis ("order of salvation"), adoption is usually regarded as a step immediately subsequent to justification. As a theological word, adoption has similar connotations to the act of legally placing a child with a parent or parents other than those to whom they were born. There are three references in the New Testament to God "adopting" Christians as his own children (Galatians 4:5, Romans 8:15 and Ephesians 1:5) and one reference to the adoption by God, of the "people of Israel" (Romans 9:4). Adoption as a theological term introduces a relational dimension to the consequences of salvation.[1] Adoption as a theological concept is also another consequence of the 'legal' act of justification, alongside redemption and reconciliation. The Old Testament precedent for this term comes from the story of Mephibosheth, who despite not being part of Davidic family was included in the Royal inheritance (2 Samuel 9:7-13).[3] Adoption was an important feature of Reformation theology as demonstrated by article 12 of the Westminster Confession of Faith:

> All those that are justified, God vouchsafes, in and for His only Son Jesus Christ, to make partakers of the grace of adoption, by which they are taken into the number, and enjoy the liberties and privileges of the children of God.

Return to the beginning of*: Adoption

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Patria Potestas (and Ancient Roman Adoption) [See also: Adoption Law vs Paul Chart]

Patria Potestas and the Roman Ceremony of Adoption

http://pilgrimtours.com/church_history/italy/devotionals_history/Adoption.htm

Excerpt:

> For ye have not received the spirit of bondage again to fear; but ye have received the Spirit of adoption, whereby we cry, Abba, Father. The Spirit itself beareth witness with our spirit, that we are the children of God: and if children, then heirs; heirs of God, and joint-heirs with Christ, if so be that we suffer with him, that we may be also glorified together. Romans 8:15-17. [KJV]
>
> [15] For you did not receive the spirit of slavery leading again to fear, but you received the Spirit of adoption, by whom we cry, "Abba, Father." [16] The Spirit himself bears witness to our spirit that we are God's children. [17] And if children, then heirs (namely, heirs of God and also fellow heirs with Christ) – if indeed we suffer with him so we may also be glorified with him. [NET]

In this passage Paul is using one of the great metaphors in which he describes the new relationship of the believer to God. He speaks of the Christian being adopted into the Family of God.

Roman adoption was always rendered more serious and more difficult by the Roman patria potestas. The patria potestas was the father's power over his family; that power was absolute; it was actually the power of absolute disposal and control, and in the early days it was actually the power of life and death. In regard to his father a Roman son never came of age. No matter how old he was, he was still under the patria potestas, in the absolute possession, and under the absolute control, of his father. Obviously this made adoption into another family very difficult and a very serious step.

In adoption a person had to pass from one patria potestas to another. He had to pass out of the possession and control of one father into the equally absolute control and possession of another. There were two steps. The first was known as mancipatio, and it was carried out by a symbolic sale, in which copper and scales were symbolically used. Three times the symbolism of sale was carried out. Twice the father symbolically sold his son, and twice he bought him back; and the third time he did not buy him back and thus the patria potestas was held to be broken.

After the sale there followed a ceremony called vindicatio. The adopting father went to the praetor, one of the Roman magistrates, and presented a legal case for the transference of the person to be adopted into his patria potestas. When all this was completed the adoption was complete. Clearly this was a serious and impressive step.

But it is the consequences of adoption which are most significant for the picture that is in Paul's mind. There were four main consequences.

> (1) The adopted person lost all rights to his old family, and gained all the rights of a fully legitimate son in his new family. In the most literal sense, and in the most legally binding way, he got a new father.
>
> (2) It followed that he became heir to his new father's estate. Even if other sons were afterwards born, who were real blood relations, it did not affect his rights. He was inalienably co-heir with them.
>
> (3) In law, the old life of the adopted person was completely wiped out. For instance, legally all debts were cancelled; they were wiped out as though they had never been. The adopted person was regarded as a new person entering into a new life with which the past had nothing to do.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

(4) In the eyes of the law the adopted person was literally and absolutely the son of the new father.

Roman history provides an outstanding case of how literally and completely this was held to be true. The Emperor Claudius adopted Nero, in order that Nero might succeed him on the throne. They were not in any sense blood relations. Claudius already had a daughter, Octavia. To cement the alliance Nero wished to marry Octavia. Now, Nero and Octavia were in no sense connected; they were in no sense blood relations; yet, in the eyes of the law, they were brother and sister; and before they could marry the Roman Senate had to pass special legislation to enable Nero to marry a girl who was legally his own sister. Nothing shows better how complete adoption in Rome was.

This is what Paul is thinking of. He uses still another picture of Roman adoption. He says that God's Spirit witnesses with our spirit that we really are children of God. The adoption ceremony was carried out in the presence of seven witnesses. Now, supposing the adopting father died, and then suppose there was some dispute about the right of the adopted son to inherit, one or more of the original seven witnesses stepped forward and swore that the adoption was genuine and true. Thus the right of the adopted person was guaranteed and he entered into his inheritance. So, Paul is saying, it is the Holy Spirit Himself who is the witness to our adoption into the family of God.

We see then that every step of Roman adoption was meaningful in the mind of Paul when he transferred the picture of our adoption into the Family of God. Once we were in the absolute possession of sin, in absolute control of our own human nature; but God, in His mercy, has brought us into absolute possession of Himself. The old life has no more right over us; we begin again anew life; a life with God. We become heirs of all the riches of God. If that is so, we become joint-heirs with Jesus Christ, God's own Son. That which Christ inherited, and inherits, we also inherit. If Christ had to suffer we also inherit that suffering, but if Christ was raised to life and glory we also inherit that life and glory.

It was Paul's picture that when a person became a Christian they entered into the Family of God. He did nothing to earn it; he did nothing to deserve it; God, the Great Father, in His amazing love and mercy, has taken the lost, helpless, poverty stricken, debt-laden sinner and adopted him into his own Family, so that the debts are cancelled and that unearned love and glory inherited! The price of adoption? The blood of Christ!

Wikipedia: Adoption in Ancient Rome
https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Adoption_in_ancient_Rome

What did Adoption Mean to the Romans? (Forum)
https://hermeneutics.stackexchange.com/questions/14267/what-did-adoption-mean-to-the-romans

See also*: Rome, Romans and the Roman Empire

Return to the beginning of*: Adoption

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Seven Minute Sermons: Patria Potestas

https://sevenminutesermons.wordpress.com/2014/01/18/patria-potestas/

Excerpt:

- Adoption (Dictionary): The act or process of adopting a child; the act or process of beginning to use something new or different; the act or process of giving official acceptance or approval to something.
- Adoption (Bible): Adoption, as a son into the divine family; to await eagerly; foreordain, predetermine; a son, descendent.

Most of the time when we hear or read about adoption it concerns children who don't have a family or are babies. The goal is to place them into a safe environment so they have a real family. It is motivated by love!

The practice of adoption is very old and many ancient people practiced it including the Hebrews, Greeks, and Romans. The term 'adoption' is only found in the New Testament. During Apostle Paul's time, the Roman adoption was typically for reasons other than love. It had to do primarily with money and inheritance. Romans 8 speaks about adoption:

Romans 8:15-17: 15 For you have not received a spirit of slavery leading to fear again, but you have received a spirit of adoption as sons by which we cry out, "Abba! Father!" 16 The Spirit Himself testifies with our spirit that we are children of God, 17 and if children, heirs also, heirs of God and fellow heirs with Christ, if indeed we suffer with Him so that we may also be glorified with Him. (NASB)

In the Roman law and culture of the first century A.D. an affluent but childless adult who wanted an heir would adopt a male in their teens, often a slave, to be his son. Adoption was one of the few ways a slave could come into the patria potestas, (the power of the father).There were some daughter adoptions but they were rare.

After adoption, a son ceased to belong to his birth family and became in every respect the child of the person or family who adopted them. Upon the death of the new father, the adopted son inherited the estate. In the case of a master with no heir, a favorite slave might be adopted for the sole purpose of having a legal heir to inherit the master's estate. In ancient times, a slave was never permitted to use the term Abba (father) when approaching the master for conversation. But after the adoption, the slave was considered a full son and was entitled to call the master father and the mistress mother.

In addition, all the debts of the child being adopted were cancelled, and in effect he started a new life. The adopted person did, though, lose all rights in his old family, but gained all the rights of a fully legitimate son in his new family. In the most basic sense and in the most literal way, he got a new father.

This helps us understand Romans 8 more completely and what Paul was conveying to the Roman believers. It can be surmised that the church at Rome had some believers who were former slaves or were certainly well aware of the adoption process. Knowing this, Paul could state:" For you have not received a spirit of slavery leading to fear again, but you have received a spirit of adoption as sons by which we cry out, "Abba! Father!" Paul wanted to clearly state that they had been adopted by their new heavenly Father-ABBA! And not only that, as adopted children, they were now entitled to be called God's heirs! Paul stated:" The Spirit Himself testifies with our spirit that we are children of God, 17 and if children, heirs also, heirs of God and fellow heirs with Christ, if indeed we suffer with Him so that we may also be glorified with Him." Remember what Jesus said:

Luke 12:32: 32 So don't be afraid, little flock. For it gives your Father great happiness to give you the Kingdom. (NLT)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

As noted, under Roman law the adopted son not only inherited the estate, he was freed from all debt. Adoption into Gods kingdom includes freeing us from our terrible debt of sin:

Colossians 2:14: 13 And when you were dead in trespasses and in the uncircumcision of your flesh, He made you alive with Him and forgave us all our trespasses. 14 He erased the certificate of debt, with its obligations, that was against us and opposed to us, and has taken it out of the way by nailing it to the cross. (HCSB)

Not only that, while we were slaves to sin and spiritually dead, He not only adopted us but freed us completely from past sin and its associated fear.

Romans 6:6: 6 knowing this, that our old man was crucified with Him, that the body of sin might be done away with, that we should no longer be slaves of sin. (NKJV)

Paul talks about inheritance:

Ephesians 1:18: 18 I pray that your hearts will be flooded with light so that you can understand the confident hope he has given to those he called—his holy people who are his rich and glorious inheritance.

As Paul sums up Romans 8 we see how amazing our adoption is:

Romans 8:31-34: 31 What then are we to say about these things? If God is for us, who is against us? 32 He did not even spare His own Son but offered Him up for us all; how will He not also with Him grant us everything? 33 Who can bring an accusation against God's elect? God is the One who justifies. 34 Who is the one who condemns? Christ Jesus is the One who died, but even more, has been raised; He also is at the right hand of God and intercedes for us. (HCSB)

In summary, as we look at the Roman adoption process we see interesting parallels to Scripture. But over and above this, we see our ABBA Father loving over us, freeing us, blessing us and providing a sure future and hope all because of Jesus death and resurrection.

Father God stands ready to adopt all who call upon Him! He has an inheritance for all who want to be freed. Why would we not ask Him for our freedom and adoption into His kingdom?

Father, we love You and give You praise for our adoption granted through Your Son!

See also*: Adoption Law vs Paul Chart

Return to the beginning of*: Adoption

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Exegesis of Ephesians 1:1-14: Adoption and Inheritance: Ephesians 1:5, 11, 14

http://nagasawafamily.org/paul_ephesians.1.03-14.exegesis.pdf [PDF]

Excerpt:

Jewish Context	Greco-Roman Context
The primary thought behind 'adoption' and 'inheritance' is the royal king of Israel. In the Jewish mind, Adam was originally God's 'son.' God gave Adam an inheritance: the whole earth in an unspoiled state of paradise. Since Adam and Eve sinned, Adam forfeited his position and inheritance, and God chose to 'adopt' another heir, the nation Israel, who became God's 'son' (see especially Rom.9:4 but also Ex.4:22, Dt.32:10, Hos.11:1). God adopted Israel and gave them a promised land inheritance flowing with milk and honey, something similar to what humanity had in the original paradise. By doing this, God was saying that Israel would be His true humanity, His chosen people, the people Adam and Eve were supposed to be. (The notion was preserved in Israel's family inheritance laws once Israel settled the promised land: Land inheritance was passed down from father to sons, as God gave Adam the land as his inheritance). Then, each king of Israel was 'adopted' as a son by God. Every new king coming to the throne had Psalm 2 read to him, which reads, 'You are My son, today I have begotten you.' His 'inheritance' was the Gentile nations. Given that Jesus is the ultimate king of Israel, the one who rebuilt a new Temple (Eph.2:11 – 3:21), I think 'royal kingship' is the primary locus of meaning here.	Distilling all William Barclay's research on Roman adoption: In Roman society, the father had ultimate authority in his household. This was called the 'patria potestas,' the absolute ownership of the father. Adoption in Roman society was incredibly serious, then, because the son had to pass out of the patria potestas of the natural father, and into the patria potestas of the adopting father. There were three steps to this. The first was known as 'm*ancipatio*,' which is where we get our word 'emancipate.' The adopting father approached the natural father with seven witnesses. He brought a scale and copper weights and purchased the son from the old family with a ceremony. Twice the adopting father bought the son, and twice the natural father bought him back. Then on the third time, the natural father did not buy him back. The 'patria potestas' of the natural father was held to be broken. After the sale there followed a ceremony called 'vindicatio.' The adopting father went to the 'praetor,' one of the Romans magistrates, and publicly argued his case for the adoption of this son. Then, third, is the party, during which the adopting father publicly announces to all his friends and family that there is a new son and a new heir. [1] Roman history: In the year 50 AD, the Emperor Claudius adopted a young man to succeed him on the throne. That young man changed his name to Nero. To cement the alliance, Nero wanted to marry the natural daughter of Claudius, Octavia, who was already his legal sister. They were in no sense blood relations but by law, they were brother and sister, and they couldn't get married. Nero had to get the Roman Senate to pass special legislation to enable him to marry a girl who was legally his own sister. That is how serious and life changing adoption was in Roman society.

[1] The movie Ben Hur illustrates this. Charlton Heston plays Judah Ben Hur, the young Jewish galley slave who rescues the Roman Admiral Arius from drowning during a naval battle on the Mediterranean. The Romans won the battle, so Arius returns to Rome a hero. During his victory march through Rome to the throne of the Emperor Tiberias, Arius has Judah Ben Hur ride beside him on the victory chariot. Then, Arius appears before the entire Roman senate and the Emperor to plead the case that Ben Hur be released from being a slave and placed by adoption as an adult son into Arius' family. The Emperor and the Senate acquiesce and next comes to huge gala celebration thrown by Arius. Into the main hall and courtyard in Arius' enormous house come dancers, musicians, and guests: Arius' friends and colleagues. In the middle of the party, Arius commands that the music stop, and he calls Judah Ben Hur forward. He tells the whole audience of his great joy at finding such a young man who rescued him at sea and then won the Roman chariot races in the Circus of Rome. He then tells the audience his reason for throwing this huge celebration in the first place: to recognize, honor, and publicly state his love for his adopted son, Young Arius. Ben Hur, or Young Arius, steps forward, and Arius puts his ancient family signet ring on his finger. From that moment onward, all of the father's wealth, land, power, and honor belong to and will be inherited by Young Arius. Young Arius is publicly identified with his father by a powerful public statement of love.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Application of Adoption/Inheritance Language:

How do we apply this to ourselves today? First of all, the Jewish connotations take priority, and the Roman connotations, as secondary, can be considered as long as they reinforce the main ideas from the Jewish context. Secondly, we must remember again that this picture is not for men only. The cultural picture was of the adoption of adult sons. Paul is therefore saying that God adopts men, women and children in a way similar to how God adopted Israel as a nation, or how a Roman father adopted a son to be his heir. Young men, you are adopted as a son into God's family. Young women, you are adopted as a daughter into God's family. Regardless of your gender or your age, this picture of adoption applies to you if you have faith in Christ.

Next, we can list the important points that can be pastorally applied to us:

1. The adopting father does everything in public. In the Jewish context, God brought Israel out of Egypt 'before all the nations,' in public. Also, the anointing of each new king was public. In the Roman context, the father publicly purchases the adult son, publicly argues for the adoption before a judge or a magistrate, and publicly presents the new son as a full-fledged adult member of the family. In both cases, the PUBLIC nature of this commitment is highly significant. It parallels the fact that God sends Jesus publicly to live and die, and then publicly. This Father WANTS this Son!

2. The adopting father created a whole new identity for the son. In the Jewish context, God brought Israel out of slavery and misery into a whole new identity. The Israelites did not have to listen to their former masters any more! In the Roman context, the father purchases the son out of the previous family, making a permanent and irrevocable legal break with the old family. If you had debts to pay, they were cancelled out! New relationships began! In both cases, the old life was totally cancelled out. A new identity was assumed. This is truly newness of life.

3. The adopting father gave his son an incredible (royal) inheritance. In the Jewish context, God gave Israel the status and inheritance of an adopted 'son,' in continuity with the themes begun with Adam in the original creation. Also, adoption as God's son into kingship is royalty, but adoption into Jesus is ultimate royalty. In the Roman context, the adopted son was accepted as a full-fledged heir in the family, guaranteed regardless of blood line or whether there were any other sons.

4. The adopting father's love could not be broken. In the Jewish context, God's covenant with Israel could not be broken, even by their unfaithfulness. In the Roman context, the new son was a part of the family permanently, totally, and eternally. There was no way to break the tie between the adopting father and the new son, except possibly through another adoption agreed to by the new father, which is ridiculous to imagine!

5. The new son assumed new family responsibilities. In the Jewish context, this meant living by God's rule. In the Roman context, this meant representing the Roman father's person and interests.

See also*: Adoption Law vs Paul Chart

Return to the beginning of*: Adoption

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Roman-Greek Adoption as Analogy to Paul's References (Chart)

by Carmen ("Skip") Cialino

Roman-Greek Adoption	Analogy to Paul's References
Roman Law (Ref: 12 Tables)	Paul
I. Original Father (OF) has patria potestas ("father's power") (PP) over child to be adopted (AC). PP means that OF has absolute power over AC as long as both alive – including property, sell into slavery, imprison, kill them	I. Sin has the equivalence of PP over us.
II. Adoption Process – AC will become co-heir with AF's natural children (NC) a. Involves a 3-sales transaction – Mancipatio – OF sells and buys back AC twice – 3rd time OF does not buy back – original PP broken b. Vindicatio – AF petitions magistrate to adopt AC – 7 witnesses present – petition granted.	II. Parallel To Adoption a. God in his mercy has adopted us and has absolute power over us. Our old life dominated by sin nature no longer controls us. We begin life anew b. The price of adoption is the blood of Christ c. The Holy Spirit is the witness to our adoption
III. Consequences of Adoption. a. OF's PP broken b. AF's PP Established c. AC's connection prior family wiped out – including debts d. AC becomes co-heir with AF's natural children (NC)	III. We are co-heirs with Jesus Christ (JC) • Heirs of all God's riches; • We inherit [predestined for our future] eternal life / glorified bodies / new heavens and new earth; • JC suffers – we suffer; • We are raised to JC's life and glory

AC = Adopted Child

OF = Original Father

AF = Adopted Father

PP = Patria Potestas (power of the father)

NC = Natural Children

Notes:

1, The above parallel is "fleshed out" more in Romans 8:12-17, than Ephesians 1:5.

2. The concept of adoption would have been quite apparent to those who were subject to Roman law.

Return to the beginning of: Adoption or beginning of: Patria Potestas

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Tutelage (Tutela)

Wikipedia: Tutelage
https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Tutela

Tutela was the ancient Roman concept of "guardianship", conceived of as a goddess in the Imperial period, and from the earliest period as a functional role that various tutelary deities might play, particularly Juno. Tutela had particular applications in Roman law.

Contents

- 1 Legal *tutela
- 2 *Tutelae
- 3 Tutela and Imperial cult
- 4 References
- 5 External links

Legal tutela

Under Roman law, there were several forms of tutela ("guardianship" or "tutelage"), mainly for people such as minors and women who ordinarily in Roman society would be under the legal protection and control of a paterfamilias, but who for whatever reasons were sui iuris, legally emancipated. The guardian who oversaw their interests was a tutor. Latin legal terminology distinguishes among several types of tutela, including:

- tutela fiduciaria, fiduciary guardianship.
- tutela impuberum, guardianship for minors who were emancipated from the legal control (potestas) of a paterfamilias or head of household.
- tutela mulierum, guardianship of emanicipated women, generally those whose fathers had died. In the "core period" of Roman history (2nd century BC to 2nd century AD), a married woman did not enter into the potestas of her husband, and remained legally a part of her birth family. The appointment of a tutor was meant to ensure that her interests and those of her family were protected, particularly in matters of property rights, since the ownership of property by married people remained separate. On occasion, a woman who wanted her husband to manage her property might have him appointed tutor.

Tutelae

The tutela or tutelary deity was fundamental to archaic Roman religion. The capacity for offering protection or guardianship was a basic function of deity, expressed by formulations such as Tutela Iovis, "the tutelage of Jove". Major deities such as Jupiter, Minerva, and Mars were conceived of as tutelaries. The phrase in tutela expressed the sphere of influence exercised by a deity. For instance, trees of ill omen (arbores infelices) were in the tutela of the gods below (di inferi). The initiatory grades of the Mithraic mysteries seem to have each had a tutelary deity.

The cities of ancient Italy characteristically had a tutela, who in many places was Juno. The true name of the deity was theoretically kept secret, to prevent an enemy from enacting a ritual "calling out" (evocatio) the tutelary and rendering the city vulnerable. If the identity of a deity whose protection was desired was unknown, an altar might be inscribed with an open-ended invocation such as "to the tutelary god". The individual goddess Tutela may have evolved from this abstraction. She appears often in inscriptions, particularly in Gaul, but only rarely in literature. She is often linked invoked with the Genius to assure a full range of protection, and became a regular part of household cult along with the Lares and Penates. She might also be paired with Fortuna. Tutor or tutator might be masculine epithets for gods in a specifically tutelary function: Iuppiter tutor or Hercules tutator.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Tutela and Imperial cult

See also: Imperial cult (ancient Rome)

The early Roman emperors drew on traditional sources of authority to consolidate their position, among them the potestas or power of the Roman head of household. Tutela or guardianship was another available form of authority, advertised as Tutela Augusti, the tutelage of Augustus. In the Imperial period the goddess Tutela received her own distinct cultus in the form of rituals and temples. The Flavian dynasty in particular cultivated Tutela. On a coin of 71 AD, Tutela is represented by a woman with two children.

Guardianship, in Civil Jurisprudence (Catholic Perspective)

http://www.newadvent.org/cathen/07051a.htm

Excerpt:

Guardianship is "the condition or fact of being a guardian; the office or position of guardian" (Murray, New English Dictionary, s.v.); "a person intrusted by law with the interests of another whose youth, inexperience, mental weakness or feebleness of will, disqualifies him from acting for himself in the ordinary affairs of life, and who is hence known as the ward" (Schouler, "Law of the Domestic Relations", Boston, 1905, 277). Etymologically, the words guardian and ward are of like derivation. Warden is an older term for guardian. The verb, to ward, is derived from the Old French, warder, garder, guarder, and one of the definitions of the noun, ward, is "guardianship, control or care of a minor" (The Century Dictionary, s.v.). This "control or care" conferred by law is a substitute for, or "an artificial extension of the parental power" (Taylor, "The Science of Jurisprudence", New York, 1908, 558).

The Roman law terms such "control or care" of a minor under the age of fourteen years, tutela, "an authority and power over a free person given and permitted by the civil law in order to protect one whose tender years prevent him defending himself" ("The Institutes of Justinian" tr. Sanders, L. I, t. xiii, 1, Chicago, 1876), the civil law thus providing what the Institutes pronounce agreeable to natural law, naturali juri conveniens, ibid., L. I, t. xx, 6. Tutors were so termed "as being protectors", tuitores (ibid., L. I, t. xiii, 2), protectors of a person in the exercise of his rights. A tutor did not confer rights on his ward; the tutor's authority supplied the ward's deficiency for exercise of rights which he already had. "When one person increased (augebat) what another had, so as to fill up a deficiency, this was called auctoritas" (ibid., Introduction, §43, note, and see p. 76, t. xiv, p. 120, p. 134). Only one who was free could have that right, a deficiency in which, according to this explanation of its meaning, authority could supply. A slave could not be regarded as deficient for exercising rights, because a slave (who in law was not even regarded as a person) having no capacity to acquire the rights themselves, there could arise no question of his capacity to exercise them. Thus, a free person only could have occasion for a tutor, or could be a ward (pupillus, pupilla). On the other hand, no person not vested with the rights of citizenship was qualified to become a tutor. Being deemed a public office, tutela was compulsory upon those who were qualified and who could present no legal excuse (ibid., L. I, t. xxv).

The tutela of a male ended with his fourteenth year, of a female with her twelfth. But a minor was not deemed perfectæ ætatis (of full age) and fit to protect his or her own interests, while under the age of twenty-five years, and so, on the discharge of the tutor, there was appointed a curator (ibid., L. I, tt. xix, xxii, xxiii). Tutela might be testamentaria, legitima, or dativa.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Tutela testamentaria arose from appointment in the last will of the parent (Instit., L. I, t. xiii, 3). Tutela legitima occurred in the instance of minors to whom by will no tutor had been appointed. For them the law prescribed the tutela of certain relations who were hence called tutores legitimi (ibid., t. xv.). "If any one had no tutor at all" one was assigned by certain magistrates and termed tutor dativus (ibid., t. xx).

Return to*: Welch's Adoption Article

See also*: Rome, Romans and the Roman Empire

Return to the beginning of*: Adoption

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Roman Law – The Twelve Tables

The Twelve Tables by Paul R. Coleman-Norton
https://www.gutenberg.org/ebooks/14783

Wikipedia: The Twelve Tables
https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Twelve_Tables

The Twelve Tables – Intro (for a class)
https://hsweeney.files.wordpress.com/2013/07/the-twelve-tables-reading1.pdf [PDF]

Excerpt:

An important step in the political development of a civilized society is the organization and publication of their laws in a way that makes it possible for all persons to know what law governs (think back to Hammurabi's Code).

About 450 B.C.E., the Romans codified [arranged by subject area] their laws and inscribed [engraved] them on 12 bronze tablets, which were displayed in the Forum. The Twelve Tables is the earliest surviving piece of Roman literature. The Twelve Tables were the basis of all later Roman law – and from it evolved many of the legal systems in the world today.

During the Etruscan monarchies, disputes between individuals were arbitrated [decided] by the king, who also served as a judge. The king's judgments [decisions] were eventually codified in the Twelve Tables. The laws were limited and draconian.

As the small city-state of Rome on the Tiber River grew, more detailed laws were needed to regulate a society that was growing more complex and more civilized. The Roman magistrates [officials administering the law], known as the praetors, were the source of this new law.

During the Republic, the praetor's duty was to decide cases by interpreting and applying the Twelve Tables to the dispute before him. When the praetor had to judge a case where the law was not clear, or where it was not exactly suitable, he gave a ruling based on his opinion. This new ruling, if it worked, was then adopted by his successors. In this way, a body of law developed that could be changed to fit new needs. Our legal system uses this same process: relying on case law, the written opinions of judges interpreting the law before them.

Roman law was based on the concept of justice and the rights of the individual. It is from the Romans that we inherit the belief that a person:

1) should not be accused anonymously,

2) should not be penalized for what he or she thinks, and

3) should be considered innocent until proven guilty.

The Twelve Tables
https://roman-empire.net/republic/the-twelve-tables/

More re Twelve Tables on next page…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

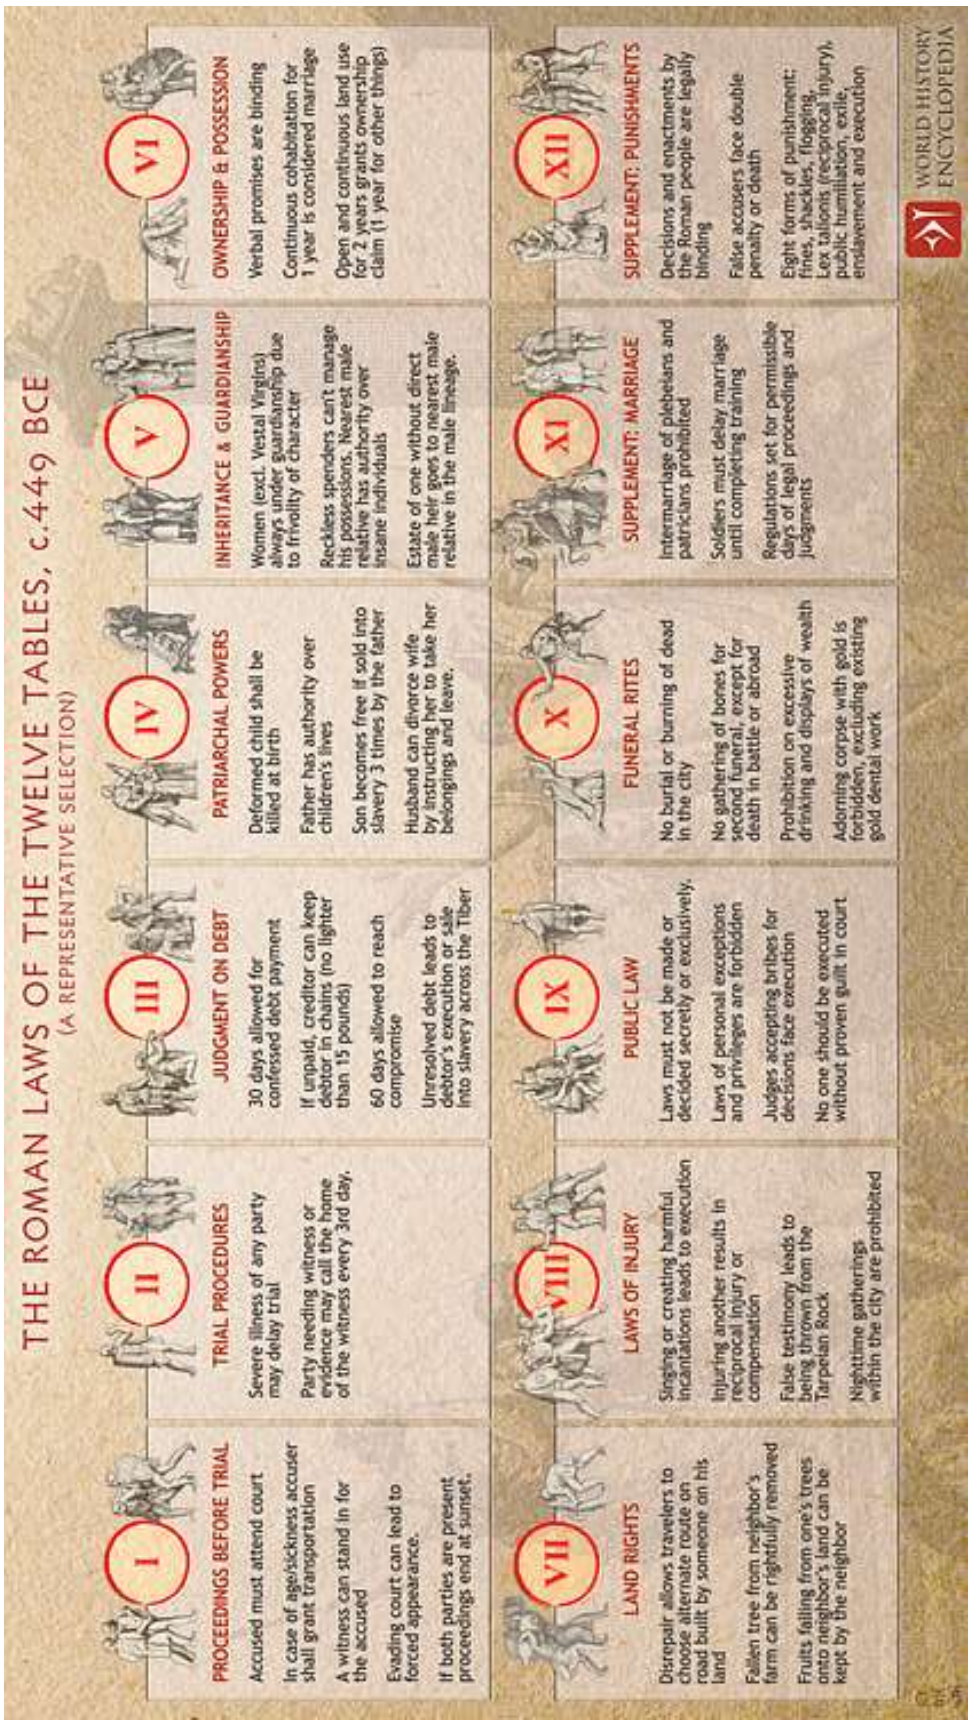
Twelve Tables – World History Encyclopedia

https://www.worldhistory.org/Twelve_Tables/

Excerpt:

The Twelve Tables (aka Law of the Twelve Tables) was a set of laws inscribed on 12 bronze tablets created in ancient Rome in 451 and 450 BCE. They were the beginning of a new approach to laws which were now passed by government and written down so that all citizens might be treated equally before them.

Although not perhaps a fully codified system, the Twelve Tables was a first step which would allow the protection of the rights of all citizens and permit wrongs to be redressed through precisely-worded written laws known to everybody. Consequently, the Roman approach to law would later become the model followed by many subsequent civilizations right up to the present day.



Creation of The Twelve Tables

According to tradition, in 451 BCE a committee, the decemviri, were, following public pressure, given the task of composing a law code which would better represent the interests of the ordinary people (plebeians) and reduce the undue influence on Roman law of the aristocrats (patricians) and priests (pontifices). These latter had exclusively sat on a council which interpreted the law as they saw fit. In preparation for this responsibility, a delegation of three men was sent to Athens where they studied the laws of the celebrated lawgiver Solon (c. 640 – c. 560 BCE). Then ten men, all patricians, were given consular power (imperium) and permitted to draw up a list of laws which they considered most needed and useful.

That is the traditional view of events, although, perhaps more realistically, the composition of the Tables was an attempt by the elite to better govern themselves and prevent abuses within their own social group. In any case, the result was a list of written laws (legibus scribundis) presented on ten tables and two more were added the following year to bring the total to twelve. As a consequence, laws became statute, that is they were made only after first being decided on by a legislative body and were no longer based on mere custom and tradition.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Laws of the Twelve Tables

The exact reason why the Tables were drawn up may have been lost in the mists of time but once written their content was consistently referenced in later Roman written works. Unfortunately, the tablets themselves have not survived, destroyed, according to tradition, when Rome was sacked by the Gauls in 390 BCE. From some remaining fragments and those references in literature, it is possible to identify at least some specifics.

The list of laws seems to have covered most areas of private law and concentrated on relations between individuals (as opposed to individuals vs. the state or the rights of non-citizens) and thus is more a list of civil actions and penalties than a full, all-encompassing law code. It also largely dealt with areas relevant to an agricultural state. For example, the crime of arson was punishable by the death penalty (poena capitis), in this case by burning. The crime of using magic on crops was also punishable by death, this time by a form of crucifixion. Lesser penalties for property damage were banishment from Rome, loss of citizenship, and, for being an accessory to a crime, confiscation of property. Settlements could also be made by paying compensation to the plaintiff and thus avoiding court.

Other areas covered were procedural such as the ius vocation which was a private summons. If a plaintiff communicated to the accused they wished to bring a case against them then the accused was obliged, and could even be physically forced, to appear before a magistrate. Family law was also a part of the Twelve Tables with rules regarding marriage, guardianship, inheritance, and funerals prevalent.

Amendments

Problems of practical application were soon apparent when some patricians refused to submit to the statutes of the Twelve Tables. The ordinary people were also now startled to see, for the first time, many of the rules which had already been in place but not made quite so transparent until now. These factors led to an uprising by the plebeians in 449 BCE and the forced resignation of the decemviri. Rome's constitution was revised, the institutions of tribunes and consuls were reinstated, and the Twelve Tables became the basis of Roman law. The actual bronze tablets were set up in the Forum of Rome for all citizens to see, and Cicero records that students studied them as a part of their education.

In addition to these early problems, some specific laws in the original tables were not very long-lasting such as that which prohibited intermarriage between patricians and plebeians. This law was cancelled in 445 BCE with the enactment of the lex Canuleia. Other laws within the Twelve Tables were modified over time and, from the 3rd century BCE, they were steadily replaced by laws more relevant to the evolving Roman society and the dramatic expansion of the Republic.

Legacy

Although some scholars insist the Twelve Tables were not quite the 'all equal before the law' that tradition has claimed and that they were not enough alone to be defined as a complete law code, they, nevertheless, indisputably set the foundation for what would become a system of fully codified law in the Roman world. The decemviri must also be credited with creating laws which were of practical value, separated from any religious consideration, visible to all, and outlined in precise language with explicit definitions. Thus, the Romans created an approach to legal matters which would be copied by countless other societies and governments ever since.

The Twelve Tables

https://ancientromelive.org/the-twelve-tables/

See also*: Rome, Romans and the Roman Empire

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Roman Law in the Writings of Paul – Aliens and Citizens by Francis Lyall (1976)
https://biblicalstudies.org.uk/pdf/eq/1976-1_003.pdf [PDF]

Adoption: http://www.jstor.org/stable/3263796?seq=1#page_scan_tab_contents

See also*: Adoption Law vs Paul Chart

Legal Metaphors in the Epistles by Francis Lyall (MS Word *.doc file) http://www.tyndalehouse.com/tynbul/library/TynBull_1981_32_03_Lyall_LegalMetaphorsInEpistles.doc

Return to the beginning of*: Adoption

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Roman intestate succession[1]

https://everything2.com/title/Roman+law+of+intestate+succession

Excerpt:

For the Romans, the law of succession was dealt with as part of the law of things, or property law,[2] as succession was regarded as a manner in which ownership of things could be acquired, such as sale and purchase. Succession was regarded as an acquisitio per universitatem, acquisition of ownership of the estate of the deceased in its entirety. This differs from our modern notion of succession in that most jurisdictions do not recognise universal acquisition of the estate, but only devolution of the assets in the estate. In contrast, the Roman heir inherited both the assets and the liabilities. Should the estate be bankrupt, the heir was liable for the debts that the estate could not pay.

Elsewhere in Roman law of testate succession I dealt with the notion of the persona of the individual that the Romans thought devolved at death upon the heir. In fact, long before classical times intestacy (= dying without leaving a valid will) had become unusual, even if not unknown. Accordingly, a feeling had developed which has been called "a horror of intestacy", although Buckland[3] thinks this description of Plautus'[4] is an exaggeration. The fact is that Romans placed a very high premium upon the making of a will, and wills were regarded as sacrosanct, and in fact, every will was stored in the Temple of Vesta and guarded by the Vestal Virgins.

The earliest knowledge we have of the topic comes from the lex XII tabularum. According to the XII tables, all persons in potestate (= under the power of the paterfamilias) and who upon the death of the paterfamilias become sui iuris (i.e. "emancipated" from the patria potestas), regardless of whether they are blood relations or adopted, or even family, are regarded as sui heredes (heirs in own right) who are obliged to inherit, whether they wish to or not . They were regarded as heredes sui et necessarii and inherited per stirpes, per stake (each sui heres forming one stake), and representation was allowed (if e.g. one child was predeceased but left his own issue, they inherited the predeceased parent's share, representing him or her only in that share per capita). Only if there were no sui heredes did the estate devolve upon the proximi agnati (closest relatives regardless of blood), per capita (as opposed to per stirpes, and no representation was possible, i.e. if one of the proximi agnati was predeceased, nothing devolved upon his or her heirs as would have been the case with the sui heredes). Proximi agnati unlike the sui heredes had an election, and were at liberty to decline to inherit (which they would if there was the possibility of having to contribute to pay any debts of the deceased).

This arrangement of the XII tables was not without problems. It left already emancipated children out of the equation, as they would not become sui iuris upon the death of the paterfamilias, having already been emancipated, and also left children who would not become sui iuris at his death out of inheriting (such as daughters who would now fall under the patriapotestas of the elder son). It was furthermore not necessarily based on blood relationship, and also left the spouse who had married in a manner that left her retaining her status of sui iuris, out of the loop.

The consequence was that the praetor adapted the rules of intestate succession in his edict. The praetor could, however, not create an heir. So what he did do, in terms of the law of things, he cleverly created classes of person whom he would grant certain protection by vesting them with the right to apply for bonorum possessio (possession of the things in the estate). Instead of inheriting as an heir would, the individual(s) granted the interdictum quorum bonorum (= the right to recover possession of the things in the estate from whoever held it) could now take possession of the estate, and being protected by the interdict, could obtain ownership by way of usucapio (= usucaption or acquisitive prescription) after one year.

The classes of person the praetor granted the right to were:

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

· Liberi being children of the deceased, regardless of whether they will beome sui iuris or not upon his death. They inherit per stirpes and representation is allowed.

· Legitimi, being all those who were entitled to inherit according to the ius civile (strict civil law), i.e. the sui heredes, the proximi agnati and the gentiles (further clansmen).

· Proximi cognati (closer blood relatives).

· Vir aut uxor, husband or wife, i.e. the surviving spouse.

The praetor also allowed the protection regardless of sex, in contrast to the XII tables which allowed succession only through the male line. The closer relations exluded further removed relations, and the estate devolved upon closest relation(s) who applied to the praetor. Where there were more applicants related in the same degree, they inherited per capita (i.e. no representation).

While the senatusconsultum Tertullianum in the reign of Hadrian improved the rights of a mother to the estate of her deceased child, and the senatusconsultum Orfitianum from approximately the reign of Diocletian vested children with first dibs on the estate of their mother, this arrangement remained in force much without change until Justinian instituted a new arrangement, based on cognatio. Justinian allowed intestate succession according to the following rule:

· First in line: Descendentes, all children and further issue of the deceased. Distribution per stirpes and respresentation is allowed.

· If no descendentes survived the deceased (or he died without issue), adscendentes (parents and further up, the first in line to the exclusion of further generations) and siblings. In this case, the estate would devolve first upon parents, and if they are predeceased, the estate would "sink" to brothers and sisters of the deceased. If there are no surviving sibings, the estate would "climb" to grandparents, from where it would first "sink" to their heirs, and if none, "climb" again and so on.

· Siblings of the half blood.

· Further blood relations in the side line.

· Surviving spouse (last to inherit).

Where there were no heirs of this list, the estate fell to the fiscus as bona vacantia (unclaimed assets).

1The issue can not be treated fully or exhaustively in this format. This node does not pretend to be anything more than a very brief outline of the topic.

2Property law and the law of things are two different branches of law in our modern understanding of things. The law of things deals with relationships between subjects (persons, entities) and things capable of being owned or possessed, ownership and possession being two different, albeit related relationships. Property law concerns itself only with the law of ownership of things, and not of other relationships between the thing owned and third parties.

3 A Textbook of Roman Law, Cambridge 1950.

4 Curculio 5.2.24.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Several readers seem to experience difficulty with the per capita / per stirpes distinction. If the deceased has five sui heredes heirs (i.e. heirs that have no choice but to inherit), each of them constitutes a stirps (literally a stem or branch of a plant or tree but untranslateable in this form into modern English, which I consequently translate as a "stake" to convey the notion of their proprietary interest in the estate). The estate will be divided into five. Should any one (or more) of these heirs have predeceased the person from whom they would have received an inheritance, their respective heirs are substitued in his / her (or their) place, and these latter substitute heirs receive the fifth portion of the estate, sharing that portion equally per capita, i.e. per individual. Where we deal with any heirs that are not heredes sui et necessarii, i.e. they have an election as to whether they want to accept the assets and liabilities of the estate, they inherit per capita, and where one (or more) is (are) predeceased, their heirs do not become substitutes for them, and the other heirs receive a proportionately larger portion of the estate.

· My thanks to DonJaime who raised this issue first.

Roman law of testate succession: An idiot's primer https://everything2.com/title/Roman+law+of+testate+succession

Excerpt:

Both Gaius[1] and Justinian[2] regarded the law of succession as a part of the law of things, in that it was thought to be a manner of acquisition of ownership per universitatem (i.e. in mass), as opposed to the acquisition of singulae res (=a single thing). Therefore, the law of succession was not treated by the Romans as a separate branch of the law. According to our modern way of thinking, the law of succession is about more than merely the acquisition of assets, and also entails the entire procedure according to which the entire estate of the deceased is administrated and wound up. For us it is therefore a more convenient way to deal with succession as a branch of law in itself.

Elsewhere in Roman personhood I have tried to convey the Roman notion that the person was regarded in Roman times as more than just an individual being, but rather as a vehicle of various capacities and competencies, owner of assets and empowered to differing degrees, depending upon his status and class in society. This notion was drawn right through into how Romans dealt with succession. The "cloak" of entire personhood devolved upon the heres (= heir) upon the death of a person. For this reason, it became extremely important for every Roman to execute a will, in order to institute an heir worthy of perpetuating the persona. While Roman law acknowledged that someone could die intestate (= without having executed a valid will), it was regarded as important to ensure that the right person was appointed your heir. Intestate law of succession in Rome is dealt with elsewhere in (at the time of noding this, a forthcoming attraction) Roman law of intestate succession.

Obviously in the case of intestate succession, the deceased had no opportunity of determining what should happen to his assets upon death, or how his estate should be administrated. In the case of intestate succession, the matter was essentially dealt with fairly simply at the most basic level: Everything went to the oldest male child who succeeded as the paterfamilias, and took over the reigns from the deceased. This is not to say that women could never have estates that devolved upon others at death. Women sui iuris (= not under the power of a paterfamilias) were entirely capable of executing wills, and their estates could also devolve ab intestato(= intestate).

As far as we know, the initial will was a verbally executed stated intention before the comitia calata, in terms of which the testator simply formally stated his intention in respect of his estate upon his demise in the comitia curiata (= curiate assembly, the assembly of the people in the form of their 30 curiae, or divisions of the patriciate). In this form the c. curiata was termed the c. calata, probably called this as a result of the sacred function it performed in respect of wills and adoptions (calata from calator, meaning someone in attendance upon a priest). Soldiers on active duty could also make a verbal will called a testamentum in procinctŭ, meaning literally a will made in battle formation (= in procinctŭ). As writing became the norm for purposes of recording important events and information, both these forms of will disappeared fairly early, although they technically remained possibilities for executing a will until late in the development.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

A third form of will also developed fairly early, probably simultaneously with the development of the institution of mancipatio, of which I have also written elsewhere, the testamentum per aes et libram. The estate was symbolically transferred to a trusted person (= familiae emptor (lit. buyer of the family)) by way of the highly formal mancipatio procedure, involving the weighing of bronze (aes, currency) in the scales (libra) in the presence of witnesses. The familiae emptor was formally charged with distributing the assets to the heirs upon the death of the testator. This form of executing a will had fallen into desuetude during the empire.

Written wills (when they came to be) were lodged in the temple of Vesta (the goddess of the home and the hearth) and it was the sacred duty of the priestesses of Vesta, the Vestal Virgins,[3] to guard the wills and to bring a will forth upon the death of the testator. The Vestal Virgins tended the sacred fire of Vesta (symbol of the home and more particularly the hearth), and also symbolic of the perpetuation of the persona of the individual.

No will was valid without it instituting the heir (heredis institutio). This was so important because the heir had to see to the perpetuation of the testator's persona, and the heir so instituted (heres necessarius = necessary heir) had to inherit a minimum portion of the estate, later fixed upon a quarter. It must be emphasized that in most modern jurisdictions only the assets are inherited, and any debts owing at the time of death have to be paid from the estate. Where there is insufficient assets in the estate to cover debts, the estate is simply insolvent. In Roman law, the estate itself was inherited, and any debts not paid from the estate had to be covered by the heres necessarius – not an enviable job where the testator was (for example) a heavy gambler down on his luck shortly before death. For this reason, creditors of the estate could even later demand a guarantee (satisdatio = lit. giving enough) of the heir that he will pay the debts.

Effectively administration of the estate entailed liquidating assets in so far as was necessary to pay any debts, after which any remaining debts were to be paid by the heirs. If sufficient cash was available and all debts paid, the estate first had to pay out specific bequests, after which the heirs got their chance to share in the spoils.

---

1 Intitutiones II:97.

2 Institutiones 2.9.6.

3 Incidentally the precursor of the later institution in the Roman Church of nuns, who until fairly recently also wore headdresses (wimples) strongly reminiscent of the headdress of the Vestals.

See also*: Rome, Romans and the Roman Empire

Return to the beginning of*: Adoption

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Mystery

(See also: "Mystery" in Ephesians)

"What is the mystery of God referred to in the Bible?"

https://www.gotquestions.org/mystery-of-God.html

Excerpt:

The Bible tells us that the mystery of God is Jesus Christ: "My purpose is that they may be encouraged in heart and united in love, so that they may have the full riches of complete understanding, in order that they may know the mystery of God, namely, Christ, in whom are hidden all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge" (Colossians 2:2–3).

A "mystery" in the New Testament is something that had at one time been hidden but is now revealed to God's people. Jesus spoke of "the mystery of the kingdom of God" (Mark 4:11, NAS) that He was at that point revealing to His disciples. The apostle Paul used the word mystery 21 times in his Epistles. In each case, the "mystery" involved a wonderful declaration of spiritual truth, revealed by God through divine inspiration. A mystery is that "which was not made known to people in other generations as it has now been revealed by the Spirit to God's holy apostles and prophets" (Ephesians 3:5)…

Meditation: Christ – The Mystery of God Revealed by Toby v Jennings (2013)

http://equip.sbts.edu/wp-content/uploads/2014/03/SBJT-17.3-Fall-2013-Jennings.pdf [PDF]

Ephesians 1:7-13a – Salvation in the Son

https://redeeminggod.com/sermons/ephesians/ephesians_1_7-13a/

Excerpt:

Ephesians 1:9-10. And he made known to us the mystery of His will according to His good pleasure, which He purposed in Christ, to be put into effect when the times will have reached their fulfillment—to bring all things in heaven and on earth together under one head, even Christ.

Have you ever known a secret and just wanted to tell it to someone? It's always on the tip of your tongue. You have to watch your every word to make sure it doesn't slip out?

You know what is worse though? When you know that someone else has a secret, and you don't know what it is. The fact that they know something you don't just eats at your mind. You wonder what it could be, and who it could be about, and how it affects you, and why they didn't tell you.

Paul here in Ephesians 1:9 says that for many years, God had a secret, which He has just now made known to the world. Now Paul calls it a mystery. This does not mean it was hard to understand, but simply that it was something previously unknown. There were clues and hints about this mystery throughout the Old Testament, but now God has made it plain as day and wants the whole world to know.

Paul says this was a mystery of God's will, according to his good pleasure and that it primarily involved Christ, and that the accomplishment of this mystery of God's will would not be completed until the end of time.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

NT References to Mysteries

New Testament References to "Mysteries" (things previously unknown but now revealed) [186]
Matt. 13:11	The secrets of the kingdom of heaven
Luke 8:10	The secrets (mysteries) of the kingdom of God
Rom. 11:25	Israel experiencing a hardening of heart
Rom. 16:25-26	The plan of salvation through Jesus Christ.
1 Cor. 4:1	New Testament revelation
1 Cor. 15:51	The Rapture
Eph. 1:9	God's will
Eph. 3:2-3	The administration of God's grace
Eph. 3:4	Christ
Eph. 3:9	The church
Eph. 5:32	Christ and the church
Col. 1:26	Christ in us, the hope of glory
Col. 1:27	Christ in us
Col. 2:2	Christ
Col. 4:3	Christ
2 Thess. 2:7	The secret power of lawlessness already at work
1 Tim. 3:9	The deep truths of the faith
1 Tim. 3:16	Godliness
Rev. 1:20	The seven stars (angels)
Rev. 10:7	The details of the Tribulation
Rev. 17:5	Babylon the great

Source: Dr. Thomas Constable's Notes on Ephesians
http://www.soniclight.com/constable/notes/htm/NT/Ephesians/Ephesians.htm

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Mystery

https://www.biblestudytools.com/dictionary/mystery/

Excerpt:

The content of the divine mystery is painted in broad strokes in the Old Testament, takes on greater detail in the Gospels, and receives its finishing touches in Paul's letters. In Daniel, where the term first appears (raz in Aramaic, always translated with mysterion [musthvrion] in the LXX), it refers to God's understanding of the symbols in Nebuchadnezzar's dream, symbols that stand for the rise and fall of human empires and to the eventual establishment of God's own, eternal kingdom (2:44; cf. Rev 1:20; Revelation 17:5; Revelation 17:7). The details of these events, however, and the nature of God's kingdom, once established, remain sketchy in Daniel. The mystery of God's purposes gains greater specificity in the Gospels, where Jesus, particularly in his parables, reveals the "mystery of the kingdom of God" (Mark 4:11; cf. Matt 13:11; Luke 8:10). Paul also identifies the divine mystery with the revelation of God in Christ (Col 2:2 ; 4:3) but gives the concept even greater clarity in three ways. First, he equates the divine mystery with the gospel of Christ's atoning death on the cross (1 Cor 2:1); second, he describes it as God's plan, through Christ's atoning death (Eph 2:13-16), to include the Gentiles among his chosen people; and third, he defines it as the reconciliation of all things to God (Eph 1:9-10). Thus, Daniel described the divine mystery in general terms as the eventual establishment of God's eternal kingdom; Jesus defined it more specifically as his proclamation of God's kingdom; and Paul described it more specifically still as the constitution of a new people, from among both Jews and Gentiles, through the atoning death of Christ on the cross.

This understanding of divine mystery illustrates three aspects of God's character. First, it emphasizes God's omniscience. After God revealed the "mystery" of the interpretation of Nebuchadnezzar's dream to Daniel, Daniel thanked God in prayer for his wisdom and power (2:23; cf. 2:20) and described him as a God who "knows what lies in darkness" (2:22). Paul, similarly, after revealing the mystery of God's plan to include the Gentiles among his chosen people breaks into praise of the "depth of the riches of the wisdom and knowledge of God" (Rom 11:33).

Second, the biblical concept of divine mystery emphasizes God's sovereignty. The mystery revealed to Daniel and communicated to the king demonstrates not only that God knows the beginning of history from its end but that the rise and fall of human empires and the establishment of God's own kingdom happen according to his decree (2:36). Similarly, Paul says that the mystery of God's intention to unite both Jews and Gentiles in the body of Christ has been in place from ages past (Eph 3:9-11; Col 1:26-27; cf. Eph 1:9-10 ; 3:5).

Third, and most important, the biblical understanding of divine mystery emphasizes God's grace. This can be seen immediately in the stark contrast between the biblical use of the term "mystery" and its use as a technical term in ancient Hellenistic mystery religions. In these cults the term was used to signify the esoteric knowledge that initiates were instructed, with threats of severe punishment, not to reveal to the uninitiated. The Bible, however, emphasizes God's gracious willingness to reveal the mystery of his purposes to his servants the prophets and through them to other people (Rev 10:7; cf. Amos 3:7). The biblical emphasis is well illustrated in Daniel. There God graciously reveals his mysteries to Daniel to save him from the king's cruel sentence of death upon the royal wise men for their inability to interpret the king's dream (2:16-19). Because Daniel recognizes the graciousness of God's response, he is quick to acknowledge before the king that the dream's interpretation has come from God, not from Daniel's abilities as a counselor (Daniel 2:27; Daniel 2:30). Similarly, Jesus graciously explains the parable of the sower to his disciples with the comment that, although the parables baffle those on the outside, the mystery of the kingdom of God has been given to them (Matt 11:25-26).

In Paul's letters this aspect of the mystery of God comes to a climax. Paul points his readers again and again to the unique position they occupy as those who have experienced the fulfillment of the mystery of God's purposes. Although predicted in the Scriptures, the mystery was kept silent for long ages (Rom 16:25-26), hidden for generations past (Col 1:26; cf. Ephesians 3:5 Ephesians 3:9 Ephesians 3:11) that it might be revealed to apostles and prophets such as Paul himself and through them to believers (Eph 3:1-12 ; cf. 1 Peter 1:10-12). Paul describes his calling to reveal the mystery of God to the Gentiles as "the grace of God given to me for you" (Eph 3:2), and a few verses later, in a magnificent piling up of the language of grace, he identifies it as "the gift of the grace which God gave to me according to his effective power" (v. 7).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The biblical idea of mystery, then, reminds Christians that God holds the course of human events in his hands and has so shaped them that they work for the salvation of his people. It also demonstrates the graciousness of God in revealing his redemptive purposes to prophets and apostles and, through them, to all who are willing to hear.

They Mystery Which Has Been Hidden…

http://biblehub.com/colossians/1-26.htm

Excerpts:

> Col. 1: [25] I became a servant of the church according to the stewardship from God – given to me for you – in order to complete the word of God, [26] that is, the mystery that has been kept hidden from ages and generations, but has now been revealed to his saints. [27] God wanted to make known to them the glorious riches of this mystery among the Gentiles, which is Christ in you, the hope of glory. [28] We proclaim him by instructing and teaching all people with all wisdom so that we may present every person mature in Christ.

[Elliott's Commentary]

(re: Col. 1:26) The mystery.--On the Scriptural sense of the word "mystery," and its relation to the modern use of the word, see Note on Ephesians 1:9. In this passage, perhaps, most of all, it is defined with perfect clearness, as "a secret long hidden, and now revealed."

[Pulpit Commentary]

The mystery which hath been hidden away from the ages and from the generations (Ephesians 2:2, 3; Ephesians 3:5, 9; Romans 16:25, 26; Romans 11:25, 26, 33). The word "mystery" plays a large part in Colossians and Ephesians. It occurs in 1 Corinthians, and twice in the Roman Epistle, written from Corinth. Its use in Romans 16:25 is identical with that of the passage before us. The Greek mysteries were secret religious doctrines and rites made known only to initiated persons, who formed associations statedly assembling at certain sacred spots, of which Eleusis near Athens was the most famous. These systems exercised a vast influence over the Greek mind, and Greek literature is full of allusions to them; but their secret has been well kept, and little is known of their real character. Some of these mystic systems, probably, inculcated doctrines of a purer and more spiritual type than those of the vulgar polytheism. The ascetic and mystical doctrines ascribed to Pythagoras were propagated by secret societies. The language and ideas connected with the mysteries were readily adopted by the Jewish Broad Church of Alexandria, whose endeavour it was to expand Judaism by a symbolical and allegorizing method into a philosophic and universal religious system, and who were compelled to veil their inner doctrine from the eyes of their stricter, unenlightened (or unsophisticated) fellowbelievers. Μυστήριον appears in the Apocrypha as an epithet of the Divine Wisdom (Wisd. 2:22 Wisd. 8:4; etc.): Psalm 49:4; Psalm 78:2 (comp. Matthew 13:34, 35) furnished the Old Testament basis of this usage. (See Philo, 'On the Cherubim,' § 12; 'On Fugitives,' § 16; etc., for the place of mystery in the Alexandrine theology.) St. Paul, writing to men accustomed, either as Greeks or as Hellenistic Jews, to this phraseology, calls the gospel "a mystery," as that which is "hidden from the natural understanding and from the previous searchings of men" (1 Corinthians 2:6-16). But in the words that follow he repudiates the notion of any secrecy or exclusiveness in its proclamation (comp. 2 Corinthians 3:12-4:6); in his language, "mystery is the correlate of revelation." The thrice-repeated ἀπὸ ("from," "away"), with the double indication of time, "gives a solemn emphasis" (Meyer) to the statement. Ages are successive epochs of time, with their states and conditions (comp. Galatians 1:4); generations are successive races of men, with their traditions and hereditary tendencies. But now it was made manifest to his saints (Colossians 2:2; Colossians 4:3; Ephesians 1:9; Ephesians 3:5; Ephesians 6:19; 1 Timothy 3:16; 1 Peter 1:20). The word "reveal" (Ephesians 3:5; 1 Corinthians 2:10) indicates a process, "make manifest" points to the result of this Divine act (Romans 16:25, 26: comp. Romans 1:17 with Romans 3:21; see Trench's 'Synonyms'). The transition from the participle in the last clause to the strongly assertive finite verb in this almost disappears in English idiom: comp. vers. 5, 6; Ephesians 1:20-22 (Greek); and see Winer's 'N.T. Grammar,' p. 717, or A. Buttmann, p. 382. There is also a change of tense: the manifestation is a single, sudden event (aorist), breaking through the long and seemingly final concealment of all previous time (present perfect participle); similarly in Romans 16:25, 26 and 1 Peter 1:20 (comp. Colossians 2:14, note). To his sailors; i.e. to the Church at large (ver. 2; Colossians 3:12); but this implies a spiritual qualification (1 Corinthians 2:14). "His saints" are the recipients; "his holy apostles and prophets, in the Spirit," the organs (Ephesians 3:5) of this manifestation. The Church had long ago formally accepted this revelation (Acts 11:18); it was St. Paul's office to make it practically effectual.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

One Law, One People: Thoughts on Covenantal Nomism (By Ariel ben-Lyman HaNaviy)

https://bouldermenschristianfellowship.org/2013/09/06/covenantal-nomism/

Excerpt:

The “mystery of the Gospel” is that Isra’el is actually comprised of both Jews and Gentiles! To be grafted into the family of God is to join oneself to a Jewish Olive Tree without having to succumb to any kind of man-made conversion policy whatsoever! To this end, one becomes submissive to the instructions and righteousness of God, and inherits the blessings of God, whether he is of Gentile or Jewish stock!

What Is the Mystery Revealed to Paul?

http://graceambassadors.com/mystery/what-is-the-mystery-revealed-to-paul

Excerpt:

So, what is this mystery revealed to Paul?

The mystery revealed about Christ affected both the message of salvation and sanctification (God’s separation of a people for his service).

The mystery regarding salvation is the gospel of Christ: how any man can be justified freely by God’s grace through faith in Christ Jesus as our propitiation (Rom 3:20-26, 15:16; Eph 6:19).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The mystery revealed to Paul regarding sanctification is the identity of a new creature called the church, the one body of Christ (Rom 12:5; Eph 4:4). The church is to practice and preach the gospel of Christ and all its blessings free in Christ to all men through faith(Rom 5-8; Eph 1:3, 3:3-9).

What Is the Mystery of Christ?

https://answersingenesis.org/answers/biblical-authority-devotional/what-is-the-mystery-of-christ/

Excerpt:

The Apostle Paul explained the "mystery" of Christ.

> This mystery is that the Gentiles are fellow heirs, members of the same body, and partakers of the promise in Christ Jesus through the gospel. (Ephesians 3:6, ESV)

Today's big question: what is the mystery of Christ?

Paul refers to the mystery of Christ in Ephesians 3:4–5 that "has now been revealed by the Spirit to His holy apostles and prophets." The first thing to note is that this was never a mystery to God, since He knows all things (1 John 3:20). The Lord planned Christ's redemptive work "before the foundation of the world" (Ephesians 1:4), and has now "made known to us the mystery of His will, according to His good pleasure" (Ephesians 1:9). But what changed from the Old Testament to the New Testament, and why is there a mystery in the first place?

One of the key things that "changed" was that God's plan of salvation through Christ was fulfilled. There were hints of God's plan in Genesis 3:15, which took place in the Garden of Eden immediately after the Fall. Throughout the Old Testament, particularly through the prophet Isaiah, God revealed some of His plan, but it was primarily through the Jews.

What God did in the Old Testament was really a picture of what was to come through Jesus Christ. God showed the Jews that they could not keep the law, and they had to keep making sacrifices to cover their sins. Then in the gospels, the ultimate sacrifice (Jesus Christ) came to cover their sins once and for all.

What God did in the Old Testament was really a picture of what was to come through Jesus Christ. God showed the Jews that they could not keep the law, and they had to keep making sacrifices to cover their sins. Then in the gospels, the ultimate sacrifice (Jesus Christ) came to cover their sins once and for all.

What many Israelites obviously did not realize is that God's plan was not just for the Jewish people, but for everyone, both Jew and Gentile, who receives Jesus Christ as their Savior. God's plan throughout Scripture has always been the same, and since the Fall, that plan has been in motion. God reveals to us only what we can handle and understand; He is all-knowing, and we have not even begun to fully comprehend the mind of God (Isaiah 55:8–9). Now that Christ's work on the Cross has been completed, and the mystery has been revealed to us through Paul (Ephesians 3:8–9), it is time to boldly proclaim the gospel to everyone—both Jew and Gentile (Romans 10:14–17).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Mystery of God – The Lord Jesus Christ in you and you in Him

Part 1: http://mysteryofgod.net/

Part 2: http://mysteryofgod.net/html/mystery_part_ii.html

Excerpt:

What was hidden in the secret counsels of the Almighty was this: that an entirely new creation, made up of a diverse assortment of people including both Jews and Gentiles, possessing incredible spiritual riches (Eph 3:8), would come into existence.

This new creation is described as being in a living, organic union with the resurrected and glorified Lord Jesus Christ. It is called 'the Body of Christ', or the 'Bride of Christ', or 'the Church'. It is not an organization, but an organism. The Lord Jesus is the head of this unique organism: [Eph 5:23b] 'Christ is the head of the church: and he is the saviour of the body'. [1 Cor 12:27*] 'Now ye are the body of Christ, and members in particular.'*

…

That is the mystery hidden from past ages -- an entirely new organism with the Living Lord Jesus as the head, composed of diverse members each indwelt by the Spirit of Christ.

The key to this incredible work of redemption -- the event that opened the windows of Heaven and enabled the outpouring of God's grace upon the human race -- is the cross.

The Rapture Is NOT 'The Mystery God Revealed To Paul'!

https://pbenson.me/2017/10/03/the-rapture-is-not-the-mystery-god-revealed-to-paul/

Excerpt:

What Is The 'Mystery Of God' Revealed To The Church?

Thy dead men shall live, together with my dead body shall they arise. Awake and sing, ye that dwell in dust: for thy dew is as the dew of herbs, and the earth shall cast out the dead. Isaiah 26:19

As we shall see the mystery of the ages revealed to Paul had nothing to do with a supposed 'rapture' of the Church before the time of tribulation; but was referring to the resurrection of the dead. Namely Christ's resurrection; and our personal association with it. That in a similar manner as he was raised up into an immortal glorified body, so shall we be!

The concept of a pre-trib rapture is NOT an inherent part of the Gospel of Christ. It is a notion which has been added in by man. Peter used the expression 'cunningly devised fables' in his writings (2Peter 1:16). This is an accurate description of the pre-trib rapture theory. Although many facets of that doctrine are outright foolish, and quite easy to discern and refute, other elements of the pre-trib theory do evidence a real cunning in the promotion of that error.

But before you can preach a Gospel that the pre-trib rapture is a part of, you first have to INSERT it into the Gospel. Like a person takes yeast and kneads it into the dough of a loaf of bread they take the notion of a pre-trib rapture and knead it into the Word of God to try and convince you it is an integral part of the Gospel. Many different tactics are used to accomplish this feat. Attempting to establish the pre-trib theory as 'the mystery revealed to Paul' is merely one of them. But developing a proper understanding of just what the true 'mystery' is will keep that pre-trib leaven from rising, and tainting your beliefs.

Behold, I shew you a mystery; We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed. 1Corinthians 15:51

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Jesus: Christ / Messiah

Christ

What does Christ mean?

https://www.gotquestions.org/what-does-Christ-mean.html

Question: "What does Christ mean?"

Answer: To the surprise of some, “Christ” is not Jesus’ last name (surname). “Christ” comes from the Greek word Christos, meaning “anointed one” or “chosen one.” This is the Greek equivalent of the Hebrew word Mashiach, or “Messiah.” “Jesus” is the Lord’s human name given to Mary by the angel Gabriel (Luke 1:31). “Christ” is His title, signifying Jesus was sent from God to be a King and Deliverer (see Daniel 9:25; Isaiah 32:1). “Jesus Christ” means “Jesus the Messiah” or “Jesus the Anointed One.”

In ancient Israel, when someone was given a position of authority, oil was poured on his head to signify his being set apart for God’s service (e.g., 1 Samuel 10:1). Kings, priests, and prophets were anointed in such fashion. Anointing was a symbolic act to indicate God’s choosing (e.g., 1 Samuel 24:6). Although the literal meaning of anointed refers to the application of oil, it can also refer to one’s consecration by God, even if literal oil is not used (Hebrews 1:9).

There are hundreds of prophetic passages in the Old Testament that refer to a coming Messiah who would deliver His people (e.g., Isaiah 61:1; Daniel 9:26). Ancient Israel thought their Messiah would come with military might to deliver them from decades of captivity to earthly kings and pagan nations. But the New Testament reveals a much better deliverance provided by Jesus the Messiah—a deliverance from the power and penalty of sin (Luke 4:18; Romans 6:23).

The Bible says Jesus was anointed with oil on two separate occasions by two different women (Matthew 26:6–7; Luke 7:37–38), but the most significant anointing came by way of the Holy Spirit (Acts 10:38). Jesus’ title of “Christ” means He is God’s Anointed One, the One who fulfills the Old Testament prophecies, the Chosen Savior who came to rescue sinners (1 Timothy 1:15), and the King of kings who is coming back again to set up His Kingdom on earth (Zechariah 14:9).

Christ [N] [H] [S]

https://www.biblestudytools.com/dictionary/christ/

anointed, the Greek translation of the Hebrew word rendered "Messiah" (q.v.), the official title of our Lord, occurring five hundred and fourteen times in the New Testament. It denotes that he was anointed or consecrated to his great redemptive work as Prophet, Priest, and King of his people. He is Jesus the Christ (Acts 17:3 ; 18:5 ; Matthew 22:42), the Anointed One. He is thus spoken of by (Isaiah 61:1), and by (Daniel 9:24-26), who styles him "Messiah the Prince."

The Messiah is the same person as "the seed of the woman" (Genesis 3:15), "the seed of Abraham" (Genesis 22:18), the "Prophet like unto Moses" (Deuteronomy 18:15), "the priest after the order of Melchizedek" (Psalms 110:4), "the rod out of the stem of Jesse" (Isaiah 11:1 Isaiah 11:10), the "Immanuel," the virgin's son (Isaiah 7:14), "the branch of Jehovah" (Isaiah 4:2), and "the messenger of the covenant" (Malachi 3:1). This is he "of whom Moses in the law and the prophets did write." The Old Testament Scripture is full of prophetic declarations regarding the Great Deliverer and the work he was to accomplish. Jesus the Christ is Jesus the Great Deliverer, the Anointed One, the Saviour of men. This name denotes that Jesus was divinely appointed, commissioned, and accredited as the Saviour of men (Hebrews 5:4 ; Isaiah 11:2-4 ; 49:6 ; John 5:37 ; Acts 2:22).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

To believe that "Jesus is the Christ" is to believe that he is the Anointed, the Messiah of the prophets, the Saviour sent of God, that he was, in a word, what he claimed to be. This is to believe the gospel, by the faith of which alone men can be brought unto God. That Jesus is the Christ is the testimony of God, and the faith of this constitutes a Christian (1 Corinthians 12:3 ; 1 John 5:1).

What does “Christ” actually mean?

https://ourrabbijesus.com/articles/what-does-the-word-christ-actually-mean/

What does it mean to speak of Jesus as the “Christ”?

This word is one of the most important, basic words in a Christian’s vocabulary. But it isn’t until you dig into the Bible’s ancient context that you that see its surprising imagery and some of its most important implications.

First of all, the word “Christ” comes from christos, a Greek word meaning “anointed.” It is the equivalent of the word mashiach, or Messiah, in Hebrew. So, to be the Christ, or Messiah, is to be “the anointed one of God.”

But what does that mean?

To be anointed, literally, is to have sacred oil poured on one’s head, because God has chosen the person for a special task. Priests and kings were anointed, and occasionally prophets. Kings were anointed during their coronation rather than receiving a crown.

Even though prophets and priests were anointed, the phrase “anointed one” or “the Lord’s anointed” was most often used to refer to a king. For instance, David used it many times to refer to King Saul, even when Saul was trying to murder David and David was on the verge of killing Saul to defend himself:

Far be it from me because of the LORD that I should do this thing to my lord, the LORD’S anointed (mashiach), to stretch out my hand against him, since he is the LORD’S anointed (mashiach). (1 Samuel 24:6)

The overriding biblical imagery of the word “Messiah” or “Christ” is that of a king chosen by God. Often in the Old Testament, God would tell a prophet to go anoint someone and proclaim him king. The act of anointing with sacred oil emphasized that it was God himself who had ordained a person and given him authority to act as his representative.

I remember being quite surprised when I first learned this. If you would have asked me to describe Jesus’ identity, “Son of God” or “Suffering Savior” would have been my two best guesses. “King” didn’t even make the list. While Jesus also has a priestly and a prophetic role, the prominent idea within the title “Christ” is actually that of a king.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Hints of a Coming King

If you look more closely, you'll see that this is indeed the messianic idea throughout the Bible. Throughout the Old Testament, we see little hints that God would send a great king to Israel who would someday rule the world. In Genesis, when Jacob blesses each of his sons and foretells his future, he says of Judah:

The scepter will not depart from Judah, nor the ruler's staff from between his feet, until he comes to whom it belongs and the obedience of the nations is his. (Genesis 49:10)

This is the first hint that they were expecting a great king to arise out of Israel who would be king over the whole earth.

The clearest prophecy about the future messianic king comes from King David's time. David earnestly desired to build a temple, a "house" for God, but God responded that his son Solomon would be the one to build his temple. But then God went on to promise he would build a "house" for David, meaning that God would establish his family line after him. He further promised that from David's family would come a king whose kingdom will have no end:

When your days are over and you go to be with your fathers, I will raise up your offspring to succeed you, one of your own sons, and I will establish his kingdom. He is the one who will build a house for me, and I will establish his throne forever. I will be his father, and he will be my son. I will never take my love away from him, as I took it away from your predecessor. I will set him over my house and my kingdom forever; his throne will be established forever. (1 Chronicles 17:11-14)

This prophecy has been understood as having a double fulfillment. It is first fulfilled in Solomon, who built the temple, but did what God forbade—amassed a great fortune and married foreign wives. His kingdom broke apart a few years after his death. But this prophecy looks forward to a "Son of David" who would come, who would have a kingdom without end. This, in fact, is the seedbed of all of the messianic prophecies that speak of the "son of David" and the coming messianic king.

Jesus as the Christ

Often the gospels use cultural images of kingship to proclaim Jesus as the Christ, God's anointed King who has come. When a king arose with great power, other kingdoms would send emissaries with lavish gifts to establish a friendly relationship with the future leader. This is what is happening in Matthew 2, when wise men come to bring gifts to Christ, the newborn king whose star they have seen in the east.

This was a fulfillment of Numbers 24:17, Isaiah 60, and Psalm 72. The latter two passages both describe the coming of a great king and describe how representatives from nations everywhere would come to give him tribute:

The kings of Tarshish and of distant shores will bring tribute to him; the kings of Sheba and Seba will present him gifts. All kings will bow down to him and all nations will serve him. Psalm 72: 10-11

We see yet another picture of Jesus as King when he rode on a donkey into Jerusalem. This was often part of the annunciation of a new king, as it was for Solomon in 1 Kings 1:38-39. It is the fulfillment of Zechariah 9:9, the triumphal entry of the messianic king.

Rejoice greatly, O daughter of Zion! Shout, O daughter of Jerusalem! Behold, your king is coming to you! He is just and endowed with salvation; humble, and mounted on a donkey, on a colt, the foal of a donkey.

And, during Jesus' trial, the main question that he is asked is "Are you the King of the Jews?", which he answered affirmatively:

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

And they began to accuse him, saying, "We found this man misleading our nation and forbidding to pay taxes to Caesar, and saying that he himself is Christ, a King." So Pilate asked him, saying, "Are You the King of the Jews?" And he answered him and said, "It is as you say." (Luke 23:2-3)

What are the implications of Jesus as King?

When you think about Jesus' time on earth, the last thing you may think of is of a reigning king. But Jesus explained that his kingdom was not of this world (John 18:37). Rather, Jesus was talking about the kingdom of God, the major focus of his preaching. The kingdom of God is made up of those who submit their lives to God to reign over them.

As the King that God has sent, and of course because he is God, the kingdom of God is Jesus' kingdom. He speaks about how it is expanding like yeast or mustard seed as the news goes forth that he has arrived and people accept him as King. When he returns in glory, every knee on earth will bow to honor him as King (Philippians 2:9).

Did the people around him see him as a king? The fact that Jesus' disciples and others who believed in him referred to him as "Lord" suggests that they were giving him great honor, with the understanding that he was the Messianic King. To call Jesus "Lord" was to use a term for addressing royalty, like saying "Your Majesty" or "Your Highness." It is also a common term for addressing God himself, and hints of worshiping Jesus as God.

To use the word "Lord" displays an attitude of obedient submission to a greater power. Jesus seems even to expect that those who call him Lord obey him. To his listeners he asked, "Why do you call Me, 'Lord, Lord,' and do not do what I say?" (Luke 6:46). To call him "Lord" or to call him Jesus "Christ" is to say that he is the King that God has sent who has a right to reign over us.

This has implications about how we define ourselves as Christians. Usually, we talk in terms of doctrines and beliefs, but the very word "Christ" calls us to more than assenting to a creed. If Christ means King, a Christian is one who considers Jesus his Lord and King, and submits to his reign.

Paul too proclaims that salvation comes through faith in the atoning work of Jesus, as well as a commitment to honor him as one's personal Lord and King:

If you confess with your mouth Jesus as Lord, and believe in your heart that God raised him from the dead, you will be saved. (Romans 10:9)

Strong's Concordance

Christos: the Anointed One, Messiah, Christ

Original Word: Χριστός, οῦ, ὁ
Part of Speech: Noun, Masculine Transliteration: Christos
Phonetic Spelling: (khris-tos')
Definition: the Anointed One, Messiah, Christ
Usage: Anointed One; the Messiah, the Christ.

5547 Xristós (from 5548 /xríō, "anoint with olive oil") – properly, "the Anointed One," the Christ (Hebrew, "Messiah").

See also*: Messiah (Christ)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Christ in Biblical Greek

Χριστος

http://www.abarim-publications.com/Meaning/Christ.html

The name Christ: Summary

Meaning

Anointed, Sovereign

Etymology

From the noun χριστος (christos), anointed or sovereign.

The name Christ in the Bible

Christ, or christos is not really a name but an appellative, or even a title. It describes an appointment; a function in the theocratic structure of Israel, namely that of high priest, prophet or king; anybody who had no earthly superior and worked directly for God.

There were quite a few "Christs" at large in Israel at any given time, and although Matthew mentions that Jesus of Nazareth was called Christ (Matthew 1:16), he was never the only one.

The word χριστος (christos) occurs 565 times in the New Testament; see full concordance.

Etymology and meaning of the name Christ

The noun χριστος (christos), meaning anointed, comes from the Greek verb χριω (chrio), meaning to smear or anoint:

Excerpted from: Abarim Publications' Biblical Dictionary

χριω

The verb χριω (chrio) means to smear or anoint. Ritualistically, the act of anointing was performed upon people who had no earthly superior and were as such sovereigns (kings, priests, prophets).

This verb's most striking derivation is the noun χριστος (christos), which describes someone who is a sovereign: someone who answers only to the Creator and not to any human.

In Hebrew this verb is משח (mashah), and the noun is the familiar word משיח (mashiah).

So yes, the literal meaning of the name Christ is Anointed, but practically it means much rather Inaugurated or even Highest Earthly Rank. Politically speaking, it describes the Individual's Autonomy, as opposed to a political system in which one person or a few people exert absolute power over the rest (read our article on the name Antichrist).

There were many more phrases and names from the Old Testament to label the Son of God with (Branch, Prince of Peace, Corner Stone), but the label Christ became such a hit probably because of its political implications.

The Christ and Rome

In their wonderful book In Search Of Paul, authors Crossan and Reed argue that much of Paul's signature theological phraseology was in fact a direct response (and insurrectionary response) to Roman imperial theology. Since in Rome, politics and theology were the same, calling Jesus the Christ (or the Hebrew equivalent Messiah — John 1:41) was not so much an act of worship to God but much more an act of high treason against Roman imperial theology. Subsequently, the proclaimed Christ died a political death: on the cross.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

To modern readers the name Christ doesn't mean anything other than it being the surname of Jesus, but in the time that the Bible was written it was a commonly understood title of the rightful king of Israel. The phrases "Son Of God," Redeemer, and "Savior of the World" came straight from the Romans and were originally applied to Caesar Augustus, son of the deified Julius Caesar.

Even the title "son of God" and the word monogenes, meaning only-begotten, a word made famous by John 3:16, is applied in the Bible to quite a few others (see below). And to make matters worse: even the name Jesus was quite common in the time of the Bible and there are five separate individuals named Jesus mentioned in the Bible (see our article on the name Jesus).

Title flexibility

It seems that there are not many titles of Christ that are exclusively his. After his death and resurrection, the apostle Paul depicted him mostly as the Crucified Christ (where the English word crucify is also a misnomer, since the Greek word that Paul uses means "lifted up" — Paul speaks of the Elevated Christ).

When under emperor Constantine Christianity became the empire's main religion, Christ quickly became known as Pantokrator, or All-Ruler, a phrase drawn from the Septuagint (and please read our article on the name Nazarene for a closer look at this). During the time of the great plague, Christ became the Man of Sorrows. The Reformation brought the Bible into the common home, and Jesus became mostly depicted as one of us, a sympathetic teacher with his friends and followers.

In our day and age of individual freedom, Christ is depicted in all possible ways, with all available skin colors and attire, even up to Catholicism Wow's nice tried but still wholly atrocious Buddy Christ.

Since Paul says that the Spirit searches all things (1 Corinthians 2:10), perhaps we should start calling him the Great Search Engine. Or since in him and by him everything was made, and in him all things hold together (Colossians 1:17), perhaps The Great Server would apply. Perhaps not. But all these various depictions show that no matter how intimate Christ is experienced, or how much reverence we feel for him, his ultimate personality or even most fundamental function is utterly difficult to grasp.

The great uniquity of Jesus Christ is not that he is the Christ, or that he is a teacher or even a son of God; his ultimate uniquity is that he died but wouldn't stay dead. And that not just because he rose (because even that has a few Biblical precedents in Lazarus and the widow's son of Luke 7:11-16, the boy whom Elijah the Tishbite raised in 1 Kings 17:17-24 and the Shunammite's son whom Elisha raised in 2 Kings 4:35) but because there was nothing in this world that could keep him dead. His victory over death at Golgotha, by the sheer merit of his identity, is big enough for us all to enjoy. In Christ, all of us are immortal.

So yes, the name Christ means Anointed, but with a very big footnote.

See also: Gospel of Jesus the Messiah (Christ)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

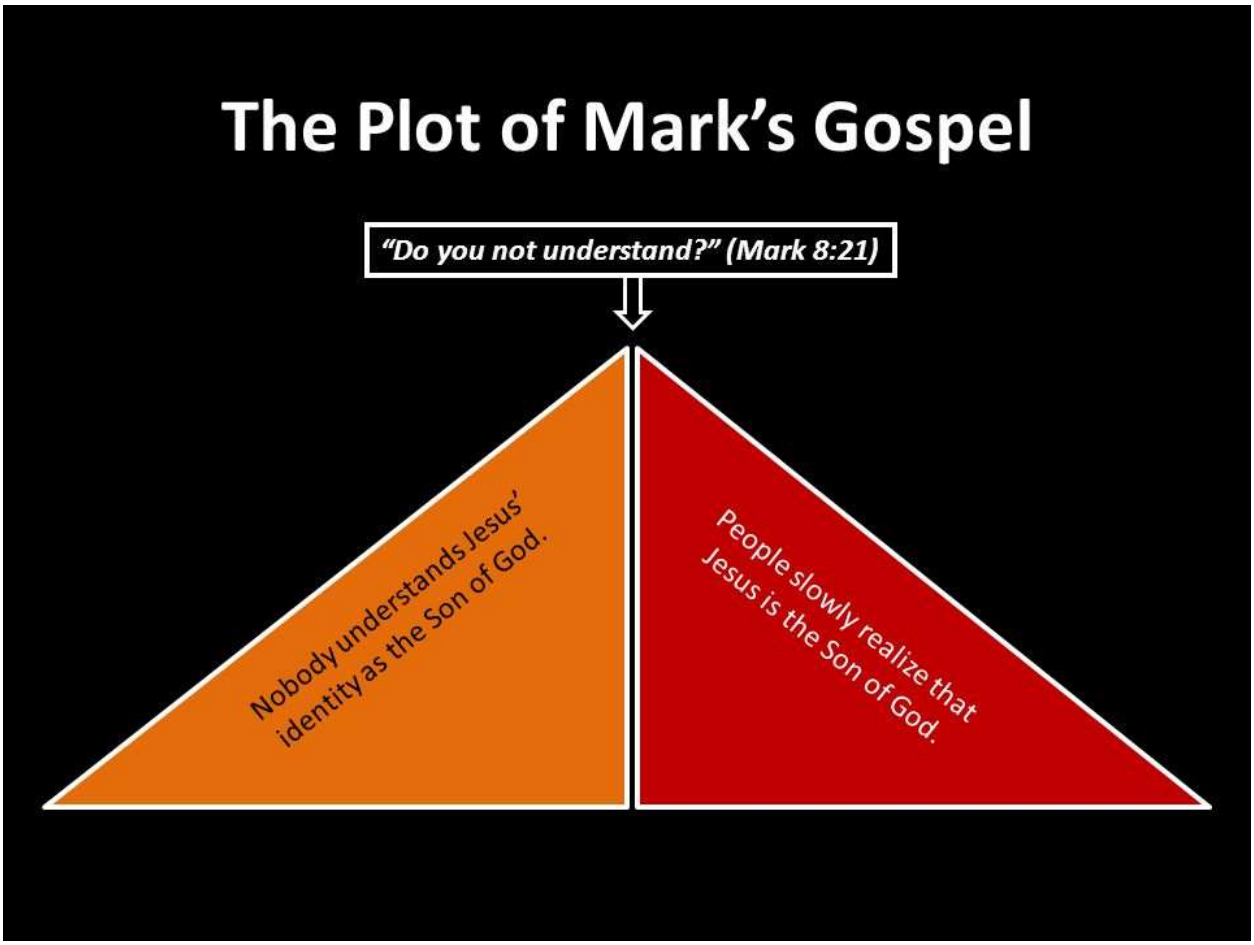
Messiah (Christ)

See: Christ

See also: Gospel of Jesus the Messiah (Christ)

Messiah is derived from the Hebrew word (mashiach) for "the anointed one". Christ is derived from the equivalent Greek word (christos).

The Jews had a typical/traditional understanding of what the Messiah would do when he appeared. Mark and the other disciples in the Bible eventually came to a different understanding/realization…



Source: http://slideplayer.com/slide/5880989/

See also: Christ

See next slide on following page…

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Jesus' Self-Understanding – N.T. Wright (2002) http://ntwrightpage.com/2016/04/05/jesus-self-understanding/

N. T. Wright and Israel's Representative Messiah
https://jesusmonotheism.com/n-t-wright-and-israels-representative-messiah/

See also*: Christ or Messiah? Jesus or Yeshua?

Gospel of Jesus the Messiah (Christ)

Christ

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Lord

The Difference Between "LORD" and "Lord" and "lord"

http://jimmyakin.com/the-difference-between-lord-and-lord

Q: When the Bible uses the word "lord," sometimes it is all in capital letters ("LORD"), sometimes only the first letter is capitalized ("Lord"), and sometimes no letters are capitalized ("lord"). Why is this?

A: When you encounter the word in all lower case — lord — it is simply a reference to a human ruler.

When you encounter the word with the first letter only capitalized — Lord — it is either because it is at the front of a sentence or because it is a reference to one of the three divine Persons of the Godhead (the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit) or to the entire Godhead.

When you see the term entirely capitalized — LORD — it will be in the Old Testament and is translating the Hebrew word for the name of God — YHWH, or Yahweh (Biblical Hebrew has no vowels, only consonant letters). The reason for this is that the Ten Commandments forbid anyone to misuse the name of Yahweh, stating:

> "You shall not misuse the name of Yahweh your God, for Yahweh will not hold anyone who misuses his name guiltless." (Ex. 20:7; cf. Deut. 5:11).

Although the name Yahweh was used freely in the early history of Israel, by the time of Jesus the Jews (especially the Pharisees) had become hyper-scrupulous about breaking the Mosaic Law and, in an attempt to "build a wall" around the commandments of the Law so that no one could even get close to breaking them, they ruled that no one should speak the name of the Yahweh ever. The only exception to this was during one feast day of the year when the priest would intone the actual name Yahweh once during the liturgy.

This prohibition on saying "Yahweh" created a problem for people reading the Bible out loud in synagogue liturgies. Since the name of Yahweh was freely used in the Scripture texts, what were they to say in its place as they read the Bible out loud? The answer that was reached was that they were to say the word "Adonai" instead. Adonai is the Hebrew word for "lord," or actually "my lord."

When the Septuagint (the Greek version of the Old Testament) was translated, it replaced the Hebrew word YHWH with the Greek word for "lord" (kyrios).

Thus the New Testament writers, because they were both devout Jews and people who were quoting the Septuagint in their writings, never used the name "Yahweh" in the New Testament, but consistently used "Kyrios" in its place. … In reality, the Apostle Paul himself used "Kyrios" instead of "Yahweh."

…when vowels were eventually introduced into the Jewish alphabet, they came in the form of vowel points above and below the consonant letters that were written on the page of Scripture. Because the custom of saying "Adonai" instead of "Yahweh" was already in place, when the Jews added vowel points to the Old Testament, they used the vowel points for "Adonai" (a-o-ai) whenever the encountered the word "YHWH," giving us "Yahowaih," which is transliterated into English as "Jehovah." …. "Jehovah" is not God's true name. Based on the patristic and other evidence available, the actual way the divine name was pronounced was "Yahweh," not "Jehovah."

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Continued on next page…

Jesus Christ-Lord God of the Old Testament and Son of God
https://www.churchathome.org/articles/jesus-christ-lord-god-of-the-old-testament-and-son-of-god.html

In order to truly understand the Scriptures, it is critical to realize that the Lord God of the Old Testament was the one Who was made flesh and became Jesus Christ, the Son of God. As we will see, “God” in the Old Testament is frequently translated from the Hebrew word elohim, which is a collective plural noun that refers to a holy family of spirit beings. Scripture reveals that there are at present two Who are Elohim—members of the God Family: God, Who is called the Father in the New Testament, and the one Who became Jesus Christ, and is thus now God the Son.

"There Is One God, the Father...and One Lord, Jesus Christ"
https://www.ucg.org/bible-study-tools/booklets/is-god-a-trinity/there-is-one-god-the-fatherand-one-lord-jesus-christ

How many times is Jesus called Lord in the New Testament?
https://www.answers.com/Q/How_many_times_is_Jesus_called_Lord_in_the_New_Testament

According to Charles T. Carter in his article "Preaching: the Lordship of Jesus Christ" (posted on preachingpoint.org) "The term "lord" occurs over 600 times in the New Testament. It is true that sometimes it is merely a term of address or respect or affection. However, at least 150 of these times it is used of God Himself, and nearly 250 times it is used to describe Jesus."

Where Is Jesus in the Old Testament?
https://www.desiringgod.org/articles/where-is-jesus-in-the-old-testament

See also*: Christ

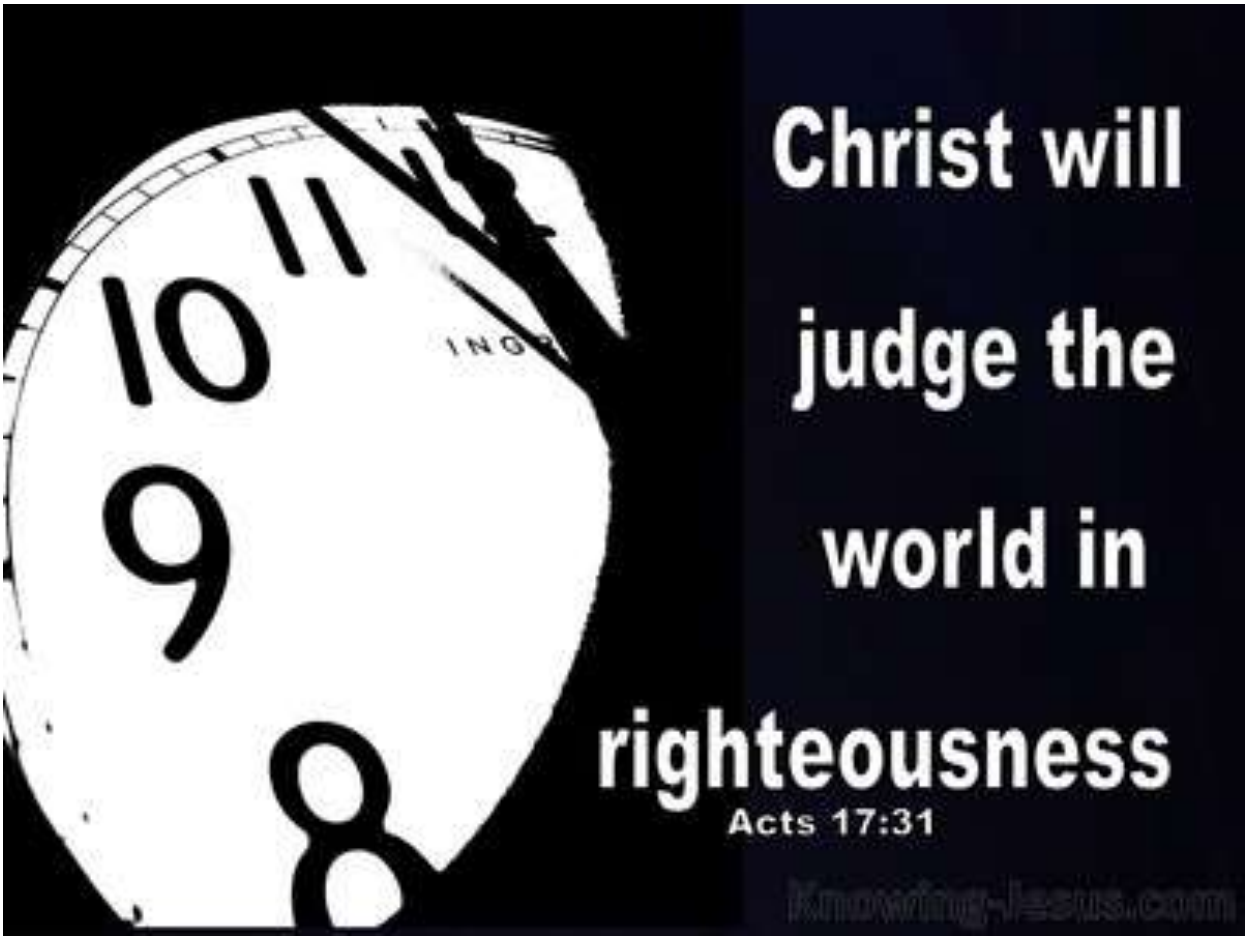
 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



Judge

19 Bible Verses about Jesus Christ, Judge
https://bible.knowing-jesus.com/topics/Jesus-Christ,-Judge

24 Bible Verses about Christ Judging https://bible.knowing-jesus.com/topics/Christ-Judging

93 Verses about Jesus Will Judge
https://www.openbible.info/topics/jesus_will_judge

Jesus Christ as Judge (references)
https://www.biblegateway.com/resources/dictionary-of-bible-themes/2309-Jesus-Christ-as-judge

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Jesus Will Be Our Judge

https://truthfortheworld.org/jesus-judge

The story is told about a man who came before a judge after he had committed a crime. When the man saw the judge, he was happy. The judge had been his defender in an earlier case. When the judge sentenced the man to prison, he asked: “Don’t you remember who I am? I am the man you defended many years ago. How can you sentence me to prison now? The judge replied: “In the earlier case, I was your defender. It was my desire to set you free. Now, I am your judge and I must judge you fairly according to the law.”

The same is true of Jesus. Now He is our Saviour and Mediator (Matthew 1:21; Luke 19:10; 1 Timothy 2:5). His salvation is available to all who are willing to obey His will (Matthew 7:21-23. Hebrews 5:8-9). However, the time is coming when He will be our Judge. The first time, Jesus came to save. The next time He will come to judge (Hebrews 9:27-28).

John the baptizer was the first to tell us Jesus would be our judge (Matthew 3:12). Paul tells us every person will stand before Christ to be judged (2 Corinthians 5:10). Whether we are rich or poor, black or white, short or tall, Asian, African, European, or American, we will all be judged (2 Timothy 4:8). Paul also tells us that Christ is a righteous judge (2 Timothy 4:8). The Bible says all judgment has been given to him (John 5:22). The Bible also shows us a picture of the Judgment (Matthew 25:31-46). The fact that Jesus will be our Judge must be preached to the world (Acts 10:42; Romans 2:9-16). Jesus will judge us according to the Gospel (John 12:48; Romans 2:9-16). All people will be judged fairly (Acts 10:34-35; Colossians 3:24-25).

Jesus is qualified to be our Judge. He knows what is in our hearts (John 2:24-25; Revelation 2:23). Because Jesus is God and knows our hearts, He is able to be a just and righteous Judge of all the world (Acts 17:30-31).

There is a great day coming! It is a day when everyone in the world will be judged. Jesus will be the Judge. In order for us to go to Heaven, we must obey God’s will (John 14:15; Romans 6:17-18; 1 John 5:3). By the grace and mercy of God we can be saved (Ephesians 2:8-9; Titus 3:5). If we do not obey, we will be sent to Hell (Matthew 7:13-14; 2 Thessalonians 1:7-9; Matthew 25:46).

What does the Bible say about when God will judge us?

https://www.gotquestions.org/judgment.html

Question: "What does the Bible say about when God will judge us?"

Answer: There are two separate judgments. Believers are judged at the Judgment Seat of Christ (Romans 14:10-12). Every believer will give an account of himself, and the Lord will judge the decisions he made—including those concerning issues of conscience. This judgment does not determine salvation, which is by faith alone (Ephesians 2:8-9), but rather is the time when believers must give an account of their lives in service to Christ. Our position in Christ is the “foundation” spoken of in 1 Corinthians 3:11-15. That which we build upon the foundation can be the “gold, silver, and precious stones” of good works in Christ’s name, obedience and fruitfulness—dedicated spiritual service to glorify God and build the church. Or what we build on the foundation may be the “wood, hay and stubble” of worthless, frivolous, shallow activity with no spiritual value. The Judgment Seat of Christ will reveal this.

The gold, silver, and precious stones in the lives of believers will survive God’s refining fire (v. 13), and believers will be rewarded based on those good works—how faithfully we served Christ (1 Corinthians 9:4-27), how well we obeyed the Great Commission (Matthew 28:18-20), how victorious we were over sin

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

(Romans 6:1-4), how well we controlled our tongues (James 3:1-9), etc. We will have to give an account for our actions, whether they were truly indicative of our position in Christ. The fire of God's judgment will completely burn up the "wood, hay and stubble" of the words we spoke and things we did which had no eternal value. "So then, each of us will give an account of himself to God" (Romans 14:12).

The second judgment is that of unbelievers who will be judged at the Great White Throne Judgment (Revelation 20:11-15). This judgment does not determine salvation, either. Everyone at the Great White Throne is an unbeliever who has rejected Christ in life and is therefore already doomed to the lake of fire. Revelation 20:12 says that unbelievers will be "judged out of those things which were written in the books, according to their works." Those who have rejected Christ as Lord and Savior will be judged based on their works alone, and because the Bible tells us that "by the works of the Law no flesh will be justified" (Galatians 2:16), they will be condemned. No amount of good works and the keeping of God's laws can be sufficient to atone for sin. All their thoughts, words and actions will be judged against God's perfect standard and found wanting. There will be no reward for them, only eternal condemnation and punishment.

NOTE: For issues and details related to Heaven and life after death, as well as covering related topics and including different perspectives (including N.T. Wright) - see "Reference Notes on Heaven" (based in part on the book, Heaven, by Randy Alcorn).

Did Jesus Judge? (How Seeing Red Misses the Black and White)

https://couragematters.com/2017/07/did-jesus-judge/

We've all heard it. We may even believe it: "Jesus didn't judge." It's a huge claim, considering the life and teachings of Jesus. But is it true? The word "judge" means to "give an authoritative opinion." For those who keep reciting the mantra that "Jesus didn't judge," and that his followers shouldn't either, I have a humble message to deliver: Merriam Webster called. She wants her dictionary back. Did Jesus judge? All the time. In fact, you'll never be able to love God, people, or yourself until you learn how to judge as Jesus did.

Stay with me, because what you're about to read could forever change your life.

The "Jesus didn't judge" argument is typically made by people who want to justify attitudes and behaviors long prohibited in the Bible. If you don't know your Bible (and Jesus), the statement can freeze you, rendering you incapable of saying anything further — because it seems, on the surface, to be such a powerful statement of truth. In fact, it's entirely false. When people use it, they reveal their lack of Bible knowledge — and lack of knowing the biblical Jesus. Notice I say "biblical Jesus." It's so important to do this nowadays, because so many have recreated Jesus in their own image.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The end result is a Jesus who isn't the Jesus of Scripture at all. In 1 Corinthians 11:4 (ESV) Paul warns us to resist this practice:

> "For if someone comes and proclaims another Jesus than the one we proclaimed, or if you receive a different spirit from the one you received, or if you accept a different gospel from the one you accepted, you put up with it readily enough."

FAKE vs. REAL JESUS

A non-judging Jesus isn't Jesus. As a matter of historical fact, Jesus did judge — continually. He still does. The coy lie that Jesus didn't judge, or that His followers should not judge, can only lead to the conclusion of tossing the entire Bible out the window — along with Christianity. To follow Jesus is to be judged and to judge – it's simply a matter of how that judgment takes place.

The entire Bible is a book about judging attitudes and behavior in the here and now, so that they conform to what honors God. It is impossible to read or teach the Bible without quickly getting to the issue of morals — and morals deal with motives and behaviors. Passing judgment. The entire Bible is a book about reforming thoughts and behaviors so that they fall in line with God.

> "God hates being separated from us, and that's why he decided to do something about it. There has never been a more potent, simultaneous expression of hatred and love . . . justice and mercy kissed at the cross."

What does this mean for Jesus' followers? It means that it's not possible to follow him without first judging ourselves. Then, and only then, can we be in position to help others change their ways, too. The key is to judge with true humility toward God and people. If you judge with arrogance, or a self-righteous attitude, you haven't yet learned how to judge with the kind of humility Jesus calls each of us to.

Consider 2 Corinthians 10:5 (NIV), as one potent reminder: "We demolish arguments and every pretension that sets itself up against the knowledge of God, and we take captive every thought to make it obedient to Christ." Is it possible to demolish an argument or pretension, or to take a thought captive without judging it? And if this doesn't lead to reining in otherwise sinful behavior, then what's the point?

NOT THE REAL JESUS: The idea that Jesus didn't judge can only be supported if we throw away his teachings. To do so would give us a Jesus other than the one presented in the Bible.

THE CROSS

The cross is where God made his definitive judgment against sin. He hates it. But the cross is also his ultimate act of love toward sinners. God hates being separated from us, and that's why he decided to do something about it. There has never been a more potent, simultaneous expression of hatred and love. In other words, justice and mercy kissed at the cross. The next time someone says, "Jesus didn't judge," ask them to think more — much more — about the cross.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

COMING JUDGMENT — BY JESUS

In fact, one day we will all appear before Jesus — to be judged. Believers appear for a judgment of rewards. This is known as the "judgment seat" of Christ (Romans 14:10, 2 Corinthians 5:10). Unbelievers will be judged at the "great white throne" judgment spoken of in Revelation 20:11-15. The white throne judgment is not a judgment of rewards, because there is no reward for those who reject Christ. It is a judgment of eternal separation known as the "second death." A simplified way to understand the great white throne judgment is that people who go through this life willingly rejecting God will get their desire granted, eternally, at the great white throne judgment.

The Bible presents right and wrong, good and bad. If Jesus didn't judge, we would have no Bible — the Bible from which Jesus constantly taught. If Jesus didn't expect us to judge each other and one another, then He would not have called anyone to preach or teach about Him. We wouldn't even be able to read the Bible for ourselves, let alone others. If judgment weren't part of the Christian turf, God would not have used human beings to plant a single church, where the Bible is to be taught, embraced and applied around the world. The fulfillment of the Great Commission would be impossible.

SEEING RED?

Keep in mind that the red letters found in some publications of the New Testament (intended to help readers quickly identify the spoken words of Jesus), were non-existent in Jesus' day. He quoted and taught from the Old Testament. In light of this, it's vital to understand that Jesus' teachings go far beyond the red letters of the New Testament. They are contained throughout the Bible. 2 Timothy 3:16-17 (NIV) reminds us that it is not just parts of the Bible that matter, but all of it:

> "All Scripture is God-breathed and is useful for teaching, rebuking, correcting and training in righteousness, so that the servant of God may be thoroughly equipped for every good work"

It's all the teachings of the Bible that are inspired, given to us by God — and continually quoted by Jesus. (Of course, some passages have a limited context in time and scope, but we must be very careful we don't dismiss the obvious, ongoing application of the overwhelming majority of the Bible).

ERASING TRUTH: To think that only the red letters in a New Testament are the teachings of Jesus is to have the most elementary misunderstanding of Jesus' words.

FOUR LETTER WORD

Think about this: the Great Commission (Matthew 28:19-20) is to go into the world and not merely sprinkle or immerse people under water (baptize), but teach people to obey Jesus' commands. Here it is, in all its splendor:

> "Therefore go and make disciples of all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit, and teaching them to obey everything I have commanded you. And surely I am with you always, to the very end of the age."

Notice the words "obey everything." If there is no difference between a person who obeys, and a person who does not, then what's the point? Obedience requires judging our thoughts and behaviors, and weighing them against God's standards. Obedience requires perpetual judgment and adjustment.

SO, WHAT DID JESUS MEAN?

When Jesus said "do not judge or you will be judged" (Matthew 7:1-6), the context was a rebuke against a critical, self-righteous, legalistic spirit, not against judging with humility, using the plumb line of God's word as the measure. Cults are formed and forge followings by taking words out of context. They lead people astray. Jesus' words, "do not judge or you will be judged" are among the most out-of-context quotes in the history of civilization — and when we misquote them, we lead people away from Jesus in droves.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Consider Paul's words in 1 Corinthians 5:9-13 (ESV):

> "I wrote to you in my letter not to associate with sexually immoral people — not at all meaning the sexually immoral of this world, or the greedy and swindlers, or idolaters, since then you would need to go out of the world. But now I am writing to you not to associate with anyone who bears the name of brother if he is guilty of sexual immorality or greed, or is an idolater, reviler, drunkard, or swindler—not even to eat with such a one. For what have I to do with judging outsiders? Is it not those inside the church whom you are to judge? God judges those outside. "Purge the evil person from among you."

Did Jesus judge? If you're still asking that question, you aren't paying attention.

Who is Jesus? Judge.

http://www.biblestudyguide.org/articles/jesus-who-is-jesus-series/who-is-jesus-judge.htm

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Prison

Prisons during Bible times, esp. Paul's time (various points of view):

http://www.bible.ca/sin-no-jails-prisons-in-judaism-old-testament-law-of-moses-slavery-welfare-jewish-comparison.htm

http://www.restorativejustice.org/10fulltext/marshall-christopher.-prison-prisoners-and-the-bible [PDF]

https://www.scribd.com/doc/14354155/Life-in-Prison-in-1ad

http://www.biblelandhistory.com/italy/praetorian-guard.html

What Were Roman Prisons Like in Paul's Time?
https://www.olivetree.com/blog/imprisonment-in-the-roman-world/

https://www.insight.org/resources/article-library/individual/doing-time-in-a-first-century-prison

https://www.ancient-origins.net/ancient-places-europe/infamous-mamertine-prison-and-supposed-incarceration-saint-peter-003447

Punishment, Prisons, and the Bible: Does "Old Testament Justice" Justify our Retributive Culture?
by Martin H. Pritikin [PDF] – a Jewish perspective
https://papers.ssrn.com/sol3/papers.cfm?abstract_id=1844609

https://pdfs.semanticscholar.org/19e5/5b6ebe597acf4a5945029a2c5b0b2494bd55.pdf

http://myjli.com/crime/index.php/lesson-1/punishment-prisons-and-the-bible/

> Video TorahCafe re: Death Penalty today in light of Torah > (Pritikin is one of the debate speakers and is against the death penalty) > http://myjli.com/crime/index.php/lesson-2/death-penalty-debate/

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Clarifications:

Does James Contradict Paul? Faith Righteousness vs Works Righteousness
https://forwardministries.org/jamesandpaul/

Excerpt: [See also: James]

James says…

> James 2:24 You see that a person is considered righteous by what they do and not by faith alone.

Paul says…

> Romans 3:21-24 But now apart from the law the righteousness of God has been made known, to which the Law and the Prophets testify. This righteousness is given through faith in Jesus Christ to all who believe. There is no difference between Jew and Gentile, for all have sinned and fall short of the glory of God, and all are justified freely by his grace through the redemption that came by Christ Jesus.

Which on is right? I believe they are both right…but let me explain. The simplest explanation is James is looking at the life of a believer from a physical or carnal perspective while Paul is addressing the spiritual reality. James is looking at what is seen while Paul is looking at that which is unseen or the condition of our spirit.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Walk with me a little deeper into James 2.

> James 2:14 What good is it, my brothers and sisters, if someone claims to have faith but has no deeds? Can such faith save them?

The subject of the next several passages is actually the kind of faith his audience says they have but he addresses their faith by evaluating their fruit. James is not referring to the actions per se, he's referring to the effectiveness of the faith they say they have. In other words he might say it this way, "if you say you have faith in Christ, you're born again, but that same faith isn't changing your actions, I'm not so sure you're operating in the right kind of faith to have been born again to start with."

He's not judging by their actions to see IF they're born again, he's questioning their faith by looking at how they're treating each other, favoring rich people, complaining and their words in general. A heart that is operating in the kind of faith it takes to receive the spirit of God to be born again should also produce the fruit of controlling the tongue and using it for blessing rather than cursing.

James references Abraham but notice the subject of this sentence is his faith.

> James 2:21-24 Was not our father Abraham considered righteous for what he did when he offered his son Isaac on the altar? You see that his faith and his actions were working together, and his faith was made complete by what he did. And the scripture was fulfilled that says, "Abraham believed God, and it was credited to him as righteousness," and he was called God's friend. You see that a person is considered righteous (justified) by what they do and not by faith alone.

Again, James is looking at what should be evidenced in a believer's life from a physical perspective while Paul tends to address righteousness and justification from a spiritual perspective.

The truth is that no flesh can be justified by the law in no way, shape or form yet a righteous person should reflect their righteousness in their behavior. You've been forgiven, sanctified by the blood of Jesus, reconciled, made holy, sealed with His spirit, given an inheritance and indwell by His spirit…now work that out into your life through awe, reverence respect and worship. As your works line up with your spiritual reality you'll experience outward salvation (healing, deliverance, provision, rescue, etc…)

I go into these point in much more detail in this free message, check it out now…

Note: Paul in Galatians 3 thru 4 and in Romans 4 also discusses Abraham and his righteousness and referencing some of the same Old Testament verses:

2:14-26 Many skeptics argue that a contradiction exists between Paul's statement that "a man is justified by faith apart from works" (Rm 3:28; cp. 4:5-6; Gl 2:16) and the teaching of James that "a man is justified by works and not by faith alone" (Jms 2:24). However, these positions actually complement one other. First, Paul and James addressed different situations. On the one hand, Paul refuted a Jewish legalism holding that one must observe the law's requirements in order to be saved. On the other hand, James opposed an antinomianism that was twisting faith in Christ so much that no expression of works was necessary.

Second, when Paul used the word "justified," he meant "saved" or "declared righteous," whereas James meant "vindicated" or "authenticated." By "works," Paul meant "works of the law," whereas James meant works that faith produces.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

In the light of the above, Paul was saying that one is declared righteous by God apart from the works of the law. James, by contrast, was saying that a person's faith produces works that vindicate his faith in Christ as genuine. James used Abraham's willingness to sacrifice Isaac (vv. 21-23; cp. Gn 22:9) and Rahab's protection of the spies (Jms 2:25; cp. Jos 2) as examples to show that their works authenticated the reality of their faith in God. For James, faith without works was clearly worthless; it must be more than words (Jms 2:14-19,26). Authentic faith will bear the fruit of good works. [Apologetics Study Bible Notes]

Bible References:

Genesis 15:6 And he believed in the LORD; and he counted it to him for righteousness.

Galatians 3:6-8 Even as Abraham believed God, and it was accounted to him for righteousness…

James 2:23 And the scripture was fulfilled which said, Abraham believed God, …

Romans 4:5,9,11,22-25 But to him that works not, but believes on him that justifies the …

Faith That Works
http://ramilcarmen.blogspot.com/2015/09/faith-that-works.html

For more details re: Paul vs James see Appendix in my separate references resource:

The Complete Sayings of Jesus – NKJV with Appendix

(Note: NKJV is primary text to make reading easier, except when it varies significantly from the original KJV or a different translation text is clearer and/or deemed more accurate.)

Memorize James in One Month
http://masterofmemory.com/memorize-james-choose/

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Pauline Concept of Law and Sin (Parts 1-8) (2013)

https://biblequestion.wordpress.com/2013/04/05/paul-the-apostle-law-and-sin-part-1/ (Part 1 links to rest)

https://biblequestion.wordpress.com/the-pauline-conception-of-law-final-3-2/ [PDF includes all Parts 1-8), but does not include the Venn diagram below]

Excerpt:

Referring to the diagram, as supported by Scripture passages, one sees that God's eternal will and plan for man, as created, falls within God's moral and natural law, represented by the large yellow circle. Elements of Moses' Law, and cultural mores and customs, are overlapped by God's eternal will, to the extent that those spheres ratify, or rather are ratified by, God's plan. Noahide Law, originally limited to a symbolic reverence for blood as life, remains valid in principle, though not in letter of the law. Later additions regarding fornication and idolatry, besides being integral with Moses' Law, can be said as well to be valid as part of God's original, revealed will. (Therefore, those circles partly overlap.) The Abrahamic Covenant, which featured only one law, that of circumcision, has been transcended by the Law of Faith, which was the effective element all along (circumcision being the seal and testimony of the Covenant, the theological equivalent to Christian water baptism—as is, arguably, the Lord's Supper). Moses' Law, which incorporated in totality the laws given to Noah and Abraham, was "fulfilled" by the work of Christ by several standards, including the fulfillment of Law's overall prophetic, moral, and salvific purpose. Therefore, those who by faith have entered "into Christ," while bound to God's eternal moral law, are free not only from the letter of Moses' Law (the temporal rituals, ordinances, observances, and strictures external to God's eternal law), but from the "Law of Sin and Death" that Moses' Law actuates (Rom. 7:1–8:4, 10:4, Gal. 3:19-26, et al.).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Therefore, the elements of Moses' Law, apart from God's moral and natural law, are rendered irrelevant and non-binding to the Christian, just as they remain ineffectual to observant Jews, who are unable to "keep the whole law" (Rom. 2:12-29, Gal. 5:3, 6:13, see also James 2:10). Thus the Christian reverences life, but is not forbidden from eating meat containing blood. The Christian honors the Creator for the Sabbath, as suggested in Genesis 2, but is not prohibited from work or travel on the Sabbath, a commandment added by Moses' Law. The Christian is forbidden no food, "for every creature of God is good, and nothing to be refused, if it be received with thanksgiving" (1 Tim. 4:4).

Those elements of civil law and culture which do not violate Biblical faith or a pure conscience are acceptable to the Christian. Governments in general "are not a terror to good works, but to bad ones" (Rom. 13:3), though just rights can be claimed and abuse of rights disputed. Christians must not participate in ungodly pagan practices, though innocuous differences may be overlooked if not made an issue.

One concludes that the laws for which Christians are responsible are those which make for peace and godliness, and which edify the brethren (Rom. 14:19, 1 Tim. 2:2, et al.), all of which surely fall within the sphere of God's moral and natural law. Christians are saved, like Abraham, by the Law of Faith, not by external laws or rituals. All that is not done in faith being sin, a Christian ought to do nothing which cannot be done in faith, in the sight of God—not in unbelief, by which some imagine that they will escape judgment. The ultimate criterion for all we do must be the Law of Christ, which is love and gratitude for Christ's work displayed not in self-actualization or self-motivation, but in serving to edify, profit, and benefit others.

Romans TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Paul Never Wrote About Justification

https://redeeminggod.com/paul-never-wrote-about-justification/

Excerpt:

Earlier today I criticized pastors and professors for using big words in their theological writing and teaching. I have previously written about big words in pastoral preaching.

One of the responses I anticipated (but have not yet received) is that big words are okay if they are 'biblical' big words like "justification" or "sanctification."

It is often argued (and I argued this way myself in the past) that if a word is used by a Spirit-inspired author like the Apostle Paul, then rather than "dumb down" the message for our audience, we should educate them about the big words with God saw fit to include in Scripture.

In other words, if Paul wrote "justification" then we should use it too. If people don't understand this word (or other big words of the Bible), then it is the job of the pastor or teacher to educate the people about what it means

I am all for educating people. And I do think that learning the big words of theology can help people better understand God, Scripture, this world, and themselves.

But let's be clear about something: Paul never wrote about justification, sanctification, or any of other "big words of the Bible." He didn't. And neither did any other biblical author.

Before you start quoting verses at me, let me clarify: What Paul wrote about was dikaiōsis and hagiasmos. It is the Bible translators who wrote about justification and sanctification.

And the truth is that dikaiōsis does not have to be translated as justification, nor does hagiasmos have to be translated as sanctification. There are other ways of translating these words (and those in the same word family) which can use modern, every day language that people already understand.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Like what? Rather than justification, dikaiōsis could be translated as acquittal, vindication, declared righteous or right. Rather than sanctification, hagiasmos could be translated as making holy, developing holiness, or becoming more holy. Some of these alternate ways of translating may not be better than "justification" or "sanctification" but they are legitimate and are even found in various translations of the Bible.

So in general, there is no such thing as a big word of the Bible unless we are talking about the Greek or Hebrew that the biblical authors used to write the books, and even then, scholars say that for the most part, the Bible was written in the common language of the day, so even biblical authors were not using big words which their readers would not have understood.

Is it helpful to know the big words of theology? Sure. But just remember, they are not "big words of the Bible" but are instead "big words of the Bible translators."

God does not have a "Big Word of the Day Desk Calendar" which you must master before He is pleased with you. You can have a great relationship with God and play a great role in His Kingdom whether or not you know what "justification" means.

Romans TOC
(Table of Contents)

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Ten Commandments (Decalogue) [Source: Wikipedia]

Different religious traditions divide the seventeen verses of Exodus 20:1–17 and their parallels at Deuteronomy 5:4–21 into ten "commandments" or "sayings" in different ways, shown in the table below. Some suggest that the number ten is a choice to aid memorization rather than a matter of theology.

Traditions:

- S: Septuagint, generally followed by Orthodox Christians.
- P: Philo, same as the Septuagint, but with the prohibitions on killing and adultery reversed.
- T: Jewish Talmud, makes the "prologue" the first "saying" or "matter" and combines the prohibition on worshiping deities other than Yahweh with the prohibition on idolatry.
- A: Augustine follows the Talmud in combining verses 3–6, but omits the prologue as a commandment and divides the prohibition on coveting in two and following the word order of Deuteronomy 5:21 rather than Exodus 20:17.
- C: Catechism of the Catholic Church, largely follows Augustine.
- L: Lutherans follow Luther's Large Catechism, which follows Augustine but omits the prohibition of images and uses the word order of Exodus 20:17 rather than Deuteronomy 5:21 for the ninth and tenth commandments.
- R: Reformed Christians follow John Calvin's Institutes of the Christian Religion, which follows the Septuagint.

The Ten Commandments

S	P	T	A	C	L	R	Main article	Exodus 20:1-17	Deuteronomy 5:4-21
—	—	1	—	1	—	(1)	I am the Lord thy God	2	6
1	1	2	1	1	1	1	Thou shalt have no other gods before me	3	7
2	2	2	1	1	—	2	Thou shalt not make unto thee any graven image	4–6	8–10
3	3	3	2	2	2	3	Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain	7	11
4	4	4	3	3	3	4	Remember the sabbath day, to keep it holy	8–11	12–15
5	5	5	4	4	4	5	Honour thy father and thy mother	12	16
6	7	6	5	5	5	6	Thou shalt not murder	13	17
7	6	7	6	6	6	7	Thou shalt not commit adultery	14	18
8	8	8	7	7	7	8	Thou shalt not steal	15	19
9	9	9	8	8	8	9	Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbour	16	20
10	10	10	10	10	9	10	Thou shalt not covet (neighbor's house)	17a	21b
10	10	10	9	9	10	10	Thou shalt not covet (neighbor's wife)	17b	21a
10	10	10	10	10	10	10	Thou shalt not covet (neighbor's servants, animals, or anything else)	17c	21c

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

THE TEN COMMANDMENTS
	JUDAISM	St. AUGUSTINE Catholics and Lutherans	ORIGEN Orthodox and Other Protestants
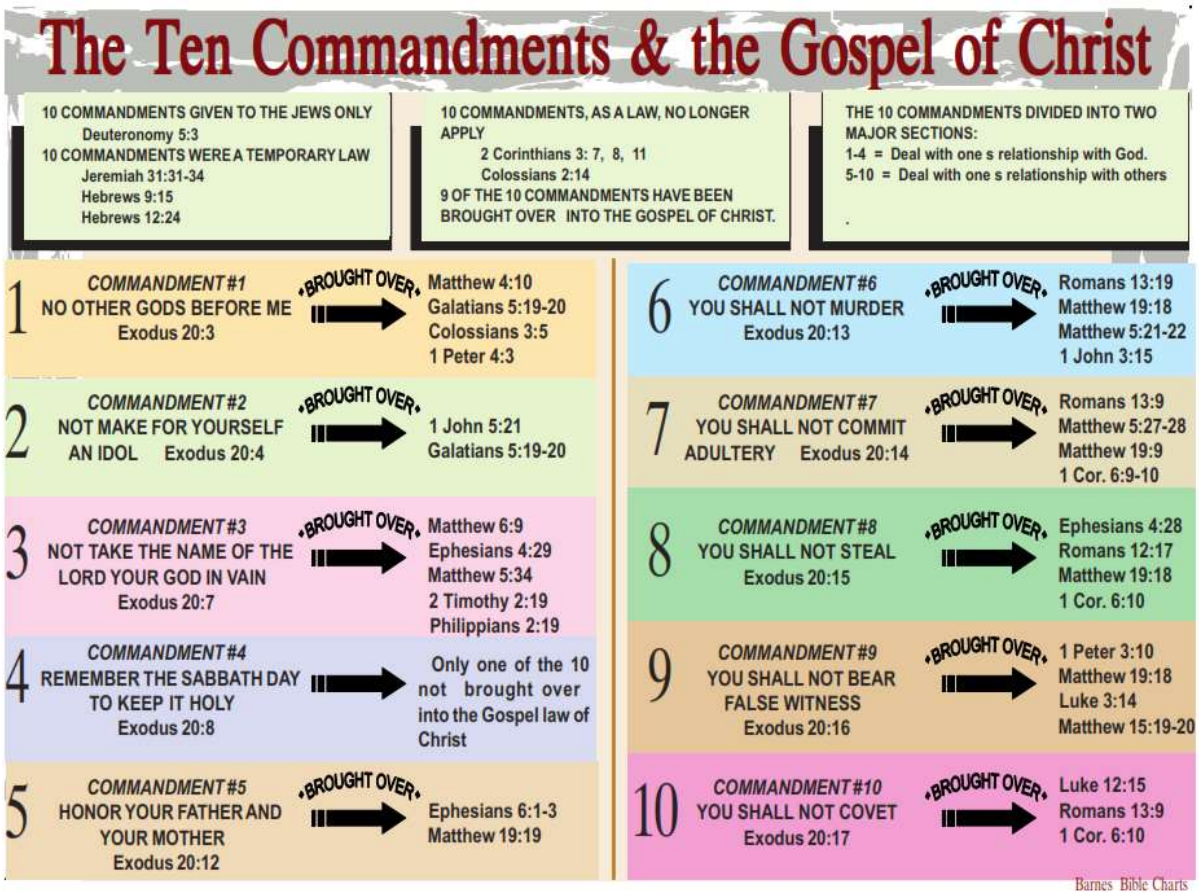
1	I am the Lord thy God who have brought thee out of the house of bondage.	I am the Lord thy God and thou shalt not have any strange gods before me.	I am the Lord thy God and thou shalt not have other gods besides me.
2	Thou shalt have no other gods besides me.	Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain.	Thou shalt not make for thyself any graven image.
3	Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain.	Remember to keep holy the Lord's Day.	Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain.
4	Remember the Sabbath Day to keep it holy.	Honor thy Father and Mother.	Remember the Lord's Day to keep it holy.
5	Honor thy Father and Mother.	Thou shalt not kill.	Honor thy Father and Mother.
6	Thou shalt not murder.	Thou shalt not commit adultery.	Thou shalt not kill.
7	Thou shalt not commit adultery.	Thou shalt not steal.	Thou shalt not commit adultery.
8	Thou shalt not steal.	Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor.	Thou shalt not steal.
9	Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor.	Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's wife.	Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor.
10	Thou shalt not covet.	Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's goods.	Thou shalt not covet.

http://biblescripture.net/Commandments.html

While there is considerable variation, Roman Catholics and Lutherans follow the order given by Augustine (the second column), whereas Eastern Catholics, Orthodox, and other Protestants follow the order given by Origen.

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only



The Ten Commandments and Christ

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Ten Commandments and the Gospel of Christ

[Source: http://www.biblecharts.org/thenewtestament.html]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Ten Commndments of God are Reaffirmed in the New Testament

THE LAW OF GOD IN THE NEW TESTAMENT	THE LAW OF GOD IN THE OLD TESTAMENT
1. "Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve." Matthew 4:10.	1. "Thou shalt have no other gods before me." Exodus 20:3.
2. "Little children, keep yourselves from idols." 1 John 5:21. "Forasmuch then as we are the offspring of God, we ought not to think that the Godhead is like unto gold, or silver, or stone, graven by art and man's device." Acts 17:29.	2. "Thou shalt not make unto thee any graven image, or any likeness of any thing that is in heaven above, or that is in the earth beneath, or that is in the water under the earth: Thou shalt not bow down thyself to them, nor serve them: for I the Lord thy God am a jealous God, visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation of them that hate me; And shewing mercy unto thousands of them that love me, and keep my commandments." Exodus 20:4-6.
3. "That the name of God and his doctrine be not blasphemed." 1 Timothy 6:1.	3. "Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain; for the Lord will not hold him guiltless that taketh his name in vain." Exodus 20:7.
4. "For he spake in a certain place of the seventh day on this wise, And God did rest the seventh day from all his works." "There remaineth therefore a rest ["keeping of a sabbath," margin] to the people of God. For he that is entered into his rest, he also hath ceased from his own works, as God did from his." Hebrews 4:4, 9, 10.	4. "Remember the sabbath day, to keep it holy. Six days shalt thou labour, and do all thy work: But the seventh day is the sabbath of the Lord thy God: in it thou shalt not do any work, thou, nor thy son, nor thy daughter, thy manservant, nor thy maidservant, nor thy cattle, nor thy stranger that is within thy gates: For in six days the Lord made heaven and earth, the sea, and all that in them is, and rested the seventh day: wherefore the Lord blessed the sabbath day, and hallowed it." Exodus 20:8-11.
5. "Honour thy father and thy mother." Matthew 19:19.	5. "Honour thy father and thy mother: that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee." Exodus 20:12.
6. "Thou shalt not kill." Romans 13:9.	6. "Thou shalt not kill." Exodus 20:13.
7. "Thou shalt not commit adultery." Matthew 19:18.	7. "Thou shalt not commit adultery." Exodus 20:14.
8. "Thou shalt not steal." Romans 13:9.	8. "Thou shalt not steal." Exodus 20:15.
9. "Thou shalt not bear false witness." Romans 13:9.	9. "Thou shalt not bear false winess against thy neighbour." Exodus 20:16.
10. "Thou shalt not covet." Romans 7:7.	10. "Thou shalt not covet thy neighbour's house, thou shalt not covet thy neighbour's wife, nor his manservant, nor his maidservant, nor his ox, nor his ass, nor any thing that is thy neighbour's." Exodus 20:17.

[Source: http://bibletruth4today.com/Bible_Truth_4_Today/Bible_Study_06.html]

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Law is God's Character in Human Language

Notice on the chart below that God and His law have the same characteristics. Do you see what this means? The Ten Commandment law is God's character in written form--written so we can comprehend it. It is no more possible to change God's law than to pull God out of heaven and change Him. Jesus came to show us what the law (which is the pattern for holy living) looked like when made up in human form. God's character can never change. Neither can His law, for it is His character in human language.

		GOD IS	THE LAW IS
1.	Good	Luke 18:19	1 Timothy 1:8
2.	Holy	Isaiah 5:16	Romans 7:12
3.	Perfect	Matthew 5:48	Psalms 19:7
4.	Pure	1 John 3:2,3	Psalms 19:8
5.	Just	Deuteronomy 32:4	Romans 7:12
6.	True	John 3:33	Psalms 19:9
7.	Spiritual	1 Corinthians 10:4	Romans 7:14
8.	Righteousness	Jeremiah 23:6	Psalms 119:172
9.	Faithful	1 Corinthians 1:9	Psalms 119:86
10.	Love	1 John 4:8	Romans 13:10
11.	Unchangeable	James 1:17	Matthew 5:18
12.	Eternal	Genesis 21:33	Psalms 111:7,

Did Jesus abolish God's law while He was here on earth?

"Think not that I am come to destroy the law. ... I am not come to destroy, but to fulfill. ... Till heaven and earth pass, one jot or one tittle shall in no wise pass from the law, till all be fulfilled."
(Matthew 5:17, 18.)

Answer: No, indeed! Jesus specifically asserted that He did not come to destroy the law, but to fulfill (or keep) it. Instead of doing away with the law, Jesus magnified it (Isaiah 42:21) as the perfect guide for right living. For example, Jesus pointed out that "thou shalt not kill" condemns anger "without a cause" (Matthew 5:21, 22) and hatred (1 John 3:15), and that lust is adultery (Matthew 5:27, 28). He says, "If ye love me, keep my commandments." John 14:15.

[Source: http://bibletruth4today.com/Bible_Truth_4_Today/Bible_Study_06.html]

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Shema

Jesus stated the original Ten could be boiled down to two: Love God with all your heart and love your neighbor as yourself (Mark 12:28-31).

This is essentially the Jewish confession of faith, known as The Shema:
i.e., "Hear, O Israel; The LORD our God, the LORD is one!" (Deuteronomy 6:4 NKJV).
The Shema originally contained only Deuteronomy 6:4, but it was later expanded to include verses Deuteronomy 5-9, with their requirement of total devotion to God. They also attached Deuteronomy 11:13-21, with the emphasis on blessing for its fulfillment and curse for its neglect.

When Jesus was asked to identify the greatest commandment, he answered with the Shema and combined it with Leviticus 19:18, "You shall love your neighbor as yourself" (Mark 12:28-34; Matthew 22:34-40):

Jesus answered him, "The first of all the commandments is:
'Hear, O Israel, the LORD our God, the LORD is one.' And you shall love the LORD your God with all your heart, with all your soul, with all your mind, and with all your strength.'
This is the first commandment. And the second, like it, is this:
'You shall love your neighbor as yourself.'
There is no other commandment greater than these."

[Source: http://www.biblecharts.org/thenewtestament.html]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Old Testament Commandments (Mitzvot)

Besides the basic/general Ten Commandments and the even more basic Shema, there are 613 specific Old Testament Commandments or Mitzvot (singular: Mitsvah).

For more details about the Old Commandments in the Bible see the Appendix in my separate references resource:

The Complete Sayings of Jesus – NKJV with Appendix

(Note: NKJV is primary text to make reading easier, except when it varies significantly from the original KJV or a different translation text is clearer and/or deemed more accurate.)

Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Eucharist (or Lord's Supper)

5 Views of the Eucharist
http://christianityinview.com/eucharist.html

Comparisons of Major Christian Traditions:
http://christianityinview.com/comparison.html

Catholics and Orthodox Liturgy Compared https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=dApWNfJgGC4 [Video] https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=QxcOv4zPoVo [Video]

Eating Ignatius (re: Eucharist – Transubstantiation)
http://www.whitehorseblog.com/2014/07/27/eating-ignatius/

N. T. Wright on the Gospel and Meal Jesus Gave Us (Eucharist)
https://worship.calvin.edu/resources/resource-library/n-t-wright-on-the-gospel-and-meal-jesus-gave-us/

See also: TheMessianicFeast.com

Denomination Theological Expressions Compared

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

"What are some of the historical reasons for why there are denominational Holy Communion (Eucharist) differences today between using leavend and unleavened bread?":

http://oca.org/questions/divineliturgy/leavened-bread-vs.-unleavened http://www.catholic.com/quickquestions/eastern-rite-catholics-use-leavened-bread-in-holy-communion-but-roman-rite-catholics-

http://www.dummies.com/how-to/content/the-split-that-created-roman-catholics-and-eastern.html

The Jewish Disconnect and the Fourteenthers

This chapter will clarify a major segment of Jewish history that has not been accurately told before—not by Christian sources, by Jewish encyclopedias, or Dimont's Jewish histories. Specifically, it discusses the complete disconnect with all things Jewish that occurred when the early assemblies—with their many Messianic Jewish believers—were taken over by Rome.[1]

To the Jews, these believers in Christ became "Christians" who were therefore no longer acknowledged as truly Jewish. To the Roman Christians, these people were "Judaizers"[2] who continued to keep their Jewish customs while refusing to go along with the new Roman teachings. Therefore neither side has told this story accurately, as both sides rejected these early Messianic believers. We will cover at least some of the story of these early Messianic Jews and the rejection and persecution they suffered, for this sets the stage for the complete disconnect.

❦

Early Messianic Jews were derisively called "Quartodecimans," a Latin term with a heretical sound to it; anyone with that strange name must have been a heretic, or so we have been told. However, once we translate this simple term meaning "Fourteenthers" into English, it becomes evident who Rome thought the heretics were—those Jewish believers who observed the 14th day of Nisan,[3] as their families had done since the time of Moses. Nisan was the Israelite month in which the Passover was to be celebrated each year—on the 14th day.

> NIV Numbers 28:16 "On the fourteenth day of the first month the LORD's Passover is to be held."

Throughout this discussion, I will use the English translation of "Fourteenthers," as it more accurately describes who these people were. Just as the Protestants would later be called heretics and be punished by Roman authorities, so it was with the original Messianic Jews.

Before delving deeper into this part of Jewish history, though, it is important to realize that many Jewish people were scattered from Israel to the region between the Black Sea and the Mediterranean, then known as Asia. Paul spent much of his time preaching and teaching among these "Asiatics," as they were called. Peter also wrote to these Jews of "the dispersion" (diaspora in Greek):

> NAB 1 Peter 1:1 Peter, an apostle of Jesus Christ, to the chosen sojourners of the dispersion in Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Asia, and Bithynia,

Although the Asiatic assemblies were to a large degree Jewish, they also contained many Gentile believers. But from this history, we can see that Jewish concepts and customs were more prevalent among them than the traditions that would develop later in Rome.

In the book of Revelation, the Messiah directed John to write to the seven assemblies that were spread across Asia:

> DBY Revelation 1:4–5 John to the seven assemblies which*are* in Asia: Grace to you and peace from him who is, and who was, and who is to come; and from the seven Spirits which are before > his throne; and from Jesus Christ, the faithful witness, the firstborn from the dead, and the prince of the kings of the earth ....

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

>
> DBY Revelation 1:11 saying, What thou seest write in a book, and send to the seven assemblies: to Ephesus, and to Smyrna, and to Pergamos, and to Thyatira, and to Sardis, and to Philadelphia, and to Laodicea.

Jesus understood that these believers in Asia were already facing persecution and difficulties, so he specifically directed John to write words of comfort and teaching to them. It's worth emphasizing this point, because Rome painted these Asiatics as a fringe group of heretics, and mocked them as "Quartodecimans" for refusing to observe the rituals that had developed in Rome.

Proud Rome had taken over Israel and destroyed the Temple, so it definitely was not going to take instructions on religion from its vanquished foe. As history played out, this was how the complete Jewish disconnect occurred.

The Beginnings of the Dispute

What had begun as a strictly Jewish phenomenon—the understanding that the Messiah had come and redeemed Israel and all believers back to God—was eventually taken over by Rome and turned into something from which Jews were rejected. Rome introduced new religious dogmas, rituals, and decrees that were based on neither the true teachings of the Messiah nor on those of the Jewish apostles.

For example, whereas many of the believing Jews continued to observe the 14th-day Passover in some form, Rome instead held an Easter Sunday celebration. This led to disputes as Asiatics continued to celebrate the 14th day instead of obeying Roman decrees to celebrate Easter. This following quote from McClintock and Strong's Cyclopedia shows the Asiatics' refusal to convert to the new Roman decrees:

> The Asiatics remained unconverted and unconvinced, and continued to observe the 14th of Nisan as a day of mixed character, fasting till the ninth hour, and then rejoicing for the achieved work of man's redemption.[4]

Jewish Messianic believers fasted until the ninth hour (about 3 PM) on this 14th day, and the following scriptures reveal why this time was important to them:

> NAS Matthew 27:46 And about the ninth hour Jesus cried out with a loud voice, saying, "Eli, Eli, lama sabachthani?" that is, "My God, My God, why hast Thou forsaken Me?"
>
> NAS John 19:30 When Jesus therefore had received the sour wine, He said, "It is finished!" And He bowed His head, and gave up His spirit.

The Fourteenthers fasted until the time that Jesus said, "It is finished," indicating that he had finished the work (that God had called him to) by paying the penalty for sin. Although historically Jews had never fasted during the 14th-day Passover, McClintock and Strong explain that the Messianic Jews added this partial-day fast as a tradition to honor the fact that Jesus was on the cross during this time. They ended their fast at the ninth hour, the time that his death fulfilled the Passover:

> The Western and more Catholic rule was to observe theFriday preceding the Easter-Sunday as a rigid fast, the Church identifying the apostles' sorrowing with their own, and the fast was not resolved till Easter-morn; while the Asiatic Quartodecimani party regarded the 14th of Nisanfrom a doctrinal point of view as the commemoration-day of man's redemption; and at the hour in which our Lord said "It is finished," i.e. at three o'clock in the afternoon, the fast was brought to an end (Eusebius Hist. Eccl. 5:23), and the day closed with the collective Agape and celebration of the Lord's Supper.[5]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

This difference of opinion as to keeping the 14th day special first became evident around AD 150 when Polycarp, a prominent Fourteenther and leader in the Asiatic Assembly of Smyrna, was sojourning in Rome and met with the Roman bishop Anicetus.

In his History of the Christian Church, 19th-century church historian Philip Schaff discusses the early history of this dispute. This major point of contention would eventually lead to the rejection of all things Jewish, as well as to the introduction of many Roman rituals. Below, Schaff shows that Rome did not observe the 14th day (and instead had an Easter/Astarte Sun-day celebration), but that Polycarp and the Asiatics did keep the 14th day special:

> We have a brief, but interesting account of this dispute by Irenaeus, a pupil of Polycarp, which is as follows:
>
> "When the blessed Polycarp sojourned at Rome in the days of Anicetus, and they had some little difference of opinion likewise with regard to other points, they forthwith came to a peaceable understanding on this head [the observance of Easter], having no love for mutual disputes. For neither could Anicetus persuade Polycarp not to observe inasmuch as he [Polycarp] had always observed with John, the disciple of our Lord, and the other apostles, with whom he had associated; nor did Polycarp persuade Anicetus to observe Gr. (τήρειν) who said that he was bound to maintain the custom of the presbyters (= bishops) before him. These things being so, they communed together; and in the church Anicetus yielded to Polycarp, out of respect no doubt, the celebration of the eucharist,[6] and they separated from each other in peace, all the church being at peace, both those that observed and those that did not observe [the fourteenth of Nisan], maintaining peace."
>
> This letter proves that the Christians of the days of Polycarp knew how to keep the unity of the Spirit without uniformity of rites and ceremonies. "The very difference in our fasting," says Irenaeus in the same letter, "establishes the unanimity in our faith."[7]

So we see that Romans did not keep the 14th day special, which was fine since under the New Covenant they were no longer bound to keep the Sabbaths and the Feasts. However, Rome did begin to disapprove of the Asiatic Fourteenthers who continued to celebrate the 14th-day Passover as a "commemoration-day of man's redemption," as previously noted.

In the quote above, Irenaeus also mentioned a difference in the Roman fasting, which at one point lasted a full week as opposed to the Asiatic custom of fasting only until the ninth hour on the fourteenth day, the time in which the Messiah said "it is finished."

As an aside, The Jewish Encyclopedia also shows that Jewish scholars of long ago believed that man's redemption as brought by the Messiah would take place at the Passover, just as had happened with the original Passover under Moses:

> What Moses, the first redeemer, did is typical of what the Messiah as the last redeemer of Israel will do (Eccl. R. i. 9). The redemption will be in the same month of Nisan and in the same night (Mek., Bo, 14);[8]

The Fourteenthers Lay Out Their Case to Rome

The dispute grew more intense in the period between AD 190 and 194, when Victor was bishop of Rome. At this time Rome dramatically escalated pressure on the Fourteenthers to drop their 14th-day Passover commemoration and to adopt Easter and other Roman rituals and doctrines instead.

> Schaff, in his History of the Christian Church, sums it up:
>
> The Roman bishop Victor, a very different man from his predecessor Anicetus, required the Asiatics, in an imperious tone, to abandon their Quartadecimanian practice.
>
> Against this Polycrates, bishop of Ephesus, solemnly protested in the name of a synod held by him, and appealed to an imposing array of authorities for their primitive custom. Eusebius has preserved his letter, which is quite characteristic.[9]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The Roman historian Eusebius (AD 263–339), mentioned above, brings this out in his own Church History. Eusebius makes it clear that this whole dispute and anger from Rome arose because Jewish believers continued to celebrate the 14th day rather than fasting and mourning as Rome had prescribed. The Asiatic bishops were led by Polycrates, who wrote the following letter of protest to the Roman bishop Victor, as Eusebius recorded below:

> We observe the genuine day; neither adding thereto nor taking there from. For in Asia great lights have fallen asleep, which shall rise again in the day of the Lord's appearing, in which he will come with glory from heaven, and will raise up all the saints: Philip, one of the twelve apostles, who sleeps in Hierapolis ... moreover, John, who rested upon the bosom of our Lord, who was also a priest, and bore the sacerdotal plate, both a martyr and teacher; he is buried in Ephesus. Also Polycarp of Smyrna, both bishop andmartyr, and Thraseas, both bishop and martyr of Eumenia, who sleeps in Smyrna. Why should I mention Sagaris, bishop and martyr, who sleeps in Laodicea; moreover, the blessed Papirius, and Melito, the eunuch [celibate] ... who now rests in Sardis .... All these observed the fourteenth day of the Passover according to the gospel, deviating in no respect, but following the rule of faith.
>
> Moreover, I, Polycrates, who am the least of you, according to the tradition of my relatives, some of whom I have followed .... my relatives always observed the day when the people of the Jews[10] threw away the leaven. I, therefore, brethren, am now sixty-five years in the Lord ... and having studied the whole of the Sacred Scriptures, am not at all alarmed at those things with which I am threatened, to intimidate me. For they who are greater than I have said, "we ought to obey God rather than men." ... I could also mention the bishops that were present, whom you requested me to summon, and whom I did call; whose names would present a great number, but who seeing my slender body consented to my epistle, well knowing that I did not wear my gray hairs for nought, but that I did at all times regulate my life in the Lord Jesus.[11]

Schaff explains further that "Victor turned a deaf ear to this remonstrance, branded the Asiatics as heretics, and threatened to excommunicate them."

Notice above how many of the Fourteenthers mentioned by Polycrates were killed (martyred), and yet Polycrates is not at all alarmed at those things with which "I am threatened, to intimidate me." Clearly Polycrates's Christ-like spirit is in marked contrast to Roman bishop Victor's disagreeable demeanor. What was so horrible that Rome needed to excommunicate these mostly Messianic Jews for simply keeping the 14th day in a way that they felt honored the Lord?

Victor ordered synods to be held and that "the more Catholic rule was everywhere pronounced to be binding."[12] In spite of this decree, many Asiatic believers did not yield to Roman threats but continued to keep the 14th day in accordance with their long Jewish history and custom.

These escalating Roman threats led Irenaeus, a Fourteenther and disciple of Polycarp, to see the writing on the wall, and he sought to avert a potential bloodbath by appealing for peace. He wrote to his fellow Fourteenthers who were ignoring Rome's decrees and reproved them for risking their lives to keep a day that was no longer required to be kept in the New Covenant:

> The apostles have ordered that we should "judge no one in meat or in drink, or in respect to a feast-day or a new moon or a sabbath day" (Col. 2:16). Whence then these wars? Whence these schisms? We keep the feasts, but in the leaven of malice by tearing the church of God and observing what is outward, in order to reject what is better, faith and charity.[13]That such feasts and fasts are displeasing to the Lord, we have heard from the Prophets.[14]

Messianic Jews had every right to keep the 14th day special, and yet as the danger escalated to the point where more people were losing their lives, Irenaeus appealed for peace and common ground. But other Messianic Jews wanted to draw the line in the sand with Rome and continued to honor this ancient feast and the Messiah's fulfillment of the Passover in the way they felt was proper. They did not want Rome dictating doctrine to them, and justifiably so.

The Fourteenthers Knew the Crucifixion Day Was the Fourteenth

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

When one studies this history in depth, it becomes evident that the earliest Jewish and Gentile believers understood that Jesus was crucified on the 14th of Nisan and therefore could not have eaten the Jewish Passover at the Last Supper. Greek scholar and commentator Brooke Foss Westcott pointed this out many years ago:

> Now, as far as it appears, early tradition is nearly unanimous in fixing the Crucifixion on the 14th, and in distinguishing the Last Supper from the legal Passover. This distinction is expressly made by Apollinaris, Clement of Alexandria, Hippolytus, Tertullian, Irenaeus, who represent very different sections of the early Church.[15]

Contrary to what almost all commentators believe today, these early Messianic followers knew Jesus did not eat a Passover at the Last Supper, but rather was crucified on the 14th day of Nisan and thus fulfilled the Passover.

The Catholic Encyclopedia is honest in admitting that the historical evidence from writers of the first two centuries does not positively support their early point of view—that of Jesus eating the 14th-day Passover at the Last Supper—and that this early history connects the 14th-day Passover to the day of the Crucifixion:

> Again, there is the problem, much debated by modern scholars, whether the Pasch which the early Christians desired to commemorate was primarily the passion or the Resurrection of Christ. Upon this point our data also do not admit of a very positive answer. It has been very strongly urged that the writers of the first two centuries who speak of the Pasch have always in view the Pasch πάσχασταυρώσμιον, the Crucifixion day, when Jesus Christ himself was offered as a victim, the antitype of the Jewish Paschal lamb.[16]

Westcott also adds:

> ... but Photius expressly notices that two writers who differed widely on other points of the Paschal controversy agreed on fixing the Passion on the 14th, contrary to the later opinion of the Church, and therefore reserves the question for examination.[17]

It must be understood that this conviction held by the Fourteenthers—that Jesus was crucified on the 14th day—was "contrary to the later opinion of the Church." As the Church in Rome grew stronger and eventually evolved into the Roman Catholic Church, the Catholic tradition of Christ eating the Passover at the Last Supper became fixed as doctrine. Uniformity of doctrine was commanded by Roman religious leaders, and all were to believe that Jesus was crucified on "Good Friday" (the 15th of Nisan) after having eaten the Passover on the 14th. This Roman doctrine of celebrating Easter Sunday became law at the Council of Nicaea in AD 325.

So powerful did this Roman Church become that it saw itself as having the authority to excommunicate, punish, and even kill those who did not believe in its doctrines. Not surprisingly, having the backing of the mighty Roman military at its disposal heavily aided the spread of its doctrine.

❦

One Fourteenther who knew this doctrine to be false was Hippolytus, whom Westcott mentions, and below we see that he also placed the Crucifixion on the 14th day. In his book Against all Heresies, Hippolytus wrote the following, correcting another writer who had fallen into error by believing that Christ ate the Passover at the Last Supper and was then crucified the day after the Passover, on the 15th day:

> I perceive, then, that the matter is one of contention. For he speaks thus: Christ kept the supper, then, on that day, and then suffered; whence it is needful that I, too, should keep it in the same manner as the Lord did. But he has fallen into error by not perceiving that at the time when Christ sufferedHe did not eat the passover of the law. For He was the passover that had been of old proclaimed, and that was fulfilled on that determinate day.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Hippolytus continues:

> ... Now that neither in the first nor in the last there was anything false is evident; for he who said of old, "I will not any more eat the passover," probably partook of supperbefore the passover. But the passover He did not eat, but He suffered; for it was not the time for Him to eat.[18]

Hippolytus agreed with the scriptures that the Passover was not to be two days in a row; this would be contrary to God's law. He states that at the Last Supper, "the Passover he did not eat" for "it was not the time for him to eat." Furthermore, he wrote that Jesus was the Passover "that was fulfilled on that determinate day," which Acts 2:23 bears out as the determinate day by God's foreknowledge and the reason that He commanded the 14th-day Passover to Moses:

> NAS Acts 2:23 this Man, delivered up by the predetermined plan and foreknowledge of God, you nailed to a cross by the hands of godless men and put Him to death.

Westcott also included Clement of Alexandria as an early church writer who believed the Crucifixion was on the 14th day. Below we see Clement's extremely telling words quoted in the Paschal Chronicle:

> Accordingly, in the years gone by, Jesus went to eat the passover sacrificed by the Jews, keeping the feast. But when he had preached He who was the Passover, the Lamb of God, led as a sheep to the slaughter, presently taught His disciples the mystery of the type on the thirteenth day, on which also they inquired, "Where wilt Thou that we prepare for Thee to eat the passover?" It was on this day, then, that both the consecration of the unleavened bread and the preparation for the feast took place. Whence John naturally describes the disciples as already previously prepared to have their feet washed by the Lord. And on the following day our Saviour suffered, He who was the Passover, propitiously sacrificed by the Jews.[19]

Clement of Alexandria continues:

> Suitably, therefore, to the fourteenth day, on which He also suffered, in the morning, the chief priests and the scribes, who brought Him to Pilate, did not enter the Praetorium, that they might not be defiled, but might freely eat the passoverin the evening. With this precise determination of the days both the whole Scriptures agree, and the Gospels harmonize. The resurrection also attests it. He certainly rose on the third day, which fell on the first day of the weeks of harvest, on which the law prescribed that the priest should offer up the sheaf.[20]

Notice that Clement states that the disciples asked their question on the thirteenth day, when they are concerned with preparing and making ready a location for the soon-coming 14th-day Passover Feast; since Christ was crucified the following day, we see that the Fourteenthers were correct in understanding that he died on the Passover.

Westcott also mentions Claudius Apollinaris—bishop of Hierapolis—as one of those who understood the 14th-day Crucifixion. Consider what Apollinaris wrote around AD 150 concerning those who "err" by believing that Jesus was crucified on the 15th day:

> They err, who affirm that our Lord ate the Passover on the 14th of Nisan with his disciples, and that he died on the great day of unleavened bread (i.e. the fifteenth). They maintain that Matthew records the event as they have imagined it; but their notion agrees not with the law; and thereby the Gospels are made to wear a contradictory appearance[21]

The Fourteenthers understood Jewish law and knew that Jewish authorities would not allow crucifixions in Israel on this holy 15th-day Sabbath, nor could Jesus have sacrificed a Passover the day before the 14th when he was crucified. Apollinaris pointed out how this "notion" that Jesus ate the Passover and then was crucified on the 15th-day Sabbath "agrees not with the law." Even today commentators argue that the Gospels show "a contradictory appearance," with John portraying Christ as having been crucified as the 14th-day Passover while the Synoptic Gospels (Matthew, Mark, and Luke) portray him actually eating the 14th-day Passover.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Later in this book, the chapter "The Three Major Greek Keys That Unlock the Gospels" shows that the Gospels—when interpreted correctly—all harmonize perfectly, which is what we should expect.[22]

Schaff includes an important additional part of this quote from Apollinaris that McClintock and Strong (above) left out:

> The Fourteenth is the true Passover of the Lord, the great sacrifice, the Son of God in the place of the lamb ... who was lifted up upon the horns of the unicorn[23] ... and who was buried on the day of the Passover, the stone having been placed upon his tomb.[24]

As seen when the two parts of the quote appear together, Apollinaris plainly wrote that in misinterpreting Matthew, "they err" who believe that Jesus ate the 14th-day Passover at the Last Supper, then suffered on the 15th day; thus he clearly agrees with the Fourteenthers that the 14th was the true day that the Messiah suffered and was buried.

Roman Emperor Constantine Imposes His Will on the Fourteenthers

The Fourteenthers knew that the 14th day was the Crucifixion, which is a major part of why they venerated it. However, as we've seen, Rome did not care for the Jewish details. As Schaff points out below, Roman custom was not based on doctrinal facts but was more ritualistic in observance:

> The Roman custom represented the principle of freedom and discretionary change, and the independence of the Christian festival system. Dogmatically stated, the difference would be, that in the former case the chief stress was laid on the Lord's death; in the latter, on his resurrection. But the leading interest of the question for the early Church was not the astronomical, nor the dogmatical, but the ritualistic. The main object was to secure uniformity of observance, and to assert the originality of the Christian festival cycle, and its independence of Judaism: for both reasons the Roman usage at last triumphed even in the East.[25]

The apostles never said anything about a ritualistic "Christian festival system." They knew that the festivals pointed to a spiritual fulfillment, as we will see throughout this book. What Schaff calls the "Christian festival cycle" was, in reality, a creation of Rome as it began linking pagan celebrations to Christian concepts.

As mentioned earlier, part of the Roman Church's bitterness arose because it had prescribed a weeklong fast for its Easter celebration. Yet the Messianic Fourteenthers fasted for only part of one day—until the ninth hour (about 3 PM) on the 14th day, marking the time Christ the Messiah said, "It is finished."

Then, because of differences between the Jewish and Roman calendars, the more Jewish-leaning assemblies were sometimes rejoicing in the Feast (Deuteronomy 16:14) and the finished work of the Messiah while the Roman Church was still fasting and mourning.

> Schaff addressed Rome's bitterness over this:
>
> This Roman practice created an entire holy week of solemn fasting and commemoration of the Lord's passion, while the Asiatic practice ended the fast on the 14th of Nisan, which may fall sometimes several days before Sunday. Hence a spectacle shocking to the catholic sense of ritualistic propriety and uniformity was frequently presented to the world, that one part of Christendom was fasting and mourning over the death of our Saviour, while the other part rejoiced in the glory of the resurrection.[26]

Jewish believers, of course, were not at all interested in the weeklong Roman fasting and mourning, or in the Easter (Astarte) celebrations. Eventually this Roman fast developed into a 40-day one, which, as Alexander Hyslop shows in his The Two Babylons,[27] originated from a different fast of the same length. This fast marked weeping and mourning for the false deity Tammuz, who was the consort of Ishtar, the springtime goddess of fertility. (Ishtar is the same as Ashtoreth, or Astarte in Greek, which evolved into *Easter*in English.) Even some Israelites observed this ritual weeping and mourning for Tammuz (Ezekiel 8:14).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

In the Catholic Church, this lengthy fast (a giving up certain foods or activities) later became Lent, which starts a little more than 40 days before Easter on Ash Wednesday. During Lent, some adherents rub ashes on their foreheads in the sign of a cross to show mourning. What had begun as a true moving of God's spirit among Roman believers[28] was eventually taken over; thus, these spring deities were incorporated into what had previously been the Messianic celebration of Passover and the Resurrection (which also occurred during spring) to become Easter.

Jewish scriptures clearly indicated a duty to rejoice at the festivals (Deuteronomy 16:14, 15; Nehemiah 8:9–10), so Messianic Jews would not have been interested in Roman Catholic mourning. When the 15th day arrived, Messianic Jews believed they were fulfilling what God's commands through Moses pointed to by rejoicing in the spring Passover Festival as they always had done, only now with the Messianic understanding of the New Covenant. Since many of them had grown up with this Festival and it was deeply connected to their heritage, they wanted to continue celebrating it in some form.

❦

The fourth-century Roman Emperor Constantine was less interested in doctrine and more set on imposing standardized religious practices over the entire Roman Empire. This meant joining some Christian ideas with various pagan ones. At some point, Jesus, for example, was deliberately given the birthday of December 25, because this was understood by pagans as the day the Sun God was reborn after having died at the winter solstice. Every year on December 21 or 22, at the winter solstice—which means "sun standing still" in Latin—the sun completed its circuit and was in the farthest end of its cycle, where it seemed to stand still (die) for three days. Then, as the sun appeared to move again on December 25, it became "reborn."

Many other examples exist of Rome joining pagan beliefs to what had previously been Christianity, such as seen in an ancient tile picture of Christ as Sol Invictus ("invincible sun") that was found at St. Peter's Basilica.

But certain items needed resolution at the famous Catholic Council of Nicaea in AD 325, presided over by Emperor Constantine. The first item on the docket was standardizing the Roman doctrine of the Trinity to become the "Nicene Creed," which we will look at briefly in "Setting the Table 2: Words and Concepts Changed."

The second item to resolve at this Council was the Paschal/Easter controversy and the Jewish Messianic Fourteenthers refusing to observe the prescribed Roman Easter Sunday celebration. In his letter to the churches after the Council of Nicaea, Emperor Constantine addressed this point, stating emphatically that Rome's celebration should have "nothing in common with the perjury of the Jews":

> Let your pious sagacity reflect how evil and improper it is, that days devoted by some to fasting, should be spent by others in convivial feasting; and that after the paschal feast, some are rejoicing in festivals and relaxations, while others give themselves up to the appointed fasts. That this impropriety should be rectified, and that all these diversities of commemoration should be resolved into one form, is the will of divine Providence, as I am convinced you will all perceive. Therefore, this irregularity must be corrected, in order that we may no more have any thing in common with those parricides and the murderers of our Lord.[29]

You can feel Constantine's almost palpable anger at the Messianic Jews for refusing to observe the Roman "appointed fasts." Under the guise of opposition to Judaism, he connected these Messianic believers (and all Jews) to the leaders in Israel who had pushed for Christ's death, thus lumping them all together as heretics—and worse—for not following Rome. It was decreed that no one was to keep the 14th day special, because this was connected to Jewish history and therefore was to be rejected. He continued:

> An orderly and excellent form of commemoration is observed in all the churches of the western, of the southern, and of the northern parts of the world, and by some of the eastern; this form being universally commended, I engaged that you would be ready to adopt it likewise, and thus gladly accept the rule unanimously adopted in the city of Rome, throughout Italy, in all Africa, in Egypt, the Spains, the Gauls, the Britains, Libya, Greece, in the dioceses of Asia, and of

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

> Pontus, and in Cilicia, taking into your consideration not only that the churches of the places above-mentioned are greater in point of number, but also that it is most pious that all should unanimously agree in that course which accurate reasoning seems to demand, and which has no single point in common with the perjury of the Jews.[30]

The Roman emperor closed his letter to the churches by letting them know that whatever Rome decreed was the "Divine will," and all had better submit to it:

> Briefly to summarize the whole of the preceding, the judgment of all is, that the holy Paschal feast should be held on one and the same day; for, in so holy a matter, it is not becoming that any difference of custom should exist, and it is better to follow the opinion which has not the least association with error and sin. This being the case, receive with gladness the heavenly gift and the plainly divine command; for all that is transacted in the holy councils of the bishops is to be referred to the Divine will. Therefore, when you have made known to all our beloved brethren the subject of this epistle, regard yourselves as bound to accept what has gone before ....[31]

In the following, Constantine set the tenor for the Roman-controlled Church. It was now "our holy religion" that would have nothing in common with the Jews, who were to be rejected as "parricides" (quoted earlier) and as "our adversaries":

> By rejecting their custom, we establish and hand down to succeeding ages one which is more reasonable, and which has been observed ever since the day of our Lord's sufferings. Let us, then, have nothing in common with the Jews, who are our adversaries. For we have received from our Saviour another way. A better and more lawful line of conduct is inculcated by our holy religion. Let us with one accord walk therein, my much-honoured brethren, studiously avoiding all contact with that evil way.[32]

A short time after the Council of Nicaea, these Messianic Jewish Fourteenthers were

> "... universally regarded as heretics and were punished as such: The Synod of Antioch, 341, excommunicated them."[33]

From then on, all Messianic Jews who kept their customs and disobeyed the Roman practice of weeklong fasting and mourning at Easter were considered to be heretics and Judaizers. Sadly, the truth of this history is still not understood even today, as Fourteenthers (Quartodecimans) are still written off by most commentators as a fringe group of heretics. However, if that were really the case, the Roman emperor presumably would not have felt the need to hold the Council of Nicaea and write letters to all the churches merely to address a minor aberrant group.

McClintock and Strong mention that the Fourteenthers were being taunted by Rome for honoring the 14th day:

> The Asiatics commemorated the Lord's death on the 14th of Nisan, being guided by the day of the Jewish month, as the more general practice followed the day of the week on which Christ died. They were taunted for the Judaizing practice, though the Church of Rome in its ritual and liturgy had more perhaps in common with the synagogue than the churches of Asia.[34]

A few years later at the Council of Laodicea (AD 364), the Jewish people were again lumped together as heretics by the Catholic Church, as evidenced by the following Council canons:

> 29. Christians must not judaize by resting on the Sabbath, butmust work on that day, rather honouring the Lord's Day; and, if they can, resting then as Christians. But if any shall be found to be judaizers, let them be anathema[35] from Christ.[36]

One of the following canons from the same Council deals with phylacteries, which were small leather boxes containing a few Bible verses. Many Jews wore a phylactery, believing that the words of Moses (i.e., in Deuteronomy 6:8; 11:18; Exodus 13:9, 16) were to be taken literally. Jesus wore tassels on his garments, as did many Jews (Numbers 15:38, 39), and "tassel" is usually translated into English as "hem" or "fringe" (Matthew 9:20; 14:36). So it is possible that Jesus would have also been thrown out of the new Roman Church for his Jewish ways:

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

> 36. Forbids the clergy dealing in magic, and directs that all who wear phylacteries be cast out of the Church.
>
> 37. Forbids fasting with Jews or heretics.
>
> 38. Forbids receiving unleavened bread from Jews.[37]

The Messiah's heart for his people was diametrically opposed to these Council rules—such as throwing out those who wore a phylactery:

> NAS John 6:37 "All that the Father gives Me shall come to Me, and the one who comes to Me I will certainly not cast out."

So although the Messiah told the apostles to gather the lost sheep of the house of Israel, Rome decided to do the opposite of what the Messiah wanted. Rome rejected as adversaries all Jews (including those Fourteenthers who believed in the Messiah) who did not follow Roman decrees. Because of this and many other factors, the Messiah became falsely portrayed as someone who had rejected and forsaken the Jews and all things Jewish.

❦

As an aside, these historical facts are in no way meant to impugn Catholic believers today; I know many honorable Catholic people and my goal is not to create animosity or contention toward them. These facts of history are considered only so we can determine what the Messiah's true intentions were and see how they became confused in Rome. Only by doing this can we see how the various churches came to believe in the doctrines they hold today, and what changes are needed to do God's will.

The Roman Catholic Church has always referred to these Fourteenthers as heretics for continuing their own Jewish heritage and not following Rome's Easter celebrations. Catholics and even other Christian commentators have continued this error, either purposely or accidentally, as seen here in this passage from The Catholic Encyclopedia:

> In the early days of Christianity there existed a difference of opinion between the Eastern and Western Churches as to the day on which Easter ought to be kept, the former keeping it on the fourteenth day and the latter on the Sunday following. To secure uniformity of practice, the Council of Nicaea (325) decreed that the Western method of keeping Easter on the Sunday after the fourteenth day of the moon should be adopted throughout the Church, believing no doubt that this mode fitted in better with the historical facts and wishing to give a lasting proof that the Jewish Passover was not, as theQuartodeciman heretics believed, an ordinance of Christianity.[38]

The Catholic Encyclopedia's statement that these "Quartodeciman heretics believed" that keeping the 14th day special was an "ordinance of Christianity" is totally false, as is much of the historical disinformation about these believers. The Messianic Jews kept this 14th day special as their custom (not by ordinance) because they knew it was the day Jesus finished the work that God had called him to and that it therefore fulfilled the Passover, which was a deep part of their Jewish heritage and which they honored as such. No evidence exists that mainstream Fourteenthers believed everyone should follow this as an ordinance, and they certainly were not celebrating Easter on this 14th day.

Protestant commentators, too, have accepted the Catholic view that these Fourteenthers were heretics or just a fringe group of Judaizers, when in reality they were the main body of the original Messianic Jews. When we read these histories, we must understand that Roman Catholics were mainly concerned that all should celebrate Easter on Sunday in a unified manner—they did not like the confusion caused by these Fourteenthers not observing the Easter celebration.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The following quote from Schaff makes this clear:

> The council of Arles in 314 had already decreed, in its first canon, that the Christian Passover be celebrated "uno die et uno tempore per omnem orbem,"[39] and that the bishops of Rome should fix the time. But as this order was not universally obeyed, the fathers of Nicaea proposed to settle the matter, and this was the second main object of the first ecumenical council in 325. The result of the transactions on this point, the particulars of which are not known to us, does not appear in the canons (probably out of consideration for the numerous Quartodecimanians), but is doubtless preserved in the two circular letters of the council itself and the emperor Constantine. The feast of the resurrection was thenceforth required to be celebrated everywhere on a Sunday, and never on the day of the Jewish passover, but always after the fourteenth of Nisan, on the Sunday after the first vernal full moon. The leading motive for this regulation was opposition to Judaism, which had dishonored the Passover by the crucifixion of the Lord.[40]

As we see in the quote above, Rome wanted all Jewish influence removed so that the new Roman religion could bring in its own doctrines and rituals unchallenged, and this was done under the guise of opposition to Judaism.

To summarize, the history covered here explains how what began as a strictly Jewish phenomenon in Israel—with a Jewish Messiah and Jewish disciples—could become something from which the Jews were seen to be unwelcome. This evolution completed the Jewish disconnect and was the devil's plan to exclude Jews from their own promised New Covenant (see Course 10).

This clear history of the Messiah's Crucifixion on the 14th day is crucial for properly understanding the parables he taught the previous night at the Last Supper, and how these figurative teachings were later misunderstood to be a new ritual, as we will soon see.

We have now laid the groundwork for understanding how such a complete Jewish disconnect could occur, and how the powerful Roman Church assumed a very different stance from what the Messiah wanted or taught. As we've already started to see, this sheds light on how doctrines were changed and new rituals were created that were not based on the original foundation of the Jewish Messiah and his Jewish disciples.

[Source: The Messianic Feast, "The Jewish Disconnect and the Fourteenthers

NOTE: Astronomical science shows that a Passover full moon occurred on Thursday, the 14th of Nisan, in the year AD 30. Jesus was approximately 33½ years old at death, having begun his 3½-year ministry at about age 30 (Luke 3:23). Scholars mostly agree that Rome was off by a couple of years in estimating the beginning date of our calendar, so when taking into account the "zero year" (between 1 BC and AD 1), Jesus would have been born around 4 BC. He did not make it to his 34th birthday, which would have been around September or October of 30 AD.
[Source: The Messianic Feast - http://themessianicfeast.com]

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Links to more extensive (and thorough) coverage and explanation of the topic the Eusharist, Lord's Supper vs the Passover meal, and leavened vs leavened bread.

The Messianic Feast
http://themessianicfeast.com/sample-chapters/ (downloadable PDFs for each chapter, except for two of them)

For a relatively short/summarized read on why leavened bread:
"The Body of Christ is not a Matzo" (see also comment about "sop") http://www.hope-of-israel.org/matzonot.html

For a little more thorough (1 web page) explanation of above:
"Have We Been Neglecting the Sacred Fellowship Meal?"
http://www.hope-of-israel.org/fellmeal.htm

For additional information and perspectives regarding when the Last Supper was eatened:
Christ Our Passover
http://www.separationtruth.com/resources/Christ+Our+Passover+new.pdf [PDF]

Additional links regarding Lord's Supper NOT Passover meal and bread is leavened:

http://www.reformation.org/unleavened-bread-error.html http://www.apologeticspress.org/apcontent.aspx?category=11&article=1196 https://www.worldslastchance.com/yahuwahs-calendar/the-last-supper-passover-or-not.html
http://c950485.r85.cf2.rackcdn.com/The%20Last%20Supper%20-%20Passover%20or%20Not.pdf [pdf version of above] http://www.triumphpro.com/artos.pdf [pdf, 7 proofs why Lord's Supper not the Passover meal] http://www.herealittletherealittle.net/index.cfm?page_name=Last-Supper-Passover-Meal http://ism.yale.edu/sites/default/files/files/Inculturation%20the%20Bread.pdf (Anglican) http://www.bibleinterp.com/opeds/2013/coo378022.shtml ("...Overlooking the Obvious?", an interesting, but controversial perspective; not vetted) http://www.triumphpro.com/passover-and-last-supper-new.pdf [pdf]
http://themessianicfeast.com/wp-content/uploads/2015/01/TMF_50-Reasons.pdf (50 Reasons Why Last Supper not the Passover Meal [pdf])

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Jacob, Moses, and the Fruit of the Vine

We've seen that during the Last Supper, Jesus taught that he was the true grapevine. But long before the Messiah's words at this momentous event, the fruit of the vine (or grapevine in the Greek) played an important role in Jewish tradition.

Israel's Historic Connection to the Grapevine

Israel had a longstanding connection to grapes and the grapevine, which is shown below in a historic artifact — the last coin minted in Israel before the final crushing of Bar Kochba, the Jewish leader who fought against the Roman occupation (AD 135):

A cluster of grapes hangs from a vine on the front of the coin (left image), and on the reverse is a lyre surrounded by a Hebrew inscription that reads "for the freedom of Jerusalem."

When those whom Moses sent to "spy out" the Promised Land of Israel later returned, they brought back a large vine with grapes on it (Numbers 13:20–23). Thus grapes and the grapevine became symbolic of the Promised Land:

> NAS Numbers 13:17 When Moses sent them to spy out the land of Canaan, he said to them, "Go up there into the Negev; then go up into the hill country.
>
> NAS Numbers 13:20 "And how is the land, is it fat or lean? Are there trees in it or not? Make an effort then to get some of the fruit of the land." Now the time was the time of the first ripe grapes.
>
> NAS Numbers 13:23 Then they came to the valley of Eshcol and from there cut down a branch with a single cluster of grapes; and they carried it on a pole between two men, with some of the pomegranates and the figs.

The spies returned to Moses with this tremendous cluster of grapes, which was so big that it took two men with a pole to carry it. In addition, the scripture says the spies brought back an "evil" or "bad" report of the existence of giant-sized men in the land who were too strong for them (13:32). It was not evil in the sense that it was a false report, only that it put fear and unbelief into the people as to accomplishing what God had called them to. They cried out, saying that it would have been better if they had stayed in Egypt instead of following God and Moses.

Joshua and Caleb were of a different spirit, though; they wanted to go in and take the land that God had promised. Because this report caused the multitudes to be fearful, however, the Israelites had to wander in the wilderness for 40 years until all those who were over 20 at the time—and thus should have known better (Numbers 32:11)—had died. Forty years later, under Joshua, the next generation finally entered the Promised Land.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Jesus and Joshua have identical names in both Hebrew and Greek; however, English translators changed "Joshua" into "Jesus" (as we saw in "Setting the Table 2"). Thus Joshua leading the multitude into the Promised Land points forward to the true Joshua (Yeshua/Jesus) leading us into the spiritual Promised Land.

Going back earlier to the father of the Israelite nation, we see that Jacob spoke in enigmatic parables about grapes and thegrapevine in a prophecy concerning the Messiah:

> NAS Genesis 49:10 "The scepter shall not depart from Judah, Nor the ruler's staff from between his feet, Until Shiloh comes, And to him shall be the obedience of the peoples.
>
> NAS Genesis 49:11 "He ties his foal to the vine, And his donkey's colt to the choice vine; He washes his garments in wine, And his robes in the blood of grapes.[1]

If we view this scripture through our natural or literal senses, we would ask how and why one would ever wash his robes in wine, the "blood" of a "grape," or the blood of a single cluster "of grapes"? And how could such a thing possibly tie into the promised Messiah? No one would wash a garment in the fruit of the vine, for in the natural sense it would become stained.

What would later men of God, such as Moses or David, think of this prophecy? What could Jacob's prophetic words possibly mean?

In the Psalms, David referred to the Messiah coming with parables to bring forth "dark sayings" that were from old. Jacob's prophesy was one such dark saying.

> NAS Psalm 78:2 I will open my mouth in a parable; I will utterdark sayings of old,

Or, as Young's Literal Translation has it:

> YLT Psalm 78:2 I open with a simile my mouth, I bring forthhidden things of old,

And Jesus fulfills this prophecy from the Psalms:

> NAS Matthew 13:35 so that what was spoken through the prophet might be fulfilled, saying, "I will open My mouth in parables; I will utter things hidden since the foundation of the world."

You will not see much written in the Torah commentaries about Jacob's statement of washing his robes in the "blood of grapes," because how could this be explained?

John Gives the Spiritual Fulfillment of Jacob's Washing of Robes in Wine

One of the closest Jewish followers of Christ was John, who when writing the Book of Revelation used this saying of Jacob, yet with a slightly different application. John pictured this same spiritual concept of washing robes in "blood" and making them white, but he showed this being done not in the blood of a grape, but in the Messiah's blood. This is what Jacob's "dark saying" pointed to:

> NAS Revelation 6:11 And there was given to each of them a white robe; and they were told that they should rest for a little while longer, until the number of their fellow servants and their brethren who were to be killed even as they had been, should be completed also.
>
> NAS Revelation 7:14 And I said to him, "My lord, you know." And he said to me, "These are the ones who come out of the great tribulation, and they have washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb.

You cannot literally make a robe clean or "white" by washing it in wine or in blood, so of course these statements are intended to be interpreted spiritually.

Those who are familiar with Jewish writings know that God was firm through Moses in requiring the Jews never to ingest any manner of blood. However, what may surprise some is that Moses also spoke of drinking blood in a positive sense. Moses, like Jacob, also spoke of the blood of the grape:

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

> NAS Deuteronomy 32:13–15 "He made him ride on the high places of the earth, And he ate the produce of the field; And He made him suck honey from the rock, And oil from the flinty rock, Curds of cows, and milk of the flock, With fat of lambs, And rams, the breed of Bashan, and goats, With the finest of the wheat—And of the blood of grapes you drank wine. But Jeshurun grew fat and kicked—You are grown fat, thick, and sleek—Then he forsook God who made him, And scorned the Rock of his salvation.

Moses was speaking of the blessings that pointed to the Promised Land, of God's provision, and drinking from the blood of a grape ("grape" is singular in Hebrew, referring to either a single grape or a single bunch of grapes). This "Song of Moses" not only spoke of the Israelites drinking of the fruit of the vine in the Promised Land, but also of their eventual forsaking of the Lord and the exile that occurred.

Whosoever Ingests Any Blood Is to Be Cut Off

But why would Moses speak of drinking blood in any form, especially here as a positive experience? Wouldn't this be improper, and at least slightly distasteful, given all of God's commands through Moses to never ingest blood?

> KJV Leviticus 7:27 Whatsoever soul it be that eateth any manner of blood, even that soul shall be cut off from his people.

> NAS Leviticus 17:10–11 'And any man from the house of Israel, or from the aliens who sojourn among them, who eats any blood, I will set My face against that person who eats blood, and will cut him off from among his people. For the life of the flesh is in the blood, and I have given it to you on the altar to make atonement for your souls; for it is the blood by reason of the life that makes atonement.'

Couldn't Moses have just said that the Israelites drank cool, refreshing grape juice? Why put the word "blood" in there? Do we really want to equate the Promised Land with drinking natural blood of any kind, even if it is the blood of a grape? We know that Moses must have had a good reason for including it, for he was a friend of God with whom God spoke face-to-face.

Torah commentators, as well as New Covenant commentators, often avoid this verse altogether since there's no question that the idea of ingesting blood, even the "blood" of a grape, is disturbing.

Since God had said that the "life" is in the blood (Leviticus 17:11), let's assume for now that Moses was speaking spiritually. He gave an analogy about the "life" of the grape from which they were drinking and "the life" that God would provide in the Promised Land. Moses spoke of drinking blood for the same reason that the Messiah spoke of it—both meant it to be understood in a figurative, spiritual sense.

The Messiah and the Spiritual Lifeblood of the New Covenant

The Old Testament contains some scriptures that may seem bizarre, and this is also true of the New Testament. Often a bizarre scripture is a signpost that the speaker is giving a parable that must be understood spiritually. One of the strangest Bible scriptures happens to be spoken by the Messiah himself, and just as with the figurative statement made by Moses, it relates to taking in the lifeblood of the grape in the Promised Land:

> NAS John 6:53–54 Jesus therefore said to them, "Truly, truly, I say to you, unless you eat the flesh of the Son of Man and drink His blood, you have no life in yourselves. He who eats My flesh and drinks My blood has eternal life, and I will raise him up on the last day."

If ever Jesus spoke a parable that needed to be properly interpreted, this was it. Yet when these Jewish scriptures were brought to Rome, it was decided that they meant a new Communion ritual.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Early Jewish believers knew, however, that Jesus was speaking another parable, as he had done so often before. Every statement a person makes must be taken in context, and much needs to be understood about the context of John chapter 6 that leads up to verses 53 and 54, so let's take a closer look.

First of all, this was a particularly stubborn group that was following the Messiah only for "loaves and the fishes" (verse 26), as Jesus had miraculously fed the hungry multitude the previous day by*breaking bread* and multiplying it out to them. Some people from this previous day were waiting for more free bread, and were subtly tempting Jesus to be like Moses and provide bread continually, as Moses did with the manna in the wilderness (verses 30–31). Jesus responded that it was not the decision of Moses that gave them the provision of the manna, but God's miracle (verse 32). Jesus then compared himself to the manna that came down, showing that he was sent by God as the true spiritual provision to which the manna pointed.

Secondly, Jesus taught those present not to labor for food that perishes, but to seek the spiritual food that will bring everlasting life in God's presence. However, they resisted and did not really hear him (verse 27). This is partly what led up to the shocking statement that caused even many of his disciples to forsake him (John 6:66). It must be remembered that Jesus spoke the words that his Father gave him to speak (John 7:16, 17; 14:10; Hebrews 1:1, 2), and at this time God did not want a large group of people only interested in free bread to follow the Messiah. So Jesus gave a parable that would separate out those who were only seeking free bread, and that would later be understood spiritually by the disciples as they came fully into the promised New Covenant.

His disciples who remained loyal knew that this was another parable or "dark saying," and never thought this was something that Jesus wanted in any natural or ritualistic sense. They did not obediently walk over to him and begin nibbling on his leg and drinking his blood as it flowed out. It was only in Rome where this parable would be interpreted naturally as a new Communion ritual that they took literally.

The Blood of the Two Covenants Compared

The reason God stated for not ingesting blood was that He had given the blood of the sacrifice to the Israelite people "to make atonement for your souls" (Leviticus 17:11). But remember that John had shown the blood of the lamb to be what washed the believers' robes and made them white. This pictured the atonement and ritual cleansing, as God had commanded the Israelites to wash their garments when they approached His presence (Exodus 19:10, 11).

It was a longstanding Jewish requirement to have one's garments and body washed when approaching God, and also to have the blood of the appropriate sacrifice applied before entering His presence. Only the high priest was permitted to enter where God's direct presence dwelt, in the Holy of Holies, and never without having first applied the sacrificial blood. One would never want to stand before God and be in His presence having refused the provision that He laid out.

In the book of Hebrews, Paul compares the blood of the animal sacrifices under the Old Covenant to how the shed blood of Christ brought us into the New Covenant, whereby we could be cleansed and go into God's direct presence:

> DBY Hebrews 9:6 Now these things being thus ordered, into the first tabernacle the priests enter at all times, accomplishing the services;
>
> DBY Hebrews 9:7 but into the second, the high priest only, once a year, not without blood, which he offers for himself and for the errors of the people:
>
> DBY Hebrews 9:8 the Holy Spirit shewing this, that the way of the holy of holies has not yet been made manifest while as yet the first tabernacle has its standing;

In other words, these verses indicate that the way into God's direct presence was blocked while the first Tabernacle under Moses had its legal standing. Paul is showing what the Holy Spirit "is signifying" with these laws from the Tabernacle concerning the Holy of Holies, the veils, and only the high priest entering, and never without the blood. Under the New Covenant, those laws and regulations no longer have a legal standing to keep believers out of God's direct presence. This is why the disciples could be filled directly with God's spirit on the day of Pentecost; the veil had been torn in two at the Crucifixion (Matthew 27:51), signifying that the way into His direct presence had now been provided.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Paul continues:

> NAS Hebrews 9:9–10 which is a symbol for the present time. Accordingly both gifts and sacrifices are offered which cannot make the worshiper perfect in conscience, since they*relate* only to food and drink and various washings, regulations for the body imposed until a time of reformation.

The two Greek words that are translated "reformation" in verse 10 actually mean until the "new order of things" was brought in, referring to the promised New Covenant. Paul continues in Hebrews 9 (in NAS):

> 9:11 But when Christ appeared as a high priest of the good things to come, He entered through the greater and more perfect tabernacle, not made with hands, that is to say, not of this creation;
>
> 9:12 and not through the blood of goats and calves, but through His own blood, He entered the holy place once for all, having obtained eternal redemption.
>
> 9:13 For if the blood of goats and bulls and the ashes of a heifer sprinkling those who have been defiled, sanctify for the cleansing of the flesh,
>
> 9:14 how much more will the blood of Christ, who through the eternal Spirit offered Himself without blemish to God, cleanse your conscience from dead works to serve the living God?
>
> 9:15 And for this reason He is the mediator of a new covenant, in order that since a death has taken place for the redemption of the transgressions that were committed under the first covenant, those who have been called may receive the promise of the eternal inheritance.

Paul talks about blood in the Old Covenant:

> 9:18 Therefore even the first covenant was not inaugurated without blood.
>
> 9:19 For when every commandment had been spoken by Moses to all the people according to the Law, he took the blood of the calves and the goats, with water and scarlet wool and hyssop, and sprinkled both the book itself and all the people,
>
> 9:20 saying, "This is the blood of the covenant which God commanded you."
>
> 9:21 And in the same way he sprinkled both the tabernacle and all the vessels of the ministry with the blood.
>
> 9:22 And according to the Law, one may almost say, all things are cleansed with blood, and without shedding of blood there is no forgiveness.

Then he turns to the New Covenant, which Christ's sacrifice ushered in:

> 9:23 Therefore it was necessary for the copies of the things in the heavens to be cleansed with these, but the heavenly things themselves with better sacrifices than these.
>
> 9:24 For Christ did not enter a holy place made with hands, a*mere* copy of the true one, but into heaven itself, now to appear in the presence of God for us;
>
> 9:25 nor was it that He should offer Himself often, as the high priest enters the holy place year by year with blood not his own.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

> 9:26 Otherwise, He would have needed to suffer often since the foundation of the world; but now once at the consummation of the ages He has been manifested to put away sin by the sacrifice of Himself.

Old Covenant Blood Applied Without; New Covenant Blood Applied Spiritually Within

Under the Old Covenant, God did not want the Israelites to take the "life" (i.e., blood) of the animal sacrifice within them in any form, because He did not want them to symbolically take the life of an animal within. It is not the life of the animal that God wants *within*us but rather the spiritual life from the Messiah.

Moses, however, did sanctify the people and set them apart unto God by sprinkling sacrificial blood on the outside of the people:

> NAS Exodus 24:6 And Moses took half of the blood and put *it*in basins, and the other half of the blood he sprinkled on the altar.

> NAS Exodus 24:8 So Moses took the blood and sprinkled it on the people, and said, "Behold the blood of the covenant, which the LORD has made with you in accordance with all these words."

When God then inaugurated the priesthood under Aaron and his sons, he again told Moses to apply the blood externally. Each priest was to apply the blood on his right ear (symbolically showing that he must hear what this means), the thumb of his right hand (showing the work of his hands is set apart to God), and the toes of his right foot (showing a walk that is set apart to God). Thus the blood atonement would always be pictured as the priests were ministering in His presence.

> NAS Exodus 29:20 "And you shall slaughter the ram, and take some of its blood and put it on the lobe of Aaron's right ear and on the lobes of his sons' right ears and on the thumbs of their right hands and on the big toes of their right feet, and sprinkle the rest of the blood around on the altar.

All of these blood applications were on the outside of their bodies; nothing went within. We know that these animal sacrifices pointed further to New Covenant truths, and at the Last Supper, Jesus showed that the fruit of the grapevine in the cup represented his blood of the New Covenant (as we saw in Course 10). Again, when his blood was shed, the Jewish disciples eventually came to know that they were now in the promised New Covenant, with the previous covenant no longer having legal standing over them (Jeremiah 31:31, 33). The promised New Covenant was not based on sacrificial animal blood but on the shed blood of the promised Messiah.

After his disciples eventually came to understand the parables and New Covenant truths that Jesus had been speaking to them, they went out teaching based on this understanding:

> YLT Revelation 5:9 and they sing a new song, saying, 'Worthy art thou to take the scroll, and to open the seals of it, because thou wast slain, and didst redeem us to God in thy blood, out of every tribe, and tongue, and people, and nation,

In the New Covenant the spiritual "priests" (referring to the believers, for "he has made us to be a kingdom and priests," Revelation 1:6, 5:10, NIV) understood that they were sanctified to God in a blood that was not from an animal sacrifice:

> DBY 1 Peter 1:18–19 knowing that ye have been redeemed, not by corruptible things, as silver or gold, from your vain conversation handed down from your fathers, but by precious blood, as of a lamb without blemish and without spot, the blood of Christ,

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

> KJV Revelation 1:5 And from Jesus Christ, who is the faithful witness, and the first begotten of the dead, and the prince of the kings of the earth. Unto him that loved us, and washed us from our sins in his own blood,

This was the blood of the grape(s) that Jacob spoke of concerning the coming of the Messiah and the washing of the robes, and this was the blood of the grape(s) that Moses spoke of as a blessing from God for the Promised Land.

God's Spirit to Indwell the Believer

As we've seen, the blood of sacrificial animals in the Old Covenant was not enough to make the full atonement, and thus God's spirit did not dwell within the Israelites yet.

However, the Messiah, having redeemed them and us by his shed blood, does provide for us all to be filled with God's spirit, thus fulfilling the prophecy of Joel that God would pour out His spirit on all flesh. To enter the New Covenant, we spiritually apply the blood of the true Passover within—in our hearts—by accepting the Messiah. We allow his sacrifice and atoning death to enter in and touch our hearts.

We have no record that Jesus ever told his disciples, "I am the true Passover," but his Last Supper parables made the connection between his body and blood such that his disciples (who knew the Jewish idiom of applying sacrificial blood) would soon understand that he was the true Passover to which the sacrifices pointed.

These two aspects of the Passover—its body and its blood—were very important under the first covenant, as God required the Israelites to always eat the flesh of the Passover, which was part of the atonement (that also pointed forward). Both aspects were needed to keep the death angel away when God "passed over" and spared the Israelites that first Passover, after blood was applied to the doorposts. The Israelites were never to ingest the blood of any of the animal sacrifices, but they were required to apply the blood, such as by pouring it out at the altar of God in the Temple.

On the last night before the Messiah's sacrifice as the true Passover, he applied the two Passover aspects—its body and its blood—to himself. At the Last Supper, Jesus spoke of his body figuratively as pieces of the bread, meaning that we would partake of him as we spiritually fellowship with other believers who are filled with God's spirit. Then he spoke of his blood being "poured out" for many, just as the Passover blood was always poured out at the altar for the Israelites. His parable also showed that his blood was applied within his disciples, because after they drank some of the grape juice, he then appears to pour out the remainder (as if figuratively at the altar) to show that it represented his New Covenant blood:

> NAS Mark 14:24 And He said to them, "This is My blood of the covenant, which is poured out[2] for many.

The Greek word Jesus used for his blood being "poured out" is the same word used in the Septuagint for the sacrifices, whose blood was similarly "poured out" at the altar. The Messiah was showing the fulfillment of the inauguration of the first covenant under Moses, when, after the Israelites had left Egypt, half of the blood was "poured out" at the altar and half was sprinkled on the people.

> In the book of Ezekiel, God spoke of a time when He would place His spirit within the Israelites:
>
> NAS Ezekiel 36:26–27 "Moreover, I will give you a new heart and put a new spirit within you; and I will remove the heart of stone from your flesh and give you a heart of flesh. "And I will put My Spirit within you and cause you to walk in My statutes, and you will be careful to observe My ordinances.

For God's spirit to indwell the believer, and, as God promised in Jeremiah regarding the New Covenant, to "put my law in their inward parts" and write the law "in their hearts," the blood must be applied within:

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

> JPS Jeremiah 31:33 But this is the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel after those days, saith the LORD, I will put My law in their inward parts, and in their heartwill I write it; and I will be their God, and they shall be My people;

The blood at the first Passover was to be applied on the outside doorposts to spare the Israelites from the coming judgment on Egypt:

> When I see the blood I will pass over you. (Exodus 12:13).

In our day, talking about blood may be distasteful to many. However, the Israelites' religious life revolved around these sacrifices and the blood being applied for them to walk in God's forgiveness. They viewed blood very differently than we do today, thoroughly understanding the concept of the life being in it and the atonement it provided. One of the rare times that Moses became angry was when Aaron's sons had not eaten the flesh of the sin offering (Leviticus 10:16, 17). Moses understood that this partaking of the sacrificial flesh was the second part of what provided the atonement—not just the shed blood.

❦

The parables Jesus spoke in John 6 show the fulfillment of the two Passover aspects— partaking of the lamb (i.e., Christ's "body") and applying its blood — yet Christ's blood was to be applied in a different way. In these parables, Jesus showed that his blood must go within, spiritually, to make way for the soon-coming spiritual life from God, whereby the disciples would be filled with God's spirit and have God Himself dwelling within:

> NAS John 6:53 Jesus therefore said to them, "Truly, truly, I say to you, unless you eat the flesh of the Son of Man and drink His blood, you have no life in yourselves.

Now Jesus was not speaking to dead people here; those listening certainly had natural "life" in themselves, so we know that he was speaking of spiritual life from God. He spoke this truth in the form of a parable, as he so often did and as the Messiah was prophesied to do. God's dwelling must be sanctified and set apart, and for God to indwell the believer He must see the atoning blood applied. Similarly, the sacrifice of the Messiah must touch the heart, sanctifying the person within.

Right after Jesus spoke those shocking words in John 6:53 and many of his disciples left him, he made it especially clear to his closest remaining disciples that his words were to be taken spiritually. However, they still did not understand:

> NAS John 6:63 "It is the Spirit who gives life; the flesh profits nothing; the words that I have spoken to you are spirit and are life.

Jesus was not a Roman Catholic priest teaching a new ritual; indeed, no Roman Catholics even existed yet. Nor was he teaching Luther's ritual of Consubstantiation or the Protestant "Communion-lite" (i.e., without the actual flesh and blood) that came later.

Jesus was a Jewish man from the line of David, living at a time when Jews were familiar with applying the blood of various sacrifices. His disciples were first-century kosher Jews who were well acquainted with his frequent method of speaking to them in parables, whether they fully understood his meaning each time or not.

It's important for us Protestants (and Catholics as well) to realize that we have been led astray by various Communion rituals, so that we can move past these rituals into the true communion that God desires for us. We must unite together, all Jews and Gentiles who love God and His Messiah, as one body under Christ the head. We must allow him to bring the new truths that he has for his people, his spiritual body of believers. We must allow the Holy Spirit to bring new truths, as in Acts 15. We must not allow egos or positions of authority to hamper any truths that the Messiah wants to bring to his people. Christ seeks to cleanse and prepare his bride, and woe unto the men who stand in the way of the truth that he desires to bring (Ephesians 5:26).

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

Christ Is the Grapevine—His Shed Blood Is the Spiritual Life Flow to the Branches

The promise of the Father in the New Covenant is that His spirit will indwell the believer. At the Last Supper, just before Jesus was slain as the true Passover that God called "My sacrifice" (Exodus 23:18), he spoke of the fruit of the grapevine. There is actually no mention of "wine"[3] at the Last Supper, but fresh fruit of the vine is spoken of. The grape juice in the cup—the fruit of the vine—linked directly into the parable that he spoke after supper, in which he said that he was the grapevine:

> NAS John 15:1 "I am the true vine,[4] and My Father is the vine-dresser."

The natural fruit of the vine was the lifeblood flowing through the vine, and in the New Covenant it was the Messiah's "lifeblood" (his sacrificial blood) that would provide the spiritual life flow to the connected branches. The Jews understood the concept of the lifeblood of the grape, for they were familiar with the Song of Moses. They were also familiar with Isaiah's analogy of treading the wine press, where the "lifeblood" of the people is pictured as the juice from the trodden grapes (Isaiah 63:3, 6, NAS). Israel was often pictured as the grapevine.[5] However, many of these idioms were not understood in Rome.

Jesus said "I am the true vine" (John 15:1) on the same evening as his Last Supper parables, after he had shown his disciples that the fruit of the grapevine in his cup represented his blood of the New Covenant being poured out. Then later that night he said that he was the true grapevine and his disciples were the branches; if they would abide in him, they would bear much spiritual fruit. Of course, when they heard this, they did not literally hold out their arms pretending to be branches in a new ritual, because they knew that the Messiah was not creating new rituals at the Last Supper.

So the overall picture created when the two parables are joined—the bread and the fruit of the grapevine during the Last Supper, and the grapevine right after supper—is of Christ as the grapevine and his shed blood providing the spiritual life flow into the vine that spreads to the branches. The spiritual life flow would be the Holy Spirit of God and His agape love.

In scripture, the nation and land of Israel are often pictured as a grapevine. And it was a grapevine bearing an enormous clump of grapes that those spies sent by Moses brought back when they first explored this Promised Land. Jesus declared that he was the true grapevine from which the spiritual essence of the spiritual Promised Land emanated. In effect, he was the grapes and the grapevine branch that the spies under Moses brought back in type, which pointed to the true provision in the spiritual Promised Land, as depicted on the Israelite coin at the beginning of this Course. This was the lifeblood of the grape that Moses spoke of and the blood of the grape mentioned by Jacob (and later John) that would ritually cleanse the believer.

Abide in Him and Stay Connected to the Spiritual Flow

Later the apostles would bear much fruit from their ministry by abiding in this spiritual grapevine and allowing this life flow to spread to one another, as thousands came to the Lord through their ministry. They fulfilled what Moses had spoken concerning the Promised Land and the blood (life flow) of the grape—namely that the spiritual life from God would soon be flowing through and within them:

> NAS John 7:37–39 Now on the last day, the great day of the feast, Jesus stood and cried out, saying, "If any man is thirsty, let him come to Me and drink. He who believes in Me, as the Scripture said, 'From his innermost being shall flow rivers of living water.' " But this He spoke of the Spirit, whom those who believed in Him were to receive; for the Spirit was not yet given, because Jesus was not yet glorified.

This picture of the fruit of the vine at the Last Supper and the grapevine parable afterward taught the necessity of "abiding in him":

> NAS John 15:4 "Abide in Me, and I in you. As the branch cannot bear fruit of itself, unless it abides in the vine, so neither can you, unless you abide in Me.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

We cannot naturally or literally abide in him, but spiritually we abide and stay connected to the spiritual flow that comes from God, because of Christ, so we do not dry up and die spiritually.

> NAS John 15:6 "If anyone does not abide in Me, he is thrown away as a branch, and dries up; and they gather them, and cast them into the fire, and they are burned.

> NAS John 15:9 "Just as the Father has loved Me, I have also loved you; abide in My love.

> NAS John 15:10–11 "If you keep My commandments, you will abide in My love; just as I have kept My Father's commandments, and abide in His love. These things I have spoken to you, that My joy may be in you, and that your joy may be made full.

Shortly thereafter on that same night, Jesus spoke similar words again:

> NAS John 17:21 that they may all be one; even as Thou, Father, art in Me, and I in Thee, that they also may be in Us; that the world may believe that Thou didst send Me.

> NAS John 17:23 I in them, and Thou in Me, that they may be perfected in unity, that the world may know that Thou didst send Me, and didst love them, even as Thou didst love Me.

The Holy Spirit of God would be poured out after Christ's sacrifice on the day of Pentecost, which came 50 days later, counting from the Resurrection. A powerful new experience and closeness to God opened up to these Jewish believers, whereby God was no longer distant but was actually dwelling within them by His spirit (Acts 2). This life of Christ, symbolized by his shed blood, pictured the spiritual life that is found only in the New Covenant, and now it was flowing spiritually through the believers.

After the Last Supper and shortly after the disciples had taken some of the bread and the fruit of the vine within them (thus spiritually applying the two aspects of the Passover—its flesh and blood), Jesus said more about dwelling within them:

> NAS John 14:16–18 "And I will ask the Father, and He will give you another Helper, that He may be with you forever;that is the Spirit of truth, whom the world cannot receive, because it does not behold Him or know Him, but you know Him because He abides with you, and will be in you. I will not leave you as orphans; I will come to you.

> NAS John 14:20 "In that day you shall know that I am in My Father, and you in Me, and I in you.

Jesus said that the Holy Spirit would be sent in his name, meaning that it was because of him that God's spirit would be coming:

> NAS John 14:26 "But the Helper, the Holy Spirit, whom the Father will send in My name, He will teach you all things, and bring to your remembrance all that I said to you.

And this "Helper" (or "comforter" in some translations) and "spirit of truth" is the Holy Spirit of God that would soon indwell them:

> NAS John 14:17 that is the Spirit of truth, whom the world cannot receive, because it does not behold Him or know Him, but you know Him because He abides with you, and will be in you.

Our Fellowship Is with the Father, Christ, and One Another

As the branches of the grapevine, our fellowship is with the Father, the Messiah, and one another:

> NAS 1 John 1:3 what we have seen and heard we proclaim to you also, that you also may have fellowship[6] with us; and indeed our fellowship is with the Father, and with His Son Jesus Christ.

 Copyright Lawrence Yerkes - Free Duplication for Personal Use Only

The disciples realized that in Christ's spiritual body, blood flows spiritually to its every member, cleansing and atoning. This blood was never meant to be applied in the natural sense—in a new ritual—for the Jews understood these things spiritually:

> NAS 1 John 1:7 but if we walk in the light as He Himself is in the light, we have fellowship[7] with one another, and the blood of Jesus His Son cleanses us from all sin.

We spiritually commune with God through His spirit that dwells within us, and God has provided that we also commune spiritually with His son. We see this in the new heaven and new earth, where Jesus is pictured as the "lamp" and God is the light that flows through that lamp. Jesus shows forth God's nature, such as His glory and His love, and God has the same plan for all who love Him:

